

He no 1137

286.6

C 4629

V. 106

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2014

<https://archive.org/details/christiansun106gene>

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, JANUARY 7, 1954

NUMBER 1

The New Year

The New Year stretches like a waiting field
Made broad and white with fallen snow
Beneath its smoothness stones and stubble are concealed,
All ugliness, transformed by ermine sheath.

As yet no foot, by deep or careless track,
Discloses clearly that its path was here:
No eager beast has run, or cowered back,
No man has boldly walked, or crept in fear.

So brief a time until the gleaming space
Will wear a new design of dark and light;
Each line the bent of heart, the set of face,
Some inward plan and purpose etched on white.

With such revealing pattern on the snow,
Guide well, dear God, the way my feet shall go!

—Marel Brown.

News Flashes

We learn with regret that both Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Lester have been ill during the Christmas holidays. Dr. Lester was unable to fill his pulpit on December 27, and Mrs. Lester was a week late in her school work.

In the Western North Carolina special issue, the church at High Point, North Carolina was listed as having 168 members. The pastor, Rev. G. H. Veazey has asked us to make the correction that it has only 68 members. He adds, "It does have a parsonage."

Rev. and Mrs. C. O. Koon will soon move to the Elm Avenue Congregational Christian Church in Portsmouth, Va. Rev. and Mrs. Koon and their son, Clyde David, have been living at Belew Creek, N. C., where he has been pastor of the Salem Chapel and Belew Creek Churches.

Rev. and Mrs. William Richards of Cambridge, Nebraska, are spending the winter with their son, Dr. Chas. Richards of the Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem, N. C. The father is a retired Congregational minister, having preached for 45 years in our churches of that area. Both he and Mrs. Richards have endeared themselves to the members of our Winston-Salem Church. The son is a member of the church choir and assists in many ways the on-going of the work of the church.

Rev. W. T. Waller, Jr., and Mrs. Waller are now living in Winston-Salem, where he is associated with the Boy Scout organization of Forsyth County. Mr. Waller was a licensed minister of our Florida State Conference, and is now enrolled as a licensed minister of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Already he has organized a Cub Scout Pack—No. 4—in our Winston-Salem Church, and plans are now under way for a Scout Troop to be organized this spring.

Institute for Rural Ministers

The Rural Church Committee of the Southern Convention is sponsoring an Institute for the Rural Ministers of the convention to be held January 12-14 at the Bricks Rural Life Center, Bricks, North Carolina.

The program will center around lectures and discussions on the new parish manual for rural churches published by the Town and Country Department of the Board of Home Missions. Dr. Thomas A. Tripp will be the leader of this primary phase of the program.

Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall, interim pastor at Southern Pines, will present a series of talks on the general theme of "preaching." Dr. Jesse H. Dollar is to conduct sessions on "stewardship." Mr. Neil McLean, Director of the Bricks Center, will be heard on the program.

There will be no charge to the ministers for the institute. Room and board will be furnished, as will as bedding. The ministers need to bring only their personal belongings.

The institute will begin with the noon meal on Tuesday the 12th and end with the noon meal on Thursday the 14th. Ministers planning to attend should notify Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., Box 15, Holland, Va., immediately that reservations may be made for them.

School of Leadership Training Being Held in Greensboro

A School of Leadership Training for Congregational Christian and vangelical and Reformed Churches and Sunday schools is being held this week at the First Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C. Beginning on Sunday afternoon, 2:30 to 5:00, it was scheduled to continue through Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Four courses were planned for this year:

1. Missions, with emphasis on a workshop on stewardship "know-how." This course was under the direction of Miss Ione Catton of Chicago, program secretary in Missionary Education for the Missions Council.

2. Personal Christian Living. An E. and R. minister, the Rev. John Settlemyre, of the Mt. Hope Evangelical and Reformed Church, directed this course.

3. The Home and Church Working Together in the Religious Nurture of Children. Because of the length of its title, this course required two directors. It was in the capable hands of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Mrs. W. E. Wisseman.

4. How to Improve Our Sunday School. The Rev. W. J. Andes was the instructor in this course. It would have been hard to have found a better one.

The Rev. John R. Lackey served as dean of the school. We are confident that it was a great success.

An Expression of Appreciation

When Mary and I left home on the Wednesday night before Christmas for a dinner engagement with friends and an evening of fellowship, we left the spot-light turned on the attractive evergreen display on our front door. When we returned later in the evening, the light was out and the house was in darkness. Somewhat mystified by the strange turn of events, we thought that perhaps the bulb in the lamp had burned out. But when we opened the door and entered the living room, we knew that somebody had been in the house. In fact it sounded as if there was somebody in the house at that very moment!!! Could it be possible that we had arrived home in time to foil the fellow who had broken into our home?

Somebody had been in the house. But not to take anything. Fact is, he had broken in to bring something. For there, sitting in a strategic place in the living room, by the Christmas tree, was a large and beautiful Television Set, turned on for a program being televised through WTAR-channel 4, Norfolk. And on the Television Set there was a card, A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to Dr. and Mrs. Harcastle from Oakland and Berea Christian Churches!

As we stood there in our surprise and delight, there came a knock on the door, and when we opened it, in walked three of our neighbors and church members, Mr. and Mrs. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. and Mr. Grady Norfleet. There were knowing looks and suspicious smiles on their faces, and in a short while it was all clear. With split-second timing, Mr. Norfleet had made his way into the house through a window which inadvertently had not been fastened, and had then opened the door and the three of them had put the radio in place. Furthermore Mr. Norfleet who is an electrician in the employ of the State had erected temporarily the aerial so that we were getting splendid reception. They had timed their return to our home to coincide with our return from the party. Our appreciation of the fine gift was

(Continued on page 12)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Laymen of Greensboro Church
Enjoy First Meeting

The Laymen's Fellowship of the First Church, Greensboro held its first meeting of the new year on Friday, December 4, in the fellowship hall, with President A. E. Pye presiding. About 65 men enjoyed a delicious dinner and an unusual and highly entertaining program. J. E. Murray gave the invocation to open the meeting.

John R. Truitt presented the Gate City Four, a quartet well known for its appearances on the local television station. This group presented several musical numbers which were greatly enjoyed by the laymen. John R. Foster, program chairman, presented a quiz based on the historical significance of the Guilford Battleground and many of the men won prizes in this quiz.

Foster then introduced the speaker of the evening, Raleigh Taylor, custodian of the Guilford Battleground National Military Park. Taylor presented an interesting discussion of the purpose and operation of the Battleground Park and the historical events which the park commemorates.

Truby Vincent, of the Beverly Hills Church near Burlington, and Bill Mahan, of the Union Church near Burlington, were guests. Vincent is president, and Mahan secretary, of the North Carolina and Virginia Laymen's Fellowship.

All present for this meeting had an enjoyable time, and it is hoped that many more laymen will attend the next meeting of the Laymen's Fellowship.

* * * * *

Father-Son Banquet at Chapel Hill

The annual father and son banquet sponsored by the men's fellowship of the United Congregational Christian Church of Chapel Hill was held on December 14 in the church hut. There were 34 fathers and sons present and a fine turkey dinner was served by the woman's fellowship.

Special Christmas music was sung by Mr. Bill Sheavin accompanied by Mrs. Frank Hanlin. Later in the program Mr. Sheavin led the entire group in singing Christmas Carols.

Mr. Roy Strong was toastmaster and greetings were extended to the group by President F. Lee Edwards.

Guest speaker was Mr. Roy Armstrong, University Admissions Officer and well known Boy Scout leader of the community. Mr. Armstrong had a special message and some fine stories for the sons as well as an inspiring talk on the responsibilities of fatherhood and Christian living for the fathers.

* * * * *

Let's Go to Church!
(PROGRAM FOR JANUARY)

This is 1954 . . . a new year with new opportunities, privileges, and responsibilities. How many of us made resolutions? How many will keep those resolutions? With the conviction that all of us should resolve to go to church regularly, we are submitting the following article which we hope that you will use in your January meeting as a basis for group thought and discussion.

LET'S GO TO CHURCH!

By PAUL E. FOLKERS.
The Church Cultivates Character.

Whatever criticisms might be made of the church, it is still the world's one institution which has as its central purpose and only reason for existence, the cultivation of Christian character, the reclamation of men and women of all classes and races for Christ and his cause, and the making of a better world.

(Continued on page 13)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

- 1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- 2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- 3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- 4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
- 5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle
Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.
Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.
Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colelough, Treasurer, ex officio.
Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

A New Year and a New Church

Guest Editorial by REV. W. MILLARD STEVENS, President, Southern Convention

The New Year is a gift from heaven to every church within the Southern Convention, and to every pastor and every individual member of these churches. It is a gift from heaven because it gives us another chance to clear up the waste places in the life and work of our churches and make of them greater instruments of God for the redemption of human kind. How we need this New Chance! None of us would be so selfrighteous as to suppose that we have been as faithful in our mission as a church as we should have been. The New Year is a good time to take stock and to set ourselves to a more faithful ministry of the great mercies of God as given in Jesus Christ.

The Congregational Christian Churches have a mission to fulfill in this great section of our country. This mission is expressed in the understanding of "True Christian Liberty" which burned with such fervency in the hearts and souls of our spiritual ancestors. It needs to burn again in every church in this Convention now; for unless this "Christian Liberty" is our guiding force, we have no mission or reason for continuing as a church. There is evidence of pressure within many of our churches to push aside this principle of "Christian Liberty" in favor of one strict theological opinion or another. Such pressure can result in discord and apathy. We need to join hands and hearts again in a common devotion to Jesus Christ, recognizing anew the right of every man to think and act as God leads him.

We have been often tempted to forsake the historic basis of our churches and follow a cultural theological pattern, because others have done this and have more members than we have. Indeed many of us have done this. We should remind ourselves that "Christ is the same yesterday, today and tomorrow," and to remake him to fit our own cultural pattern is to destroy the true Christ and eventually to destroy our own souls. The Christ of the New Testament is sufficient, and a devoted presentation of that Christ in our churches will find eager and devoted hearers. So in this New Year let us not fall to the temptation to let our culture change Christ, but rather let Christ change our culture.

The best and most needed message that can be brought to the churches of the Southern Convention as we enter this New Year is simply this, "Let us stand fast in the liberty, wherein Christ has made us free. . . . Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us; looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Closing Days of Year Take Terrific Toll

The closing hours of 1953 witnessed the home-going of two most outstanding lay workers of the Southern Convention.

Jennie Willis Atkinson Bradford, wife of Russell T. Bradford and daughter of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson, died on Thursday of last week after suffering a heart attack at her home in Nasemond County, Virginia on Wednesday afternoon. Some fifty-odd years ago the writer, then a lad of ten, moved to Elon College, and for a while lived next door to the Atkinson home. He and the little daughter of Dr. Atkinson became playmates, and this early-formed friendship continued through the years. Jennie Willis was kind and thoughtful as a child, and years added to these estimable qualities. She was a sincere friend, a genial hostess, a natural-born leader, as her outstanding work in her local church, the conference, and the Southern Convention, and in civic and social life, will testify. Not only could she lead, but she had that admirable quality of being able to support others who were placed in leadership—a much harder job. Her family and friends have sustained a distinct personal loss. Her place in the community and in the church will be hard to fill. In her going our loss is great, but greater far is heaven's gain.

Roy A. Larrich of Winchester, Virginia, died on Wednesday morning, December 30, after an illness of about two weeks. He was born in High View, W. Virginia, on April 12, 1891. Mr. Larrick was a member of our Winchester Church, where he was a trustee for a number of years and also a deacon. He served as its clerk for about 30 years. Possibly his most outstanding contribution to our denomination was his serving for ten years as the president of the Virginia Valley Central Conference. One writer, commenting on this, has said, "During his ten years' leadership the Valley churches made more progress than in any other twenty years of its history." Simple and unostentatious, he was kind and gracious. His going leaves a void that is great and will be difficult to fill. J.T.K.

The God of Christmas

By DR. HENRY E. ROBINSON, Pastor
First Christian Church, Burlington, North Carolina

What good is there in it? What good comes out of it? These are questions heard here and there in January after Christmas leaves its toll of broken toys and accumulated bills. Let's look at the Christmas story to find its message of goodness which may provide a ready answer for those of clouded mind and sterile heart.

"I bring you good tidings . . ." Luke 2:10.

To shepherds fearful of the celestial wonders which they saw this word of joyful reassurance came. It came as the culmination of that ancient dream in the heart of mankind, a dream for a better day when hatred and oppression would meet their match in overpowering love and liberty. These men of simple faith heard in that heavenly anthem the fulfillment of man's longing. "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men." On that first Christmas eve there came good tidings—tidings that have been sung around the world in the chorus of that old missionary hymn:

Publish glad tidings,
Tidings of peace,
Tidings of Jesus,
Redemption and release.

In the midst of war, hunger, plague, and tyranny always there have been those who clung to the dream in the universe. When piled deep under broken hopes this vision that a saving power would break through the rubble found expression in the words of prophet and poet:

The wilderness and the solitary place
Shall rejoice for them;
And the desert shall rejoice,
And blossom as the rose (Isaiah 35:1).

Of the increase of his government
And of peace there shall be no end.
The zeal of the Lord of hosts
Will perform this (Isaiah 9:7).

The angel spoke to men of expectant hearts. They received God's word because they were hoping and wanting to receive it. Too often we come to Christmas expecting nothing to happen to our souls. And nothing does. We hear no voice because we do not believe in voices. The divine wisdom is shut out by minds crammed full of little thoughts.

Good news does something to the soul of man. We pastors are too often the bearers of sad news. We pray for and with people who have received sad news. Strength comes for the lifting of heavy burdens and we thank God for it. Loads lifted, suffering endured, strengthens the fibers of character and put sinews in our soul. But men and women, ancient and modern, need good news now and then. Good news is like a cool drink in a desert place. It is like a caress after frustrated and futile effort. Mankind needs good news in the struggle for survival—"I bring you good tidings . . ."

There were lips to speak it and ears to hear it. There were minds to interpret it and hearts to ponder it. Without lips and ears and minds and hearts, good news has no meaning. These we must add to the message of the angels.

To be in the presence of one devout man or group of men is to be in the stream of the divine purpose. Numbers are nice, but they prove little. In their journey to the King's cradle they were a small company indeed. How much greater company was arrayed against them in evil purpose and human selfishness. But they had heard the good news! They had set their feet in the Godward path; they had opened their hearts to divine truth.

What do we have which they did not have? We hasten to say that we have the church. The shepherds did not have the church. But were they not a company of believers kneeling in adoration and surrender before the Christ? Essentially that is what the church is.

Or we add in defense that we have baptism and the Lord's Supper. But did they not have that strange warming of the heart which led them to Jesus and sent them away rejoicing. What sacrament could do more? Without that inner glow what can outward signs effect?

We quickly claim that we have the cross. As the shepherds knelt before their newfound Lord who is ready to deny the presence of God's saving love?

"And, lo, the star which they saw in the east went before them." Matt. 2:9.

Let us turn now from the account in Luke to that of Matthew which tells of the Magi and the star. As we search this story for the good of Christmas we find in dramatic beauty good reading. There are many lessons which come easily and forcibly from the scriptures' story of Jesus' birth. But one we must take to our bosoms again and again is the guiding hand of God as symbolized by the star. How our world in its confusion and frustration needs his leading today! To be lost brings one of life's most desolate feelings. I had that experience a few years ago when with a group of campers searching in a deep woods for an old Indian trail. For about a half hour we neither knew where we were nor in what direction we had come. Among the eight boys there were exactly eight ideas of which way was north. I might add that my own idea supplied a ninth. Our plight was not serious and in due time we found a highway. It was just serious enough for me as their leader to feel that sense of empty helplessness which comes to one who has upon him the weight of responsibility and the loss of direction. A famous historian has a line worth remembering: "He who has lost the way, has lost the right to lead."

By tradition the Magi are also known as kings. If they were good kings, and we have no right to think otherwise, it was because they as leaders of men, were wise enough to follow a heavenly sign. They knew not their exact destination, but they pressed on toward it—led of God. That is good leading. It is the kind of leading known by Moses as he, too, saw pillars of cloud and fire by day and night to lead the children of Israel to the holy mountain. Our habit is to think of Moses as a great leader. We do well to remember that before Moses was a great leader he was a trusting follower of him who said, "Go, and I will be with thee."

Is the sign so clear today? In the minds of many there are little sparks of selfish desire which are magnified, in the imagination, to signs in the sky. But they are signs we have draped before our own eyes and have grasped at them with selfish hands. We run toward them with wayward feet and stumble in the mire of petty deeds and trivial talk.

Christmas is a time for sweeping the haze and mists away. It is a time for seeing God's star, the real star, the star by which we check our compass and chart our course.

(Continued on page 13)

Our Churches Report . . .

A New Attendance Record Set at Winston Salem

For the past eight years the Winston-Salem Church has been dreaming of reaching a goal of 100 in attendance at Sunday school. On Sunday, December 20, this goal was reached. For the past month, the attendance had been drawing closer and closer to the goal. Then they made it. The dream now is to see 150 present for Sunday school.

This means that the Winston-Salem Church must build. The small building, built in 1932, is used seven days a week and is a very convenient building. Classes are found in every space or corner. The high school class meets either in the auditorium with the adults or in the kitchen where there is not room for many chairs. The young people then must sit on the cabinets or stand. The adult class has filled the choir space; the young adults generally have to leave the door to their room open so that some of them can sit in the hallway.

The Board of Deacons have recommended a Committee on Christian Education to be set up to work out the problems of the Sunday school. This committee will be set up in January and begin work immediately.

Also, the Building Committee is working with an architect to see what might be done with the lots beside the present building. We hope to see a new church building there shortly and the present building renovated to make class rooms.

The church worship service has an attendance equal to that of the Sunday school and most of the time there are a few more at the 11 o'clock hour. Two choirs now assist in the services and when they are both present at the same time, the choir space is filled.

The need for a new building is becoming more real as we find a Girl Scout Troup, a Pack of Cub Scouts with three Dens, a Boy Scout Troup, two Pilgrim Fellowship groups, and all of the other organizations meeting each week in the present church building.

W. J. ANDES.

Christmas Celebrations in Shenrock Charge of Valley Conference

The many Christmas celebrations of the churches and Sunday schools of the Shenrock Charge proceeded according to schedule.

The Bethlehem Sunday School at Tenth Legion presented a pageant and program of song and pieces on Christmas eve at 7:30. Mrs. Shirley White, Mrs. Howard Sellers and Miss Ella Pickering directed the program.

Woods Chapel Sunday School, just northwest of New Market, presented its main program on Christmas night at 7:30. Mrs. John Kagey and Mrs. Austin Kipps had charge of the program.

Palmira Church, southeast of Edinburg, held its program of singing, pageantry and recitations on Sunday evening after Christmas at 7 o'clock. The program was under the auspices of the recently organized Youth Fellowship, of which Joyce Carper is president. Mrs. Austin Coffelt, Mrs. Woodrow Baker, Mrs. E. H. Niemeyer and Mrs. Albert Oliphant assisted the young people in preparing their program. Following the program was a Christmas sermon by the pastor, Rev. Ralph Galt.

Concord Church, east of Timberville, held its Christmas program on Sunday at 10:00 o'clock, and the Christmas worship service at Bethlehem was at 11:00 a. m. the same day.

Other services were held earlier at Woods Chapel, Wissler's Chapel Concord and Bethlehem. Celebrations included two parties, one at the John Kagey chicken house on Wednesday, December 23, and a New Year's party in the basement of Bethlehem Church on Thursday, December 31.

The United Church of Christ in the Philippines is sending its first missionary to another country. Dr. Dario Alampay has been scheduled to start doing educational work at Nakon-Pathom, Thailand. He only recently completed his training at the Union Theological Seminary in Manila. The arrangement for him to undertake the new work was made jointly by the United Church of Christ in the Philippines and the Thailand Mission.

A Meditation

Every period of history has been beset with dangers and perils which threatened the very foundations of society. But in all the long story of human existence, the chapter of human events now being written is most characterized by unpredictableness, uncertainty and impending disaster. "No man can tell what a day may bring forth," nor even what an hour may hold in store. Many students of history declare that the days in which we are now living are the most precarious, the most tragic and the most alarming that the world has ever known. As man's knowledge of things and their forces has grown from more to more, his passion for the good seems to have grown from less to less. "Everybody for himself, and the devil for us all" seems at times to be the order of the day. We cry, "Peace, peace when there is no peace." We talk about brotherhood and honor when brotherhood is but a dream and honor but a receding phantom. We talk about peace and plan for war. We talk about unity in church and state and build for disunity by our attitudes and conduct. We talk about tolerance and foster contempt. We talk about service and practice exploitation. We mumble our creeds which we nullify by our deeds. And the staggering world cries, "Is there no help for these days of delusion, defeat and despair?"

It is difficult to explain the evil which is so rampant in the world over which we believe that God is in control. But even in the face of the heartless selfishness, the ravishing greed and all of man's inhumanity to man, it is much more difficult to explain the good that is in the world if there is no God. Were it not for the spirit of God in the hearts of men there would be so little good of which there is still so much in the world. And it is to the men and women, whose faith in and love for the God and Father of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ inspires their conduct of life, to whom society is eternally indebted for all that is truly good.

God is not through with his world even though man may betray and fail him. Truth cannot forever be upon the scaffold; wrong cannot for always remain upon the throne:

Lo, that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above his own.

(Continued on page 13)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

1-9-54

A New Year's Day Meditation

The door has closed on 1953. Whatever it held for us is shut out. Its opportunities and privileges cannot re-enter. The record is made. It cannot be changed. It may be improved but not altered. It may be a sad fact, but nevertheless true. What we have written is written. It stands either for us or against us. The door of 1953 is closed forever. It shall ever remain so.

The door of 1954 is open before us. We have gotten our foot in the door. No man can close it against us. It stands ajar—replete with opportunities and privileges, with all the time there is at our disposal. No one has any more time than we have. We may have more to do than others but all the time there is in which to do it.

As the door of 1954 opens before us, we perhaps should take an inventory to determine what we have on hand for the new year. First of all, we have life. Many more worthy than we have gone from us. Hundreds and thousands lose their lives every year. God has been good to us; for some reason or purpose he has spared our lives. We should endeavor to determine that purpose and to see that it is fulfilled in us and through us. It may be that the purposes of 1953 were fulfilled in us; maybe not. What kind of life do you bring into 1954? It is more mature and wiser. You know more. It should be richer and more efficient. Is it purer, cleaner, more efficient, more Christian, more Christlike? Those are questions for you to decide. You have had the opportunities; what have you done with them—with your life? 1954 will tell the story.

This is a good time to make resolutions—yes, make them. It is better to make good resolutions and break them, than not to make them at all. What shall they be?

1. To love life—preserve it, protect it, keep it clean and pure. God has given it to you. It is the most precious thing that you have.

2. To love those whom God has given you, those who are a part of you, your own. You should love all people, but your own with a different affection.

3. To use every minute of this year to improve yourself, to make your life sweeter, dearer, more profitable and more precious to others.

4. To see that your mind is so full of good thoughts about life and each other that there shall be no room for unkind or evil thoughts.

5. To make sure that you speak only good of others.

6. That you shall not in any way offend our brother or put a stumbling block in his way but that you shall make the road of life plainer and easier for him to travel.

7. To make 1954 a year of prayer for peace and the betterment of mankind, of all nations and all races.

8. To give your life to God anew and to submit to his will, trusting him fully and completely.

May God give you wisdom and courage to make the right resolutions for 1954 and grace sufficient to keep them.

* * * * *

An Expression of Gratitude

A few days ago Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein of Richmond, Virginia, handed me a newspaper clipping announcing the pledge of $1,006,000 to Tufts College, Medford, Massachusetts, by Mr. and Mrs. Posner. Mr. and Mrs. Posner are Russians, having come to this country more than 50 years ago. In making this gift, the explained that they were giving this amount as partial payment of "the debt we owe this land of freedom and opportunity." This is a handsome gift and a magnificent expression of gratitude for the opportunities that have come to them in this great country of ours.

In all probability there are hundreds and thousands of others who have emigrated to this country and reaped equal benefits and blessings without ever stopping to consider the debt that they owe to a land, the people, and the government such as ours. Not only is this true of those who have come to our country from other lands but true of the majority of the millions who live in this, the land of the free and the home of the brave. We are indebted to our country and to our God for what we have and are. If those who were born elsewhere and came to this country are indebted to this country for opportunity, peace, and prosperity, how much greater is the debt of the ones of us who are natives whose parents before us were blessed with unparalleled privileges and opportunities.

Our country is great, but there are other lands on earth that are as rich with natural resources and blessed with invigorating climates but the inhabitants of these lands are not equal in training and development to the inhabitants of this land of ours. The difference is in the people. The people are different because from the settlement of this country the Christian gospel and the principles of Christianity have dominated our people in private and public life. Christianity and education make the difference. In this enlightened and carefree day, we are so apt to forget our debt to God and the debt to Christian education. The majority of our leaders have been schooled on the campuses saturated with Christianity and principles upon which life should be built. We are indebted to the church for the Christian institutions that dot this land of ours. Their fruits have been shed in all walks of life and result in improved social living and good government by which people are guided.

The time has come when we should recognize the benefits our Christian institutions of higher learning and acknowledge our debts to the same, and arise and make an honest effort to pay in part these debts that we owe. Sit down, my friends, and make a careful account of the blessings that you have received, of the debts that you owe and see, if you can, how far short you have come to settling these debts. Before the year is gone with its opportunities, make an effort to square your accounts that you may begin the New Year with a balanced sheet.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

This is the time of the year for inventories. Various kinds of businesses are checking up to determine the volume of business during the year and ascertain, if possible, profits or losses. Perhaps it is a good thing for the church to take stock and see where it stands—not simply from a financial standpoint but from the standpoint of spiritual achievements and evident services rendered individuals and communities during the year.

(Continued on page 11)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Fine Quarter's Work at Hunterdale

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Union Christian Church at Hunterdale, near Franklin, Virginia, is divided into three circles, the name of each circle honoring some outstanding woman in our church during the past years. At the September meeting of the auxiliary Mrs. Larry Overby completed eleven years of service as president. Mrs. S. M. Joyner was elected as the new president. The new officers were installed at an appropriate service.

World Community Day was observed on November 1, at the regular Sunday evening church worship service. The tableau, "We Will Build Peace," was presented. The entire service was sponsored and conducted by the church women. The Bethel Friends church was invited to be our guest. A special cash offering plus a large box of towels, cloths, sheets, and soap was sent to the war orphans of Korea.

The Thank Offering Service was held on November 15 at the regular Sunday evening church service. The program suggested in the packet was used. An offering was taken for our work on Mindanao.

The new Fellowship Hall of the Scott Memorial Wing of the church is proving a very useful place. The women have been hard at work in various activities culminating in the new Fellowship Hall. The women held open house there following the dedication of the Scott Memorial Wing on October 15. About 200 guests were served refreshments.

The annual turkey supper was sponsored by the women of the auxiliary and held in the Fellowship Hall. Some 275 plates were served and about $350 cash profit was realized. A bazaar was held in connection with the supper.

At the December meeting the Friendly Service program was presented. The chairmen of the program committees of the three circles were in charge of the auxiliary program. The program centered around the work in Puerto Rico. Each circle turned in enough money to send a goat to Puerto Rico. The goats were named from a part of the names of the three circles. The goats, Annie, Gertie, and Nettie, should bring much needed nourishment to the needy as they arrive in Puerto Rico.

Numerous projects have been completed. The Gertrude Bradshaw Circle bought two floor polishers and $100 worth of kitchen equipment. The Annie Drake Circle bought an electric cold water fountain for the church and several table cloths. The Nettie Blythe Circle bought an electric stove for the kitchen and furnished the new nursery. The auxiliary bought an electric refrigerator for the kitchen and presented $200 to the Building Fund of the church. We are planning to buy additional tables and chairs in anticipation of the Spring Rally to be held at Hunterdale.

MRS. ALVIS BARRINGTON,
Reporter.

* * * * *

December Program at Amelia

The Woman's Missionary Society of Amelia Church had a very interesting December meeting. We planned to raise money for the needy people of Puerto Rico. We learned how helpful it would be to send to the Christian Missionary Hospital over there an amount of soap, or sacred pictures and leaflets. We collected money to be sent to Puerto Rico for the milk goat fund, since we learned that the native children are depending on such.

Our meetings and attendance are more and more regular, our efforts together more complete. There was a real Christmas spirit among us in this past meeting and the songs and prayers had a deep meaning to us.

Also our work has been very successful in making a friendship quilt for our Rev. and Mrs. Fred Register. Each one of us wants to wish them a very Happy New Year.

We pray God to bless us all and to help us do more and better in serving him.

MRS. EVA FORD,
Reporter.

North Carolina Reports 1952-53

LITERATURE,

It has been a real pleasure serving as Chairman of Literature. I have learned much about the work of the conference as a whole from my association on the board.

My duties have consisted of attending a planning meeting with Miss Coghill and the conference chairmen from Eastern Virginia and the Valley, presenting the packet to you at our Fall Conference and attending two board meetings.

Judging from the number of packets sold, the majority of the societies have used them and found them helpful.

There are several things I would like to see done in the future. One being that each society that does not use the packet fully might invite the Chairman of Literature to come to their society and have the packet presented and explained, and either at the fall conference or school of missions have a room set aside for those who would like to have the packet and other literature presented and explained.

MRS. T. G. HUMPHRIES,
Superintendent.

* * *

FRIENDLY SERVICE.

With such a capable and active Convention Friendly Service chairman as we've had in Graham Wiseman, there's been much interest in the projects specially chosen for this past year's emphasis. Out of the 43 churches, in five districts, reporting, 31 sent things to Ellis Island, 10 to Africa. Other Friendly Service projects reporting were to help work in India, in Korea, in Carroll County, Virginia, with the Indians in Oklahoma; with the migrants, and at our orphanage. Only four churches reported no Friendly Service projects undertaken, but those four as well as all the others except one, reported community services performed, and Christmas packages were sent by one group to the orphans they had adopted in Korea, India and Lebanon.

Friendly Service, we must remember, consists of those things we do for others outside our own community, over and above our regular mission and budget giving. It is the work of our hands and minds uniting us in a fellowship of service with those in need and with those we send to home and foreign fields. Our projects are not an offering taken; they are a need studied and met—met without expecting a thank-you. We learn and do anything from making bean bags to bedspreads. Even the packing of a box, if it's to go overseas, takes learning and doing.

This year, already, we've started learning about Puerto Rico and have done something about its need. Remember "Tudor," the goat we sent from the School of Missions to some farmer on the island?

Having Marjory A. Martin, our National Friendly Service Secretary, at the School of Missions was a real inspiration. She helped us learn by "doing." Remember that "World Tour" we took? "Personalize and dramatize your Friendly Service projects," that's what Miss Martin said and did. That's just what we're doing now as our women's groups work towards that Christmas program about Puerto Rico.

Many of you will want to do more than this one big project chosen for convention emphasis. Share parcels to help India help herself, materials for Miss Oline Nicholson in India, and, of course, coupons for our orphanage, are three further suggestions. Watch THE SUN for more ideas and drop me a card any time you have questions or want more ideas for Friendly Service.

MRS. R. L. JACKSON,
Vice-President.

* * * * *

Treasurers Report

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

Quarter Ending December 15, 1953.

Balance brought forward $292.98

RECEIPTS.

Offering, Women's Conference, October, 1953 132.21

Women's Societies.

	Appor- tionment	Thank Offering
Antioch	$ 23.50	$ 12.75
Berea (Nansemond) ..	25.00	100.00
Begonia		20.00
Bethlehem	40.00	59.05
Cypress Chapel	30.00	18.00
Cypress Chapel (A. B.)	15.00
Dendron	15.00	20.00
Eure	14.00	5.00
Franklin	75.00	77.00
Great Bridge	20.00	10.00
Hopewell	3.95	16.00
Holland	40.00	59.25
Holy Neck	37.50	62.80
Isle of Wight	10.00	15.00
Johnson's Grove		10.10
Liberty Spring	55.00	127.04
Mt. Carmel	21.75	10.15

Mt. Zion	7.50	50.00
Newport News	35.00	100.00
Norfolk:
Bay View	100.00	25.00
Christian Temple ...	93.75	90.50
First	20.00	25.00
Little Creek	8.75	30.12
Second	20.00
Rosemont	60.00	103.00
Oak Grove	9.60	10.00
Oakland	25.00	100.00
Portsmouth:
Elm Avenue	15.00
First	25.00	25.00
Shelton Memorial ...	40.00	10.00
Richmond	15.00	16.10
Spring Hill	3.00	18.00
So. Norfolk	30.00	30.00
Suffolk	217.50	200.00
Sunbury	25.00	9.90
Union, So. Hampton ..	26.25	21.05
Wakefield	26.54	8.55
Waverly	15.00	17.25
Windsor	27.50
Total	$1,271.09	$1,511.61

Young People.

	Appor- tionment	Thank Offering
Berea (Nansemond) ..$	8.25
Bethlehem	25.00
Burton's Grove	10.00	$ 2.94
Cypress Chapel	25.00
Dendron	5.00
Eure	8.75
Franklin	9.00
Holland	6.25
Holy Neck	18.75	6.09
Liberty Spring	25.00	10.00
Mt. Carmel	5.00	10.15
Mt. Zion	1.00
Norfolk:
Bay View	1.75
Little Creek	2.50
Oak Grove	2.50
Oakland	12.50
Portsmouth:
First	22.50
Suffolk	77.97
Union, So. Hampton ..	12.50
Total	$ 279.22	$ 29.18

Junior Societies.

	Appor- tionment	Thank Offering
Antioch	$ 7.60
Berea (Nansemond) ..	6.25
Bethlehem	5.00	$ 5.00
Cypress Chapel	5.00
Dendron75
Eure	1.25
Franklin	7.50	1.50
Holland	5.00
Holy Neck	5.00
Liberty Spring	6.85	5.00
Mt. Carmel	4.00
Norfolk:
Bay View	1.50
Christian Temple ...	6.00
Little Creek	2.00
Rosemont	5.00
Oakland	1.25
Portsmouth:
First	3.00
Total	$ 72.95	$ 11.50

Cradle Roll.

	Appor- tionment	Thank Offering
Cypress Chapel	$ 1.00
Dendron	1.40
Eure	1.25
Franklin	2.00
Liberty Spring	10.00	$ 5.00
Oakland	15.72
Portsmouth:
First	1.00
Union, So. Hampton ..	4.96
Total	$ 37.33	$ 5.00

Life Memberships.

Franklin	$ 20.00
Norfolk:
Christian Temple (W.)	10.00
Christian Temple (Y. P.)	10.00
Total	$ 40.00

Memorials.

Franklin	$ 10.00
Isle of Wight	10.00
Total	$ 20.00

Grand Total$3,277.88

Goat Fund.

Berea (Nans.) "Jennie Willis" ...$	35.36
Bethlehem "Lou"	30.00
Eure	10.00
Holy Neck	26.00
Isle of Wight	30.00
Christian Temple, Christina	30.00
Mt. Zion	30.00
Mt. Carmel	10.00
Little Creek	30.00
First, Portsmouth	30.00
South Norfolk	120.00
Suffolk	44.37
Total	$ 425.73

Special.

Dendron, Film, Hidden Heart$	3.65
Johnson's Grove, Dr. & Mrs. Riggs	10.00
Total	$ 13.65
Total Receipts	$4,142.45

DISBURSEMENTS.

Treasurer's Supplies	$ 7.12
Mrs. J. E. Neese, expense account .	1.00
Mrs. Ray Gorden, expense account .	10.00
Conference speaker, Mrs. W. T. Scott	10.00
Rev. Quentin Leisher	25.00
Bank service	1.50
Sussex, Surry Dispatch, Conf. Pro-grams	10.00
Geo. D. Colclough, Minutes in Annual	81.00
Southern Conv. Office	3.10
Mrs. R. J. Brinkley, By-laws	3.75
Mrs. W. V. Leathers	3,624.19
Mrs. Barbara B. Nelms, Y. P. Treasurer	93.07
Total Disbursements	$3,869.73
Total Balance	$ 272.72

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. GEO. M. CORNELL,

Treasurer.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Children:

The year is new and much lies ahead. We never know whether good or bad is coming to us, but we can guess how some things will be. Much that will happen depends on us. Last year about this time, a very great man, great in spirit and intellect, told me "Look to the future and not to the past." That was very sound advice and good to follow. We do, however, set our future sometimes by what has gone before, and we look back for signs to guide us.

When Charles Lindbergh flew the Atlantic some years ago, he became a popular hero overnight. All the boys wanted to be like him, and the girls wished their brothers and boy friends could be famous fliers and brave like young Lindbergh. Recently he has written a book called Of Flight and Life. In it he describes his early days and his flight into the unknown. He goes on to describe the years it took for him to learn that science wasn't all in life. The young scientist thought that he could earn all he desired from life with his test tubes, engines, wings and flight.

Gradually it came to him that God was very important. He writes: "God can be sensed in every sight, act and incident. Now I know when man loses this sense, he misses the true quality of life—beauty of earth, its seasons and its skies, the brotherhood of men, and joy of family."

This year, some of you will decide whether or not you want to become members of the church. The words of the flyer-hero may help you decide what you will do with the New Year.

Look to the future, trusting in God, and seeking great adventures!

* * *

"It's The Doing That's Important"

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"What are you making, Laurie?" I asked my small son. His childish brow was puckered as he struggled with his blunt-tipped scissors, colored paper and bottle of paste.

"I'm makin' a basket," he said. "Like we do in kindergarten. But it doesn't go right. But it will."

My fingers itched to take the materials from him and fashion the simple little paper basket, but I held back. It wasn't the completed basket so much as the making of it himself that mattered. It would be a wrong move on my part for me to do it for him. I felt that I had made a mistake like that once with his elder brother. Richard had been given an assignment, while taking his Boy Scout training, to carve a knife from a piece of soft wood. The result of his efforts was a pretty crude object. I said, "Let me help a little," and taking it, I made it into a better-looking knife. He had admired the finished result, but I could sense that he had a felling of dissatisfaction with himself and loss of interest in the project. No, I was not going to repeat that mistake. So I went about my work, throwing a glance Laurie's way every once in a while. I hoped he would not grow discouraged and tired and abandon his intention.

Then it occurred to me that I could perhaps guide him a little without actually doing any of the work. I found a paper basket he had brought home from kindergarten. I had put a little pile of rubber bands in it and had told him at the time how useful it would be. He had looked very proud.

Now I brought this basket to him and said, "Suppose you take this basket apart, dear, and see how it is made. You can see it's a little dusty now. I really need a new one. It can be a pattern for you."

"See, it was a square piece of paper and you drew a small square in the middle with your pencil. Then you cut slits in each side and did your folding and pasting. The handle is just a long strip of paper."

I went on about my work then, pretty sure that Laurie would manage to make some kind of finished product from his materials. And he would do it "on his own." Learning to do this and also to finish something he had started would be beginning very desirable habits, helpful to him all his life. Little things are often so much more important than we realize in the early, growing, habit-forming years—like the little acorns that grow into mighty oaks.

"Look, Mother!" Laurie scrambled up from the floor where he had been working on a spread-out newspaper. He held up the green paper basket for my admiration. It was lopsided, it was smeared with paste; but it was a basket, and it was finished.

"Why that's just fine, dear!" I admired it extravagantly.

He was bursting with pride, but he tried to be very calm and grown-up about it. "You can put the wubber bands in this one, now," he said in an offhand way.

"I certainly will," I said, taking it. "While I'm doing that, you can put away your things and stuff the pieces of paper into the wastebasket, can't you?"

"Sure," he said, and he proceeded to clean up as well as a five-year-old could be expected to do. He might have forgotten this part had I not included it as a matter-of-course action.

I did not feel that my morning had been wasted, even though I had not finished the household tasks I had intended to do in this time. Some things are much more important than others.

Norfolk General Hospital Offers All-Expense Scholarship

We learn from Mr. W. L. Beale, the superintendent, that the Norfolk General Hospital is offering a three-year all-expense scholarship to qualified high school graduates who can enter a February 1, 1954 class in their School of Nursing. This should prove quite an opportunity to young women who desire a career in professional nursing. The course leads to a fully approved graduate diploma in nursing.

The class will be limited to twenty-five students, and applicants will be accepted in the order in which applications are received.

If you are interested, write to Miss Mary Love Green, Director of Nurses, Norfolk General Hospital, Norfolk 7, Virginia.

"By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous." Faith in Christ begets love for Christ, and love for Christ begets love for others. A man's love for God is shown by his love to his fellowmen.

—H. S. Harcastle.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Youth Week

The date for "Youth Week" this year is January 31-February 7, and the theme for the week's activities is "So Send I You." You may plan your own program consisting of special services at church, Sunday school or society, conducted by the Young People, or order the suggestions contained in a packet on this theme from the Department of Publications, National Council of Churches, 79 E. Adams Street, Chicago 3, Illinois. Price 50c.

* * * * *

Report of Young People's Groups To the North Carolina Woman's Conference

The young people of the North Carolina Conferences have done a good job this year in their projects. They are helping with our Conference Center at Moonelon, foreign missionary projects, and the regular work of the conferences. We have three very capable young people as leaders, and they have led the way for the other young people to follow. They have held their officers' meetings, planned their rallies, and one has held a planning retreat for the whole conference with good success. Also, one conference has felt that it would be a very nice idea to help Jose Dabuet, our Philippine student, with his work, so have sent hymn books to him to use in his youth meetings.

The State-wide Rally was held again at Elon College with much success. Over 575 young people met to hear the National Youth president, Nick Piediscalzi, who is a very fine young fellow and an excellent speaker. The camps and conferences in North Carolina were well attended this summer.

The mission study for the coming year includes "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World," using Where'er the Sun; and "Spanish Speaking Americans," using Who? The mission study could concentrate on one country, since our theme is "Around the World." With the Three Commissions coming into effect this fall, studies of Christian Faith, Fellowship and Action would be a good opening study for youth groups. A study of our Christian Faith could help the young people to establish their own beliefs and be able to tell others what they do believe. A study of our own denomination and other denominations would be a part of Fellowship with all Christians. Action seeks to further the cause of Christ at home and abroad.

May we, as women, seek to help our young people in their work by our prayers and counsel as they strive to grow into Christian men and women and take their places in the church. If we succeed in this work, we will be "Rejoicing in Our Task" as Christian women.

RUTH H. DUNN,
Superintendent

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Well, we hope each of you had a fine holiday and is all set to go back to school and to work. This is the best time ever to start a perfect church attendance year.

* * *

I certainly have enjoyed the football and basketball over the past few weeks. I hope you young folk enjoy playing and watching good, clean sports. It's a lot more fun and worth more than hot-rodding or just "hanging around" up town.

* * *

"Gimme a dime's worth of asafetida," said the boy.

The storekeeper tied up the package, and the boy said: "Dad wants you to charge it."

"Ayy right; what's your name?"
"Schermmerhorn."

"Take it for nothing," he said, "I ain't going to spell 'asafetida' and 'Schermmerhorn' for no dime."

APPORTIONMENT GIVING

(Continued from page 7)

The college also takes an inventory, takes stock of what it has on hand, the services that it has rendered, and to determine the successes and failures during the year. Naturally we are concerned about the support given the college by its friends and by the church. Under the heading "Apportionment Giving" we find that on December 31, 1952, on Conference Apportionments the churches and Sunday schools of the Convention had contributed a total of $14,236.51. On the same date this year, the college has received from the above sources $13,423.68, which is $812.83 less than was contributed last year to even date. There may be institutions and causes where this amount of money would not mean very much but not so with Elon College. It means a very great deal. It means that creditors are waiting and that the college must do without some things that it needs very badly. We are compelled in some way to balance our budget.

Next week we begin the New Year. I trust that our pastors and churches may work and pray for the college during this year, that it may be more adequately supported, thus enabling it to continue its contribution to the field of Christian higher education for our church and to the cause of higher education in general. The college wishes to express its gratitude for the support that has been given by our Sunday schools and churches during the past year and expresses the hope that this support may be more generous during 1954.

Previously reported $12,744.65

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Fayetteville	$ 10.00
Fuller's Chapel	33.00
Henderson	50.00
Liberty (Vance)	50.00
Mt. Auburn S. S.	18.39

Eastern Va. Conference:

Dendron S. S.	$ 3.23
Newport News S. S.	29.45
Oakland	31.51
Rosemont	40.00
Shelton Memorial	5.00
Spring Hill S. S.	3.45
Union (Surry) S. S.	2.30
Windsor S. S.	22.54

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Bethel S. S.	$ 5.00
Concord S. S.	15.00
Durham S. S.	18.85
Happy Home S. S.	17.93
Ingram	75.00
Lebanon	55.00
New Lebanon S. S.	12.25
Tryon S. S.	15.00
Union (Va.) S. S.	25.00

Western N. C. Conference:

Albemarle	$ 25.00
Flint Hill (M)	3.80
Mt. Pleasant	12.50
Needham's Grove	26.27
Pleasant Grove	9.96

Virginia Valley Conference:

Antioch S. S.	$ 17.06
Bethlehem S. S.	23.00
Dry Run S. S.	4.28
Leaksville S. S.	10.92
Winchester S. S.	8.34

679.03

Grand total for 1953 $13,423.68

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Jesus and Nicodemus"

LESSON III—JANUARY 17, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life."—John 3:16.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 3.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Corinthians 5:17-21.

The Troubled Questioner.

Nicodemus was troubled. He was a good man, a religious man, a sincere man, and in spite of what some folks think, a courageous man. He was a thoughtful man. He was a broad-minded man. In spite of the fact that he was "a ruler of the Jews," a devout Pharisee who was meticulous about keeping the Law, and somewhat an authority on religion, he knew he lacked something which this young Rabbi who was just beginning his ministry had. He wanted to know what it was. The fact that he came by night was evidence of his good sense, rather than of his lack of courage. His heart's faith, in many ways, was stronger than his stumbling, blundering mind. He showed his courage, and his friendship for Jesus by demanding that he be given a fair hearing at a trial, and when even the disciples of Jesus had fled in terror and panic. And it was he who brought myrrh and aloes to embalm the body of Jesus after the crucifixion. Nicodemus was a good man, a generous man, a godly man. But he had never had an experience of grace, his heart, unlike John Wesley's had never been strangely warmed. He came to Jesus to try to find out why this was so and what he could do about it. It is a sound plan to bring our questions and longings to Jesus.

The Troublesome Answer.

"Truly, truly I say unto you, unless one is born anew, he cannot see the kingdom of God . . . unless he is born of water and the spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." That was a hard saying. What did this young fellow mean by being born again, or anew, or from above? How could a man who was grown be born again? Certainly he could not be born again in any fashion as he had first been born, coming from within the body of his mother! "How can a man be born when he is old?" It just did not make sense to Nicodemus.

It does not make sense to many people today. They do not know anything about the new birth, or the birth from above, or they do not feel the need of it, or believe in it. "Educate a man, refine a man, give culture to a man, polish up a man, and that is enough." But Jesus says that the only way to get new men is to have men born again, to be changed in heart, to have a right spirit renewed within them. Not reformation, but regeneration, is the need of men, no matter how intelligent or cultured or outwardly religious they may be. "Ye must be born again"—the words are as true today as they were the night Jesus spoke them sympathetically and sincerely to Nicodemus. If a man like Nicodemus needed to be born again, how much more do we need an inner change of life brought about by the spirit of the living God.

The Mysterious Element.

Jesus insisted upon the necessity of the new birth. He frankly admitted the mystery of it. It could no more be explained than the blowing of the wind. "The wind blows where it wills, and you hear the sound of it, but you do not know from whence it comes, or whither it goes." You can feel it as it blows against your face or against your body, you can see its effects in the world around you, but you cannot see it, that is the wind itself. But the wind is a fact of life. Just so the new birth is a mysterious thing, a very mysterious thing. Try to explain, if you please, how the human heart can be changed, sometimes in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, in other cases by a gradual process, but changed nevertheless. There is an element of mystery and an element of miracle in it. It belongs to the realm of the unseen and the inexplicable from the standpoint of the human mind.

The Stubborn Fact.

It is all a case of a thing which cannot be explained, but which can be experienced. The "How" of the new birth is a mystery; the fact of the new birth is a fact. There are simple and humble and unlettered people who cannot explain what took place in their lives, or how it took place for that matter, but they knew that something did take place. The spirit of God bears witness with their spirit that they have been born of God, that they have been born from above, that they have been born anew. And of course this is true also of many great and wise and good men. Great and small, learned and ignorant, rich and poor, adults and young people have experienced the new birth, they know that they have passed from death into life. They know God has given them a new heart.

The Love of God.

John 3:16, the Memory Selection for today's lesson has been called the gospel in a nut-shell. Here is summed up the whole gospel. God's love for the world, the whole world; God's gift of his Only Begotten Son to the sinful world as an expression of his love; the Son's willingness to give himself for the salvation of the world; faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour of the world as the means of salvation; and eternal life, here and now, as the result of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. God did not send his son into the world to judge, or to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved. Today if you hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

APPRECIATION

(Continued from page 2)

enhanced by the clever way in which the Television Set had been placed in our home. It was a case, of course, "of unlawful entry," and there was a lawyer right there to handle the matter. But we decided not to press the case, and the culprits will go free!

This gift is simply in keeping with the tradition of these churches during my pastorate here. At every Christmas Season they remember the pastor and his wife with suitable and substantial gifts. But more. Throughout the year individual members of the church are always doing something nice for us, and sharing with us that which they have. They are a good and generous people, and our hearts are filled with gratitude for their gracious and generous spirit toward us.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

LET'S GO TO CHURCH

(Continued from page 3)

The Church Has the Solution.

The Church stands for the spiritual, social, cultural, and economic uplift of all persons, and has within it the teachings whereby, if practiced, all nations, races, and individuals can live in peace and harmony together.

Worship Does Something for Us.

Worshiping together in the House of God does something for us which, though we cannot explain, we can experience. By bowing our heads and opening our hearts in prayer, by singing the inspiring and challenging hymns, and by giving heed to the reading of the Divine Word and the presentation of the Good News of the Gospel, we may become recipients of the Divine Power which enables us to live victoriously even under the most difficult circumstances. In the House of God not only can we learn that our sins may be forgiven, but by desire and faith and surrender our lives may actually be cleansed and regenerated by the Power of God.

Gives Us a New Look at Life.

The church offers a higher vantage point from which to look at life and the world. Here, with a heightened estimate of human personality, and a new sense of the meaning of life, we agree that Christ is our Hope and that "His will is our peace." With Simon Peter we say, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

Teaches Us the Christian Way.

The church, together with the Christian home, is the hope of the world. In the church school, children are taught life's greatest principles in the way of Jesus. They learn of his love, his teachings, his self-giving, and his ultimate triumph. They come to see that he is the way, the truth, and the life for them.

Helps Build Christian Homes.

A Christian home with Christian parents cooperating with the church is the means whereby our youth may receive Christian education and be surrounded with Christlike attitudes and a Christlike spirit. May God give us homes where children fondly speak Jesus' name and parents hold him dear.

We Need the Church.

I need the church and the church needs me. Many fine people over the world are missing the inspiration and spiritual counsel that the church gives and with it the opportunity to do something creative and lasting for others. Now is the time for every man, woman, and child to become a vital part of the church whose supreme purpose is the welfare of humanity, the bringing of persons of all races and classes into a harmonious and joyful relation with God, and the pointing of all to Jesus Christ as not only the world's greatest teacher but also our present counsellor, savior, and friend.

THE GOD of CHRISTMAS

(Continued from page 5)

Seeing the star and following it are two different things. How often we perceive what God's will is, but heed it not! Paul says, "The good that I would I do not." How truly the prayer of confession reflects our own selves: "We have left undone the things which we ought to have done; we have done the things we ought not to have done; and there is no health in us." The knowledge of the truth is only half our salvation. The other half is our willingness to follow what we know to be right. The world is full of wise men who see a star. The world is poor in men who see and follow even unto Bethlehem.

"And Anna coming in that instant gave thanks unto the Lord and spoke of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem." Luke 2: 38.

A portion of Luke's second chapter and a beautiful portion of the Christmas story frequently overlooked, is that of the aged prophetess Anna. She was long a widow and her age surely had but grey in her hair. She was now late in life wedded to the temple and devoted to holy things. When Joseph and Mary brought the infant Jesus to the temple in accordance with customs of their fathers and in obedience to the laws of Jewish family life, Anna was there! She was there at the right time because she was there all the times that she could be of help or offer a prayer. This gracious elderly woman, a widow, a prophetess, and probably a grandmother, with her depth of spiritual insight and her sensitivity to the deep things of God looked into the face of the Christ-child and knew in her heart that God in his goodness had given the world its most precious gift—its way of salvation. When she saw Jesus she immediately felt the wellspring of joy overflow her soul. This was good hope. It was for her the glory of her long life. Death now was a minor incident in an existence that was crowned with life eternal. Her first act was the giving of thanks for the hope in her soul. Her second act followed almost simultaneously with the first—good witness. Sorrow can be hidden in the heart and shielded from others by a curtain of smiles. Joy and hope cannot be so contained. These must be shared to be retained. Anna, not by reasoned judgment, but by womanly instinct sought out all whom she knew of the expectant heart in Jerusalem and spoke to them of the redemption she had seen in the Anointed One of God—the Messiah long awaited.

What good is there in it? What good comes out of it? To those who speak thus of Christmas let Christ's followers today say with firm assurance, "The good of Christmas is good tidings, good leading, good hope, and good witness in the name of the Child of Bethlehem, the Boy of Nazareth, the Man of Galilee, and the Savior of the World."

A MEDITATION

(Continued from page 6)

That is the faith of those who have faith in God, the faith of those who believe that God is the author of all that is good, but that he depends upon man's cooperation in the realization of God's plans for the redeeming of his world.

The symbol of that faith is a cross. And the evidence of that faith is not what one believes happened some 1900 years ago in Palestine, but in what one believes ought to be happening here and now wherever one lives, and what one is doing day by day to help it happen. The evidence of that faith is what one joyfully sacrifices for God's church and for the building of a better world.

The Son of God goes forth—the Son of God goes forth to serve—and those, who believe in the God whom he worshiped and served, with gladness and enthusiasm, follow in his way.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

The average drinking family spends from $150 to $300 per year for alcoholic beverages. Besides diverting this amount of money from business dealing in good things of life, this expenditure lowers the family standard of living.

—The National Voice.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

These reports bring us nearer our goal of $65,000.00 by the sum of $5,654.82. We are very appreciative. Faith and works both we have, and we do not believe our heavenly Father or good church folks will see us suffer here. We are anxious to close this year in as good condition as possible and we hope next year we shall be able to go forward without the anxiety which has been our portion this year.

Yesterday was a big day here, with two truck loads of good corn coming from the Bethlehem church community near Suffolk, Va. C. F. Savage and his son, E. P. Savage, gave us the bigger truck load; and Warren Austen and June Oliver gave us the other. The four of them came along to see us and to deliver it, and our good friend, Rev. R. E. Brittle, "been to Suffolk a thousand times" came along to show them the way. It was a joy to see this pastor and four of his fine laymen. Five Savage grandchildren; and Fred Byrd, sent along four bags of peanuts; and other children in the Bethlehem church sent three bags of pecans. Thanks to one and all.

Yesterday also saw a motorecade large enough to take every child, 83 of them, to Burlington shopping. This was done by the Burlington Jay Cees who brought the cars, furnished the money for each child, and accompanied them into the various stores. It was a thrilling sight to see the train of cars hurrying away to Burlington with these happy children.

The day before Santa Claus came out of the skies by way of helicopter, brought every child a couple of really fine gifts, and gave the children a thrill. That night the Elon student body had a party for the children and gave gifts to each one, and two bicycles. Tonight the Woodmen of the world will be here with fun, fruit, frolic and gifts for all. There are two or three other parties coming up. Believe me with all these parties and the mail packages, along with the assignment of children to friends for Christmas we are plenty busy. Thanks to all for everything.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR DECEMBER 17, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. J. M. Riddle, Sanford, N. C., Clothing and Coupons.
Mrs. J. B. Hurst, Atlanta, Ga., Clothing.
Standard Hosiery Mills, Burlington, N. C., Hose and Socks.
Mrs. Minnie P. Tune, Vernon Hill, Va., Clothing.
Mrs. W. P. Robinson, Chicago, Ill., Clothing.
Irvin Iseley, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. J. Edward Harrell, Holland, Va., Shoes.
Cradle Roll Dept., Holt Neck Church, Toys and Coupons.
Missionary Society, Little Creek Christian Church, Coupons.
Mrs. J. A. Cofer, Norfolk, Va., Coupons.
Class No. 4, Bethel Church, Elkton, Va., Coupons.
Missionary Society, Union Church, Virginia, Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward..... $17,832.57
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Mt. Auburn$ 60.00
Liberty (Vance) 162.06
Sanford 115.00
337.06
Eastern Va. Conference:
Centerville$ 6.00
Berea (Norfolk), Thanks-
giving 228.00
Dendron, Thanksgiving . 26.76
Holland, Special 150.00
Holland S. S., Thanks-
giving 400.00
Hopewell, Thanksgiving . 14.00
Mt. Carmel S. S. 13.96
Newport News S. S. 14.90
Norfolk, First, Thanks-
giving 41.30
Norfolk, First 24.52
Oakland 98.25
Union (So.) 74.00
Windsor, Thanksgiving . 109.78
Windsor S. S. 10.00
1,211.47
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Belew Creek S. S.$ 16.00
Bethel S. S. 4.91
Bethlehem, Thanksgiving . 118.50
Burlington, First 200.20

Concord S. S., Thanks-

giving 15.00
Greensboro, Calvary S. S. 16.00
Happy Home, Thanksgiving 48.00
Ingram 70.00
Tryon S. S. 15.00
Zion 5.00

508.61

Western N. C. Conference:

Brown's Chapel S. S. ...$ 5.00
Mt. Pleasant 12.50
Pleasant Cross S. S. 6.48
Pleasant Union S. S. 14.88

38.86

Va. Valley Conference:

Linville S. S., Special ...$ 36.00
Mt. Olive (G) 20.71
Mt. Olive (R) S. S. 20.50
Winchester S. S. 8.34

85.55

Total $ 2,181.55

Grand total $20,014.12

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $24,277.92

Mrs. Ethyle O'Connell,
Ormond Beach, Florida, in memory of her mother$ 10.00
Philathea Class, Suffolk
Christian Church 5.00
Golden Rule Bible Class,
Newport News Church 10.00
John Morrison Bible Class,
Rosemont Church 20.00

Thanksgiving Offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Russell,
Suffolk, Va.$ 10.00
Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Brick-house, Norfolk, Va. .. 100.00
Dr. Charles H. Rawls, Suffolk, Va. 5.00
Mrs. Lucile Cullers, Front
Royal, Va. 10.00

Christmas Gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Nelson, Winchester, Va. ...$ 10.00
Mrs. E. H. Hughes and Family, Richmond, Va. 15.00
R. W. Moore, Graham, N.
C. 210.00
Clarence Hooper, Burlington, N. C. 20.00

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Circle No. 3, Women's Fellowship, Suffolk Ch.	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Howell, Suffolk, Va.	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rawls, Suffolk, Va.	10.00
Miss L. Kennedy, Worthville, N. C.	15.00
Cradle Roll Dept., Suffolk Christian S. S. .	5.00
A Friend	1.00
Tommy Shoemaker, Chicago, Ill.	20.00
Class No. 4, Bethel Ch., Elkton, Va.	1.65
Junior Class, Youngsville Christian S. S.	3.00
A. P. Strickland, Louisville, N. C.	5.00
Mrs. J. Lewis Rawls, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter	10.00
Geroge W. Haughwont, Norfolk, Va.	5.00
Percy Smith and Co., Inc., Newport News, Va. .	5.00
Special Gifts	10.00
	<hr/> 540.65
Grand total	$24,818.57
Total for the week	$ 2,722.20
Total for the year	$44,832.69

REPORT FOR DECEMBER 24, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. Willard Anderson, Suffolk, Va., Clothing.
First Cong. Christian Church, Newport News, Va., Clothing.
Charles Scott, Graham, N. C., Pecans.
Primary Class, Liberty Spring Church, Presents.
Miss Anita Winne, Nassau, New York, Toys.
Ramseur Christian Church, Christmas Gifts.
Couples' Club, Asheville Church, Toys.
Mrs. Floyd Turner, Suffolk, Va., Clothing and Dolls.
A Friend, Clothing.
Don Frederick, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Henry I. Jaffe, Suffolk, Va., Candy.
Girls' Auxiliary, First Baptist Church, Burlington, Dolls.
John R. Bowker, Pinehurst, N. C., Candy.
Miss Rena Maude Iseley, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cobb Asheville, N. C., Toys and Candy.
Union Grove Missionary Society, Clothing and toilet articles.
Heart Sisters Society, Randleman, N. C., Bedroom furniture.
I. Schneierson and Sons, Randleman, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. Ivie Frank, Harrisonburg, Va., Christmas cards.
C. F. Savage, E. P. Savage, Warren Austin and June Oliver, Suffolk, Va., Corn.
Grandchildren of C. F. Savage, Peanuts.
Fred Byrd, Suffolk, Va., Peanuts.
Bethlehem Children, Peanuts.
Baraca-Philathea Class, Henderson Church, Gift for each child.
G. C. Talbert, Halifax, Va., Clothing.
Mrs. T. S. Lamb, Clothing.

Mrs. William S. Chandler, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Happy Sharers Club, Greensboro, N. C., Quilt.
Mrs. Earlie Jones, Raleigh, N. C., Clothing.
Winchester, Va. Church, Gift for each child.
Iris McEwen Class, Burlington, First Church, Coupons.
Hank's Chapel Missionary Society, Coupons.
Women's Missionary Society, Asheboro Church, Coupons.
Mt. Auburn Christian Church, Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$20,014.12
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Ebenezer	$4.15
Fuller's Chapel, Special .	10.00
Fuller's Chapel	33.00
Henderson	274.52
Oak Level	19.53
Shallow Well S. S.	54.00
	<hr/> 405.20
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)	$68.15
Franklin	150.00
Bay View	24.00
Rosemont	168.00
Norfolk, Second	69.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.,
Special	25.00
	<hr/> 504.15
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington, First	$50.00
Durham S. S.	35.73
Elon College, Thanks-
giving	92.26
Hebron S. S.	10.00
Hines Chapel	20.00
Lebanon	42.00
New Lebanon, Thanks-
giving	100.00
Pfafftown	18.40
Reidsville S. S.	346.00
Union (Va.) S. S.	5.00
	<hr/> 719.39
Western N. C. Conference:
Shiloh S. S.	$22.74
Zion	30.00
	<hr/> 52.74
Virginia Valley Conference:
Antioch, Thanksgiving .	$99.52
	<hr/> 99.52
Total	$ 1,781.00
Grand total	$21,795.12

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$24,818.57
Mrs. Margaret H. Pritchett and Family, Elon College, N. C., in memory of Mrs. C. N. Somers	$ 9.00
Allen D. Moore, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Clyde H. Dorsett .	5.00
Onward-Fellowship Class, South Norfolk Church .	25.00
Thanksgiving Offerings.
Mrs. W. H. Ayscue, Henderson, N. C.	$ 5.00
Miriam Ayscue Falkner, Henderson, N. C.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Alford, Tarboro, N. C. .	10.00
Miss Patti Adams, So. Boston, Va.	10.00

Christmas Gifts.

H. P. Duun, So. Boston, Va.	3.00
Garland Gray, Waverly, Va.	200.00
Progressive Bible Class, Neport News Ch.	10.00
Woman's Fellowship, Bay View Church	11.25
Philathea Class, Reidsville Church	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Hollinger, Harrisonburg, Va.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Turner, Suffolk, Va.	25.00
Woman's Society, Church of Wide Fellowship .	62.25
Wake Chapel Missionary Society	10.00
Reliable Bible Class, Portsmouth, First Church .	10.00
S. H. Plummer, Newport News, Va.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. A. Paul Hartz, Waverly, Va. .	50.00
I. Paul Ingle, High Point, N. C.	100.00
Miss Novie Hardee, High Point, N. C.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Medaniel, Luray, Va. .	10.00
Mrs. J. D. Burgart, Greensboro, N. C.	2.00
Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Sibley, West Hartford, Conn.	5.00
J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va.	10.00
Jesse H. Jones, Halifax, Virginia	5.00
Mrs. Marcella Saicker, Suffolk, Va.	2.50
Elon College Community Church	2.00
O'Kelly Bible Class, First Ch., Greensboro .	50.00
Huffman Oil Co., Inc., Burlington, N. C.	100.00
Mrs. W. B. Truitt, Greensboro, N. C.	10.00
Mrs. A. A. Turner, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
Wysong and Miles Co. Employees, Greensboro, N. C.	44.70
Miss Vera V. Van Cleave, Wadley, Ala.	1.00
W. P. Davis, Burlington, N. C.	130.00
D. C. Bryan, Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Lebanon Sunday School, Semora, N. C.	18.00
Rev. J. A. Henderson, Manson, N. C.	15.00
Special Gifts	140.92
	<hr/> 1,151.62
Grand total	$25,970.19
Total for the week	$ 2,932.62
Total for the year	$47,765.31

Due to lack of space, it is not possible to report the Orphanage receipts to December 31, 1953. Dr. Truitt's final report for the past year will be given in next week's issue.

The High Cedars

By RICHARD K. MORTON

God brings low the proud, and humbles those who think of themselves more highly than they ought to think.

The Most High is like an eagle that can take the highest branch of the cedar, crop it off, and send it below. Severe words about the proud are written in Proverbs 16:5: "Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord." The Psalmist (119:21) wrote: "Thou hast rebuked the proud that are cursed, which do err from thy commandments." And again (138:6): "Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly: but the proud he knoweth afar off."

We may mean various ideas by the word "proud," but what is most sure, it seems to me, is that the spirit that is puffed up, exaggerating itself, thinking poorly of others, is evil in the sight of God.

The high cedars of the Bible, noble, strong and beautiful trees, sometimes could symbolize a pride in strength and excellence which led men into moral evils. These high cedars of the proud produce a wrong notion of themselves and create rancor and unhappiness all around them.

Pride, however, grows out of many legitimate ideals and forces. Surely we should have proper initiative and ambition, and surely we should be grateful for whatever God enables us to become and to accomplish. But so often we go on from there and develop a pride in public recognition of what we think we have become and we find an almost sadistic satisfaction in standing out from the crowd and from being recognized as one who has more than others. The high cedars, sometimes by their very eminence, become the envy of many, and stir uneasiness and ill will over a wide area.

The high cedars can be lofty in their strength and their grandeur, but God has regard for the little trees as well, and for those of low estate. They can be a tower of strength and furnish much good to the world; but if we use our learning, genius, strength, or some other characteristic or possession to create envy and unrest and unhappiness, then pride has become an evil thing.

We want our friends to take pride in what they have done. We feel that we have a right to a certain pride in what we have done that is good in the sight of God and man. But the high cedars must not block off from the little trees the sunlight of heaven and the fresh winds of earth.

Pride need not be evil, nor create animosity. It can be unselfish and have regard for moral values.

Every workman must really take pride in his handiwork. Every parent must take pride in the successes of his or her children. Everyone must take pride in civic reforms and accomplishments.

The world needs the high cedars—cedars of height and strength and grandeur. But these cedars become an abomination if they come to a point where they belittle those less fortunate and in other fields and if they come to have an opinion of themselves which is much too exalted.

Thank God for the high cedars and for the wholesome pride we have in the good things of life. And may God keep us from such misuse of pride as will turn this great impulse into a thing of unhappiness and evil!

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, JANUARY 14, 1954

NUMBER 2

Can You Count Your Blessings?

THE SONG-WRITER says: "Count your blessings, name them one by one," but that is quite an impossibility, for our blessings are innumerable, and if we tried to name them we would be sure to leave out so many. Our blessings come in so many ways: known, unknown, and so often in disguise that we do not always recognize them. We need to pray the prayer that someone has written, "O Lord, that lends me life, lend me a heart replete with thankfulness"; and "always and for everything let our thanks to God, the Father, be presented in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Ephesians 5:20). We also need to "cultivate the thankful spirit! It will be a perpetual feast. There is, or ought to be, with us no such thing as small mercies; all are great, because the least are undeserved. Indeed, a really thankful heart will extract motive for gratitude from everything, making the most even of scanty blessings." "A grateful heart, filled with thanksgiving, is a nobler thing than all mere outward worship." So we need to realize that "thanksgiving is thanksgiving," and "let our prayers be as frequent as our wants, and our thanksgiving as our blessings."

An elderly couple were being congratulated upon the many luxuries that the Lord had permitted them to enjoy in their old age, but they replied: "We worked for these with our own two hands," seemingly leaving God out of the reckoning. One wonders if they got the greatest enjoyment after all! Martin Luther said: "If, in his gifts and benefits, God were more sparing and closehanded, we should learn to be more thankful. And from the sainted Bernard: "Unthankfulness is a parching wind, drying up the fountain of pity, the dew of mercy, the stream of grace. It is a destructive thing, an enemy of grace, hostile to salvation. It blocks up the way against grace, and where it is, thence grace finds no access, no place. Grateful then and devout must a man be, who longeth that the gift of grace which he hath received should not only abide with him, but be multiplied."

And again we say, let us cultivate the thankful spirit so that every day will be thanksgiving day, for the Lord's mercies are new every morning: great is his faithfulness.

Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands. Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. Know ye that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people and the sheep of his pasture. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name. For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations. Amen.

—Anonymous.

News Flashes

The Mid-Winter Meetings of the Mission Council will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, January 25-28.

The Virginia State Legislature convened yesterday in Richmond. We welcome to our city Senator Mills W. Godwin of Chuckatuck, and Representative Shirley T. Holland of Windsor. Mrs. Holland is also in Richmond.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers will be interested to know that Rev. R. A. Whitten was entered as a patient in Garfield Memorial Hospital, Washington, D. C., on January 6. He is there as the patient of Dr. Maurice Protas and Dr. Wm. Kurstin for observation. We hope soon to be able to give a good report.

Dr. Woffard C. Timmons, the executive secretary of our national Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life was a recent visitor in First Church of Burlington, N. C. He met with both the morning and evening circles of the women, with the Board of Christian Education and the teachers and officers of the church school, and with the Board of Deacons. He also brought the message at Prayer Meeting. Dr. Timmons is to be the preacher in the Lenten Evangelistic Services to be held at this church March 14-18.

We welcome Rev. Olin B. Pendleton, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church of Norfolk, Virginia, who began his ministry on January 1. He is a native of the State of Washington. Mr. Pendleton received his Ministerial Degree from Andover-Newton Theological School, Boston, in 1941, later taking his Master's Degree at Texas Christian University. He has served churches in Washington State and during the war he served with the Council of Churches in Seattle. He is a former pastor of the Congregational Church at Revere, Massachusetts, and in 1941 he went to Hawaii, where he did pastoral service at the Church of the Crossroads, in Honolulu. We welcome the Pendletons to our fellowship in the Southern Convention and hope that they may have a profitable ministry in Norfolk.

Meeting of North Carolina Council of Churches Set for Durham

The seventeenth annual meeting of the North Carolina Council of Churches will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, January 26-27, in Durham. All sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Main and Roxboro Streets, except the closing luncheon on Wednesday, which will take place at St. Philip's Episcopal Church, Main and Queen Streets.

Speakers for the two-day session will include Dr. Harold C. Case, president of Boston University, who will address the evening service on Tuesday night; Mrs. Harold Brinig, a prominent church leader from New York City, who will be the women's speaker; and Mr. Oscar K. Merritt,

DR. H. C. CASE

Mount Airy industrialist, who represented the North Carolina Council at the recent World Order Conference in Cleveland. Mr. Merritt will bring a report on that meeting on Wednesday morning.

In addition to the above addresses, reports will be brought by the Council's executive director, Morton R. Kurtz, on the program of the past year; Mrs. T. S. Newbold, general chairman of the Department of United Church Women; and chairmen of the various commissions and committees of the council. Council delegates will pass upon the 1954 budget and elect officers for the new year. A nominating committee headed by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, the pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church of Durham, will present a slate of officers for consideration.

The new officers will be installed at the closing luncheon at St. Philip's

(Continued on page 12.)

Ministers Hold Meeting in Interest Of Elon College

Approximately thirty-five ministers of the Southern Convention met at Henderson, N. C. on Tuesday, January 5, 1954 in response to the invitation of Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College to meet with him to discuss matters in the interest of Elon College.

The group gathered at Henderson held no official standing and its actions are of an advisory nature only. Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, vice-president of the Southern Convention, presided at the meeting.

After discussion during the morning session the following action was taken as the first order of business in the afternoon session.

"We acknowledge the distinctive service Elon College has rendered to the churches of this area, to our denomination at large and to the nation in the purpose and profession of Christian Education; and we acknowledge the unselfish and faithful service of President L. E. Smith, his predecessors and the members of the faculty and administration of the college.

"Recognizing that the years have brought new opportunities and responsibilities, we are of the opinion now is the time to rethink our mission through Elon College and the methods useful for its fulfillment.

"To this end we request that the Executive Board of the Southern Convention take under the advisement the appointment of a committee to study this matter and to report its findings and recommendations to the Southern Convention, at its 1954 session if possible, the committee to invite the cooperation of the president and the Board of Trustees of Elon College."

It was moved and voted to take under consideration the Two and One-Half Million Dollar Campaign as the next item of business. The following actions were taken.

1. Voted—That we look with favor upon the Two and One-Half Million Dollar Campaign plans to include in the next phase of the campaign the raising of funds for the erection of Carolina Hall and Virginia Hall and the allocation of goals to the churches of the states of North Carolina and Virginia along conference lines (with the un-

(Continued on page 7.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Laymen to Meet February 14

The Annual Rally of the Laymen's Fellowship will be held in Whitley Auditorium at Elon College Sunday, February 14. Complete details will appear in THE SUN next week. Plan now to be present.

To Vote on Constitution.

At the last rally of the Fellowship the Constitution and By-laws were presented in the Handbook. It was suggested that certain changes needed to be made but that according to the constitution such changes needed to be publicized for one month prior to the meeting. We are printing below the suggested changes so that the vote may be taken at this rally.

1. Executive Committee. The constitution originally adopted provided for a Laymen's Council. The Laymen's Council voted in February 1953 to ask that the name be changed to the Executive Committee; that it consist of the officers of the Convention Laymen's Fellowship, and the chairman, vice-chairman and the secretary of each Conference Fellowship.

2. Membership. The Council also voted to ask that the provisions of Article V with respect to membership be changed. According to the original constitution "membership" in the Convention Fellowship was limited to one representative for each 100 men in the church provided no church should have more than four such representatives. It is quite clear that the provision on was for voting members and it is proposed that the wording of the constitution be changed to indicate that this is the method used to determine the number of votes for any particular church. Thus it is intended to emphasize that all of our men are members and it is hoped that they are all active.

3. Conference Officers. It is further requested by the Council that the Conference officers be elected for a term of two years and that the term of office shall run for two years; further that the term of office shall run concurrently with that of the Convention Fellowship officers.

If there are any questions about any of these changes please let me hear from you immediately. Such questions could be answered in this column and thus all would be permitted to benefit from such explanations as can be given. Please give this matter your attention.

Rally, Rally! Let's All Go to the Rally!

How many men in your church have ever attended one of the Laymen's Rallies? Ask them about it . . . all of them will tell you that the events are always interesting, informational and inspirational. If it happens, and there may be a few cases, that no one has ever been to one of the rallies from your church this is a good year to change that situation. Several hundred men will be here and we certainly hope that there will be a large representation from your church. Certainly we can count on you!

J. E. D.

The North Carolina and Virginia Laymen's Fellowship held a meeting on Friday, January 8, at which time the Conference Center at Moonelon was discussed and the fellowship went on record as assuming its share of responsibility in the development of the project. It looks now as if a building program will get under way this spring.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardesty.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date, 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $, for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Managing the King's Business

By RICHARD K. MORTON

A church is indeed a spiritual fellowship, engaged in religious and redemptive work through Christ. A church, however, is also a business. In some states it is organized as a corporation. It has to be run—with certain adaptations of the pattern—in accordance with good business practices. It is not piety deliberately to flout business principles and good management. With this in mind let us resolve this New Year to do a better job in managing the King's business.

While I do not know much about business myself, I confess that I am, at times, appalled by the average church's ignorance of business procedures. I am not competent to go into the technical details of this charge—but I am sure that it can be sustained in too many cases.

Trustee's meetings, for instance, are often haphazard and reports sketchy—as if this small business of the church did not matter much anyway, and no one was going to put too much time on it. Reports of committees are too often slipshod, and responsibilities of officials are often not carried out.

In a great number of cases, the trustees, deacons and others do not bother enough to find out what responsibilities they have to the community, such as notifying officials about cleaning sidewalks, repair of abutting properties, filing of notices, payment of certain fees, and other fiduciary and legal matters. They do not keep, through the clerk or someone else, records of historical and purely statistical value which may prove highly important later. If this is indeed the King's business they are running, then it requires skill and fidelity and conscientious performance of duty.

Many churches never get down to being specific and systematic about discharging their duties to the community, even in the payment of bills, presenting of reports, handling of requests. The business life of many a church is unbelievably mixed up and inadequate.

Few churches inspect their property enough and keep up with the best methods of doing business, as in buying supplies, replacements, etc.

There are still other matters that sometimes scare me. For instance, the matter of insurance and protection of the property and other values against loss by theft or fire or against lawsuits for various liabilities. It is technically possible for a church to be sued if someone slips on an unshoveled icy sidewalk in winter or is injured by some defect in a chair, the flooring, ceiling, and so on, or by an explosion from a defective stove in the kitchen. Fire insurance is usually far too low, and other insurance on liabilities is just not carried at all. Autos used by pastor and other church officials on strictly church business are protected only by the individual's personal insurance, yet this is really part of the church's responsibility. It is fine, for instance, to take some young people to a conference or retreat; but if they are injured while in my car, who is liable? Not the church, but my insurance company or me!

Church buildings run into money, these days—we are building (perhaps sometimes overbuilding) great educational buildings, sanctuaries, and so on. But these hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property are sometimes served by volunteer, inexperienced, and often elderly janitors. Sometimes these men do not have the time, skill or capacity to do what is required. They may tinker with the electrical or other equipment; they may forget to turn off switches or valves, or run the furnace properly, or lock the doors. How we have missed some real disasters in some places is a marvel! This is no poke at the honest, faithful, careful janitors many churches have; but so often we do not pay much for the job and give it to some dear, devoted fellow who is willing to give the time. This is dangerous! It is poor business!

In the interest of alleged economy, we sometimes let vital equipment, like furnaces, cooking ranges, wiring fall into serious disrepair. Parsonages, also, are similarly neglected. We think we haven't the money, and we haggle and delay—then comes a crisis and later comes a big, heavy bill.

If a church professes high spiritual ideals and proclaims great moral truths and yet demonstrates to the community that it is sloppy and inefficient in its business dealings, its whole ministry is vitiated. Stewardship involves the proper amount of giving—it also involves the proper handling of money once it has been given.

The King's business calls for meticulous care to fulfill all obligations as a church fellowship and to have the required know-how in handling financial matters. If any church fellowship allows its money matters to get all tangled up, it will have little influence.

Let's handle the King's business in a way that does honor to the King and lends even more power to the spiritual ministry!

The Happiest Person

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

At the beginning of each year, we all wish our friends—"A Happy New Year." We say it hundreds of times, and we mean it down deep in our hearts. We really and truly wish that our friends shall have "happiness." But what do we mean by happiness? That is a question which but few of us have considered as we have wished it on our friends.

There are many superficial ideas of happiness. Ask the man who has had to toil incessantly all his life "what happiness is," and if he is superficial in his thinking, he will reply—"Happiness is to have a chance to rest and to be free from work." Ask a person, who has seldom had enough to eat, "what his idea of happiness is" and he will likely reply—"Happiness is to have three square meals a day with plenty of left-overs." Ask a person who has never had much money to spend, and he will reply—"Happiness is to have plenty of silver money in your pocket to jingle, and a wallet full of bills to draw on." Ask a person who has never traveled and he will reply—"Happiness is to be able to go places—to travel hither and yon and see the country." Ask the person whose work keeps him on the go—traveling here and there constantly, and he will reply—"Happiness is to be able to stay at home and not go anywhere."

Most people think that happiness is the experience of those who are in different conditions than theirs. The people who live in the country are likely to think that happiness is the lot of those who live in the city—while at the same time the people in the city feel positive that happiness belongs alone to those who live in the country—the city folk work and save to get enough to buy a little plot of ground so they can move out into the country—and the people in the country dream of living in the city some day.

Thomas Edison, the great electrician and wizard of science, once said that he considered "the nearest approximation to happiness of which the present human nature is capable was to live on a farm which is one's own, far from the hectic, artificial conditions of the city—a farm where one gets directly from one's own soil and toil what one needs to sustain life, with a garden in front and a healthy, normal family to contribute those small domestic joys which relieve a man from business strain."

I once heard two Pennsylvania, Lancaster County farmers talking on a Pullman car and their entire conversation was about selling their fine farms and moving to the city where said they, "people really live"—the city "where you can just turn on the heat and no wood to be chopped and where your food is delivered to you and you don't have to work."

This all goes to illustrate how human nature is so constituted that it thinks to have the opposite from what one has, is happiness. The grass on the other side of the fence always looks greener.

A Correction

We deeply regret the error that occurred in the title of the article by Dr. Henry E. Robinson, pastor of our Burlington, North Carolina, Church, in the issue of January 7. The title of the article should have read, "The Good of Christmas," not "The God of Christmas." "O" how the omission of one letter can mess things up! Such errors just happen, and they are hard to explain away.

Because we have such superficial notions of happiness, the thought of happiness becomes to us a sort of "ignis fatuus" or "will-o-the-wisp"—which we strive to lay hold of, but which ever seems beyond our grasp.

But happiness is real and may be experienced by all, if we know its true meaning. Happiness is not synonymous with pleasure—pleasure is but temporary—but happiness is abiding—it is continuous. It is not found in things but within one's own life. It is an attitude toward life—the attitude of appreciation, dedication, cooperation—and not the possession of things. Children whose wants are many and who have everything they want are not so happy as children whose wants are few, and some of those wants denied. The children of the past generation were satisfied with stick horses to ride and hoops to roll. What a contrast to the situation today!

Men and women are only grown up children—and they seek happiness in things, they suffer the same disillusionment that children do.

He that would drink from the fountain of happiness must needs let down the bucket within his own life—for the supplies of happiness are found nowhere else but within his own soul. Many are disillusioned by the idea that money and things bring happiness, but money and things occasion much of the world's unhappiness. I once had a friend who told me that, when he was in his early twenties he thought he would be happy if he was worth $50,000, but when he became worth a million dollars he found that though his wealth brought him friends and aristocracy to his home—it had also lost him the love of his children, and said he, "I'd give every dollar I have and start life all over again, if I had my family back and my old satisfaction back like I had twenty years ago." The testimony of thousands of people is that in neglecting the springs of happiness within their own lives, those springs themselves dried up—and their lives became parched and dried.

So when we wish our friends happiness, we should really wish them just enough prosperity to make them appreciate life the more, and to make them love God the more because of it, but not so much prosperity as to make them forget God and their obligations to him. In wishing happiness for those we love, we actually wish for them enough disappointments and enough problems to cause them not to lose the common touch and to keep humble and sympathetic.

Happiness is a spiritual possession, and is a stranger to the life that thinks only of material things. Happiness is God's response to a loving heart. It is God's response to a faithful heart. It is God's response to a loyal heart. Pascal declared—"Happiness is the union of ourselves with God." If there are times in our lives when we are unhappy, it is because we are out of alignment with God. Unhappiness is God's call to shift the gear of our life, and gear into his moral purposes and into his plans for our lives. Automobiles stand still—even though the power is on—no progress so long as they are in neutral, but when the gear is shifted, the contacts and connections are made that utilize that power; and progress is realized.

So it is with our lives, we cannot expect to be happy unless we are
(Continued on page 9.)

Our Churches Report . . .

The Church at Sophia Finishes a Good Year

Sophia Congregational Christian Church has just finished the best year in the history of the church. It has grown in church membership and also in the number of pupils on the Sunday school roll.

The church has a growing building fund, and is looking forward to a new church building in the future.

Working with our pastor, the Rev. Avery Brown, we hope to have a still better year in 1954.

The missionary society has just recently bought a goat for Puerto Rico, naming it "Dora Lee" for our pastor's wife.

MRS. MABEL STALEY,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Mount Olivet Church (Rockingham County) Reports

During the two weeks preceding Christmas we held five special Advent evening services and our annual Sunday school Christmas program. The average attendance at the Advent services was 37; while the church was jammed full for the Christmas program. Our pastor, the Rev. H. V. Harmon, gave the Advent message on Sunday, December 13; Tuesday, the 15th, and Thursday, the 17th. Two other Valley Conference pastors, Rev. Newton and Rev. Rohart, spoke on Monday and Tuesday, the 21st and 22d, respectively.

Six new members—all young people—were received during the services: Larry Lam, Winston Life, Danny McInturff, Jimmy McInturff, Judy Strickler and Billy Trobaugh. They met with the pastor during the services and are meeting him and others interested in church membership several times between now and Easter. Holy Communion was celebrated on the last evening of the services.

We were well provided with special music during Advent. Mrs. Joseph Frazier and Mrs. Sipe, of our own church, as well as groups from the Bethel and Solburg churches. Paul and Martha Rohart from Linville sang and played for the Advent services. There was much music during the Christmas program: in particular, a solo, "O Holy Night," by Miss Louise Frazier, accompanied by Miss Rosalyn Bloxom of Bethel. This was repeated for the Bethel Sunday School's program later in the week.

Our Sunday school recently had its annual reorganization. Mr. Jesse Lam of McGaheysville is the superintendent, and Mr. David Strickler of Elkton, Route 2, is the secretary. The separate boys' and girls' Bible classes have been combined into one young people's class taught by Mr. George Roberts who comes every Sunday from Harrisonburg.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Centerville Christian Church Reports Progress

In view of the fact that the active working enrollment of Centerville Christian Church, near Disputanta, Virginia, is small, we feel that we have made, through the cooperation of the few, great strides toward a more progressive church.

Only about fifty per cent of our church has been active. The main objective of our work has been to contact the other fifty per cent. This has been done through a form letter which urged them to place a new evaluation on their church relations and return to the service of the church. Twenty-seven letters were sent. The results were as follows:

Seven members wished to be placed on the active roll again; two had joined another church; two asked for transfers; one wished to be dropped from the roll, and two were found to be deceased.

We plan to send a second letter to those who did not reply to the first.

By the help of God, we hope we can make Centerville an active church again.

MRS. F. W. BARLOW,
Reporter.

* * * * *

A Report from Bethlehem Church

On Sunday, December 18, at the morning worship service of the Bethlehem (Nansemond) Congregational Christian Church, our minister, the Rev. R. E. Brittle, conducted a very impressive consecration service for our lovely new parsonage. He then invited the church members and their friends of the community to open house on Wednesday night, December 21.

Everyone has enjoyed helping our minister and his family get settled in their new home. The adult Sunday school classes furnished the materials, and eight carpenters volunteered their services one Saturday and enclosed a nice back porch. Gifts of a fireplace set, pictures, kitchen stool, hassock, rugs, lamps, china, towels and bed and table linen, in fact, everything that anyone thought of that was needed around the home to make it more beautiful and comfortable has been given.

The members of our church are grateful to the children of Deacon and Mrs. Isaac Piland for the lovely brass altar set given in their memory, and to the children of Deacon and Mrs. J. W. Folk for four lovely brass offering plates given in their memory. The lives and service to the church and community of these faithful servants now reflect in the hearts of their children, as they follow in their parents footsteps.

We have been sharing our minister with the Enre Church people. He preaches for them on the second Sunday afternoon and fourth Sunday night in each month. They love him, too. They came over on Sunday night, January 3, to visit him and his family in their new home. One should see their pantry since this visit, it is filled to the brim. They know that he likes hot biscuits; and he will not have to buy any flour soon, or much of anything else.

We are thankful to God for our achievement in the past year, and ask for his blessings this year.

REPORTER.

Out of nearly every great crisis in human history has come some great advance in human progress. I believe it can and should be so now. I believe at this hour, when the very existence of Humanity on earth seems imperiled by diabolic new atomic powers, the true followers of the Prince of Peace may instead win a final victory. At our new Crossroads of Destiny between Christ and Chaos, I believe they may help Humanity take the right road toward a better and happier world.

—Clarence Poe.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Ministers' Meeting in Interest of Elon College

All of the pastors in the Southern Convention were invited to meet in Henderson, North Carolina, Tuesday, January 5, at 10:30 a. m. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss ways and means of re-activating the Two and One-Half Million Dollar Campaign. As an approach to this important topic, an agenda was presented containing specific statements regarding the achievements and successes already attained during the first six years of the campaign launched in 1946 as a continuous effort in behalf of Elon College over a period of ten years. Reports showed that to date for buildings, improvements, endowment, and surplus funds, a total of $1,334,500.00 in cash and pledges has been secured, with $125,000 in outstanding pledges, leaving a balance of $1,165,500.00 to be secured.

The ministers present expressed satisfaction with accomplishments for the college to date and expressed their willingness to cooperate and to use their influences in their churches in an effort to complete the Two and One-Half Million Dollar Campaign, the purpose of which is to strengthen the economic life of the college and to insure its solvency through the years.

It was agreed that it would take perhaps until September 1, 1954 to prepare for the campaign and secure interest throughout the church and alumni; that during September the campaign would be launched with a closing date to be determined later. The immediate goal of the campaign is to secure $250,000 for a girl's dormitory, Virginia Hall, and $250,000 for a boy's dormitory, Carolina Hall, with the States of North Carolina and Virginia undertaking to secure funds for the dormitory bearing their names.

It was also voted requesting the Executive Committee of the Executive Board of the convention to appoint a committee that would make a study of Elon College, its resources and its needs and to report its findings to the Southern Convention with proper and fitting recommendations.

There was a decided interest in the meeting, an optimistic spirit and certainly one of the most forward-looking meetings that we have had in years in the interest of Elon College. The meeting was heartening and encouraging.

* * * * *

Mrs. Russell T. Bradford

Mrs. Bradford was known throughout the church and beyond the borders of the convention as Jennie Willis. She was affectionately known by that name on the campus of Elon College as a girl and since her graduation and her efficient and productive work for Christ in his church. It would seem to all who knew and loved her that her passing was un-

Fifth Sunday

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS ARE PRIVILEGED TO MAKE
AN OFFERING FOR OUR COLLEGE

* * *

Elon College

* * *

Let every Sunday school in the Southern Convention take advantage
of this opportunity!

timely, that her busy and useful life was abruptly interrupted far too soon; that it was too early in life for her to have all of her "purposes broken off." The wise master-builder, the creator of life, the God of all grace knows better than we mortals. It is a part of the Christian faith and evidence of trust to submit to the providence of God and trust, that we may be given the ability to understand and the grace to submit. May the blessings of the Almighty crown each new day and the light of his goodness reflect in every coming night that those who sorrow may not feel alone, but may be conscious of his blessing moment by moment and day by day.

Mrs. Bradford was a graduate of Elon College and a faithful member of the Board of Trustees for years.

We shall miss her happy personality, her inspiring presence, and her helpful counsel. May God help us carry on in his name until for us his kingdom shall come fully and completely.

The following letter was received from Mrs. Eldridge Smith of Franklin, Virginia:

"My dear Dr. Smith:

I am enclosing a small check for Elon College in memory of Mrs. Russell Bradford who loved Elon so dearly.

BETSY CAMP SMITH.

(Mrs. Eldridge Smith)"

I am sure that all who read this will read the letter with appreciation and that there are many, many who will want to join with Mrs. Smith in establishing a memorial at Elon College. The principal of this memorial will be added to the permanent funds of Elon College as an enduring memorial to one so well deserving of any honor that we might be able to confer.

MINISTERS MEET IN INTEREST OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 2.)

derstanding that churches located in one state but belonging to a conference primarily of another state may designate to which building their gifts should go); that we pledge our cooperation to the organization effected by the college; and in view of these plans that the Board of Trustees of Elon College consider the advisability of the early construction of these two dormitories.

2. Voted—That we suggest that the campaign be launched during September of 1954 and that a date of termination for the campaign solicitation be set.
3. Voted—That a Day of Prayer for Elon College be observed by our churches and or Sunday schools on the fifth Sunday of January 1954.
4. Voted—That the acting chairman of this group (Dr. Jesse H. Dollar) appoint a committee of five members from this group to meet with Dr. Smith in a consultative relationship relative to this campaign.
5. Voted—We thank Dr. Smith for arranging the meeting, for the dinner and for his help.

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.,
Acting Secretary.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Ladies Aid Society of Centerville Christian Church Reports

The Ladies Aid Society of the Centerville Christian Church, near Disputanta, Virginia, reports the following achievements for the past year:

Twelve meetings were held during the year, each followed by a social hour in the homes of the community.

We sponsored a "Fellowship Harvest Supper," at which time our preacher and his family were honored.

Baskets and convalescent cards were sent to sick members.

Flowers were sent on funeral occasions of members.

The minister's family and visiting minister were entertained in homes of the members during our Revival Services in July.

MRS. F. W. BARLOW.

* * * * *

North Carolina Reports 1952-53

INTERDENOMINATIONAL COOPERATION

As Chairman of Interdenominational Cooperation, I have tried to keep local societies in the conference informed on the special interdenominational observances, have encouraged subscriptions to The Church Woman whenever possible, and have represented the conference at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Council of Church Women of the North Carolina Council of Churches.

Reports on interdenominational activities have been received from five districts with the following results:

41 societies observed World Day of prayer.

33 societies observer World Community Day.

28 societies observed May Fellowship Day.

26 societies reported all three observances.

15 societies are active in local Councils of Church Women.

The latter figure is encouraging because last year only nine societies reported being active in local councils and that figure was drawn from all seven districts rather than just five, as this year. May their tribe increase!

My chief regret is that I did so little to foster interest in the Migrant Work of the North Carolina Council of Churches. It is so very necessary and is, I feel, one of the most important things the council is doing. I hope the new Chairman will be more effective in this worthy project.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. L. PARKER,

Chairman.

* * * * *

FAMILY LIFE

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Psalm 133:1. There is so much unrest, calamity, fear, distrust, and misunderstanding in the world today that there has never been so great a need for Family Life unity as today. Our nations, churches, government, all depend on Family Life. Let us make ours a greater Christian family life and work together, having as our aim and goal "Every Family in our community a Church Family."

I have written 83 church societies and the reports received from 37 have been most interesting and encouraging. We have eight District Superintendents and I have reports from four. I cannot help from thinking those who have promoted "Family Life" in their group are making the biggest progress, and lives are enriched by such programs.

May I suggest a few things to do:

Appoint a Family Life chairman.

Ask the Mayor of your community to proclaim Family Life week May 2-9.

Make all special days Family Life Days.

Worship together, sitting in family groups.

Sponsor suppers, picnics, old people's parties.

Use "Making a Success of Every Day Living," from packet.

Promote family reading—order unit from Pilgrim Press.

Stress all activities, as some other group might profit.

Know your teachers in public school and Sunday school.

Know your college, your boys and girls will be going.

MRS. EDD CHILTON,
Superintendent.

* * * * *

SPIRITUAL LIFE

Six districts of the North Carolina conference reported that out of a total of 68 societies, 52 have well-planned devotional programs, and 49 have held their Bible study. One district made no report.

During the past year an effort was made to encourage well-planned devotional programs. Seventeen publications were assembled and mailed to each society. Three separate mailings were made in order that the material might reach the societies at a time that it could be used to the best advantage.

Thirty-two publications including books, pamphlets, and leaflets were purchased and made available free of charge to any society who requested them. These were placed on display at two meetings and a mimeographed sheet was distributed which listed the names of the publications. Your Spiritual Life Chairman did not properly publicize this service as it was not used by the societies.

As we think through the life and task of the church around the world, may we inform our Spiritual Life Chairman of our needs in order that she can rejoice in fulfilling this task.

MRS. CARL DAWSON,
Superintendent.

* * * * *

LIFE MEMBERSHIPS AND MEMORIALS

There were 51 Life Memberships and 26 Memorials, or a total of 77 certificates reported by 36 churches during the year 1952-53.

In 1951-52 there were 57 Life Memberships and 13 Memorials, or a total of 70 certificates, from 33 of our churches.

This year we have a gain of seven certificates given and three churches contributing.

MRS. S. E. ALBERT,
Superintendent.

* * * * *

CRADLE ROLL

Thirty some of our churches reported on their Cradle Roll work out of our seventy some churches that have active women's societies. This is a good report, but it could be much better. Most of these used the convention material that was put in the packet, others used material from David C. Cook Publishing Company and Pilgrim Press.

For the coming year, there is a program in the packet for your Cradle Roll party for 1954, a reading list for parents and teachers of Cradle Roll, also a Cradle Roll newspaper. Some of this could be used in each church.

I trust and pray that each society will be more interested in the youngest department of our work and that next year will show a greater increase in Cradle Roll work.

MRS. WILLIAM P. BOWLAND,
Superintendent.

* * * * *

Treasurer's Report for the First Quarter—1953-54

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Quarter Ending December 15, 1953.

RECEIPTS.

Women's Societies.

Albemarle	$ 30.75
Amelia	17.88
Antioch	38.50
Apple's Chapel	17.25
Asheboro	74.23
Auburn	33.25
Belews Creek	36.80
Berea	15.75
Beulah	18.00
Beverly Hills	29.39
Burlington	454.00
Calvary	5.34
Carolina	10.00
Chapel Hill	85.90
Church of Wide Fellowship	30.00
Concord	23.17
Damascus	2.50
Durham	114.18
Elon College	228.81
Erskine Memorial	75.00
Eutaw Community Ch. ..	17.00
Flint Hill (R)	10.75
Fuller's Chapel	24.00
Gibsonville	32.56
Greensboro—First Ch. ..	193.80
Greensboro—Palm St. ..	101.00
Hank's Chapel	22.00
Happy Home	61.00
Haw River	72.50
Hebron, Virginia	10.00
Henderson	93.00
High Point	33.25
Hines' Chapel	87.00
Hopedale	41.34
Ingram, Virginia	67.00
Kallam's Grove	10.00
Lakeview Community Ch. ..	5.33
Liberty, N. C.	19.00
Liberty, Vance	86.00
Liberty, Virginia	20.00
Long's Chapel	17.50
Monticello	46.70
Moore's Union	5.00
Morrisville	4.00
Mount Auburn	29.15
Mount Bethel	21.05
Mount Gilead	14.75
Mount Pleasant	9.00
Mount Zion	13.50

New Hope	57.75
New Lebanon	28.00
Oak Level	29.00
Pfafftown	19.52
Pleasant Grove, N. C. ...	22.80
Pleasant Grove, Virginia ..	44.70
Pleasant Hill	15.00
Pleasant Ridge (G)	65.00
Pleasant Ridge (R)	62.26
Plymouth	4.20
Providence Memorial ...	28.00
Raleigh	50.00
Ramseur	51.80
Reidsville	292.86
Sanford	55.00
Shallow Ford	112.00
Shallow Well	83.87
Spoon's Chapel	13.62
Turner's Chapel	25.00
Union Grove	53.50
Union, N. C.	86.70
Union, Virginia	93.35
Wake Chapel	50.00
Winston-Salem	40.00
Youngsville	25.00

Junior Societies.

Apple's Chapel	$ 2.43
Durham	13.67
Greensboro—First	11.32
Henderson	9.00
Ingram	1.00

Cradle Roll.

Apple's Chapel	$ 1.73
Durham	6.84
Greensboro—First	11.32

Miscellaneous.

Memorial to Mrs. Bertha Ann Minton from Dr. W. P. Minton	$ 10.00
Conference Offering (First Church, Greensboro) ..	188.46

Total Receipts $ 4,172.58

DISBURSEMENTS.

Conference Speakers	$ 35.00
A. D. Pate & Co., Conference Programs	21.00
Mimeograph Work	17.30
Printing Minutes in Annual	15.80
Expense of the President ..	13.29
Expense of three District Supts.	8.33
Expense of the Board Meeting	36.80
Expense of the Nominating Committee	2.31
Ledgers for District Secretaries	14.70
Literature for a new society	3.85
Contribution to Audio-Visual Aid Service ...	1.00
Gift to the Auditor	25.00
Department of United Church Women—N. C. Council	50.00
Department of United Church Women—National Council—World Community Day Offerings ..	38.00

Mrs W. V. Leathers, Treasurer, Woman's Mission Board of Southern Convention for: Thank Offerings	$1,795.80
--	------------

Puerto Rican Goat Fund ..	622.14
Memorials	30.00
Our Christian World Mission	15.00
Rachanyapuram School (A. Pappas)	9.00
Ellis Island	13.00
Christian Orphanage—Elon College	12.00
Missions—General Fund ..	1,393.26
	3,890.20

Total Disbursements $ 4,172.58

Respectfully Submitted,
SUSIE D. ALLEN,
Treasurer.

THE HAPPIEST PERSON.

(Continued from page 5.)

making progress in our manner of living—and we can't make progress without gearing our lives into the divine plan and purpose of God. The underground cables at intersections of city streets provide the power for buildings to be lighted—for the wheels of industry to turn—regardless of how congested the traffic on those busy streets may be. The hurry of passing crowds, the turmoil of the busy thoroughfares make no difference—the lights keep burning—because those cables carrying the power are connected to the dynamo at the power-house. So it is with our lives. There is no true happiness, no secure happiness, no unyielding happiness apart from faith in God and dedication to his divine Son, Jesus Christ. He has come that we might have happiness, and that we might have it in abundance.

Happiness though a stranger to many may be experienced by all, if they will but make room in their lives for the Lord Christ. Only right-living can bring happiness to an individual, a home, a community, a nation, the world.

People cannot find happiness by seeking happiness, but they can find happiness by seeking God "whom to know, to love and to serve," insures happiness. People cannot find happiness by planning happiness for themselves alone—their planning must include others—for happiness refuses to enter a selfish heart. People who are concerned about the happiness of others never fail to find happiness for themselves. The happiest person is the person who most sincerely seeks to be a true partner with God in bringing happiness to others. That is the highest happiness the human soul can experience—the happiness that is experienced in bringing happiness to others.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

"The Rudest People"

"People are the rudest people," said a little boy, and he told the truth! Are you guilty of bad manners to little folk? When you walk along the street and a little fellow grins at you and says: "Hi!" what do you do, what is your reply? Do you walk on looking as glum as can be, or do you pause and answer? What people really are may be quickly seen by your response to the very young.

Mothers work and work training young folk to say "How do you do?", "thank you", "please, may I?" and then comes the guest. What does he do? Too, too often he ignores the little chap, and talks over and under him. Children are quite capable of being polite, if you are polite to them, children make good companions, if you are a companion to them.

One family apologized to their children for the rudeness of a guest who acted as if they weren't there. If you want children to be polite, be polite to them, naturally. A little girl fled to her teacher in tears, "O Miss Wood, I wish I never had to hear 'Shut up' again as long as I live." We don't blame her. Do you like to be told "Shut up?" Remember how you feel the next time you get ready to say——! Then don't.

If you don't listen to the recounting of the cowboy bang-'em-up, knock 'em out with a degree of interest, there will come a day when your child will not tell you anything or listen to you either. Watch the school teacher paying the strictest attention to a child's long recital. She wants to be listened to, so she listens. Politeness is so easy.

Years ago the beginner children of the First Church, Portsmouth, used to say "Politeness is to do and say, the kindest thing in the kindest way." It's still a cracker jack definition. Can you pass the in-the-street test, the-at-home test? If not, practice.

J. J. H.

"Take care of the child, and the country will take care of itself."

—King George VI.

"The Joy of Sharing"

By ANNIE L. GAETZ.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

I was working in my garden one morning, when friends returning from town stopped to talk with me. Two of them were mothers, and each had with her a little daughter. The children, too, it was plain, had been doing some shopping.

"Won't you have some eandy?" asked small Mary, as she held out her bag to me.

I was loath to take Mary's candy, for I knew it was not often that she was fortunate enough to have any, and of course, she would be sharing it with her brothers and sisters when she arrived home. On the other hand, I realized that Mary had a generous nature and the opportunity to give did not often come to her, so she would be disappointed if I did not accept her offering. For this reason, I did accept and thanked her most warmly.

As Mary's face lighted up, I could see that giving meant a lot to her, that she had learned the joy of sharing. I could picture the happiness of the child when she reached home with something to give to her brothers and sisters.

"Celia, you give the lady some of your candy," said the mother of the other small girl; but Celia put her candy behind her and backed away.

"Why, Celia, Mary shared her eandy," admonished the mother; but Celia only grasped the eandy more tightly with determined little hands and looked sullenly down at her feet.

Celia's mother turned to me as she said, "I can't understand why it is that Celia never wants to share her things. She ought not to mind sharing what she has, for she certainly receives a great deal."

That was true. In Celia's home she was the pivot around which the family revolved, and her every wish was granted. Since she was an only child, she was not called upon to share with other members of the family, and, unfortunately, she had never learned the joy of sharing with others or of sacrificing to make others happy in any way.

By way of contrast, I am going to tell you of an experience I had last winter. There came to my door, on February the fourteenth, a small boy bringing me the gift of a valentine. I invited him in, and as we chatted and I admired his gift, he informed me that he had a valentine for "most everybody," and he showed me those still to be delivered.

"We mustn't get them mixed," he warned, proudly showing me one after another of the envelopes which his mother had addressed. On each his own name appeared as sender—a personal touch that made his simple gift a perfect one. Since he was under school age and could not read, the valentines must be delivered in rotation.

He, like Celia, was an only child. However, although money was scarce in his home, his mother was seeing to it that he should learn the pleasure of giving. He had earned pennies by doing special things for her, and how he was enjoying taking those penny valentines to his neighbors! He was tasting a spiritual happiness for more of which he would always be eager.

Among those to receive valentines, I noticed the names of two newcomers to our country. These people could not speak much English and they did not comprehend our way of life, but this little gift, prompted by good will and neighborliness, could not be misunderstood and would convey a warmth of pleasure that would always be remembered.

Unquestionably, these little tokens would bring pleasure to all who received them, for what is more acceptable than a gift from a small child, even though it be only a penny valentine?

Best of all, this youngster was experiencing the delights of giving. Unselfish giving, sharing should be taught early in life, but a child can learn it only by happy practice. As this boy grows up through childhood into adult life, he is likely to continue as he has begun, so then, his joy in sharing will be constant, for it will have become second nature to him—a priceless asset.

But what about Celia? Poor Celia!

The consumption of liquor is not rapidly increasing, but alcoholism is. As a rule, alcoholism is the result of drinking done ten or twenty years ago.—Roger Burgess.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Things Are Happening at Mount Olivet

Our Mount Olivet Church, near McGaheysville in Rockingham County, Virginia, has several things to report.

After two of our high school girls, DeLois Sandridge and Tillie Strickler, attended the Valley Conference Youth Rally at Mayland on October 9, and the UCYM State Conference at Richmond on October 30 through November 1, we felt that they and others were ready to reorganize our own Youth Fellowship. The first official meeting was held on Tuesday, November 17, when DeLois Sandridge was elected president; Bucky Davis, vice-president; Joyce Ann Life, secretary; Betty McInturff, treasurer, and Tilly Strickler, reporter. Our advisors are Mrs. Edith Lam and Iva Frazier.

The young people packed fruit baskets and went carolling during the Christmas season. At present they are working on an exhibit of church life in France and Germany for our Valley Conference "World Friendship Tour" at Winchester on January 31. They meet every week—once a month on Sunday evening, the other weeks on Wednesday evening.

Our young people are also taking part in the Sunday school basketball league sponsored by the Montevideo High School. The girls play on Monday nights, and the boys on Thursday nights.

* * * * *

Calvary Church, Greensboro, Calls Assistant Pastor

A young and promising Elon ministerial student, Reuben S. Askew, Jr., of Norfolk, Virginia has been called to be the assistant pastor and youth director at Calvary Christian Church in Greensboro, North Carolina. He is serving under the direction and leadership of Rev. Thurman Bowers, pastor of the church.

In this field Reuben has an opportunity to preach as well as to witness for Christ in working with the young people. He has charge of the morning worship service every other Sunday.

Reuben, a member of the Bay View Christian Church of Norfolk, was licensed to preach the gospel at the Annual Conference of Eastern Virginia in October, 1953. He anticipates graduation from Elon College in 1955, and then plans to continue his graduate work in Duke Divinity School. He has worked with public recreation in young people's work, and is an outstanding leader of youth in his conference and the Southern Convention.

Askew is a very active leader in many campus activities and organizations. He is the staff photographer for the school paper. Previous to his entering Elon College to study for the ministry, he was a photographer for one of Norfolk's newspapers.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

How do you young folk feel when there is a visitor in your home, and mother brings out your baby pictures to show? It is an humbling experience, to say the least. If you'll be patient, I'll reminisce a bit at my own expense. Vivian Pell, choir director at one of the churches I serve, was my Sunday school teacher back in 1941 at the Asheboro Church. Rev. Lanson Granger was pastor then. In that year he married Frances Foster of Greensboro. Vivian was showing me the other night the write-up of the reception given them by the church. It said, in part, "Little Max Vestal served nuts!" Did you write that article, Granger?

* * *

Fifth Sunday is coming again this month. That means it's rally time in the Western North Carolina Conference. Pleasant Ridge will be the host church, and we are planning a big welcome for all who come.

* * *

A teacher was instructing her pupils.

"Now if you put your hand in one pants pocket and you find seventy-five cents, and you put your hand in the other pants pocket and you find twenty-five cents, Mickey, what would you have?"

"I'd have somebody else's pants on," replied Mickey.

Are Cigarette Smokers Scared?

For the first time in more than two decades cigarette sales have skidded appreciably, and the cigarette-making industry is worried. They fear that the health-centered campaign against cigarette smoking may be taking hold.

One of the evidences is to be seen in cigarette advertising. "The cigarette that takes the fear out of smoking," is the current Phillip Morris slogan. Viceroy is offering "double protection." Kent's costly advertising shows the black deposits of "tar and nicotine" reputed to come from "other" cigarettes. Consumers are counseled to choose Kents for the "greatest health protection in cigarette history."

The head of one company sadly concludes: "You can't spend millions year after year implying that your brand is healthy while all others will kill you, without its having some effect on the public."

Of course, the cigarette companies are making a brave attempt to laugh off the fears. But a New York distributor reports that he is selling twice as many "stop-smoking" pills this year as ever before. A little volume with the title, "How to Stop Smoking," has sold more than 79,000 copies, when the book trade would have called 10,000 the normal expectancy. Filtered cigarettes, supposed to be less harmful, have more than doubled sales over the last year, despite higher prices.

More important, perhaps, the American Medical Association has announced that none of its publications will carry cigarette advertising, and that means a $100,000-a-year loss to the Journal. Only products "useful to the physician" will be advertised.

What will finally be proved out on the connection between smoking and cancer remains to be seen, but Dr. Evarts A. Graham's announcement is only the latest of several. He has produced cancer experimentally in mice by using nothing but tars from tobacco smoke. He firmly believes that there is something in cigarette smoke which can produce cancer. "Our experiments have proved it beyond any doubt," he says, and his collaborator, Dr. Ernest L. Winder, predicts a marked increase in the incidence of lung cancer.

The new interest in cigarette-smoking and health has given the cigarette makers due cause for alarm.

—The Church Advocate.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Jesus and the Samaritans"

LESSON IV—JANUARY 24, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "We have heard for ourselves, and we know that this is indeed the Saviour of the world."—John 4:42.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 4:1-42.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 1:8-16.

The Romance of the Unexpected.

It did not look like an especially dramatic, or destiny-making setting. Here was a man, tired from the journey under the mid-day heat, resting on the wall of a well that had been dug centuries before. As he sat there, tired and weary, a woman approached to get a jar of water. She was not the kind of woman who might be expected to quicken the whole spiritual life of a community. Indeed the record would indicate that she had outdone some of the Hollywood stars—she had been married five times, and at the time, was living with a man who was not her husband. Apparently not even likely looking spiritual material to say the least.

But one can never tell what may happen when Jesus Christ is one of the characters in any setting or situation. The fact is, it was to this woman of loose morals and low standards, that Jesus made known the fact that he was the Messiah, the Christ, the Saviour of the world, and it was this woman, touched and transformed by Christ, who led almost a whole village or small city, to Christ himself! We Sunday school teachers and ministers ought to be more eager about, and more active in, bringing others to Christ. In his hands and under his touch, even the most unlikely person develops amazing possibilities.

A Master Workman.

We sing, "O Master-Workman of the race" and we do well, for so he is. He not only knew what was in man, but he knew how to deal with men. Take for example this story of a "Wayside well" where he deals with this stained woman of Sychar. Stepping across the man-made barriers of the taboo of man, to say nothing of a Rabbi, speaking to a woman at all, he spoke to this Samaritan woman. And he spoke to her in a courteous and understanding way. He won her interest and her good will by asking of her a favor. "Give me to drink," he said. Startled that a man, and above all things, that a Jew should speak to her, she frankly told him of her surprise. Going from there he appealed to her curiosity, and to her sense of moral need, until he brought her to the point where he could reveal to her the fact that he was the Messiah. She was so moved and overcome, that she left her waterpot—she forgot what she had come out to the well for—and hastened back into the city to tell the folks about the man who had told her all about herself. Could this be anybody but the Christ himself? So manifest was her sincerity, and so marked the change in her, that the inhabitants of the city went with her. And when they heard Jesus, they too were convinced that he was the Christ, and they believed on him. All unconsciously, this woman had become a missionary, a home missionary, an evangelist. She simply bore witness to what had taken place in her life, and because there was a reality and a sincerity about it, others believed.

From Hearsay to Experience.

Here is enacted, of course, the goal of all teaching and preaching in religion. On the word of another, these people themselves experienced the grace of God in Jesus Christ. They frankly told the woman, "Now we believe, not because of thy saying, for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world." Teachers and ministers and Christian workers ought to teach and witness in such a way, that their hearers will pass from mere hearsay to experience, or from second-hand to first-hand experience. It is not enough to know somebody else who believes in Christ, or to believe about Christ; we must believe on him personally, we must pass from hearsay to experience and reality.

Fields White Unto Harvest.

"Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to the harvest." Those words, spoken centuries ago, and concerning a specific situation, are disturbingly true today, and of every community. There are few churches or Sunday schools which are not in the very midst of fields white unto the harvest. All around us there are those who need to know Christ, to yield themselves to Christ, to accept him, to give themselves to his service. It is not a case of saying that there are "yet four months to the harvest." The harvest is ready now. There is a call, always a call, for reapers to gather into God's garner, the harvest of souls in our midst.

Some Lessons from the Lesson.

1. There are no foreigners in the Kingdom of God.
2. Courtesy and tact are needed for dealing with souls.
3. Those who would do personal work should begin where they are.
4. Even a commonplace and everyday experiences give us an opportunity to speak a word, or witness for Christ.
5. The difficulty in most folks' lives is not theological, but moral.
6. The romance of righteousness lie in the fact that one can never tell what will happen when Christ enters the situation.
7. God abhors our racial religious prejudice and bigotry.
8. Christianity must evangelize the world, or die itself.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL OF CHURCHES TO MEET.

(Continued from page 2)

Episcopal Church, when brief addresses will be made by the incoming and outgoing presidents. Dr. Kelsey Regen, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Durham is finishing his second term as president.

The Tuesday evening worship service and the Wednesday fellowship luncheon are open to the public. The other meetings are primarily for officers of the council and church leaders, but visitors are welcome at all meetings except that of the executive committee. Overnight accommodations will be available for those who desire them, but reservations must be made in advance for lodging and for the fellowship luncheon through the Council office, College Station, Durham, N. C.

In Memoriam

A Tribute to Mrs. R. T. Bradford

Mrs. R. T. Bradford, known to so many people simply as "Jennie Willis" passed away suddenly about one-forty-five o'clock on Thursday morning, December 31. She was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while playing hostess to a party given at her home, "Town Point" in honor of a young woman of the community who had made her debut during the Christmas Season. She was rushed to the hospital where everything that could be done for her was done, but she never rallied, and died early on Thursday morning. Her death came as a shock, not only to the church and the community, but to her legion of friends far and wide. And of course it was an unspeakable shock to the members of her family, and the larger family circle. She was so active in church and community and club circles, that she will be sorely missed. From the human standpoint her death seemed so tragic and untimely. But because we know that God is too wise to make a mistake, and too good to be unkind, we say "The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Sometimes we'll understand. Our God is able to make all things to work together for good to those who love him.

Funeral services were held in Berea Christian Church at Driver. Although folks knew that the attractive little church would not begin to accomodate those who would attend the funeral services, there was no other conceivable place more fitting for the services. She had been a member of that church for many years. She loved that church with an inspiring love, and she gave herself to the church in an enthusiastic and consecrated way. It was most fitting, therefore, that her body should be carried there for the last solemn rites in her honor. The floral designs were numerous and beautiful. The church was crowded. And there were as many people outside the church as inside it. The service was simple, brief, and dignified. Dr. Johnson and the writer officiated, and Mrs. J. R. Vick sang one of Mrs. Bradford's favorite hymns. Burial was in the family plot at Cedar Hill Cemetery in Suffolk, Virginia. Dr. L. E. Smith offered a simple, moving prayer at the grave.

Although it is not the writer's custom to speak at funeral services, he did think that this occasion did call for a few words of tribute. They are printed herewith so that both those who knew "Jennie Willis," and those who did not know her, may appreciate her all the more.

* * *

MRS. R. T. BRADFORD

Words are such vain and empty things
Like mists that fade away;
And so today my heart is full,
Of things I cannot say.

There is much that could be said today; there is little that needs to be said. Jennie Willis Bradford has already said them far more eloquently than I can say them, with her lips, her life, her love, her loyalty. But I do want to say a few simple, sincere words.

As a background for what I shall say, I want to put two sentences in contrast. The first is from Genesis: "And Methusaleh lived nine hundred and sixty nine years, and he died." The second is, "Jennie Willis Bradford lived fifty-six years, and she died." Quite a contrast there, isn't there? Measured in terms of Methusaleh's life, Jennie Willis did not live very long. But there is more to life than mere length. As the poet wrote:

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In fellings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs, when they beat for God, and man, and duty.
He most lives, who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.
And he whose heart beats quickest lives the longest.
Lives in one hour, more than in years do some,
Whose fat blood sleeps as it slips along their veins.
Life's but a means unto an end. That end—
Beginning, mean, and end to all things—God.
—Baily.

Think of the breadth of her life.—Home, family, friends, folks, flowers, books, community interests, music cultural things, education, missions, young people, and above all the church. All things good and true and beautiful found a place in her heart and in her life. Think, too, of the breadth of her friendships and her sympathies. This is one time that I wish this little church were as big as the Christian Temple, so that her friends could get into it for this service. But the Christian Temple would not begin to hold her friends. All classes and creeds and colors and cultures were numbered among her friends. Her democratic spirit and friendly heart were broad enough and big enough to include them all.

Think of the height of her aspiration, her ideals, her character.—She set for herself high aspirations, high ideals, high standards of character and conduct. She was not afraid of that which was high. She achieved a high measure of integrity of character. She tried to be true to her highest moments which she believed were her truest moments. There was height as well as breadth to her life.

Think of the depth of her life.—She had deep convictions by which she lived and to which she was loyal. There were depths to her love, her loyalty, her consecration. There were deep places in her life as well as high places. Her outward life was the overflow of a rich, full, inner life which had depths. And she gave herself unsparingly in service, at times in sacrificial service, to those deep things of the spirit.

Mrs. Bradford loved life. She lived a full, fruitful, rich, rewarding, abundant life. And now she has gone on to live an even more abundant life, and to live a life eternal. May a double portion of her spirit abide in the home and the hearts of her loved ones, and in this church which she loved and to which she gave herself in such a lavish and loving way.

H. S. HARCASTLE.

Virginia Valley Leader Passes

Roy A. Larrick of Winchester, Virginia, died on Wednesday morning, December 30, 1953 at the City Hospital, Martinsburg, West Virginia, where he had been a patient for about two weeks.

Funeral services were conducted on Friday afternoon by Rev. Roy D. Coulter, and burial was in the Mount Hebron Cemetery with graveside services conducted by his Masonic Lodge.

He was born in High View, West Virginia, on April 12, 1891, a son of Mrs. Retta Oakes Larrick and the late David Lee Larrick. He was married to the former Miss Margaret McCurdy.

Mr. Larrick was a member of the Winchester Congregational Christian Church, where he was a trustee for a number of years and was also a deacon. He served the church as clerk for 30 years. He was president

(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Our first report for 1954 will be made next week. This is the final one for the old year.

We lacked $13,025.62 of reaching our goal set for the general public and the Sunday schools and churches. From the farm, dairy, etc., we received enough to bring our final total to $56,126.61. That means that we lacked $8,873.39 of reaching our goal. I think we would have made it all right had we not had the drought and crop and vegetable gardens failure. As it is we are up against it. It is not your fault that it did not rain, and I think you have all been very generous. Let us hope that we have a good season this year, both for your sakes and for the work we are doing here at your orphanage.

I am most grateful for the many, many contributions through our churches, and church organizations and otherwise who have contributed liberally to the orphanage. From the depth of my heart I wish to thank you everyone. Best wishes to every reader of these lines for a good year, good health, and the blessings of God upon you.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR DECEMBER 31, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Hopedale young people, Games and fruit.
Mrs. Elsie F. Cobb, Asheville, N. C., Shoes.

Franklin, Va., Cong. Christian Sunday school, Gifts and clothing.

Waverly, Va., Cong. Christian Church,
Gifts and clothing.

Ladies Missionary Society, Pleasant Grove
Cong. Church, LaFayette, Alabama, Socks.
Mrs. J. H. Gwaltney and Mrs. Billy
Gwaltney, Franklin, Va., Pecans.

Windsor Missionary Aid Society, Clothing.

Mrs. Thurman Williams, Dendron, Va.,
Clothing.

Union Christian Church, Hunterdale,
Franklin, Va., Clothing, toys and toilet articles.

Mrs. R. L. Hendrickson, Lincoln, Kansas,
Coupons.

Apple's Chapel Church, Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $21,795.12

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Fayetteville$ 3.00
Henderson 50.00
Morrisville 7.09
Mt. Auburn 6.00
Mt. Auburn S. S. 11.25
Pleasant Union 350.00

Wake Chapel 47.85
Youngsville S. S. 20.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Antioch, Thanksgiving ..$ 31.67
Bethlehem (Disp.) 10.00
Burton's Grove, Thanks-
giving 10.00
Dendron S. S. 21.75
Eure 50.00
Liberty Spring S. S. 20.00
Liberty Spring, Thanks-
giving 123.55
Mt. Carmel S. S. 19.70
Newport News 422.95
Rosemont 60.00
Portsmouth, First 30.30
Richmond, First 225.50
South Norfolk 35.90
Spring Hill, Thanksgiving 8.25
Spring Hill 8.56
Union (Surry), Thanksgiving 83.00
Wakefield 34.85
Waverly, Thanksgiving .. 33.75
Windsor 10.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Burlington, Lakeview ..$ 24.38
Burlington, First 275.15
Burlington, First S. S. .. 825.30
Graham, Prov. Mem.,
Thanksgiving 25.00
Greensboro, Palm St. 119.00
Pleasant Ridge, Thanks-
giving 16.00
Reidsville S. S. 70.00
Shallow Ford 71.08
Winston-Salem 50.37

Western N. C. Conference:

Albemarle$ 25.00
Flint Hill (M) 3.48
Pleasant Hill 196.23

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethlehem S. S.$ 16.75
Dry Run S. S. 3.07
Leaksville 5.00
Newport S. S. 27.79
Winchester, Special 10.00
Winchester S. S. 8.34

Total $ 3,506.86
Grand total $25,301.98

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward 25,970.19
Circle No. 9, Woman's Fellowship, Suffolk Ch.$ 10.00
Mr. & Mrs. C. S. Clayton,
Charlotte, N. C. 100.00
Sykes Plumbing & Heating Co., Burlington, N.
C. 20.00
A Friend, Sanford, N. C. 5.00
A Friend, Norfolk, Va. .. 5.00
W. H. Morgan, Boone, N.
C. 5.00
Friends, Chapel Hill, N.
C. 15.00
Gibsonville Development
Co., Gibsonville, N. C. . 15.00
The Cone Foundation,
Greensboro, N. C. 100.00
Z. H. Lynch, Elon College,
N. C. 10.00
House Electric Co., Gibsonville, N. C. 30.00
Colgate-Palm Olive Co.
(for coupons) 57.70
John Chamberlin, Gibsonville, N. C. 1.00
Miss Hazel Good, Harrisonburg, Va. 5.00
A Friend, Winchester, Va. 10.00
Mrs. C. W. Tatum, Norfolk, Va. 5.00
Dr. T. E. Powell, Elon
College, N. C. 100.00
Mrs. Stanley Kline, Elkton, Va. 10.00
United Cong. Christian
Ch., Columbus, Ga. 5.53
Mr. & Mrs. J. P. Johnson,
Richmond, Va. 20.00
Nancy Jo and Jimmie
Daniel, Henderson, N.
C. 10.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. E. Branch and Dottie, Garner, N.
C. 100.00
New Hope Christian Ch.,
Roanoke, Ala. 2.38
Mr. & Mrs. E. T. Sanders,
Burlington, N. C., in memory of Roy Malone 10.00
Mr. & Mrs. C. E. Scott,
Burlington, N. C., in memory of Roy Malone . 5.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

IN MEMORIAM.

(Continued from page 13.)

of the Virginia Valley Central Conference for ten years, and the conference made great advancement under his leadership.

For many years he was bookkeeper for W. E. Cooper and Son, wholesale grocers. About eight years ago he became secretary-treasurer of the Valley Fruit and Candy Corporation.

Mr. Larriek was very active in all branches of the Masonic Lodge. He was a member and Past Master of Winchester Hiram Lodge No. 21; Past High Priest of John Dove Royal Arch Chapter No. 21, and Past Commander of Winchester Commandery No. 12. At the time of his death he was serving as Grand Captain General of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Surviving, besides his wife and mother, are one brother, Albert Larriek of Winchester; and two sisters, Mds. Grace Dinkle of Winchester, and Mrs. Nettie Cline of Petersburg, West Virginia.

* * *

A RESOLUTION

Again the Messenger of Death has invaded our ranks and removed from our fellowship a beloved friend and brother. Therefore be it resolved:

That whereas Roy A. Larriek, for more than thirty-eight years a member of this church, answered the final roll call on December 30, 1952.

And whereas brother Larriek was for many years a leader, holding positions of honor and distinction in the church; having served as deacon, trustee and church clerk, which positions he held until the time of his home going.

And whereas he made himself available to that higher realm of service, having served faithfully for ten years as president of the Virginia Valley Central Conference and for many years on important committees; and for the past several years a member of the executive committee of the conference, being a member of that committee at the time of his death. The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, in recognition of his ability and leadership elected him a member of the Mission Board for a term of four years, A member of the Executive Board for a term of four years and more recently had elected him a trustee of Elon College.

And whereas brother Larriek was prominent in Masonic circles, having served Hiram Lodge No. 21 as its Worshipful Master, High Priest of John Dove Chapter, R. A. M. and Past Commander of Winchester Commandery Knights Templar. At the time of his death he was Grand Captain General of the Grand Commandery of Virginia, a position which indicates the love and esteem in which he was held by his companions.

That we humbly bow to the will of the Supreme Architect of the Universe who is too wise to make an error and too good to be unkind. Our brother's Christian life has born fruit in the religious life of Winchester, in his church and in the lives of those who knew his faith and Christian character. Truly a friend of the Master has been welcomed home.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his widow, his mother, a copy to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the Winchester Evening Star and a copy spread on the minutes of this Quarterly Conference.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN,

Pastor,

CLAYTON A. PUGH,

Chairman Official Board,

MISS WINFRED WHITLOCK,

Church Clerk.

Passed by Quarterly Conference,
Congregational Christian Church,
Winchester, Va., Jan. 6, 1954.

WALKER.

A memorial service for Captian Ernie A. Walker was held in the Durham Congregational Christian Church on July 6, 1953. Captain Walker grew up in the church, was a dependable and enthusiastic worker, and used his talents to express his love of God.

The memories of him as a boy and as a young man are pleasant. We remember his consecrated life, his kindness, his affection for his family and church, and his beautiful voice.

May the influence of his radiant Christian life always be a guiding light in the lives of those who knew him.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. ROBERT S. SMITH,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS.

WILSON.

Mr. Silas Wilson was born in Halifax County, Virginia, on October 21, 1881, and passed away in a local hospital near his home at Virgilina, Va. a few days short of his 72nd birthday.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Nelson Wilson, eight daughters, four sons, one sister, two brothers, a half-brother, 24 grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services for Mr. Wilson were conducted on October 3, 1953, by his pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andes, at Union Congregational Christian Church, Virgilina, Va. Mr.

Wilson was a life-long member of Union. Burial followed in the Town Cemetery.

May the Father God bless and sustain this family in this hour of need.

OAKLEY.

Mrs. Pearl (T. M.) Oakley, a life-long, faithful member of the Durham Congregational Christian Church, died on June 24, 1953.

In appreciation of her fine Christian life we present these resolutions:

That her devotion and loyalty to her family and friends be reflected in their lives.

That her patient, godly spirit inspire many to strive for the beauty of Christian living, which her life exemplified.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. ROBERT S. SMITH,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS.

LEA.

Mr. Paul D. Lee, twin brother of the late Silas Lea, died on August 4, 1953 at the age of 91. For many years he was a devoted member of the Durham Congregational Christian Church.

In memory of Mr. Lea, we wish to express appreciation for his long Christian life; for his strength of character; for his patience; for his friendly disposition; for his good influence.

Mr. Lea was a good man. Let us strive to emulate his fine qualities.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. ROBERT S. SMITH,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS.

HANCOCK.

We, the members of Johnson's Grove Christian Church, were saddened November 2, 1953 by the passing of one of our beloved members, Bennie F. Hancock, Sr.

We are grateful for his Christian character and cherish the memory of his faithfulness which has left its influence upon us.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we realize God doeth all things well and that our loss is his eternal gain.

2. That the Johnson's Grove Church of which he was a member has lost one for whom they mourn.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his devoted family who ministered so faithfully during his last years and commend them to our Heavenly Father for comfort and peace.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication and a copy be placed on our church record.

MARCIA H. VICK,
Mrs. H. P. BEALE,
Committee.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. . 10.00

Mr. & Mrs. Allen D.

Moore, Burlington, N.

C., in memory of Roy

Malone 5.00

Special Gifts 30.60

702.21

Grand total $26,672.40

Total for the week $ 4,209.07

Total for the year $51,974.38

CHRIST OUR EXAMPLE

The earthly life of the Lord Jesus furnishes to the human race a perfect example by which to order our lives. Saint Peter urges this feature in these words: "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously" (I Peter 2: 21-23).

In Christ we have an example of holy living. Jesus did no evil for the thrill of the adventure, though Satan pressed him sorely with temptation on this very line. He did not compromise with evil to save himself or his disciples from pain and opposition. He did what was right at any cost. But if any object that he was God as well as man, and had greater power to serve, and no sin within to hinder, we still find the apostle Peter's exhortation binding us to obedience: "Ye should follow his steps." We can do as well as we can, and with this God will be pleased.

In Christ we have an example of patience, and this is a universal need. "When he was reviled, he reviled not again, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." His life of patience is worthy of constant study and imitation. The record is written down for this purpose. He shows us how to bear up as Christians under such extreme treatment as to be mocked, struck on the face by the hands of angry men, spit upon, betrayed by a friend and denied by others, and to finally suffer unto death.

We have an example of diligence. He went about doing good. He redeemed the time by diligent labor. He said: "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work" (John 9: 4). He multiplied the fruit of his labor by calling others to his help, and sent them out to herald his coming and prepare the way before him. Christ lived his life in the light of eternity, nor should we think that was easily done, and excuse ourselves from our best diligence and thrift in the use of our time. He was "in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Hebrews 4: 15).

On the value of time, Edward Everett wrote: "Note the sublime precision that leads the earth over a circuit of five hundred millions of miles, back to the solstice at the appointed moment without the loss of one second—no, not the millionth part of a second—for ages and ages through which it traveled that imperiled road." And it is inspiring to know that the great Creator of this timing device in his earthly life showed us how valuable it is to put the daily round of toil into the light of Christian consecration, and live with the great eternity always in view.

Jesus showed us how to love his people with brotherly affection and the unsaved with compassion. We . . . find a difference in the love of compassion for the unsaved and the affection we feel for the good and Christ-like among our fellowmen. Saint John refers to this in his gracious words: "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end" (John 13: 1). This is heaven's secret revealed. God so loved that he gave his Son, and Christ so loved that he was "the Lamb (of God) slain from the foundation of the world" (Revelation 13: 8).

—I. F. McLeister.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.

Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, JANUARY 21, 1954

NUMBER 3

In Memoriam

DR. NATHANIEL GROSS NEWMAN

News Flashes

Youth Week is "just around the corner." What plans has your group made for its observance?

We learn that Dr. W. D. Timmons has accepted the ministry of our church at Southern Pines, North Carolina. We welcome, you, Dr. Timmons to the Southern Convention.

There has come to our attention a folder issued by The Association for a Better Alamance County, titled "Consider the Truth . . ." If you are a resident of Alamance County, and have not seen a copy, we recommend that you get a copy and read it before February 6.

According to announcement of recent date, Talladega College received a total of $285,819.57 from the United Negro College Fund during 1953. Of the amount received, $35,337.57 was allocated for current budgetary expenses. The balance, $251,482, represents a grant for the renovation of present campus buildings and the erection of new ones.

Nine Lutheran church bodies and two church-related agencies in North America sent 259 missionaries to mission fields in seventeen countries during 1953. Not since 1946, when 308 missionaries were assigned to service, has the total been larger. Africa received the largest number, 86, and India stood second in the total number of missionaries assigned last year with 47, Japan was third with 26, and New Guinea fourth with 22.

Dr. N. G. Newman, veteran minister and gracious friend, passed away early on Sunday morning of this week at the home of his daughter in Raleigh. He is survived by one son, Dr. N. G. Newman, Jr., of Suffolk, and two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Baker of Newport News and Mrs. Carlyle Campbell of Raleigh; two sisters, Mrs. L. W. Stagg of Norfolk and Mrs. W. C. Wicker of Elon College; three grandchildren, Carlyle Campbell, Jr., of Greensboro, Mrs. Raney Stanford of New York City and Miss Nancy Ann Newman of Suffolk. To each and everyone of these THE SUN expresses its deepest sympathy, and to Mrs. House we extend our thanks for the editorial in this issue.

Institute of Religion Sponsored By Raleigh Church

The fifteenth annual Institute of Religion, a community institution sponsored by the United Church of Raleigh, North Carolina, started the past Monday, January 18, and will continue through each Monday evening to February 22. Six distinguished speakers will discuss "The Responsibilities of Freedom." The subjects and speakers are: This week, Ernest K. Lindley, Washington Editor, Newsweek, "A Responsible Foreign Policy." January 25, Benjamin E. Mays, president of Moorehouse College, "Responsibilities of Freedom in Human Relations." February 1, Brooks Hayes, U. S. Representative from Arkansas, "Foundations for World Peace." February 8, Hodding Carter, editor of The Delta Democrat-Times, "The Irresponsibly Free." February 15, Margaret Frakes, associate editor, The Christian Century, "Churchwomen's Freedom Brings Responsibility." February 22, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, The Temple, Cleveland, "The Spiritual Basis of Human Freedom." In addition to the addresses at 8 p. m., each Monday, there will be a fellowship dinner in the church basement at 6:00 o'clock, followed by three one-hour courses at 7 o'clock. These courses are under the broad general headings: "Alcoholism, a Public Concern," "Today's Problems, Can Religion Help?" and "World Understanding, a Two-Way Responsibility." The general public is welcome.

Western Carolina Conference Holds Leadership Training School

The Western North Carolina Conference Leadership Training School for officers and teachers came to a close on Saturday evening, January 9, marking one of the most successful schools ever held in this conference.

The classes were held at the Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church, near Ramseur, and there was an average of about 70 officers and teachers attending each evening.

A most interesting teachers' course was taught by Miss Ione Catton of Chicago, Ill., who is a specialist in missionary education. The class for Sunday school superintendents, assistant superintendents and prospective superintendents was taught by the Rev. Fred Register, pastor of the Wake Chapel Congregational Chris-

(Continued on page 7.)

Christian Educators to Meet in Cincinnati in February

What Christian education means to American Protestant churches and homes will receive full treatment when more than 1600 lay and church leaders meet in Cincinnati, Ohio, on February 6-13. The occasion will be the annual meeting of the Division of Christian Education of the National Council of Churches in the U. S. A. Represented will be 39 cooperating denominations, meeting for professional counsel, inspiration and common planning.

Also present will be representatives of the entire organized cooperative Christian education movement in 34 states and Canada, in which there are organized state and city councils of churches and religious education.

Associated together in this professional and lay meeting, unique in American Protestantism, will be the church educational leaders of all age groups. Current and future religious education needs of the family, the local church, colleges and universities, as well as the armed forces will be considered.

In these meetings, started more than thirty years ago, basic policies will be decided, basic programs reviewed and new programs authorized. The sessions of the executive board of the Division of Christian Education and the administrative committee of its commissions on General Christian Education and Christian Higher Education, provide an interim meeting between the Division's general assembly at Denver in December, 1952, and Boston in December, 1954. More than fifty talks and addresses are scheduled during the week-long departmental, committee and public meetings which will have as a theme, "Christ Our Unity; Teaching Our Mission."

"Pressures and tensions in today's world," says Dr. Gerald E. Knoff, executive secretary of the Division, "make all the more necessary the command of our Lord to 'go and teach'. They will gather in a central Christian unity and at the same time strive to perfect their skills and understanding of the teaching task, to help them in their ministry."

Program committees will meet, beginning February 6, and the many simultaneous section meetings February 9. Meetings of executive committees, administrative committees and executive boards of the Division and

(Continued on page 10.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

North Carolina & Virginia Laymen Plan Conference Center Support

The N. C. and Va. Laymen's Fellowship gathered by pastors and representatives on January 8 at Paul's Restaurant, Burlington, N. C., and made definite plans to execute a previous vote that this organization take the proposed Conference Center development at Moonelon for its project in 1954. The executive committee, T. A. Vincent, chairman, called upon the churches to meet with the committee, and seventeen churches sent representatives. The Moonelon Committee of the Convention was represented by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, and Dr. Henry E. Robinson of Burlington. Dr. Robinson reviewed the proposed plans and issued mimeographed sketches of the property layout and of the proposed central building. The latter calls for cinderblock and concrete construction with overall dimensions of 40 by 85 feet. This building will be added to existing construction with the plan of following soon with cabin groups. Pledge cards to be used by Layman's groups are now available with the hope that sufficient funds will be in hand by spring to imitate construction.

The central building has been so planned that much of the labor and some of the material can be contributed. Work days are being planned when the sight can be leveled and footings dug. Several of our laymen have had recent building experience on similar type construction and are confident that hundreds of dollars can be saved through donation of work and lumber. Lakeview, Union Ridge, and Bethlehem are some of the churches whose laymen have so contributed.

It was further suggested that if any of our women's groups desired to assist that their gifts be reserved for furnishing and equipment.

Any church or organizations desiring the mimeographed sheets and a supply of the pledge cards may secure them from Dr. Henry E. Robinson, First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C.

W. T. MAHAN,
Secretary.

Western North Carolina Laymen Will Meet

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Western North Carolina Conference will have its first meeting for the year on Saturday, January 30, with the ladies of the Bailey's Grove Church serving supper in the Asheboro Church at 6:30 p. m. The cost will be $1.25 per plate.

We sincerely hope that a group from all our churches can attend. Let this be one way in which the men of the church start the New Year. By the fact of being present at these Laymen's Rallies we are saying that we are interested in the work of God's Church, and that we want to help our churches in this area and around the world accomplish the work that Christ commissioned all of his people to do.

Dr. W. W. Sloan of Elon College, who has traveled quite a bit around our world, will be with us in Asheboro to share with us some of his experiences and to show pictures of some of the people and places he has seen in his travels.

We will be looking for men from each of our churches in the conference, whether or not there is an organized Laymen's Fellowship in your local church.

HUBERT L. BEANE,
Chairman.

We have too many men of science, too few men of God.—Gen. Bradley.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle

Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein,
Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens,
Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton,
Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Should the Church Speak Out on the Liquor Question

Proponents for the sale of legal liquor are asking us to ignore the moral aspects of the question. They are asking that the issue not be brought into the churches. They are saying that since this is a political and economic issue the institutions of religion had better steer clear.

The other day one of our citizens drank too much. He got in his car and lost control while driving down the highway. His car crashed into an oncoming vehicle and killed a father, mother and one child. A second child escaped injury. That child is a student in one of our high schools.

Let those who call this a political question sit down with this young lady and say: "We are of course sorry for your irreparable loss and heart-rending grief, but your family was killed by politics. Furthermore, you have nothing to worry about financially. Profit from the sale of liquor will help to complete your education and take care of you until you are self-supporting."

That young lady in her sorrow will look at her wet friends and say with a calmness that comes from suffering: "Politics had nothing to do with my loss, liquor is responsible. If my education depends upon profits from its sale, I want to leave school. I much prefer to support myself than to be supported by the profits from the sale of the product that has not only robbed me of my real support—my parents—but that has also put a deep wound in my heart which will never cease to ache."

Where that pint of liquor came from does not matter. What does matter is that I as a Christian, a citizen of the community, and a pastor, can go to that young lady today with the quiet ministries of friendship, love and understanding, and share those gifts which God has prepared for those who have been deeply hurt. But had I voted to establish the liquor store which sold the bottle that caused this tragedy, and as a citizen was part owner, sharing in its profits, my ministry to this young lady would be shallow indeed.

A vote for liquor stores is a vote for increased liquor consumption. Every person who keeps his eyes open and believes what he sees, knows that liquor, regardless of where it is purchased, has been the cause of more heartaches, tears, poverty and premature deaths than all of the wars since the dawn of civilization. H. E. ROBINSON.

Nathaniel Gross Newman

Dr. Nathaniel Gross Newman, one of our best loved ministers and an outstanding educator, died in Raleigh, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Carlyle Campbell on Sunday, January 17, at 4:00 a. m. He was born in Nansemond County, Virginia, February 13, 1868, the son of John Bridger and Hannah Urquart Newman. He was one of a distinguished family: Dr. John U. Newman, who taught at Elon College for 50 years, Dr. Charles E. Newman who long served as pastor, and his sisters who have given much to the Southern Convention.

He was educated at the Suffolk Collegiate Institute, Graham Normal College and Elon College, graduating magna cum laude. Later he continued his studies at the University of North Carolina, Chicago and Columbia Universities.

He was married to Kate E. Clendenin on October 26, 1891. Mrs. Newman died in 1940.

He was ordained on November 15, 1892, and served the following churches in Eastern Virginia: Berea, Holy Neck and Newport News. Later he became college pastor at Defiance, Ohio, and then at our own Elon College. He taught New Testament Greek while at Defiance.

In 1913 he organized the first Woman's Board of the Eastern Virginia Conference. He served in many capacities in Conference and Convention, including several terms as chairman of the Board of Publications. A historian of note, he brought wit and sparkle to his historical sketches and writings.

After his retirement, Dr. Newman returned to his country home, "Beech Grove," in Nansemond County and devoted himself to the study of genealogy. In 1952 he proved himself a veteran of the road when he attended the Claremont General Council, being one of those traveling in a chartered bus. Last summer he sailed to Europe in the Queen Elizabeth and attended the International Council in Scotland. This return to the home of his ancestors was in a real sense a spiritual pilgrimage. Following the Council, he made a tour of Europe, climaxed by a visit to Rome, Italy.

Few men have been so blessed as to age gracefully and to possess so fully their faculties as was Dr. N. G. Newman.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon by Dr. H. S. Hardcastle at the Oakland Christian Church. He was laid to rest in the church cemetery. Truly a Prince of Israel has fallen.

JUNE JOY HOUSE.

"Oh Come, Let Us Worship"

A Sermon

By Rev. W. MILLARD STEVENS

Minister of The Congregational Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.

SCRIPTURE: ISAIAH 6.

Every man has the irresistible urge within him to worship and worship he will, no matter how hard he may try not to. We all adore that which has greater value for us, therefore, how and what we worship is determined by our sense of values. Man's greatest question is not whether he will worship but what he will worship. One of the greatest problems of the Christian Church today as it has been through the ages is to direct man's worship toward God. This is of primary importance because a man has a tendency to become like that which he worships; that which he adores is reproduced in his life.

For example, if a man worships material things he will become grasping, cold and hard like material substances in his whole life and personality because these things become the primary value in his life. All else, his relation with people, his daily work, his whole energy is pointed toward grasping that which is for him most valuable—things. This is the great destructive force of all materialistic philosophy, when they are the basis of man's existence they destroy his soul and he becomes no more than a material thing.

When a man worships "self" and his whole life revolves about himself he becomes totally self-centered and anything that does not point inward toward himself is for him an enemy and his life becomes nothing more than frustration. It is through such worship of "self" that man is put alone on the dark lonely road of his existence to face the enemies of meaningful life and happiness and at last he falls before them in utter defeat. He has worshiped to no avail because he has worshiped himself.

When we worship God we worship that which is of highest worth and that which can make us fit for life and capable of significant living. The only way that we can achieve the God like qualities of life within ourselves is through the worship of God. You cannot worship God without becoming like him. This is why I feel that the opportunity of Christian Worship is the greatest thing that the Christian Church has to offer the Christian community and it is something which you cannot neglect, if you would be a Christian.

We may learn all the facts about Christ, memorize the whole Bible and accept all the creeds, yet if we do not share in the worship of God all these things become meaningless. It is through regular and devoted worship that we find the enduring qualities of God and of life—Faith, Hope and Love. Without these our lives be-

"Oh Come, Let Us Worship"

Oh come, let us sing unto Jehovah;
Let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving;

Let us make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

For Jehovah is a great God,
And a King above all gods.
In his hands are the deep places of the earth,
The heights of the mountains are his also.
The sea is his, and he made it;
And his hands formed the dry land.

Oh come, let us worship and bow down;
Let us kneel before Jehovah our maker.

come as meaningless as a drop of water on a burning inferno.

God is the only thing in the whole universe worthy of our worship because the simple meaning of worship is "worth-ship" and when we worship, we are declaring worth. "Worthy is the lamb that was slain," sang the angels who numbered "ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands," and every creature answered setting forth the divine worthiness, "Blessings, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the lamb forever and ever." The account of this part of St. John's vision, therefore, rightly ends, "The four and twenty elders fell down and worshiped him that liveth for ever and ever."

True Christian worship is a vital experience which touches the depths of man's intellect and emotions. It reaches down into the very depths of man's soul and plants there a meaningful image of God. It is not a form, an exercise, or a program but it is an experience. It is not a sermon or a ritual or a litany but an experience of the presence and greatness of God and response to his call to godliness. The form and order of church worship is essential to the experience but the form and order is not the worship. These are but the frame work upon which we seek to build the experience of worship, but this frame work is essential just as the frame work on which you build your house is essential to the beauty and strength of that house. Just so the form of Christian worship is essential to the vitality of your experience of that worship. Moreover, a total frame work is essential to complete a house and a total frame work of form and order is essential to the experience of worship.

A good order of worship must provide the opportunity for a growing experience within the individual worshiper, and experience which begins with a real sense of the presence and greatness of God; then a sense of our own sinfulness and dependence upon God and a faith in God's willingness and ability to forgive our sins and take us unto himself. When we have experienced this, then we have the urge within us to follow his will for our lives, we want to know what he would have us do and how we can do it. After we have experienced his guiding instruction we commit ourselves to this task. Then after we have said, "Here am I, send me," we receive his blessings and go, knowing that God goes with us.

The first experience is perhaps hardest of all to achieve but most important because if we miss the sense of God's presence and greatness, all the rest is of no avail. Every part of the experience of worship is essential to the worth of the whole.

The experience which came to Isaiah in the Temple is the experience which should be ours in every time of worship. The record of that experience in Isaiah 6, is the truest picture of meaningful worship ever recorded in all literature. Look at it for just a moment.

Isaiah entered the Temple and he saw the presence and greatness of God as he heard a voice cry, "Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord of Hosts: The whole earth is full of his glory." Conscious of the presence and greatness of God he was then deeply aware of his own sins and cried, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am

(Continued on page 6.)

Our Churches Report . . .

News from Liberty Vance Indicates Progress

From the reports given Sunday night, January 10, 1954, at the first quarterly conference of the Liberty Vance Church, the church and all of its organizations are making progress.

The pastor, Rev. W. A. Grissom, who is now serving full time, is bringing messages filled with inspiration and thoughts for Christian living. In preparation for the Christmas season and the New Year, he used such topics as "We Have Seen His Star," "If Every Day Were Christmas," and "He Went Home a Different Way." Each of these messages was filled with new thought and ideas presenting each listener an opportunity to inventory the past and make adjustments for the future.

The Sunday school superintendent, Mr. F. B. Fuller, Jr., reported an enrollment of 305 and an average attendance of 221. With much sickness and colds in the community and 12 or 15 of our young people away in college (six of them at Elon) and other places, we feel that this is a good report.

The Deacons' Report showed that three new deacons had been installed since they last reported. They are B. M. Newman, E. A. Joyner and S. F. Journigan. New plans have been made which they hope will help the church.

The Women's Fellowship gave a wonderful report, showing about 40 regular attendants at all meetings, new projects being sponsored, and all necessary funds being raised. Circle No. 1, the oldest group, ages 55 and up, served a delicious supper to about 75 young people at the joint meeting of the Liberty Vance and Henderson groups of the Pilgrim Fellowship, Sunday night, January 10.

The counsellors of the Youth group, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Falkner, gave a wonderful report on the work of our young people. Special mention was made of their Christmas projects. They assisted the pastor and Sunday school superintendent in their part in the Christmas pageant on wheels, which was presented in Henderson early in December. They visited the sick and shut in, singing carols. They gave a Christmas party, inviting all the young people who were home from college or other places. For some time, this group of youth has sponsored a special Sunday night service, with a well-planned and presented program. A Bible picture entitled "The Open Bible" has been presented each Sunday night immediately after the program. These pictures leave with us something we just can't visualize by reading the Bible. These meetings have been well attended by both old and young and much enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Fuller, Jr., counsellors of the Junior group, gave a good report, in which they urged the parents of the smaller children to bring or arrange to get the children to this service. Their challenge was, "You bring them, and we will keep them."

Mr. L. M. Grissom, the church treasurer, gave a wonderful report, with all bills paid and more than $1,000.00 in the treasury. Mr. F. B. Fuller, Sr., treasurer of the cemetery fund, reported all bills paid and approximately $400.00 on hand. This fund is used for paying a caretaker and upkeep of the church, churchyard and cemetery.

There are a number of activities which have not been reported, but we feel that we are going forward. Much credit is due the faithful and hard-working leaders of our church and its organizations for the wonderful service they have rendered. May we, as we enter the New Year, not look on our past as a ball and chain to hold us back, but as a map by which we can see the route we have travelled and the mistakes we have made, and how and where we can make improvements.

MRS. FLETCHER FULLER,
Church Reporter.

A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content,
And health for the toils of tomorrow;
But a Sabbath profaned, what e'er may be gained,
Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.
—Burns.

"OH, COME LET US WORSHIP."

(Continued from page 5)

a man of unclean lips and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." He had no more than confessed his sins before he experienced deliverance through cleansing forgiveness. It was then that Isaiah could pause and listen to God. He heard God speaking, saying, "Who will come for us and whom shall we send?" When Isaiah heard that call he could but answer, "Here am I, send me," and Isaiah went forth knowing that God went with him as he sought to fulfill God's will in his life.

It is this same experience that we seek to achieve every Sunday morning in the corporate worship of the church. It is this experience that each of us needs every week in order to make our lives rich and meaningful. It is not enough to seek it once a year or even once a month, we need it every Sunday. You should go from your church every Sunday knowing that you have been in God's presence, that he has forgiven your sins, that he has a mission for your life and you should go fully committed to do that mission with a full faith that he will go with you and will keep you "In every good work to do his will."

"Behold the Lord is in this place, this is none other than the house of God and the gate of Heaven." And I saw the Lord and cried, "Woe is me for I am undone, I am a man of unclean lips and I dwell in a midst of people of unclean lips," and the Lord said, "Go and sin no more." And then he said "Go and be my disciple and lo, I am with you always, even until the end of time."

Our church-related colleges are in a time of crisis. They are so absorbed by their desperate struggle for survival that they are not always able to make a crystal clear demonstration of why they must survive. They are in competition with large, tax-supported universities which offer free or low tuition, universities which are giant industries engaged in assembly line mass production of educated people, sometimes superficially educated people. The best defense of these colleges is to be frankly Christian, but they need the searching mind and the strong arm and the open hand of the church, too.

—Harry T. Stock.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Our Church Related Colleges of the Congregational Christian Church

In 1945, a group of representatives from colleges of Congregational Christian origin met at Eden Seminary, Webster Grove, St. Louis, Missouri, for a three day conference. We discovered that there seemed to be no organization of these institutions. Every institution was attempting to paddle its own canoe the best it could. Our colleges seemed to have no official connection with the church other than the fact that they were listed in the Yearbook as having Congregational Christian Church origin. The colleges seemed to have no feeling of responsibility to the church.

In this extended conference, we sought to discover our relation to the church and the church's relation to our colleges. At the close of the conference, we formed the Congregational Christian College Council for the purpose of cooperation for mutual benefit and of relating our colleges more definitely to the church.

It seemed to the presidents in attendance that the colleges that were represented did have certain definite responsibilities to the church and that the church of which we are a part had a vital stake in our institutions. Education is vital, essential, to our growth and the development of our resources, material and human. Religion, the Christian religion, is essential to the proper development of the total individual personality. One without the other is incomplete and incapable of developing the individual to the highest degree of moral conception and of efficiency.

Eight years ago, there were but eight colleges in the organization. Today there are nineteen and very good colleges they are. Eight years ago, the officials of our united church were occupied with other things. Representing the church, they had never given much serious consideration to the survival of our colleges or the contribution that the colleges might make to the church. Year by year, General Council after General Council, these colleges have been placing their claims and offering their facilities for services to the church. Gradually the officials of the church gave heed to the appeals of the colleges and began to express an interest in their survival.

Monday, January 11, officials of the General Council and Home Boards and official representatives of the Congregational Christian College Council met at the Netherland Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati, Ohio, for a two day conference. These representatives sat down together in earnest to discover, if possible, our mutual relations, our mutual responsibilities, and our mutual benefit, and to discover how our contributions to each other—the colleges to the church and the church to the colleges—might be clarified and multiplied. That was a

Fifth Sunday

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS ARE PRIVILEGED TO MAKE
AN OFFERING FOR OUR COLLEGE

* * *

Elon College

* * *

Let every Sunday school in the Southern Convention take advantage
of this opportunity!

very wholesome and very encouraging conference. Tentative plans were formed looking toward greatly increased financial support for our colleges, with the hope that from the campuses of our institutions might come more efficient and effective leaders for our churches in the pastorate and in official councils. The officials of the General Council gave assurance that they would do what they could to influence the church as a whole to give more generous support to our colleges. All felt that in the exchange of ideas and opinions during this extended conference, forward steps had been taken that would result in mutual benefit to our colleges and our church within a reasonably limited time.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Our final report concerning the total amount of conference apportionment for 1953 has been necessarily delayed. Since the college is endeavoring to operate on a calendar basis and since $80.89 received after the first of the year was paid by the churches in 1953 without designation, these contributions are counted on 1953 apportionment.

Previously Reported	$13,543.87
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Piney Plain	$ 4.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Greensboro, First	$ 62.57
Western N. C. Conference:
Big Oak	$ 2.00
Pleasant Grove	10.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 2.32
	<hr/>
	80.89

Total to date $13,624.76

At a belated hour we are submitting our first report for 1954. This report is not a large one, but it is encouraging. Of course, $125.00 a week would by no means meet the total apportionment, but we are aware that as the weeks and months pass, these contributions will increase and by the end of 1954, we shall come near, if not completely, reaching the amount apportioned. The college wishes to express its appreciation to our churches, pastors and friends who have given generously to the college during the past year and to express the hope that we shall have their cooperation and contributions as we begin the New Year.

The finances of the college are in fair condition—thanks to all who have made contributions.

Eastern Va. Conference:
Holland	$ 56.00
Suffolk S. S.	68.83
	<hr/>
	124.83
Total to date	$ 124.83

WESTERN CONFERENCE HAS TRAINING SCHOOL.

(Continued from page 2.)

tian Church at Fuquay-Varina. Each of these classes was greatly enjoyed and we are sure that our teachers and superintendents have been greatly benefitted by attending.

According to Mr. Theodore Cox, the president of the Sunday School Convention, there were more churches represented at this school than had been in years passed. He is highly pleased with the interest shown in the school and speaks with his people in saying the work of Miss Catton and Rev. Mr. Register is greatly appreciated by the Sunday schools of this conference.

MRS. WINFRED BRAY,
Secretary.

Missions at Home and Abroad

A Call for Missionary Recruits for 1954

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the oldest foreign missionary society in the U. S. A., has just issued its 1954 call for recruits for Christian service overseas. It seeks at least forty teachers, doctors, nurses, social workers, and ministers to work in Africa, India, Ceylon, Mexico, Japan, the Philippines, the Near East, and Micronesia, South Seas.

It is not an easy job that is being offered qualified Christian young people, the American Board points out, but it is a rewarding one to those "who have a growing Christian concern and commitment, a willingness to pioneer in the extension of the Christian faith and a desire to serve in the outreach of the church." The call is for men and women who will work with the indigenous churches of other lands as colleagues in the training of strong Christian leadership.

"The qualifications for Christian missionary service positions are high," says Rev. Walter C. Tong of Boston, Massachusetts, Candidate Secretary of the American Board. "The Board requires active church participation and membership. Increasingly, the overseas educational requirements demand accredited college and professional training and experience. Good physical and psychological health is necessary. Practical experience is desirable, but rarely is it feasible to accept candidates for permanent appointment over 35 years of age."

On the American Board list of openings for 1954 are:

Ordained Christian ministers for Africa, India, Japan, Mexico and Micronesia for service in both rural areas and in cities where grave social problems face the local Christians.

Teachers and social workers, including a school superintendent, a handicraft teacher, and junior and senior college faculty members for India, Africa, Ceylon, the Philippines, Japan, the Near East, and Micronesia.

Doctors for Africa, Ceylon, India, and the Near East.

Nurses, one trained in public health programs, for Africa and India.

Secretaries, with business training and administrative ability, for Africa and Turkey.

Families, two for educational and community work in Turkey, and one for business administration and teaching in Greece.

"The true missionary is a teacher without dogmatism, sympathetic without credulity, simple, but never shallow, and patient, but never satisfied with small results. He uses the influence of his unique position with a restraint born of consciousness as well as temptations. Such missionaries 'preach' in a language that all nations understand," says the American Board.

Inquiries regarding these openings may be addressed to:

Rev. Walter C. Tong, Candidate Secretary, American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Mission Leaders Convene

Almost three hundred delegates to the fourth Annual Assembly of the Foreign Missions Division of the National Council of Churches met at Buck Hill Falls, Penna., in December.

The keynote speaker of the opening session was the Rev. Raymond A. Dudley, American Board Secretary for India and vice-president of the missions division, who called on the missionary movement to adopt "a compelling sense of direction."

Answering the question, "What is the matter with foreign missions?" Dr. Dudley suggested: (1) Vested interests pertaining to denominations, to property and to persons; (2) Imperfect cooperation between some home-base planning and action in the field; (3) Trying to emphasize too many things; (4) Lack of clear compelling conviction; and (5) Lack of money—"a poor fifth."

—Advance.

"God is Love," Christ said. God is love—period—with absolutely no limitations or exceptions.

—Clarence Poe.

Europe's Protestants Warned Against Worship of Mary

There can be no doubt that the deification of Mary widens the breach between Roman Catholicism and Evangelical Christianity, it was asserted recently in Berlin, Germany, in a Protestant comment on the Papal proclamation of 1954 as a Marian Year.

Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchenzeitung, official organ of the United Evangelical Lutheran Church in Germany, said Evangelical Christians "have a great deal of understanding for the characteristics of other churches, but when they teach what is so obviously contrary to the Scripture, we cannot but clearly and definitely say—No."

"It is difficult to avoid the impression," Kirchenzeitung added, "that the emphasis given by the Roman Church to the unique position of Mary is a deliberate stop to all attempts at meditation between the two churches of the kind that might be made by friends of the Una Sancta."

"However great our readiness to further understanding, neither we nor Roman Catholics should have any doubt but the emphasis given by the Roman Catholic Church to the worship of Mary goes directly against the main emphasis of the Reformation and the basic truth of the New Testament," Kirchenzeitung claimed.

German Protestant sources here also quoted a statement on the same subject by "Le Messager Evangelique," organ of French Protestants, which warned that "during this year we shall have to put a great deal of emphasis in Bible classes and in religious instruction on what the Scriptures say of the Virgin Mary."

"We are not entering upon a Year of Mary or an Age of Mary," the Protestant publication in predominantly Roman Catholic France said.

Adding that Protestants honor Mary as the mother of the Lord, "Le Messager Evangelique" warned that "it would be very regrettable if the ever greater emphasis given to the worship of Mary were to put Christians before the alternative: Jesus or Mary."

"It happened once in the history of Christianity that all the worship and love of men turned to Mary, and Christ was left in the background as the Judge of the World," the French publication said, but for Protestants "this year and the coming years will remain the years of the Lord."

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Book Reviewers for North Carolina Women

Mrs. W. T. Scott, president of the North Carolina Women, announced the following who have accepted responsibility for presenting the mission study books to women's societies in that area.

For the foreign mission study book, on the theme, "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World," is Where'er the Sun, which is being reviewed by: Dr. W. W. Sloan, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. W. W. Sloan, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. H. E. Robinson, 522 Park View Dr., Burlington, N. C.

For the home mission study book, on the theme, "Spanish-Speaking People in the United States," Within These Borders: Mrs. Roy Moore, 735 Shamrock Rd., Asheboro, N. C.; Mrs. Carl Dawson, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. H. E. Robinson, 522 Park View Dr., Burlington, N. C.

Any society wishing one of these reviewers to interpret either the home or foreign mission study theme for them should be sure to make plans long enough ahead so as to fit into the schedule of the "reviewer." It is fine to suggest a preferred date and several alternate ones, or if those are not suitable to ask the reviewer to suggest a time. It is also nice to invite neighboring societies to share in the review, so as to save time and effort on the part of the guest speaker. And, of course, you will want to take care of their transportation expense—and maby a little extra.

* * * * *

Meeting of Woman's Auxiliary of Berea (Nansemond)

On Thursday, December 10, the Woman's Auxiliary of Berea, (Nansemond), held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Wilbur Jones, in Driver. Mrs. Emmett Jones, chairman of the Friendly Service Committee, assisted by Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. C. G. Wright, Mrs. Frank Matthews, Mrs. J. C. Matthews, Sr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson, presented the Puerto Rico project.

When the offering was made and counted, we had $35.35.

Slips of paper were given the members present, to suggest a name for our goat, as each society raising $30.00 to pay for the transportation of a goat, had the privilege of naming the goat.

Five different names were suggested, but "Jennie Willis" had by a large majority the largest number of votes. So, Mrs. Russell Bradford, our beloved and tireless worker, who is president of the auxiliary, had a goat named in her honor.

Dr. Harcastle had the introduction to the Psalm, and taught in his own helpful manner.

Last month, this society gave $100.00 (one hundred dollars) for the Thank Offering.

The hostess, Mrs. Jones, served delicious refreshments, carrying out Christmas colors.

NOTE.—This report was written before Mrs. Bradford's death.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Christmas Meeting at Union Grove

The Union Grove Missionary Society had its December meeting at the church. The program "Christmas in Puerto Rico" was given by Lucy Rae Tedder.

During the business session the group voted to pay for a goat to send to Puerto Rico. The goat will be named Ruth Vonceila, after the society's first president, Mrs. Paul Wilson, and the pastor's wife, Mrs. Winfred Bray.

A box was packed for the Elon Orphanage and many useful gifts were contributed.

During the social period, the group exchanged gifts.

LUCY RAE TEDDER.

* * * * *

Want a Good Display?

The Convention Office at Elon College has a set of pictures, purchased by the Women's Board, for use in our women's societies in promoting interest in our foreign mission theme, "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World."

These are 11x14 photos in black and white mounted on cardboard and consist of:

1. The House of Good Will, Social Center, Guadalajara, Mexico.
2. Pastor Caleb serves communion Majuro, Mieronesia.
3. The New Park Hill Church, Denver, Colorado.
4. Clinic at Elleniko, Greece.
5. Chureh School is over at Quebrada Seea, rural church in Puerto Rico.
6. Robert Grant is telling a story, Kyoto, Japan.
7. The Thrift Shop at Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia.
8. Tilemaking at industrial school, Angola, Portuguese West Africa.
9. Chemistry class at Union College, Tellipallai, Ceylon.
10. Road Building, Swannanoa Work Camp, North Carolina.
11. Repairing home for a new family, Brick Rural Life School, N. C.
12. Rev. Harold Heekman and plane—Powder River Parish, Montana.

To secure them drop a card to Miss Coghill's secretary, Miss Doris Boswell, Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. There is no charge, except the postage. They cost $10.00 and ought to be put to good use by our churches. Plan to have them on display when the foreign mission study book is being reviewed, or at some other special time.

Men Grow into the Lord's Prayer

Once when Jesus had been praying, the shine on his face made one of his disciples exclaim wistfully, "Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples." It seems that Jesus had been careful not to burden his disciples with rules and forms of prayer. But in answer to this request, he gave them what is known as the Lord's Prayer. We all love to repeat its very words, and will do so to the end of our days. But it was not primarily intended as a ritual. It is rather an outline of the scope of acceptable prayer, and as one studies it he is increasingly amazed at the extent to which it voices every need of our human nature, and is absolutely pure of any elements that have been outgrown in the broadening experience of the race. Men grow into the Lord's Prayer, rather than away from it.

—Rollin H. Walker.

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

This week a very great man in our church died. He was Dr. N. G. Newman and one of the first ministers I ever remembered seeing. He looked and acted like a minister at all times.

Dr. Newman was full of fun and enjoyed telling funny stories. He had traveled a lot and had many interesting things to share. His family life had been very happy and he enjoyed living in the fullest and best sense.

No one enjoyed the council trip to California more than he did. He walked like a man of 45 and not one in his 80's. After he came home from Europe last summer, our family had a pleasant evening with him at the home of his niece, Miss Lila Newman, at Elon College. He told us about the ship on which he sailed, the plane that carried him from England to Paris, France, and the loneliness he experienced in that big city. He described well the lads and lassies, the castles and lochs of Scotland, but best of all, was his description of slowly pacing Rome where St. Paul had trod.

Few men have known their family history as well as he did, or the history of their country, state and church. He sometimes spent days seeking out some phase or event of history, poring over books and old papers.

He served my church as pastor, he was a friend of my family for 60 years, he assisted at my wedding, he helped to bury our dead, and rejoiced when our little ones arrived. He was a great, kind, gentle, intelligent man and he left behind untold good. We are grateful to have known him and shared in his beautiful life.

* * * * *

Fear Infection

By MABLE-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Stewart is such a darling," his grandmother, Mrs. Manson, said to me. "I just adore him. I'd give up any engagement I had to stay with him when Paul and Diane want to go out. But, no! They hire a baby sitter."

I know my friend was deeply hurt because her son and his wife rarely left their little boy with her. It seemed selfish and callous on their part, I thought. Why should they deprive their child's grandmother of this pleasure?

I found out later, when I went to stay for a few days with Mrs. Manson. We drove over to the son's house to make a call. The door was unlocked and we went in, but no one was in sight. Then, hearing a slight sound, we looked up. There stood Stewart in his sleeping garments at the head of the stairs. Evidently he had just awakened from his afternoon nap.

"Hi, Gram," he murmured.

"Hello, darling!" She held out her arms. "Come down and give your grandmother a big hug."

Stewart smiled sleepily and, slipping his small body through the banisters, commenced to edge his way down on the narrow margin of the steps outside.

"Oh, Stewart, don't!" cried his grandmother. Her face was all screwed up with apprehension. "You'll fall!"

Stewart placidly continued his descent on the outside of the banisters.

"Please, Stewart!" Mrs. Manson clasped her hands tightly. "Get back inside!"

Her daughter-in-law appeared at the head of the stairs then and came down. "Hello, Mother," she said calmly, just glancing at her small son. "How are you?"

"Diane, do you allow Stewart to come down the stairs that way? It's very dangerous. Why he might—"

"Oh, he's all right," Diane said unconcernedly. "He's often done it. Boys always like to clamber around."

I could see that Mrs. Manson wasn't mollified nor convinced, but she evidently thought self-restraint was the best part of wisdom. Before my visit was completed I saw other instances of grandmother's constant fear that Stewart would hurt himself in some way. He had been given a small bicycle for his birthday. With great determination, he set himself to learn to ride. He fell off again and again. It was agony for his grandmother to watch him.

At the playground park, where Mrs. Manson and I took him one afternoon, she tried to distract his attention from a crude sort of merry-go-round. Stewart didn't protest much, but when his grandmother crossed the lawn to speak to a friend, he ran and caught hold of the revolving apparatus, where several other children were enjoying themselves. In his haste, he fell and skinned his nose a little. He picked himself up, felt his nose, then again caught hold of the merry-go-round. This time he didn't fall. I hoped his grandmother hadn't noticed.

It was easy for me to see, after that why the child's mother kept him and his grandmother apart as much as possible. It wasn't selfishness nor callousness. She just didn't want her child to be infected with fear—fear that could be a handicap to him all the rest of his life.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATORS TO MEET IN CINCINNATI.

(Continued from page 2.)

of the Commission will be held February 12-13.

The Student Volunteer Movement and the United Student Christian Council, which became affiliated with the National Council of Churches last fall and which are related to the Commission on Christian Higher Education, will be officially welcomed at Cincinnati.

Public highlight will be the mass meeting in Emory auditorium at 8 p. m., February 9. Charles Templeton, National Council of Churches evangelist, will deliver the theme address on "A Total Witness in the Teaching Task." At that time also the annual Russell Colgate Distinguished Service Citation will be presented to the lay person who has made an outstanding contribution to Christian education. This year's winner is Cleveland E. Dodge of New York, industrialist and civic leader.

What denominations and state and city councils of churches can do through TV will be portrayed in the leadership section by I. Keith Tyler, director of radio education at Ohio State University. Jean Fraser of Geneva, Switzerland, youth secretary for the World Council of Churches, and Wilmina Rowland of New York City, youth secretary for the World Council of Christian Education, will highlight the youth work section in

(Continued on page 15.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Relax With Max

The Greensboro Daily News is running a contest to find the child most nearly like Dennis, the Menace. One of the candidates for the honor is reported to have taken the hammer and a screwdriver to the back of his parents' T-V set, stating, "I'm gonna let all those people out."

* * *

Any of you ever tried to do a whole semester's work in the last week of the semester? Rather difficult, isn't it? (Did you ever try, Max?)

* * *

Whatcha doing at your church during youth week? Ask your pastor to let the young people have one of the Sunday morning worship services. Wouldn't be surprised if he'll be happy to sit in the congregation and worship as you lead the service.

* * *

Dugan was hailed into court for disturbing the peace.

"And you stand there and try to tell this court that you're a peaceful man? that you love peace and peaceful men?"

"I certainly do," replied Dugan.

"Then why did you drop that brick on Constable Clancy's head?"

"Well," said Dugan, "after I had dropped that brick on his conk, you never saw a more peaceful man than Clancy."

Suppose You Were an "Illegal" Refugee in Berlin

By REV. PHILIP R. HOH, Lutheran Relief Representative in Germany.

You're lucky. You're not in the situation this article describes—not yet. But this might have been a story about you. It is about people who are like you, only they live or have lived in the East Zone of Germany.

Suppose you had been in their place. You, too, would have to make up your mind about the big question: shall we stay or shall we flee? It would be up to you to decide. Here are some of the facts that would help you to make your decision.

You are one member of a family of four. There is father, mother, teen-age son, and a six-year-old daughter.

You live in a nice stone house, flower boxes at all the windows.

One of the prize pieces of your furniture is the radio. It's been fixed so that only one station can be tuned in. Need it be said who controls that one station? The teen-age son knows something about radio and has fixed it again. You can hear the western station RIAS and get non-Communist news, too. But, of course, the problem of radio news is only one of many problems. And most of these problems cannot be fixed like your radio. So you think of leaving the Zone.

If you decide to do so, you have to take a train to West Berlin. From there you will, perhaps, be able to go to Western Germany. From there you may, perhaps, get a chance to go overseas. That's what you hope.

Let's see what kind of life you would really face in West Berlin.

You would enter on foot, register with the city officials and then be quizzed by the Allied authorities. The West German authorities would ask you to prove you had fled the East Zone because you were in imminent danger of life and limb, that if you stayed you would have been killed or jailed or shipped somewhere inside Russia to a slave labor camp. You know you couldn't prove it.

It means you would be classified as an "illegal" refugee. Your presence is recognized—period. You have no right to a job. You have no right to be flown out to Western Germany. You have no right to governmental relief. In fact you have no right whatsoever—only tacit permission to stay.

How long can you stay? Nobody knows. Maybe for the rest of your life.

But you would need a place to sleep. Well. If all four of you had come, it might be complicated. After the registration was over, you'd be on your own. Maybe you could find some bombed-out cellar. . . . You could steal some tin or oil-paper somewhere, fix some sort of a fairly leakproof roof—unless it rained hard.

Then what about eating? The little money you may have brought with you from the East is practically worthless. . . . Since you would be an "illegal" refugee, chances for a job would not exist. People would be fined if they employed you.

You would have only the clothing you were wearing when you came. If you had carried a suitcase across the border, they would have arrested you. When what you have wears out—well—it's just too bad. . . .

The situation that your flight had brought you wouldn't be very bright.

Still, there would have been one basic reason for which you decided to go West. Spell it out with capital letters. When you don't have it, that is the way to spell it—FREEDOM!

That brings us back to what could have made you decide to leave your little stone home in the East Zone. It would have been what life there had in store for you.

For the father: steady work at very low pay. Not enough food for the family; just enough for clothing. Then: two hours every day compulsory classes for all workers—indoctrination, the Communist Party line. Lies and lies and lies that have to be believed. . . . Your fellow workers and former friends ready to turn you in to the police if you make one wrong statement or express one contrary opinion.

For the mother: since she is probably working, the same. Then the burden of bringing up a family in a spiritually immoral environment. The children are brought up on lies, hatred, distrust, anti-Christianity.

For the teen-age boy: Writing several school themes a week against the Americans, against the church, condemning Jesus Christ, praising the Communist party. You know you are lying, but . . . if you stay, you will eventually go under.

For the six-year-old girl: a little too young to know what's going on. It may be the worry about the little daughter that made you decide to flee. You don't want her to grow up believing that Jesus is a myth. You don't want her to hate America, to despise the church, to ignore the Word of God. But if you give her the truth, she will somewhere sooner or later say, "But Daddy said . . ." And if she does that she may never see her parents again. If you wait until she is old enough to understand, she will never believe you.

So there, if you were living in the East Zone, would be the problem you would have to consider. Since you are not in the East Zone—it is up to you to help the people who must make the hard decision.—Lutheran News.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Doing the Works of God"

LESSON V—JANUARY 31, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly."—John 10:10.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 4:43-5:47.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 12:1-13.

The Helpless.

"Now there was in Jerusalem by the sheep gate a pool, in Hebrew called Bethesda, with five porches. In these lay a multitude of invalids, blind, lame, paralyzed." It was a sight to cause a lump to come into one's throat, and to tug at one's heart. Look at them, folks who were blind, folks who were lame, folks who were paralyzed. Look at their faces! Listen to their complaints! Here was human misery in the mass. It is quite likely that most folks stayed away from the place. It was perhaps difficult to sleep the night after one looked upon so much suffering and misery and hopelessness.

There was one man there who was especially to be pitied. He had been ill for thirty-eight years. That is a long time to be ill! And his illness was all the more unbearable because many others had been cured by the healing waters of the mineral spring, while he, lacking a friend to help him in, was unable to take advantage of the propitious moment when the waters had special curative powers. He had lost hope and had lost heart.

Perhaps it is not overdrawing the picture too much to say that those people at the pool of Bethesda represent so many people in our modern world who are without Christ, hence without hope. There are so many who are blind, who do not see the truth as it is in him; so many who are lame, who haltingly walk in the way of righteousness; so many who are paralyzed, whose wills are dead, and who have lost their initiative and their power to do anything. And many of them have been a long time in that state.

The Hopeful.

These folks were hopeful. That was an important thing. At least they had the desire to get well. Every day they dragged themselves or were helped by others, to this pool, the waters of which reportedly had curative powers. When the spring bubbled up, whoever first got into the water was healed of his disease. Explain it however you will, the thing worked. Folks had been healed by the mineral waters in the spring. Again these folks are representative of modern folks. People are always hopeful that some new nostrum, some new treatment, will restore them to health and strength. People travel far and wide and spend great sums in the hope that they will find healing of body and mind in some fashion or other. And often they follow wild theories and resort to strange devices to bring this to pass. There are many who capitalize on the human desire to be well. Think of the claims made for many "patent medicines" as an example.

The Helper.

Jesus had come up to the feast of the Jews. Where could he be found? After walking thirty miles, would he be resting in the house of a friend? Would he be sitting somewhere in the shade, talking with the scholars? Not he. He was in the midst of the needy people—he was at the pool of Bethesda. As Dr. Mead says, "Jesus spent a great deal of time with the sick and the needy who needed a physician most, and little time with the rich neurotics who might have paid him well and wasted his time." God is in the midst of suffering humanity. He takes upon himself our infirmities and our sorrows and our sufferings. He is nigh unto those who are of a broken heart. He is near unto those who are sick and in need.

The Help.

"Do you want to be healed?" Thus did the Master address the helpless cripple who had been that way thirty-eight years. What a foolish question! No, not foolish at all. It was a very practical and penetrating question. That fellow had been there so long that he actually liked it. Lying in the cool shade of that porch was much better than working in the hot sun. He was "enjoying poor health." There was little spirit in him. His answer was a whine and a complaint. In time selfishness and laziness had become a disease hard to cure. Jesus had to arouse a desire to get well before he could do anything. The man had to want to get well before Jesus could help him.

"Do you want to be healed?" Do you, really? Honest to goodness, cross your heart? How about it, Mr. Aleoholic, who knows what is the cause of your ill health, your inefficiency, your domestic trouble, your inability to keep a job? Do you want to be healed, do you want to be healed badly enough to give up drinking?

How about it, Mr. Cigarette Smoker, who knows that that cough is caused by smoking, who suspects that appetite would be better, physical tone higher, general well-being greater of you gave up smoking? Do you want to be healed badly enough to stop smoking?

How about it, Mr. Dyspeptic, who knows that a great deal of your trouble is caused by over-eating, or eating the wrong kind of food, or eating irregularly? Do you want to be healed badly enough to be temperate in your eating, to control your appetite?

How about you, Mr. or Mrs. Overweight, who knows that the reason you are piling on the fat and losing the "battle of the bulge" is because you are eating entirely too much, and especially too much of the fattening foods? Do you want to be healed, badly enough to say "No" to the second helping, and to cut out banana splits and chocolate nut sundaes, and candy?

How about you, Mr. or Mrs. or Miss Chronically-Ill? Honestly now, don't you rather like being made the center of attention, being waited on, being coddled, don't you rather enjoy poor health? Wouldn't you rather endure some of the inconveniences of ill-health than to do an honest day's work? Wouldn't you rather be on pension than on the payroll?

Do we want to be healed? Do we want to be good men and good women, badly enough to discipline ourselves and deny ourselves and take up our Cross and follow Christ? That question which Jesus asked the cripple is one of the most penetrating and devastating questions that can be asked.

The Howlers.

At Jesus' word the man, rose up, took his pallet under his arm and walked away. And that started something sure enough. The proud, blind, prejudiced Pharisees raised a

(Continued on page 15.)

Joint Meeting on Church Architecture

American church architecture is acquiring a "new look" in an era of building that dwarfs anything in the past.

This is the news that comes from the annual Joint National Conference on Church Architecture held in Knoxville, Tenn., last week and which attracted more church architects and leaders than any previous session.

Spurred by increasing demands for edifices that retain a worshipful atmosphere and at the same time accommodate the needs of a 20th Century church program, architects are turning their backs on traditional Gothic and Colonial styles in which they were schooled.

A hundred-year era in which the Gothic spire has been exalted as the "trademark" of Christian architectural style is coming to an end as architects turn to contemporary design functionally superior, utilizing building materials of the plastic age.

"Improved techniques and the growing acceptance of 20th Century designing are rapidly bringing to the American continent a new, fresh and vigorous architectural expression worthy of the current resurgence of religious interest," declared Dr. C. Harry Atkinson, director of the Bureau of Church Building and architecture of the National Council of Churches.

He acknowledged that the "new look" tends to be "cold" and "angular" but that the importance of form and beauty as adjuncts to worship have been stressed in most of the hundreds of churches visited.

Dr. Atkinson, who is concluding his first year as successor to the late Elbert M. Conover as director of the bureau, said that 1954 probably will be the greatest year in the history of church building. He estimated that the dollar volume would exceed $500,000,000 compared with a government estimate of $473,000,000 in 1953. Many denominations are engaged in multi-million dollar building fund campaigns.

The joint conference which attracted nearly 200 architects and church leaders was sponsored by the bureau and the Church Architectural Guild of America.

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Below is given the complete list of churches that have sent in their pledges to the Church Building Loan Fund campaign to date, together with the amount of each pledge. We suggest that this page be preserved for future reference, as hereafter only the names of additional churches will be printed. If you have not sent in your pledge, it should be made without further delay.

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton	211.00
Mt. Olive (R)—H. V. Harman	267.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
	<hr/>
	$ 3,696.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Barrett's—James W. Madren ...	$ 204.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardecastle	872.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Hopewell—J. W. Rackley, Jr. ...	464.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark ..	200.00
Johnson's Grove—Harvey L. Carnes	100.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View	724.00
Norfolk, Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Central—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardecastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—Clyde O. Koon	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress ..	2,500.00
Suffolk	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Wakefield—James W. Madren ..	459.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
	<hr/>
	$44,454.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Fuller's Chapel—E. M. Carter ..	324.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Carl Wallace	195.00

Lee's Chapel—Bill Simmons	166.00
Liberty Vance—W. A. Grissom ..	1,283.00
Morrisville—E. M. Powell	207.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Plymouth	299.00
Raleigh	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—Julius Rice	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—Julius Rice	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00

$11,836.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Albemarle—S. E. Madren	885.00
Bailey's Grove—Avery Brown ..	88.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown ..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grissom ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Persnell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Sophia—Avery Brown	260.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
Union Grove—Winfred Bray ...	246.00

$ 4,629.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Apple's Chapel—John R. Lackey ..	$ 1,563.00
Berea—Herman L. Johnson	570.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	400.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Concord—T. D. Sutton	460.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Calvary Christian—Thurman F. Bowers	688.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Graham, Providence Memorial—F. E. Reynolds	495.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hebron—Mark W. Andes	359.00
Hendersonville—C. M. Heymann ..	160.00
Hines' Chapel—John Littikin ..	697.00
Hopedale—J. Harold Loman ...	603.00
Howard's Chapel—J. Harold Loman	391.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Kallam Grove—C. Fred Allred ..	344.00
Long's Chapel	681.00
Mount Bethel—C. Fred Allred ..	213.00
Monticello—John Littikin	460.00
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,000.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ...	1,498.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) ..	75.00

$27,659.50

SUMMARY BY CONFERENCES.

Conference	Quota	Accepted
Va. Valley	$ 5,736.00	$ 3,696.00
Eastern Va.	51,000.00	44,454.00
Eastern N. C.	17,690.00	11,836.00
Western N. C.	11,476.00	4,629.00
N. C. and Va.	50,552.00	27,659.50
Totals	$136,454.00	$92,274.50

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

We were shocked and grieved here at the orphanage to hear of the death of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford. She was a classmate of mine at Elon, and what a lovely, cultured woman she was. Her father the late J. O. Atkinson was one of the leading spirits in the development of the orphanage. He presented it to the Southern Convention near and far just as he boosted every enterprise of our church. Mrs. Bradford was in every way worthy of her noble parents. Both she and her husband were always very dear friends of mine. Two reports now of the orphanage have carried many memorials to her and most appropriately so.

The giving of memorials is a fine way to continue the work of those who have gone on to that better land. Many friends have asked us to refrain from listing their names in connection with such memorials as they wish all the honor to be bestowed on the name of the person memorialized. The donor's name is listed in our records along with the amount given. We hope many friends will approve. A card of acknowledge is sent to the bereft family and an acknowledgement is sent to the donor. Verses by the writer as follows are on the cards mailed:

Noble lives aren't ended
But glorified above,
When kindness is extended
Through thoughtful acts of love;
The blessed art of giving,
When heavenly life is won,
Is passed on to the living
In noble deeds they've done.

And we may show the measure
Of what their lives were worth
By passing on the treasure
They've helped us with on earth;
And may there be joy in knowing
That these here left behind
Have learned the art of showing
Their ways of being kind. (JGT)

Our report is good this week and most gratefully received. How I wish there were some way of breaching the gap we suffered at the year's end!

Two donations from Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter and First Congregational Christian Church of Portsmouth have come in on the payment of freight on the two carloads of hay. The freight amounted to $163.67. We appreciate more than I can tell you the hay, and we would like to thank everyone who helped with this most excellent project.

Our children are all well and happy. Our matrons are doing a good job, and we are all hoping and praying for a good year. We are doing everything we can to keep expenses down. We are trying to envision a rich fruitage in fine training for every boy and girl here. It is our daily aim to make this as nearly a real home for these children as we possibly can. I have on my desk now a letter from a boy who was here when I came and whom I had the joy of helping to train for four of his years. He says: "I was raised there and I appreciate everything I got or that was ever done for me, and I am proud of being raised there, too . . . I am liking the Air Force better every day." I am proud of him and if you could read the whole letter you would be too. Another one of our boys is in the same barracks in San Antonio, referring to him he says; "And he is liking it even better than I do." Yes, they were trained to be fine men and they are.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 14, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

- Mr. J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., 50 copies of "The Upper Room."
- Mrs. John Miller, Elkton, Va., Coupons and soap.
- Lamm Clothing Co., Burlington, N. C., Overcoat.
- A Friend, Clothing.
- Miss Nancy Ann Newman, Suffolk, Va., Clothing.
- Mrs. J. J. Daniel, Henderson, N. C., Coat and hat.
- Miss Sylvia Hinnom, Elon College, N. C., Drinking glasses.

Miss Frances P. Lowe, Suffolk, Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Auburn S. S.	$ 77.37
New Elam	25.00
Piney Plain	4.00
	106.37
Eastern Va. Conference:
Newport News S. S.	$ 13.50
	13.50
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Pfafttown	$ 8.00
Greensboro, First	222.00
	230.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Big Oak	$ 2.00
Pleasant Cross	9.45
Pleasant Grove	10.00
Pleasant Union	15.25
	36.70
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel	$ 2.00
	2.00
Total	$ 388.57

Special Offerings.

- Vanceville Sunday School, Tifton, Ga. $ 3.00
- David T. Fuller, Henderson, N. C. 5.00
- Mrs. M. R. Rea, Charlotte, N. C. 25.00
- Mr. & Mrs. W. B. Fuller, Harrisonburg, Va. 10.00
- Mr. & Mrs. N. C. Rudd, Brown Summit, N. C. . 10.00
- W. B. Terrell, Warrenton, N. C. 10.00
- Miss Florence Pennebaker, Virgilina, Va. 15.00
- A Friend, Greensboro, N. C. 25.00
- D. H. Carlton, North Wilkesboro, N. C. 10.00
- Burlington Drug Co., Inc., Burlington, N. C. 100.00
- Mrs. K. C. Field, Holyoke, Mass. 2.00
- W. Dennis Madry, Burlington, N. C. 10.00
- Park Ave. Cong. Church, Arlington, Mass. 25.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

..... (Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

..... (Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address

In Memoriam

VELLINES.

Whereas, God has in his infinite love seen fit to call to his reward, our beloved member and co-worker, Mrs. Tiny Vellines, and we, as a church wish to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved:
That the Isle of Wight Christian Church and Woman's missionary Society has lost one for whom it mourns.

That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers that God's blessing may rest upon their sad hearts and give them comfort.

Mrs. W. J. DARDEN,
Mrs. R. F. WHITLEY,
Mrs. H. M. WILSON,
Committee.

TURNER.

Whereas, God has in his infinite love seen fit to call to his reward, our beloved member, Lewis A. Turner, and we, as a church, wish to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved:
That the Isle of Wight Christian Church has lost one for whom it mourns.

That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers that God's blessing may rest upon them and comfort their bereaved hearts.

Mrs. W. J. DARDEN,
Mrs. H. M. WILSON,
Mrs. R. F. WHITLEY,
Committee.

CHAPMAN.

Whereas, God has in his infinite love seen fit to call to his reward our member and co-worker, Ethel Chapman, and we, as a church, wish to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved: That the Isle of Wight Christian Church has lost one for whom it mourns.

That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers that God's blessing may rest upon them and comfort their bereaved hearts.

Mrs. W. J. DARDEN,
Mrs. H. M. WILSON,
Mrs. R. F. WHITLEY,
Committee.

TURNER.

Whereas, God has seen fit to call to her heavenly home, our beloved sister and co-worker, Lelia M. Turner, and we as a church and individuals desire to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss.

Therefore be it resolved:
1. That the Isle of Wight Christian Church and Woman's Missionary Society of which she was a most faithful and loyal member has lost one for whom it mourns.

2. That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayer, that God's blessing may rest upon their sad hearts and give them comfort.

Mrs. W. J. DARDEN,
Mrs. H. M. WILSON,
Mrs. R. F. WHITLEY,
Committee.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATORS TO MEET IN CINCINNATI.
(Continued from page 10.)

describing the status of youth work in countries around the world.

The same changing situation in today's world will be brought out in the adult section. This group will seek new points of view for programs for the aged and for single young adults. The difficulty of preserving the family's spiritual life in the presence of highly complex disintegrating conditions will be the order of the day for the family life department. Final plans will be perfected for national conferences on family worship to meet this problem, and community-wide projects on a national scale will be planned.

How to write for children and for rural church people, how to make religious magazines more attractive, and how to build circulation are among the topics to be considered by church editors of the 39 denominations.

Tying home and church education together, training parents for this, developing lay church leaders, and what population trends mean to lay church work will be emphasized in the lay section, enrollment to which is open to all workers in religious education.

How good is a meeting? The professors and research section will try to find out, using this Cincinnati occasion as a laboratory. The section members will make a research project out of determining what produces good and poor meetings and what proves helpful to participants and what does not.

Other section meetings which will be held include those for directors of Christian education, pastors, regional denominational executives, publishers and weekday religious educators. The new audio-visual guide produced by the National Council will be introduced at the Visual Education Fellowship dinner, and a new audio-visual unit, "Right Living," developed by the National Council's department of church and economic life, will be shown.

The annual meeting and luncheon of the International Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools will be held February 10.

Basic decisions will be made for the 1955 Quadrennial Convention on Christian Education, and its president, Harold E. Stassen, director of the Foreign Operations Agency, at Washington, D. C., will be present.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

howl about the man breaking the Sabbath Day. And when Jesus said that he and the Father were working together, those old fellows really blew their tops.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

Woman's Society, Church of Wide Fellowship ...	10.00
In memory of Roy W. Malone ..	7.50
In memory of Roy W. Malone ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	10.00
In memory of Roy W. Malone ..	10.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	10.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	10.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	25.00
Doreas Bible Class, South Norfolk ..	11.62
J. P. Saunders, Franklin, Va.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. Walter C. Rawls, St. Louis, Mo. .	50.00
Alfred W. Haywood, New York, N. Y.	50.00
Congregational Christian Ch., Lake Helen, Fla. .	14.70
First Christian Ch., Portsmouth, Va., to help with freight on peanut hay ..	10.00
W. C. Elder, Burlington, N. C.	50.00
In memory of R. H. Johnson ..	5.00
In memory of Madison Hammond ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	10.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	10.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
In memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford ..	5.00
Special Gifts	835.90
	$ 1,449.72

Total for the year $ 1,838.29

"Take a look at the church, the heart of your community, offering worship and fellowship within its walls, sending out friendship beyond the shadow of its steeple."

"The Master Came to Town Today"

They said, "The Master is coming to honor the town today;
And none can tell at what house or home the Master will choose to stay."
And I thought, while my heart beat wildly, "What if he should come to mine?
How would I strive to entertain and honor the Guest Divine?"
And straight I turned to toiling to make my home more neat.
I swept and polished and garnished, and decked it with blossoms sweet;
I was troubled for fear the Master would come ere my task was done,
So I hastened and worked the faster, and watched the hurrying sun.
But right in the midst of my duties, a woman came to my door;
She had come to tell me her sorrows and my comfort and aid to implore.
But I said, "I can't stop or listen, or help you any today;
I have greater things to attend to!" and the pleader turned away.
But soon there came another—a cripple—thin and pale and gray,
Who said, "Let me stop and rest a while in your goodly house, I pray!
I have traveled far since morning. I am hungry, faint and weak;
My heart is full of misery, and comfort and help I seek."
But I said, "I am grieved and sorry, but I cannot keep you today;
I look for a great and noble Guest!" So the cripple turned away.
But the day wore onward swiftly, and my task was nearly done.
Yet a prayer was ever in my heart that to me the Master would come.
And I thought I would spring to meet him, and serve him with utmost care;
When a little child stood by me, with a face so sweet and fair;
Sweet, but with marks of tear-drops, and its clothes were tattered and old;
A finger was bruised and bleeding, and its little bare feet were cold.
And I said, "I am grieved and sorry, you are surely in need of care,
But I cannot stop to give it; so you must hasten elsewhere."
At the words a shadow swept over his blue-veined brow.
"Someone will feed and cloth you, dear, I am much too busy now."
At last the day was ended, my task was over and done;
My house was swept and garnished, and I watched in the dusk alone.
Watched—but no footfall sounded, no one came to my gate,
No one entered my cottage door; I could only pray and wait.
I waited till night had deepened, but the Master had not come.
"He has entered some other door," I cried, "to gladden some other home.
My labor has been for nothing"—I bowed my head and wept;
My heart was sore with longing, but in spite of it all I slept.
Then the Master stood before me, and his face was grave and fair:
"Three times today I came to your door, and craved your pity and care.
Three times you sent me onward, unhelped and uncomfited.
The blessing you might have had was lost, and your chance to serve has fled."
"O Lord, dear Lord, forgive me! How could I know it was thou?"
My very soul was ashamed and sank in the depths of regret and woe.
And he said, "The sin is pardoned, but the blessing is lost to thee;
For comforting not the least of mine, thou hast failed to comfort me."

—Anonymous.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, JANUARY 28, 1954

NUMBER 4

A Serious Thought for

YOUTH

on Pilgrim Fellowship Sunday

I believe youth to be the most solemn of all seasons—more solemn than the hour of death. There is an analogy between youth and death. Both are beginnings, entering upon the unknown; but they are beginnings of a very different kind. In death I am passive; I am in the hands of One, and that One the highest. But in youth I am in the hands of three; I am between three currents—my brother, my God and myself. And they are cross-currents; they are impelling different ways. Mine moves inward; my brother's moves outward; God's moves upward. Death is not a battle-field; I am a captive there; God is all in all. But youth is a battle-field; God, my brother, and I, are on conflicting sides, and there is likely to be strife.

—George Matheson

From an old Church Calendar.

News Flashes

We thank Miss Dorothy Cushing, news editor for the various agencies of the Congregational Christian Churches for reports on the Missions Council meeting this week in Cleveland, Ohio.

The article, "The World Task of the Church," by Rev. Quentin Leisher, Secretary of The American Board, which appears in this issue is being released simultaneously in the American Board February News Bulletin. We recommend its reading.

The Executive Board of the Southern Convention has been called to meet at First Church, Burlington, N. C., on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 2, 3, 1954, beginning at 10:00 a. m., Tuesday. Challenges and opportunities, as well as problems, will be given consideration.

We are glad to report that Rev. Robert A. Whitten, who has been a patient at Garfield Memorial Hospital in Washington, D. C., for the past several weeks, returned to his home in Winchester last Sunday. We are grateful to learn that he is much improved and are hoping that after a doctor-prescribed rest he will be his normal self again.

Rev. David Scudder Herriek, who was for 43 years a Congregational Christian educator in India under the American Board, died at noon, Friday, January 22 at a rest home in West Newton, Massachusetts, at the age of 90. He was born of missionary parents in India in 1863, and spent the greater part of his active life there as a missionary and educator.

The Superintendents' Conference of Congregational Christian Churches meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, this week in conjunction with the Midwinter Meeting of the Missions Council, has elected Rev. William N. Tuttle of Avon Park, Florida, as its president. Rev. Jesse H. Norenberg of Madison, Wisconsin, was re-elected as secretary. Elected to the ad interim Committee of the Missions Council were Dr. Harold N. Skidmore of East Lansing, Michigan, and Rev. Frank L. Edwards of Chicago, Illinois.

The Program for Social Action in The Local Church

By REV. WILLIAM H. DUDLEY.*

The program for social action in the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church originates out of the conviction that the Church is the Body of Christ—the tangible expression of his living Spirit in the world, and that as our church becomes the Body of Christ at this particular time and place, it has a certain life function to fulfill. No healthy organism—certainly not the Body of Christ—is satisfied by merely keeping itself in existence. If the members of the church have an experience of faith an inevitable reflex of that faith is their social witness. They bear a social witness, not because an organization is set up for that purpose, but because they cannot help doing it.

So it becomes a laymen's activity. I can truly say that our Social Action Committee has not been minister dominated, not nearly as much as I would like to have had it on frequent occasions when I was sure that I was the only one who had the true light!

Not every individual as a member of the church can fulfill all the functions of the Christian life as the church is called upon to fulfill them. "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healing. . . ." The responsibilities of the Christian life become specialized.

But I am quite sure, especially in these troubled times, that everyone wants to belong to a cause that has fundamental significance. Everyone needs a faith as much as our society and civilization needs a faith to sustain it. How long can a Christian civilization be sustained if it is severed from the faith that gave rise to its institutions and traditions? The Christian social witness is essential to the individual and it is essential to society!

Our church is in a community of apartment houses, rooming houses, hotel people, many of whom live in a dreadful state of separateness and anonymity, and whose lives are constantly threatened by meaninglessness. Everyone shares that basic human need of belonging to life and

(Continued on page 6.)

*An address by Dr. Dudley before the Council for Social Action, meeting in conjunction with the Midwinter Meeting of the Missions Council. Dr. Dudley is pastor of the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church of Cleveland.

Varied and Challenging Program at Rural Church Institute

By JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

Snow and ice cut the attendance at the Rural Church Institute of the Southern Convention held January 12-14 at the New Franklinton Center at Brick, Bricks, North Carolina, but approximately twenty ministers were on hand to share in the varied and challenging program.

The institute was the product of several groups—the Superintendent and the Rural Church Committee of the Southern Convention, the Town and Country Department and Evangelism Department of the Board of Home Missions.

Taking part on the program were Dr. W. C. Timmons, of the Department of Evangelism, who served as Chaplain; Rev. Hamilton Jeter, of Wilmington, N. C., who served as pianist; Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall, Southern Pines, N. C., lecturer on worship and preaching; Dr. W. T. Scott, Superintendent of the Southern Convention; Dr. Thomas A. Tripp, Town Country Department, Selz C. Mayo, Associate Professor of Rural Sociology, North Carolina State College; Mr. Neil McLean, Director of Brick Rural Life School; and Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, vice-president of the Southern Convention, who presented the lectures on stewardship. Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., chairman of the Rural Church Committee, served as chairman for the sessions.

The following resolutions were passed by the group:

"We, the Ministers of the Southern Convention assembled at the Rural Church Institute, Franklinton Center, Bricks, N. C., January 12-14, 1954, being deeply conscious of the growing responsibility of the church to do a more effective job in Christian Evangelism and Stewardship, do reaffirm past resolutions of the conference as follows:

1. That each church make an immediate survey of its community and or parish to ascertain the names and addresses of people in the community who are not active church members and or who are not professing Christians.
2. That each church seek to bring to Christ and the church these people between now and Easter Sunday of this year, and to that end employ personal evangelism.

(Continued on page 6.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Concerning Laymen's Rally at Elon College

Dear Friends:

This is just to inform you that plans are working out in a fine manner for our Laymen's Fellowship Mid-Winter Rally which will be held at Elon College on Sunday, February 14, beginning at two o'clock.

We have secured two outstanding speakers that we are sure you and the other men of your church will listen to with pleasure and interest. Dr. Elden H. Mills of Hartford, Conn. will speak at the afternoon session; and Dr. O. W. S. McCall, who is now serving as pastor at Southern Pines will bring the message at the banquet.

The banquet will be held at 6:00 o'clock and will cost $1.50 per plate. The college will really be working under a great handicap in order to serve us a banquet on Sunday, so it is only right that we should notify them in advance the number dinners we will need. Therefore we're asking that the pastor or the Laymen's representative notify Mr. Earl Danieley by Tuesday, February 9.

Can we count on you to see that we have a large group of laymen present for this important occasion at Elon College on Sunday, February 14.

Yours very sincerely,

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

* * * * *

The Laymen of Concord Organize

On January 17, a group of laymen and their paastor, Rev. Thomas D. Sutton, of the Concord Congregational Christian Church meet at 3:00 p. m. and organized a Laymen's Fellowship with twelve members.

Mr. W. Burch Simpson was elected president and Mr. W. R. Simmons, vice-president, and Mr. Vernon Durham was elected secretary and treasurer, with Mr. Ben Terrel as his assistant.

It was decided by the group to meet each third Sunday Evening at 7:00 p. m., and for their first project they plan to raise funds to help erect a building at Moonelon.

Pledge Cards were passed out, signed and returned, which showed pledges to the amount of $56.00 and cash of $10.00.

The fellowship was enjoyed by all, and there was a good deal of an optimistic spirit for the future of the group. Each member was asked to try to get new members, and also get other laymen of the church to participate in their project.

THOMAS D. SUTTON.

The Menace of the First Drink

1. Temperance magazines devote a great amount of space to the results from drinking liquor. Articles are written on "Moderation Is Harmful," "Alcohol Is Habit-Forming," and "The Menace of Moderation." The greatest menace to the abstainer is the first drink!

2. Essential Knowledge. The action of alcohol chemically, as with all chemicals, is always the same. Consequentially we have had for thousands of years, recorded in the Bible and elsewhere, all the essential knowledge of alcohol's deadly effect on the brain. Science of Alcohol Studies has not, and indeed cannot change this knowledge; and science only strengthened this knowledge when it proved that alcohol was not a stimulant.

3. Delusion. The narcotic effect of drinking alcohol always causes a drinker evil, and frequently causes the drinker to commit reprehensible acts during an episode.

But it is the delusion (which is the result of the first drink affecting the judgement), plus desire, that

(Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. Hense; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colelough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun

() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

A Rural Church Institute and the Urban Church

The bald statement that attendance at a Rural Church Institute awakened a concern for the Urban Church in the mind of the writer could be misinterpreted. But precisely that took place.

The figures presented to the Rural Church Institute of the Southern Convention by Dr. W. T. Scott were adequately and informatively descriptive of the situation within the bounds of our convention. Of the two hundred churches in the convention, one hundred and sixty-two are located either in the open country or in towns and villages having a population of two thousand five hundred or less. That means there are thirty-eight of our churches that can be termed urban. Of the 34,893 church members in the convention, 12,455 belong to these thirty-eight churches.

The concern for the urban churches is not due to any thought they are weak in membership, finances and program. Rather, the concern is that we do not have more churches in our larger towns and cities. Because the figures are not available, one cannot state with absolute certainty the number of people who have left the rural areas to move to the city and at the same time left one of our Congregational Christian churches, but the figure probably is large. One can only guess the number who joined churches of other denominations. On a percentage basis, would 75% be too high?

Unless we increase the number of churches in the urban centers of population, we will continue to lose church members we should retain. More than likely the higher percentage of these consists of young people, which means the loss is sustained from the reservoir of potential future leadership.

The possibility that the present tentative shifts of our population from the city to suburban and rural and semi-rural areas will continue and increase does not particularly relieve the situation. Persons moving out of the cities are far more likely to be members of another denomination. Other denominations are just as strong or stronger than we are in the rural areas. Under the present situation, we stand to lose rather than gain no matter which way the population moves.

Moral: We must start new churches in urban centers!

JAS. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Jr.

When Churches Elect Officers

Church officers share with the pastor the responsibility of leadership and direction of the work in our churches. Care must always be shown in choosing and training these men and women. It must continue to be an honor and a sacred trust to serve the Christian church in any capacity.

It is amazing, however, that such carelessness and uninspiring policies are so often followed in regard to this important matter. In many localities nothing at all is made of exercising real care in choosing nominating committees. As a result, on such committees are sometimes found people who have little insight into the life and needs of the parish and scant acquaintance with the membership. In other cases, little if anything is made of an installation or induction ceremony for the newly chosen officers. Thus to be chosen by a church does not bring the thrill that many others speak about in connection with some lodge or civic organization. But should it not always be a great privilege to serve the Church of Jesus Christ? When we elect officers, why do we not give this function the prominence and attention that it deserves?

This is not all: Many parishes have not worked out any kind of system to introduce into places of leadership and responsibility some of the newer and younger members. It is so easy to re-elect incumbent officers! There may be—and frequently are—of great loyalty and faithfulness. But every church needs to bring in “new blood” every year. It would seem that we have been quite negligent and lacking in vision concerning this matter of electing officers and committee chairmen in our churches.

Another evidence of unfortunate laxity is often found. We hear of newly chosen officers saying they were never given any details of what their duties and responsibilities would be. In the past few years, church officers in three denominations have indicated to this writer that they were given no clear idea of what their function or authority was. In still other places people are chosen year after year, for certain committees and offices; and in the memory of the oldest living member there seems to be no clear idea of why this committee or officer is supposed to function, anyway!

Have we not come to a time when we need to inquire diligently into our prevailing practices of choosing and inducting our church officers? Let us choose them carefully, modernize their functions, and give them a clear and detailed description of what they are supposed to do!

RICHARD K. MORTON.

"The World Task of the Church"

By QUENTIN LEISHER

Secretary for The American Board

WHY do we have a mission to the world?

"I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth."

We need to go no further into any creed to find our message for the world. Once we have seen the idea that God is Father of all humanity, we should become brothers to all—regardless of race or nation.

"... and in Jesus Christ his only Son."

As such Jesus becomes the revelation of God, whom we proclaim as our Lord. Bhaskar Hivale, founder of Ahmednagar College in Western India, states in a compelling manner what it means to put Christ at the center of all life:

"Ahmednagar College has village projects—yes. It teaches better farming—yes. It sponsors health work for its community—yes. But these are not the things that make Ahmednagar College important. These are only the implications of the central loyalty of the college to Jesus Christ, who is the Way, the Truth, the Life."*

WHAT is the central expression of the proclamation that Jesus is the Way, the Truth, the Life? It is the church.

In 1945, the Prudential Committee (the governing body of the American Board) reiterated the basic purpose of the board:

"We do not accept as valid a separation of the preaching of the Gospel from a program of service. The first without the second is likely to result in a lack of vital Christian living. The second without the first is devoid of the deeper things of faith and religious commitment. When we declare our policy to be church-centered, we have in mind a total community that is Christian in human relationships, with a vital church at its center . . ."

The church and all that it means impressed itself indelibly upon my mind as I stood among a group of lepers in the Philippines. My first impulse was to turn from the ghastly sight. The running sores, the missing fingers or toes, the deformed faces and bodies were repulsive. But the morale of the group was remarkably high. Here were people who had every reason to despair; and yet, they possessed an eagerness for life often lacking in the most healthy. Christian missions spoke to the needs of these people. The physical ailments of the lepers were treated. A faith was proclaimed which gave them the assurance that there was something greater than physical life; namely, spiritual life. I was glad that missionaries had lived and had taught among these lepers and that the church had been there bringing faith and hope and love to a people who desperately needed such a message.

HOW has the Christian Gospel affected mankind?

Norman Goodall writes:

"In the revolutionary mood of the masses today—whatever else may be contributing to it—there lies a conviction which belongs very closely to Christianity. It is that of the worth of the ordinary man—the peasant, the toiler, the serf—even though this ordinary man may have belonged immemorially to a subject people in a 'slave population.'"

In many lands extraordinary efforts are being made by governments to improve the conditions of life for everyone. That all peoples should have "life more abundantly" is a fundamental of the Christian message. For over a century, Christian missions have imparted this abundant life in its broadest sense; namely, through doctors, nurses, teachers, as well as ministers. In contrast to the needs of the world, the program of the church may be but "a drop in the bucket"; but even that "drop" gives the world the assurance that Christians have a concern for human needs.

An example of how Christian missions help to meet human needs comes from Angola where there is only one doctor for every 30,000 people (compared to one for every 750 in the United States). Writes Dr. Sidney Gilchrist:

"Training leaders is hard work, and I pushed the mind and body pretty hard some months during this past year, trying to 'work in' classes in rural health and sanitation along with everything else. But it was worth it all to sit back and watch one of my pupils stand up and really teach health fundamentals to the village people. . . . There's no time to tell of all that was attempted: the cultivation and use of soy beans; terracing to combat soil erosion; anti-mosquito measures; the use of insecticides; earth-auger sanitation; family life built on a Living Gospel for everyday; the teaching of reading to illiterates by the Laubach system. . . ."

The extensive program of Dr. Sidney Gilchrist illustrates well the fact that our missions are concerned with the whole of life.

WHO carries forward the task of our world mission? The work is being carried on by 350 American Board missionaries trained as Christian doctors, nurses, teachers and ministers. Working side by side with these missionaries, and in most cases in charge of the work, is a force of 10,000 trained national leaders, supported from outside the U. S. A. But to a large extent the work is as strong as you make it. Contributions from Christians within America are more than matched by funds given within the countries served by the board, and almost matched by the legacies received from former generations.

In 14 different nations served by the American Board throughout the world, our force of nationals and missionaries minister to the total person—to the mind, the body and the soul. This is The World Task of the Church.

Nine Paths to Contentment

Nine requisites for contented living are: Health enough to make work a pleasure; wealth enough to support your needs; strength to battle with difficulties and overcome them; grace enough to confess your sins and forsake them; patience enough to toil until some good is accomplished; charity enough to see some good in your neighbor; love enough to move you to be useful and helpful to others; faith enough to make real the things of God; hope enough to remove all anxious fears concerning the future. —Goethe.

*Quoted from "Keystone of Asia" (India Pamphlet), January, 1954, Missions Council, 25c.

Our Churches Report . . .

Building Fund Launched for New Church at Elon College

At a general church supper, Sunday evening, January 24, the Elon College Community Church formally launched its building fund campaign for a new church, with educational plant. Despite icy streets a large company gathered for this occasion, and a fine spirit of enthusiasm augurs for the success of the immediate campaign, which has as its goal the erection of a plant costing approximately $100,000. Final plans have not been drawn for the ultimate structure, to stand on the plot of ground on which the parsonage and parish house partially occupy, adjacent to the college campus, but it will be of colonial design, and in keeping with the architectural patterns of the college.

While the parish-wide visitation to solicit pledges will not take place until the first week of February, already some $17,000.00 has been subscribed by a limited number of parishioners. It is hoped the immediate goal of $50,000 in individual subscriptions will be met by the middle of the month. Mr. Ralph H. Oxford, of Elon College, heads the promotional committee, and Dean J. Earl Danieleley is the building fund chairman.

We believe this announcement will have interest for many people throughout the Southern Convention who have repeatedly expressed the hope of seeing, one day, a splendid church erected at the heart of our college and convention life. The building fund pledges will run over a period of five years, for those wishing to extend them over this period, but it is hoped that actual building operations may be started in a period of not less than two years. At the supper meeting aboved mentioned, Dr. H. E. Robinson, of Burlington, Rev. Walstein Snyder, President of the N. C. and Va. Conference, and Rev. Kenneth Register, of Union Church, spoke encouragingly of the proposed building project, as well as others present. It is our hope to build here a church of which all in the convention will be proud.

HOWARD P. BOZARTH,
Minister.

PROGRAM FOR SOCIAL ACTION IN THE LOCAL CHURCH.

(Continued from page 2.)

the Supreme purpose that moves at the heart of things. A vital and valid program of social action is one very good way of realizing this added dimension in life. Any member of the church can take heart and find meaning in the fact that he is part of a fellowship that is bearing this essential witness in the life of his local and total community.

Such faith and activity stimulates the total life of the church. How can you have social action without stimulating the compulsion to carry the Gospel into all of life and invigorating the church's commitment to evangelism—local and world wide! How can you have social action without broadening intellectual and emotional horizons and increasing the Christian commitment which is the role of Christian education. How can you participate in this gospel without the commitment of time, talents and substance so that the stewardship concept of life deepens and grows and life is dedicated to God's service!

We believe that the Church is the Body of Christ, and the life purpose of Christ. When any one part of that life purpose is quickened, the whole body prospers, and when any one part of that life purpose is ignored or denied the whole body suffers. Social action is a reflex of faith. It is for laymen as well as clergy. It redeems the life of the individual and the community as it quickens the entire life of the church.

PROGRAM OF RURAL CHURCH INSTITUTE.

(Continued from page 2.)

gelism, revival meetings and preaching missions, as may best suit the local situation.

3. That each church present the Scriptural teachings and injunctions concerning Stewardship—with special emphasis on tithing—through the Sunday school and the Pulpit, to the end that talent, substance and time may be dedicated to spiritual ends.

Be it further resolved:

1. That we bear witness to our Christian uplift through fellowship with our brethren of the Convention of the South.
2. That we heartily approve and commend the forward looking program for Franklinton Center at Bricks undertaken and developed by the American Missionary Association, Franklinton Christian College and the Franklinton Center.
3. That we express our appreciation to Mr. Neil McLean, Director, and to the staff of the Brick Rural Life School for the efficient and generous entertainment of our institute.
4. That we express our appreciation to Dr. Thomas A. Tripp of the Town and Country Department of the Board of Home Missions, Dr. W. C. Timmons of the Department of Evangelism of the Board of Home Missions, Dr. Selz Mayo of North Carolina State College, Rev. Hamilton Jeter, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, Dr. O. W. S. McCall and Mr. Neil McLean for their stimulating and helpful contributions to the institute, and to the Rural Church Committee, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., and Dr. W. T. Scott for their leadership in helping to arrange the institute.
5. That with our churches we make use of the Self-Evaluation Scale and the Parish Work Book produced by the Town and Country Department, being mindful of the fact that approximately 80 per cent of the churches of the Southern Convention fall within the classification of "town and country."
6. That we each resolve to be more deeply consecrated to our work as ministers that we may more effectively serve and lead in the churches to which we are called.

"Our ministries in new communities are not to Congregational people, but to PEOPLE. This is true not only in new churches but in the Congregational Christian Churches in general, the vast majority of which are composed of people representing all the major Reformation traditions, a fact which greatly enriches and enhances our fellowship."

—Stanley U. North.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College Meets

The Board of Trustees of Elon College met in Mid-Year Session on January 19, 1954. There were twenty-three members of the board present. The board was saddened by the recent losses sustained in its membership. Due recognition was taken of these distressing losses to the board, the college and the church.

The President presented his report. The following is the preamble to that report, reflecting the state of the college and plans for the future:

"Education had its roots in religion and the church. The church led the way as the first settlers of the new world groped for an intelligent way of life. The foundation of the nation, the beginning of government, the health of the people, and the continuance of the church, all depended upon a program of education, with equipment, however crude, for its administration. Private schools for children were organized, colleges for advanced training were founded. The new nation in the new world began to move.

"Today, the church, with its conviction and courage, continues its march on the highways of educational opportunities and lifts high the lamps of learning that all who walk may see, and all who will may know the way of gracious living, the abiding laws of good government, the paths of honor and honesty that lead to truth, eternal truth that was given to the world by our God through Christ our Lord.

"The church was needed in education then; it is needed even more in education now. Beginning was difficult then; continuing is difficult now. Taxation has become fashionable, if not popular. Whatever the cause, the champions of that cause, in the time of need, seem to feel licensed to turn to Washington with the hope of getting their hands in the public treasury, and to State legislatures for a double portion of money gathered through taxation. The newspapers are replete with thrilling stories relating the successes of these efforts. Buildings and budgets of our tax-supported colleges are convincing evidences of their forward strides. These institutions, of themselves, are not to be criticized, but to be congratulated. But they do make greater demands on our church colleges. These demands should inspire our denominational officials who are interested in freedom of education to more generous support of our church-related colleges. There must be no turning back or curtailment of offerings to our church-related colleges, but should be a continuous upward trend in providing equipment, faculty personnel and permanent funds. Sufficient interest and sufficient support should be given that there be no occasion for embarrassment in conquest for truth—truth on the printed page, in the conviction of the human soul, the imagination of the human mind, in the depths of God Almighty's universe and our determination to impart this truth to the ambitious youth of our time.

"Elon College accepts the challenges of our time and calls upon its constituency to give united and generous support, that its coveted achievements may be realized."

In the President's Report, it was stated that the enrollment of the college for the Winter Quarter was 705, which was twenty more students than the college enrolled in the Fall Quarter. Indications are that we shall have new students enrolling for the Spring Quarter.

Stress was placed on the Two and One-Half Million Dollar Campaign Fund. Figures revealed that $1,324,000 has been secured on the campaign since 1946, leaving a balance of $1,176,000 to be secured. Plans are in the making to reactivate the campaign with the determination to secure enough cash and pledges by June of this year to warrant the beginning of the construction of two dormitories and a dining room at the college. These facilities are needed badly, as is recognized by all. I am sure that there will be many who will rejoice and will be glad to forward contributions that work may begin at the earliest possible date.

The Fifth Sunday

In planning for the financial support of Elon College, our college, the convention has designated each fifth Sunday as College Day in our Sunday schools and churches, with the request that pastors, superintendents and churches acquaint their people with the college, its contributions to the church, and its needs.

The convention also suggested that the Sunday school's collections on these fifth Sundays be given to Elon College and be credited on conference apportionment. It so happens that the first month in the New Year has a fifth Sunday. It's a good time to start the New Year right. I trust that you may encourage your Sunday school to make a good offering and forward the same to the Convention Office for the college. Your offering, of course, will be counted on your conference apportionment, and your church will begin meeting its obligations early in the year. If every Sunday school will send its usual offering, it will be quite a sum when they all come together in the college treasury. The college is grateful for your support.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

A good beginning is prophetic of a satisfactory ending. Early contributions by our churches and Sunday schools to the conference apportionment item are indicative that the full amount shall be realized during the allotted time.

There is a satisfaction in discharging obligations in whole or in part and meeting these responsibilities. As contributions are made to the apportionment fund, the college is not only encouraged but benefited. The budget of the college is so arranged that its financial obligations are distributed quite evenly month by month throughout the entire year. Churches and Sunday schools should realize that their contributions help to meet these responsibilities, or the lack of their contributions increases the burdens of the college itself. Assistance from our churches and Sunday schools is not only solicited, but is sincerely and greatly appreciated.

Previously Reported:	$ 124.83
Virginia Valley Conference:
Berea (Norfolk)	$ 42.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Shallow Ford	$ 20.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (G)	$ 78.50
	78.50
Total to date	$ 203.33

Missions at Home and Abroad

Dr. Henry Smith Leiper Reports to Missions Council Midwinter Meeting in Cleveland*

"I have no doubt that Christianity has the answers to the world's needs. But unless these answers are delivered in person on the spot where the Communists are raising false hopes of other kinds of answers, they, and not Christ's followers, make the converts," said Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, who is the executive secretary of the Missions Council, reporting to its Midwinter Meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, last Tuesday.

The answer to this problem is not "merely to assume that all we need to do is to oppose Communism and make a religion out of our negativism," pointed out Dr. Leiper. He says that it is absurd "to think that missions can ever be the same as they were before the tremendous events which brought the Communist world mission into the field."

Contrasting the sense of dedication shown by Communist youth with the attitude of many Christians, Dr. Leiper warned: "Remember that one institution in Moscow turns out in a single year more missionaries of Communism than there are missionaries of Christ from all the churches of the lands sending missionaries anywhere overseas. Remember that the Christian people of America last year spent for commercially processed dog food more than twice what they gave for foreign missions. . . .

"Our basic problem is how to communicate to our people the meaning of Christ's gospel about a Christian and his economic potential, as well as his personal capacities for witness and service; for it is as true today as it was in Paul's day, that the gospel cannot be heard unless it is preached and it cannot be preached unless preachers are sent, and they cannot be sent unless others who cannot go give of their wealth, not their incidental spare change, to speed them on their way."

Congregational Christian Churches of the United States, said Dr. Leiper, should be commended for their increased giving in almost all categories during the past year. He pointed out that in the dozen years from 1940, through 1952, our apportionment giving went from $1,454,466 to $4,274,938, a gain of 193.9 percent. For other gifts there was a much more startling increase, as these went from $568,884 to $2,285,122, or a gain of 301.6 percent. Total giving went up for all benevolences from $2,023,350 to $6,561,433, or a gain of 224.2 percent.

Dr. Leiper, however, did not stop his report with commendations, but went on to state that the amount given is far from what should be given with the high per capita potential of the average Congregational Christian church member.

"Our Christian World Mission by its name recognizes that it has a global outlook. Do we sufficiently realize—do our Christian neighbors and fellow church members in America realize—that most of the world is poor, most of the world is hungry, most of the world is sick, and most of the world is illiterate? . . . The simple fact is that we in America are so well off that we simply cannot conceive what life is like for a majority of our contemporaries. The President reminded us the other day that our standard of living is the highest ever. It is, in fact, two and one-half times what it was in terms of comfort and conveniences (not dollars) even in 1940. America's income per person, on the average, is more than 15 times that of the rest of mankind. . . ."

While 2550 to 2650 calories of food are considered necessary for proper health for a vigorous, growing person, many nations go for long periods at the dying rate of less than 1,000 calories per day. Among the nations subsisting on less than the minimum are: Japan, Pakistan, Indo-China, India, Burma, Ceylon, Egypt, Chile, Columbia and Italy. In America, we ran almost 1000 over the 2550 to 2650 deemed necessary.

"Our number one problem," concludes Dr. Leiper, "is to get Christian folk to look sympathetically at these multitudes and learn to have the Master's compassion for them."

Louis and Joy Think Their Last Christmas Present Best of All

2918 E. Regent St.,
Berkeley, 5, Calif.,
January 15, 1954.

Dear Friends:

The arrival on January 6 of Martha Jane, weight seven pounds, headlines the news of this letter. Mother and baby have been doing fine, and are now at home and part of the family circle again. Here are more details on family reactions:

Mother thinks the event marked a sort of midpoint in our furlough year. Up to now she has been getting a taste of life as an American housewife. The climax was the experience of having a baby in an American hospital, with the satisfaction of skilled obstetrical and nursing care, and the thrill of the new "rooming-in" method. Back home on the third day, vigorous and happy, she is now looking forward to the next few months with enthusiasm, but sure that she has a full-time job cut out for her.

Louis and Joy, as indicated, think that this last Christmas present was the best of all. Their life here has been one adventure and treat after another, as they are introduced to the various good things of American life. But if they had any fear that their toys and experiences would become stale as time wears on, here is something they will never grow tired of. They are very, very proud of their "brand-new" baby, and fascinated by everything she does.

Martha takes it all philosophically enough. She wanted to prove to her parents that the hours after midnight were the nicest to be awake; but she found that her big brother and sister keep things so noisy and exciting for her during the daytime that night is the only chance she has to catch up on sleep.

Daddy got a rude shock when the blessed event occurred the week before the first-semester final exams, instead of during the one-month vacation between semesters as he had hoped. He had become so absorbed in the fascinating things he was learning in school that he was inclined to forget that public health is not necessarily all there is to life. Now, with the exciting experiences of the past few days crowding themselves into the final exam study schedule, he is deciding that family experiences are also rewarding. So he has resolved

(Continued on page 15.)

*Reported by Miss Dorothy Cushing, News Editor, Congregational Christian News Bureau.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

"Doings" at Linville

The following article came to the editor of this page in November, and should have been published promptly. However, it got in with the group of "reports on last year's activities" (some six of which we have not had room for as yet) and failed to get in print. That is the fault of your editor, and she hereby apologizes!

* * *

The Women's and Young People's Fellowship Groups of the Linville (Valley of Virginia) Church have made considerable progress during this new conference year.

Nine of our young people attended the rally in October at the Mayland Church, at which time our girls' quartette sang several numbers. We observed "Work Day for Christ" on October 24, and as a result of this project more money was turned in to our treasury than any previous year when we observed this day.

Both societies have had the Thank Offering programs with appreciation offerings. On November 10, we had the showing of "The Hidden Heart" with a worship service in charge of the young people. On November 8, the women sponsored a public service with Miss Edith Showalter, a returned missionary from Africa, as guest speaker. She showed slides and displayed many items of handwork.

The young people enjoyed a Halloween Party in the basement of the church, which was properly decorated for the occasion with orange and yellow crepe paper, pumpkin faces, colored leaves and spooky ghosts.

A joint Christmas party is planned with exchange of gifts. The societies are sending Christmas greetings to all boys of the church and community who are in the armed forces. We are collecting Ivory soap for Ryder Memorial Hospital. Last, but not least, Linville is sending a goat to Puerto Rico. Funds are now in hand to be turned over to our Conference treasurer this week.

We are really "Rejoicing in Our Task."

* * *

It certainly sounds as if they are! We shall expect to hear more from Linville as the year goes along, and we will promise that we will try to see that it is printed promptly.

* * * * *

Do You Know a Woman Minister?

"Church Women at Work," which is the caption for this page, might indicate that there are numerous ways in which women do church work. In this area we do not have a single ordained minister in our denomination. However, there are quite a number of them in the Congregational Christian Church.

Miss Dorothy Cushing, news editor for our denomination, has written to suggest that we read the autobiography of a Congregational Christian woman minister, Rev. Margaret Blair Johnstone, which is currently being published in the Woman's Home Companion. One of a series on "Living Religion," the material began in the December issue, and there are three installments. It is called "I Walk with Faith." It is very readable and will keep your attention from the very first—even though you may not agree with all she says and does!

Miss Cushing suggests that if we find the series of value and interest, we might send a word of commendation to the editors of the Woman's Home Companion, 640 Fifth Avenue, New York 19, New York.

* * * * *

Want to Take a Trip?

Our denomination is proposing to take some of its members on a variety of trips during 1954—and the "proposed" will become reality if enough indicate they are interested to make the trip worthwhile.

March 1-April 29—Around the World—Air travel—$3,900.

April 19-May 5—Eastern and Southern U. S. A.—Bus—$135 to $160.

April 20-May 3—Midwest and Southern U. S. A.—Car or bus—$135 to $155.

April 20-May 21—Hawaii, Japan, the Philippines—Air—$1,990,

July and August—Africa—Air.

June 30-August 13—India and Pakistan—Air—$2,250.

May 15-June 20—Europe and the Near East—Air and train—$1,500.

These tours are traveling seminars for men, women and young people who want to gain first-hand information about religious, economic, social and political conditions at home and abroad. They are for Christians who are eager to strengthen the bonds of friendship, and willing to share their experiences and convictions upon their return.

How fine if some of our church people who have a little money "tucked away" would pull some of it out and take one of these "Christian tours"—and then come back and tell us all about it. Of course, two of these tours will be to our area, and we will have the opportunity to play "hosts" to some of the groups.

* * * * *

World Day of Prayer Coming Ere Long

Now that January is more than half gone, it is time that preparations for World Day of Prayer are well under way. If you have no secured materials, do so at once. Make preparations for this most important service carefully and prayerfully, uniting with all groups in your area, if at all possible.

Let's make this our greatest World Day of Prayer observance!

Almost every day, we are given more and more information about our military strength, including hydrogen and atom bombs. Can we rely on military might long? "We must renew our efforts to have the nation use a far greater power—prayer power."

MRS. W. H. JOHNSON,
Chairman, Interdenom.
Cooperation, E. Va.

* * * * *

Did You Know?

That Mrs. Frank Lewis of Shelton Memorial Church is president of the Portsmouth (Va.) Council of Church Women this year? That Mrs. J. Everette Neese of Central Church is the president of the Norfolk (Va.) Council? And that Mrs. Tucker Humphries of our Reidsville, N. C. church is president of the council there? This information comes from Pattie Lee Coghill. Should there be any other names added to this list? If so, let us know about it.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Church People Can be Rude

A few weeks ago, we wrote about People Being the Rudest People and today, we sit at the typewriter to tell you, Boys and Girls, that sad as it seems, Church People are often the Rudest People.

Now take your minister. Isn't he nice? Most of them are. He is a professional man, that means he has studied in college or university, seminary or school of religion, to enter the profession of preaching. He had to graduate from college or he couldn't have gone to seminary. He has spent 12 years on his early education, four in college and three in school of religion. What does it add to? Do you get 19? He is considered to be an expert in his line of work.

But there are some church people who don't think much about that. It may be that they haven't even finished high school but they have belonged to church since the "good old days" and so they too are experts. Now they probably aren't familiar with terms like "The Locus of Original Righteousness" which their minister has studied but they still know a plenty about church. He has also studied psychology, church management, church music (more or less), church history, philosophy and theology. He is smart or he couldn't be a minister.

When your father is sick he goes to the doctor who also is a smart man with a difficult education. Does your father question the doctor's advice? Rarely ever. Or if your parents have legal troubles, they seek advice from a lawyer and they pay him to tell them what to do. But church people are often the rudest people because they forget that the ministry is a highly trained profession and they cause the minister trouble and heartache by not following his advice but giving him advice.

Then there are the rudest people who don't sing in church because "We never sing the old familiar hymns." Now there isn't anything wrong with the old hymns but the average hymnal has over 200 songs, and the average church member knows less than 50. What the person means is "They don't sing every Sunday the few old familiars I know." Something queer about the whole set-up anyway. We insist on a steady stream of new "hit songs" and would be angry if we only heard the old on TV and Radio but in church we find rude people who actually look mean and sulky and refuse to open their hymnals because they are too lazy to learn a new hymn.

We like friendly churches. In our Southland we pride ourselves on our warmth to visitors and newcomers but . . . in some churches (not yours to be sure) there are people who say rude things if a visitor (through accident) sits in their pew. They fail to speak or even to smile. Yes, church people can be the rudest people.

But boys and girls in Junior Departments can learn to know their minister, to trust him and seek his advice (remember it's free). Young minds can learn to sing new songs (even if there isn't a book) and youngsters are friendly people. Show the grownups in your church that church folk can be the niciest people.

J. J. H.

* * * * *

"We Practice"

By HELLEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

After a young mother had introduced me to her seven-year-old twins, they smiled and shook hands with me. "How do you do?" each said, with childish dignity.

"I like your firm handshake!" I commented, as my gaze traveled from one to the other of their pert cherry-red dresses admiringly.

The more aggressive of the two twinkled her appreciation, as she answered, "We practice!"

"How fine! Do you practice at school?" I asked, remembering my schoolmarm days.

"Oh, no. We practice with Grandfather!" the diffident twin spoke up, brushing back a curl.

Pride shone in both girls' happy brown eyes at the mention of "Grandfather"; he is a very famous orchestra conductor in our town.

Great musicians like their grandfather know it is by repetition that both small and grown folks become expert, that the most important key to success is diligence.

How important, then, that we begin early to help our children to see the need for stick-to-itiveness. We want them to say to themselves, "Practice can be fun!" Without a doubt, we can more quickly interest our up-and-coming blue-jeaners in anything that has a touch of gaiety.

Well do I remember a music teacher who never, really never, smiled at me. No wonder Mother, who loved music more than anything else in life, could not get her pigtailed interested in piano lessons. But when I was older and began taking voice lessons, that was different! I had a handsome, lovable teacher who had studied in Europe for seventeen years. He made me work and like it. He praised me, scolded me, charmed me. But always there was hidden laughter in his voice. I practiced as I never had before and never shall again. He made me want to do it. He dramatized the smallest thing. "Singing is mental!" he declared in his deep voice over and over again.

Yes, any kind of practice is more enjoyable and effective if the teacher uses ingenuity and imagination and reflects a spirit of loving interest.

I complimented a sunny-faced youngster on his fine personality. "Thank you!" he answered, and his gray eyes looked up at mine. "I make-believe!" Certainly, make-believe helps to make practice interesting, especially if grownups make believe, too.

There is another influence that should be stressed. Whether it is with regard to practicing gracious manners, a musical instrument, athletics, cakemaking, canning, or whatever it is, one of the best ways of encouraging the habit of practice is for adults to pay attention to whatever their children are doing. I remember my voice teacher took in everything. He paid the strictest attention to every note I sang and one memorable day he suprised me with, "My, you're looking pretty!" Everybody loves an audience, appreciation, and applause. I was no exception.

All relationships improve when parent and child or teacher and pupil draw closer together. Anything done in an attitude of togetherness brings greater dividends than does a severe, joyless, authoritarian attitude. I think you will agree that happy, relaxed application is a thou-

(Continued on page 14)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

New Group Organized in Eastern Virginia

The young people (9-12 age group) of the Windsor and Isle of Wight churches recently organized a Pilgrim Fellowship. The meetings are held once each month, preceded by a supper. The meetings have been well attended and are under the leadership of Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Clark. We hope to continue to grow.

The following officers have been elected: Frances Raye Turner, president; James Bland, vice-president; Patsy Woodward, Secretary, and Melissa Clark, treasurer.

KATHY WALLS,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Christmas Celebrated by Youth Group at Liberty (Va.)

The Liberty (Virginia) Youth Fellowship is having quite a big season. We met and elected the following officers for the coming year: Louis Wilkins, president; Bill Wilkins, vice-president; Inez Owen, secretary; Clair Wilkins, treasurer; Norma Lee Clark, reporter; Mary Francis Ragsdale, pianist. The Program Committee for three months is Dorothy Coats and Betty Lillian Blackstone.

On December 20, we held services at the church. We opened by singing "I Would Be True." Devotions were given by Phillis Fisher, Elizabeth Ann Tuck, Louis Wilkins and Norma Lee Clark. Rev. W. T. Madren then showed a film, "The Hidden Heart," which everyone enjoyed very much.

Tuesday night before Christmas, we had a party for the whole community instead of our regular Christmas program. We played games and sang Christmas carols. We were then served Christmas refreshments.

The group presented Rev. and Mrs. Madren with a blanket, and our leader, Elizabeth Perkins, with a television lamp and a pair of silver candle-holders, as our Christmas presents. We all had fun, and I think the party was enjoyed by everyone.

Later we enjoyed a tractor-trailer ride provided by Horace Fisher and driven by Sherman Stanley. In spite of the cold weather, the following went along: Louis, Bill and Clair Wilkins, Grace and Bernard McCraw, Elizabeth Perkins, Agnes Roartes, Norma Lee Clark, Mary Frances Ragsdale, Joe West, Alice Richardson, Ray Hudson, Johnny Tuck, Philip Ragsdale, Billy Ragsdale, Nell Masters and Phillis Fisher.

NORMA LEE CLARK,
Reporter.

* * * * *

The Western North Carolina Youth Rally

The fifth Sunday in January is the date for the Young People's Rally of the Western North Carolina Conference. The rally is to be held on Sunday, January 31, at the Pleasant Ridge Church. Pleasant Ridge is located a few miles south of Ramseur. Rev. Max Vestal is pastor.

The program for the rally will be centered around the new "Three Commission Plan," with resource discussion leaders in each commission. A good program and excellent leaders have been lined up, so come on out to Pleasant Ridge and be with us. Bring a picnic lunch and be prepared to stay for the night service. The host church will furnish the drink.

Registration starts at 2:45.

THOMAS MADREN,
President.

* * * * *

Eastern Carolina Youth to Meet at Liberty (Vance)

Liberty (Vance), near Epsom, N. C., will be the site where many Eastern North Carolina young people will gather on the first Sunday in March.

In a letter from President Billy Joe Willett to all of the conference young people, it was announced that this was the date and place for the rally. Miss Ione Catton of Chicago, Illinois, will be the guest speaker on the program.

Come on out to Liberty (Vance) on March 7, and let's make this a great rally.

We cannot store grace for the future, we must draw upon God's boundless supply from day to day as we need it.—Moody.

"Always a Problem"

The use of alcoholic beverages has always created a problem. From the days of primitive man on down to the present, alcohol has been a problem for many individuals and for society. It hasn't mattered whether it was bootleg or legal, the problem followed as an aftermath.

The old-time saloons and liquor stores created such a problem that the citizens of our land voted them out. During the years of repeal, bootleg liquor created a problem peculiar to that era. Then came repeal, with which we were assured the problem would vanish. But has it? Let the millions of drunks and alcoholics answer; let the families of these unfortunate victims answer; let the police in a thousand cities answer. The problem is here—and it gets larger every day. Repeal was no solution. Many serious people are now seeing this is so.

As far as one can tell, beverage alcohol will always create a problem. There is something in it that affects conduct. People do such crazy things while under its influence. And they make such crazy excuses for using it. The more of it used, the greater the problem. Let those who push the sale of it through advertising and other means be held responsible for this increase in the problem.

And it isn't something that concerns the drinker alone. He is a member of society, so society has a tremendous stake in this business. Society can legalize the sale of it but that doesn't get rid of the problem. And society hasn't discharged its full responsibility in this matter by making it legal.

Granted that prohibition created problems that were peculiar, one must also grant that the legalizing of alcohol has created other and greater problems. To clothe a thing that does what beverage alcohol does with legal sanctity isn't settling anything at all. It is only multiplying the difficulty of dealing with it.

But it's the alcohol, not the system, whether bootleg or legal, that creates the problem, and as long as we have alcohol we will have the problem it always created. To lessen the use of it is to lessen the problem. It is as simple as that.

—Norman M. Loveni.

Nothing can lift the heart of man like manhood in a fellow man.

—Herman Melville.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Christ, the Living Bread"

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 6, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall never thirst."—John 6: 35.

SCRIPTURE BACKGROUND: John 6.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Galatians 1: 15-21.

Bread.

Jesus was concerned with the physical needs of men. He knew men could not live without bread. When he saw the hungry multitudes, he fed them and satisfied their physical hunger. In doing this he was revealing the Father's compassion for the hungry people of the world, then, and now. Every individual and organization and institution engaged in giving food to hungry people anywhere and everywhere is carrying on a project that is in keeping with the will of God, and which has God's blessing upon it. One of the heartening things in a world in which there is so much brutality and bitterness caused by war, is the way in which Christian people, and for that matter, non-Christian people have shared their food with hungry multitudes. And in like manner those who have worked and who are working for better living conditions so that men may live better, are carrying on the will of God. It is not his will that any shall be hungry or ill-clothed, or ill-housed, or under-nourished.

The Bread of Life.

But even as Jesus knew that men could not live without bread, he also knew that man could not live by bread alone. There is that within man which physical food cannot satisfy. Thus it was that Jesus not only fed the bodies of men; he also fed their souls or spirits. Today's lesson is a case in point. John 6 is an account of Jesus feeding the multitude and a record of his discourse on "The Bread of Life." These two things belong together: bread for the bodies of men, bread for the spirits of men. Here is posed the vital difference between Communism and Christianity. Communism promises bread for the bodies of men, but it gives no promise of bread for the souls of men. It does not, because it cannot. Dr. Stillwell, in his recent book, "With God in Red China," writes: "Christianity is offering something that Communism does not have. It speaks to an area of life which Communism has left untouched. Social, political and economic reform are all necessary. But they are not the whole of life. After a few more years of concentration on these questions, people will be wanting a change of diet. The fundamental hunger will persist. From whence do we come? Why are we here? Whither are we going? What is the basic answer to life's agony and pain and hunger and striving? These questions Communism ignores. It says they do not matter. But life has a way of forcing us to face them. Christianity alone has the answer, an answer that makes sense." He is simply putting in another way, in terms of modern thought, what Jesus was saying when he said, "Man cannot live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Jesus, the Bread of Life.

"I am the bread of life . . . this is the bread that came down from heaven . . . I am the living bread which came down from heaven . . ." Thus did Jesus say again and again that he was the Bread of Life. His words confused and confounded his opponents and mystified even his friends. They took him literally. When he said that a man must eat his flesh and drink his blood, they thought that he meant it literally. And that did pose a problem. But Jesus did not mean for them to take it literally. He was saying that the spirit of man can live only by the things of the spirit. He embodied in himself the things of the spirit, truth and grace and spiritual life. As one received Christ, as he took Christ into his heart, as he yielded himself to Christ in trust and thus came into union with Christ, he would partake of the spirit of Christ, he would eat of the living bread and drink of the living spirit. What Christ is, what he teaches, is the true bread of life, the true food of the soul, keeping it in life, sustaining it, enabling it to do and be all that it is meant to do and to be. As men feed upon Christ, as they take time to be still and come to know him, as they have fellowship with him, they feed their souls upon the living bread which came down from heaven.

The Communion Service, of course, is the symbolic act in which Christians feel that they are partaking of the body and blood of Christ. For Protestants, the bread, or the wafer, represents the broken body, and the wine (usually unfermented grape juice) represents the blood of Christ, shed for the remission of sin. For Protestants, they are symbols, and symbols only; but for the devout Catholic, they are actually the body and the blood of Christ. When at the appointed time in the Catholic Mass, the priest at the altar tinkles a little bell and lifts up the elements of Communion, it is the faith of the Catholic that at that very instant the bread and wine on the altar are transformed into the actual body and blood of Jesus Christ. This is the unending miracle of the Mass, and we can see why, for them, it is a most significant and spiritual service. But it can be just as significant and spiritual for the Protestant, if he comes to Communion in spirit and truth. And, of course, no one is confined to partaking of the "Bread of Life" only at the Communion Service. By reading his word, by prayer, by meditation, by bringing to a service of worship, public or private, an humble heart and a contrite spirit, one can feed upon the Living Bread which came down from heaven, and which gives life unto the souls of men.

Bread or Stones?

"To whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life; and we have believed and come to know, that you are the Holy One of God." This is the question which Simon Peter asked, and the answer which he gave to his own question. The disciples did not understand fully who this Man was and the mystery of his Personality. But they had found that he was more than a man, and that his words were spirit and life. They knew that he alone could satisfy the deepest hunger of the heart. Why should they turn from him who was the Living Bread, to stones? Or why should we? It is a sad commentary on human nature, that we are content to feed our souls on stones, when we might be eating the Bread that gives life to the soul and to the world.

(Continued on page 15.)

In Memoriam

Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.

Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr., passed from this earthly life, in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Carlyle Campbell, in Raleigh, N. C., on Sunday morning, January 17, at four o'clock; and thus came to an end, in one way, a long and full and rich life. Had he lived less than a month more, he would have celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday anniversary. But Dr. Newman will be remembered not so much for the length of his life as for the quality of it. Because of his integrity of character, and his spirit of service and sacrifice, he was held in high regard and warm esteem by a great multitude which no man can number. He was, in the finest sense, a man of God.

Dr. Newman was born in Nansemond County, not far from Oakland Christian Church, on February 13, 1868. He was educated in the Suffolk Collegiate Institute, Graham Normal College, and Elon College, graduating from Elon College with magna cum laude honors. He later took graduate work at the University of North Carolina and at Chicago and Columbia Universities. He was ordained to the ministry in the Franklin Christian Church, November 15, 1892. In addition to serving several churches in Eastern Virginia, he was college pastor at Defiance College in Ohio, and at Elon College in North Carolina. He served on many boards and committees in the Eastern Virginia Conference and the Southern Convention, and held many offices in the denomination. In 1913, he helped to organize the first Woman's Board in the Eastern Virginia Conference. He served his church widely and well through all the years.

When he retired from the active ministry several years ago, he came back to his old home community to spend his sunset days. He made his home at "the old home place" just across the Nansemond County line, in Isle of Wight. He did a great deal of visiting in the community, and was called upon quite often to preach and to serve as ad interim pastor. Even though these were the "sunset years" of his life, they were touched with a golden glow and glory. He told the writer more than once that he never dreamed that his latter days would be so happy and so rich and so rewarding.

Three children, N. G. Newman, Jr., Mrs. Carlyle Campbell, and Mrs. W. H. Baker; two sisters, Mrs. L. W. Stagg and Mrs. W. C. Wicker; three grandchildren, and several neices and nephews, survive Dr. Newman. Mrs. Newman, the former Kate E. Clendenin, to whom he was married on October 26, 1891, died in 1940.

Funeral services were held in the Oakland Church on Tuesday, January 19, 1954, at 2:00 o'clock. The pulpit platform and the front of the church were a mass of lovely floral designs. Both the main sanctuary and the Sunday school assembly room were completely filled with people. Special reservations were made for the Newman Bible Class, the honorary pall bearers, and the members of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association. Dr. I. W. Johnson, a life-long friend and fellow-minister, and the writer of this article, conducted the simple service. Mrs. Max Gilliam, the church organist, furnished a lovely musical background for the service. Dr. Newman's body was laid to rest in the church cemetery on which he had bestowed so much labor and love, and which had been named in his honor, the Newman Memorial Cemetery.

As his pastor, the writer gave the following simple and sincere tribute to Dr. Newman, who had been for so long his warm friend and wise counselor:

* * *

We are not going to bury Dr. Newman this afternoon. To be sure, we are going to lay his body in the grave near the church he loved so much, and in the cemetery on which he did so much laborious and loving work, and which now bears, by official vote of the church, his name—the Newman Memorial Cemetery. But we are not going to bury Dr. Newman, we are not going to put him in that grave, we are not going to do anything at all to Dr. Newman, to the man himself, his spirit.

I do not know exactly where his spirit is, or what he is doing. But I am quite sure that he is alive, and alive forever more. I think of him as faring on in the world of the spirit, making new adventures of faith, new discoveries of truth, rejoicing in the renewal of old friendships and in the making of new ones, reveling in the fellowship of kindred minds and spirits. Strangely enough, I feel this afternoon that we are not in the presence of death, but of life! I feel that we have one more evidence of the proof of immortality and of eternal life. If death can snuff out a life, and end the spirit of a man like Dr. N. G. Newman, then the universe is a ghastly mistake, and the gospel is untrue, and God is not the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. I believe Dr. Newman lives beyond this thing we call death. And he believed he would go on living, too. Dr. John G. Trnitt and I called on him several years ago, soon after he had had a serious operation. He told us in a simple, unassuming way, that the doctor had told him that he did not know what might happen as a result of the operation. Dr. Newman said, "I told him to go ahead and operate. I told him that it didn't make any difference to me whether I work up in this world, or whether I woke up in the next world; it would be all right with me." And we knew he meant it. It was a simple, sturdy expression of his faith in immortality.

I want to give you briefly my impressions of Dr. Newman. I shall not speak of him as a family man—his family, and we know how sacred were the marriage vows to him, and how dear the family ties. Nor will I speak of him as my personal friend, a warm and wise one, for I cannot trust myself to do that here. I will, rather, speak about my impressions of him as concerning his public life:

1.—Dr. Newman as a Man—

When I think of Dr. Newman, I think of some words that Paul wrote, as recorded in 11 Corinthians 6:3-4, "Giving no offense in anything, that the ministry be not blamed; but in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God . . ." There was a man sent from God whose name was N. G. Newman, and he was a man of God. He had an unsullied reputation. No smirch was on his name, no finger of suspicion pointed at him, no slander about him, no vulgar word or act from him. He was a man of unquestioned integrity of character. His life was characterized by rugged honesty and true manhood. There was a rare combination of qualities or virtues in his character. He was dignified, but not high-hat or haughty; conservative, but not narrow; consecrated, but not fanatical; firm, but not stubborn; independent, but cooperative; devout, but not peculiar; good, but not disagreeable; critical, but not caustic; gentle, but not weak; strong in faith, but humble in spirit; sound in

(Continued on page 15)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

I have gone through the 1953 records and checked the amounts sent to us from churches in Georgia and Alabama. Georgia sent us $66.93; and Alabama has sent $272.01. These amounts are from churches that had learned of the orphanage before they were received into the State Conferences. This is greatly appreciated and shows a friendship which still lingers in their hearts for the Southern Convention and the Christian Orphanage.

Also, I checked the 1953 records to see exactly how much money came into the orphanage from persons and sources not connected with Southern Convention churches. If a man contributed a sum of money to the orphanage from his business or his personal finances and was a member of one of the churches of our Southern Convention, I did not consider him "outside" the convention. Even so, we received from sources outside our own convention a sum of $18,635.71. Therefore, from our churches and friends who are members of our churches we received $32,389.91, this amount may be broken down to be $25,301.98 accredited to apportionment and "Special Offerings," and $7,088.03 from individuals who preferred to send contributions directly to the orphanage as their personal contributions above what they had contributed through church channels.

More than I can tell you, I appreciate the cooperation, gifts, donations and contributions of every person who has helped us. It has been a real pleasure to have a share in raising this money. People have been so nice and kind to us.

Yesterday morning, the boiler in the Main Building had burst so much that it was beyond repair. It had been burned out and about ready for the junk heap for sometime it appears. There goes between $800.00 and $1,000.00. If you do not have it, why do you spend it, I am asked. Well, when 30 children are going to be without any heat in January, you have to spend it whether you have it or not. I was plenty discouraged. And I know we are doing the job here—the staff-workers, I mean—and I know there are people who are able and will help us with our needs. I have faith in God and I have faith in the folks. If we only had a backlog upon which to rely in emergencies, it would be good, but what greater backlog is there than hardwork and Christian faith? I hope the spirit which we try to carry to our task will live tomorrow in the men and women who go out from here. I believe it will.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 21, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

A friend, Towels and wash cloths.
Suffolk Christian Church, Clothing.
Cradle Roll Dept., Suffolk Christian Church, Coupons.
Mrs. W. H. Yates and Miss Gladys Yates, Suffolk, Va., Games.
Holy Neck Christian Church, Carload of hay.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 388.57
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans.)	$ 52.84
Suffolk S. S.	150.00
	202.84
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Belew Creek S. S.	$ 7.00
	7.00
Total	$ 209.84
Grand total	$ 598.41

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 1,449.72
Ladies Bible Class, Windsor (Va.) Christian Ch. $ 10.00
Smith Electric Repair Co., Burlington, N. C. .	30.00
Miss Arebella Gore, Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Lawrence S. Holt Trust Fund	150.00
Ed. M. Hicklin, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Mary Sue Brittle S. S. Class	5.00
Beamon's Incorporated, Suffolk, Va.	15.00

C. J. Strickland, Columbus, Ohio	50.00
The C. B. Dodge Co.	7.45
A friend, Raleigh, N. C. .	13.65
In Memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford	5.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	7.50
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	10.00
Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church	5.00
Special Gifts	168.80
	507.40

Grand Total $ 1,957.12

Total for the week $ 717.24

Total for the year $ 2,555.53

FOR OUR CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

sand times more worthwhile than is forced attention.

Creating the habit of happy practicing centers around human preferences and human relationships. The twins' grandfather had the answer when he made it interesting and fun to practice.

If practice causes boredom there is something wrong. This is important, Parent, Teacher, so you should find the answer, in order that boys and girls will be happy when they say, "We practice!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

Alas that we will not come to him that we might have life, and have it more abundantly!

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased)

.....
(City)

.....
(Date of Death)

.....
(Survivor to be Written)

.....
(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Christian Position Improves in Egypt

Recent reports from Egypt indicate that the disabilities suffered by the Coptic Christians are being relaxed by the Naguib regime. Perhaps the most important change for the better is that courses in the Christian religion will be offered in public schools for the Christian students, the expense (as with the teaching of Islam) to be borne by the government. These efforts to eliminate religious discrimination represent a victory for minorities in Egypt and for democratic principles. Unexplained is the fact that this new liberal spirit is being supported by President Naguib's Revolutionary Council which has very close ties with the Moslem Brotherhood.—Exchange.

A Song of Deliverance

There is a beautiful tale concerning Richard Coeur De Lion, who in one of his famous adventures during the Crusades was taken prisoner and confined within the gloomy walls of an Eastern dungeon. There was in Richard's court in England a favorite minstrel, who was wont to beguile his master's weariness with song. There was one that always cheered the king; and the faithful singer went singing this song outside the walls of many foreign prisons and fortresses, until at last one day he heard it echoed from within a dungeon and knew the voice, and cried out in ecstasy, "O Richard! O my king!" That song had floated around many prisons and had been heard within by many other prisoners, but it meant no more to them than a beautiful song by an idle wanderer; but to Richard it meant deliverance and happiness and home. So Christ may be conceived as stepping with stately tread through the world, passing the prison houses and dungeons of the earth and saying with great tenderness, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." To some who hear his words his song is but that of a poor wayfarer, but to those who know the life of God, it is joy unspeakable.—G. P. Eckman.

IN MEMORIAM.

(Continued from page 13.)

judgment, but loath to judge others; stern with himself, but lenient with others. He had a gift for history, but he had the spirit of a prophet. He was unselfish to a fault. He lived frugally that he might give liberally.

He was eager to learn. He had his face to the future. He kept the adventurous spirit to the last—in 1952 he went to California to a General Council on a bus, and in 1953 he went to Europe for an International Council. He had a remarkable memory for names and dates and places and events. He was a good man. He was one of God's finest gentlemen.

II.—Dr. Newman as a Preacher—

He was a good preacher, and in some senses a great preacher. He was faithful in his preparation, clear in his thinking, earnest in his spirit, apt in his illustrations. He preached the truth in love. When he preached a sermon, people knew what he said, and they knew that he had preached the truth in love. He was a prophet in that he spoke for God.

III.—Dr. Newman as a Pastor—

He had the shepherd heart. He loved folks, he lived close to folks, he was interested in folks, he spent a lot of time with folks. He was a faithful pastor, a good shepherd. He was wise in counsel, loving in spirit, warm in heart. And he kept inviolate all the confidences that his folks shared with him. He never betrayed the confidence of anyone who confided in him. He was a good minister of the Lord Jesus Christ.

IV.—Dr. Newman as a Churchman—

He administered the affairs of the local church efficiently, perhaps in the hard way, and at great personal effort and hard work, but he did his parish work well. But he also presented the claims of the larger fellowship of which the local church is a part. He presented the claims of this larger fellowship firmly, persistently, lovingly. And often at the price of self-sacrifice and personal loss. If it was a ease of paying the conference apportionments or paying his salary, he insisted that the church pay the conference apportionments. And early in his ministry, while serving a mission church, in spite of the fact that he lived frugally, he had to borrow money to pay for family living expenses. He was a member of various boards and committees, and he was always concerned with the larger program of the Church of Christ at home and abroad. He was a churchman and a Christian statesman. He loved Christ and his church and gave himself for it.

And now, after eighty-five, nearly eighty-six years, of faithful service, his tired old heart has stopped beating, and he has found rest from his earthly labors. His spirit has left the house in which it has lived all these four score and more years, and has moved into the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, in the Father's house of many mansions. But being dead, he yet speaketh. His words do follow him. And a great host which no man can number rises up and calls him blessed. The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord. May a double portion of the spirit of this good man, this man of God, abide in the homes and the hearts of his loved ones, and upon the church which he loved so much, and which he served so well.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

January 21, 1954.

MENACE OF FIRST DRINK.

(Continued from page 3.)

causes unnumbered drinking episodes with innumerable drinker evils, even including chronic alcoholism.

4. Menace of the First Drink. The menace of the first drink and the increasing menace of each drink thereafter were told thousands of years ago by Solomon, and recorded in Proverbs 20 verse 1 and 32:

"Wine is a mockery (deluder), strong drink is raging, and who soever is deceived thereby is not wise." (Anyone old enough to be wise is a fool to drink.) "At last it biteth like a serpent (drunkenness) and stingeth like an adder" (Chronic alcoholism and death).

4. Wisdom is Acquired. Therefore, it is the duty of the home, church and school to instill in the minds of children and youth a lifelong righteous fear of the first drink and courage to decline to take the first drink. Unless this is done, they will not be wise enough to choose between the downward path to slavery and the upward path to freedom.

Abraham Lincoln said: "Drinking liquor produces a worse slavery than the chattel slavery we fought."

—P. E. Selby.

A LETTER FROM ED RIGGS.

(Continued from page 8.)

to put more emphasis on sharing in the family's life during the next few months, and not let this important part of his job be crowded out so much by his outside work.

So we think the New Year has started out very auspiciously for us. May it be a happy one for you.

Best regards,

Ed Riggs.

Day of Prayer for Our College-- January 31, 1953

By L. E. SMITH, President

Prayer is an act of devotion; it is a petition—an earnest prayer to Almighty God by one who believes, who believes in his power and ability to answer prayer. Prayer may be offered for individuals, institutions, countries or anything whose benefit is sought by the petitioner.

Elon College—our college—has a glorious past, replete with sacrificial services rendered to individuals, to the church and to the world. As an answer to prayer, Elon College has sent out young men and young women, not only to pray themselves, but to bear witness to the effectiveness of Christian education and the good wrought in human spirits for the betterment of mankind.

Thirty-three of our active pastors in the Southern Convention in a recent meeting held at Henderson, N. C., by mutual agreement decided that Sunday, January 31, should be set aside as a Day of Prayer for our college in our churches, the churches of the Southern Convention, and thereby called upon all the pastors of our churches in the Convention on that particular day to make reference to Elon College, its needs and its program, and to call upon their people to engage in prayer for our college. The pastor, will lead in that prayer. Of course, we shall remember our college on other occasions, but the pastors thought that it would be most effective if each pastor realized that every other pastor and congregation in our Convention is offering a prayer to Almighty God for our Elon College.

There are many things about the college that we would like to be different. We would like certain improvements. Perhaps you are not in agreement with the program and procedure of the college. Even so, I am sure that you are in agreement with the fact that Elon College needs your prayers, our prayers, and certainly we all, everyone, shall be glad to pray God's blessing upon our institution, that her wrongs might be righted; that her sins might be forgiven, that her services to young people might be increased, that whatever her needs are, that God Almighty, through his grace and providence, may be pleased to guide his people that these needs may be met. It is the prayer of us all that all may offer their petition on Sunday, January 31, in the interest of Elon College.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, FEBRUARY 4, 1954

NUMBER 5

To be a True Christian is to be a Missionary

VERY CHRISTIAN to be a true Christian is to be a missionary. We may only be missionaries to our own neighborhood, but in this fast changing world, how far does that neighborhood extend. . . . Because we firmly believe that God does not show any partiality, and that the Africans, Polynesians and Indians are our brothers, we go to serve and work with them to the best of our ability. We are all laborers together with God. What we loose by leaving this country for another country in the way of our friends, family and, perhaps, better living conditions, we truly gain for Christ's sake. . . . We have no worldly goods with which to work and help others, but we do have a life to live. . . .

A Filipino friend, when asked what he thought to be the most important single contribution that a missionary in our day could make to the work of the Church of Christ in the Philippines, replied that the most important thing that any Christian from this land could do for his people would be to be in their midst as a representative of the world-wide Church of Christ.

As we go to the Philippines, we go rejoicing because of the growth of the United Church of Christ in the Philippines and its leaders. I have been assigned as a co-worker with the Filipino moderator in one of the conferences. . . . It is important that we here in America be aware of the church in other lands, how it is growing and advancing, for we are so interdependent one upon the other. . . .

We must not deceive ourselves that we go representing a Christian nation to the un-Christian world, but as Christians representing the Church of Christ. We go from one un-Christian nation to another. . . . Actually, there is only one way, Christ's way, but our task and opportunity is to discern Christ's way, but most important is this, that we are all bound together in this common task, Filipino, African, Japanese, American, and together we seek the answers to the problems before us.

The mission enterprise is not a one-way street from us to them, but a complex system of highways and byways, with three main points of reference, God, ourselves and others. . . .

—A statement made at the American Board session of the Missions Council, by Lloyd G. and Masie D. Van Vactor, young Congregational Christian educators, who will soon sail for work in the Philippine Islands under the American Board.

News Flashes

We regret deeply the cause, but it looks good to see Dr. I. W. Johnson's signature again in THE SUN.

We offer our congratulations to Mrs. W. B. Williams upon her election to the office of vice-president of the National Council of Church Women of our denomination. It is really an out-standing honor, and we know of no one who can wear it more fittingly.

Newport News Church began a Family Life Study last Sunday night using the Trueblood's book "Recovery of Family Life." Mrs. Robert Lee House reviewed the first chapter which was followed by discussion led by the minister, the Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr.

Mrs. Kernodle accompanied your managing editor to Burlington this week, and we were recipients of the gracious hospitality of Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith on Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Other guests were Mrs. W. V. Leathers of Suffolk and Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein and Mrs. Helfenstein are spending the month of February at Ormand Beech, Florida. Dr. Helfenstein has been unwell for several weeks and has gone to Florida upon advice of his physician. The Richmond Church pulpit will be filled by his assistant, Mr. Robert H. Fernandez, and supplies.

Dr. Warren H. Denison has been working in our Illinois and Florida churches since the first of the year. He is now at Avon Park, Florida. In a personal letter to the managing editor, he writes: "I note the passing of three of our outstanding workers whom I appreciated very much: Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, Dr. N. G. Newman and Roy A. Larriek. What Christian characters, what church workers they all were! What an inspiration they all were to those who knew them and who worked by their sides." We are always glad to hear from Dr. Denison. He, too, is an inspiration to those who know him and who have been fortunate enough to have worked with him.

A large group of ministers met in Burlington on the morning of Tuesday, February 2, in answer to the call of the Executive Committee of the Executive Board of the Southern Convention. Time was given for the consideration of numerous problems as well as opportunities and challenges which confront the convention. The meeting extended into the afternoon, a delightful luncheon being served by the ladies of the Burlington First Church where the meeting was held. The Executive Board held a supper meeting at the Alamance Hotel, beginning at 6:30 o'clock and continuing until past 10 that evening. Several sub-committees carried on further work on Wednesday morning.

Dr. R. C. Helfenstein Invited to be Guest Speaker in the Armed Forces Speaking Mission

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, pastor of our church in Richmond, received an urgent invitation the past week from The National Council of Churches Department of Evangelism to be a guest speaker in the Armed Forces Preaching Mission to be held at the U. S. Naval Air Station, Naval Base, Norfolk, Va. from March 7 to 12 inclusive. Sixty such Missions are being held by the National Council Joint Department of Evangelism during the first three months of the year at Military Bases throughout the nation. Dr. Helfenstein regrets that his previous commitments make it impossible for him to accept this urgent invitation. In previous years he has been guest speaker at numerous Missions of the Federal Council of Churches in the principal cities from coast to coast, and believes that The United Preaching Missions offer the denominations their largest opportunity in Evangelism for the present day. He has been guest speaker for the Federal Council of Churches Department of Evangelism at Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., Pittsburg, Altoona, Utica, Syracuse, Chicago, Denver, Minneapolis, Fargo, N. D., Spokane, Seattle, Portland, Sacramento, Los Angeles, Fresno, Whittier, and numerous other cities and most heartily believes in the larger service The National Council is rendering the nation in its even larger schedule of United Preaching Missions as directed by the Evangelism Department Executive Secretary, Dr. Jesse M. Bader.

The North Carolina Council of Churches in Annual Session

The North Carolina Council of Churches met in annual session at the First Presbyterian Church in Durham, N. C., Tuesday and Wednesday, January 26 and 27, 1954. The first day's sessions were meetings of the Executive Committee and of the United Church Women.

There was an optimistic note sounded in the Executive Committee. The Executive Director, Morton Kurtz, brought to our attention the revised organization. Five Commissions with eighteen subcommittees were activated to replace the previous eleven unrelated, and often dormant, commissions. These five new commissions had met and had arranged far-reaching programs for the council.

Another excellent note was that of finance. Receipts increased during the year from $16,883 to $18,200. Most of the increase came from larger contributions of several denominations. Congregational Christian Conferences in North Carolina should take note and advance their giving to the council.

The program of the council during the year was far-reaching. The council now ministers to forty-one camps of migrant workers. Through CROP, the council gathered clothing in six collection centers throughout the state and gave to the needy overseas more than 150,000 pounds of clothing.

Dr. Harold Case, president of Boston University, delivered the opening address on Tuesday night. He challenged Christians to ecumenical thinking and working.

Wednesday morning session of the council was spent in the presentation of commission reports. The report of the committee on ministry in institutions recommended that an attempt be made to reach more institutions such as the prison camps, and that the council work with local ministerial associations in order to supply a certain amount of aid to as many institutions as possible.

Workshops in Family Life, in Church recreation, in radio and television, in leadership training and in other departments of the council's work will be held during the coming year.

The committee on National and World Affairs, R. L. Jackson of Chapel Hill, chairman, was charged with the responsibility of notifying

(Continued on page 13.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Send Reservations Now!

Many of the men in the Southern Convention are making their plans now to attend the Rally, February 14 at Elon College. This is to be a very interesting meeting and it is hoped that men will be present from every church in the Southern Convention. Send in your reservations now to J. E. Danieley at Elon College if you expect to attend the dinner in the evening. An interesting program has been planned and we will expect to see you.

J. E. DANIELEY.

* * * * *

The Congregational Christian Layman and His God

PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY.

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "Holy, Holy, Holy," ; "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE: Genesis 1, 1-31.

PRAYER: O thou God of the past, present and future, speak to and through us that our heritage may be worthy of thy great sacrifice. Amen.

MEDITATION:

Every layman has his own idea of God. Congregational Christian laymen are privileged to both picture and worship God according to the dictates of their own hearts, without pressure for a stereotype super being from anyone.

1. Most men would agree that their God is a God of love. True there seems to be a lot of room for more love here on earth but that is perhaps the fault of us human beings rather than the God we worship. God's love is universal and can be made manifest wherever men make it possible.

2. A majority of men would admit that their God is a just God. While the sun and rain both shine and fall on the good and bad alike, there are certain God made laws that man can not ignore and live. Man does not break God's laws, he breaks himself upon those laws.

3. God was, is and forever will be. Most men believe that God made our world and us, is ruling our universe and will always be the supreme being to all generations. True progress has always been found when man, as an individual or a group, lives close to God.

4. One line in the play "Green Pastures" suggests another attribute of our God and it was in the form of a question "Does God suffer too?" Surely God loves and cares; he must be grieved when so many people profess a love for him and then live an existence which belies that love.

5. God is also a God of all people, Jew, Protestant, Catholic and all those who belong to no one of that three groups. God is no respecter of persons and all creeds, colors, faiths and shades of grades within the three belong to his one great family.

If we may believe the sayings of Jesus, God does not love or care more for the religious than he does the non-religious. All men count; God looks not alone at what they are but what they can become.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION:

- How does man's idea of God change?
- When is God most real to man?
- What can man do to better understand God?
- Why does man seek God more often when he is in trouble?
- Why does God not deal more directly in the affairs of man?

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

- The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
- The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle

Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

The Church--the Sum Total

How easy it is for us to get the wrong impression of what the church is. How easy it is for our own church to fail or at least become ineffective, because we assume that it is something other than what it is. Many people have a way of assuming that the church is a distinctive entity which can and does act within itself apart from its human components. But this is not the case at all. The church is not a building which has personality and the ability to act within itself apart from the group of people who compose it. It is not an individual force free to act or not to act, such as you and I, who are individual entities able at will to perform an action, declare an opinion, or express an idea.

No the church is not a distinctive entity by itself. The church is rather the sum total of the faith, the devotion and the Christian personal and social actions of those who make up the body of the church, that is the membership of the church. For example, if a church is strong in its zeal and loyalty to the worship of God, it is because the members of that church are zealous and loyal in the worship of God. Or, if a church is known as a strong supporter of missions or of social reform, it is because its members are devoted to these things.

The effectiveness and the success of any given church is a devoted pooling of the faith, devotion and zeal of its members. The force and effectiveness of any church is no more or less than the force and effectiveness of the faith and devotion of its members.

In the final analysis, the church is the assembly of Christian believers. That is what we call in our concept, "The gathered church." The church is not the clergy, or the group of church officers, but it is the gathered group of Christian believers.

No, the church is not an entity within itself, apart from its human components. The church is the sum total of the faith, the devotion, and the zeal of its members. It is nothing more or less than that. Your church is just what you are!

W. MILLARD STEVENS.

The Holy Spirit

Most Christians have more or less definite beliefs about God. Their beliefs may not be very coherent, they may have difficulty in expressing them in words, but their convictions do influence their thoughts and conduct.

When it comes to their knowledge and beliefs about Jesus, they are better informed. They know the main facts which the Gospels record about Jesus. They can name his outstanding miracles and can recount his better known parables. Jesus seems much closer to life as they live it than does God.

The third person of the Trinity, the Holy Spirit, is almost a complete stranger to average Christians. The very name itself seems vague, indefinite and unrelated to everyday life. Reading the Bible, they have not grasped the meaning of its record: the accomplishment of God's purposes, through the Spirit, in his time. Having never had specific teaching in the things of the Spirit, consequently their efforts to live the good life are pointless and random.

Many Christians feel as Mrs. Jemima Luke did when she wrote the hymn, "The Sweet Story of Old." This is the first stanza of her hymn: "I think when I read the sweet story of old, When Jesus was here among men, How he called little children as lambs to his fold, I should like to have been with him then." Presumably they think it impossible to be so unmistakably with him now. They are wrong.

It has never been the plan of God that those who follow Jesus yearn unsatisfied for the presence, power and peace of his Blessed Son. From the beginning it has been ordained that the children of God should be free to live their lives through the guidance and power of his Spirit. Throughout the Old Testament we encounter men and women to whom God spoke. They received the promise of God that he would go with them in the doing of the task to which he called them. They hesitated perhaps, they faltered when they saw the scope of their duty. They seemed often to fail, but with God's help they triumphed.

So when Jesus began his public ministry, he warned the world that the words which he spoke were the words of God, and that the works which he did were not his works, but the works of the Father who had sent him. Then before Jesus returned to the Father, he promised his friends that they would never be alone: that when he was gone, the Holy Spirit would come into their lives, to perform all that he had done, and more than he had done. To this day, and forever, God has not left us. Through the presence of the Holy Spirit, he establishes his order in our lives and in his world.

STANLEY C. HARRELL.

The Challenge of the Church to Laymen

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D.D.
Pastor of First Church, Richmond, Virginia

The church today is calling for men of courage to engage in a greater spiritual adventure than they have ever yet known. Never was God's need of consecrated laymen greater than it is today. Time was when the imperative need of the Kingdom was for men who would preach, but now the need is for men who will do. The need now is not more information but more expression—men who will express to a needy world the principles of Jesus Christ in terms of personal and social life.

The church today challenges every layman to put Christ first in his thoughts and in his life. If our communities are to be won for Christ, it will not be by the preaching of the ministers, but by the witnessing of the laymen. The laymen of our day are challenged by the church to speak to their associates in business, in lodge, in social contacts, and wherever they may meet—to speak to them about their Christ.

Why should any man be backward about witnessing for Christ? Men do not hesitate to make known their appreciation of their military or political heroes—why then should they be reluctant or hesitant in making known their appreciation of their Saviour and Lord?

Certain lay scholars are declaring that the world will either be lost from Christ or won for Christ during the next few years. Every layman of the church should resolve that by the help of God he will do his part to the end that the world shall be won for Christ. The lessons of war-torn Europe and of devastated Korea, where Christ has been crowded out, should be all the challenge laymen of America should require to be spurred to action.

It is time for men who still enjoy the rights of democracy to become aware of the peril that faces any life or any country that ignores Christ. It is time for the laymen of the churches to realize that the greatest privilege they will ever have is to recommend Christ to their fellows. It should be easy for laymen to talk to the men outside the church about their duty to serve God, since they too live in God's world. Christian laymen should enlist their partners in business or professional life as partners with God in the work of the Kingdom.

The church is entering into a new day because of this new and larger concern of laymen in witnessing for Christ and in seeking to enlist their friends in the work of the church. Of course, there are plenty of critics, but even the critics inspire doers to do more.

The church of America is concerned about democracy, and to save democracy the men of America must be brought on to the side of God in the conflict against the "isms" that are threatening the very existence of a democratic society!

The church offers red-blooded men the greatest opportunity for unselfish service that the world has to give. Laymen who want a man-sized job can find it in the church. To be faithful in attendance at divine worship; to be faithful in supporting one's church; to be faithful in witnessing, is a challenge to the best that any man has to give. In time of war men give their lives for their country. The church offers men the opportunity to give their lives for their country in time of peace.

An American boy who went to France during the last World War wrote back to his father: "I have found Christ here in the trenches. I have come to realize that having given my life to my country, I cannot take it back—so if I live to come back home, I am going to get into the church and serve my country through it." There is no place for self-satisfaction, selfishness and cowardliness in the life of a man who takes Christ seriously! The self-satisfied attitude, selfishness and cowardliness soon have to give way when a man unites sincerely with the church of the courageous Christ.

Men who take their religion seriously, accept their discipleship with the determination to be good stewards of Christ Jesus. They realize that their life is a trust from God, and they wish to use their talents and influence and minds and their resources for God.

The church needs laymen who will carry the message of 'a united protestantism' into groups of men everywhere—Rotary Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, American Legion Posts, Labor Unions, Conventions, Fraternities—and to every group of men they contact. There is something thrilling about hearing laymen express their convictions in the interest of "a united protestantism" upon any occasion when they are privileged to speak.

The church calls for laymen to serve the church in days of peace with the same passion they would serve their nation in time of war. And the best way for one to help his nation keep out of war is for him to engage whole-heartedly in the work of his church in presenting God's peace to the world and in bringing God's peace into the hearts of men.

A monument to Nathan Hale on the campus of Yale University has this striking testimony from the lips of that young hero: "I regret that I have but one life to give to my country." When Christian laymen will be as loyal to their church as patriotic citizens are to their country, and will say, "I regret that I have but one life to give to my God and his church"; and will give that one life whole-heartedly in service, then God's Kingdom will advance with power and with challenge.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell Honored

At the recent session of the North Carolina Council of Churches, Dr. S. C. Harrell, minister of the First Congregational Christian Church in Durham, N. C., was given a citation for distinguished service to the North Carolina Council of Churches and to the cause of ecumenical Christianity. The citation read as follows:

"The North Carolina Council of Churches proudly presents to Dr. Stanley C. Harrell this citation for distinguished service in the cause of ecumenical Christianity."

This citation was presented by Rev. Morton Kurtz, the Executive Director of the council, at the final session of the council, a luncheon meeting on January 27, 1954. In presenting the citation, Mr. Kurtz remarked that Dr. Harrell had served two terms as president of the State Council; he had just finished this meeting serving as chairman of the nominating committee; and through the years Dr. Harrell had served in one capacity or another, putting in many years of faithful service which were not always known to those outside the council family.

Our congratulations to Dr. Harrell for such distinguished service.

W. J. ANDES.

Authority in Christ

A Vesper Sermon

By REV. J. F. C. GREEN, D D., McKeesport, Pa.

"The very stone which the builders rejected has become the head of the corner. Every one who falls on that stone will be broken in pieces; but when it falls on anyone it will crush him."—Luke 20:17b-18.

The coming of Christ into the world of men was accompanied with signs of authority. He entered an old, an ancient world of faiths and religions. Across that narrow land-bridge of Palestine, flowed the traffic and the ideas of the entire ancient world. The caravans had passed his home in the north, with spices of the Indies, and with the religion of the Orient; with slaves and masters, with treasures of the Roman world, and with broken idealism of all the world of the decaying society of glorious Rome.

Jesus, the son of his people, knew the ancient, revered prophecies, he knew and observed the laws of the little nation on the West shore of the Middle Sea, through whom flowed all this thought-world of great Rome. Here was the world of mind and soul pitted against the world of law and custom and force. For only the might of Roman legions kept that little land-bridge from the destroying force of revolution. And this revolt came—in futile rising—a lifetime of man after the death of Jesus who had been sacrificed because he refused to revolt against Rome; because his kingdom was not of this world.

The Saviour of Men, who called himself the Son of God, the Promised Messiah of his own people and for all men, established the Kingdom of the Heart. He placed himself squarely against the ideas and the ideals of the world of power by force by appealing to the Power of the Spirit. He died a criminal on the cross, of a death reserved by the Romans for non-Romans, designed to be of interest and lingering torture. And those who expected the redemption of their world and people from the world of force taunted him in his dying agony. Then they made sure—as they thought—with a pierced side and a military guard at the grave that he would not "rise again the third day," as he had said. But rise again he did. "For there is nothing so powerful in the world as an idea whose hour has come," as The Word, whose hour has come. This wisdom of a conqueror, Napoleon, distilled from his own military glory and ultimate defeat, was re-

Do You Just Belong?

*Are you an active member?
The kind that would be missed?
Or are you just contented
That your name is on the list?
Do you attend the meetings
And mingle with the flock?
Or do you stay at home
And criticize and knock?
Did you ever go and visit
A member who is sick?
Or leave the work to just a few
And talk about the clique?
Come to the meetings often
And help with hand and heart;
Don't be just a member,
But take an active part.
Think this over, member,
You know right from wrong,
Are you an active member,
Or do you just belong?*

—Temple Tidings.

vealed in Christ. And it was of him that he spoke, on St. Helena, at the end, when he confessed that he and other great conquerors, Alexander, Caesar, had been able to course across the stage of history for a very little while, only to pass on into oblivion; and that, though Jesus had been dead for centuries, the loyalty of men remained as great as ever. For he was the conqueror of the hearts of men.

A great philosopher of history has said that its first lesson is that history teaches nothing. For men refuse to learn out of the eloquent and potent wisdom of the generations and the nations. Again and ever, men try to establish salvation by force. They engage upon crusades for the empty sepulchre of the Saviour and mock his spirit in the inhumanities they employ against their fellowmen. They wish to establish democracy and destroy it by using un-democratic means. They seek to draw near to the Christ but they remove themselves from his presence by devilish thoughts and doings.

Over and over again men and nations have heard the rallying-cry that they are to be aided by some apostle of freedom. And ever more false leaders turns out to be the anti-Christ. Of that Jesus spoke in prophecy as he warned the disciples who gloried in the might and majesty of the temple-building. But a generation later, by the very folly of misguided and misleading leaders, that people was broken and the glory of the temple became ashes and wreckage in the fury of a futile revolution.

It has been said that there has been a westward march, down the avenues of history of twenty-one great nations. They have shone in brilliance; they have perished in rubble and ruin, one and all. The glory that was Rome, and her one-thousand years of mastery in the Mediterranean world; the incomparable beauty and glory of Egypt; the brief, and glorious but inhuman empires of Assyria and Persia; the meteoric brilliance of Alexander; the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation; the less than four-hundred years of dominance of Britain! and now America!

At the height of the glory of Britain the Poet Laureate was asked to write a fitting poem for the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria. Possessed by true poetic vision, Kipling was unable to produce a rapid laudation of Empire or the Queen; instead he wrote the vision of destiny, in "Lest We Forget."

Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget.

Far called, our navies melt away, On dune and headland sinks the fire; Lo, all our pomp of yesterday is one with Niniveh and Tyre; Judge of the Nations, spare us yet, Lest we forget; lest we forget.

To every disciple speaks the Master of Authority, "Follow me." The authority of the world is brought to bear by force, in law and by arms. And that world passes away, over and over again, as pass the waves of the sea. "Still stands the ancient sacrifice, a broken and contrite heart. Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet; Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Amen.

Every human mind is a great, slumbering power until awakened by a keen desire and by a definite resolution to do.—Edgar F. Roberts.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Elon College Serves the Church

Elon College is not only the one institution of higher education serving our church and the homes of our church by training ministers, Christian workers, laymen, and teachers for our Sunday schools and public schools, but it also serves as a conference and convention center for denominational officials, conferences, and schools of various types conducted in interest of the local churches, the conference and the convention.

The college provides offices and other conveniences for the superintendent, the educational director, and all necessary conveniences for the offices. The facilities of Elon College are always available to boards, organizations, and committees for their annual or more frequent gatherings. The following dates have been reserved:

February 14—Laymen's Meeting—An interesting program has been arranged for this occasion. Mr. W. B. Williams of Newport News, Virginia is Chairman. Dr. Elden Mills of Hartford, Connecticut, will be one of the speakers. Dr. O. W. McCall of Southern Pines will be another. The officials of the organization are looking for and expecting between 500 and 600 laymen. This will be a great occasion for our church.

June 13-19—Young People's Conference—Reverend James H. Lightbourne, Jr., of Holland, Virginia, is the Dean. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Educational Director of the convention, is the promoter. They are expecting at least 100 young people in attendance at this occasion.

July 13-16—School of Missions—Mrs. W. B. Williams, President of the Woman's Missionary Convention, has asked that this date be reserved. This is always an inspirational and helpful program for our church women. The attendance usually runs from 100 to 150.

Elon College is always glad to have our church people come to its campus. Their presence makes a good contribution to the school in its program. The summer conferences, of course, come at a time when our full student body is not on the campus,

Attendance at our summer school is limited. This enables us to make room for our visitors and offer to them the best that we have.

During the summer in this section of North Carolina, there was a shortage of water, occasioned by the lack of rainfall. The wells supplying the water for the college, however, did not fail. The college was able to furnish the town with water on different occasions.

Later our water pressure was low. The engineer for the college tried to find the cause. There evidently was a leak somewhere that was wasting a lot of water. The pressure was reduced more and more until it became rather serious. Finally it was discovered that the main pipe from the tank to the ground that distributed water to all sections of the campus, including the veterans' apartments, had completely rusted out and the water was going underground, following the lines of the pipes.

This six inch pipe was installed in 1904. After fifty years of use, it had rusted out. A company from Gastonia was awarded the contract for repairing the pipe and casing. The job will be completed today, Wednesday, January 27. This will restore the water pressure and make it possible for all students to be served.

Since this pipe was rendered useless, water has been pumped directly to the users and at times the college has bought water from town. The administration realizes that this has been an inconvenience to some of our students but it is a situation that could not be helped and the majority of the students understand and are cooperative. It may be that some patrons of the school have heard of this inconvenience, and this note of explanation is sent for their benefit. It is hoped that we shall not only have the understanding of all patrons of the school, but will have cooperation to better conditions on our campus. Elon College has always and shall ever do its utmost for the convenience, the satisfaction, the happiness, and the advancement of its students.

Apportionment Giving

By the time this article reaches the public, January will be gone. From the standpoint of Sundays and weeks, more than one half of 1954 is behind us. January is the first month of the college period. To date, not including the fifth Sunday, of course, twelve churches and Sunday schools have sent in contributions for the college to be credited on conference apportionment. These twelve churches have contributed a total of $421.33, or an average of a little more than $35 per church. If the two hundred churches had done as well as the twelve for this period, the total would be nearly half the apportionment.

Other churches are just as good friends of the college as the ones that have contributed. Come along my good friends and join our other churches and give the college an early boost. You will be delighted and the college would be greatly benefited. If the churches would contribute regularly, our friends would be looking each week to see how much the total is rather than turning away at the meager amounts contributed for our college.

Start the New Year right and keep up the pace. The college is grateful for the church's cooperation.

Previously reported $ 205.33

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Chapel Hill $ 34.00
Liberty Vance S. S. 24.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Isle of Wight $ 75.00
New Lebanon S. S. 15.00
Oak Grove 10.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Pleasant Grove $ 30.00

Virginia Valley Conference:
Linville S. S. $ 30.00

218.00

Total to date $ 421.33

Many men pray only in time of stress, when they feel they have no other recourse. But prayer, in order to enrich the heart and soul, must become as much a part of us as breathing. It is a living prayer when we do our task to the uttermost. It is a prayer put to work when we give aid and comfort to those in affliction. It is a prayer when we think in the still watches of the night and purge our minds from all evil intentions. Prayer is not merely an act of moving the lips. It is living and loving life and those about us. We will find that prayer is the natural fulfillment of a thankful, consecrated heart.—A Church Calendar.

Missions at Home and Abroad

For the Good of the Kingdom of God and for the Good of India

Excerpts from an Address

By REV. RAMOND A. DUDLEY.*

"The time has long passed when Christians can speak with one voice through their missionaries and with another and contradictory voice through government and through business interests. Until we do all we can to correct this situation, we are unprofitable stewards of our citizenship," said Mr. Dudley, speaking before the Missions Council.

"Let us be stewards of our citizenship and use our legitimate influence as citizens for the good of the Kingdom of God and for the good of India. . . ."

Mr. Dudley stated that "We need to make an intensive effort to understand India—to understand, whether or not we approve. We need to listen to India," and he listed five factors that might help those who seek to understand India:

"1. Indians are hungry, hungrier than they were before World War II. The contrast with respect to nutrition between India and the West is probably greater than it was two decades ago. Furthermore, this disparity and availability of food is now widely known in India. A mighty conviction is growing in India that this disparity between conditions in the East and the West can be, and should be minimized.

laws, compensate large landowners

"2. Indians smart under a sting-ing injustice. The most important element in this injustice is bad distribution of land in Asia. Russia has her way of correcting this. China has taken her way. We understand that MacArthur effectively redistributed land in Japan. How is India to redistribute her land?

"There is no instance in modern times where a great nation has redistributed its land by democratic means without outside help. The Congress Party in India is trying by democratic means to change the and give land to the poor. This is difficult. Confiscation of land is high handed. Compensation is costly. Many influential members of the Congress Party are themselves landlords. Yet Nehru and the Congress Party must solve this problem. If they do not solve it, the Communists will.

"Here let it be noted that the driving force of Communism is in the relatively young, relatively rich, and relatively well educated, who see this injustice and organize pressure against it.

3. Indians prefer economic measures to military measures. India needs to use all her resources to build up her economy. She cannot afford the luxury of huge expenditures in preparation for war. Furthermore, the idea of dropping the atom bomb on innocent women and children is revolting. India resents the fact that the bomb was used on Asians. Millions of Indians are profoundly moved by the pacificism of Gandhi, which won freedom for India by peaceful means. India does not want to be drawn into war either against Russia or against America. India wants time to develop her economy.

"4. Indians abhor colonialism. India lost her freedom about the time the United States won hers. After 150 years under colonialism, she has won freedom again. She wants to remain free from colonialism and imperialism, be it political, military, economic or cultural. Hence, she is suspicious of anything that has, or may have, the taint of Western control. India says there is no place for colonialism anywhere in Asia.

"Let us remember that Nehru suffered under colonialism in jail, for thirteen years. There are emotional overtones in India's abhorrence of colonialism that sons and daughters of the American Revolution ought to be able to understand. Let us try to understand them.

"5. Indians abhor racial discrimination. India resents the action that the United States took in joining France in preventing the placing of the Tunisian question on the agenda of the Security Council a few months ago. On this subject Nehru said 'If the whole of Asia and Africa combined cannot get an object discussed in the Security Council because two or three great powers object, then the time may well come when these countries of Asia and Africa feel that they are happier in their own countries and not in the United Nations. That will be a tragic decision.'

"These five factors profoundly condition India today and explain (many good Americans will question this) her reactions which seem otherwise unaccountable to Americans."

Mr. Dudley also pointed out that the religious movements in India today must be understood. He stated:

"Some Indians revert to Orthodox Hinduism, a reactionary religious trend that has its parallel in ultra-conservative communal parties.

"Some intellectuals have cast off the old religion and have become secular. This trend is in keeping with the development of Communism.

"Some appreciate the social service that is rendered by Christian missions and are drawn to Christ, but they do not want to leave Hinduism, rather they would bring Christ into Hinduism. Some feel that this tendency to syncretism is the worst danger to Christianity in India today.

"In this fluid religious situation in India today the government of India has been very liberal. Under the new Constitution, India is a secular state, in theory, and largely in practice, open to all religions equally. There are 1,000 more missionaries in India today than there were in 1947. During the last year there has been some controversy about admitting missionaries from non-Commonwealth nations, but no American Board missionary has been refused admission or re-admission.

"In the midst of all this, seventy American Board ministers, teachers, nurses and doctors, along with ten times that number of national workers, are cooperating with many other denominations in building a church in India and Ceylon that is growing in numbers, growing in unity, and growing in capacity to function as an Indian Church. . . ."

Pointing out that there are 35,000 foreign students in our universities, Mr. Dudley urged that Americans take these students into their homes. He said: "They go back to their own countries to fill the most important positions in their lands. They weigh our Christian democracy in the balance. Too often they find it wanting. A little kindness or a little callousness can tip the scales of a life one way or the other. . . ."

*Rev. Mr. Dudley is Secretary for India and Ceylon of the American Board. He lived for 24 years in India, and made his latest administrative visit there the past year. This address was delivered before the Mid-winter Meeting of the Missions Council, meeting in Cleveland last week.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

"Williams" in the Limelight

Word has come to us from Mrs. W. E. Wisseman concerning two Mrs. Williams, both of them in our denomination, who have come into the "limelight" at the recent Mid-Winter Meetings.

The one closest home is Mrs. W. B. (Tudor) Williams, president of the Southern Convention women. She has been elected the vice-president of the National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women—a two-year term. We have known for a long time that she was "tops" and now the denomination at large realizes what a fine person we have sent to the national meetings as our representative. Congratulations, Tudor, we're proud of you!

And then Mrs. Robert G. (Mary Ann) Williams was installed as first president of the International Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women. This Mrs. Williams is from Florida, where she has been the state president of our women, and has spoken to our rallies in this area. Incidentally, long, long ago she was an extension worker for our denomination and held vacation Bible schools in churches in this area, where she is still fondly remembered by people in our Flint Hill and Sophia churches as "Mary Ann Jeffreys."

And so, hat's off to both Mrs. Williams—and best wishes in their work.

* * * * *

Food for Korea—Letter from Miss Galt

Miss Edith J. Galt, sister of Ralph Galt of our Valley Conference, daughter of missionary parents to China, a missionary nurse there and now a nurse in Korea is pictured and written up in a printed folder called "Report from Korea" from the Congregational Christian Service Committee which has been distributed to our churches. If your society has not seen these interesting and up-to-date folders, write for as many free copies as you desire to the Service Committee, 110 East 29th St., New York 16, N. Y.

An interesting letter from Miss

Galt to Mrs. Brittle has come to us through Miss Coghill. Below are excerpts from it:

"If you could see with your own eyes the gratitude of the individuals or institutions which are helped, you would not need me as go-between to convey thanks. Yesterday I gave some CARE food to a mother discharged from our hospital so that she and her family would have something to eat when she got home. She broke down in tears as she thanked me.

"My work is mainly in the II Sin Woman's Hospital, established here in Pusan in the fall of 1952 by the Australian Presbyterian Mission. Our Congregational Christian Churches have not had mission work here in Korea in the past, so I am affiliated with this mission and there could not be finer people with whom to work. Our hospital is doing mainly obstetrics and we are training Korean nurses in midwifery, so my work is similar to that I did in China. There is never a dull moment in the baby business, and we have frequent night calls as well as busy days.

"Thank you again for what you have done to express your felling of Christian brotherhood to those who need help at this time."

Money for CARE packages designated for the work of Miss Galt may be sent to our Congregational Christian Service Committee. This is a fine act of Friendly Service which will show immediate results in lives saved and bridges of brotherhood built.

* * * * *

Sophia Has Church Supper

The Ladies Missionary Society of Sophia Congregational Church recently had a chicken supper, with a good crowd. They made two-hundred dollars that was applied on the new church building fund. The building fund is coming along nicely with the fifth Sunday in January set aside for building fund Sunday and we hope to have a good sum added to it then.

MRS. MABLE STALEY,
Reporter.

Treasurer's Report

The following is the Quarterly Report of the Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

RECEIPTS.

N. C. Conference:

Women	$3,832.89
Juniors	37.42
Cradle Rolls	19.89
		$3,890.20

Virginia Valley Conference:

Women	$ 461.37
Young People	21.00
Juniors	5.00
Cradle Rolls	14.00
		$ 501.37

Eastern Va. Conference:

Women	$3,272.08
Young People	225.33
Juniors	84.45
Cradle Rolls	42.33
		$3,624.19

Total $8,015.76

DISBURSEMENTS.

Home Missions General Fund	$1,465.97
Young People's Home Missions Fund	98.07
Goats for Puerto Rico	1,092.87
Proceeds, Film, "Hidden Heart"	3.65
Ellis Island	13.00
Christian Orphanage at Elon College	12.00
World Community Day	5.50
		$2,691.06

Foreign Missions General Fund	$1,465.97
Young People's Foreign Fund	98.08
Thank Offering, Mindanao	3,616.65
Dr. Riggs	10.00
Rachanyapuram School for A. Papas	9.00
Christian World Mission	15.00
		$5,214.70

Check to George D. Colclough, Treasurer, S. C. C.	$7,905.76
Check, Mrs. Leathers, Treasurer, Life Memberships & Memorials	110.00

Total $8,015.76

MRS. W. V. LEATHERS,
Treasurer.

* * * * *

Impressions from the Meeting of the N. C. Council of Churches

On January 26 and 27 I had the privilege of attending a meeting of the North Carolina Council of Churches for the first time. Most of the time I was in the meeting of the Woman's Department, but saw and heard enough of the total work to be greatly impressed and become very enthusiastic about this great ecumenical movement.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Think of the men and women who first came to America and the book they brought with them.

Here was a people coming to a new and unknown land, knowing little of the hardships which faced them and which would send many of their number to an early grave, but knowing much about the desire for liberty of conscience.

Poor in world's goods, as they were, they yet possessed a great treasure from which both they and their children would bring forth such riches of the soul as to build a singularly precious society. We call the society American democracy, and the treasure which built it the Holy Bible.

The Bible was no dead book to them. It was a living reality and it had the message for their times—as indeed it has for ours, too. They valued it so highly that they learned Hebrew in order better to understand its meaning. By 1750 Hebrew was studied at Harvard where such future leaders of American thought as Ezra Stiles and Cotton Mather pondered long and lovingly over the ideals set forth in the Holy Scriptures. One day they were going to proclaim them as the inspiration of the gradually forming American nation.

The legal codes which our fathers adopted to govern their early communities were profoundly influenced by what the Bible said about human relations. The Mayflower Compact of 1620 was based almost literally on the Old Testament. The New Haven Code of 1639 drew at least half of its provisions from the same source.

Thus the pattern for American life was formed. Justice, fair-dealing, love of one's neighbor, liberty of conscience, equal rights—these were the ideals which our fathers held before them. They were the ideals of the Bible—their great living reality.

Later they were to be translated in terms of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. And when the Liberty Bell was rung, inscribed on it were the words of Leviticus, "Proclaim liberty throughout the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." It was the message of the Bible to America, and to all the world. The living book for every generation! The living book for this age.

February is the birth month of two great Americans and reminds us of our heritage and our future.

* * * * *

"It is Fun!"

By IRMA DOVEY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"It was fun to learn how butter is made from cream," said John, as he put his shiny clean jar on the table beside the cups and spoons. He was just home from his summer kindergarten class.

Of course it was fun. And the fact that butter is made from cream is something he will never forget. How could he fail to remember sloshing the cream up and down in the jar, or the excitement of hearing and saying, "It's coming butter; it's coming butter!"

How can we fail to remember the important rule of learning that was here exemplified? It can work so readily for us at home, and yet we often let it work against us. The learner must enjoy doing things, and, if the "doing" is tiresome or difficult he will enjoy it only if he gets a little praise.

If Tom has come to dislike being careful regarding his table manners, is it, quite likely, because of a nagging parent who corrects him too constantly? Perhaps he seems always to be hearing: "Sit up straight." "Don't talk while you eat." "Oh, Tom, such a looking plate!" "Doing" is an unhappy experience in such a case, so there is no "learning," and good manners while eating are a lost cause.

Does Susan dread introductions because of her embarrassment the first time she was presented to Mrs. Smith and she could think of no word to say? She had been thrust into a new situation with no warning, and it may be that she received only condemnation afterward: "What do you suppose Mrs. Smith thought? You just looked at her with your mouth wide open!"

Learning about caterpillars and snakes is fun for the small child. Certainly he has to have cooperation from Mother and Dad. Probably his pets are not allowed to live in the dining room, but Dad helps him build a suitable house and perhaps Mother is not too squeamish to let "the most wonderful wooly bear" slide fuzzily across her palm.

It is fun to learn to sew, and the stitches are neater and straighter in proportion to the praise received. It is no fun if the thread is old and tangled, or if the cloth is worn and ugly in pattern. It is delightful when Mother provides attractive materials, and knows when to step in and help with a stitch and when to keep "hands off." Sewing goes slowly, ever so slowly, when it is a chore that must be done.

We do fairly well letting children set the table, even when they get knives and forks scattered about aimlessly. We let them bake cookies when they ask to do so, for we know that discouragement at this point is almost a sure way of causing a dislike for cooking. There are many other tasks that are just as much fun and through which children will learn by doing.

Helping to wash the family car can be fun. Father might prefer to do it by himself, eliminating the danger of scratches, and getting it done sooner than when Johnny turns the hose on the spot which he has just finished polishing. But here is something to share, and "It's fun doing things" together.

Why do so many adults like bowling or canning or being on committees? It is, no doubt, because they get right in and do what has to be done. Without this urge, there would be some danger of our people becoming a nation of mere spectators. We watch other people doing things in the movies, on television, and in sports. As much as possible, let us encourage the children to be active participants, not just watchers. Whether it is building a rabbit cage, sandpapering the new bookshelves, or designing and sewing dolls' or puppets' clothes, it is through doing and even through making mistakes that they learn. We have here more than a dull pedagogical statement; It is an educational principal upon which you may always depend.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

If you haven't ordered your Lenten Devotions, you should do so at once.

The part the young people in the church life should not end with Youth Week but they could be of active service all year around.

Youth Week is in process, but it isn't too late to do something about it in your own church on Sunday. The youth can take an active part in the worship service, filling in where needed or replacing others. Young People, here is the chance to show your colors. I heard of one church where every position from usher to the minister was being replaced by youth for the entire week. Let's use this as an example for our own group this week.

* * * * *

Book of Programs Ready for Distribution

"Crossroad Decisions" by Henry R. Rust, new book of Young People's Programs, is now ready for distribution. It is a new booklet of helpful and worthwhile discussion material. Two or more alternate plans are offered for the presentation of each program. Topics included are as follows:

A Picture of Us.
What Is High School For?
21,000 Jobs! Which One for Me?
Jesus' Teachings About the Kingdom of God.
Jesus' Teachings About Others.
Jesus' Teachings About Ourselves.
Would I Date Me?
Easter Plans.
I Want My Rights! . . . For Everyone.
Religious Liberty in the U. S.
Bringing Up Parents.
I Don't Have Time.
What Do Missions Do?
"Kids" and Grownups.
Should I Go to College?

Rev. Henry R. Rust is our National Young People's Secretary. This is Youth Fellowship Programs, No. 4. The three first booklets have been published and used by many of our groups during the last two years.

No. 1. "Everyday Christians" by Kirk M. Dewey; No. 2. "Faith in Action" by Theodore C. Schoonmaker, and, No. 3, "Living Our Religion" by Oswell R. Warford. Each of these booklets costs $1.00 and may be ordered from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts.

* * * * *

Young Adult Class of Lebanon Reports

The Young Adult Class of Lebanon Christian Church, Semora, N. C., which was organized two years ago has just completed another successful year.

The class met twice a month in the homes of its members. For two meetings this year, the men were hosts to the class.

The first project the class took up this year was the building of an outdoor fireplace on the church lawn. This was paid for out of the treasury. Our second project was to buy two offering plates for the church. In order to pay for these plates we held an Old Fashion Box Supper on March 17. This was a great success as we raised $200.00. The remainder of the money went toward the building fund.

On Easter Sunday morning we held a Sunrise Service in front of the church which was well attended.

In July, the class motored to Virgilina, Va., to have a picnic supper with the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Mark Andes. This was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. On August 25, we entertained the Sunday school with a weiner roast.

Since our pastor, Rev. Mark Andes, had vacation for the month of August, the Young Adult Class had charge of the third Sunday morning worship service. The theme of this service was "Prayers."

In December, we elected new officers which consists of the following:

President—Mr. Clyde Owen McSherry.
Vice-President—Mrs. Willard Brandon.
Secretary—Mrs. Carlton Scott.
Treasurer—Mr. Ezra Stowe.

Teacher—Mrs. Clyde Owen McSherry.

Assistant—Mrs. W. F. Hudson, Jr.

The devotional and program committees are combined into four groups with three people serving in each group.

On February 5, 1954, we will present a three act comedy play, "Aaron Slick From Pumpkin Creek," to secure funds to purchase pulpit furnishings for the church.

We feel that the Lord has blessed us this year. We are looking forward to another year of good service under the leadership of our new pastor, Rev. B. A. Leebrick.

MRS. MAYNARD WELLS.

Semora, N. C.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

I'm very sorry that I didn't get time to relax for the last issue. That was the week-end that it snowed and I had an exam, and I couldn't get my ear out of the parking lot, and everything was just wonderful.

* * *

What did your youth group do for Youth Week? If you enjoyed taking a more active part, why not continue?

* * *

Sunday school teacher—"Who can tell me anything about Ruth?"

Johnnie—"He made sixty home runs in one season."

* * *

Two boys were so disorderly in school that their teacher ordered them to remain after hours and write their names 500 times. Some fifteen minutes later one of them burst out in anger and sorrow and between sobs said: "Tain't fair! His name's Nye and mine's Featherstone!"

* * *

Men show their characters in nothing more clearly than in what they think laughable. —Goethe.

Life is an obligation. We are obligated to the Great Executive for the privilege of helping him in his work of bettering the world. Every time I see a man going through life tearing down, through hate, rather than building up, through love, I seem to feel that he is a "seab" in God's union—a union whose constitution is the Golden Rule and whose by-laws are founded on service.—Jerome P. Fleishman.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Can This be the Christ?"

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 14, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I am the light of the world; he who follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life."—John 8:12.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 7, 8.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Colossians 1: 15-23.

The incidents in today's lesson took place at the Feast of the Tabernacles. This was a general "harvest festival" and also the anniversary of the beginning of the wanderings of the Hebrews in the wilderness. It lasted eight days, and was largely attended by Jews from near and far. As with most of the other Jewish festivals, it had a distinctive religious aspect. In keeping with his custom, Jesus went up to Jerusalem for this feast or festival. Here, as elsewhere, Jesus gives us an example.

The Waters of Life.

"On the last day, the great day of the feast, Jesus stood up and said, If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink. He who believes in me, as the scriptures say, Out of his heart shall flow rivers of living water." Previously he had said that he was the "water of life." He was saying in familiar language that in him was the satisfaction of the deepest thirsts, the deepest needs of the human heart, the deepest longings of their souls. Indeed, he was saying that without him, men really could not live. Men can get along for a long time without food. General Dean, in an article appearing in the current number of the Saturday Evening Post, tells how for twenty-five days the only food he had was a few berries and four shriveled Irish potatoes which he found in a field. He went that long, and he probably could have gone longer without food, but he could not have gone that long, indeed he could not have gone very long, without water. Water is essential to life. Just as water refreshes, renews, restores, nourishes, life, just so does Christ, the Water of Life, renew, restore, nourish the spirit of men. And more, he gives life to men.

"Out of his heart shall flow rivers of living water." Those who drink of Christ, those who have his spirit in their hearts, have life-giving powers within them. The words "living waters" are suggestive. It was not water caught in a cistern, a tank, but water coming from a spring, bubbling up, indeed gushing forth from the earth, living water. Every sincere Christian is a living spring of the water of life!

Division of Opinion.

"So there was a division among the people over him." Some of them felt sure he was a prophet. "This is really a prophet," they said. Others said, "This is the Christ." For a long time, in fact for centuries, the Jewish people had been looking forward to the coming of the Messiah, or the Christ, the Promised One. And when some of the people at the feast heard Jesus speak, and saw his mighty acts, they felt that, at long last, the Christ had come. But even this posed a problem for some. Did not the Scriptures say that the Christ would be descended from David, and would come from Bethlehem, the village where David was? "Is the Christ to come from Galilee?" Well, what of it? Was he not of the royal line of David? And had he not been born in Bethlehem? Had they so soon forgotten all this?

There is still a division among the people over him. There are those who see in him a good man and great man, a great teacher, a good example, a prophet, an unusual man. He is that, and nothing more. But there are those who see in him all these things, and more. They see him as the Son of God, the fulfilment of prophecy, the revelation of God, the Divine Saviour of the world. They see in him, God made manifest in the flesh, one with God. He is the Son of Man and the Son of God. He is divine and he is Deity.

The Light of the World.

"I am the light of the world, he who follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life." Here again, Jesus puts much in little. The "Light of the world." Think of the function of light! It illuminates, it cheers, it guides, it cleanses, it heals, it gives life. Jesus is to the soul of man what light is to the life of the world. In him, God shone into the darkness, and gave to us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in Jesus Christ. Jesus is the Light of the World.

And those who follow Christ will walk in the light, they will see where they are going, they will not wander in darkness, they shall see more light. In them will be the light of life.

The Witness.

The Pharisees were troubled about the witness which Jesus was bearing to himself. "You are bearing witness to yourself; your testimony is not true," they said. In reply, Jesus said that even so, there was validity to his witness. In him was truth. His works revealed divine certification. But he needed not to bear witness of himself. God his father also bore witness to him. "I bear witness to myself, and the father who sent me bears witness to me." There was the witness of two; that was all that their law required. But of course, they were not convinced. Their prejudice and their pride and their desire for place and privilege had blinded their eyes and hardened their hearts.

The Revelation—The Word Made Flesh.

"If you knew me, you would know my Father also." On more than one occasion Jesus told his hearers that those who saw him saw the Father, that he and the Father were one. He was the image of the invisible and the unseeable God. It pleased God that in him should all the fulness of the godhead dwell bodily. In Christ we see God. We have a Christlike God, and a Godlike Christ.

At long last, a young lieutenant who had been away from home for more than two years, and who had never seen his young son, now almost two years old, came back home. In an effort to help the little fellow to become acquainted in some small way, with his father whom he had never seen in the flesh, the mother used to take the boy to the mantel in the living room on which there was a fine picture of his daddy, and pointing to the picture, she would say, "Daddy, that's Daddy." Unable to meet her husband at the station on account of a bad cold, she awaited his arrival at home. When he came the Congressmen from North Carolina and the State Department in Washington of our support of the United Nations. It was urged upon the hearts of all church people to support United Nations and thus help defeat the wave of antagonism against it.

(Continued on page 15.)

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL IN ANNUAL SESSION.

(Continued from page 2.)

Oscar K. Meritt of Mount Airy attended the World Order Conference held last year in Cleveland. Out of that conference, he brought to the council the highlights and hopes of a world order based on Christian principles and life.

The Rev. Cecil A. Jarman of Wilson, N. C. was elected president, succeeding Dr. Kelsey Regen of Durham. Among those honored for their ecumenical services during the past years were: Dr. S. C. Harrell, minister of the First Congregational Christian Church of Durham; Dr. John R. Cunningham, president of Davidson College; and Mrs. R. W. Barnwell of Burlington.

This report would be incomplete without the mention of the great work of Dr. H. Shelton Smith, a member of our church in Durham, a professor at the Duke Divinity School and a friend of the council from its beginning. He, with others on his committee, has just completed a revision of the constitution of the council. Always present and ready to help, Dr. Smith has worked incessantly for the council. One of his observations set me to thinking—"Where are the Congregational Christians? They are not providing the leadership they should at these meetings." We have been there, and we were there this time, but we weren't there with power and with enthusiasm for this cooperative movement. Dr. Smith, Dr. Harrell and Carl Key have carried the burden for us in the council. Should we as a church feel the spirit of our denomination as a whole, we would be in the vanguard of the ecumenical movement, even in North Carolina and in Virginia.

W. J. ANDES.

IMPRESSIONS FROM MEETING OF N. C. COUNCIL.

(Continued from page 9.)

menical organization. I am convinced that the more we Protestants can do and say together, the sooner we can hope for a better world.

The caliber of the leadership of both the Council and the Woman's Department were of the highest. To witness their manner of presiding over the sessions, to hear and to read results of their work, was an inspiration. I am so proud that my denomination is taking such an active part in the Council work.

Not all of the highlights were from key-note speakers. There was many a smaller "dynamo" present and their zeal for their work was infectious.

A few of the meaningful quotations gleamed from the two days were these:

More uncommon men and women are needed in our churches.

Prayer—a pipeline from a person to God. Making religion the dynamo that runs our life.

What do you know about UNESCO? Never heard of it—I use Crisco.

Don't underestimate the value of an individual.

Hearsays ain't like eyesights.

Christianity may be failing to appeal to many people because we Christians profess one thing and then deny it or act another way.

The Christian Church is not against evils, it is the answer to evils.

Christian witnessing: We cannot give anyone something we do not have ourselves. Christ can take an ordinary person and make an extraordinary person who can do extraordinary things.

Communism appeals to the person who feels individually insignificant.

The church is full of lack-luster Christians who lack a philosophy to live by.

Pessimism is pagan and therefore should not be indulged in by the Christian.

There is not such a thing as "the good old days" except in the imagination of a person at least one generation removed from the situation. There has always been a maximum of problems—even more than could be handled except with the help of Almighty God.

Isolationist movement is growing—trying to get the UN out of the US and the US out of the UN.

Believe the United Nations is the organization through which we can most effectively work for peace.

I hope all of us can be alert to ways in which we can cooperate with other denominations—not just on the three special days in which the women particularly participate, but in any opportunity that presents itself or is of our own making. That may be God's assignment for us.

MRS. RUSSELL V. POWELL.

Segregation in the Public Schools

The following is a resolution adopted by the N. C. Council of Churches, January 27, 1954:

Mankind has a right to expect the Christian Church to give guidance in all the pressing social issues of our day. Indeed, the church of Christ must be sensitive to every problem that affects human personality. It must be the pioneer in every movement that would release the bodies and minds and souls of men in their struggle for freedom and the development of their full capacities.

Therefore, the church cannot sit on the sidelines as millions of Americans, as well as multiplied millions of people throughout the world, await the decision of the United Supreme Court concerning segregation in our public schools. We are fully aware that within the Christian community are honest differences of opinion regarding segregation. Some Christians hold that segregation for the time being, at least, is better for both races in the South. Others, just as honest in their beliefs, hold that the church cannot sanction any custom that separates the children of God.

No one knows, of course, what the decision of the Supreme Court will be. Nor is it the purpose of this paper to state what the decision should be. When the court speaks, we call upon all of our church people to be patient, tolerant, forbearing, to abide by the decision and to seek for a Christian solution of this, as well as every problem confronting us today. We particularly urge our people to pray, to ask God's guidance as we seek to solve this, as well as other urgent issues before us.

We have confidence in our Supreme Court, as well as other judicial bodies in our land. Our laws are just, fair, human—founded upon Christian principles. Citizens of North Carolina of all races will abide by the decision of the highest court in the land.

Furthermore, We believe in our public schools. They have proved their worth. Under our present public school system great progress has been made. Under this system every child, regardless of his economic or social condition, can get an education. It would be a tragedy if our public school system were to be impaired in any way.

But our hope for an ultimate solution of this issue does not lie in the courts or even in our schools, but in the human heart. It can come only when men and women are willing to follow the way of Christ in all of their relations. Therefore, this issue is a great challenge to the church.

(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

I feel like I would like to tell each of the fourteen churches which have helped us with their monthly offering in this week's report how very much I appreciate each monthly offering. It is a good way to enter into the program of supporting the orphanage.

It is most gratifying to see the number of memorials listed in this report. The noble lives of five persons are memorialized this week: Dr. Newman, Mrs. Bradford, Mr. Roscoe Harrell, Dr. George Chrisman, and Mr. W. H. Provost. A beautiful card was mailed to each bereft family for each gift and an appropriate acknowledgement was mailed to each contributor.

Sixteen dentists of Burlington and Graham in meeting assembled, discussed and voted unanimously to adopt a pro rata number of the children at the orphanage for the care of their teeth regularly. Two representatives called on me with cards made in duplicate with name, office address and telephone number of each of the sixteen dentist. I was requested to assign children to each dentist, list them on the duplicate cards, keep one for my records and mail the other to the respective dentist. This has been done and already some of the children have started on this new plan. In this way a dentist will have the same children right along until they complete their stay here. This is a most generous project and I cannot praise it too highly. In appreciation of their help I list their names as follows: Drs. R. W. Brannock, F. S. Caddell, L. N. Foushee, F. E. Gilliam, H. S. Long, W. G. McFarland, H. V. Murray, J. B. Newman, H. M. Patterson, H. L. Perdue, J. E. Roberts, John A. Stephens, Edwin F. Slott, Thomas Vollmer, W. W. Walker, and R. A. Wilkins.

Physicians are looking after our children, and have made no charge, just as dentists hitherto have made no charge. Our two local hospitals charge us only half the regular rate for children who must remain over night. We are very grateful to them for their invaluable services. It is something to see how our children yield themselves without complaint to treatment or examination.

And while I am writing of the above services so generously rendered I wish to tell you how much I appreciate the patience and attention given the children of the orphanage by the teachers of the public school here. Dr. James W. Hill, the principal, has a son of pre-school age, and his wife is able to be a wise counselor as well as home-maker because she is herself well trained for, and deeply interested in, public school work. They are faithful to the church and community, and are devoted to the school. But the long hours of patient, sometimes perplexing service, is rendered by the classroom teachers who take an interest in the orphanage children and try to do well by them.

Children at the orphanage have good care, and I believe the churches of the Southern Convention are benefited in having the privilege of rendering it possible for homeless children to have a chance in the world.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JANUARY 28, 1954.

Commodities for the Week

Charles W. Parker, Jr., Washington, D. C., Overcoat.

Pleasant Grove Church, South Boston, Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 598.41
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Catawba Springs	$ 45.35
Damascus	29.00
Pleasant Hill	12.65
Plymouth S. S.	6.90
Wake Chapel	52.57
	146.47
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington, First S. S. ...	$ 77.98
Durham S. S.	70.58
Shallow Ford	18.00
	166.56

Western N. C. Conference:
Brown's Chapel S. S. ...	$ 15.00
Grace's Chapel, Special ..	66.83
Zion	60.00
	141.83

Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (G.) S. S.	$ 6.00
New Hope, Thanksgiving	13.08
New Hope S. S.	10.00
	29.08

Total $ 483.94

Grand total $ 1,082.35

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 1,957.12
Woman's Fellowship, Bay View Cong. Christian Church	$ 10.00
Berea Christian Church, Norfolk, Va. (to help pay freight on peanut hay)	10.00
Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. (dividend)	1.20
H. B. Newman, Henderson, N. C.	100.00
W. B. Franks, Raleigh, N. C.	100.00
I. H. Vickery, Henderson, N. C.	100.00
Philathea Class, Reidsville Church	10.00
Chester H. Roth Co. ...	500.00
United Cong. Christian Ch. Columbus, Ga.	5.84
J. R. Avery, Fuquay Spring, N. C.	10.00
Lorrey M. Johnson, Steadman, N. C.	25.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	5.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	7.50
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	100.00
In Memory of Roscoe Harrell	5.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	10.00
In Memory of Dr. George Chrisman	10.00
In Memory of W. H. Provost	10.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.

My intimate association with Dr. N. G. Newman, covering a period of more than fifty years, prompts me to write my impressions of this faithful minister. A brief biological sketch was printed in a recent issue of THE SUN. I shall not repeat the facts already stated except to give a complete list of the churches he served as pastor.

He served the following churches during his ministry: Berea (Nansemond), Holy Neck, Holland, Franklin, Newport News, Defiance College (Pastor and Teacher), Elon College (Pastor and Teacher). It should be stated that he served Holy Neck Church at three different periods; first, in his early ministry when it was on a charge with Franklin and Berea; later, when it was on a charge with Holland Church; and finally when it was a full time charge where he remained until his retirement in November 1937.

After his retirement from the active pastorate, he and his wife moved to his farm near Everet's Bridge, where his parents had lived until their death. This brought them back to Oakland, the church of his youthful days. After the death of his wife in 1940 he decided to remain at his home on the farm. A tenant family lived nearby his home on the same farm. He was his own cook and housekeeper for several years; except for the winter months spent each year with his daughter and family in Raleigh, N. C. His final years of association with Oakland Church were wonderful for him and for the church. Soon after returning to this church he was elected assistant pastor, without salary and any obligation to do any specific work. In 1938—during my illness from a heart ailment, he supplied as pastor for Oakland, Berea and Liberty Spring for several months. He preached occasionally in other churches, as opportunity was afforded him. But his major interest, in his sixteen years of retirement, was Oakland Church—with special emphasis upon beautifying the church cemetery and providing for its future upkeep. In appreciation of his distinguished service in behalf of the cemetery, the church voted to name the cemetery—"The Newman Memorial Cemetery."

During the years of his retirement he spent much time working out doors in his garden and keeping up his yard. Much to his surprise this resulted in great improvement to his health. He gained in weight and he was stronger and more able to work in his garden at 80 than he was at the age of 30 years. Oakland Church was strengthened in many ways by having him during these years. He was a type of man whose real value may be discovered by close association. His friendly, unselfish, spiritual fellowship greatly impressed the church and community. More than one man said to me: "I would never have really known Dr. Newman, if he had not lived as he did, in our community and worked in our church." He was humble and dignified; humorous and serious; friendly and firm. His friendly approach, his gentleness of spirit won friends among young and old. He was chaste in speech and fair in his judgment. He had a keen mind, open to give due consideration to new truth and to keep a proper regard for the historic past.

He was best known and loved as a preacher and pastor. For him the Bible held first place as the basis of his ministry in the pulpit. He carefully and prayerfully prepared his sermons. His thought was clear and his presentation of gospel truth was impressive and convincing. As a pastor he wrought a great and good work. People were drawn to him and they took him into their confidence. He was a wise counsellor and he reached many people by his prudence, his holy life and his sound advice in the home. His sincerity was so evident that people were compelled to believe in him, trust his word and accept his judgement.

He suffered much during the last months of his life. He was ready for the home-going. His faith did not falter or fail him. His work was done and well done. Our church needs more of his kind, people who are properly educated, fully consecrated and willing to render sacrificial service for the church and the kingdom of God.

I. W. JOHNSON.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

into the room, she stood there, holding the baby boy, now almost two years old in her arms. As the fine looking Lieutenant stood there for a moment, transfixed with joy, looking at his wife and his boy, the little fellow looked at his father and then at the picture on the mantel, and said, "Daddy that's Daddy." Reverently speaking, Christ is a picture of God, but a living picture. We see God in Christ.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

SEGREGATION IN SCHOOLS.

(Continued from page 13.)

Christian leaders, clerical and lay, must seek to discover the mind of Christ, must give to a waiting, frustrated, wistful humanity a Gospel that will help all men to live together as brothers and that will enable all the children of God to have full opportunity for "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Although not undertaking to speak officially for its Constituent members, the North Carolina Council of Churches calls upon all of its member churches, its clergy and laymen, to work wholeheartedly to this end. It is gratifying that Christian groups and individuals of all races all over the South are facing this issue with courage and a dedication to true Christian principles. Great progress is being made. Working together in true Christian humility, the quest for a better understanding in every area of life will be achieved.

D. D. JONES, Chairman,
Committee on Human Relations,
C. W. ROBINSON, Chairman,
Committee on Public Affairs.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

In Memory of Mrs. Russell T. Bradford	10.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	10.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	10.00
Special Gifts	215.00
	<hr/>
	$ 1,264.54
Grand total	<hr/>
	$ 3,221.66
Total for the week	<hr/>
	$ 1,748.48
Total for the year	<hr/>
	$ 4,304.01

SPECIAL INVITATION

To encourage you to try "The Reader's Digest" you are offered the next 8 issues—regular price $2.00—for only $1.00—You save half (new subscribers only).

This unusual bargain may be secured through Digest Representatives for a limited time.

Send your order to Richard L. Wilcox, 904 N. 37th Street, Richmond 23, Virginia.

Dr. Elden H. Mills

LAYMEN'S

Mid-Winter Rally

ELON COLLEGE

Sunday, February 14, 1954

For All Men of the Southern Convention
Inspirational Addresses---Fine Fellowship
Big Banquet---A Day You'll Remember

Starts---2:00 p. m.

Adjourns---7:00 p. m.

Dr. O. W. S. McCall

THE LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP
THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION
of Congregational Christian Churches

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, FEBRUARY 11, 1954

NUMBER 6

Wake Chapel Laymen Meet Prior to Every Member Canvass

One of the most encouraging signs of our church work is the increasing activity of organized laymen of the church. The picture above shows a group of Wake Chapel laymen who, under the leadership of Dr. Warren H. Denison (second from left, kneeling) conducted an Every Member Canvass that "was more than gratifying." On Sunday afternoon of this week, another group of laymen will meet in a Convention-wide program at Elon College to lay plans for increased lay activities in our church. In Chicago, Illinois, February 25 to 27, 1955, a nation-wide convention of Congregational Christian laymen will be held. It is a good day for the church. Laymen have decided to go places.

News Flashes

Sunday, February 14, is sponsored by the National Council of Churches as Race Relations Sunday.

Southern Pines has recently bought a new parsonage. This project was planned some five years ago, but was delayed because of the fire and the consequent re-building program.

The Convention Office has received a Declaration of Purpose for the National Church Building Loan Fund from the Dendron, Virginia Church, Rev. James W. Madren, pastor, in the sum of $209.00.

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter will be with the Newport News Congregational Christian Church for special services, beginning the week of February 27. The church is paying off its debt, and there will be special services on March 7, celebrating this great event.

In the absence of Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, the pulpit in the Richmond Church will be filled this Sunday by Mr. James H. Allen, a student of the Union Theological Seminary. The assistant pastor, Mr. Robert H. Fernandez, will bring the message of worship on Sunday, February 21.

Dr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Scott attended the service of ordination for the Christian Ministry for Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Jr., which was held at the First Church of Christ, Cornwall, Connecticut, on February 10. Congratulations to William T. Junior. We look forward to the time when he will return to his Southland home.

Mrs. J. S. Rollings, Sr., who is the secretary of the Pulpit Committee of the Suffolk, Virginia, Church, says: "When I first communicated with Mr. Alley, my approach to him was, 'Since you were born in Asheville, North Carolina, it would appear that you should be coming back home.' His reply was, 'Truly, a move to Suffolk would be like coming home, and I have long felt that the South is where I belong.' He was extended a unanimous call, December 13." THE CHRISTIAN SUN welcomes Rev. Mr. Alley "back home" and wishes for him a long, useful and happy life in our midst.

Rev. George D. Alley Becomes Pastor of Suffolk Church

The Rev. George Douglas Alley, preached his first sermon as minister of the Suffolk, Virginia, Christian Church on last Sunday. Mr. Alley came to Suffolk last week from Dundee, Illinois, where he has served as pastor for the past five and one-half years as pastor of the First Congregational Church.

Mr. Alley was accompanied by his wife, the former Joanne Winfred Ellis of Dundee, and his two children, Lloyd Douglas and Rebecca Jane, and his mother, Mrs. S. Faye Alley. They will make their home at the new parsonage of the Christian Church on Butler Avenue, in Riverview.

A native of Asheville, N. C., the Rev. Mr. Alley is a graduate of Berea

REV. GEORGE D. ALLEY

College, in Kentucky, the Chicago Seminary, and the Federated Theological Faculty of the University of Chicago. He was ordained to the ministry in 1946, and served as minister of the Federated Church of El Paso, Illinois, prior to moving to Dundee, in 1948.

Before his formal ordination Mr. Alley served as director of boys' work in the First Congregational Church in Chicago, worked as a research assistant in religious sociology for the Chicago Congregational Union and the Church Federation of Greater Chicago, acted as interim pastor of the Bethel Congregational Church in Beaverton, Oregon, and served for two seasons as director of Star Lake Camp for boys under the Salvation Army of New York City.

He served for four years as a member of the Advisory Board of the

(Continued on page 15.)

Union Church, Virgilina, Virginia Responds to C. M. A. Appeal

The Union Congregational Christian Church of Virgilina, Virginia, has responded generously to the appeal of the Conference Missionary Association of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. The association's project is to help purchase the building lot for the recently organized Congregational Christian Church in the south-Boston-Halifax area. The matter was presented to the Union congregation upon the recommendation of its official board on Sunday, February 7. Seventeen five-dollar memberships were subscribed. The church had already sent in the $20 which it carries in its budget. This makes a total, so far, of twenty-one memberships, or $105.00, from Union Church to help the South Boston group.

Standing Committees of the N. C. and Va. Conference, 1953-1954

Executive—

Rev. Mark W. Andes, Virgilina, Va.

Rev. W. J. Andes, 637 South Sunset Drive, Winston, Salem, N. C.
Mr. Martin Garren, 508 N. Edgeworth St., Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. H. E. Robinson, 401 Church St., Burlington, N. C.

Program—

Dr. H. E. Robinson.

Rev. Mark W. Andes.

Dr. W. E. Wisseman, 315 N. Edgeworth St., Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. W. J. Andes.

Evangelism—

Mr. Earl Danielly, Elon College, N. C.

Rev. M. V. Welch, 1612 Buffalo St., Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. Harold Loman, Box 1, Denim Station, Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. Thomas D. Sutton, Route No. 3, Burlington, N. C.

Mr. Algic Blalock, Route No. 2, Burlington, N. C.

Ministry—

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, 1010 W. Markham Ave., Durham, N. C.

Dr. F. E. Reynolds, Elon College, N. C.

Rev. H. P. Bozarth, Elon College, N. C.

Dr. W. E. Wisseman.

Dr. H. S. Smith, No. 4 Manchester Apts., 1813 Second St., Durham, N. C.

(Continued on page 15.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Be Sure Your Church is Represented at the Elon Rally

Every church in the Southern Convention is urged to have at least one representative present for the Convention-Wide Rally being held this Sunday afternoon at Elon College. The program which has been arranged is exceptionally fine, and it will be an opportunity missed if you are not represented.

* * * * *

Nation-Wide Laymen's Meeting Will be Held in Chicago

The first nation-wide convention of Congregational Christian laymen is to be held in Chicago, Illinois, from February 25 to 27, 1955, according to recent announcement by Dr. Fred S. Richards of Forest Grove, Oregon, chairman of the National Laymen's Fellowship.

Dr. Ronald Bridges of Sanford, Maine, one of the outstanding laymen of the Congregational Christian Fellowship, has been chosen as the Convention Chairman and will lead a committee of fifteen laymen from all over the United States to plan and promote the convention. A goal of 1,000 men has been set for this historic meeting.

Mr. Walter A. Graham of Pembroke, Kentucky, first full-time director of the Laymen's Fellowship, will be in charge of the executive details of the convention.

* * * * *

Town and Country Church Development Program

Nearly five hundred churches have already enrolled in the 1953-54 Town and Country Church Development Program which is sponsored jointly by Emory University, the Sears-Roebuck Foundation and thirteen state committees.

The purpose of this program is to spread stimulating ideas for church development across the South, to furnish guidance in surveying and planning progressive programs, to encourage participation in community improvement activities, to promote the world mission of the church, and to recognize outstanding achievement.

To participate, a local church enrolls, examines its present program, selects some project in each of three areas, and sends in a report of its progress by May 1, 1954. Complete information is sent to each church that enrolls in the "Development Packet."

A state committee will examine the "Reports of Progress" and on the basis of them will select the ten top churches. The Sears-Roebuck Foundation will write checks totaling $12,650 for those showing the most outstanding progress during the year.

This is a project that should appeal especially to our laymen. Why not consider it? Enrollments will be accepted through March 1, 1954.

Any church interested in participating can write Box 309, Emory University, Georgia.

Winona Lake School of Theology Has New President

Winona Lake School of Theology, Winona Lake, Indiana recently elected a new president in the person of Prof. John A. Huffman, son of Dr. Jasper A. Huffman, who has been president since 1939. Dr. Huffman was elected as president emeritus. Winona Lake School of Theology was founded by Dr. G. Campbell Morgan in 1920, and has been presided over successively by Dr. George W. Taft, Dr. W. E. Biederwolf and Dr. Huffman.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardeastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colelough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Patriotism Is Character--Not Emotionalism

A large company of business and professional men were gathered at a banquet in one of our large cities. They sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" and "God Bless America." The chairman presiding at the occasion reached for the folds of the flag that was standing close by. He raised it to his lips and kissed it, saying, "I wish I could die for this flag and the country it represents." Hushed silence followed. Some had eyes moist with tears of appreciation for the words of pretended patriotism.

And yet that very night that same man participated in a drunken brawl, brazenly profaned the name of the God of his country, and personally connived in a bribing compact which involved the entire City Council, in order to obtain a selfish objective for the personal profit of each member of the council.

Fancying that he was so patriotic that he would like to die for his country in that moment of high emotion, he failed in the hours that followed—as he had no doubt failed all along the way—to stand for the right and for honor, and to show sufficient patriotism to give his community and his country an honest life, a living example of clean politics and social decency. He threw personal honor to the wind and betrayed the flag by his misconduct. Fancying that he would like to die for his country—a thing that every American citizen can do and is honor bound to be willing to do if occasion so demands—he had lustily joined with others of his group in singing "God Bless America," but sold himself for selfish advantage and permitted his own life to be a reproach to his country, permitting his connivance to give the lie to his boasted patriotism.

Those who sing "God Bless America" are honor bound to show that they sing those words in sincere petition, and that they make their own lives a blessing to their country. Else to sing those words is but hollow mockery and blasphemous hypocrisy. America's greatest need today is patriotism that is sincere, patriotism that is based upon religious conviction, patriotism that depends upon conduct and character rather than upon mere emotionalism.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

Race and School

The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the question of segregation in the public schools probably will be made known this spring. No one can state with certainty what that decision will be, but the consensus of informed opinion appears to be that the court will rule segregation as unconstitutional.

Should that be the decision of the court, there is the possibility the shock to the school systems presently operating on a segregated basis will be softened by a period for orderly transition. Of course any observations about what the court will do are in the area of sheer speculation. But the court might rule against segregation, and the areas most vitally concerned should be thinking of what is to take place if the ruling does come.

Several states have indicated that the public schools as such will be discontinued and the system turned over to private enterprises if the court rules against segregation in the schools. The constitutionality of such a movement is doubtful and its practicability is questionable. In the long run, this radical cure is more likely to incapacitate the patient. Strong backing for it is not likely in North Carolina or Virginia because, if for no other reason, many areas in these states can handle the non-segregated school and have no desire to wreck the public school system over the problem.

The General Council of Congregational Christian Churches is on record as working for "the non-segregated church in the non-segregated community." That goal is not arousing much enthusiasm in the churches of the Southern Convention. Apparently there is not much more enthusiasm for non-segregated schools however the rest of the community may be segregated. But if the court decision is against segregation, the churches are not going to be able to hide behind the accepted mores of the segregated community.

Responsible churchmanship and citizenship will demand that the decision of the court be accepted without strife and in good faith, and that every effort be made to comply with the decision. The transition can be orderly, if painful, and can be achieved without violence. If the need should arise, let us pray that our churches will be equal to the occasion.

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, Jr.

For . . . Healing of the Nations

A Message for Race Relations Sunday, February 14, 1954
From the National Council of Churches of Christ, U. S. A.

As American citizens, we may take satisfaction in the progress being made toward improved relations among racial groups within our nation. The sweeping indictments of American life which were justifiable twenty or even ten years ago must be qualified and limited when they are made today. It is becoming easier for a man to get and hold a job regardless of his ancestry. Travel in public conveyances is more congenial for Negroes than it was. In some cities it is less difficult for a member of a minority group to rent or buy a home in an attractive neighborhood. The franchise is denied to fewer persons and the political effectiveness of members of racial groups is gradually becoming what it should be—their effectiveness as individual citizens, regardless of group identity. A long series of court decisions is gradually opening up the universities of the nation to all persons solely on the basis of individual merit, and it is not unreasonable to hope that segregation in education at all levels will end. Sporadic expressions of violence still mar the record; but lynchings are so rare that we may soon be able to say that they no longer take place in the United States.

All these things are good signs of sanity and decency. They are important demonstrations of the fact that Americans are uneasy in conscience and therefore are moving to correct segregation and other forms of discrimination. The unevenness of progress, and our embarrassment when political expediency or deep-seated traditions provide formidable obstacles, do not destroy the hope of greater advance throughout the whole nation. All things considered, the citizens of the United States may take a measure of genuine satisfaction over improved relations among racial groups within our borders.

But there is a disquieting lesson to be drawn merely from the fact that we have to stop and take note of such progress. This nation was founded on the religious principles of freedom, equality and fraternity. As we approach the end of two centuries of national life, we still have to ask ourselves whether we are building on those foundations. If there were no sincere efforts to realize the basic goals of a free and democratic people, we would stand convicted of hypocrisy for having lived so long with the compromise of segregation and of social and political discrimination. Surely there must come a time when it will no longer be necessary to observe Race Relations Sunday in our churches or to fight for the rights of racial minority groups or to decry the presence of prejudice. Surely we must with confidence look forward to a day of mental and spiritual health, unmarred by racial prejudice, which is a sign and symptom of illness both of mind and of spirit.

Moreover, while it is true that great progress has been made within the churches in bringing about a greater awareness of the demands of brotherhood and in the practice of racially inclusive membership by an increasing number, it must be recorded, to our shame, on this Race Relations Sunday that it is within the churches themselves and in church-related institutions that significant advances need to be made. It is still true that only in exceptional instances do white and non-white Christians worship regularly together. In some church-supported colleges, racial prejudice and discrimination in social life contradict their Christian profession. In many church-related hospitals and homes discriminatory practices still prevail. Is it not strange that religion, which is a force for the healing of the nations, is itself hampered in its influence by the sickness of racial prejudice?

Indeed, it can be said that, judged from the perspective of Christian insight, even the progress made in secular life is belated and far from adequate. The demands of Christian conscience are so clear and unmistakable, the road so straight and unavoidable, and the oft-repeated convictions so unequivocal and compelling, that the genuine satisfaction of partial progress in secular affairs are cancelled out by the continuing condemnation of ourselves for failing to live as children of God, brothers one of another.

Finally, when the whole matter is viewed in world-wide perspective, the healing of the nations calls for a medicine which—up to this moment—we, as Christians, have been unwilling to take. The non-white peoples of the world are unconvinced by a Christianity which accepts a color line. If we really believe that true religion is for the healing of the nations, and if we intend to continue offering to others the leaves and fruits of the Tree which grows beside the River of Life, there is but one appropriate way: we must practice what we preach, match creed with deed, and express in our lives the truths we claim to believe.

"The Living Desert"

PICTURE OF THE MONTH.

In this full-length color film of "Nature in the Raw"—the latest in the True Life Adventure series produced by the Walt Disney studios—many cameras have probed into the remote corners of the great American desert to photograph the life and death of its animals, insects, birds and reptiles. A big cast is featured in this stirring saga of the survival of the fittest in which each character presents his own dramatic story. The small kangaroo rat fearlessly protects itself and its young from the "sidewinder"—a strange snake which moves sideways—by throwing sand into its lidless eyes. In search of food, the red-tailed hawk attacks and subdues the deadly rattlesnake. As they have done since prehistoric days, the gecko and Gila monster slither over the earth, searching for their prey or fleeing from their enemies. Like lumbering armored tanks, tortoises fight for a "lady's favor." The pepsis wasp vanquishes the much larger tarantula—and then uses its victim as an incubator for its eggs. And, for comedy relief, the mating dance of two lively scorpions is presented to the accompaniment of Jig-time hillbilly music.

From this grim tooth-and-claw story the theme changes to the serene and beautiful side of Nature. When a heavy downpour quenches its desperate thirst, the desert radiantly comes to life; and through the magic of the time-lapse camera, the cactus flowers slowly unfold in all their delicacy and hauntingly vivid colors. And with a larger sweep, the camera turns to show nature in its most esthetic manifestations in blossom and leaf, earth and sky, day and night. An excellent musical background adds to the film's artistic, educational and entertaining values.

Our Churches Report . . .

Wake Chapel

In 1953, Wake Chapel Congregational Christian Church had its first year of full-time ministry and realized a dream of many years in the completion of its parsonage. It is a modern, story-and-a-half home, erected at a cost of approximately $17,500. Open house was held in November.

Laymen's Fellowship.

Wake Chapel is working to achieve an active Laymen's Fellowship. An effort is made to have each meeting worth while—an inspirational speaker, a project to discuss, or a fellowship banquet with invited guests.

Two weeks prior to the Religions Emphasis Week, the laymen planned for four nights of cottage prayer meetings in three different areas. The week immediately preceding, 22 laymen made 85 personal visitation evangelism calls. Our pastor, the Rev. Fred P. Register, gave special training sessions for four nights using the chart prepared especially for this by "Tidings." Rev. Clyde L. Fields, of Hunterdale, Franklin, Va., was guest minister for the week. Sixteen new members were received into the church.

In November, the Laymen's Fellowship held its annual banquet with Mr. W. P. Schumacher of Robbins, N. C., outstanding Presbyterian layman and brother of Curtis Schumacher of the Congregational Building Society, as guest speaker. Invited guests were laymen from Zion, Wentworth, Auburn, and Hayes' Chapel Churches.

Woman's Missionary Society.

The two circles of the Women's Missionary Society of the church enjoyed several outstanding opportunities to catch the vision of larger areas of service. At the beginning of the year, Mrs. Sloan, of Elon College, showed most interesting slides of Africa, the country selected for the foreign mission study for the year.

In October, the women of the local Presbyterian Fellowship invited us to share with them a Sunday afternoon and evening teaching session on Selected Psalms by the late Lucy Steele, of Peace College.

At the Thank Offering Service in November, Miss Alice Huggins told of her personal experiences as one of our denomination's teachers during the rising tide of communism in China and her internment in the Philippines.

The Friendly Service Program in December proved again how much

DR. WARREN H. DENISON

REV. FRED P. REGISTER

good fellowship results in planning and making things together. Twenty-five pairs of terry-cloth scuffs for the children in Ryder Memorial Hospital were added to the box of soap and vitamins. A Wake Chapel goat joins the herd on its way to Puerto Rico.

Choirs.

The Senior Choir of about 22 voices has greatly enriched our worship service. They presented, on a community basis with the Methodist Choir sharing, a special Easter Sunrise Service consisting of traditional scripture and hymns and anthems by Praetorius, Burleigh, Gross, Kopolyoff, Cooke and Wilson. The Christmas cantata was "Christ Is Born" by Joseph W. Clokey and a portion of the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah." Much of the credit for the fine work of the choir must go to Mr. Joseph Bouchard, director, from Raleigh.

The youth Fellowship has a choir of thirty voices under the direction of the church organist. This choir provides special music once a month and assists with the hymns at the regular worship service each Sunday.

Youth Fellowship.

The Youth Fellowship meets each Sunday evening with an average attendance of 25. They are using Youth Fellowship Programs prepared by our denomination and think these are by far the finest programs they have ever used.

The Fellowship attended all Conference and Convention rallies and was represented at the North Carolina Council of Churches' Workshop for Youth Leaders. It had a one day retreat at White Lake last year and is planning a week at the beach this summer.

The members of the Fellowship planned and conducted the worship service on Sunday evening, November 15, at the close of which their officers were formally installed.

Stewardship Week.

In October, 1953, the church was most fortunate to have had Dr. Warren H. Denison, one of our denomination's foremost authorities on Christian Stewardship for a week of special study to help put "God at the center of our lives and things on the fringe." During the week, Dr. Denison held twelve meetings covering church finance, every-member canvases, church administration, and general Christian stewardship. At the Sunday morning worship service, following the sermon by Dr. Denison, the canvassers were commissioned, and, during the afternoon, the annual every-member canvas was held. The subscription over and above local church needs, presenting a heavy percentage of the budget "for others"—mission work and benevolences—was most gratifying.

Sunday School Planning.

During 1953, the average attendance of the Sunday school was 172.

(Continued on page 13.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Registration Reaches 1537 for High School Day at Elon College

For the past five years, Elon College has observed High School Day on its campus. All high schools in North Carolina and Virginia are invited to participate. Each high school is asked to bring all members of its senior class for a program of information, instruction, entertainment, and joy. The program begins at 2:00 with registration in the gymnasium. Following registration, there are conducted tours about the campus and through all the buildings, acquainting the visitors with the school in detail. Dinner is served from 4:00 to 6:00.

There is a program in the auditorium at 6:00 which consists of welcome by the Field Secretary, special numbers by the dramatic and music departments. The president extends greetings and gives expression of appreciation of the day. The program closes with a basketball game in the gymnasium. This year the Appalachian College quint was the opposition for Elon College and a thrilling game it was. Elon finally won 84 to 73.

Last year a new feature was introduced. Scholarships were offered totaling $4,400 over a four year period. The scholarship awards were determined by a series of contests. These contests were educational, personal, and social. There were two scholarships, one to a young woman and one to a young man, which totaled $200 each, $50 annually for four years; two scholarships totaling $600, $150 annually for four years; and two scholarships of $1,000, $250 annually for four years. There were fifty-two contestants. No school was permitted over two contestants.

These awards were presented in the gymnasium during half time period of the basketball game. The four young women winners were each presented a beautiful bouquet of flowers as a gift from Trollinger, the florist, of Burlington. The young woman winner and the young man winner were crowned Queen and King of High School Day at Elon College.

There were 1,537 who registered in the gymnasium. There were some who did not register and, of course, the county superintendents, the high school principals, teachers and sponsors, who were present did not register. There were more than 1,700 visitors on the campus for the day.

All who were interested felt that this was the most successful occasion of its kind yet held at the college. It certainly brings a host of prospective students to our campus, introduces them to our campus, our facilities, our faculty, and our student body.

This is the fifth High School Day observed by Elon College and certainly one of the most, if not the most, successful one. About fifty percent of these high school students requested additional information about the college and expressed their interest in attending. This certainly presents a large number of students who have been in touch with Elon College to whom the organization may appeal for definite commitments to enter Elon College in September. A good day it was and may it prove a successful one for our college.

* * * * *

Report of Committee on Memoirs

The Board of Trustees of Elon College has suffered a severe loss in the death of two of its faithful members, Dr. Harry K. Eversull of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mrs. Russell T. Bradford of Town Point, Virginia:

DR. HARRY K. EVERSULL.

Dr. Harry K. Eversull was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, September 29, 1893, and died in the city of his birth on September 13, 1953. He was ordained as a minister of the Congregational Church in 1922. He was recognized as an outstanding minister and educator. With the exception of the time he occupied the presidency of Marietta College in Ohio, he served as pastor of Congregational and Presbyterian churches.

He was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College in 1932. From that time until his death he was regular in his attendance at board meetings, and took an active interest in all phases of Elon College's program and well-being. His experience as a college president made his contribution to this board especially valuable.

This board hereby expresses its deep appreciation of the services Dr. Eversull contributed to Elon College; its sincere regret that his useful life was cut off so abruptly; and extends to the surviving members of his family its sincere sympathy in their great loss.

MRS. RUSSELL T. BRADFORD.

Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, nee Jennie Willis Atkinson, died following only a few hours of illness, on December 31, 1953, at her home, Town Point, Virginia. Mrs. Bradford grew up at Elon College, in a home where loyalty and love for the Church of Christ was a consuming passion that expressed itself through service to the interests and institutions of the Southern Convention.

If Mrs. Bradford ever had any conflicts of loyalties they were never apparent. She was interested in all the worthwhile realities of life and entered into them heartily. Service to Christ and to humanity through the work of the church was the joy of her life.

When she was elected to membership on the Board of Trustees of Elon College, the responsibilities of the position were accepted as a privilege. Not only were her counsels and judgment of incalculable value; the influence of her presence and her radiant personality were an inspiration and a joy.

This board hereby records its deep appreciation of the life and service of Mrs. Bradford. It mourns her going, and extends to her family the sympathy of those who share in the loss occasioned by her going.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

We have a fine report this week from the churches and Sunday schools that contributed. Six churches and five Sunday schools contributed a total of $339.84 which is very good. If all the other 189 Sunday schools and churches had contributed equally as much, we would have had an offering sure enough. I am sure that many churches that did not contribute are just as able and just as willing but somehow did not get to it. Fifth Sunday offerings will continue to come in through the week and

(Continued on page 11.)

Missions at Home and Abroad

Miss Jennie M. Doidge Reports on World Christian Missions

"Asians often equate Christianity with colonialism and Asian youth shy away from the Christian religion because it sometimes seems tainted with Westernism, which in these days of fervent nationalism, they wish to avoid," said Miss Jennie M. Doidge, an associate secretary of the Missions Council at the recent Mid-Winter meeting.

Miss Doidge has just returned from a world tour which took her approximately a year and carried her into six newly independent Asian countries, Indonesia, Burma, the Philippines, India, Pakistan and Malaya, as well as Australia, New Zealand and Ceylon, and the continent of Europe. She visited the work of 41 missions, boards of various denominations and 15 national councils of churches.

As she studied the currents of opinion and aspiration in these lands, she brought back several strong convictions which she illustrated with anecdotes and personal experiences.

"It seems to me that there is a real need for non-white missionaries. White is all too likely to signify foreign control," said Miss Doidge, who everywhere ran into the race problem. One of the first questions asked her by students in Silliman University, in the Philippine Islands, was regarding racial discrimination in such countries as New Zealand and Australia, where she had visited.

"Much of the world is hungry, spiritually and physically; nationalism rides high in the newly independent countries, and thousands seek independence. The Christian church, through its schools, hospitals and indigenous congregations, is playing an increasingly opportune part; and there is a tremendous opportunity and challenge to the Christian missionary movement with special need for more non-white missionaries from America."

"Young people throughout Asian countries, and around the world for that matter, are alert to any line being drawn by the white man." . . . Miss Doidge also found that the immigration of Chinese and Indians had been causing much tension throughout Asia. She found Indians in Burma, Malaya, and even in the Fiji Islands, where they now outnumber the Fijis. The Chinese outnumber the Malaysians in Malaya if you include Singapore, and there are large numbers of Chinese in the Philippines and Burma. This situation inevitably causes tension.

Everywhere Miss Doidge saw hunger or the effects of hunger. In Athens, Greece, a U. S. Navy ship had just brought seven tons of clothes. "Sharing is still needed until a better solution for food, shelter, clothing and education can be worked out," commented Miss Doidge.

In Japan Miss Doidge spoke with a college president and found that the Japanese fear militarism more than Communism, and some of them feel that if there has to be a choice between Japan becoming a China or a Korea, they would prefer to take chances as a China.

Throughout her travels around the world Miss Doidge found the Christian church at work, both as an indigenous body and through Christian missions of various denominations. She was impressed particularly by the continuing need for schools in most of the lands, although in many, like the Philippines, Burma, Japan and India, the governments are increasingly taking over the schools and supporting them.

"With most of Asia struggling to become literate, the Philippines, so Filipinos told me, faced a period after the war when it looked as if public education would not be re-established. They were faced with many schools destroyed and there was little teacher training for a five-year period. Many children eleven years old had never been in school," commented Miss Doidge. "A Filipino teacher said to me, 'One of the marvels of the Philippines is that we can have public schools.'"

In Burma, before the war, there were some 800 schools under the American Baptist Mission. Today they can count their church-controlled schools on two hands, since the schools have been transferred to the government.

In India alone we have 300 Christian high schools and 40 Christian churches, and in Japan in the 72 Christian schools we have 103,000 students. No sacrifice seems too great for Japanese students or parents in order that they might have an education. From 7 in the morning till 8 o'clock at night, boys and girls are on trains going to and from school, while college students often travel as much as three hours each way a day.

"In Malaya, the open door to Christianity is through the school. As one Japanese leader there told me, 'A Christian teacher does of necessity become a Christian evangel.' The need for this type of teacher in the schools of Asian countries commands the best thought of the church there and here. I certainly found the church there in the schools."

In India Miss Doidge saw a new sense of interest among the Indian Christians to strengthen the church. One Indian minister said to her, "We are a new India. We can look anyone in the face. We have a latchkey, and in this new India we need a United church such as the Church of South India. We cannot be denominationally minded."

Miss Doidge concluded her address with four word pictures laid in Rangoon, Jerusalem, Bridgeport, Conn., and Hong Kong:

"In Rangoon, a city which looked ablaze with light, down on the streets the lights were out—our doorway was in darkness, no light shown.

"In Jerusalem on Palm Sunday at the Angelican School for the Blind, we were asked to leave church in an unfamiliar way. The girl who was leading had a little sight, but she stumbled before anyone could reach her, and so half the group stumbled. The blind cannot lead the blind.

"In Bridgeport, after I had returned home, I was looking at world globes of various prices. Among them was one lighted from the inside. When I expressed surprise at the price, the clerk said, 'An illuminated world costs more'—an illuminated world costs more, not in money alone, but in prayer, understanding, and the acceptance of new ways for old.

"In Hong Kong, at a school for deaf and dumb children, I saw the expression on a child's face, who had just heard for the first time his own laugh and voice. I noticed that in the new dormitory there were round windows between the teachers' cell-like rooms and the children's six to

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Interdenominational Cooperation

That title certainly is a "mouthful" and yet no one has yet devised for us a term which means the same but uses shorter words! Mrs. Russell V. Powell, superintendent for this department for the North Carolina women, has recently sent a letter to all societies about this phase of our work.

World Day of Prayer.

About the World Day of Prayer, Mrs. Powell says: "Time is short for us to prepare for the observance which is held on the first Friday in Lent—this year on March 4. The theme is 'That They May Have Life.' (See center box for list of material.)

"Will you or your Interdenominational Cooperation Chairman (if you do not have one, perhaps this will be a good time to elect one!), please start right away publicizing the date, theme, project, etc. If you have a local council of church women, find out their plans and cooperate in every way possible. If you are not part of a council, plan to attend the observance closest to your community—get yourself invited!—or have your own observance with your own group. The purpose of the World Day of Prayer is two-fold: To unite all Christians in a bond of peace and to make an offering for interdenominational Christian missions at home and abroad.

"Let us each be praying for the leaders of the World Day of Prayer and for the blessings which should come from the day."

Report from 1952-53.

According to Mrs. Powell's report there are 87 societies in the North Carolina Women's Conference and only 58 of them reported on this phase of their activities. Of these 49 observed the World Day of Prayer; 37 observed World Community Day; 35 observed May Fellowship Day; 16 are active in local councils of church women; and 13 societies have an interdenominational chairman.

* * * * *

Ideas for the Cradle Roll

According to our set-up in this area, the women's society is responsible for the cradle roll department of the church. Therefore it is appropriate that we consider on this page plans for work with these smallest members of our church family. Mrs. W. R. Skelly, Jr., cradle roll superintendent of our Eastern Virginia women, has recently sent a letter to each society concerning this part of our work. In it she says: "We plant the seed and with God's blessings it grows to be a strong tree. And so it

ORDER MATERIAL IMMEDIATELY!

According to information sent out by Mrs. R. V. Powell, N. C. Woman's Conference chairman of Interdenominational Cooperation, orders for material for the World Day of Prayer must be received in New York by February 19. This means that if your society is responsible for a program and has not secured the material, an order should go off immediately.

Material available:

Worship Service	5c
Call to Prayer, per 100	30c
Children's Service	5c
Guide for Leaders	15c
"These Others" (dramatization) ..	10c
Poster (11 in. x 17 in.) ..	15c
Report Blank	Free

One copy of each of the above is included in the World Day of Prayer Packet, which may be ordered for 40c. Two copies of the dramatization are needed for presenting it. Please add 10c handling charge for orders less than $2.00. Send no stamps. Order from:

Department of Publication & Distribution
National Council, 120 East 23rd. Street,
New York 10, New York.

is with little children—we plant ideas and ideals and they grow to make strong character."

Here are four suggestions she gives for promoting cradle roll work in the local church:

1. Have a party in the spring. The packet contains an excellent program. Mite boxes may be ordered from the Methodist Publishing House, Richmond, Va.

2. Have your superintendent visit the mother and the new baby in the hospital, if possible, and present a certificate at that time. A stimulating idea is to have a small picture of your minister pasted in the corner of each certificate so that as the child grows up, he will know his minister.

3. Have a cradle roll poster in your church somewhere. The Standard Nursery Roll with space for 125 names may be bought for $1.10. Small groups might prefer the attractive cradle or baby shoe wall cart which has 20 name cards. The price is $2.50 unassembled or $3.00 assembled. These may be ordered from The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts.

4. Have a monthly or quarterly Cradle Roll Newsheet included in your church bulletin. A sample by Mrs. Carl Wallace is in the packet. This contains announcement of births, birthdays, prayer, baby sitters available, baptismal services, baby equipment exchange, or other items of interest to parents of small children.

* * * * *

Reports of North Carolina Woman's Conference 1952-53

VISUAL AIDS.

As Mrs. W. T. Scott said in her report to the Woman's Convention, in the field of Visual Aids in the realm of the hope for the future, the promise is great. A great number of our churches have not yet used this great method of teaching.

According to statistics there are nine churches that own their Visual Aid equipment, sixteen have used Conference equipment, and one has access to a projector. One district reported no visual aids used.

As to a personal report, I attended one meeting of the Conference Board (I was appointed to this office after the Board met the first time), wrote one article for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and represented the Conference Board by pinch-hitting for Mrs. Scott at the service of installation for the Haw River Woman's Society. I have subscribed to the Audio Visual Aids News Letter.

During the coming year I plan to contact societies not using visual aid and try to promote the use of this method of teaching in all our churches.

MRS. KENNETH REGISTER.

HENDERSON DISTRICT.

The Henderson District is made up of 14 churches, nine of which have active Missionary Societies with a total membership of 229 women. Thirty-one attended the 1952 fall Conference, while 58 attended the Spring Rally. All societies reported

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

There are many special weeks during the short month of February: Youth, Brotherhood, to name two of them. Christian Endeavor has been celebrating its 73rd. birthday and tomorrow is the birth anniversary of Abraham Lincoln. It is good for us to mark the passing of special weeks and days.

When we think of families and good times they share, one of the times that comes to mind is the time spent around the table. Some families eat in relays, but most of us eat together. Many of our churches have the pleasant and spiritually profitable Church Night or Friday Night supper.

Last week, we went to such a supper. The Fellowship Hall was packed with people—families of people, a bounteous board was spread and then came the program. Various talents were presented: singing, skits, piano playing, a terrific kitchen band and an almost too true playlet about the last minute rush on Sunday mornings as the family prepared to go to Sunday school. This playlet was given by a class that has 21 children in the primary departments, so they were well qualified in their conclusions!

The highlight of the program was a piece of nonsense involving ragged costumes, sooty make-up and singing "Rags, bones, etc . . ." The reason it was so good, was the minister's enthusiasm as he entered into the spirit of the song. He did not feel himself too good to dress in ragged clothes (frankly his were the worst), he didn't mind the smut on his face, he grinned at the children, he let the teen agers inspect his costume and make-up. Here was a real man. Does not the church need real men to be their ministers? A man who can lay aside the cloth to bring himself closer to his people is to be commended.

When churches have family groups within their walls, giving them food for bodies and souls, and helping them see how others are seeking to find the good life too, much is being done that is good.

"Values"

By BERTHA YOUNKIN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Although the Thomases did not have a larger income than their neighbors, Martha Thomas made more of an effort than the others to see that she had good reading material about the house for the children. Most of it came from the local library.

When she bought a set of reference books for their own library, young Billy looked at them questioningly. "Sure, Mom! They're nice, but—they cost as much as that bicycle Tommy's folks just brought him! All I have is Dad's old bike," he said.

His father, David Thomas, picked one of the books up and looked at it. "They cost as much as that new fishing rod I've been wanting!" he remarked, smiling.

The two younger children were too busy looking at the pictures to comment.

Martha Thomas set the books deferentially on a shelf where they would be most conspicuous. She had painted the inside of the shelf a dark green and the outside white, and she stood back to admire the effect. "I decided to make my last winter's coat do for this year, so you haven't sacrificed any more than I have!" she told them dryly. "And they are worth it!"

After the children had gone to bed, David said rather reproachfully, "I don't think you ought to give up the idea of a new coat, Martha. We can manage."

"My coat is quite good enough," she said firmly. "And this is an excellent way to teach the children a lesson in values!"

Her husband looked up over his newspaper inquiringly.

"Our children should realize that certain things are worth more than other things and that first things come first. Look at young Dick Summers; his folks are brokenhearted!"

"What has he done now?"

"You remember his uncle died and left him two thousand dollars. He was supposed to use it toward his college education, but today he cashed the whole check to buy a new car—a convertible that will use more gas than he possibly can afford!"

"The crazy young fellow!" David scowled as he shook his head wonderingly.

"What can you expect?" said Martha. "Haven't his family practically gone bankrupt buying expensive clothes and gadgets when they should have been saving to pay for a home?"

"Let's see now, Martha, what has all this to do with the books we just bought?"

"Our children witnessed tonight an example of sacrificing unnecessary things for the sake of education. It showed them what we know to be important. There will always be things we can't afford, and I want them to have a sort of scale to apply to these things. The things we can't afford won't bother us a lot, because we know the value of the things we have. People like Dick's family are bothered, because they think only in terms of material things."

"You're right, Martha! Without a good notion of what has real value, people are like boats without anchors. A child should learn that material possessions are never worth the sacrifice of anything leading to honor, faithfulness, personal devotion, love, and duty. We had a good example of that at our office. You remember my telling you about the salesman who wanted his best friend's job because it paid more. Well, he secured it when his friend was ill. He obtained it by not helping his friend when that friend was in need! Little real good will it do him!"

"I thought you gave the children a good lesson in values, David, when you told them why we'd have to give up our usual two-weeks' vacation trip. You explained that because of all that sickness we had last winter, the vacation money had to go to pay the doctor's bills. You said that we couldn't enjoy an unnecessary vacation when we owed a man money."

David smiled slightly. "Grandfather always warned us never to be beholden. He said your soul was in danger when you let yourself begin to get into needless debt."

"When our children see things they can't have, it won't hurt too much because they will know the immeasurable value of the things we have—like self-respect and honor—things which money cannot buy."

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Keep this date in mind—April 24 and 25. What happens?

* * *

Let's have a write-up about your Youth Week Activities.

* * *

The work that your people do need not end with the close of Youth Week. Keep occupied and thus keep interested.

* * * * *

Youth Rally in Va. Valley

The Virginia Valley Conference youth held their latest rally at the Winchester church on January 31, 1954. The meeting was opened by worship led by the president, Donnie Litten and two other Wissler's Chapel boys. The young people attending the rally then took "flights around the world," with exhibits from Mexico, Japan, Korea, China, the Phillipine Islands, India, Africa, France and Germany. The groups reassembled to hear letters from Germany, Africa, and Mexico; and brief talks by Rev. Ralph Galt on China, and Rev. Cameron Hayes on Japan. Miss Tara Modok from India read two of Tagore's poems.

The roll call showed that there were about one hundred and twenty young people and their advisors present with twelve churches represented. The Bethlehem Church had the largest delegation with twenty-one. Following the roll call, two groups were formed to sing songs and have games representative of the different countries.

After an hour long period for eating and fellowship, the group saw a movie, "Home is Nowhere," about the desperate physical needs of people around the world and the work that Church World Service is doing for them. A short business session came after the movie, which was followed by a Worship Service led by the Winchester Group. The benediction was then pronounced and we adjourned.

LEROY RODGERS,
Conference Reporter.

* * * * *

Youth Rally at Pleasant Ridge

The place was at Pleasant Ridge Church and the date was January 31, 1954, when over 300 young people of the Western North Carolina Conference came together for a Rally Day. The youth of Hank's Chapel Church opened the program with the worship service. The roll call found 16 churches represented with active members and visitors. Three churches tied with 100 per cent presentation for the attendance trophy. Grace's Chapel, traveling 60 miles to the rally was awarded the trophy with Union Grove and Spoon's Chapel as runner-up.

The Rally Offering was $26.16. It being Elon College Sunday, the offering was given to the work of the college.

The Theme of the Rally was "The Three Commission Plan." The group divided into two groups for discussions of each commission. Discussion leaders were Mr. Curtis Young, assisted by Miss Ruth Bullard, on Faith; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, assisted by Miss Kitty Lee Cox, on Fellowship; Thomas Madren, assisted by Miss Patricia Coghill, of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, on Action. These discussions gave further information on the Commission Plan. Special music was furnished by the Pleasant Ridge Choir and Miss Judy Yates, soloist. After the singing of a hymn and prayer, the afternoon session closed for supper.

After supper, the evening worship service was conducted by Grace's Chapel Young People. Then followed the movie, "Love Thy Neighbor," which was enjoyed by everyone.

The rally was closed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" in a Fellowship Circle and Benediction by Rev. Fred Allred.

THOMAS MADREN.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

"Did you give the mayor my note?" a man asked of the messenger.

"Yes, sir, but there ain't no use sendin' that man any notes. He's blind as a bat."

"Blind? How do you know? That's news to me."

"Course he's blind. Twice he asked me where my hat was, and there it was in plain sight on my head all the time. Yes, sir, he's blind as a bat!"

* * *

Electrician: "Here, catch hold of this wire."

Apprentice: "I got it. What now?"

Electrician: "Feel anything?"

Apprentice: "No."

Electrician: "Well, then, don't touch the other one. It carries three thousand volts."

* * *

How's your church attendance record holding up? Let's make this a perfect year. February is a good month to go to church, to observe birthdays, to send valentines—February is a good month to be alive.

Missions Council Elects Officers

The following officers of the Missions Council were elected at the closing session of the Midwinter Meeting, on January 28: Chairman, Russell A. Dixon, D. D. S., dean of the College of Dentistry, Howard University, Washington, D. C.; Vice-Chairman, John H. Ives of Bridgeport, Connecticut, well-known business and civic leader; and Recording Secretary, Mr. John C. Schroeder of New Haven, Connecticut.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

(Continued from page 7.)

swell the totals for the next report. In cooperative efforts we shall succeed in this business of Christian higher education.

Previously Reported $ 421.33

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Morrisville$ 7.25

Mt. Auburn S. S. 9.27

Wake Chapel 32.46

Eastern Va. Conference:

Cypress Chapel$ 50.00

Mt. Carmel S. S.18.41

Newport News S. S. 26.25

Rosemont 40.00

Portsmouth, First S. S. .. 9.43

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Hines Chapel S. S.$ 31.43

Tryon107.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Winchester S. S.$ 8.34

339.84

Total to date $ 761.17

Show me the business man or institution not guided by sentiment and service; by the idea that "he profits most who serves best" and I will show you a man or an outfit that is dead or dying.

—B. F. Harris.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Man Born Blind"

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 21, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "One thing I know; that I was blind, now I see."
John 9:25.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 9.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 2: 11-22.

The story of the healing of the man born blind was one of "these things" which John said that he had written that "ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, and that believing, ye might have life through his name" (John 20:30). It was a sign, a wonder, a miracle, a mighty work, wrought by the word and the power of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Blind Man.

Here was a man blind from his birth. How tragic it is to be blind, and all the more tragic to be blind from birth. Never to see the blue sky, the landscape, a tree, a stained glass window, a cathedral spire, the face of a friend, a loved one, a child, a good movie, frost on the window-pane, snow on the ground—never to see these and a hundred other things of beauty and form, alas what a tragedy this is! Here was a man blind from his birth. How that pathetic figure tugged at the heart of the Master! How he was moved with compassion toward him! It should be noted that while the man was an object of compassion for the Master, he was "Exhibit A" for the disciples. They were more concerned about what had caused his blindness than in trying to do something to help the man. "Master, who did sin, this man or his parents that he was born blind?"

Healing Through Obedience and Faith.

"Go wash in the pool of Siloam," said Jesus. That was all. It was a command, and a challenge to faith. To be sure, Jesus had used an aid to faith. He had made up a simple mixture of plastic clay and applied it to the blind man's eyes. But there was no medical or healing virtue in that. Jesus simply told the man to go to the pool of Siloam and wash the clay from his eyes. In obedience—even blind obedience if you want to quibble about it—the man went and did exactly what Jesus told him to do. There was something in the Master's voice that awakened faith, and commanded obedience.

"He went his way, therefore, and washed, and came seeing." There you have it. That is all there was to it. Jesus told the man to do something. The man by faith obeyed. And something happened—the man received his sight. Simple enough, even if mysterious. It still works that way, simply and mysteriously. Let a man, any man, obey the word of Christ, let him by faith move out at Christ's command, and he finds that it is even as Christ says. Let a man repent and believe, and he shall be saved. One does not have to understand; he has only to obey. One does not have to have much light; he has only to follow the light he has. One does not have to have much faith; he has only to act on the faith he has. Mysterious indeed, but verifiable by experiment. Experiment will lead to experience. "If any man will know, let him do."

Some More Blind Men.

The man whom Jesus healed was not the only blind man there. The neighbors, and especially the Pharisees were blind, tragically blind. Indeed more tragically blind, than the blind man himself. Here were men facing a fact, dealing with an unanswerable argument, the man who had been blind standing there before them, seeing as well as they saw, everything around them. And yet refusing to accept what they saw, and trying to explain it away. These poor, blind men were more concerned over the fact that this act of healing had been done on the sabbath day, than over the fact that a man long blind had been given his sight. And like so many of their modern successors, they resorted to all kinds of wild theories to explain something, or rather to try to explain it, when there was a simple, understandable explanation of it. By the power vested in him as the Son of the living God, our Lord had healed the blind man. This in itself was evidence that he was the Son of God. As the Son of God, he had done this mighty sign of work. It is amusing, or it would be if it were not so tragic, to see the extremes to which some smart folk will go to explain away, something that can be easily explained if one accepts Jesus Christ for what he is—the Son of God, God made manifest and incarnate.

Irresponsible Parents.

"We do not know, ask him; he shall speak for himself." Thus spoke his parents when they were questioned about their son. John tells us why they spoke thus—because they feared the Jews, they were afraid they would be "put out of the synagogue." Is it too much to say, that like all too many parents, they were irresponsible in the matter of helping their children in a great spiritual experience, and when their children are dealing with questions and problems involved in the wake of a spiritual experience? A young person who has just come into a new relationship with Christ needs the council and the moral support of his loved ones.

A Courageous Witness.

"Whether he be sinner or no, I know not; one thing I do know, that whereas I was blind, now I see." When called upon to explain what had happened, or the real character of the one who had healed him, the man could not do it. Frankly, he did not know. But he did know one thing—he knew that whereas he had been blind, now he could see. That was an important thing, indeed it was the only important thing. After all, it doesn't make much difference what we think of Christ, if we cannot tell or show how Christ has made a difference in our lives. A changed man is an unanswerable argument. A young high school student said to a cynical teacher "you sneer at Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ has brought me happiness where I knew only unhappiness before. Let's see you get rid of that." Or again, a converted drunkard was chided about his faith in Christ, and asked whether he believed that Jesus Christ turned water into wine. He replied, "I know nothing about water and wine, but I know this, that in my house Christ has turned beer into furniture and that is a good enough miracle for me." Can you bear witness to any change that Jesus Christ has made in your life? Is your life an unanswerable argument for Christianity?

(Continued on page 14.)

WAKE CHAPEL.

(Continued from page 5.)

The Board of Christian Education, consisting of three members elected on a rotation basis to serve three years with the pastor and superintendent, was organized in January, 1953.

Also, in January, a teacher training program, with nearby churches invited, was held with an average attendance of 40. The faculty was composed of Mr. John Graves, Burlington, (pre-school); Miss Mildred Kickline, Burlington (primary); Miss Ruth Dunn, Portsmouth (juniors); Mrs. Ralph Cline, Sanford, (youth) and the pastor (adult).

During 1953, the Sunday school had by far its best cooperation from its teachers. The problem of absentee teachers has disappeared. It is felt that this improvement is due to (1) the development of vision, or a sense of mission, on the part of the teachers through the special educational programs held for their benefit over the past several years; (2) the Installation Service for Officers and Teachers of the Sunday school, giving public recognition to their work and emphasizing again its importance; and (3) the work of the Board of Christian Education, including its nomination of teachers after considering recommendations of the Superintendents of the Children's Department and the Adult Department and after conferring with the prospective teachers as to their availability before placing their names in nomination.

In order to increase the time for Bible study, Sunday school is now beginning at 9:45.

Christmas Emphasis.

Without suggestion of effort to combat the tide of commercialization of Christmas, the Sunday school presented for the third successive year, with a different cast of characters each year, the pantomime, "No Room in the Inn." This was followed by a white gift service—gifts for those in need in our community and gifts of soap for Ryder Memorial Hospital in Puerto Rico. Most "grown-ups" were surprised by the enthusiasm with which even the smallest children could switch from the secular approach of receiving to the Christian basis of giving. Needless to say, there were no "age line" problems in giving—no tongue-in-cheek explanations needed.

Thanksgiving Observance.

In addition to Wake Chapel's participation in the community Thanksgiving service, it was a pleasure to have with us at this session Dr. and Mrs. Truitt and a group of children from the Christian Orphanage at Elon.

Evening Services.

In an effort to increase the opportunities for worship in 1954, an evening service has been added on Sunday. At two of the evening services, the motion pictures "The Hidden Heart" and "For Every Child," which are sponsored by the Congregational Christian Church, were shown. They were well received by those present.

1954 Financial Goal.

Due to the special effort to get the parsonage paid for and to cover a broader program, the church, through all channels, raised $21,000 in 1953. Not wanting to do less in 1954, the second year of a full-time ministry, it has been voted to emphasize missions and benevolent giving, and the church has a goal of more than 50 per cent for others.

WORLD CHRISTIAN MISSIONS.

(Continued from page 6.)

eight bed dormitory rooms. When I asked why this was, they told me, 'It is because deaf children feel that they cannot communicate so closely in the dark. They want a light in the darkness.' As we left the school, we murmured, 'The whole world needs light.'"

Reported by Miss Dorothy P. Cushing.

WOMAN'S PAGE.

(Continued from page 9.)

good work in all departments and there is an abundance of good religious literature within the district. The apportionment giving amounted to $560.00.

I was privileged to meet with the Mt. Giliad Society in July and help them reorganize. I have visited five of the nine societies and have found interest keen in all groups. I have written 15 or more letters and have traveled more than 150 miles in the interest of the Henderson District.

Our goal is to have the women of all 14 churches in the district organized. Therefore, we look forward to greater accomplishments in the future as we go "Rejoicing in Our Tasks."

MRS. CARL WALLACE.

ASHEBORO DISTRICT.

The Asheboro District has had a very good year and has high hopes of improving in every department in the coming year. In the past year we have increased in number and we are certainly proud of our new society, Antioch.

Our churches responded well to our Thank Offering for the year and also attended the rallies in good number. The fall conference was the best attended ever, with our district sending fifty-five.

The Achievement Goals were reached by only three of the 12 churches reporting. We hope that more will achieve these goals another year.

We lost seven members by death last year and their absence is felt in all our societies.

Let us set our sights high for the coming year and ever reach forward to strive to do all that God would have us do.

MRS. BILL SIMMONS.

GREENSBORO DISTRICT.

Report of Activities:

1. November 23, 1953, held meeting of all presidents of Greensboro District in Reidsville Church—nine churches represented by 31 women; Mrs. Scott directed quiz and answered questions about work.

2. Attended meeting of district superintendents in Durham to formulate plans for making every church an active society church; also to plan for Spring Rally.

3. Contacted every society by letter and telephone at beginning of year; urged increase in effort to meet achievement goals and to be punctual in sending reports to Conference Treasurer.

4. (None given in copy.)

5. In February, 1953, met with newest society, Kallam Grove. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Miss Marie Crosby, a missionary from Africa, also attended this meeting.

6. March 26, 1953, Spring Rally at Burlington. Our district had charge of the afternoon session. Fourteen societies were represented and each turned in splendid report of work being done.

7. Delegate to Biennial Convention in Burlington in April. Sent
(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you for $715.98. Of this $233.41 came from Sunday schools; from others $482.57. During January we averaged for each week $1,086.00. Let us see how nearly we can come to that average for February. Receive an offering for the orphanage in your Sunday school and send it to the Convention office promptly. And thanks, thanks very much.

Well, sir, week before last I had fun. When I was ready to enter Elon as a freshman I had three brothers already in school at Elon, therefore for lack of funds I taught a public school in my county instead. I was the entire faculty. I could call a faculty meeting anywhere anytime. There were enrolled fifty children from the first grade to the seventh. Some of the boys were as big and probably as old as I was. I taught the term through and an additional month made up by public subscription. Then that fall I went to college. Again I stayed out when I should have done my second year and taught the same school. I had never been back in the community until recently. That was an experience. The community had changed so much. I found some of my pupils, grandparents now! They are planning a reunion of those many-years-ago pupils! What has that got to do with the orphanage? I don't know. It remains to be seen!

It is showing here now, and the children are "just a runnin' crazy." I thought maybe the recent snow had dampened their enthusiasm for it, but since they stayed well and warm they seem to be just as eager for it now as ever. A gang—if you had heard them coming and going you would say I had used the right word—has just left my office. Laughing, cheering, jumping, running they go! I get "blue" sometimes but you can't be down long if you mix with these girls and boys. They are just great. One of my neighbors looks at them and says, "Aren't they just darling." She might have gotten an unexpected answer if she had seen some boxes of clothes which had been left in the door one night to be touselled and tumbled by some of these children. We do not yet know who left them but we know some of the children took their choice before the matron knew they were here! Where there are 81 children there is a lot of sunshine—but it is not all sunshine. All sunshine makes a desert.

While I was writting that line a little girl came in with a Valentine for me, and now I am almost sorry I told you about someone touseling the box of clothes.

Thank you for all your help. I know you enjoy giving it, because in the Big Book I read: "It is more blessed to give than to receive!" So many homeless, neglected, orphaned children aren't able to give, they must receive. "In as much as you do . . ." a gracious heavenly Father will see what you do, and bless you, too.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 4, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. J. E. Harrell, Suffolk, Va., Clothing.
Woman's Missionary Society, Pleasant Ridge (W. N. C.) Church, Coupons.
Mrs. J. P. Bennett, Harrisonburg, Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 1,082.35
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Chapel Hill $34.00
Piney Plain 25.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring S. S. $20.00
Oak Grove 3.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Pleasant Grove $20.00
Reidsville S. S. 73.00
Union (Va.) S. S. 5.00

Virginia Valley Conference:
Linville S. S. $23.32
Newport S. S. 30.09

Total $ 233.41

Grand total $ 1,315.76

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 3,221.66
New Hope Christian Ch.,
Roanoke, Ala. $ 4.87
R. P. Overman, Liberty,
N. C. 10.00
W. B. Truitt, Greensboro,
N. C. 100.00
A Friend, Reidsville, N.
C. 3.00
Tire Sales Co., Burlington, N. C. 50.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G.
Newman, Sr. 10.00
In Memory of Mr. H. C.
Simpson 5.00
In Memory of Mr. Jackson Garrett 25.00
In Memory of Mrs.
Charles Robertson ... 5.00
Special Gifts 269.70

482.57

Grand total $ 3,704.23

Total for the week $ 715.98

Total for the year $ 5,019.99

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

ty? Do you bear witness to your faith in, an allegiance to Christ?

A Friend of the Outcast.

"Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found . . ." The Good Shepherd seeketh for the lost sheep until he finds it. Christ Jesus came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost, and the outcast.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Life is the continuous adjustment of internal relations to external relations.—Herbert Spencer.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

A Radiant Life

The passing of Nathanael Gross Newman is like the setting of the sun at the close of a beautiful day, in which the sun, after it has passed below the horizon and is lost to our view, still continues to make the heavens glorious for us with its many colored radiant beams.

Dr. Newman's life was radiant with ennobling characteristics. Among these we may name his impressive dignity, which manifested itself in his personal appearance; his inspiring cheerfulness; his faithfulness to his calling; his sweetness and kindness of spirit; his warm friendliness; his interest in things human and divine; and his loyalty to his Great Leader, the Lord Jesus Christ.

These were some of the radiant characteristics which impressed those of us here in Defiance College and community who some forty years ago, had the privilege of being associated with him for some four years in comradeship of work. Among those still living and who were present then there come to mind: Albert Caris, Miss Flossie Whitney, Miss Elizabeth Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Ward McReynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lawson, and Arther Latchaw.

Of course, I am aware of the fact that the modesty of Dr. Newman would have caused him to blush deeply, had he heard the above given characteristics ascribed to him. But we here feel that he was worthy of them. You of the goodly southland who knew him so much longer will remember other ways in which he enriched your lives.

In recognition of what Dr. Newman meant to me, I express both sympathy and congratulations to Nathanael, Jr., Blaneh Newman Baker, and Marian Newman Campbell. May God's rich blessings abide with you.

GEORGE C. ENDERS.

Defiance, Ohio.

REV. GEORGE D. ALLEY COMES TO SUFFOLK.

(Continued from page 2.)

Northern Association of Congregational Christian Churches. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Illinois Conference, secretary of its executive committee and a member of its committees on church assistance, finance, and camp property management.

Under the Conference Board of Christian Education, Mr. Alley has been chairman of the summer conference committee for the past five years, when he carried the principal responsibility for the planning of conferences which reached several thousand Congregational Christian young people.

He succeeds the Rev. Duane N. Vore, who left Suffolk last year to become an assistant pastor of First Congregational Church, Los Angeles, California.

STANDING COMMITTEES OF N. C. AND VA. CONFERENCE.

(Continued from page 2.)

Laymen's Fellowship—

Mr. T. A. Vineent, Route No. 1, Burlington, N. C.

Women's Fellowship—

Mrs. W. T. Seott, Elon College, N. C.

Pilgrim Fellowship—

Mr. Curtis Young, Elon College, N. C.

Social Action—

Rev. W. T. Waller, Jr., 1155 Montgomery St., Winston Salem, N. C.

Mr. Robert Auth, 2518 Woodview, Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. C. M. Heymann, Hendersonville, N. C.

Stewardship and Apportionment—

Rev. W. W. Snyder, 721 N. Church St., Burlington, N. C.

Mr. R. V. Powell, 411 Woodlawn Ave., Greensboro, N. C.

Mr. J. E. Cumbie, Brown Summit, N. C.

Rev. W. T. Madren, Vernon Hill, Va.

Mr. J. Robert Walker, R. 3, Burlington, N. C.

Memoirs—

Rev. G. C. Crutehfield, Box 962, Burlington, N. C.

Mr. Y. A. Bray, Nathalie, Va.

Rev. J. Lester Stanley, RFD, Elon College, N. C.

Christian Education and Literature—

Rev. J. S. Graves, 401 Church St., Burlington, N. C.

Miss Marian Faust, 705 Montgomery St., Reidsville, N. C.

Rev. J. R. Laekey, Route No. 1, Gibsonville, N. C.

Mrs. W. E. Wiseman, 315 N. Edgeworth St., Greensboro, N. C.

Mrs. H. C. Moore, Route No. 3, Kernersville, N. C.

Nominations—

Mrs. J. C. Wilkins, Haw River, N. C.

Rev. Blafid Leebrick, Route No. 3, Burlington, N. C.

Rev. Fred Allred, Route No. 1, Summerfield, N. C.

Mr. Hugh Nelson, Box 2603, Greensboro, N. C.

Mr. W. E. Walker, Route No. 4, Burlington, N. C.

Resolutions—

Mrs. C. B. Wilkins, Virgilinia, Va.

Mrs. Paul Powell, Route No. 1, Ruffin, N. C.

Rev. Richard M. Peterson, Route No. 2, Elon College, N. C.

Mrs. M. M. Joyner, Summerfield, N. C.

Mr. Maynard Wells, Semora, N. C.

Public Relations—

Mrs. N. Carl Monroe, 1506 Garland Drive, Greensboro, N. C.

WOMAN'S PAGE.

(Continued from page 13.)

messages to women to attend, so they might receive further insight into all phases of the work.

8. Attended board meeting at Moonelon on August 31 to make plans for Fall Conference to be held in Greensboro.

Aims for the Coming Year:

1. To see every society accomplish all the achievement goals.

2. To work with various superintendents to get every church active in eradle roll, children's and young people's work.

3. To have each church participate in the World Day of Prayer; World Community Day; May Fellowship Day; Family Life programs; and other days for special emphasis.

4. To organize at least two new societies within the district.

5. To visit personally as many of the societies as possible.

6. To keep in contact with all societies at all times by letter, phone, or visits.

MRS. C. J. WRIGHT,
Superintendent.

There are safe and unsafe ways of doing anything. The knowledge or the knack of doing things safely is gained by experience, properly directed.—Ralph Budd.

Dr. Elden H. Mills

LAYMEN'S

Mid-Winter Rally

ELON COLLEGE

Sunday, February 14, 1954

For All Men of the Southern Convention
Inspirational Addresses---Fine Fellowship
Big Banquet---A Day You'll Remember

Starts---2:00 p. m.

Adjourns---7:00 p. m.

Dr. O. W. S. McCall

THE LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP
THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION
of Congregational Christian Churches

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, FEBRUARY 18, 1954

NUMBER 7

We Salute Elon College!

Students Leaving Whitley Auditorium After Chapel Services

Higher Christian Education is lived as well as taught at Elon College. Chapel Services are held regularly, and Students are expected to attend them. At these Services outstanding Speakers from our own and other Denominations are presented from time to time. At other times Members of the College Faculty conduct the Services.

The Churches' Stake in Higher Education

By W. MILLARD STEVENS
President of The Southern Convention

It is important for us to consider the churches' stake in higher education for at least three primary reasons, namely: 1. Our generation has lost sight of the relationship of religion and learning. 2. We have come to accept the secular pattern of life and become the slave of so-called objectivity. 3. With our concept of popular public education we have found it easier to rule out all religion rather than face up to our differences in religion, therefore, we have divorced God from education.

The results of these developments are far reaching and they may be classified under two general categories. 1. Our whole lives have come to be dominated by secularism, so that God is considered as of secondary importance, if and when he is considered at all. Religion has come to be a bit of lace tacked on the garment of life as an ornament. 2. With the growing secularization of life we have emphasised state institutions of higher education to the neglect of the church related colleges. Our attitude has come to be that of letting the state run and support the colleges, but we have insisted that they should not teach religion. We have reached the point where we by default have said, "Let the church related college die, we can't afford to maintain it." This is one of the shortest roads to a chaotic hell I know and we are travelling it very fast.

If we look at the history of higher education in this country we will discover that our educational system had its beginning from the impulse and force of religion. Our first college, Harvard founded in 1636 grew out of this religious impulse and force. Sixty-five years later Yale was established with the intention that their students might be "fitted for public employment both in church and civil state." So was the founding of Kings College, now Columbia University, William and Mary, Princeton, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, and many others of the leading Universities of the present day. In fact, in the early history of higher education in America it was almost all under Christian auspices. The Christian influence also played a large part in the early years of such outstanding state universities as the University of Virginia and of the University of North Carolina. To say that our forefathers ever intended to separate God and education or religion and learning, as many would want to say in our day, is a far cry from reality.

The church gave birth to, nurtured and developed our system of higher education in America. She today has a great stake in that which she created because the church can no more flourish in the midst of ignorance than can democracy, therefore, we need every college and university that we have in America, in fact we need even more such colleges and universities because all our young people need to have a college education. They need not only to have knowledge of the Arts and Sciences and Humanities but they need to know that God is a part of reality and learn to relate the facts of reality in their proper perspective. It is only through the church related colleges in America that we have been kept aware of the fact that God is a part of reality. If the church related college passes from the present scene we will soon become a pagan country. The church cannot long survive without the assistance of Christian higher education.

DR. W. MILLARD STEVENS

Over fifty per cent of the young people now in college in the United States are enrolled in church related colleges. Without these church related colleges over one half of our young people who are in college would not have the opportunities of a college education. Many of our most able leaders are the products of these church related colleges.

No student can or does pay the full cost for their education. For example, today it costs more than $2,000 per student per year to maintain and operate the average college while the student pays less than one half that amount. The remainder has to come from other sources. In state schools this comes from taxes and outside gifts, in other colleges it comes from endowments and personal gifts, even state colleges have to seek outside gifts, without these they would cease to operate. So you see it is not only the church related colleges which must seek funds to do their jobs but all colleges.

Our primary concern is with Elon College. Elon is our college and our responsibility. For over 60 years Elon has served in the fields of higher education with distinction as a Liberal Arts College. It is a college of which we can be justly proud.

Elon is a part of our Christian World Mission, it is as much a part of our mission as caring for homeless children, as sending missionaries to foreign lands, as building churches or any other enterprise. We must support all of these as long as a need exists and we must support and strengthen Elon as long as there are young people to be educated and I predict that that will be forever, at least I hope so.

If Elon is to serve in the years ahead as she should we will need in the very near future new dormitories, a new dinning room and additional endowments. These can be secured through the completion of the present campaign to raise two and one half million dollars for Elon. We have passed the one half way mark in this campaign but we cannot stop here, we must complete it and we will complete it, if all of us will share in the campaign through giving what we can to this campaign.

Let me conclude with this quotation from President Lowry of Wooster College which he has recorded in his book, The Mind's Adventure, "If the church colleges are not merely to survive but to become what they should become, the church itself must catch some vision of them." If the Congregational Christian Churches in the Southern Convention will catch a vision of the significance of Elon College, Elon will not only survive but it will fulfill a glorious mission in behalf of the Kingdom of God.

The Guidance Program at Elon College

By J. EARL DANIELEY
Acting Dean of Elon College

One of the ideas which is essential in the philosophy which guides those of us at Elon College is that we are not trying so much to teach subjects as we are trying to teach individuals. We are concerned about the growth intellectually, socially, and spiritually of every student who comes to our campus. We are convinced that men need facts but that their need for faith is even greater. It is our purpose, in so far as is possible, to give to our students a situation and an influence which will help to deepen their religious experience and strengthen their faith. This is one of the main purposes of our guidance program.

When the Administration of Elon College employs a faculty member it looks not only for a person trained in a particular academic field but for a person with an interest in the Christian Religion which is evidenced by active participation in the program of the church. Such people are better able to guide and direct our youth; such people make much more acceptable and valuable instructors for a college such as ours. It is the hope of the college that every single member of the faculty will be conscious of his opportunities and responsibilities in the guidance program of the college.

There are three areas in which a special effort is made to give guidance to our students: academic, social, and religious.

Academic.—Beginning with the orientation period for freshmen and transfer students the individual student is constantly under the guidance of some particular faculty member. Before the student arrives on campus he is assigned an adviser. During the orientation period he meets with that adviser to become acquainted and to arrange for other meetings to be held later. Reports on all freshmen are given to the Dean's office after three weeks of classes and again after six weeks. The student's adviser is notified of his progress and he plans a conference (or in many cases, several conferences) in order to provide assistance to the student. At the conclusion of six weeks of the quarter those students who are having difficulty with one or more subjects are called into the Dean's office for a conference.

During the period of orientation the student is given placement tests in some of the academic fields. In addition to this he is also given a psychological examination and a personality examination. These are, in a sense, diagnostic tests which give results of invaluable assistance to the adviser who is attempting to be of assistance to the student. Professor Gilbert Latham who is a psychologist and Professor J. C. Colley, chairman of the Department of Education and Psychology, are both trained in the technique of testing and render a valuable service to the college and the students in this respect.

DEAN J. E. DANIELEY

(Continued on page 11.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairmau; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Will We Grow, or Die?

Each year during the College Period, The Christian Sun is glad to present to its readers a special issue presenting the thrilling story of the accomplishments of Elon College—our college. Indeed, how it has grown from a small beginning, the handicaps it has overcome, and the service it has rendered to the Christians of the Southland, reads almost like a fairy tale.

In time past the leaders of our church recognized the value, the necessity of disseminating among our people a knowledge of the principles of our church. Over one hundred years ago they founded a paper for this purpose, and more than sixty years ago they established a college, that the ministers who ministered unto us might be well trained, and that our laity might receive an education that was Christian. They believed that without these essentials their church could not survive, and that with them it would become a force for the Kingdom of God. None, now, would deny that they were right.

What has been true in the past is doubly true for the future. If an educated ministry was needed then, it would be folly to deny that need now. If a laity trained in a Christian atmosphere was essential then, how much more necessary is it that the influences of Christianity be thrown around the young men and young women of our church today. It would seem to us that one were thoughtless indeed who did not recognize these facts.

Deny our church of the means of providing proper leadership; deny our leadership of the support of an educated Christian laity, and one denies the church the means of growth. We may as well face the facts. There will be no need for building churches, for others will take them over. There will be no need for Conference Centers, for there will be few to use them. Even our much loved Orphanage will cease to be as an organization of our church. As to "the larger mission of the church," whence will come its support? If you think this is wild talk, think it through.

We have been given these needed essentials for advancement and we are vastly more able to support them than were our fathers who bequeathed them to us. What are we going to do with them? Will we allow them to continue to struggle and finally to die—and die with them? Or will we rally to their support and follow them to ultimate victory?

J. T. K.

How to Interest the Local Church in Elon College

The writer is familiar with one major wrong way to go about interesting the local church in Elon College. It is a method used by him too frequently. Don't mention the college until it is time to raise some money for it. When that opportune occasion is at hand, mention the college. One hardly then can avoid putting the primary emphasis on the raising of money. That's the method. It really doesn't work too well, but constant failure is not always sufficient to change a procedure.

Most people are interested in a good story. Elon College has a good story. It is a story of the dedication of men and women who wanted a college, worked for a college, and produced and sustained a college. It is a story of music, dramatics, sermons, athletics, printing, drawing—the list could go on. It is a story of the quest for knowledge, the communication of knowledge and dedication to the truth. The story should be told.

The story can be told. It can be told by the minister in sermon and on pastoral visitation—throughout the whole of the year and sometimes just in passing. It can be told by the Sunday school teacher when lessons have to do with learning and schools. It can be told in homes, at clubs, at the barbershop by interested graduates and by present students. The point is the story must be told.

The college can be used to tell the story—to tell the story directly and indirectly. The choir, the dramatic group, members of the faculty and members of the student body are available for church service, for special occasions, for study groups. And the college welcomes visitors to its campus. Go and see the college.

When the story is told, not just of needs, but of accomplishments too, there is produced the realization it is a significant thing to be a voluntary supporter of an institution of higher learning. And there follows pride in having a part in extending this branch of the work of the church. The college has a story. Let us tell it!

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

GROUP OF STUDENTS FROM HENDERSON AND EPSOM AREA

First row: Jewel Winn, Patsy Fuller, Laura Seaman, Marie Weldon; second row: Ann Clifford, Barbara Weldon, Joann Eaves, Sylvia Smith; third row: Tommy Newman, Tyler Hight, Donnie Park, Charles Mason.

"Church Colleges Needed More Than Ever"

American educators universally recognize the important role which church schools played in the promotion of our democratic way of life during the early history of our nation. From the beginnings of the various Christian communities, the building of churches and the providing for academies and colleges was the major consideration of the citizenry. They realized that educators and religion at their best are always complements of each other, and that each depend upon the other. It is indeed a great tribute to those early pioneers in Christian Democracy in the New World that they had the vision splendid of a society motivated, inspired, and directed by the school and the church—thus making secure the Welfare of the State. Not until the Books of the Judgment unfold will it be known how much America is indebted to the church academies in her yesterdays and how much she is indebted to the church colleges from her beginning even until now!

The church academies have long since largely given way to the public high schools, though not without certain social, educational and religious losses to the churches and communities. Little by little the state has taken over more and more of the educational responsibility from the churches, until today the tax supported schools—the state colleges and universities, by reason of their economic advantage, make "the going" of church supported schools more and more difficult. The state schools simply depend upon the legislators and the tax payers to meet their needs—while the church colleges, as from the beginning, must depend upon the benefactions of the church people who bear their proportionate share of the expense involved in caring for tax-maintained state schools.

Society sadly needs the service being rendered by both the church schools and the state schools. Neither can take the place of the other. In fact many leading educators in both church colleges and state colleges and universities view with alarm the present inequity and unfair advantage obtaining between state schools and church schools in meeting rising costs of maintenance and operation.

Leaders in both church and state supported schools declare that the church schools have a definite contribution to make toward our nation's future—a contribution state schools are simply not qualified to render.

It would be nothing less than a major tragedy in our national concern if the time should ever come that the state schools should occupy the educational arena alone. Our religious agencies, our state colleges and universities, our national welfare and the cause of education in general need the church schools. Only deeper springs of philanthropic concern can save the church schools and the churches, for as go the church schools so will go the churches.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

How Elon College has Helped our Church

Education and the development of the Christian Church throughout the ages have gone hand in hand. A glance at our own Christian Church in the South prior to the founding of Elon College and now—will tell you the story. Elon College has greatly helped in the development of our churches. Without Elon it is doubtful that our church in the South would have survived.

Elon has inspired progress. Trained and keen minds of ministers and laymen of the Southern Convention have been inspired by the educational emphasis promoted by our college.

Elon has trained and developed leaders. Without trained leadership no church would long survive. The progress of the church may be measured in a large degree by the leadership coming out of Elon College. A look at the ministerial leadership will show that the churches are served by pastors who have been trained at Elon College, for the most part. To be sure splendid ministers from other areas have come to the Southern Convention. They are giving excellent leadership, but a look at the churches they serve will reveal that those churches have through the years been served by men who received training and inspiration at Elon College. Without Elon College it is doubtful if many of the men from other areas would have come to this area to work.

Elon College points to the future. As Elon goes, so will go our churches of the Southern Convention. It will be to her we shall have to continue to turn for inspiration, enlightened leadership, and courageous planning and work.

The churches of the Southern Convention need Elon College. Elon needs the churches. The two march successfully together.

WM. T. SCOTT.

Elon College Sustaining Fund Conference Year 1953-54

The sustaining Fund Committee of the convention and the college met in Henderson, N. C. in November, 1953, for the purpose of devising the best means of raising the Sustaining Fund for the conference year of 1953-54. After a broad and thorough discussion it was decided to utilize the college period of January and February 1954 for securing of as much of this money as possible.

A letter and poster pertaining to Elon College Day in the churches and the raising of the Sustaining Fund for the present conference year will have reached the desk of the ministers of the convention before this issue of THE SUN. Your committee urges the use of the poster and the following out of the other suggestions contained in this communication.

By way of survey let me say that at the Durham meeting of the convention, 1952, the Sustaining Fund was extended for the current biennium. Your committee on the Sustaining Fund was given the task of stimulating all the churches to contribute one dollar per member per year to be used for the current expenses of Elon College. This money is urgently needed and in the light of the college's finances it is a modest asking well within the ability of every Congregational Christian Church member to pay.

As in all other efforts to secure benevolent gifts the matter is basically an educational progress awaiting urgent, intelligent and persistent interpretation. Every church leader including the minister, the Sunday school superintendent, the deacons, the Official Board members, the Women's officers, the Laymen's Fellowship leaders, on to the men and women in the pews and in the homes of our constituency must lift their voices in support of our college.

The Sustaining Fund can be just an appeal or it can be what it ought to be, a source of actual support for Elon. If we do what we should the Sustaining Fund will perform a real function in the life, work of our college.

HENRY E. ROBINSON.

Christian Education in Elon College

Elon College produces some excellent directors of religious education, teachers in the week-day religious education program and, perhaps more important, ministers' wives. We are particularly eager to make it possible for the wives of young pastors to work along side their husbands in their churches.

To develop these lay religious leaders three specifically religious education courses are offered. The first is one dealing with the general principles of religious education with a special study of the methods of the Master Teacher, Jesus.

A second course has to do with the contents of religious education, especially the curriculum materials for Sunday schools. The third course is a very practical down-to-earth study of young people's work, the aims and methods of all youth organizations with which the church has any direct relationship.

However, a more important objective of Elon's religious education program is to give all students an understanding of our Christian religion. Many who come to us know practically nothing of the Bible of Christianity. This term 167 young people are enrolled in our New Testament survey classes. Last term about the same number studied the Old Testament.

Every successful pastor has had the satisfaction of leading people to the discovery and acceptance of the religion of Christ. A similar experience upon a much larger scale makes my work something I am unwilling to trade for anything else. Time and again young people confide to me in personal conferences that they have discovered Christ in my classes. In these same classes a number of young men and young women have made their decision to enter into full time Christian work.

People today need Christianity more than ever before. Current tendencies which disrupt homes, the fear of war, and the speed of twentieth century living demand a stability and a purpose in life which only the religion of Jesus is able to supply. Our college young people will soon be the leaders in their communities. Leaders who have no consistent, intelligent Christian background can lead our work into chaos. If our leaders have made their aims those of the Christian religion they can lead the world into the Kingdom of God. To develop such Christian leadership is the goal of Elon College.

W. W. SLOAN.

Will Your Son or Daughter Go to College—Where?

Parents of our church whose sons and daughters plan to go to college should, it seems to me, give first consideration to our own church college as they think the whole matter through in detail with the prospective student.

If a man owned a car he would not likely hire one to drive to market while his own automobile was in working order. Elon College is ours. It belongs to the members of the Southern Convention. It offers our sons and daughters education that is Christian, including personal help from faculty members, not only in the class room but on the campus as well. It would therefore seem logical to use our own college, with its opportunities which compare favorably with other schools. An Elon student may well be proud of his college in any field of education.

Our young people will go from the class room out into a world of frustration and uncertainty. As Christian parents we owe it to them to see that they are provided not only class room instruction but that they are fortified by examples of Christian living as I believe is done on our college campus. Thus faith is strengthened and Christian principles installed in the hearts and minds of our youth to face courageously the conflict of modern life—that faith in God that it takes to see them through. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Editor of Christian Herald, was asked by a young man, "Dr. Poling, what do you know about God?" "Not much," this great man replied, "but what I do know has changed my life." Experiences at Elon have helped strengthen many students in this "certain knowledge."

In thirty years of the Gospel ministry I have found Elon College graduates to be men and women of sterling Christian character and recognized leaders in their vocational fields of service. It is my personal opinion that this has come about largely by the plus of Christian teaching and examples of Christian living that are standard of Elon as a Christian college.

By the grace of God and the loyalty of our people Elon has weathered storms of war and days of struggle. It will be only by these same strongholds that she will continue to be a Beacon Light in the future for our sons and daughters.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Financing Elon College

When the Southern Christian Convention founded Elon College it knew that it would cost money to build it, that it would cost money to operate it. The church gladly accepted this responsibility and has never disclaimed it. Individuals may have, but the church never. In fact, it has always provided for the college's support. It has formulated plans and called upon the local church to put these plans into effect.

CURRENT FUNDS.

That the college might have money for operating costs, supplementing student tuition and fees, the convention has apportioned $15,000 to the conferences and through the conferences to the local churches. This amount may be small but the college would find it difficult to get along without it.

THE SUSTAINING FUND.

To further assist the college in its struggle for economic existence, the convention requested the churches to contribute $1 per member annually for the support of the college. In the aggregate this is a sizeable amount, but individually a small one. We certainly could contribute $1 each for the support of a great college, our college.

CAPITAL FUNDS.

Buildings and equipment had to be provided for the conduct of the college. The necessary amount was determined and the churches were appealed to to give it. This is the plan that the church has always followed to meet the increasing needs of the college.

Recently the convention authorized a campaign to secure $2,500,000 for buildings, equipment, and endowment, and is calling upon the churches, alumni, and friends to contribute this amount over a period of ten years, beginning in 1946 and ending in 1956. To date a total of $1,324,000 has been secured, $300,000 added to the endowment, and the power house, gymnasium, and faculty houses have been built. We now face the impelling responsibility of erecting dormitories and a dining room for the comfort and convenience of our students. The remaining $1,176,000 needed to complete the $2,500,000 campaign fund for the college would be sufficient to provide these badly needed building and equip them.

It is proposed that we marshal all of our forces for an effective and extensive organization and complete this campaign by December 31, 1955. It can be done, let's do it.

DR. ELDEN MILLS and PRES'T SMITH stand on the steps in front of Whitley Auditorium. Dr. Mills of West Hartford, Connecticut, one of the great preachers of today, was at Elon last week as president and representative of the Division of Christian Education of our United Church. Dr. Mills spoke twice daily and conferred with students and faculty members. His visit and services were a benediction to the campus and all concerned, faculty members, students, and townspeople.

Where Do We Go from Here?

Elon College has a commendable and inspiring past. Its contributions in the field of Christian higher education have been significant, out of proportion to its size and available resources. Its visions and effectiveness have never been matched with sufficient financial strength. The lack of funds for buildings, equipment, faculty salaries, and an aggressive program in keeping with progressive policies in education have always prevented Elon from rendering its maximum services to church and state. Yet our college has come a long way on the road of higher education. It has an inspiring curriculum, a superior faculty, first class equipment for instructional purposes, an endowment in excess of one half million dollars, invested funds far in excess of one fourth of a million dollars, an interested alumni, and an enthusiastic church back of it.

Today our college stands proud of its past, and facing the future with determination, enthusiasm, hope and expectancy. Obviously we stand between the past and the future. It may be that some of us did not help to make the past but, without question, the future of the college is in our hands. This is a serious responsibility. The big question is what are we going to do about it? It is on the heart of every alumnus and church member; whether we like it or not, whether we accept it or not, it is there. Where do we go from here—backward or forward?

There is but one way to go and that is forward, and go we will, regardless of the cost. We are determined for the future of our college. We are dedicating our selves and what we have, that its needs may be met, its resources multiplied, and its future guaranteed. In strengthening our college, we strengthen our church, we undergird it with a better trained leadership which shall mean more, better, and stronger churches. We cannot help our college without helping our church.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

It is fitting and right that following the fifth Sunday we should have an unusually good offering for the college. It is also fitting that this report should be made in the college issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The college expresses its appreciation and gratitude for the continued support by our Sunday schools and churches.

Previously reported	$ 761.17
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Pope's Chapel S. S.	$ 5.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Naus.) S. S.	30.58
Shelton Memorial	10.00
South Norfolk	133.00
Windsor S. S.	24.72
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Happy Home S. S.	14.73
Asheville	10.00
Union (N. C.)	97.00
	<hr/>
	325.03
Total to date	$ 1,086.20

Cheer Leaders are Important in Intercollegiate Athletics

Elon College has a well-rounded Intercollegiate and Intramural Athletic Program and an excellent Physical Education Department, assuring a healthy Student Body.

The Local Church and Elon College

A local church is a group of individuals banded together for mutual help, inspiration, worship and service. If there is to be organization there must be vested leadership and responsibility. A church elects a pastor, who is the leader, director, and chief planner of the work and worship of a church. For that responsibility he must be highly trained, for it is a great responsibility, and only those trained specifically for such leadership can succeed.

It follows, then, that there must be a place where such training can be given. Here again, it cannot be just any place. It must be the place. With the two hundred churches in the Southern Convention we have the place. We have Elon College. Elon trains men and women far beyond the bounds of the convention, but the Southern Convention has no other place to train its leadership. The college was created, through prayer and sacrifice, for that purpose. Then there is the proposition that if trained leadership is to have a fair chance to serve there must be trained followers. Elon trains them too!

What this boils down to, of course, is that when our churches pay their Apportionments and Sustaining Fund for the support of Elon College, they are making possible the leadership and the personnel they must have if the local church is to serve its day and generation. Individual members of our churches likewise have the privilege of investing in the success of their local church by sending personal gifts to Elon College. Elon College is not an expense to the churches, it is an investment which pays liberal dividends in spiritual leadership in the pulpit and in the pew. We know that we cannot do without Elon College and develop our churches. Let us recognize that Elon cannot do without us, our children as students, and our money as operating capital. When we supply the financial needs of the college she will supply us with leadership for our churches and satisfaction of heart that God has so blessed us that we in turn can be a blessing to churches beyond our own—"even to the uttermost parts of the world"—for Elon College is, indeed, our greatest missionary.

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

Religious Life at Elon

When asked to write this brief article I sat down, first, to write about "Education with a Christian Purpose." But space would not permit me to go far with that theme, primary as it is. However, this purpose is the particular reason for the existence of Elon College. The world is not impoverished for lack of "educated" people. The most highly educated nations have made the first half of the 20th Century the bloodiest, and perhaps most chaotic, in history. Something seems lacking therefore in the educational diet, at large.

Our concern at Elon is to supply this ingredient if we can. We believe it is essentially the sense of Christian vocation, whatever the student's anticipated field of work may be. This fact is stressed emphatically and often, not only in formal religious services but in and out of classrooms and halls. If this were not so, Elon would have no basic reason for continued existence.

The formal religious services at Elon consist of chapel periods three times weekly, two of which are ex-

Winners in Elon "High School Day" Scholarship Contest

Pictured above are eight High School Students who won Scholarships ranging in value from $200.00 to $1,000.00. Left to right, they are: Fred Keith Mason, Bonny Arrington, Michael James Fargis, Ann Stallings Wilson, David Robert Bryant, Adelaide Schnell, Charles Reavis and Rebecca Ann Bradley elusively religious; the regular Sunday morning worship in Whitley; one or two evening vesper periods in Whitley; regular Sunday evening Student Fellowship Hours in the parish house; and special religious emphasis periods. Attendance, except at chapel, is voluntary.

A fair test of genuine religious concern was reflected in the response of students at the Religious Emphasis Period in October. Morning devotions in Whitley, just before classes, drew upwards to one-half the resident student body, as did the nightly forum sessions and closing communion service. Nightly dorm sessions were crowded with students, thanks to the able leadership of Dr. W. Millard Stevens of our Norfolk church, and Dr. William Sengel of Radford College, Department of Religion. When it is considered that Protestants across the land absent themselves from regular religious services in their churches to the tune of 75 per cent, our students at Elon set a very much higher example of faithfulness. On an average Sunday we will have no more than 150 students on campus, but two thirds of these worship regularly in the campus church or elsewhere.

The students at Elon in the choir receive training and experience in interpretation of the best sacred music which is of incalculable spiritual value, not only to themselves, but to those to whom they minister regularly. Every student graduating here takes prescribed courses in religion which cannot but impart genuine spiritual health. The total impact of these and other functions of a religious nature creates an atmosphere at Elon, at least, in which students are effectively challenged to appraise the whole of life in terms of Christian vocation.

HOWARD P. BOZARTH,
Pastor.

Elon College
Community Church.

HIGH SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

President Smith Congratulates Ann Stallings Wilson and David Robert Bryant on winning $1,000.00 Scholarships.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

What's in a Name?

At the North Carolina Woman's Conference last fall, a change was proposed in the name of that body. This came in the form of a resolution from the Raleigh-Henderson District Rally in April, 1952, and had been approved by the executive board of the conference.

According to the new Annual the final motion voted was: "That it be the desire of the North Carolina Woman's Conference of Congregational Christian Churches that the name of this body should be changed to the North Carolina Women's Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Churches, and that we recommend this action to the Executive Board of the Southern Convention Woman's Missionary Convention."

This was not an idea "railroaded" across by an executive group, for there was plenty of discussion from the floor, with questions and answers and inter-change of ideas.

The consensus seemed to be that it would be more courteous, if not more legal, to refer the matter to the Executive Board of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches (how's that for a mouthful?) for its approval.

That executive board will be meeting soon and this is published now so you may write Mrs. W. B. Williams, 1253 24th Street, Newport News, Virginia, if you have some convictions on the subject. Those of Dorthy Jackson are published below.

Perhaps it should be said, as it was at the conference, that this change in conference name would not make it necessary for our local women's groups to change theirs—of course, the truth is that many of them already use some name like "Women's Fellowship of the ——— Church."

* * * * *

A Name Change

Speaking for the above motion—

MRS. R. L. JACKSON.

Most Christians today realize that missionary work is simply a part of being Christians; it is not a peripheral activity which we may choose to engage in or not. It is simply one phase of the Christian's life closely allied to and even mingled with all Christian activity.

Since our conference women's program already aims to help our women with all phases of work done by Christian women, a change in name might help newcomers and old members, too, to a better understanding of this fact.

You may wonder that I, your former missionary, should advocate this change. Why take out the word missionary? Because, by continuing the use of the word missionary in our organization's name, we encourage church women to think of missions in the narrow sense and to think of missions as something they may choose to ignore. For example, an announcement of fall missionary conference comes to the attention of a new comer to our church. "Oh, that's for the missionary society—well, I don't belong to that," is her response; and these words may express the thought of more than one of our church women. You see how such use of that may create a mental barrier against joining with the other women of the church and against doing the mission work so vital to our church life.

Briefly, the new name has four advantages, as I see it:

1. It is simpler—one less word.
2. The new name makes it clear that all church women are invited to share in our work, not just those who are members of a missionary society.
3. The new name does not limit the work of church women to missions in its narrow sense.
4. It fits in with the names of our national and international women's organizations, both of which use the word Fellowship in their names—The Women's Fellowship of the Missions Council of the Congregational Christian Churches (or the National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women), and The Women's Fellowship of the International Congregational Council,

Elon College's Share in the Benevolent Giving of the Churches

I am just an average American who tries to be a good churchman in the use of his money. My income is about $1,000 per year. Because tithing seems to be Biblical, and makes me a better steward, I will have $100 to give to good causes.

The church of which I am a part has first claim on my gifts. It must function. I must join with the other members in giving $1 per week to keep it going like it should. That takes $52 of my gifts.

The community has needs which I must answer. Bible in the public schools, scouting—it is a long list. Put me down for $10, and divide it the best you can.

As a churchman, my interests go far beyond my community. And I want to have a share in all that my church does.

The business of the church must be carried forward by workers. That applies to Conference, Convention, General Council, Home Boards, and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Weak churches need help, and new churches must be built. This is true in my area, in the U. S. A., and across the world. I want to be in on this crusade for more and better churches.

Then there are the homeless children, the aged, the hungry—they are legion, and I must not forget them.

But what about my college? Its president asks me to consider what share of church missionary and benevolent money should go to the college. That makes it personal, I must decide what to give. Of my $38 undivided money to give, how much shall go to Elon College?

The Southern Convention has asked my church for about fifty cents per member on Apportionments for Elon College. Then it urgently suggests that each member give an additional dollar for the Sustaining Fund. That means $1.50 from me. In addition to this the college needs new buildings and more endowment, and is authorized to raise another million and a half. "Money, money, money! The college is always wanting money."

I have just thought of something! Or did the college president tell it to me some time ago? If all of us members of the Southern Convention would give $7.50 to Elon College for

(Continued on page 14.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

E. N. C. Young People—

Prepare to attend your rally on March 7, at the Liberty Vance Church. Go and represent your Youth Group.

* * *

According to the news sent in, something is wrong in our groups. Is it that they are inactive, not doing anything or just failing to send in news of what they are doing. It is of interest to all of us, so let us hear from you.

* * * * *

Youth Sunday at Pleasant Grove

A capacity crowd filled the Pleasant Grove Church of the W. N. C. Conference on the first Sunday of February as the youth took complete charge of all the services on that day. These were the results as the adults stepped aside during Youth Week while the youth filled all offices from minister down to sexton.

Many young people of this church took part in the activities of the week. Those filling positions for the week were:

Minister—Gale Brady.

Deacons—Eugene Hammer, Paul Brady, Jimmy Lee Brady.

Trustees—Odel Brady, Sam Brady, Jesse Leonard.

Superintendent—Wayne Brady.

S. S. Teachers—Ella May Brady, Louise Brown, Elouise Brady, Alene Brown, Mrs. Gale Brady, Billy Faye Brown, Billy Chilton.

S. S. Secretary—Shirley Brady. Choir Director—Doris Brady.

Pianist—Betty Sue Brady.

Ushers—Rama Simmons, Betty Simmons, Krene Brown, Edna Lee Brady.

Sexton—Wade Bray.

These youth showed their colors as they were given opportunities in filling these capacities.

BILL SIMMONS,
Pastor.

* * * * *

A Correction

In the report of the Young Adult Class of Lebanon Church, last week, one paragraph read: "On February 5, 1954, we will present a three act comedy play, 'Aaron Slick from Pumpkin Creek', to secure funds to purchase pulpit furnishings for the church." The correction is that the funds from this play will go into the regular Building Fund for the church.

A Newcomer Learns of Elon College

Hard-headed Newcomer: "Elon College; what's that?"

Southern Conventionite: "What's that! Why 'that' is Our college; just about the finest little old institution you ever saw; filled with good teachers, hard working boys and pretty gals down Carolina way." (goes into college cheer) "We are right proud of our college."

H. H. N. C.: "So what?"

S. C.: "So back in 1889 some far-sighted men of our Southern Convention realized that trained leaders, both ministers and lay people, were needed if our churches in the Southeast were to continue."

H. H. N. C.: "Why?"

S. C.: "Naturally you don't need education to know Christ for yourself. But we do need educated men and women to tell others about Christ and to lead the churches. Have you noticed that the pentecostal churches, while not seeming to stress education, all start their own colleges before very long?"

H. H. N. C.: "So what?"

S. C.: "So its important that there be Congregational Christian church-related colleges. For one thing, we have held, since the Pilgrims at Plymouth, that the church should be at the center of the community; to give it purpose and faith. Therefore, we must have trained leaders and they must be Christian leaders as well. Secondly, our churches do not push a rigid pattern on us, rather we believe that each person must freely find Christ for himself with the help of the church."

H. H. N. C.: "Why?"

S. C.: "You can't ram religion down a man's throat. Now I've heard folks say that we don't emphasize religion enough at Elon; even with required courses, chapel, etc. Christianity isn't so much in what's said as in what's done. When a teacher can give his students not only information but the desire to use that information in the service of plenty of good Christian fun—available to all; when the athletic teams play and the students watch for the joy of it, not just to win . . . that's when a college is Christian.

H. H. N. C.: "So what?"

S. C.: "As I see it, we are trying at Elon to develop the Christian personalities of our boys and girls so they will make more Christian the communities to which they go. That means that the college itself must be a real community; where there is shared the desire to seek and to life by the truth. Then the college and the churches of the Southern Convention themselves make up a community. That's why we feel Elon is our college. Most of our ministers and many of our people have been trained there. Then the students are already and will be even more so, parts of their own local communities. Our communities need more than just businessmen, school teachers, and scientists; they need Christian ones. That is the big job for Elon and for us all."

H. H. N. C.: "Why?"

S. C.: (screams) "Enough!" Cracks H. H. N. C. over head with baseball bat. Fracture reveals phonograph machine and much sawdust.

H. V. HARMON.

THE GUIDANCE PROGRAM AT ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 3.)

As soon as the student chooses his major field, he changes advisors and is under the direction of the Head of the Department or one of the other professors in the chosen field. This makes it possible for the student to work closely with his advisor under conditions other than when there is some difficulty. The guidance program during the fall quarter seemed to work very successfully if the progress of the students is a true indication. Very few found it necessary to leave school because of academic difficulty. This was not the result of any compromise of standards but was due to a more persistent effort on the part of the faculty to get adequate work from the students.

Social.—The social program is under the immediate supervision of Miss Alice Black, Dean of Women. Other members of the faculty are conscious, however, of their responsibility in helping to "set the tone"

(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARCASLE, D. D.

"The Good Shepherd"

LESSON IX—FEBRUARY 28, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I have other sheep that are not of this fold; I must bring them also, and they shall heed my voice. So there shall be one flock, one shepherd."—John 10: 16.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ezekiel 34: 11-16.

Jesus was talking about the relationship between himself and his followers. He put it in simple language—he said it was like the relationship between a shepherd and his sheep. The people knew what he was talking about. Many of them were shepherds; all of them had seen shepherds. It was because of his ability to put great truths in simple language that the common people heard him gladly.

The True Shepherd.

The words of Jesus concerning the "True Shepherd" must be seen against the background of the events of the preceding chapter of John. In that chapter, the Pharisees had given an example of their self-assumed authority in excommunicating the man born blind who had been healed by Jesus. They were unauthorized rulers. Jesus was the Messiah, divinely appointed and divinely commissioned by God himself. He was the "True Shepherd." They had "climbed up some other way"; he had entered through the door.

Let us get the setting of the words. Here is a sheepfold, a large enclosure, surrounded by a strong wall which is crowned with briars and rough branches, a place of safety and security for sheep at night. The one legitimate entrance is a door or gate, guarded by a "porter." At night the shepherds lead their flocks into the sheepfold. In the morning they come back for their sheep, and granted admittance by the porter, they call their sheep by name, and lo, their sheep, knowing their master's voice, come out one by one and follow the shepherd. The Pharisees were not true shepherds, they had not been divinely appointed, they had climbed up some other way. The people "did not know their voices," nor were they willing to follow them. On the contrary, Jesus was the True Shepherd. He had been given access to the flocks by men who had fulfilled the prophetic office, and especially by John the Baptist.

The Door.

In the second part of his discourse, Jesus pictures himself as "the door of the sheep." He is saying that the way to divine fellowship and communion with the Father is through him. He is the Way to God. Those who come to God through him, "shall find pasture"—they shall find the satisfaction for life's deepest needs. They "shall go in and out"—they will find liberty in Christ, release from the penalty and power of sin. They will find life, and find it more abundantly. Indeed, he had come for that very purpose. "I am come that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly."

The Good Shepherd.

"I am the good shepherd," says Jesus. It is another of the "I am's" of Jesus, and a most appropriate and adequate one. And in his words on this occasion, he tells us some of the things that he does as the "Good Shepherd":

He Knows His Sheep by Name. The relationship is personal. He sees folks as individuals as persons in their own right, not as a flock nor in the mass. One of the central affirmations of Jesus was God's care of the individual. He calls his own sheep by name—it is an intimate, personal relationship.

He Feeds His Sheep. He leads them into green pastures. He gives them the living Bread of Life. He nourishes the inward life. They shall find satisfaction for life's deepest needs.

He Leads His Sheep. "He goeth before them." The Lord Jesus Christ is a Leader, not a driver. He goes before the sheep, he leads the way, he guides them. If any man follows him, he will not walk in darkness, but he shall have the light of life.

He Saves the Sheep. "By me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved." His very name means "Saviour." He was named Jesus because it was he who should save his people from their sins. Through him, men come into a new relationship with God which is the essence of salvation.

He Loves the Sheep. When danger arises, the hireling flees, because he is a hireling and "careth nothing for the sheep." But the Good Shepherd loves his sheep, loves every one of them—the good sheep and the "black sheep." And when one of them is lost, he seeketh it until he finds it. It is a love that will not let go. "He lays down his life for the sheep."

He Gives Liberty to the Sheep. He "shall go in and out and find pasture." Paul had much to say about the liberty wherewith Christ has set us free. There is liberty in Christ. To be sure, it is not license; it is the power to do as one ought, but not the power to do as one pleases. Freedom from fear, from guilt, from the power and penalty of sin—Christ gives these.

He Gives Life to the Sheep. "I am come that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly." Life with Christ has new dimensions, new meaning, new direction, new dignity, new power, new depth, new breadth, new tone. In him is life and light. And the life that now is is a token of the life which is to come, abundant, abiding life, life eternal.

The Sheep.

What about the sheep? The true followers of Christ? They "hear his voice." "They know his voice," they follow him, they obey him, they trust him, they love him!

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

"Elon Graduates and Former Students in the Local Church"

Former Elonites, whether graduates, or non-graduates can do several simple, but important things in behalf of their Alma Mater.

I. They can assume positions of responsibility and leadership in the local church and Sunday school. "To whomsoever much is given, of the same is much required." The fact that young people have had the advantage of college education means that more is expected of them. It is a reflection on the college, and more of a reflection on the college student himself, if after attending his church college, he does not attend the services of the local church, accept re-

(Continued on page 15.)

A Group of Ministerial and Christian Education Students

A growing contribution of Elon College to the Church and the Community is the increasing number of Ministerial and Religious Education Students who are preparing themselves for the future Work of God's Kingdom.

Undergraduate Training of Ministerial Students

"What are the signs of the times?" This is a question which demands the attention of those who would plan for the future. How long would a man remain in business if he did not seek to interpret the trends in his particular area of activity? How much of his success will depend upon the accuracy with which he reads the signs of the times and the skill with which he plans the conduct of his business accordingly? By the same token, our planning for the education and training of your ministers calls upon us to read the signs of the times and to determine our strategy in the light of these observations.

What significant trends are there in modern programs of ministerial education? In what direction do the seminaries and divinity schools appear to be moving? At what points do these graduate institutions exert major emphases in their program of training men for professional leadership in the churches? Certainly, these questions must concern those who have the responsibility for planning the undergraduate studies for young people preparing for the Christian ministry. In a very practical sense, undergraduate studies must be fitted into the total picture of ministerial training. Our observations of trends in seminary work are not intended to be in any way critical. They are made in the effort to read the signs of the times. Further, determining trends is always like skating on thin ice. No doubt there will be exceptions to the general observations that are made.

DR. FERRIS E. REYNOLDS

It will require but a quick review of the course offerings in the catalogues of our leading seminaries, however, to support this major sign of our time in ministerial education. Programs of training for ministers are becoming more highly practical. At least half the standard seminary course deals with the "know how" of church administration and pastoral service. New departments have been added to provide work in pastoral counselling, clinical methods, religious education, institutional management, dramatics, radio, television, audio-visuals, church finance and music. In direct proportion to this increase in practical fields of study, there has been a decrease in content subjects such as Bible, history and theology. For example, according to one seminary catalogue, a student might graduate with only one course in New Testament.

Now, what does this trend mean for those who plan undergraduate studies for ministerial students? It means that a great many of the tools and skills for scholarship must be provided almost entirely at the undergraduate level. Equipment in foreign languages, local analysis, critical and interpretative skill, for example, will need to be achieved before the student reaches graduate school. Basic training in the methods (Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Representative Sunday schools from each of our five conferences have sent us monthly offerings this week totaling $381.68. Thanks to every man and woman, and every boy and girl who contributed to those offerings. You help us with the care of 81 children. You probably did not miss the contributions you made, but my! how it helped us. So again I thank you.

If every Sunday school would receive a monthly offering and mail it to the Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., we would get every cent of it, your church would get credit, and our bills would be paid. That is just a plain business, straight-along way, of doing it. If in this way your Sunday school contributed more than is requested for your apportionment the balance could then be counted on that "authorized special" voted by the Southern Convention. We are giving every church in every conference credit for the amounts sent in. We hope many churches will pay their apportionment, and help on the "authorized special." The apportionment divided among all the churches is $15,000.00 per year, and the "authorized special" divided among all the churches is $25,000.00 per year. I have been most of my time a pastor. I know full well that every wide-awake pastor and member want their church to make a good record on all counts, and I will co-operate with them in that goal.

For these 81 children I covet your help.

We are so pleased that our children have gone this far through the winter with good health. We have had almost no colds. One girl has to be taken to a doctor's office three times each week for shots for asthma. Children are being carried to various dentists, and one boy is taken to Gastonia regularly about every three months for check-up at cripple children's clinic. It takes time and patience to attend to 81 children, prepare three meals daily, see to their being ready for school mornings, ready for Sunday school and church Sundays; seeing that their clothes, shoes, wraps, are right at all times. It is a fulltime job for several people. But the children show that they have good friends here, and their faces are bright and mostly their attitudes are good. It is hard to get everyone of them to take care of their clothes, and shoes as they should. It is easy for some of them to desire more than is good for them, and to pout if it the over-abundance is not supplied. But most of the children here are really appreciative of what a good home they have, and it is a real joy to work for them and with them.

Thank you for helping to make it a joy.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 11, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

First Cong. Christian Church, Reidsville, N. C., Towels and wash cloths.
Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.

B. A. Sellars and Sons, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.

H. A. Epps, Burlington, N. C., Gym Set.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 1,315.76
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville $ 6.70
Mt. Auburn, S. S. 7.00

13.70

Eastern Va. Conference:
Rosemont $ 60.00
Cypress Chapel 125.00
Portsmouth, First, S. S. . 15.82

200.82

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Greensboro, Calvary $ 10.00
Hines Chapel S. S. 6.00
Liberty S. S. 38.00
Mt. Zion S. S. 9.82
Tryon 95.00

158.82

Virginia Valley Conference:
Winchester S. S. $ 8.34

8.34

Total $ 381.68

Grand Total $ 1,697.44

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 3,704.23
A. H. Rogers, Burlington
N. C. $ 25.00
Doreas Class, South Norfolk Christian Church . 23.63
A Friend 5.00
Circle Four, Women's Fellowship, Suffolk Christian Church 12.50
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr. 25.00
In Memory of Mrs. Charles Robertson 5.00
In Memory of Mrs. Mary Cain 2.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr. 25.00
Special Gifts 228.00

$ 351.13

Grand total $ 4,055.36

Total for the week $ 732.81

Total for the year $ 5,752.80

ELON COLLEGE'S SHARE.

(Continued from page 10.)

five consecutive years, the college would have the needed million and a half. Let's see: I give $.50 on Apportionments, $1.00 for Sustaining Fund, and $7.50 for Buildings and Endowment. That means that for five years I give to Elon College $9.00 annually, and that I have $29.00 to give to other missionary and benevolent causes. Sounds like I could do it, doesn't it? Think I shall, for I believe in Christian education.

But I am just one. It will take all of us—all 34,000 of us to keep the church going at high speed. I do hope that everyone will respond as good churchmen, as good stewards, for it is just possible that the Great Teacher is interested in what we do with our money, and for our college.

F. C. LESTER.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

For the Children

Dear Boys and Girls:

This week is one in which we think about being firm friends with people who are unlike us. For some people it is easy, for others, hard. Mexicans, Filipinos, Puerto Ricans, Japanese, Chinese and Negroes are all different from white boys and girls.

But they have bones alike and blood too. Color of skin, hair and eyes make children different.

Some are different because they are of the Roman Catholic Church, the Jewish faith, of Greek Orthodox. There are as many ways of believing in God as there are different colors of hair . . . which are a lot of ways!

We usually feel strangely toward people we don't know. When we get to know them and become friends, then we like them and they like us.

Our nation is friendly with many different people. We could be even more friendly if we tried. Right now our great Supreme Court is thinking and talking about whether or not we shall have schools for colored and white children. We do not know what they will decide. You young folk will be the ones who help to solve our differences in race and belief. You live in a very exciting time.

We can speak well of all people. We can think how others feel. Our American Indians have an old saying; "Do not speak bad of a man until you have walked in his moccasins for a week." We do not always know why people are like they are. But we can think before we speak or act.

J. J. H.

GRADUATES AND STUDENTS IN THE LOCAL CHURCH.

(Continued from page 12.)

sponsibilities in it, contribute toward it. Many Elonites are doing just these things. Many a local church is stronger because Elonites are members of it and working in it.

2. They can speak a good word for Elon. In public and in private, they can "sell Elon" to the public and to persons in particular. They need not be ashamed of Elon—she ranks high on the list of Liberal Arts Colleges in our nation. She is not above criticism, but we should parade her virtues and not proclaim her faults.

There is much good to be said of Elon and Elonites are the folks to say it.

3. They can enlist the interest of prospective students and encourage them to go to Elon. This is an outgrowth of the former suggestion, made specific and practical. More young people would go to Elon if more Elon people would seek them out and encourage them to go to Elon.

4. They can become members of the local Alumni Association, and take an active part in its affairs. In numbers there is strength. Through an organization an Elonite can do more than as an individual. An Alumni Association multiplies the strength and influence of the individual.

5. They can contribute to the college. A college degree, or college training increases the earning power of a young person. But no college student pays in full for the training he receives at college. By his or her gifts through the years, the Elonite can repay in some small measure for the training which has enabled him or her to earn more, to live better, and to render larger services. Because we have so freely received we ought as freely to give.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

UNDERGRADUATE TRAINING OF MINISTERIAL STUDENTS.

(Continued from page 13.)

of research and the achievement of objective judgment must be provided on the college level.

If this observation and analysis is correct, it means that the undergraduate work done by the ministerial candidate is of crucial importance. Any failure on the college level in the future will be a great deal more serious than it was a generation ago. Can we depend upon any kind of undergraduate institution to provide our ministerial candidates with their college work? Obviously, this trend in the professional schools makes the church related liberal arts college a must in the total program of ministerial training.

In years past, the service that Elon College has rendered in this work of training young ministers has been highly significant. But according to the signs of the times, its function in the future will be even more vital and crucial. Truly, upon the Elon of tomorrow will depend the calibre and effectiveness of the church's ministerial leadership in the decades ahead! Why not read the signs of the times?

FERRIS E. REYNOLDS.

THE GUIDANCE PROGRAM AT ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 11.)

of campus life and acquainting the students with what is acceptable social behavior. Faculty members are constantly assisting the students with their social programs and serving as chaperones for student functions.

Religious.—Those students who are planning to enter the ministry or some other phase of full-time Christian service constitute the organization known as the Ministerial Association. The faculty members in the Department of Religion serve as the advisers to this Association and assist in its program and activities. All students are eligible to join the Student Christian Association; Rev. Howard Bozarth, pastor of the Elon College Community Church, serves this group in an advisory capacity. In addition to Mr. Bozarth, four members of the faculty have been chosen by the Association to advise in each of its fields of interest.

Religious services are planned for the students twice each week; the services are held on Wednesday and Friday mornings; attendance is required of all students. These chapel services provide the students an opportunity to hear some very outstanding speakers from local churches and visitors who come to the campus.

Each Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour a student discussion group is held. At the present Mrs. W. W. Sloan is teaching this class. Attendance is completely voluntary; the students elect their own officers who are responsible for the program of the group.

The Community Church holds its regular service in Whitley Auditorium on the campus; townspeople, faculty and students worship together under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Bozarth. The college choir furnishes the music for the services; the Department of Music furnishes an organist and soloists. There is a real effort to make the program of the church vital and meaningful to the students.

Academically, socially, and religiously we are attempting to guide and direct the students who come to Elon. We realize that it is a job which is never done. It is encouraging, however, to see graduates of Elon take their places in their chosen professions and render significant service to their community, their church and their God.

South Entrance to Alamance Building

Alamance Building is the College Administration Building. It houses the Offices of the College and Class Rooms for several Departments of the College, including Art and Home Economics, and Space for Student Activities

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.

Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, FEBRUARY 25, 1954

NUMBER 8

A Red Letter Day for Newport News

At 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, March 7, our Newport News, Virginia Church will hold a Service of Thanksgiving and Dedication, at which time it plans to burn the mortgage of the Education and Fellowship Building. The Christian Sun offers its felicitations and congratulations, and wishes for the Church many more increasingly useful years of service.

News Flashes

Installation services will be held for Rev. George D. Alley, in Suffolk Christian Church on Sunday afternoon, February 28, at 3 o'clock. Ministers and friends from our other churches are invited to attend the service.

We belatedly offer our congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. Harvey L. Carnes of Franklin, Virginia, upon the arrival on January 25, of Emily Lois Carnes. The notice was sent to the Convention Office and has just been received at the office of publication.

We extend our sympathy to the family of the late Dr. W. H. Boone, Durham, North Carolina. Dr. Boone passed away Tuesday, February 16. He was a life long member of our church, and for many years served as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

We extend our sympathy to Rev. J. L. Neese and family in the tragic death of Dr. Jaek H. Neese, who lost his life when his cottage burned on Tuesday night, February 16. Dr. Neese was a graduate of Elon College and Duke Medical School. He was a brilliant young surgeon."

The Eutaw Community Church is to hold its annual Anniversary Dinner (3rd) on Friday night, March 5, at 6:30 p. m., in the church basement. All members and friends are cordially invited, especially those friends of the Southern Convention who have an "interest" in the church.

The final checking of figures for the 1953 Christmas Fund were recently completed, and they a total of $127,990.37, the largest Christmas Fund ever gathered. Dr. Frank J. Scribner, general secretary of the Pension Boards, adds, "The office of the Ministerial Relief Division and the recipients of Christmas checks are deeply grateful to the people and churches of our fellowship for this splendid result."

The Eastern North Carolina Conference announces its regular Superintendents' Dinner Meeting on Saturday night, March 6, at 6:30, at the Wake Chapel Christian Church, Fuquay-Varina, N. C. All superintendents, their assistants and pastors (and wives) of this conference are cordially invited. Miss Ione Catton, national director of Religious Education, will be the featured speaker.

Dr. Wofford C. Timmons Retires As National Director

Dr. Wofford Colquitt Timmons, who was for the past nine years National Director of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life for the Congregational Christian Churches in the U. S. A. is retiring from this post as of February 28. Dr. Timmons does not interpret "retirement" as seeking out of a rocking chair, but is taking over the pastorate of the Church of Wide Fellowship, Congregational, in Southern

DR. W. C. TIMMONS

Pines, North Carolina, beginning March 1.

The Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches, under which Dr. Timmons has been serving in his program of developing better churchmanship through better evangelism, has conferred on him a citation for meritorious service. This was presented in Springfield, Massachusetts February 8, during the Eastern Area Annual Pastors' Study Conference, one of the many conducted by Dr. Timmons. The citation is given in its entirety in this issue.

Dr. Timmons was born in Georgia and educated at Southwestern College in Kansas; Drew Seminary; Union Seminary; Columbia University and Oxford University, England. He held successful pastorates in Minnesota, Missouri and Connecticut before being called to the national post from which he is now retiring.

National Board of Home Missions Makes Citation in Recognition of Meritorious Service

The Division of Church Extension and Evangelism of the Board of Home Missions presents for recognition for meritorious service:

WOFFORD COLQUITT TIMMONS
Director of the Department of Evangelism and Devotional Life.

For nine fruitful years you have done the work of an evangelist; you have guarded well a sacred trust, and have enlarged and enriched a department whose work of evangelism undergirds our entire denominational life.

Through committees, seminars and convocations you have enlisted three hundred ministers in the active service of your department. You have quickened the spiritual life of countless churches. Under your guiding hand, valuable devotional publications like The Fellowship of Prayer have been issued. A workshop has been conducted for writers of such material; a Manual for the Pastor's Class and a Book of Worship have been prepared. Campus Missions, Institutes on Evangelism and the winning and assimilating of church members have engaged your thought and time. Field work, visual aids and prayer cells reflect your leadership.

Year after year the Springfield Study Conference has prepared regional pastors both intellectually and spiritually for their urgent Lenten duties and disciplines. Similar convocations in Florida and North Carolina and Oregon have served the churches in those far flung areas. Significant among your achievements are the establishment of an organized state committee on evangelism in every state of the union, and the provision for a Pre-council Spiritual Life Mission in connection with the meetings of the General Council. For you, the Witness of the Word to the World is our primary Christian obligation, and to this theme and task you have called us again and again. (In labors abundant and in the care of all the churches you have insisted that evangelism is the chief business of the Christian today and always.)

Able in committee work and persuasive in discussion; tactful and gracious in human relations; mindful of other departments, yet ever stoutly pressing the claim of your own; brother beloved of ministers

(Continued on page 10.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Attendance at Laymen's Rally Exceeds 500

More than 500 laymen attended the annual Laymen's Fellowship Rally held at Elon College, Sunday, February 14. Chairman W. B. Williams of the Fellowship presided at both afternoon and evening sessions. The afternoon session opened with a song service under the direction of Mr. W. H. Baked of Newport News.

The following program was presented:

Prayer—Rev. Howard P. Bozarth, pastor of the Elon College Community Church.

Welcome—President L. E. Smith of Elon College.

Report on Moonelon—Rev. Henry E. Robinson, pastor of First Church of Burlington.

Musical Program—The Elon College Choir, under the direction of Prof. John Westmoreland.

Addresses:

"What Our Congregational Christian Churches Believe"—Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C.

"What Is an Adequate Church Building for Our Day?"—John R. Foster, Greensboro, N. C.

"What Is an Adequate Church program for Our Day?"—G. C. Mann, Cypress Chapel, Va.

"What a Layman Has a Right to Expect of His Minister"—J. Earl Danieley, Elon College.

"What a Minister Has a Right to Expect of His Christian Laymen"—Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, Liberty Spring Church.

The principal address of the afternoon session was delivered by Dr. Elden H. Mills, pastor of our church in West Hartford, Connecticut, who spoke on "The Consecration of a People."

Approximately 340 men attended the fellowship banquet held in the dining hall at the college. Dr. O. W. S. McCall, interim pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines, spoke on "The Dedicated Arrow." Jerry Smyre, a student at Elon, sang "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied at the piano by Prof. Wayne Moore.

Laymen Organize at Union, Hunterdale

On January 26, 1954, a group of laymen and their pastor, Rev. Clyde Fields, of the Union Christian Church of Hunterdale, Franklin, Va., met for the purpose of organizing a Laymen's Fellowship.

S. M. Joyner was elected president, J. G. Joyner, Jr., secretary and treasurer, and Gordon Bridges was elected program chairman.

The group decided to meet on each third Tuesday night at 7:00 p. m., for dinner, a program and business meeting.

The fellowship was enjoyed by all present, who are now encouraging laymen of the church, men of the community and visitors to become members.

JAY G. JOYNER, JR.

* * * * *

Our Moonelon Project

An Address to the Annual Laymen's Rally at Elon College

By REV. HENRY E. ROBINSON.

I heard a story the other day about a man who went to the doctor for a check up. He went to the doctor, and the doctor asked, "Have you ever had an accident?" He said, "Yes, I broke my arm." "What were you doing?" asked the doctor. "I was eating breakfast," replied the man. "Would you kindly explain to me how you could break your arm eating" (Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church
Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.
My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

People Who Classify as "Seconds"

Some people are so much concerned about "seconds" where "seconds" are served at the meals—that they do not enjoy to the full their "firsts" in fearing that they may lose out on the "seconds."

Just so, some people are so much concerned about the "seconds" of the Bible—more concerned about the "Second Coming" and the "Second Blessing," that they miss out on the preponderous truth of Christ's life upon the earth and what his presence and his teachings have meant to the world down through the centuries, and what his spirit might mean to humanity today.

My experience has been that people who spend their time in thinking and talking about "The Second Coming of Jesus" and about "The Second Blessing" are missing out all along the line in failing to make the most out of Christ's first coming, and the fact that he has already "come again" and again, and again, ad infinitum—every time a life like yours and mine has bidden him welcome.

Moreover, some people fail to recognize that the blessings of God do not stop with the "first" blessing or the "second" blessing, but that God's blessings continue into the hundredth, and the thousandth and the hundred thousandth blessing—and far beyond that for all who sincerely love the Lord and faithfully seek to serve him.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

"The Shadow of Peter Passing By"

Christian influence is continually underestimated. We so often measure our personal work and the work of the church in terms of projects and meetings, when many people are watching, not all that, but rather our response to the world, its relationships, and its problems.

Witnessing and evangelism are vital to the success of the mission of Christ in the world today. Our word, our acts, our character, are an influence for good or ill. Many a busy business man, pressed into service to go out visiting or canvassing, has returned amazed at what his friendly influence accomplished with some neighbor or fellowman down the street. Many a woman, taking time out to help with the nursery problems of some working mothers, has been astounded by the gratitude of those who thought they had few friends.

Many profess the religion of Jesus upon some one person's recommendation or as a result of some one person's influence. The hands and hearts of the apostles influenced many for the Lord and wrought many wonders. They were humble followers of Jesus who had caught the power, the message, a new truth about life, which transformed them. They had something to say—and that something had already done its great work in them.

According to the familiar account in Acts 5, the apostles were the center of mighty influences abroad among these stirred people who saw marvels and signs. Believers were added to the church because people saw something being done, a power actually being exerted, blessings being bestowed. Here was the church in action. Here was a superb example of laymen at work.

The development was so intense and so dramatic that it became a matter of profound note: "Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at least the shadow of Peter passing might overshadow some of them." (Acts 5:15.)

These people felt something enough, the power of consecrated personality was such, that they felt healing could result even from being in the shadow of a man as he passed by!

What a challenge to laymen or clergy, going forth in the name of Christ today! Is someone perhaps thinking that if we will just smile or say a word or stop at the door a moment, the day and his life will be different?

"The shadow of Peter passing by"—what a challenge to any churchman in these times!

Great works need not wait for the launching of some clever project or the attempting of some dramatic achievement. They can come the minute we go about among the people, humble, consecrated, diligent, sacrificial, ready to let our influence for Christ and his church do its work.

Let the Peters of our own time pass by among those who will give heed, and may many sorely distressed people come within the healing shadow!

RICHARD K. MORTON.

A Red Letter Day for Newport News!

Sunday, March 7, will mark a red-letter day in the history of the First Congregational Christian Church in Newport News, Virginia. At a service of thanksgiving and dedication at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the church plans to burn the mortgage on the indebtedness of the education and fellowship building. This very beautiful and adequate addition to the church was completed in 1945 at a cost of $95,000.00.

Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, under whose pastorate the building was erected, has been invited to give the address. He will have as his subject, "The Dimensions of a Successful Church." The act of burning the mortgage will more than passing significance. It was felt that this was an especially appropriate time to help us think more seriously about the meaning of the church for our lives. The result of this thinking and planning was that Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean Emeritus of Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut, was invited to be with the Newport News Church the week presiding the debt retirement celebration. Dr.

REV. A. LANSON GRANGER, JR.

DR. H. S. HARDCASTLE be conducted by the trustees of the church, C. D. West, J. J. Baker and W. H. Baker. Dr. H. S. Hardecastle, the immediate former pastor, will offer the prayer of thanksgiving following the mortgage-burning ceremony. Greetings from the Southern Convention will be brought by the president, Dr. W. Millard Stevens; from the Eastern Virginia Conference by its president, Rev. J. Everette Neese; and from the Peninsula Ministers' Association by the Rev. Leland N. Edmunds, president of the association. The adult and junior choirs will voice thanks and praise in song. The pastor, Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., will lead the worship. The service and ceremonies will be followed by a reception for all guests and friends in the Fellowship Hall.

As the Planning Committee began to think and plan for this event several weeks ago, it occurred to them that this occasion ought to be one of

DR. JESSE H. DOLLAR

Potter will preach Sunday, February 28, morning and evening, and each evening through Friday. His sermon series will deal with "The Nature and Function of the Church." We feel sure that his messages will bring strength and great enrichment to our church life for the days ahead.

The morning worship on Sunday, March 7, will find us gathered about the Lord's Table and receiving new members into our fellowship. The pastor will speak on "Retrospect and Prospect."

To all of our friends of the Southern Convention and the Eastern Virginia Conference, we extend a most hearty and cordial welcome to join with us in this service and to add to our gladness and rejoicing by their presence.

We are grateful for the ways by which God has led us and kept us and given us occasion for our thanks. It is our hope that this time will be a door through which we shall enter into even richer experiences and more faithful service to him and to the cause of Christ.

DR. ROCKWELL HARMON POTTER

Special thanks belong to the Planning Committee which has worked to make this occasion possible: Mrs. W. B. Williams, chairman, Mrs. L. L. Taylor, Mrs. F. F. Foster, Mrs. Raymond Wheeler, L. J. Brown, G. G. Givens, W. H. Baker and H. D. Stalnaker.

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR.,
Pastor.

Faith is neither creed nor dogma; it is a "becoming" and a "doing." Faith as the driving force of life, fires the ambition and sees the capabilities of man as the image of God. Hope and courage are rooted in faith. They are the outward expression of an inner faith. Without hope and courage, man's progress is at an end. Man cannot accomplish anything without faith in himself, and he cannot have faith in himself unless he has faith in God. Faith without works is dead. Works, then, are a measure of man's faith.—Anon.

Our Churches Report . . .

Henderson Reports the Progress of Fourteen Years

The First Congregational Christian Church of Henderson, North Carolina, observed the fourteenth anniversary of its pastor, Rev. J. Frank Apple, in December. His first sermon was delivered in the morning service of December 3, 1939.

Our church is a member of the union of city churches which sponsors the joint worship services on Sunday evenings throughout the summer months. This organization is also responsible for the worship service that is broadcast each Sunday morning over Radio Station WHNC. This schedule rotates within the union and each church has the program for a month at a time. Our pastor is a member of the Henderson Ministerial Association and at one time held the office of president.

Rev. Mr. Apple has taught public school eleven of the fourteen years in Henderson—five in high school, and this marks his sixth year teaching in Junior High. Many of our church members are direct results of his association with the children in school.

Many improvements to the plant and the parsonage have been made in the last fourteen years. Three large classrooms and an assembly room, a pastor's study, rest rooms and kitchen were added in a single building project. At that time the sanctuary was changed to support a divided chancel with center altar and cross and candlesticks. Memorial windows were dedicated, including an inspiring window of Christ in Gethsemane above the altar.

Only a few years ago, a beautifying and improvement program was introduced and a committee was elected with John Allen Hall as chairman. Working hand in hand with the adult organizations of the church, this committee has proceeded far along in its original plans. The condition of the church building was the first consideration. Then the interior walls and floors of the parsonage were refinished; a modern sink and water heater were installed in the kitchen. The classrooms were painted and the sanctuary was redecorated in pastel tints of green. The finishing touch was added as a Christmas gift from the very active Philathea Class whose president is Mrs. Hubert Lester. The class gave glorious cathedral lights to brighten our worship and meditation.

Plans for the near future include the addition of at least four new classrooms. Subscriptions are being taken from different families to furnish memorial windows. We hope to report both objectives reached before the end of this year.

So not only has our pastor been very busy, but the members have been busy also. Church attendance has greatly increased. Our membership has moved from 176 to 376. Rev. Mr. Apple holds instruction classes each Sunday of the Lenten Season for those who wish to unite with the church. We expect many young people to join through this class this spring.

The church was presented with a new set of hymnals by Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Averette, in memory of their son, M. J. Averette, Jr. The Youth Fellowship purchased a tape recorder for the use of the choir and pastor. With these two gifts, the music department, under the supervision of Mrs. W. Brooks Harris, our Senior Choir director and organist, has reached a new high. Another welcome addition to this department is the Junior Choir lately organized by Mrs. Victor Langston, who serves as their director. Miss Faydene Conklin, granddaughter of our pastor, is the pianist for this group.

Our Woman's Missionary Society, with Mrs. E. W. Langston as president, and the Sunday school department, with J. L. Lassiter, Jr., as superintendent, are both "enjoying good health" and expansion. Of course, we must not forget our Ladies' Aid Society, one of our most inspired groups, who recently donated lovely front doors to the church.

We have all worked together and learned that we can do all things through devotion to duty and consecration to God. We can only develop physically as we develop spiritually.

MRS. J. L. LASSITER, JR.,
Reporter.

Something New in Western N. C. Conference

Last fall the Western North Carolina Conference, following the example of the Valley of Virginia, voted to have a mid-year session on March 4 at the Asheboro Church for the purpose of fellowship and inspiration.

The program planned for this session has as its theme "Growing Churches and Giving Churches."

In the morning session, beginning at ten o'clock, Dr. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro will speak and lead a discussion on evangelism, in preparation for the conference-wide evangelistic campaign, which is to be undertaken April 4-11.

A panel discussion on "How Our Churches Work" will use the remainder of the morning session.

In the afternoon there will be a discussion of missions by Dr. Henry Robinson of Burlington, of Elon College by President L. E. Smith, the Christian Orphanage by Superintendent John G. Truitt, and the Building Loan Fund by the conference committee.

This is a study and promotional session of the conference. Business may be transacted, but most matters of business will go over until the fall session on November 4.

The churches are to be represented by delegates just as at any other session. Visitors are cordially invited.

M. A. POLLARD, President,
F. C. LESTER, Secretary.

Ministers' Convocation

The Southern Convention Ministers' Convocation will be held at Camp New Hope, near Chapel Hill, N. C., on May 9-11. The session will begin on Monday afternoon, May 9, and conclude at noon, Wednesday, May 11. A detailed announcement of the program will be published as soon as possible. Meantime, ministers are asked to be sure and reserve these dates.

HOWARD P. BOZARTH,
For the Committee.

It must be evident that fear and doubt are disease-producing, while faith and hope are healthgiving; and the highest possibilities of faith and the greatest power of hope are expressed in the sublime beliefs of religious faith.—William S. Sadler,

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Two Important Occasions at Elon College

During the week of February 7 Dr. Elden Mills, pastor of the Congregational Church of West Hartford, Connecticut, was at Elon College as a representative of the Division of Christian Education of our united church. Dr. Mills is Chairman of the Division. He spoke twice daily at the college, at ten o'clock to the student body and faculty and from seven to eight o'clock in the evening to faculty, students, and townspeople. Those services were inspirational. Dr. Mills is a profound exponent of the Holy Scriptures with personal application to our daily lives. His coming to our campus was a great blessing to many.

The annual meeting of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention was held at the college February 14. The meeting opened at two o'clock and closed at eight o'clock in the evening. The laymen presented a very excellent program. The program was opened with a song service by Mr. W. H. Baker of Newport News, Virginia. President L. E. Smith welcomed the laymen to the college. Dr. Henry E. Robinson, Chairman of the Moonelon Project, spoke on the importance of completing the project at Moonelon. He presented sketches of the proposed main building and the proposed location of cabins for our young people.

Addresses were made by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Mr. J. R. Foster, Mr. G. C. Mann, Mr. J. Earl Danieley and Dr. Jesse H. Dollar.

Dr. Elden Mills addressed the group on "The Consecration of People." This was Dr. Mills' last appearance at Elon College. It was good that the laymen had the privilege of hearing him.

At six o'clock the laymen went to the temporary dining room of Elon College for a banquet and the closing service of the program. Dr. O. W. S. McCall, interim pastor of the Southern Pines Church, gave the address, and an excellent address it was. Dr. McCall is a preacher, a lecturer, an author, and an orator. He had to speak under adverse conditions,

There were 350 men who sat down to eat. It required all three wings of the dining room to accommodate them. It is difficult for any speaker to speak to a "three-pronged" audience but Dr. McCall did it acceptably and with great inspiration to all.

These conditions only emphasized the necessity of a dining room at Elon College. Elon College is owned by the convention, its facilities are always at the disposal of the convention. Any group or organization is welcome at any time. We want the convention to feel free to use the facilities at Elon College for the advancement of any of its interests. Many laymen expressed the hope that soon we shall be able to erect a dining room with adequate facilities to take care of such gatherings as we had for the laymen's banquet in particular and for the use of the students on our campus day after day. This is an urgent necessity at the college.

The meeting was closed with the singing of "The Lord's Prayer" by Jerry Smyre, a student in Elon College from Greensboro.

* * * * *

Elon College a Force in Education

There are certain standards of instruction that make a college effective in the field of higher education. It is conceded that a definite course of studies be stipulated as a "must" for those who would be known as college graduates and possessing at least the primary requisites of educated people.

It is essential not only to have a prescribed curriculum for those desiring an education but to make sure that the prescribed course of studies is adequately taught and satisfactorily completed. To attain such a consummation an adequate faculty from the standpoint of character, training, and experience is definitely essential. The faculty with its course of studies obviously must have at its disposal sufficient and acceptable equipment effectively to articulate ideas, information, and rules to earnest seekers.

Elon College qualifies without reserve as to curriculum and faculty, and as regards equipment with certain reservations. With its evident limitations and perceptible handicaps, Elon College, our college, has been a telling force in Christian higher education for more than one-half century. The commendable fruits of her labors are convincing in all walks of life—in homemaking, business, teaching, in scientific professions, and in the gospel ministry. Year after year, throughout its entire period of service, Elon has graduated and sent out into the teaching profession, an increasingly large number of effective instructors. In the field of science (medicine and dentistry) its contributions have been conspicuous. Our college's main contributions, directly to the church, have been in the training and preparation of young men for the gospel ministry, young women for Christian education and leaders for the church as a whole. This is its privilege and high purpose. The college counts itself fortunate in being able to render these services.

References have been made to "reservations," "limitations," and "handicaps." What are these deficiencies and how may they be met? These deficiencies are largely material and could be removed by sufficient funds. At least one half million dollars should be added to the college's endowment fund. To complete our development program there should be erected as soon as possible four new dormitories and a new dining room. These old buildings have served their purpose but are now entirely obsolete. The reputation, effectiveness, and respect of the college require that they be replaced with modern and adequate buildings, acceptably furnished.

* * * * *

Education that Develops

The conflict of nations and bitterness between the races have compelled a careful tabulation of men and women physically fit for combat. A multiplicity of tests to discover talents and abilities and determine where they could best be used for national interest have resulted in the discovery of weaknesses as well as strength, inefficiency as well as fitness.

Ignorance in the primary requisites of education stood out as the prime factor in depriving many citizens of the privilege of serving their country.

To remedy this unfortunate situation the federal government has appropriated huge sums of money for the education of G. I.'s and our

(Continued on page 10.)

Concerning Our 1953 Conference Record

By DR. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

The Annual and Yearbook records for the 1952-53 Conference Year are off the press and are now being circulated. What we were able (or willing?) to do through our churches in Christ's name brings both encouragement and discouragement. Measured by the success standards of our day, we did not do so badly in the Southern Convention. Measured by what our Lord commissioned us to do—well, you read the record and draw your own conclusions. The record is the net result of your devotion and that of other church members like you and me!

We have 200 churches in the Southern Convention, a new one—Hendersonville—being added during the year. Of this number, nine are inactive or are not co-operating in the program of our denomination.

We began the year with 34,613 members and ended with 34,889, a gain of 276! Is that an evidence of good evangelism for 34,613 members? Whom did you bring to Christ and his church during the year? Sixty-one (61) of our churches failed to receive a single member on Confession of Faith during the entire year. The total number received by 139 of our churches on Confession of Faith was 1,038, and the total for all of our churches received on Confession and by letter was 2,238. The total removals was 1,962.

One hundred eighty-four (184) of our Sunday schools reported a membership totaling 25,955, a gain of 893 over the previous year. These Sunday schools reported 2,431 officers and teachers. One hundred (100) churches reported a total of 2,739 young people in youth organizations within the local church (except for bad reporting on the part of our churches, our record here would be much better than the figure given). Fifty-four (54) churches reported as having kept an actual count of attendance at the principal church service on Sundays. The average attendance of these churches reporting was 89! Is that good?

When we come to the financial side of our record, we may take occasion to rejoice—for “are we not doing about as well as other church people?” Let us examine our record:

For local church “regular home expenses,” 187 churches reported raising $618,831. Eighty-eight (88) reported $95,243 for improvement to present property; sixty-four (64) reported $231,808 for new buildings and/or additions; two (2) reported $32,000 for new parsonages; forty-one (41) reported $132,441 as payment on principal of building debts. This makes a total of $1,110,323 for “local church purposes” (for ourselves), or an average of about $32 per member.

For “others” (for purposes outside our local churches) we (191 churches) gave a total of $185,174, or approximately $5.00 per member. Now, the question coming to my mind is, “Do we love ourselves and our own local church comforts six times more than we love those ‘outside our fold’ for whom our Lord also died to save?” Maybe we have just lost sight of his commission to us who profess his name! Maybe there is a vital connection between our low evangelistic index and our stewardship. What do you think?

You may be interested to know how the $185,174 our members gave to “others” was divided. We gave $38,217 to foreign missions, to home missions outside the convention, and to ministerial relief. We gave $23,597 to local charities, etc., and we gave $123,660 to conference and convention causes—missions, education, the orphanage, etc.

If we add the total raised for local or home expenses and that we gave to missions and benevolences, we will see that our churches raised a grand total for all purposes of $1,295,797, or about $38.00 per member. This represents a tithe on about $380 for the year. Didn't our people average more than $380 in income for the entire year? I think so. The state average income per capita is around $800.00. This matter of stewardship is an emphasis we as Christians may be neglecting. Think on that!

On value of local church property, 198 churches reported $7,695,463, and 45 churches reported indebtedness on property totaling $456,191.

We have 129 ordained ministers in the convention, 21 licentiates, and 16 “candidates for the ministry” (members of the Biblical class). There are 96 “full time” pastors, or pastoral units, and 17 “part time” pastors, or pastoral units. The average salary for “full time” service of pastors is reported as $3,119.00. There are 74 parsonages in the convention.

As I have studied our record for the year just past, I have mingled feelings of pride and humiliation; and I suppose you do too! It seems that, on the whole, we have done “pretty well” financially, yet we fell far short in our stewardship of the divided portion. I am afraid we have not “upon the first day of the week . . . laid . . . by him in store, as God hath prospered . . . us.” We seem to have done “extra well” for ourselves, but I am sort of ashamed of what we failed to do in Our Christian World Mission outside of our local churches. How do you see it?

Frankly, I am terribly ashamed of our evangelistic record! We ought to have won and brought to Christ and into his church more people than we did! I am afraid our loving Lord, though ever so kind, patient and forgiving, can hardly commend us with “well done thou good and faithful servant”! Now, let us not begin pointing our finger in judgment at our pastor, at the other fellow, or at the other church. Let us examine our own personal record and that of our own church of which we are a part. In humility and in repentance let us each accept his share of the failure, and then renew our covenant with our Lord.

Thank God for another chance! We are now in a new year. Let us be about our Lord's business with a new surrender, consecration and devotion. We have the time, the resources and the latent spiritual power. Let us release Christ through ourselves and our fellow Congregational Christians of the Southern Convention. Our weakness is in ourselves, but our strength and hope are in Christ Jesus.

At the Virginia Valley Conference last fall the following resolutions were adopted, which, if followed by our people, can make our record for the 1953-54 Conference Year much better than last year:

1. That each church make a (house to house) survey of its community or parish, that it may know the names and addresses of persons in the community who are not professing Christians and who are not members of the church. (There is too much guessing and neglect among us now.)
2. That the church seek to bring to Christ these persons between now and Easter 1954. (Let us

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Activities at Eutaw Community Church, Fayetteville

The Woman's Fellowship of Eutaw Community Church, Fayetteville, is now enjoying some very interesting meetings and fellowship.

In November our Thank Offering Program was presented at a Sunday evening service in the chapel at which we received an offering of $17.00. In December the women sponsored a Fellowship Supper and Bazaar for the raising of funds to be used for furnishings for our new building.

December being such a busy time for every one, our Christmas program, "Christmas in Puerto Rico," was presented at our January meeting. Our offering toward paying for transportation of a goat totaled $16.53, so the group voted the difference from our treasury so that "our goat" might be on its way to Puerto Rico soon.

We are now making great plans for our Third Anniversary of the church which is in March, and look forward with anticipation to the Sanford District Meeting which is to be held in our church April 6.

We had the pleasure of taking in six new members at our January meeting and all have a real enthusiasm for the work of the Lord and are "Rejoicing in Our Task."

MRS. KENNETH M. LINDNER.

* * * * *

Much Giving at Ingram

At the September meeting of the Ingram Missionary Society, Mrs. Virginia Lovelace was elected our new president. The new officers were installed at an appropriate service.

World Community Day was observed in November. A special cash offering plus two large bags filled with towels, cloths, sheets, pillow cases and soap were sent to the war orphans of Korea, and we gave two large boxes of clothes and toys for the county boys and girls for Christmas.

The Thank Offering Service was held in November at the regular Sunday morning service. An offering was taken for our work on Mindanao.

At the meeting in December our program of Friendly Service was presented. The program centered around the work in Puerto Rico. We have a goat named "Myrtle" after Mrs. L. E. Carlton. We also sent soap and sacred pictures and leaflets. We gave baskets of fruit to the shut-ins for Christmas. We also sent a ten-dollar CARE package to Germany for Christmas. We have received a letter from ten families. We plan to write to them.

We have had one book review. We are looking forward to the Spring Rally in March.

MRS. JOE LANDRUM,
Reporter.

Notice! Notice! Notice!

It is not too early to begin to think about the School of Missions. The date is July 13-16. Of course, it will be held at Elon College. Hope you will keep these dates in mind and begin to make plans to attend. Be on the look-out for more information in the near future.

MRS. H. G. BALLINGER,
Chairman, School of Missions.

Waverly Church Having Fine Programs

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Waverly Christian Church has had some very interesting meetings this year, including the Thank Offering program in November. World Community Day was held in the Methodist Church, with a good attendance, an interesting program and a generous offering.

This month we all enjoyed our Friendly Service program. We also raised enough money to send a goat to Puerto Rico. We want our goat to be named "Bessie" or "Bess," as we have three "Bessies" in our society.

We hope that we can have more good meetings for the balance of the year, as we are happy doing our Master's work.

MRS. O. C. OSBORNE.

* * * * *

Some Ancient History

Every September—and October—reports come in thick and fast concerning the work of our women's groups for the past year. As we have said time and again, each society is asked to send in at least one news item during the year, and we would like to have it as some special program or project is planned or completed, so that the ideas could be used by other groups. Of course, some of our society presidents give fine summaries of the year's work in such a way that it is of value to have them printed—if for no other reason than to give other presidents an idea as to the type of annual report they should make.

It so happens that the fall is the time when plans for Conferences, the Thank Offering and the Christmas Friendly Service projects all need to be publicized. Therefore, space is at a premium on this page. And thus some of the local society reports that came in last September and October have never been published. So that the members of the societies concerned will know that a report really was sent in, and so that we may remember the highlights of these societies' programs, below is printed excerpts from them. Since it is rather ancient history now, when one quarter of the new year is passed, we will not use the complete articles. Please do not be offended—and please send material in as it "happens." Thank you!

WAKEFIELD.

The Missionary Society at Wakefield, Virginia, had a successful year of work. We observed World Day of Prayer, the Thank Offering service, and May Fellowship Day, with the other churches in our town and community taking part.

One of the highlights of the year was the reviewing of the book, "Africans on Safari," by the Rev. Earl Farrell, pastor of the Cypress Chapel Christian Church, after which a social hour was enjoyed by all.

We gained three new members and lost one, a charter member, Mrs. L. B. Faison, Sr.

MRS. ALF VICK, JR.

* * *

OAK GROVE.

The Ladies Auxiliary of Oak Grove Christian Church had a fine year under the leadership of Mrs. H. F. Powell. She led us in an inspiring way toward true fellowship and co-operation in advancing the work of our church and our Master. May we ever remember the special efforts and thought she has given to our group.

Rev. Earl T. Farrell reviewed our mission study books for the year.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Seeing the True Picture

By HARRIETT C. ANDERSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

All too often, what may appear to the adult as a "very naughty act" on the part of a young child may be due to association of thought held in the adult's mind.

Here is an example of what I mean. A group of about twenty women, some quite young, some middle-aged, and a few of them grandmothers, were engaged in pleasant conversation. The conversation turned to the subject of children. Several of the young women were teachers in the elementary schools of that city.

One of the teachers, who was very much interested in her work and enjoyed her little students, was relating some of the amusing incidents that took place. Laughingly, she told of coming into the room one extremely hot day and finding that three of the little six-year-old girls had taken off their panties.

A murmur of shocked surprise and disapproval came from several of the older women. One of them remarked, "What can you expect when their parents live such immoral lives?"

This response to her little story actually stunned the young teacher. She looked at the women in astonishment.

The other teachers tried to change the conversation, but one woman spoke up, in a tone of self-righteousness, "What did you do to those little girls?"

"What did I do? Why, I didn't do anything. I just explained to them that we have to keep all of our undergarments on when we are not at home. You see," she went on, quietly and patiently as though talking to children, "these little girls said their Mommies didn't wear them when it was hot, so they thought it alright to take theirs off when they became too warm. There was no thought of being naughty in the minds of those little girls."

How right she was! They were not being naughty. She was a wise young woman, this teacher! And what a blessing it is that we have intelligent, understanding, and patient young women working with our little ones.

Of course we do not want our little girls taking off their panties either in school or out, but the point that needs to be stressed is that there was no wrong thought in what these little girls had done.

When a wise, understanding adult handles an occurrence of this nature, no harm is done; it is all soon forgotten. However, if an adult with the shocked attitude that some of the women in this group had were to deal with it and handle it as a "very, very naughty thing to do," a lasting and harmful impression might be made upon the minds of such young children.

It is so much better to take the time to use reason and wise judgment, and to try to see things from the child's viewpoint, rather than to jump at a hasty decision and place an adult interpretation on a child's deed. The way one explains undesirable behavior of this kind to little children can make a very lasting difference in their whole attitude toward life and sex.

Every adult, parent or teacher, should strive for wisdom in handling such situations, so that the young minds may be left as clean and innocent as God made them.

It is good for one to appreciate that life is now. Whatever it offers, little or much, life is now—this day—this hour.

—Charles Macomb Flandrau.

CITATION IN RECOGNITION OF MERITORIOUS SERVICE.

(Continued from page 2.)

and friendly counsellor of seminary students; radiant witness in word and deed to the power of the Holy Spirit; loyal and cheerful companion in toil; follower of the Pilgrim Way yet a churchman with a world for his parish; inspired herald of the New Testament evangel; thus we salute you, and on behalf of our churches, ministers and associates we say,

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Wofford Colquitt Timmons, it is an honor to this Executive Committee thus publicly to honor you and to recognize your devoted service not only to the great cause of Home Missions, but to all the work of our fellowship as well. We hail you with affection and esteem, and as you take your deserved retirement from arduous labors with the Home Boards in the special field of Evangelism and of the Devotional Life, and turn again to the pastorate which is your first love, we shall follow you with our warm wishes and prayers. (We are assured that as a good shepherd you cannot fail to have a happy and useful ministry.)

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

young people in general. The different states of the Union have joined in and appropriated increasingly large sums for the same purposes.

This is a tremendously helpful move on the part of our governments, but we must not overlook the fact that something more than mere education is needed. If the whole personality is to be developed, the spirit as well as the mind must be nurtured and directed. Christian education is more essential than secular education. The facts of Christianity must become a part of the content of education. After all, the spirit of Christ is the most potent factor in directing human conduct and molding human character. That system of education or course of studies that omits the facts of the Christian religion is missing its greatest opportunity and depriving the individual student of his rightful privilege. The curriculum of the Christian college is not narrow, it is broad; broader than our non-Christian colleges and universities in that it includes in its curriculum the facts of the Christian relation and requires a knowledge of the revelation of God to man.

If our nation and the nations of the world are ever to be free of the spirit of aggressive selfishness, of material greed, or racial conflicts, and of the ravages of war, it and they must acquire and absorb the doctrine of the spirit of the great Teacher, himself. Our Christian colleges are indispensable in preparing our civilization for the civilization to come.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Let's find our part and share in activities during Lenten Season and up to the climax at Easter.

* * *

Many new youth groups are being organized all over the convention. Let's have that opening write-up.

* * *

This quote comes from the Conference Reporter Magazine of the W. N. C. Conference: "Youth is a state of mind as well as a time of life. Young People, you are as young as your Faith, Self-Confidence, and Hope . . . You are as old as your Doubt, Fear, and Dispair."

* * *

We are having a Convention Wide Young People's Rally in Burlington, N. C. the last of April. It's several months yet, but not too early to plan for this occasion. President Phil Mann announced that a well planned program is in store for this meeting.

* * *

Having trouble getting up programs . . . is the material adequate for your needs? If this fits you and you need help, why not get a copy of that new booklet of program material titled "Crossroad Decisions" by Rust. It could be of great help in planning interesting and worthwhile programs. Check previous issue of THE SUN for price and ordering address.

* * * * *

Rally Notice

It is hoped that every church in the Eastern North Carolina Conference will be represented at the Youth Fellowship Spring Rally. The rally will be held at the Liberty (Vance) Church, located six miles south of Henderson, on the Henderson-Louisburg highway, highway No. 39. Let's make this the best rally we've ever had. Remember the date, March 7.

W. A. GRISSOM.

Pastor.

* * * * *

Winchester Host to Valley Rally

The young people of the Valley of Virginia Conference held their mid-winter rally on January 31, 1954 at Winchester, Virginia.

Attending were more young people than usual from almost all the churches of the Valley.

The Theme of the rally was Foreign Missions. In keeping with the theme, we had a round-the-world trip, featuring exhibits from eight countries. A film "Home is Nowhere" was shown in the evening.

IRIS ALLEN,
Secretary.

* * * * *

New Group Organized

For many years the Palmyra Congregational Christian Church has been without a young people's organization. Several of the members suggested that a young people's group be formed. Now there is an organization, and it is prospering very much.

For the officers, the young people chose as follows: Joyce Carper, president; Cecil Baker, vice-president; Nancy Silvions, secretary and reporter; Jean Neimeyer, treasurer, and Geneva Carper, assistant treasurer. For advisors they chose Mrs. Catherine Baker, Mrs. Paulene Neimeyer, Mrs. Catherine Coffelt and our pastor, Rev. Ralph Galt.

On December 27, 1953, the young people presented a play called "Never Be Afraid," along with their Christmas program. The church was well filled, which proved to the organization that they were capable of doing more things. Mrs. Shirley Oliphant played the piano for the service.

The group now has eleven members along with the four advisers, and is expecting many more new members.

NANCY SILVIONS,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Youth Week in Albemarle

The young people of Albemarle Congregational Church observed Youth Week in a very enthusiastic and cooperative way. Many activities went in to make a very successful week.

On Wednesday evening Shirley Talbert led the prayer service. Mary Bell Pennington and Madge Simons rendered special music.

On Saturday the Young Adults had a fellowship supper after which reports from the last Young People's Rally were heard and discussed. This was followed by fun and fellowship for all.

The Primary and Junior Departments of the Sunday school had charge of worship for the Sunday school hour. Most of the offices as well as teachers for the day were filled by young people.

The morning worship was in charge of young people with Douglas Harper, a young ministerial student, leading the service. The sermon, by the pastor, was on the topic: "An Open Door to Youth." An all youth choir was organized during the week and sang for the service.

At six o'clock a group of young people met for Youth Fellowship. They chose captains of two teams and organized for a contest to continue for eight weeks. The purpose is to stimulate more activity and get new members.

The evening church service was conducted by a group of young people on the general topic, "Youth and the Work of the Church." Tobie Ragsdale led in the service with short talks on the topic by Elizabeth and Sue Jean Hunsucker, Shirley and Kathy Talbert, Carlene Doby, Kenneth Russell Maudlin. Kay Pennington and Iris Hunsucker rendered special music. Jerry Poplin, Terry Ragsdale, Skippy Baldwin, Hloy Vanhoy, Gene and Boyd Simmonds acted as ushers.

S. E. MADREN,
Pastor.

* * * * *

To Youth

You, at this moment, have the honor to belong to a generation whose lips are touched by fire—the human race now passes through one of its great crises. New ideas, new issues—a new call for men to carry on the work of righteousness, of charity, of courage, of patience, and of loyalty. All these things have come and are daily coming to you.

When you are old . . . however memory brings back this memory to your minds, let it be able to say to you: This was a great moment. It was the beginning of a new era . . . This world in its crisis called for volunteers, for men of faith in life, of patience in service, of charity and insight. I regarded the call however I could. I volunteered to give
(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Raising of Lazarus"

LESSON X—MARCH 7, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I am the resurrection and the life; he who believes in me, though he die, yet shall he live, and whoever lives and believes in me, shall never die."—John 11: 25, 26.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 11: 1-54.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 7: 11-23.

Divine Friendship.

Jesus, like God, is no respecter of persons. He shows no partiality. But he had his inner circle of friends. There were those with whom he loved to associate. There were homes into which he was welcomed and into which he liked to go. There were those who loved him and loved to have him with them. There were those who responded to him and who offered to him the hospitality of their homes and their hearts. Jesus had a genius for friendship, and he had his chosen companions.

It is thus today. God and Christ are no respecter of persons. But there is a sense in which they are closer to some than to others. There are those with whom they can better share friendship and fellowship, because homes and hearts are open to them, because there is a warm response to them. Such people are not chosen arbitrarily. This intimate friendship is open to all. But all do not desire it, do not respond to it. Christ does not force himself upon people. But as Phillips Brooks wrote in his Christmas Carol, "Where meek souls will receive him still, The dear Christ enters in."

Perhaps it is well to point out that friendship with Jesus does not protect us from human ills and sorrows. Illness and misfortune and financial limitations and trouble and death come into the homes of those who are friends of Jesus as well as into the homes of others. But the assurance of the Master's friendship for us gives strength and help and hope.

Divine Delay.

"When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode still in the same place two days." It was not until the fourth day that Jesus actually arrived in Bethany. It must have seemed a long time to the bereaved sisters. It was just another case of "the divine delay." A famous minister was pacing up and down his study when one of his laymen entered the room. Noticing the minister's tense condition, his friend asked what was the matter. The minister replied, "I am in a big hurry, but God does not seem to be in any hurry at all." So often we do not get an immediate answer to our prayers, good causes go so long begging and lagging, and things do not happen simply by pressing a button. The most hoped for so often eludes our grasp, and God doesn't seem to be doing anything about the matter. There are so many instances of "divine delay." Our faith is often tested and sorely tried. But a thousand years are in God's sight as a watch in the night. The mills of the gods grind slowly. But God is not slack concerning his promises. In due time we shall see the travail of our souls and be satisfied. In due season we shall reap if we faint not. Not now, but in the coming years, we will understand.

Divine Sympathy.

"When Jesus saw her weeping . . . he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled." "Jesus wept . . . and groaning in himself he cometh to the grave." Here is evidence of the affection in which Jesus held the members of the family circle, and an assurance of his sympathy with all those who suffer and have been bereaved. We do not have a God or a Saviour who does not care. In all of our afflictions, they are afflicted. Our Christ was made in all points like as we are; hence he knows how we feel and he knows how to help.

Divine Promise.

"I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die." Martha, like so many other people, then and now, believed in a vague resurrection in the dim future. But her heart, like ours, longed for something more than this. The heart craves for the present something like a personal relationship with Christ. And here we have his assurance of this very thing. He is the Source of life-giving power. We have the privilege of fellowship with a present, divine Lord who gives us comfort and companionship. And faith in him, this living Christ, is a source of a spiritual resurrection, which is a present and abiding experience of such blessedness that it cannot be affected by any bodily change. "What is called death is but an incident in the course of an endless life. The believer never dies." "Believest thou this?" asked Jesus of Martha. "Believest thou this?" asks Jesus of us. Do we really believe that we shall never die, that death cannot separate us from the living Christ, that we shall pass from this life, through the door called death, into life more abundant, life eternal, life immortal? Here is the answer to the supreme question which men ask concerning their ultimate and eternal destiny. The Lord Jesus Christ has taken the sting out of death, and should have delivered from the fear of death all those who are in bondage to it. For the Christian there is no death in any final sense.

Divine Power.

"Lazarus, come forth. . . . And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave clothes; and his face was bound about with a napkin." Here is love linked with omnipotence. There is no point in trying to explain away the miracle. There is little that can be done to explain it. How it happened we do not know. But that it happened we can well believe. It was an actual resurrection—Lazarus had been dead four days. It was unquestioned—even the enemies of Jesus saw it happen and had to admit it. It was declared by Jesus to be a "sign" which had been wrought with the purpose of producing faith. It was a token or symbol or promise of what, by his divine power our Lord, who is the Resurrection and the Life, can and will do when we pass through the valley of the shadow of death. He who is alive, and alive forevermore, will bring us through the great adventure called death into a newness of life in and with him. Because he lives, we too shall live. Wherefore let us be of good cheer, and let us be of great courage!

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Education Needs Religion

By MRS. CUMA R. CLAPP.

The spiritual essence of democracy finds its source in religious convictions. I personally believe in the tremendous relevance of religion to education, because I believe in the all-pervasive relevance of religion to the whole life.

Bible study is a common preoccupation of Christianity and higher education, for it establishes an immediate natural relationship between them. Both are devoted to truth, and the truth shall make all free. Education and religion fervently live for it.

Education is derived from the study of laws, books, both sacred and secular; while vital Christianity is "the wisdom of God" in the hearts of human beings—"the major key to soul-salvation."

Never be deluded by the fact that religion rests on faith! Everything else does, too! There are various other words used that are just another word for faith. Credit, for instance, in the business world—bank accounts, bonds, etc.

The giant economic structure of this country is founded on confidence—the belief that not everyone will want to cash his material assets at once.

Our researchers live by the faith of their assumption that they are going to discover the truth out beyond the shadows and that it will be good for humanity.

It is a blurred image of religion's God.

Both education and religion repose their entire life on truth—through one gate or another. They belong together—because: Education is preeminently concerned with personality! And religion gives each personality substance—to live on! All need an "inner source" of security, a stable purpose, and an "awakened intelligence" that does not quail as it looks with eyes wide open at the ultimate issue of our existence.

Education alone seems to realize that the question of God cannot ever be left unsettled. Having religion as a fringe—is weak, merely decorative—but not essential! Leaving religion out of education deprives personalities of the substance needed for life—to combat the enemy. It is an aid to daily living "the abundant life."

From the unity of religion and education, there are practical fruits to be observed. Equality is on of them, and how priceless it is! And how indispensable! Equality comes, body from religion's body and spirit from its spirit. What an empty pretense equality is on any other basis. "The ground is level at the foot of the Cross."

The story is told that three persons were to be received into church membership. One was the then Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the second was a Chinese laundryman, and the third a local boy in his early teens. All were welcomed equally, regardless of the strangely ill-assorted picture.

An education which has equality "as an axiom" will be like a house built on the sand, unless it is anchored securely upon the firm substance of religious faith.

The twin of equality is "respect for mankind." It is appalling the way pressure is against the individual. That is crucial for modern education—because the human material for all schools, colleges and universities is made up of single human beings. Each student, each individual, needs the reinforcement to his self-respect and for others, that only religion can give. Education, without religion, is like a train—without a track!

CONCERNING CONFERENCE RECORDS.

(Continued from page 8.)

not be afraid to bear our Christian witness!)

3. That each church present the scriptural injunctions on stewardship—tithing in particular.

"If my people, which are called by name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and will heal their land." II Chron. 7:14.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of Heaven, and pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

Mrs. Elsie Eason brought us our Bible study. These messages have been truly great, and we appreciate them very much.

Under the leadership of a very efficient young president, Mrs. Earl C. Taylor, we expect to make big advancements for the Master's cause and his Kingdom here on earth.

MRS. WAVERLY PARKER,
Reporter.

* * *

FRANKLIN.

Under the able leadership of its president, Mrs. J. I. Beale, Jr., the Woman's Auxiliars of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church has completed a year's work, having covered the Convention's prescribed course of study and attained other goals. Keen interest has been manifested in well presented programs as well as in home and foreign book reviews. Functioning in four circles, each with a progressive leader, we have woven purpose and theme into service for God's Kingdom, which we trust has been acceptable to him.

However, the auxiliary's activities have been overshadowed by the loss in death of two most valuable and well-loved members, Mrs. E. Philip Jones and Miss Lydia Daughtery. As we plan for the new year's work without their presence and guiding counsel which has heretofore given us great spiritual impetus, we do so under a recognized handicap. But, we shall continue to lean hard upon the inspiration gained from them in the years past as we close ranks for the forward march.

MRS. B. V. HARGRAVE, Secretary.

* * *

CYPRESS CHAPEL.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church had a very successful year, using programs taken from the packet and doing the other things suggested for the year.

Our Thank Offering program was held jointly with the Agnes Brittle Circle. Our home mission study book was reviewed by Rev. Earl T. Farrell, and the foreign book by Mrs. W. J. Jones. The Bible study was taught by Mrs. Roy Brinkley.

World Day of Prayer and World Community Day were observed in a joint session with other churches. We observed Family Life Week by visiting the sick and shut-ins. This was followed up with a covered dish supper and a very interesting program.

Our Life Membership was given to Mrs. G. C. Mann.

MRS. J. W. JONES,
Reporter.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Today I had a letter from two of my children. One of them was addressed to "Dear Dad" the other to "Dear Dr. Truitt." One of them wanted to tell me about his life at Princeton the other about his life at Lockland Air Base, San Antonio, Texas. They were both making progress. I was thrilled with both letters. I expected the one, I hoped for the other. The one who addressed me as "Dear Dr. Truitt" I had worked with, advised, expressed my hopes for, been patient with, and showed him my concern and many favors. Seems like now the one who addressed me as "Dear Dad" just grew. My heart is with both of them, and of them I am proud. The one who "just grew" had a mother to help him grow. The other had no mother, no home, only the home I came to be the head of. The "Dear Dad" boy had a father to fall back on, but not the "Dear Dr. Truitt" one. The latter writes: "Our promotion roster was read to us the other day. I sure was glad to hear my name read out. It sure makes me feel good to wear that first stripe and to know I earned it." Yes, yes, my boy, you earned it.

He is a tall, fine looking young fellow. He is big, angular and gifted of good common sense. Once he ran away from the orphanage and tried the outside world, but he saw it was too tough for a good boy like he wanted to be and he came back. We forgave his going, and set a new level of faith in him. He graduated at high school. Had a good job and then went into the Air Force. The "Dear Dad" boy is a pilot too, and studying to be a "sky-pilot," as ministerial students are often called. Yes, they knew each other. Liked each other. The "Dear Dad" boy loaned his dress suit and black shoes frequently to the "Dear Dr. Truitt" boy and liked to do so. It gave me much pleasure to see them talking to each other as buddies. It was the way I wanted it, although I never suggested it as I wanted it to be real and natural. No, I hardly know which letter inspired me more. I believe right now it was the "Dear Dr. Truitt" letter. I expected that other fellow to do right, I hoped the latter would. So now I have learned a new lesson, namely, I shall expect all my orphanage boys and girls to do right and well, in addition to hoping and praying they will.

Topsy's garden just grew. Oh! to be sure she prepared the soil, sowed the seed, and tended the plants so weeds did not choke them out; but the plants just grew. She didn't try to make them grow, didn't pull at them, push them, nor press them. She just let them grow. I had faith in one of those boys. And I came to have faith in the other. It pays, or I expect it to pay.

If you will help us here we shall make many good records in the lives of the children who come begging for home and help. I am willing to put the best mind and spirit I have into it. I really need your help, though, to nurture this "garden," to keep the weeds of fear and frustration out, and the grass of the lack of ambition and desire to be somebody carefully uprooted. What you do for these children will be very worthwhile.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 18, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Holland Supply Co., Holland, Va., Hamper of hams.
Glasses:
The Angie Crew Circle, Union Ridge Church, Burlington, N. C.
Bethlehem (Naus.) Christian Church.
Pleasant Ridge (W. N. C.) Christian Church.
Clothing:
Bethel (N. C.-Va.) Christian Church.
Mrs. James C. Beal, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. E. Hutcherson, San Diego Calif.
Mrs. Burton Daniels, Beaufort, N. C.
Coupons:
Woman's Auxiliary, First Cong. Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Sr., Burlington, N. C.
Liberty Spring Christian Church.
Mrs. Thomas W. Walton, Greensboro, N. C.
Mrs. Louella Ritchie, Harrisonburg, Va.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 1,697.44
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Bethlehem	$ 6.00
Ebenezer	13.75
	19.75
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Naus.) S. S. .	$ 40.30
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial	14.00
South Norfolk, Thanksgiving	200.00
South Norfolk	93.00
Windsor S. S.	10.00
	357.30
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Asheville	$ 9.00
Happy Home S. S.	35.20
Mebane, Special	25.00
Mebane	6.00
	75.20
Western N. C. Conference:
Ether	$ 40.00
Pleasant Cross S. S.	11.43
Zion	30.00
	81.43
Total	$ 533.68
Grand Total	$ 2,231.12

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 4,055.36
State of North Carolina,
Gasoline Refund	$ 55.15
Young People's Class, Reidsville Church	15.00
West Memorial Bible Class, Suffolk Church .	55.90
Mr. & Mrs. Elmer Kellam, McLeansville, N. C. ...	20.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. W. Donnell, Greensboro, N. C. ...	80.00
George B. Helmer, Newport News, Va.	10.00
Philathea Class, Reidsville Church	10.00
Wallace H. Owen, Gibsonville, N. C.	5.00
	(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

..... (Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)
..... (Survivor to be Written)	 (Address)
Name.....
Address.....

OUR MOONELON PROJECT

(Continued from page 3.)

breakfast," said the doctor. The man answered, "It was back during the Hoover Administration, I mean the early part of the Roosevelt Administration, when I broke my arm eating persimmon breakfast. I fell out of a persimmon tree."

This reminds me of another little story of a gentleman who was told that he could be helped by a good psychiatrist. He looked up the name of a good one and found that he was located in a professional building of a large city. He went to the office and found himself in a plain kind of a waiting room with two doors. Over one was "Women" and over the other "Men." He went through the door which said "Men" and found himself in another room of about the same size with two doors. One of these doors said "Extrovert" and the other "Introvert." He had read enough about psychiatry to know that he was an extrovert. So he went through that door and found himself in another room with two doors that said, "Income over $10,000" and "Income under $10,000." He went through the door which said "Income under $10,000" and found himself back in the hall.

Now, gentlemen, I have been up a persimmon tree for a little while and I don't intend to fall out of it. I have been going through some winding doors, but I don't intend to be led back out into the hall.

I want you, if you will, to turn to the sheets you have.* It will be on the fourth sheet. I want you to look at the main building.

I am not going to take up your time telling you why we need the additional equipment desired at Moonelon. I trust your good judgment, the officials of the Convention and the officials of the Laymen's Fellowship, in selecting it as the major project of the Laymen's Fellowship for the present biennium.

You have here the facts which the committee has prepared. A groundbreaking service will be conducted on March 7, to which all ministers and laymen are invited, on the conference grounds at Moonelon, where this building will be erected.

For the past few years this project has been in the hopeful stage, now it is in the building stage. We have some money in hand for our main building. We have some other money in sight. We anticipate your co-operation that by June 1 enough money will be in hand to build this building, which will have a value of about $18,000, but which, by certain donations, we believe can be constructed for between $12,000 and $14,000. It is a building of a permanent nature, built of cement block with cement floor. It consists of a dining and assembly room, a kitchen, toilets, office space and a front porch. To this must be added sufficient cabins for about one hundred young people. These, we believe, will be constructed in the fall and winter of 1954-55, so that our conference programs for 1955 will be held at our conference center.

Special tribute to the men of the Western North Carolina Conference, who were first to accept a goal and begin raising money. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference is rapidly becoming activated on this program, and we believe that men all over the convention will put their shoulders to the wheel and help complete our project. It is not my project. It is the project of the men of the convention for the young people of the convention.

If the men of the convention will take this project seriously, give us the tools to work with—manpower and dollars—I am very confident that our program can be completed for our young people by the summer of 1955. We are counting on you to come through for us and with us toward the completion of these very much needed facilities.

I am going to have you look at this one more time. I want you to look at the sheet with a sketch on it. You will notice that there is nothing under the pillar of the front porch. That was purposely left off. We need a stack of $1.00 bills. We want you to supply that by the first of June.

Christian discipleship is not the business of men and women who love the limelight. It is not spectacular, not exciting. Like Paul, the Christian disciple must come to the place where he can say: "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."—Church Calendar.

WITH OUR YOUTH.

(Continued from page 11.)

myself to my Master—the cause of humane and brave living. I studied, I loved, I labored, unsparingly and hopefully to be worthy of my generation.

JOSIAH ROYCE.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Dr. McCall speaking to the convention Laymen at Elon on February 14, told the following story:

Two frogs fell into a barrel of cream and began to kick around. One of the frogs soon looked up at the slippery sides of the barrel and the great distance that he would have to go. Giving up all hope of ever getting out, this frog sank to the bottom of the barrel and expired. The other frog was a very stubborn rascal. Instead of giving up, he just kept swimming around and around in the cream. And do you know what? Pretty soon he had churned that cream into butter, hopped up on the top of the cake, and jumped out of that barrel.

* * *

The story above followed one by Dr. Smith that went something like this:

A little boy had a job working in the old country store. Right behind the pot-bellied stove there stood a molasses barrel. Each time this young fellow passed behind the stove he would reach his finger into the barrel and taste the molasses. This tasting and the dipping from the barrel soon caused the contents to sink very low. But the energetic young man was not to be out-done. He balanced himself on top of the barrel—but not well enough, for in he went. He came up dripping with molasses with this prayer on his lips: "Good Lord, give me a tongue equal to my opportunity."

* * *

"Roll out the barrel."

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

First Cong. Church, Asheville, N. C., Special	50.00
In Memory of Dr. N. G. Newman, Sr.	5.00
Special Gifts	40.10
		346.15
Grand total	$ 4,401.51
Total for the week	$ 879.83
Total for the year	$ 6,632.63

*The sketches referred to here by Dr. Robinson are mimeographed drawings of present and proposed buildings at Moonelon. They are to be used primarily by laymen and Pilgrim Fellowship groups for promoting the building program this spring. The sketches are available by addressing: Dr. Henry E. Robinson, 415 S. Church Street, Burlington, N. C.

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

Table Showing Distribution of Churches—Membership and Finances by Type of Churches Figures taken from Those for Conference Year 1952-53

I.—Churches Located in the Open Country

Conference	Chs.	S. S. Members	Church Members	Pastor's Salary	Home* Expenses	Total Benevolences	Total Raised	Property Value
Virginia Valley ...	16	1,132	1,786	$ 9,156	$ 61,150	$ 6,967	$ 68,117	$ 171,400
Eastern Virginia .	16	2,106	3,030	19,312	49,136	16,207	65,343	339,550
Eastern N. C.	36	3,191	4,795	21,305	60,610	13,767	74,377	406,507
Western N. C.	27	2,918	3,066	18,170	48,921	10,584	59,505	331,000
N. C. and Va.	25	2,982	3,871	30,432	89,955	17,964	107,919	546,200
Totals	120	12,329	16,548	$ 98,375	$ 309,772	$ 65,489	$ 375,261	$1,794,657

II.—Churches Located in Villages up to 500 Population

Virginia Valley ...	4	344	465	$ 2,499	$ 5,932	$ 1,963	$ 7,895	$ 32,300
Eastern Virginia .	10	1,564	1,670	20,840	71,450	12,792	84,242	408,000
Eastern N. C.	4	194	212	1,835	4,086	1,284	5,370	22,300
Western N. C.	6	336	336	4,027	6,933	1,667	8,600	46,500
N. C. and Va.	6	1,028	882	10,400	34,828	3,560	38,388	198,500
Totals	30	3,466	3,565	$ 39,601	$ 123,299	$ 21,266	$ 144,495	$ 707,600

III.—Churches Located in Towns from 500 to 2,500 Population

Eastern Virginia .	3	471	521	$ 4,980	$ 38,577	$ 3,275	$ 41,852	$ 148,000
Eastern N. C.	1	245	347	3,600	23,055	3,779	26,834	75,000
Western N. C.	3	382	261	3,160	11,471	1,563	13,034	60,000
N. C. and Va.	5	720	1,196	10,927	29,802	7,375	37,177	140,000
Totals	12	1,818	2,325	$ 22,667	$ 102,905	$ 15,992	$ 118,897	$ 423,000

IV.—Churches Located in Cities from 2,500 to 25,000 Population

Virginia Valley ...	1	144	391	$ 3,000	$ 9,230	$ 2,469	$ 11,699	$ 75,000
Eastern Virginia .	3	1,147	1,831	9,120	55,855	9,681	65,536	447,000
Eastern N. C.	5	671	1,039	16,575	79,909	5,184	85,093	462,000
Western N. C.	2	440	438	4,660	39,005	2,227	41,232	116,000
N. C. and Va.	4	784	1,166	12,300	42,954	8,281	51,235	232,206
Totals	15	3,186	4,865	$ 45,655	$ 226,953	$ 27,842	$ 254,795	$1,332,206

V.—Churches Located in Cities with 25,000 or More Population

Eastern Virginia .	11	2,649	3,734	42,336	$ 151,692	$ 28,060	$ 179,752	$1,835,000
Eastern N. C.	2	159	263	6,972	24,987	1,100	26,087	212,500
Western N. C.	1	136	68	2,442	4,312	387	4,699	20,000
N. C. and Va.	9	2,860	3,525	34,052	166,470	25,133	191,603	1,370,500
Totals	23	5,804	7,590	$ 85,802	$ 247,461	$ 54,680	$ 402,141	$3,438,000
Grand Totals ...	200	26,603	34,893	$ 292,100	$1,110,320	$ 185,269	$1,295,589	$7,695,463

*Includes Building and Pastors' Salaries.

WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.

Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1954

NUMBER 9

THE MISSIONS PERIOD

in

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

Beginning March 1 Through June

News Flashes

Be sure to read the article, "On being Fed Up on Organized Religion," in this week's issue by Rev. H. P. Bozarth.

After a month at Daytona Beach, Florida, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein will occupy his pulpit in Richmond on the first Sunday in March.

President L. E. Smith has returned to Elon College after a trip to Florida which combined pleasure and business. He was accompanied by Mrs. Smith.

The Elon Singers will sing in Washington this Sunday evening and will be at the First Church, Richmond Sunday night. They are returning from their annual trip in the Northeast.

The sympathy of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is extended to the Alfred A. Dofflemeyers and others bereaved in the passing on last Monday of Mrs. Dofflemeyer's father, Rev. Charles B. Richards. Mr. Richards, who was retired, has several times filled the pulpit of our Richmond Church.

Susan, little two-year-old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Richard L. Jackson of Chapel Hill, N. C., has been in the hospital for almost three weeks with an operation for appendicitis. She had to go through surgery twice, but we are glad to report that she is convalescing nicely and returned home on Monday of this week.

The Southeast Regional Committee met at Avon Park, Florida, February 23-24, with Dr. Jesse H. Dollar presiding. The theme of the meeting was "Church Extension in the Growing Southeast." Denominational leaders from the Board of Home Missions, New York, were in attendance, as was Superintendent Scott.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference is entitled to seven delegates to the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches to be held in New Haven, Conn., June 23-30. Ministers and laymen or laywomen who will be able to and desire to attend, should notify the secretary, Rev. R. L. Jackson, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, at once.

Readers of THE SUN will be interested to know that we now have another "Pattie Lee" in the Southern Convention. Patrieia Lee Harmon, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Henry V. Harmon of Elkton, Va., was born at the Georgetown University Hospital on Monday, March 1. Mother and daughter are both reported doing well. The Harmon's will be the guests of Mr. Harmon's father, Mr. W. P. Harmon, in Washington, for the next two weeks. Mr. W. P. Harmon, who is a member of the Westmoreland Congregational Church, Washington, and a SUN subscriber, has been in bed about three weeks due to painful although not serious injuries from an automobile accident. We extend to him understanding sympathy.

"A Lenten Prayer"

O love that passeth knowledge, come into my heart with all thy fullness, that my heart may be made gentle with thy goodness. Grant me to bear others' burdens that I may cease to live for myself.

Come thou in, that I may cease to be my own. Let me share with thee in the bearing of the sin and sorrow of the vast world. Let me take up the crosses of the heavy-laden. Fill me with thyself that I may become the servant of humanity.

—George Matheson.

Lenten Services at Congregational Christian Temple

SUNDAY MORNING SERVICES.

Eleven o'clock.

Theme: "Words of Life from Jesus."

March 7—"Why Are You Afraid?"

March 14—"Watch and Pray."

March 21—"Whose Likeness and Inscription is This?"

March 28—"You Will Know Them by Their Fruits."

April 4—"You Are Not Far from the Kingdom."

April 11—Palm Sunday—"This Is the Kingdom."

April 18—Easter—7 a. m., "Whom Do You Seek?"

11 a. m., "Because I Live, You Will Live Also."

The theme for the Lenten Vespers, each Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock will be "The Congregational Christian Churches"; the subjects for the five services will be: Their Roots and Branches; "Their Faith"; "Their Fellowship; "Their Freedom"; and "The Individual and the Church."

During Holy Week, services will be held on Sunday April 11 at 5 o'clock, and Monday through Friday at 8:00 p. m. Communion will be observed on Maundy Thursday evening.

Lenten Schedule for Asheville Church

The Rev. Frank E. Ratzell, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Asheville, N. C., in announcing the following Lenten schedule, says, "Months of planning and preparation have gone into these services, in order that this sacred festival of the Christian year may bring to everyone an ever-deepening experience of the riches of our faith."

THE SUNDAYS OF LENT.

March 7—Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, will speak.

March 14—Sermon, "Two Powers There Are."

March 21—Sermon, "The Great Enigma."

March 28—Sermon, "The Better Part."

April 4—Sermon, "Another Counselor."

HOLY WEEK.

April 11—Palm Sunday. Sermon "The Gamut."

April 15—Maundy Thursday. Holy Communion and Reception of Members. 8:00 p. m., Meditation, "Did He Win or Loose?"

April 18—Good Friday. Service at 8:00 p. m.

April 18—11:00 a. m., Easter Service. Sermon, "The Day Death Died."

Southern Convention Session Announced

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches will meet in biennial session at the Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., April 27, 28, 29, 1954. The session will begin at 2:00 p. m. on April 27, and will adjourn at noon on April 29. A Laymen's dinner meeting will be held at the Suffolk Christian Church on the 27th, while the Women will hold a dinner meeting at Bethlehem. A strong program is being planned, and it is hoped that all churches will plan to have delegates present.

(Continued on page 10.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieleley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Special Notice to Officers of Laymen's Fellowship

There will be a very important meeting of the Southern Convention Laymen's Fellowship Executive Committee at the Alamance Hotel, Burlington, N. C., on Saturday afternoon, March 13, at 3 o'clock. This committee includes all Conference chairmen, vice-chairmen and secretaries. The group will also attend the ground breaking at Moonelon on Sunday afternoon, March 14. You are urged to make arrangements to attend these meetings.

W. B. WILLIAMS,
Chairman.

* * * * *

Laymen of Burlington First Church Organize Fellowship

The men of the First Church of Burlington, North Carolina, met for a fellowship supper on Friday evening, February 19, with about 75 in attendance. A Laymen's Fellowship was organized and the following officers were elected: Eugene Gordon, president; J. A. Hall, Jr., vice-president; Wayne Morton, secretary, and Horace Freeman, treasurer.

The charter membership will be held open for two more meetings.

About $50.00 in dues was collected, one-half of which will be forwarded to the Convention treasurer. It was voted to accept Moonelon as a project, and some money has been received.

The program was as follows:

Invocation—Egbert Truitt
Words of Welcome—Eugene Gordon.
Supper—Chicken Barbecue.
Introduction of guests.
Singing of Familiar Songs—Mark Rhodes, leader.
Organization of Fellowship.
Introduction of the Speaker—Walter Cooper.
Address—George D. Colclough, Past President of the Southern Convention Laymen's Fellowship.
Benediction—Dr. Robinson.

The following committees were in charge of arrangements: Invitation Committee—Don Frederick, chairman; Lyman Lamm, Herman Swift, Horace Freeman, Edgar Sutton. Underwriting Committee—Jim McLennan, chairman; Garland Huffman, Alvis Smith. Supper Committee—

Bill Fowler, chairman; Harold Sutton, Jim Holt. Deacon's Sub-committee—Egbert Truitt, chairman; Robert Blue, Curtis Blanchard.

* * * * *

Ground Beaking for Central Building at Moonelon

Robert Blue, Curtis Blanchard.

The ground breaking for the main building of our Conference Center project at Moonelon will take place on Sunday, March 14, 1954, at 3:30 p.m., with the top officers of our Laymen's movement present.

Dr. Walter Graham, national executive secretary, will be the guest speaker. Mr. Bernard W. Williams, Southern Convention president, the conference presidents, the Moonelon committee, and all other interested persons will be present and welcome. We are hoping that many of the churches of the area will send delegations.

Actual construction will begin within a few weeks on the dining and assembly hall, with work days for laymen's groups to be announced.

H. E. ROBINSON.

* * * * *

Excerpts from Address to Laymen by Dr. Selden Mills

"If you are faced with a serious operation, you want the best surgeon that you can get, one that knows his business. If you have a matter that needs to be brought the courts, you would employ a good lawyer. In (Continued on page 11.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (in interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieleley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Lent . . . and the Beginning of the Mission Period

It is altogether appropriate that the beginning of our Mission Period in the Southern Convention should coincide with the beginning of Lent. Someone else has said that "the Lenten season should serve as a special opportunity for us to contemplate our responsibilities and obligations as followers of Christ, who trod the road of sorrow and suffering to emerge victorious, the conqueror over sin and death."

Certainly the Lenten period is a time for self-examination of our abilities and our resources, because it is only after such honest examination that we are able to evaluate what we demand for ourselves and what we are willing to deny ourselves that we may bring to others the opportunities afforded by a realization of the Christian way of life.

Our record in the Southern Convention, while comparing without too much discredit with the records of others, is nothing to be proud of. The amount that we have given through and to our churches for all causes is only "peanuts"—literally less than two five-cent bags a day for each member—and less than half of one of those bags has gotten further than our local church.

It is customary, during Lent, to deny oneself of something—some luxury or even something that is needful—which we have, through the bountifulness of God, enjoyed. Each of us can decide for ourselves what this might be—the important thing is that we do it. The self-discipline is needful, and the results of combined sacrifice can be surprisingly great.

Of you who read this, who will try out the meaning of Lent during these forty days? We see for them a triumphant Easter morning, when these days of sacrifice are gone! J. T. K.

Let's Look at the "C" in A B C

A B C stands for Alcoholic Beverage Control. "Alcoholic Beverage" or A B is an accurate description of the product involved. "Control" is a misleading term deliberately selected for the purpose of misleading the citizen.

The use of the word "control" is justified in that collection of revenue from the sale of ABC liquor is controlled. The use of the word, however, implies that the sale of this commodity is fully controlled, and also that its consumption is likewise controlled. Both of these implications are grossly untrue.

Liquor sold over the ABC store counter is immediately out of "control." It is a matter of common knowledge, especially to law enforcement officers, that the ease of obtaining almost unlimited amounts of ABC liquor gives the unscrupulous and lawless individuals of a community an easy source of supply of a dangerous commodity. Having obtained with little trouble, an amount of ABC liquor between the hours of 9:00 a. m. and 6:00 p. m., these individuals can and do go into business after the "legal" source is closed, and peddle their purchases by the bottle or by the glass at very profitable rates. This is a type of bootlegging stimulated—no eliminated—by the ABC store. For every bootlegger which the stores eliminate, others are encouraged in the above manner.

As for the "control" of this liquor after it has been purchased, a sad story indeed is being written.

The ABC store refuses to sell to minors. This is supposed to "control" its use among our youth. The fact is that our youth reach up on the pantry shelf of their own homes and help themselves to liquor purchased by their parents. Their parents have little grounds of objection when they have already set the example.

The crux of the matter comes, however, when we see the individual consume his purchase. Far too often the individual, too, goes out of "control." Destruction of property and life is the heavy price that is paid.

The "C" in ABC is a gross misrepresentation and should never have been allowed.

HENRY E. ROBINSON.

On Being Fed Up on Organized Religion

By REV. HOWARD P. BOZARTH, Pastor
Elon College Community Church

The Church of Jesus Christ has been a going concern for a long time, and will be for a long time to come. Its proved stability, "towering o'er the wrecks of time," indicates something of its worth in the esteem of men. But there are those today, as in times past, who are impatient with the church for various reasons, people who have withdrawn themselves from it or stand aloof, because, they say, they "no longer believe in organized religion." They claim they have no quarrel with Christianity, but are just "fed up" with the church. They say that they want the world to be a better place to live in, and they admit that this calls for more and more of Christianity. But, as far as they are concerned, the church may as well be counted out, as an essential contributor to the making of this a better world. They claim it is more concerned to maintain itself as an institution than to improve human society; that often as not it obstructs rather than forwards social improvement. Therefore, it may as well be abandoned, or dismissed. As for close identification with it, and participation in its ongoing of public worship and activities, that is a waste of time, a boring futility.

Now, not all who stand aloof from the church are as outspoken in their verbal criticism as this. But actions are more eloquent than words, in any case, and what they do attests to what they really believe. One half of the population of the United States does not believe sufficiently in the church to become members; and seventy-five percent of the members of Protestant churches, at least, do not believe in the church enough to attend its services with unfailing regularity, or contribute to its maintenance sufficiently to keep the church doors open, if the church had to depend on them alone, for its existence. It then would seem, therefore, that there is a great deal of doubt in the minds of people generally, as to the indispensable function of the church. They act as if they believed it could be abandoned without irreparable loss.

Of course, the large portion of those holding aloof from, or showing indifference to, the church have not thought through the issues of their position. Their criticism of the church is often no more than a rationalization, a bit of self-defense, in support of a basic unwillingness to be bothered about any program, or cause, that asks for personal discipline and commitment. Nearly a generation ago Dr. Fosdick said, "Our generation wants a moratorium on moral obligations." That continues to be the state of our society. The church does seek to obligate its members. It proposes that man subject himself to a much higher, and more exacting, sovereignty than of sheer self-love. And such a sovereignty is distasteful to the majority of our contemporaries. The church does get in our way when we choose to live by the rule of self-interest, which is the rule of "do as you please, when, as, and if you please." So, not all the impatience of our generation with the church is inspired by a judicious weighing of its merits and faults in the balance of sober judgment and finding it wanting. Such evaluation would disclose some real, and deplorable deficiencies. And it is well to be impatient about them. But an institution that has stood the test of time as well as the church, deserves, at least, a broad and sincere appraisal of its strength as well as weaknesses, before judgment is passed upon it.

Those impatient with the church for its faults have a splendid precedent to support them. Jesus was very impatient with the church of his time and his people. He remonstrated with its leaders because of what they taught and what they did. The vain, empty formalities of their worship, and observance of ceremonial laws, drew his fire. He wanted his people to put heart into their religious devotion, above all else. They wanted mostly to be counted "correct" in the externalities of piety. Jesus sternly criticized the churchmanship of Judaism in his time but his was more than a negative criticism. He had constructive words to speak as well as caustic. He constantly exhorted his hearers to "be," to "go," and to "do."

But never once did he propose that they abandon the church—withdraw from it. He never uttered a word of harsh judgment against "organized religion," as such. He did not say, "Away with the temple, since thieves have taken over in it." He sought to cleanse the temple, in place of renouncing it. He wanted to reform and restore the faith and practices of Judaism to give it greater organized strength and redeeming efficacy. He believed in worship, in the assembling of worshippers together for mutual spiritual refreshment and renewal of dedication to God. From the age of twelve he loved the temple and synagogue, and the whole spiritual order to which these institutions ministered. He saw the faults in the church, but it never occurred to him to seek to remedy them by withdrawal from its fellowship of worship and service.

Moreover, his first followers, after his crucifixion and resurrection, did not abandon the church of their own accord. They continued to think of themselves as members of that church. They went to the temple to pray. Their first meetings were in the synagogues of Israel. They did not start out to create a new church, or withdraw from the old. They wanted to reform and restore the old; they wished to inject new life into it by spreading the contagion of their faith in Jesus the Christ. It was only when the doors of the synagogue and temple were closed to them that these first disciples withdrew from the old church to create a new. Even then, in their assemblies, they borrowed many patterns of worship and organization from the synagogue. They did not say, "Let's have done with organized religion." They said, "Let's show what organized religion, inspired by faith in, and loyalty to, Jesus Christ, can do to redeem the world."

Hence they proceeded to organize the new church for its greater function. They chose leaders, and appointed members to different tasks and responsibilities, for teaching, preaching, finance, and service. They organized because that was a necessity if they wanted to accomplish their mission.

The history of Christianity is the record of organized enterprise. It could not be otherwise. No idea or ideal in this world finds lasting expression save in some institutionalized pattern. Paul had to establish churches, organize societies. It was not enough just to preach a message. Religion just does not take root and

(Continued on page 13.)

Our Churches Report . . .

New Church Organized at South Boston, Virginia

On the night of Sunday, January 17, 1954, a new Congregational Christian Church was organized at South Boston, Virginia, with 58 charter members. The prospects are bright that 100 charter members will be obtained by the time the church can begin meeting in their first building in the next few months.

A beautiful and spacious building site has been purchased at Centerville, near the new high school, located half way between South Boston and Halifax, on U. S. Highway No. 501. The site purchased has been made possible by the financial assistance of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference Missionary Association and the Mission Board of the Southern Convention.

A building and finance committee has been named, and the church expects to erect a first unit within the next few months at a cost of approximately $25,000. The church members are now undertaking a campaign to raise $10,000 on the building project.

Officers of the church that have been elected include the following: T. S. Earp, E. M. Walton, H. L. Martin, and H. G. Landrum, deacons; T. S. Earp, E. M. Walton, and W. A. Anderson, trustees; Mrs. Charlie Guthrie, church secretary; Miss Willie Adams, assistant secretary, and Miss Patti Adams, church treasurer.

Dr. Stanley U. North, general secretary of the Church Extension Division of the Board of Home Missions, New York; Superintendent W. T. Scott, members of the Mission Board, the Conference Missionary Association, and others, have visited this new church which is at present holding services in the Powell Funeral Chapel in South Boston. Great enthusiasm is being manifested concerning the new church, and a good account of the work will be given by a fine membership already gathered.

Deep appreciation is due Rev. Welton T. Madren, pastor of Pleasant Grove, Liberty and Ingram; and Rev. Mark W. Andes, pastor of Union (Virgilina) and Hebron, for the very splendid cooperation shown by themselves and their churches. The set-up of the churches in Halifax County will be greatly strengthened in the organization of this church in South Boston. We are grateful to all who have given generously that this new work may be possible.

W.M. T. SCOTT, Supt.

* * *

As we go to press, we learn that Rev. Mark W. Andes, of Virgilina, Virginia, has accepted the call to the newly organized church in South Boston, to become its first pastor. Mr. Andes is the son of the late Rev. Alfred Wellons and Mrs. Andes of Harrisonburg, Va., and a brother of Rev. Wm. J. Andes of Winston-Salem, N. C. He has served Union Church, Virgilina, and Hebron, near Clarksville, for the past seven years, having succeeded the late Dr. Chas. E. Newman. He has proven himself to be a faithful, capable and devoted pastor. He and Mrs. Andes, the former Miss Catherine Cooper of Burlington, N. C., are graduates of Elon College. Mr. Andes is also a graduate of Duke University Divinity School.

J. T. K.

Superintendents' Meeting of North Carolina & Virginia Conference

The Superintendents' meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School Convention will be held at the First Congregational Christian Church, 400 Radiance Drive, Greensboro, N. C., on Saturday, March 27, 1954.

This will be a dinner meeting, and a helpful and inspiring program is being planned. The speaker will be Miss Clarice Bowman of the Department of Religion of High Point College. Miss Bowman is well known in the field of religious education. She has had wide experience in leadership education in the Methodist Church. Her topic for the meeting will be "Guiding Growth Godward."

It is hoped that all Sunday school superintendents, assistants, pastors and members of boards or committees on Christian Education will attend this meeting on March 27. The program should have appeal and worthwhile information for all.

The meeting will begin at 6:30, and every effort will be made to close it in time to allow those attending to get home before a late hour.

Won't you of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference mark the date, March 27, on your calendar and make plans to attend.

MARTIN T. GARREN,
President.

Meeting of Board of Publications Called by Chairman

The Board of Publications of the Southern Convention will meet at the First Congregational Christian Church, Henderson, N. C., on Tuesday, March 16, 1954, at 10:00 a.m. Each member of the board is urged to attend. The members of the board are: Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, Chairman; Mr. Shirley T. Holland, Secretary; Revs. Clyde L. Fields, James H. Lightbourne, Jr., Silas E. Madren, and W. W. Snyder.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a major responsibility of the Board of Publications. How to make our paper a more effective instrument of our convention constituency is a real concern of the board. They would welcome the counsel and suggestions of each and all.

The Board of Publications invites all ministers and other interested persons to meet with them in a "hearing" on the problems facing our people regarding THE SUN. This meeting will be held at the Henderson Church at 2:00 p.m., March 16.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN,
Chairman.

The Difference You Make

The difference between a big congregation and a small one is—you.

The difference between a church that stands before the community as a strong and vigorous church, and exerts upon the the community a strong and vital influence, and a church that has but little influence is—you.

The difference between a Protestantism that uses its freedom for God and a Protestantism which uses freedom to commit suicide is—you.

I do not know which side you are on in these matters. You will know. You are on one side or the other. And what you do counts heavily for or against the church—your church.

—Richard H. Bennett.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Church and Education—Why Should the Church Support Christian Colleges?

It is generally accepted among church people that the church ought to have a voice in the affairs of men. We are careful to say, however, that the church and state must remain separate. While that principal is sound, its implications may carry us too far as a church from our responsibilities as Christian citizens. The danger comes in the separation of religion from the affairs of men! Church and state may never unite in all things, but woe unto that state whose statesman and citizens are not motivated by religious ideals and commands.

In recent years there has been a great shift to society in general of the things which the church formerly did, in particular: education, printing, social service, charities, etc. We need have no fear of the transfer of these functions if those who exercise them are Christian men and women. The one sure way for our society to have trained minds and dedicated lives is for the church not to fail in its responsibility in the field of education.

It is with considerable alarm that we see the trend toward secular education in America. The church cannot perform its functions by turning its responsibility for training youth over to the state. Until 1938 there were more students attending privately endowed colleges and universities than were in publicly supported institutions. That trend is rapidly turning the other way. The cause may well be the "stateism" abroad which says, "The church might well surrender its colleges to the state, since our state schools are fulfilling their education function, including the teaching of religion." Perhaps every youth will not go to a church college, but woe be unto the church the day the Christian college ceases to be a power.

As good as our publicly supported institutions of higher learning are, the church cannot expect (if it is realistic) that these schools can and will do the job the church can and must do. There are too many limitations placed upon the institutions of higher education sponsored by the state. We mention but two; but they are significant:

I—Choice of Teachers.

While there are many Christian Spirits among the faculties that teach in our state supported schools, that fact may be not design but coincidence. "College administrators in publicly supported institutions are restricted by law from using Christian standards of judgment in the course of employment of faculty members. They must limit their concern to the technical fitness of candidates for academic positions. It goes without saying that most of us will agree that the quality of life and character of the teacher is as important a consideration in determining his influence on the minds of students as is the extent of his mastery of the subject matter. Our college can not do without the latter, but they can and do insist on the former."

II—Christian Curricula Prohibited.

Publicly supported schools can and do teach religion, to be sure. They teach freely to the extent of encouraging youth to live clean, wholesome, useful lives. They can inspire the ideals of honesty, courage, reverence and patriotism. They may seek to develop many of the same inner ideals which Christianity, Judaism, Buddhism, etc., seek to develop. But these publicly owned schools cannot teach, or assume as true, a specific religious philosophy or gospel to undergird that type of life. They cannot encourage youth to become Jew, Roman Catholic, Protestant, or Buddhist. Nor can they give any particular outlook on life which will cause them to support and become adherents of any religious group. Religion without a specific relationship to Jesus Christ is not sufficient for Christian people. Bible as good literature, or Christianity as an ideal among others is not sufficient for Christian people!

The church is under no such limitations. The college built and maintained by the church can have something to say about the religious character and teaching of the school, its faculty and curricula. The only limitation troubling the church related college often is the lack of funds with which to provide facilities and resources for the youth who ought to enter her halls of learning.

If the church is to perform her function in the field of education—which the state cannot and will not do—then the church must pay for it. Adequate physical facilities must be provided. Resources must be supplied which will make possible the church college's commanding for its faculties keen, well trained Christian men and women who are motivated by the quest for knowledge as a means to the end of developing youthful minds and characters after the pattern of Jesus Christ.

Elon College is the instrument of Christian higher education in the hands of our area. Whether we will make her resources and possibilities available for increasing numbers of youth will in large measure be determined by our support in prayer, financial gifts, and in the sending of our youth to her halls of learning.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

A Summer School Opportunity for Pastors

The Eastern Summer School for Ministers will be conducted by the Board of Home Missions at the Deering Community Center, Hillsboro, New Hampshire, July 7 to 28, 1954. For pastors of the Southern Convention who would like to attend this splendid summer school, a tuition will be granted for room and board for the period of the school, plus transportation over $15. In other words, for $15 our pastors have an opportunity for an excellent summer school for pastors, and it will be an experience long to be remembered. Our churches will do well to recommend that their pastors go to this pastors' school and provide for a supply for their pulpit while they are away. The pastors will return better men and better qualified to do their job.

Any pastor interested in attending the Deering School should write to Dr. Truman Douglass, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York, or to Superintendent Scott, Elon College, North Carolina.

Faith is neither creed nor dogma; it is a "becoming" and a "doing." Faith is the driving force of life.

—Anon.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Meeting of Valley Executive Board

The executive board of the Virginia Valley Women's Missionary Conference met recently in the lovely home of Mrs. A. W. Andes, in Park View, Harrisonburg, with Mrs. Cecel Whitlock, president, presiding.

Nine members of the board were present, four of the five district superintendents, Rev. Henry Harmon, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, several life members and a group of ladies from the Antioch Church, who prepared a delicious lunch.

The main purpose of the meeting was to make plans for the Spring Rallies.

After the devotional, reports were given by the district and departmental superintendents. Each society reported on their friendly service projects, and it seems much is already being done in this capacity.

The president asked the group for suggestions concerning the Thank Offering project, as she is a member of the planning committee. An interesting discussion followed, during which Pattie Lee gave some good suggestions for the group to consider.

The report on recommendations adopted at the fall conference was read in part as follows:

Recommendations.

1. Urge more of our women to attend the School of Missions.

2. Since our Southern Convention, in line with the thought of our National Woman's Fellowship, has adopted the following goals, we urge that this conference also realize their worth and strive to (A) Further our Christian World Mission by helping establish and strengthen the Committee on Missionary Education and Stewardship in every local church. (B) Deepen our spiritual life as individuals and as families. (C) promote in every local church the showing of the feature film, "The Hidden Heart." (D) Support in every possible way the Church Building Loan Fund.

3. Since gifts from our Life Memberships and Memorials are designated for Franklinton and there is the possibility of this work being carried on at Bricks, N. C., we recommend that we stress this phase of our giving as contributions toward the renovation of the chapel at Bricks.

4. Since we are part of the National Women's Fellowship and since our program includes Bible Study, Personal and Family Spiritual development as well as the Mission Study, we recommend that we suggest to the convention that the name Women's Fellowship of the Southern Convention be used, and in that event this conference be known as "The Women's Fellowship of the Valley Conference."

5. Since the progress of our Convention aims at an advance rather than retreat, and since steps necessary in this direction include increased consecrated giving of our means as well as of our talents, we recommend that the Valley Women's Conference accept the suggested goal of $2500 per biennium and that we make every possible effort to reach it as each society seizes its opportunity and with the help of our Lord carries its share of the responsibility.

Plans for the Spring Rallies were completed. The meeting adjourned with a prayer chain.

MRS. AUSTIN KIPPS,

* * * * *

North Carolina Rallies

Mrs. W. T. Scott, North Carolina president, has recently sent a letter to each local president, telling of plans for the spring rallies. Here is the schedule:

Halifax District—March 31—Ing-ram, Va.

Henderson-Raleigh—April 1—Liberty, Vance.

Sanford—April 2—Fayetteville.

Asheboro—April 5—Ramseur.

Greensboro—April 6—Winston-Salem.

Burlington — April 7 — Union Ridge.

It is especially fine that every District Superintendent was present at a meeting in February to plan for these rallies. There are to be two outstanding speakers:

Mrs. W. B. Williams, our convention president, who represented us at the National Assembly of United Church Women in Atlantic City last fall, and Miss Margaret Hargrove, executive secretary of our National Fellowship, who is making her first visit to our area in that capacity. She will bring the feature address, using as her topic, "The Heart of the Master."

* * * * *

A Good Report from A Fine President

Last fall a copy of the report given by the retiring president, Mrs. H. G. Ballinger, to the women of the First Church, Greensboro, came to me for publication. Like other material on "past doings" received at that time, it had to be pushed aside to make room for current items. However, it is such an excellent report, and reflects the type of thing all presidents should do and few do, that it seems to still have value. It is hoped that every president of a society this year will "take note" and resolve now to make a detailed report of her "stewardship" at the end of the conference year.

GREENSBORO FIRST.

The past year has been one of activity and enthusiasm for the women of the First Congregational Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C. The women are deeply grateful for our new church, and all the facilities we now have. To worship in our lovely sanctuary is most inspiring and to work in our new kitchen and other rooms of the educational building is most thrilling and exciting.

Our women have participated in many projects, both for ourselves and for others. We have sent Friendly Service gifts to Ellis Island and to a girls' school in Madura, South India; 25 pounds of materials in packets for peace on World Community Day; and clothing for the Elon Orphanage, including $65 in cash to buy shoes for the children at Easter.

For our Thank Offering to Carroll County, we have $139.50

Nine Life Memberships and three Memorials were given, totalling $120. This money is to be used for renovating Franklinton Center. We gave to missions for our Conference Apportionment $406. The total amount for missions and benevolences, including the gifts of the Cradle Roll, Juniors and Young People, was $819.31.

We have had several projects to make money for the Building Fund,

(Continued on page 9.)

Missions at Home and Abroad

A Cent-a-Meal for Missions During March, April, May and June

Dear Friends:

The Mission Period began March 1. The world needs so much the spirit and influence of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The Mission Board is the agency of the Southern Convention which helps to carry the Christian gospel to America and throughout the world. The work of Christian missions is limited, not by the need, but by funds to provide the necessary missionaries. The Mission Period is a time of special emphasis upon our job as Christian witnesses through the missionary program. We hope very much that each church and Sunday school will this year give special thought and prayer to the cause of missions.

Limited as our Mission Board is by lack of funds, for the past several years we have used the "Cent-a-Meal Plan" as a means of increasing our mission work. Many individuals and families have found it a joy to observe the practice of giving at least a Cent-a-Meal during the Mission Period of March, April, May and June. Last year a substantial sum of money was received from the Cent-a-Meal plan.

We have mailed a supply of Cent-a-Meal stickers to the pastors or the Sunday school superintendents of the various churches, and have asked that these be distributed to the families of the churches. Will you not be sure to get your sticker. Place it on a box or jar and put it on the family dining table. Then drop in at least a penny at each meal as thanks are returned to God for his gifts.

The Cent-a-Meal gifts may be credited to your church's apportionment, or they may be used as an extra gift to missions so badly needed. We shall greatly appreciate your cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

WM. T. SCOTT,
Executive Sec'y,
The Mission Board.

* * * *

"Be Their Milkman"—a Project for the Month of March

Milkmen are needed. In some areas of the world, children, mothers and invalids are without milk—a food commonly found on the breakfast, lunch and dinner tables of most of our American homes. In these areas in Europe, Africa, Asia and South America, many, for the lack of proper foods, die daily from malnutrition.

We in the United States have more milk than we are using. Some of it is stored in warehouses, in powder form. Last June, the United States government made available to voluntary relief agencies 90 million pounds of milk powder.

Fifteen million pounds of the surplus milk made available by our government are being distributed in 28 countries by Church World Service. When the milk was presented by Mr. John Herbert Davis of the Department of Agriculture, he said: "Our nation welcomes the opportunity to share the abundance of food we have. It seems especially appropriate that we can donate such a basic food as the dry milk we are shipping today. We feel fully repaid in knowing that it is going to the less fortunate of other countries to help them ward off hunger and disease."

Milkmen on the job. Our job is to deliver the milk, to Europe and Asia, the areas assigned to Church World Service. Furnishing the food is only one phase of the milk problem. The other phases are transportation overseas and distribution. These are the vital roles which Church World Service and other such organizations play.

The cost of delivering a pound of this milk powder overseas is 25c—which covers the expenses involved in getting the milk to a port for ocean-going vessels, shipping by the ocean freight, and distributing the milk through Christian channels.

Already groups in some of our churches have made contributions to this project. Already evidences have come from overseas of the effectiveness of those gifts. Letters have come from India telling of the distribution of the powdered milk there to under-nourished school children; and from Hong Kong, too, have come words of appreciation for the milk from American friends.

Church World Service has prepared publicity material to stimulate interest in this project. Posters, leaflets and milk bottle stickers which explain and popularize the "Be Their Milkman" project are available free in quantities from Room 102, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Mass. It is hoped that these materials will encourage children in church schools to be milkmen to the world's under-nourished. Money should be sent to the Southern Convention office, and should be designated, "Be Their Milkman."

Junior High groups in various parts of the country are making this a Lenten giving project. Will your school join with them? If you will, children around the world will benefit.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 8.)

such as dried flower shows, bazaar, turkey dinner, sale of doughnuts, Christmas cards, and fair prizes. The amount paid into the Building Fund to be applied to the kitchen equipment account was $3,469.91, which closed out the account.

Our circles have been very active in putting on projects of their own to take care of furnishings and equipment, such as additional cabinets for the kitchen, mirrors for the women's rest rooms, an electric roaster, 100 place setting of silver, the cross and candle holders for the chapel, as well as a new robe for our minister. One circle gave an automatic washing machine for the Elon Orphanage. Several miscellaneous items were given as gifts. All these make a total of approximately $670. This amount, plus the amount paid to the Building Fund, makes an approximate total of $4,166.

We now have a membership of 152, with twelve new members during the past year.

Our programs this year have been both informative and inspiring with some very outstanding ones, such as our Christmas program written by our Mrs. Wisseman. We had as guest speakers Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Sloan of Elon College for our study of Africa.

The women of our church have paid into the Building Fund in the past four years $14,496.91. To have been president of our Auxiliary for the past four years has been a wonderful privilege, a happy experience, and an honor which I will cherish always. As we go forward into our new year, we hope to accomplish bigger and better things for Christ and his kingdom. To what better task could we dedicate ourselves,

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

It is spring again. The daffodils have pushed through the earth and left the brown slumber of winter and sent up green shoots with lovely yellow blossoms.

The stars are telling the spring glory of God too. Do you know the star pictures that are in the sky? One of the easiest to find is the Big Dipper. It is made of seven stars, three make the handle, and four form the bowl of the dipper.

Poets have written about the stars from earliest time. One wrote: "Stars are the sparks blown from the angel's campfires." Another said: "The stars are little forget-me-nots of God." And it is true that many of the stars in the Milky Way sparkle with a bluish light.

The Psalmist wrote: "The heavens declare the glory of God." Many years later a composer was moved to write: "The Heavens are Telling." Great preachers have told of the heavenly beauty and scientists have explained the distance of stars, their night, and kind of light.

But to each of us there remains the heavenly spring nights, when we can consider the stars, the pictures they make, and the glory in God's greatness.

J. J. H.

* * * * *

Too Busy to Follow Through?

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"How glad I am to see you, Lucia! Having you with me will be just like returning to our carefree college days!"

Those hearty words of greeting were spoken by my friend, Katherine Foster, as I stepped from the train in the town of Westvale, where she had been living during the fifteen years of her married life. We had been good friends in college, but, up to this time, neither of us had been able since graduation to visit the other. It was a meeting of the state library association in a central city which had now given me this opportunity for a brief stopover in her home.

Katherine's words brought to my mind the sharp contrast between the tired-looking woman who was leading me to her waiting car and the sunny-hearted girl I had known in college. Why, I wondered, had those relatively few years changed the appearance of my friend so adversely?

I was even more puzzled when our ride in an expensive car ended at a beautiful home and three fine-looking children were presented to me. How could anyone who had so much to make her happy look so worn and weary?

"Please take our guest's over night bag up to her room, Jerry," Katherine directed her fourteen-year-old son. "Perhaps you would like to freshen up a bit, Lucia," she continued, "while I see about dinner; but do hurry down, because there are so many things for us to talk about!"

"Jer-r-y!" A boyish voice floated in from the front yard. "Come on out and pitch for us!"

Without waiting to do his mother's bidding, young Jerry hurried out to join his friends in a ball game. Instead of calling him back, Katherine picked up my bag and carried it upstairs. She seemed unaware that her son had failed to comply with her directions.

"I thought Diane was picking some roses for you," she remarked, as she sought to make me comfortable. "Diane loves to gather flowers, and I told her that could be her part in making you welcome."

As my friend finished speaking she hurried down the stairs, and in a few minutes she reappeared with a vase of lovely roses. "I didn't have time to cut very many," she apologized, as I thanked her, "but I wanted you to have enough of these Beauties in your room to make an enjoyable fragrance." Instead of asking her eleven-year-old daughter to put aside her book she was reading, for a moment, and gather the flowers as had been planned, the busy mother had picked them herself.

There was a similar occurrence when the table was to be set for dinner. "Nanette promised me that she would set the table while I was meeting the train," Katherine told me after I had asked if I might help with that part of the preparations, "but she must have forgotten about it." Nine-year-old Nanette was at that moment playing with her paper dolls in a corner of the living room, but her mother did not call her. Instead, she brought the silver and napkins and told me where to place them.

I now had the clue to my friend's careworn appearance. She had allowed herself to become too busy to follow through when she gave her children directions, thereby not only adding to her own burdens but denying the children the pleasure of helping in the home and gaining the satisfaction of work well done.

I could not tell Katherine how grave a mistake she was making; I could only hope that something would awaken her to the need of her children for calm, unhurried guidance. A mother should not ask a child to perform a task unless she is going to be careful to see that her request is carried out. A sense of unfulfillment leaves a scar on a child's personality, and the mother herself becomes needlessly worried and exhausted.

Much happier and better prepared for later living are those children who share with their mother and father the activities involved in the maintenance of their home. To bring this about it is advisable that the parents take advantage of early childhood; that they begin them, gently but firmly, to insist that all their directions shall be carried out. As reason develops, children should have the privilege and the opportunity, when possible, to talk over with their parents any directions the advisability of which they question, but no directions should ever be ignored.

SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

(Continued from page 2.)

Each church in the Southern Convention is entitled to one lay delegate. Churches which have more than 200 members are entitled to one additional delegate for each additional 200 members or major fraction thereof, provided that no church shall have more than four delegates.

Churches should nominate their delegates at once and send their names and addresses to the Secretary of the conference of which the church is a member.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Sunday, March 7, is Rally Day for E. N. C. young people. Don't forget and come out to be with the other conference youth.

* * *

The Southern Convention Rally is the last of April. All officers, Commission chairmen and two delegates from each church are invited to attend. Program is to be centered around the Commission Plan and Purpose.

* * *

Many of our young people are going to be on tour with the Elon College Choir this next week during Spring Vacation as they travel into many Northern States with their annual good-will musical program. They will be in N. C. and Va. for several days so if they come your way, it will be worth your time to go out to hear them.

* * * * *

Youth Service Held at Hunterdale

Youth Week at Hunterdale Christian Church was observed with a Youth Service on Sunday evening, the young people taking part under the leadership of their pastor, Rev. Clyde Fields. The service, as it was rendered, was as follows:

Prelude—Jean Overby.

Hymn.

Prayer—Grace Ann Cobb.

Hymn.

Announcements.

Worship in Tithes and Offerings.

Offertory Prayer—David Joyner.

Scripture Lesson, Luke 10:30-37

—Norris Bly.

Special Music.

Youth Addresses:

“Defining Brotherhood”—Ted Fields.

“Brotherhood in Action”—Archie Howell.

Hymn.

Benediction—Vernon Taylor.

The nshers were Joseph Edwards and Hubert Bridges.

Services of this nature show that the youth are doing their part in the work of the church. Congratulations to the youth for leading in this Sunday evening service.

Youth Week Observed at Resemont

January 31 through February 7, the Junior and Senior Youth Fellowships of Rosemont Christian Church observed Youth Week. The theme for the week was “So Send I Yon.”

Sunday night, January 31, we were in charge of the evening service and our Youth Choir sang. Miss Betty Ruth Carden gave a very inspiring message on “Youth's Place in the World.” Others who took part in the service were Ellen Hewitt, Betty Jane Hassell and Louis Platt.

Monday night, we went skating, and we had a good group.

On Thursday night we were given a banquet. The tables were decorated in the Valentine Day note. The food was delicious. For entertainment we had Tommy Liverman as our master of ceremonies. He was dressed as a Texas Ranger and said that this was the first time he had been out of the sovereign State of Texas. There were several instrumental and vocal numbers and group singing. We enjoyed the program very much. Our music was supplied by a band of local talent consisting of Robert Day, Richard Gladstone, Jimmy Pezzella and Crawford Waters. Mrs. Herbert Fisher was in charge of the entertainment, and the banquet was served by Mrs. W. C. Morrison and Mrs. L. L. Milteer, assisted by the Youth Counselors.

Saturday morning, we cleaned the church. About twenty young people came out to work. We were served a delicious lunch by Miss Dunn, our director of Religious Education. We enjoyed the fellowship as well as having the joy of doing something for the church.

Saturday night, we went bowling. We also had a fine group for bowling.

On Sunday night, February 7, instead of our regular Youth Fellowship meeting, we had an interdenominational meeting, and invited youth from other churches in our community. After the service, refreshments were served.

Our entire Youth Week was enjoyed by everyone, and we are looking forward very much to one again next year.

DONNA LITCHFIELD,
Secretary, Sr. Y. F.

Student Summer Service Workers

Churches in the Southern Convention desiring to have Vacation Church School, Leadership Training Schools, Day Camps and need assistance of outside help should contact Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon College, N. C. If a church is able to do the work with local help, the Board of Christian Education hopes that they will do so and not call on the board for a Student Summer Service Worker. If help is needed, the board hopes to be able to send a young student, having been trained beforehand, to help in whatever is needed. The churches calling for help should assist in paying some travel expenses and in providing lodging and food while the student is working there.

W. J. ANDES,
Board of Christian Education.

LAYMEN AND THE CHURCH.

(Continued from page 3.)

religion, if you want the best, why not engage the best to do it for you? Then you will know it is done correctly. In handling the human spirit you have something different from the appendectomy. I have discussed this with my doctor, and he always gets results. Either they die or live. The minister works himself blue in the face. In the realm of the spirit there is no such thing as tangible results that you can get in the hospital. It all lies in the heart of a living individual.

“Jesus used the language of a layman and not the language of the preacher. Today the place where Christianity is having the battle of its life is in the laity, not in the clergy, in the laity. The laymen can do some things that the ministers cannot do. Christianity is not a religion of the clergy, it is a religion of the laity.

“It depends upon you to make the church what it is. The true mission of the laymen is that of an evangelist. Brotherhood is not simply to be practiced by preachers. Brotherhood now in the atomic age has become an inexorable necessity if man is to survive. The world is not safe until all are safe. It takes more than the minister to do that.

“Christianity as a laymen's religion is getting back where religion started. Evangelism in the truest sense is your vocation. The churches safety depends upon the kind of laymen the church has. Christianity is a religion of laymen.”

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

Jesus Faces the Cross

LESSON XI—MARCH 14, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "He who loves his life, loses it, and he who hates his life in this world will keep it for eternal life."—John 12:25.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 11:55-12:50.

DEVOTIONAL READING I Corinthians 1:18-31.

Today's lesson is the only incident, given in John's gospel, between the Triumphal Entry and the night of the Last Supper. He assumes that the other incidents of Holy Week or Passion Week—the cleansing of the Temple, the solemn parables by Jesus against the Sanhedrin, the conflict with the scribes and Pharisees, the other parables recorded by the other Gospel writers, and the departure from the Temple—were well known to his readers. This fact gives the incident significance. The event probably took place toward the close of that solemn week best known as Passion Week.

A Yearning for Jesus.

"Now among those who went up to worship at the feast were some Greeks" who said "Sir, we would see Jesus," or we wish to see Jesus. It was an expression of the yearning of the human heart for the living Christ. These men were Greeks, they had fine culture, they were undoubtedly proselytes—they had been initiated into the Jewish faith, but they yearned for a personal, living experience with Christ. There is a universal hunger in the human heart for God. It is not always recognized. It is often neglected. It is sometimes deliberately ignored. But it is there. "We wish to see Jesus" is the cry of every penitent, the birth cry of every new-born soul, the burst of joy as the children of God pass beyond the veil. The church stands for something which is elemental to the human heart. It has in Christ, that which meets the deepest needs of men and women.

Bringing Others to Jesus.

So these—these Greeks—came to Philip, and said to him, "Sir, we wish to see Jesus." They sought to see Jesus through others. And it was the privilege of Philip and Andrew to bring these Greeks into the presence of Christ. The world would like to see Jesus in us. If there was more of the spirit of Christ in our lives, the world would be more eager to see Jesus for themselves. Sincere, radiant, loving Christians are a medium through whom others can see Jesus.

One Great Hour.

"The hour has come for the Son of Man to be glorified." It was not the only great hour in the life of Jesus. But it was one of the greatest. Those Greeks, perhaps only a few in number, were the representatives, and the vanguard of the whole Gentile world which would come to seek Jesus. Although his ministry had been almost exclusively to the Jews first, he did make clear the fact that there "were other sheep not of this fold," and he made clear that his love and redemptive purpose included all men. The fact is, that Jesus seemed to be overwhelmed by the sight of those Greeks seeking him out. Here was the thing he longed for most of all. He sees the whole Gentile world, in his own day and down through the ages searching for his truth, coming to him, sharing his life which was life indeed.

Living by Dying, Saving by Losing.

"If it dies, it bears much fruit . . . he who loves his life loses it, and he who hates his life in this world will keep it for eternal life." A paradox, but eternally true. Here is a grain of wheat, a tiny, seemingly lifeless thing. In fact there is only potential life in it. Put it in a safe deposit vault, or on the shelf in the kitchen, and it remains lifeless and unfruitful and useless. But put it in the ground! It dies, of itself, but from it there springs forth a tiny shoot of green, then a stalk, then a head of wheat, and a many-fold yield of grain. It saves its life by losing its life. It lives by dying.

It is thus with life. Let a man, any man, live to himself and for himself, and he loses himself, his usefulness dies, and in the highest sense, he dies. But let him "bury" himself, in service and sacrifice for his fellowmen, and a chain reaction starts, and the fruits of good living multiply unbelievably, and he finds life, more life, abundant life. And others find life too. The man "who looks out for 'Number One'" is of all men most miserable. The eternal principle of life is that we live only as we die, and that as we die, we live.

For Such a Time as This.

"What shall I say? Father save me from this hour? No for this purpose I have come to this hour. Father, glorify Thy name." As the shadow of the Cross fell across his path, the Son of Man instinctively drew back. His first impulse was to try to escape it. Should he ask the Father to save him from that ordeal? No!, a thousand times, No! It was for just that cause or purpose that he had come into the world. The Father had sent him into the world to save the world, and the world could be saved only by his death on the Cross. So instead of praying that he might be saved from going to the Cross, he prayed that in going to the Cross he might glorify God.

Thunder, an Angel, or a Voice.

Some of the folks in the crowd said that "it thundered" others said that "an angel had spoken" but Jesus clearly recognized a voice, and understood its message. People often hear things differently. Even divine messages are often garbled and misunderstood or misinterpreted. What for some, with hardened hearts and deafened ears, are but natural sounds, or sounds making no sense, are for others messages from the unseen world, and in some cases, personal messages of encouragement and hope and help. In this case the message had not come for the sake of Jesus—he had already had abundant evidence that he pleased the Father. The voice had come for the sake of the disciples and the crowd around Jesus.

The Magnetism of the Cross.

"And I, when I am lifted up from the world, will draw all men to myself." John adds, "Now this he spake, signifying by what death he was about to die." He was saying that his Cross would be the mightiest and most sovereign force and motive on earth, the most powerful influence ever brought to bear on the human heart and will. And in a double sense: as a judgment of God against sin, and as a revelation of the grace

(Continued on page 13.)

ON BEING FED UP ON ORGANIZED RELIGION.

(Continued from page 5.)

grow in isolated spirits. It flourishes, if at all, by grace if its institutional patterns, in fellowship.

Now, institutions, we must admit, are subject to errors and corruption. The church is no exception. It is difficult for institutions to remain flexible and adaptable to new demands of new times. They tend to ice over and stratify at certain levels. Paul had trouble with Peter, and the church in Jerusalem, because he wanted the church to adapt itself to the demands of a growing Gentile constituency. He wanted it to make a cleaner break with Judaism than many of the original disciples of Christ thought proper. The church had to adapt itself. It was painful, but it was accomplished.

The church, through the centuries, has tended to stratify at certain levels, and resist demands of changing situations. It has tended to stagnate, to grow corrupt, even, in its institutional aims and practices. All through the centuries, therefore, prophets and reformers have risen up to challenge the church, to try to correct, purge, and redirect its energies. All the great monastic movements began in protest against certain failures, or corruptions, of the institutionalized practices of the church. The Protestant Reformation sprang from such roots. The beginnings of the Methodist Church in England, and of the Congregational and Christian Churches of England and America, were of like inspiration. The church tends to grow corrupt in its institutional development, but thanks be to God, it has always inspired leaders to rise up and challenge its corruption, to correct and reform, and release its powers into new, life-giving streams. Every major denomination in Christendom is the institutionalized result of the persistent urge within the church to reform itself, and fulfill its God-appointed mission in the world. We may deplore the excesses to which the launching of new sects has gone, in times past. But we might well deplore, even more, the consequence if there were but one, totalitarian institution, known as the church. Religion has suffered in history because of its institutional patterns, but without organization, without institutional expression, there would have been no history of religion to record.

So, the question for our time, as for all time, is not, "Shall we have a church?" but "what kind of church shall we have?" A church is a body of people organized to express a faith in God, through worship and service. The Christian church is that body of people who unite to worship and serve God as revealed in Jesus Christ. There could have been no such thing as Christianity had there been no organized body and expression of this faith. The fate of Christianity rests with the nature, the quality, of the church which is, and which is to be. That is inescapable fact.

Therefore it is well for us to consider what this fact means in terms of our own relationship to the church.

And the major item for consideration is this, that there can be no church except as its members assemble often and regularly for worship. For in worshipping assemblies we seek, together, to identify ourselves in spirit with God. That is, we seek fellowship with him in mind, in heart, and in action. The forms of worship may vary widely, but the function is not variable. In worship we seek to know who we are, in the sight of God, and what we ought to be, and obtain power to become, where we are deficient. Without this act of identification there can be no church. It is a corporate act and function. We therefore can have no church without this assembling of ourselves together in worship.

For in this act, alone, do we derive the will, the concern and compulsion to live as children and servants of God. The world is not hospitable to this endeavor. It takes spiritual drive and spiritual nourishment to contend with the opposition from the world. We should require little argument to convince us that this is a demon-ridden world. It is fragmented and disintegrated by the antagonisms, the divisions, the tensions and conflicts which set up strife from the bottom to the top of society, from homes to the community of nations. The demonic force in the world is that, in each of us, which causes us to reject our neighbor, and exclude him from our fellowship. Call it hate, envy, greed, selfishness, avarice, lust, covetousness—any name you will—it is demonic. And this divisive element is the very root cause of our inescapable anxiety for the future. Because of it, prospective parents wonder if it is right to bring children into the world. We live in dread because our neighbor is so often our enemy, not a friend; an antagonist, not a partner. In such a world, what hope is there except it be redeemed by a devotion to a God who is like the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. The love of the brethren, which alone issues from the love of God, is our sole resource, if we even want to survive on this planet. And the only place where this love is being generated in hopeful measures is the Church of Jesus Christ.

But what if we stand aside, because of some aspects of this institution's life we happen not to like, saying, "I'm fed up on organized religion!" What if we hold aloof from its worship, and its struggle to interpret and express the will and love of God? We then become part of the problem and not the answer. We align ourselves inadvertently with the demonic in this world, not the godlike.

But what a thrilling invitation it is to identify ourselves with the church, God's agency in this world for its redemption! There is no call, no challenge, no privilege like it. We can align ourselves with that organized power in this world, against which, we may believe, the gates and demons of hell can never prevail. For this purpose we were created. We are called to identify ourselves with God. We are invited to rise up in the dignity of our inheritance and endowment as men, and demonstrate what God can do with loving children in a hating world. There is no weakness or fault, however, that will ever be corrected by people who draw aside and say, "I'm just about fed up with organized religion."

How often we have been reminded, of late, that the church is the last, best, hope of mankind and of the world. If it is not fulfilling its mission, then let us criticize it, and correct it, and reform it, as need may be. But abandon it! Never! To the extent that we cherish the triumph of righteousness, truth and love, we will rather identify ourselves with it; we will "rise up and make her great."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

and goodness and redemptive love of God. When a man really understands the Cross, he pours contempt on all his pride.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Listed in our contributions this week are some very interesting items. For instance there is one thousand dollars from the estate of a George W. Hill. He contributed to the orphanage each year for the past several and remembered the work we are doing in his Last Will and Testament. This bequest will be invested in capital permanent improvements and will thus work for him right on across the years.

There is a donation from the Mayflower Congregational Church, Minneapolis, Minn. It would be good if other Congregational Churches beyond the borders of the Southern Convention followed this good example and helped with this work being done by Congregational Christian churches and friends of the homeless children. A few dollars from several friends across the country who know something of our care for more than eighty children would get us out of the difficulty which the drought of last summer brought on us.

There is a fifty dollar donation for the Burlington De Molay, a boys' club organized under the auspices of the Masonic order. I wish you could have seen the young high school boys who stopped by and proudly presented the check. The boys in this club wished to show their gratitude for their own parents and to help some needy boys have a good chance in life.

There is also a check in the amount of Twenty-five dollars from a young lady in honor of her living parents. I know both the young lady and the parents and it is worthily done all the way around. It is truly something to have good parents, and something indeed when our lives reflect honor upon them.

And how about that young man who is taking care of his widowed mother, also clothing a boy in the orphanage, and who saw a sign "hay for sale" and stopped and bought thirty bales for the orphanage. He is a poor boy, working hard for his money and gives a tithe to the Lord. Correction—he is a rich young man in "good works." Sort of reminds me of 2 Thess. 2:16,17, "Now our Lord Jesus Christ, himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts and establish you in every good word and work" . . . yes, in every good word and work! It seems anyone who is making his life count in every good word and work may have peace in his heart and stability to his hands. Let us all try to have it like that.

Yes, it is an interesting report this week: Clothing and coupons, a bequest of a thousand dollars and drinking glasses from which children will drink rich, whole, milk; offerings from a boys' club and Sunday schools and churches; a donation from a church across the country sent through the Home Mission Board in New York City.

Easter is a happy time with children, fresh new clothes, pretty new shoes, songs, flowers, friends and family. I know already that these children will not be left forgotten.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR FEBRUARY 25, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. R. F. Warren, Prospect Hill, N. C., Clothing.
John Craddock, Gibsonville, N. C., Hay.
Spoon's Chapel Christian Church, Glasses.
First Congregational Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 2,231.12
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Bethel $ 19.06
19.06
Eastern Va. Conference:
Christian Temple $ 20.00
Beulah (Nansemond),
Thanksgiving 137.35
157.35

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Bethel S. S. $ 5.86
Burlington, First 5.00
Howard's Chapel 2.00
Union (Va.), S. S. 5.00
17.86

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethel S. S. $ 2.00
Wood's Chapel S. S. 5.00
7.00

Total $ 201.27

Grand Total $ 2,432.39

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 4,401.51
Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Sr.,
Burlington, N. C. $ 5.00
Mayflower Cong. Church,
Minneapolis, Minn. 40.00
Estate of George W. Hill 1,000.00
De Molay, Burlington, N.
C. 50.00
A Friend, for the boiler . 1.00
In Honor of living parents 25.00
Special gifts 20.00
$ 1,141.00

Grand Total $ 5,542.51

Total for the week $ 1,342.27

Total for the year $ 7,974.90

Churches in the N. C. and Va. Conference take Note

If anyone in the churches in the N. C. and Va. Conference desires to attend the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches meeting in New Haven, Conn., June 23-30, 1954, they should notify the secretary of the conference within the next few weeks. Ministers and lay people are to be enrolled as delegates and alternates. Please send name and address and church you are a member of to W. J. Andes, 637 S. Sunset Dr., Winston-Salem, N. C.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name

Address

"The Fruit of a Dedicated Life"

By REV. H. H. SMITH,
Ashland, Virginia.

When Matthew Arnold said that John Wesley had a "genius for godliness," he meant, perhaps, that the most remarkable thing about the founder of Methodism was his passion for righteousness, his consuming desire to do the will of God.

When Wesley was 23 years of age he said: "I resolved to dedicate all my life to God, all my thoughts and words and actions—being thoroughly convinced there was no medium; but that every part of my life (not some only) must either be a sacrifice to God, or myself—that is, in effect, to the devil."

Again, how impressive Wesley's prayer of consecration: "Lo, I come, if this soul and body may be useful to anything, to do thy will, O God. If it please thee to use the power thou hast over dust and ashes, here they are to suffer thy good pleasure. If thou pleasest to visit, either with pain or dishonor, I will humble myself under it, and through thy grace be obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Hereafter no man can take anything from me, no life, no honor, no estate; since I am ready to lay them down as soon as I perceive thou requirest them of my hands."

What was the fruit of this dedicated life? The same as that mentioned by the Apostle as "the fruit of the Spirit," for the dedicated life means that the Holy Spirit controls the life: "Love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness self-control." (Gal. 5:22,23. R. S. V.) Let us not ratttle off this list in a meaningless manner—there is power in every one of those words. Psychiatrists, theologians and pastors are telling us today, in periodicals, books and sermons, that we should look within the heart for psysical as well as spiritual health; that fear, worry, anxiety, sense of guilt, may be more weakening to the body than hard work. This has been a new discovery to some today, but John Wesley's life shows that he had made this discovery 200 years ago; and no doubt it contributed much to the health and longevity of the great revivalist.

The radiant life of a devout Christian so impressed a worldly-minded man that he blurted out, "Look here, you've got something I haven't, and I want to know what it is." John Wesley must have impressed many who met him in the same way. Alexander Knox, who knew Wesley well, bore this testimony of him: "His countenance as well as his conversation expressed an habitual gaiety of heart, which nothing but conscious innocence and virtue could have bestowed. He was, in truth, the most perfect specimen of moral happiness I ever saw, and my acquaintance with him has done more to teach me what a heaven upon earth is implied in the maturity of Christian piety than all elsewhere seen or heard or read, except in the sacred volume."

Good cheer and good health go hand in hand: "A cheerful heart is a good medicine, but a downcast spirit dries up the bones." (Proverbs 17:22. R. S. V.)

Another fruit of Wesley's dedicated life was serenity and self-control. And don't say that he had no trials. He was burdened with the care of the churches, criticized, abused, misrepresented, mobbed, dogged by personal enemies and ecclesiastical enemies, beset with the most trying domestic troubles, and yet through it all he maintained a spirit of serenity and self-control that is most admirable. We hear him say: "I feel and grieve; but by the grace of God, I fret at nothing. I dare no more fret than curse or swear."

Where shall we look for the fruit of Wesley's dedicated life? We see the fruit of this dedication in what he was, in what he did for others, and in what he inspired others to do for their fellowmen. We see it in the way he used his money to bless the world, and in his teaching others the right use of money. We see it in his "sowing by all waters," as when he was "held up" by a bandit, and after delivering up his money turned to the man and said: "Let me speak a word with you. The time may come when you will regret the course of life in which you are now engaged. Remember this, 'The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin.'" No more was said, and the two men parted, but many years later the man introduced himself to Wesley and told him that he was that highwayman and he had never forgotten those words that were spoken in that hold-up, and that he was now living a Christian life. We see it in his "redeeming the time," rising at four o'clock every morning and busy with his Master's work until ten o'clock at night. We see it in his broadmindedness and big-heartedness, as when he says: "Brother, is thy heart with mine as my heart is with thine? If it be, give me thy hand." In short, we see the fruit of Wesley's dedicated life in the way he lived and in the way he died. When nearing the end of life he said, "Death has shaken me by the hand." But he lived and worked until the final call came, and then went home rejoicing, "The best of all, God is with us."

A dedicated life! A victorious life! A triumphant death!

A Fellowship Meeting

Twenty-eight ministers of the Eastern and Western Virginia Conferences (Convention of the South) and the the Eastern Virginia Conference (Southern Convention) met at the Wesley Grove Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Virginia on Monday, February 22. This is now the fourth year in which these groups have met together for this interracial fellowship.

The devotions were led by the Rev. Romie Skeeter, pastor of the Windsor Grove Congregational Christian Church. Reverend Z. P. Jenkins, pastor of the Union Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, spoke on "A Militant Church for Such a Time as This," a thoughtful and stimulating address. His address underscored the depersonalization of man which has been taking place in our society, and emphasized the faith and gospel which a militant church has to counteract this situation: a personal faith in God and the evidence that we take seriously the teachings of Jesus.

A period of discussion and general participation by the ministers followed in which there was a sharing of common problems and ideas as to how the gospel we proclaim can become vital and saving in a segregated society.

A delicious chicken dinner, served by the host church, was enjoyed by all the ministers.

Over the past four years as the groups have met together, they have discovered a deepening of fellowship and a larger understanding and a growing desire to work together to face the ills and problems of our time. By vote of those present, the groups have decided to meet together quarterly. Greetings and an expression of hope and prayer for his recovery were sent to the Rev. B. C. Harrod, pastor of Calvary Congregational Christian Church of Newport News.

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR.

Eating the "Old Corn"

By REV. RICHARD K. MORTON

Pastor, First Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida

The Children of Israel, who had walked forty years in the wilderness and whom the Lord had scourged with the reproach of Egypt and because of their many transgressions, encamped, according to Joshua 5: 10, in Gilgal. There the passover was kept.

"And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, unleavened cakes, and parched corn on the selfsame day. And the manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year." (Verses 11 and 12.)

This "old corn" means simply, according to the commentaries, Moffatt, and other translators, "the produce of the land." It would seem to indicate that God provided these sinful yet forgiven and enterprising people, who had journeyed so long and so far, manna while it was needed because they could get no food of their own. They could not grow it on their way nor find it in quantity as they passed through. Thus the need for heavenly manna. Now, however, they would eat of the produce of the land, the fresh-grown produce, the crops of that very year. Now, as it were, they would begin to be "own their own."

Such a scripture passage occasionally jumps out at even the casual reader, and brings its message of insight and power. How true it is that, in many ways, we like to make our religion largely a producer of magic and miracles, a provider of unearned manna as a gift from heaven, rather than as a guide to our own efforts! We would like to keep on eating manna from heaven—it is a lot easier than working and worrying and striving and trying to produce our own. It is comforting to be the regular recipient of a dole or unemployment compensation! How much we like "the old corn." To provide the new produce is a long and uncertain and worrisome process!

There is many a way in which we must begin to partake of the "produce of the land," this year's crop, as it were, in which we have a share in the labors of production. When we begin to have a native or indigenous faith, when we begin to establish ourselves in the land which the Lord our God gave us, a land which is indeed "a land which the Lord our God careth for," we have started on a process of developing a real religious life. If we are dependent nomads, if we are irresponsible wanderers, we cannot know the real power of faith.

Our job, in many a field, is to stop being dependent upon the manna and to develop a rooted and established faith and set of institutions which will provide the ministry needed in these times. When we set ourselves a task and start cultivating fields of our own and begin to eat the fruits of our own harvest, then we know well the goodness and the love of God, and we come to a fresh understanding of the possibilities in us.

Many are the churches, the communities, and even the clergy who still look for the manna, and who have not yet bestirred themselves to grow and to provide from "the produce of the land" of this current year. We cannot expect, and it would not be good for us to have more manna from heaven, when we can grow our own spiritual crop. Religion depends not so much upon what has been stored up in the barns of the years as upon what is in the harvest of this very year!

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1954

NUMBER 10

Elon College Library X

The Missionary's Plea

*Will you not pray for us? Each day we need
Your prayers, for oft the way is rough and long,
And our lips falter and forget their song,
As we proclaim the Word men will not heed!*

*Pray for us! We are but vessels frail;
The world's appalling need would crush us down
Save that in wisdom we behold the crown
Upon his brow, who shall at length prevail.*

*Not yet the crowning! Fields must first be won,
Lives freely yielded, martyr blood be spilt,
Love cast out fear, redemption blot out guilt,
Ere we behold the Kingdom of God's Son.*

*Our King shall triumph in the world set free,
We shall behold it! Lo, his Word stands sure,
With joy his chosen ones his reign shall see!
Pray for us, that we may endure.*

—Author unknown.

News Flashes

Dr. Wm. T. Scott was the guest speaker at the First Congregational Church, Asheville, North Carolina, on last Sunday.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger was painfully injured in an automobile accident last Friday evening. He was in the hospital until Saturday night, but attended the church services on Sunday. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Rev Carl Key reports more than $200,000.00 in commodities and cash raised in North Carolina for the unified overseas relief program during the past year. He adds, the State committee "expresses its gratitude to all who shared."

Mr. Ollie V. Cockes of Elberon, Va., died the past week at the ripe age of 85. For many, many years his name has been a familiar one in the annals of the Eastern Virginia Conference, where he has served as secretary of the New Lebanon Church, as well as secretary of the Sunday school. He will be greatly missed by his many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Kelley, of No. 7 Greenway Lane, Richmond, Virginia, celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Sunday of last week. Both are charter members of First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond, and Mr. Kelley was the first superintendent of the Richmond church school. They have been subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for more than thirty years. Our congratulations and very best wishes are theirs.

Eutaw Community Church Anniversary Dinner

On Friday night, March 5, 1954, the members and friends of the Eutaw Community Church of Fayetteville, N. C., celebrated the third anniversary of the church. Some ninety persons gathered around a beautiful decorated banquet table and sang the Doxology after which the invocation was given by Dr. L. E. Smith of Elon College.

The dinner was deliciously prepared and graciously served by the Women's Fellowship of the church.

After the main portion of the meal had been eaten and the tables cleared, the anniversary cake was removed from the speakers table to an advantageous location in the center of the room. After the lighting of three candles the charter members of the church gathered around the cake and being led by Mrs. Florence Rogers, the eldest person of the charter members, each cut a slice of cake. A loud ovation and "Happy Birthday Charter Members" was spontaneously given by the group. The dessert served, the pastor, Rev. Carl Wallace, recognized the visitors, the various board members of the church, and all new church members who had been received during the past year.

The program proper consisted of "A Review of the Early History of the Church," by Mrs. Florence Rogers; "The Construction Period," by Dr. F. C. Lester, a former pastor; and a very inspirational address by Dr. L. E. Smith on the subject, "Words to a New Church."

The benediction by Dr. F. C. Lester was followed by an informal fellowship hour. A new church received a new look.

REPORTER.

To Discuss Christian Ethics and Farm Policy

A series of local church discussions on Christian ethics and farm policy is being developed by the Department of the Church and Economic Life of the National Council of the Churches of Christ. Designed to meet requests of local churches, and of councils of churches and church women, the new education program will be under the direction of Philip W. Van Vlack, a layman who has had experience both as a farm manager and an agricultural expert.

Mr. Van Vlack will help the local church groups plan forums, workshops or study conferences on ethical issues in agriculture and will serve as resource or discussion leader for such meetings.

Among the problems that may be examined by the local groups are such questions as the ethical issues involved in parity and price supports and in employing migratory farm labor, and the general ethical problems in building farm policy fair both to farmers and other groups.

"We hope to give frank recognition both to economic facts and to the ethical realities of the Christian faith," Mr. Van Vlack said, "and to consider 'what should be' alongside 'what is'."

The project is undertaken as a part of the continuing cooperative program of the National Council's Department of the Town and Country Church; and the results will eventually be incorporated in the published materials on the churches and agricultural policy.

"The Conquest of Mount Everest"

PICTURE OF THE MONTH.

This official pictorial chronicle of the 1953 British expedition to the 29,000-foot summit of Mount Everest—highest mountain in the world—is a documentary of surpassing excellence. By a careful selection of the most significant sequences, the film's editors have achieved a breathlessly exciting story as well as a highly informative account of a stupendous physical feat.

While this is the first successful effort—out of eleven failures in the past thirty years—to reach "the top of the world," the expedition has generously attributed much of its success to the data compiled by the earlier attempts. In this latest effort the conquest was carried out under a "master plan of attack." Nothing was left to chance. For months the equipment was tested, rejected, improved, retested. Members of the expedition were put through harrowing trials which simulated the numbing cold, 100-mile winds, and deoxygenized air they would encounter. Food and supplies—transportable only on the backs of men—were measured to a fraction of an ounce. Every foreseeable problem was diligently prepared for. Yet always there was the fear that the quiet unexpected might lash out with sudden death.

All previous attempts at Everest have been through the northern reaches, by way of Tibet. On this occasion—what with Nepal being opened for the first time to foreigners—the approach to "The Mother of the World" was made from the south. The epochal conquest was made possible only through the greatest teamwork between the British explorers and their native porters. And it was a Sherpa guide, Bhotia Tensing Norkey, who struggled shoulder to shoulder with a New Zealand beekeeper, Edmund P. Hillary, to reach the highest point on which man ever stood. Master strategist and leader of the expedition was Brigadier Sir

(Continued on page 11.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Groundbreaking at Moonelon

Groundbreaking services will be held at Moonelon, Southern Convention Conference Center, near Elon College, Sunday, March 14, at 3:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

* * * * *

Executive Committee to Meet Walter Graham

Walter Graham, executive director of the National Laymen's Fellowship, will meet with the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention, in Burlington on Saturday and Sunday, March 13 and 14. This session will be in the form of a retreat when it will be possible for the members of the committee to discuss plans and share ideas concerning the work of the fellowship.

* * * * *

Laymen Organize at Palm Street

The laymen of the Palm Street Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro, North Carolina, met on Saturday, February 27, at 6:30, for a dinner meeting in the basement of the church. A delicious dinner of barbecue and the "trimmings" was served by some of the ladies of the church. Rev. Maek Weleh, pastor of the church, served as chairman for the meeting, which was opened with prayer by Garland Bennett, a member of the church and a ministerial student at Elon College.

After the dinner a unique experiment in parliamentary procedure was conducted. Each man was given a plain, white card and asked to write the name of his choice for president of the fellowship; this assured President Beaver that he was actually the "people's choice." Following this election a similar procedure was used in selecting First Vice-President Garland Bennett, Second Vice-President Max Fulp, Secretary Reece Craven and Treasured Hopkins.

After the election of the officers they were installed in an informal service conducted by J. Earl Danieley, Dean of Elon College and Vice-President of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention. In his remarks Mr. Danieley charged the officers with great responsibility and challenged the men present to follow the leadership of the officers in making the fellowship an active force for the improvement of the church and the community.

In an address to the men present later in the program, Danieley, called DEAFENED.

The soft wings of silence enfold me.
As I enter into the shadowy stillness,
Where voice of friend is no longer heard,
Nor prattle of children, nor song of bird,
I sense my loss.
A feeling of aloneness steals o'er me;
Yet will I not despair;
Rather, from out the shadows
I will pluck precious memories,
And from its substance
Will weave bright fancies
Which, spirit clothed, becomes companions
Whose influence brings me joy.
In quiet contemplation,
I may attune my mind to things divine,
Whence comes a peace
That has no touch of mourning.

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

ed on the men to have an active fellowship; to enjoy themselves but made a special plea that the group always have as a central idea the fact that it is an auxiliary of the church and in its program practice it should preserve that uniqueness. It should never become, he said, just another club which men may join; it should be a vital force in this community. Approximately 35 men attended the meeting.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein,
Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens,
Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton,
Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun

() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Preserve What is Committed to You

"This generation has no pockets!"

The commentator was not a tailor or fashion expert. He was not even a banker. He was just an ordinary citizen commenting on what seemed to him a failure, on the part of so many, to keep what was entrusted to them.

There does seem to be some aptness to this comment. We are so busy knowing and utilizing and developing what we find in the present, that we spend relatively little time looking into pockets or putting anything into pockets.

Many quite busy and resourceful people have so much to occupy themselves with, from what the present affords, that not in a long while have they looked into any of the vaults, storehouses or pockets of the past. Nor have they thought much of what might be put in pockets to preserve for the future.

As the Bible opens, we find this primeval drama: "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it." (Genesis 2:15.)

In the Deuteronic law, so significant in the history of Israel, there is this more personal injunction: "Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them to thy sons, and thy sons' sons." (Deuteronomy 4:9.)

Much has been committed to this age, in terms of the spiritual and the intellectual and the social. We have much to work with. We have much to preserve and to develop. We shall be derelict indeed if we do not guard, protect and use the vast treasures committed into our care—particularly to bring man closer to God, remove the evils the centuries developed, and to construct a better life and a better society.

In ii Timothy 1:14, there is this further word: "That good thing which was committed unto thee, keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us."

This needs to be remembered in this our day. There is much that should be preserved against the ignorance of selfishness, the darkness of evil, the narrowness of prejudice, the causistries of the unprincipled.

We have let go of much that should have been cherished and magnified. We have been poor stewards of many things.

We need to keep our moral insight, lest the things we can turn on for power and can produce for wealth empty us of inner values. We need keep our appreciation of human values, lest what we have as individuals blind us to what we lack as a group.

Religion involves a sense of history and continuity as much as it does a sense of the living presence of the Holy Spirit. God moves today—and has moved in every age—among men. There is a chain which links us to every age and makes us kin to all the sons of men.

Let the pockets of our remembrance not be emptied by ingratitude or a dim-eyed bumptiousness. Let the pockets of our knowledge be filled with understanding of what others have added to the store of moral wisdom. Let the pockets of our present joy and comfort be brimming with gratitude for the services of all who labored and suffered that later generations might have the life everlasting and the life more abundant.

In preserving what has been committed unto us we likewise create a new human value that in turn should be preserved by those who shall carry the light when the earthly house of our tabernacle shall be gathered in the dust.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

What Makes Life Worth Living

Some years ago a businessman was in conversation with the late noted minister, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson. In the course of their conversation, the business man raised the question, "What is the most essential thing in making life worth living?" Mr. Jefferson is quoted as saying: "I have looked the whole planet over and I see no man but Jesus who is able to take away the sin of the world. I have sat at the feet of the world's crowned religious leaders, and I have seen all the great religions in their homes, and I know that it is Christ or nobody. He has no competitor in the field. No one else has the slightest chance of winning the homage of the entire human race. More and more he is to me what he was to Saul of Tarsus—'the image of the invisible God.' More and more he is to me what he was to John the Beloved—'God made manifest in the flesh.' More and more he is to me what he himself claimed to be, the eternal Son of the living God. To know him is indeed life eternal. To work with him in establishing on this earth the kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy, this is what makes my life more and more worth living."

The Secret of Power for Any Church

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D.D.
Pastor of First Church, Richmond, Virginia

The Early church had power because it continued steadfastly in the Apostles' teachings and in fellowship and prayer. And the church has survived the centuries because in each period of time there were those within its fold who were zealous in making known the teachings of Jesus and of the Apostles in observing Holy Communion and in promoting Christian fellowship and Christian prayer.

Efficient organization has been essential to the church down through the centuries, but it has taken much more than organization to enable the church to withstand the storms and stress of the years. Devoted loyalty to the teachings of faith, repentance, stewardship and commitment—the fellowship of sincere loyalty to God, and the power of prayer are the factors that have kept the church alive and alert through the centuries. And those factors are essential for any church in any day in order for it to have power in Christian service.

No local church can go forward in Kingdom Service without faith in Christ and loyalty to the truth of the Scriptures and believing prayer any more than an automobile can go ahead without gasoline. Any church that is faithful in proclaiming the whole Gospel message, faithful in promoting the principles and practice of Christian fellowship and prayer; any church thus faithful is bound to exert power and influence in the life of its day and generation. The responsibility of every church is to bring people into touch with God, to help people to know God, "whom to know aright is life eternal."

The church is the preparatory school for life upon this mundane sphere, and for life beyond the grave. Its message is the message of salvation, the message of personal and social redemption through Jesus Christ, the world's Savior and Lord. Every church is dedicated to the proposition of promoting right relations between man and his fellowmen, and right relations between man and God. The mission of the church is to save the world for God—not merely to save certain fragments of the world, but to save the whole world for God. No part of the world can be truly saved so long as any part of it is lost from the impress of God's love and power.

The task of every local church is far more than merely getting people to subscribe to some particular creed or to accept some cherished theological position—it is to influence people to commit their lives and their resources to the service of God to whom Jesus committed his life, his love and his all. Correct ideas about God are important to be sure, but sincere love for God and a passionate desire to obey and serve him are infinitely more important. Hence the church lays no claim to having the last and final word about God. But it is definitely convinced that God is like Christ who was the highest revelation to mankind of what God is like and of what God wishes man to be like.

The privilege of being a member of any local church carries with it the fact of belonging to the Church Universal. This is the greatest privilege any person can ever have, for the privilege of enjoying the fellowship of the church of the living, loving God carries with it the privilege of living in fellowship with God himself.

In order for any church to be effective in the service of its Lord, its members must be assets instead of liabilities. The more regularly the members of a church are in attendance at its services, the more effective will their church be in its influence on a community.

People who are but Christmas and Easter church members, people who only attend the services of their church on special occasions are as inconsistent as the person who is content with his annual or semi-annual bath. For any church to have power in effective service, it must have members who are faithful in attendance, members who support the church consistently with their means, members who live exemplary lives. Furthermore, in order for a church to have power in effective service to its day and generation, it must continue steadfastly in the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles as recorded in the New Testament. The Apostles were the nearest in line with Jesus, for they had first-hand contact with him in his ministry among men. The four Gospels and the Epistles should constitute the basic teachings of every church.

Though there is no such thing as Apostolic Succession of priest-hood, of which some churches foolishly boast, the privilege of being in "the Apostolic Succession of Believers" is open to every member and is enjoyed by every person who sincerely believes in Christ's Gospel of love and of peace. But "there is not a minister in the whole world, from the Bishop of Rome up or down, who can prove that he stands in the line of Apostolic Succession as a minister of divine truth."

The church of today is connected with the church of the Apostolic age not by any succession of priesthood, but by the fact that it continues faithful in the Apostles' teachings and fellowship. What the Apostles taught is of fundamental importance because it is in their teachings that we find the portrait of Jesus—and not in their interpretations of Christ's life and teachings or in their experiences in his fellowship, but in their portrayal of his character, his life, his work and his accomplishments.

Some of the Apostles were described as being ignorant men—unlearned in the schools of their time—but people "took knowledge of them that had been with Jesus," and that their lives had been transformed by their fellowship with him. Their manner of life, their ideals in life witnessed for their Lord more eloquently and more forcefully than could any argument based upon scholarship. They reminded people of Jesus by their daily conduct, by their conversations, by their associations, by their zeal in service to others, by their love and their good-will, by their loyalty to the highest, by the cause they supported, and by their devotion to God and the church.

That is what the unbelieving world is waiting to see evidences of in the lives of those who profess to believe in the Christ of God today.

The greatest secret of power for any church in any period of time and in any community is a quality of life on the part of church members that witnesses convincingly of the power of the Gospel to change both lives and situations. Genuine Christ-like living on the part of church members alone gives meaning to the teachings of the church. And only

(Continued on page 9.)

"A Time of Testing"

By REV. JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

A time of testing will come to our Southland if the Supreme Court of the United States should rule that segregation in the public schools is unconstitutional. That ruling, should it come, will be a bitter blow to many of our southern citizens. Some have suggested the ruling would mean violence—that the bitterness would become explosive. The danger of violence means a testing. But is it too much to hope that the vast majority of the white citizens of our Southern States are law-abiding and have a profound respect for the constitution? Is it too much to hope that the civic groups that have had so much to do with the economic, educational and social progress of the past years will come forward with a steadying influence? Is it too much to hope that our churches will bring a Christian witness to bear in the situation? I think not. I do believe that the decision if it comes, will be accepted quietly and in good faith.

But it will be a time of testing. Some will say we should depart from the public school system. Change the present system into a private system. Perhaps one or two states will actually do this. But it does not commend itself as a wise course. Its constitutionality is questionable. Many families would be unable to bear the economic burden that would result. But more than that, think of what it would mean when public education no longer was offered and required. Think what it would mean in Nansemond County. Would we destroy our public school system over the question of segregation? I think not. It would be a case of "the operation was a success but the patient died." No, we will not destroy the public school system. It is too valuable.

What then can we hope for? Time! Time to make the necessary changes with a minimum of hardship and shock to all concerned. Perhaps the Supreme Court will grant a period for orderly compliance through its decision. Questions raised by it several months ago indicated the possibility was being considered. Perhaps the decision of the Court will be effective immediately for the school system before the court. But the rest of us will have time because we are not before the court. The point is, we must make use of the time. If we ignore the decision the day will come when we will be in court and the ruling may not allow time.

Probably each of us wonders what will take place when the schools open in the fall if the ruling against segregation should come this spring. Conversations with Negro leaders on this question reveal they believe that Negro students will go to the Negro schools and white students to the white schools. There might be exceptions. The exceptions would be few.

The problem will be more acute in some areas than in others. Our own situation here in Nansemond County is a good example. There are more Negro students than white students. Because we are in a rural area there is a Negro home here and a white home there. The school district lines cannot be drawn on a racial basis as is possible in many cities. It isn't going to be easy for Negro or white in our situation.

What should we do? I would like to suggest a plan—not a plan in detail, but in outline. First, that if the ruling against segregation comes this spring the School Board announce that next year the schools will be operated just as they have been this year, which is on a segregated basis. Second, that the School Board request leaders of the Negro community to meet together and with their people to discuss the ways in which segregation should be ended in the schools and to form a committee that then would meet with the School Board. In like manner a committee representative of the white community could be formed to perform the same function. Out of the exchange of ideas and recommendations it should be possible for the School Board to develop a workable policy.

You ask what we should do if next fall Negro students appear at a white school. I would say, "Enroll them." Of course all of this is contingent upon the possibility the Supreme Court will rule that segregation is unconstitutional. If it does so, then the legal right of the Negro to be admitted to the school in his district would be established. Let us not borrow trouble.

I am convinced that if Negro and white enter the time of testing with the intention to be understanding, patient and constructive we will make intelligent and peaceful achievements and lay solid foundations for the future.

This is and will continue to be a time of testing with reference to the representation of the Negro in elective and appointive office. In the total picture the Negro is in a minority. There is no state in which the Negro population is greater than the white. But the Negro is not represented in elective and appointive bodies as he ought to be. The white is the ruler. It remains to be seen how long he can hold the reins so tightly simply because he is white. What is needed is not that the Negro group be represented by a Negro, but representation be on the basis of ability and interest without regard for race. However, if the white population continues to make it a race issue, then the Negro will have to settle for that also whether he wants to or not.

In many local situations the Negroes are in the majority. We, you and I, live in such a situation. Negroes constitute almost 70 per cent of the total population of Nansemond County. The Negro population is increasing more rapidly than the white. We are a minority. At the present time we are a ruling minority. We want it that way. We plan it that way. But it can't be continued that way. I don't think that it is right. But whether we think it is right or wrong, it can't continue. It can't continue because of the march of vital statistics. Those numbers will become votes. And the votes won't be for us if we continue to do as we please without due regard for the Negro.

Sometimes we feel that because the Negroes at the present time don't vote for their own kind at every opportunity, because they discover that one member on the board won't have the influence of the white man who takes his place, that we can maintain the status quo. But we can't. There leadership is waiting. All over the South it is the same, with some exceptions where the move already has been made. The day will come. For their benefit and for our own benefit we would be much wiser to work closely with the leaders of the Negroes and to give them greater opportunities for service in govern-

(Continued on page 11.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Widening Influence of Elon College

Elon College, like the average institution of higher learning, had small beginnings. Equipment was inadequate, the faculty was small, necessarily, resulting from small endowment. The curriculum contained only the basic subjects for the Bachelor of Arts degree offered by a liberal arts college.

From those early beginnings, Elon College has expanded and grown in every particular. Beginning with two buildings and a twenty-five acre campus, Elon College now has ten buildings on the campus and four buildings off the campus used for students, sixty-six family units for married students, twelve individual faculty houses, one duplex house, and four-family apartments. In addition to the twenty-five acres of land in the campus, the college owns farm lands totalling 288 acres. We have a student body at present of 706, with the total enrollment of college students for the nine months' period, not including adult education students, exceeding 775. Summer school and adult education enrollment will swell the total considerably beyond the 1,000 mark.

The faculty has increased in number and efficiency in keeping with the growth of the student body. The net assets of the college, including grounds, buildings, equipment, endowment, and invested funds, have increased from $231,000 to $2,800,000. The income from endowment, and invested funds has increased from $4,750 in 1931 to more than $50,000 annually in 1952-53.

All of the above add up to a greatly extended influence of our institution in educational circles. Elon College is rated as one of the great colleges of the South. Our church, alumni, and friends are proud of the same. Our people are glad to patronize the college and to give their cooperation in the hope of further increasing the effectiveness of the college. Fortunate indeed are the young people who have the privilege of enrolling in Elon College and receiving their training in its classrooms, halls, and on its campus.

As further evidence of its growth and development, our Field Secretary, Mr. Roger Gibbs, reports that an additional forty students will be enrolled for the spring quarter, which the college is now entering. Soon Elon College will add to its equipment new dormitories and a new dining room. When these proposed buildings are completed, Elon College will be among the best equipped small colleges in this country. We shall all work to this greatly desired end, and, with joy, watch the advancing strides of our college.

* * * * *

Elon College and the Divinity School

In the fall of 1949, Dr. L. E. Smith looked at me across his tremendous desk at Elon. "Elon college is here to help you prepare for the ministry," he said. Then he suggested that after college I should go to seminary. It didn't mean too much right then, for I was just preparing to enter college. I knew little about that and even less about seminary. But since then I have observed that most of our ministers today attend seminary upon completion of their college work. Dr. Smith said that day that he was one of the first Elon men to enter seminary. Some thought it was a young man's crazy idea at the time.

But times have changed. The ministerial students of Elon's Class of '53 are attending at least four of our nation's leading seminaries—Hartford, Princeton, Oberlin, and Duke. Elon College still has a share in our seminary work, because the influence of Elon—or any good college, for that matter—does not end at graduation time. Divinity School is an extension of our work begun at Elon—a specific concentration built on the background of our college work.

Why build any more? Can't Elon teach a minister everything he needs to know? Can't Elon satisfy the young men so that they won't feel any need for further education? The answer is, thank God, that Elon doesn't attempt to do this. A man in any profession who feels that he knows it all is by this very feeling admitting his ignorance. This is especially true of the minister. Laymen do not want a minister who is continually urging them to study and to re-think their religious life, but who is unwilling to do this himself. Paul didn't want Timothy to become such a minister. He wrote him: "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (II Timothy 2:15.)

What relation does Elon hold to the Divinity School? It holds the same relation that your high school holds to college—but it holds it with Christian concern, which makes a world of difference. Furthermore, Elon is your college, and the interest it shows its students while they are in residence and after graduation is a reflection of your interest. Elon seeks to prepare many good laymen for the churches in this area. Elon, in cooperation with the Divinity School, helps to prepare ministers who will be at least as well equipped in their profession as the laymen will be in theirs.

This does not mean to say that Elon College or the Divinity School gives the minister religion. They can but take the young person and help him to grow in the faith he possesses. This is not a weakness of our school. This is a healthy indication—an indication that the teachers and students work together. This is a cooperative venture. Elon College, the Divinity School, you, and I may, by working under the grace of God, help to provide our churches with better servants.

* * *

Note: The above article by Reverend Max Vestal, a graduate of Elon College and now a student at Duke Divinity School, should have appeared in the College Issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Through my oversight, it does not appear until this issue. I wish to apologize to Mr. Vestal.

L. E. SMITH.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Elon College is encouraged week by week by the assurance that the church is endeavoring to give support to its college. There are those who feel that the college does not receive its rightful share in funds of the church and that perhaps the church has not given its college consideration in proportion to the college's service to the church. However, this interest will grow and support will increase as the

(Continued on page 10.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Valley of Virginia Rallies

The Rallies for the Valley of Virginia will be held as follows, according to information received from the president, Mrs. Cecil Whitlock:

Districts 2 and 3—March 26, 7:30 p. m.—Newport

Superintendents—Mrs. Carrol Monger and Mrs. Kermit Kibler.

District 4—March 28, 2:30 p. m.—Wood's Chapel.

Superintendent—Mrs. John L. Kagey.

District 1—March 28, 7:30 p. m.—New Hope.

Superintendent—Miss Jean Fahnstock.

District 5—March 29, 7:30 p. m.—Timber Ridge.

Superintendent—Mrs. Edgar Nelson.

Fine plans were completed for these rallies at the recent executive board meeting and it is hoped that every church in the Valley Conference will be represented at the rally for its district.

* * * * *

New Society at Ether

"Women of the Ether Christian Church met on February 18 to organize a woman's Missionary Society. Mrs. Bill Simmons and Mrs. Winfred Bray, superintendent and assistant superintendent of the Asheboro District, met with us and gave us instructions on organizing as well as a good program to start us off. They also brought us two nice visitors, Mrs. Eloise Bray and Mrs. Alma Reece.

Those present from Ether who were pledged members were: Mrs. Elbert Mabe, Mrs. W. H. Freeman, Mrs. Perry Freeman, Mrs. W. C. Floyd, Mrs. Joe Helsabeck, Mrs. Eli Freeman, Mrs. Jack Allen, Mrs. R. John Dennis, and the pastor's wife, Mrs. Rosser Clapp.

Officers elect were: Mrs. Elbert Mabe, president; Mrs. Perry Freeman, vice-president; Mrs. Jack Allen, secretary treasurer. Committees are to be appointed at the next meeting.

The above minutes of the organizational meeting at Ether were sent in by Mrs. Simmons. All the women of our Southern Convention will join in welcoming this new society into our fellowship, and will follow its progress with interest.

* * * * *

An Orchid to Mrs. Abraham

At the February meeting of the Woman's Society of the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines, a Life Membership certificate was presented to Mrs. Grace Abraham by Dr. McCall, who said that this tribute was an outward and visible symbol of the inward and spiritual grace which is in her and shines through in her poetry, and in her long life of love and service. This information comes to us from Mrs. J. I. Neal of the Southern Pines church.

The following comes from the pen of Mrs. W. T. Scott, who visited in the home of Mrs. H. H. Pethick, the daughter of Mrs. Abraham, and was greatly impressed by the gracious lady of ninety-five years:

"Picture her, if you will, seated by a good reading lamp, with the daily paper, many books and magazines at her finger tips. The Church Woman is a favorite on her reading list. She wears a navy blue dress with a bit of velvet and lace on the sleeves, and a woolen pink shawl is thrown around her shoulders, fastened at her neck by a rosette of pink roses. I was told that flowers play a real part in her daily make-up and that she is never caught without her bouquet. Her hair, a little grey, is cut short and waves fall softly about her ever-cheerful face.

"It is difficult for her to walk, because of a fall which she had years ago, but with the aid of her crutches she insists on getting about the house 'on her own.' I tell you, it was hard to believe that she is ninety-five years young. She is quite active in many ways. First of all comes her church. While she does not now attend services, she is still a vital part of its program, its interest and its influence. Years ago she organized a Men's Bible Class, because she hated to see the young men hanging on the street corners, doing nothing. The men bargained with her, and as a result she became their teacher and served in that capacity for many years.

"Today, one of the loveliest and most inspirational spots in the beautiful new church is a room, more accurately a shrine, which has been dedicated to 'Mother Abraham.' The room, completely walled on two sides by glass, is filled with a great variety of living, growing, green plants. On the brick wall is a bronze plaque in honor of 'Mother Abraham.' It will always offer a challenge to others for Christ-like living.

"Much of her fine philosophy of life is recorded in her beautiful poems. She recited some of them to me from memory. I shall never forget the rhythm and music of her voice. How I wished for a recording! Each poem grew out of some real experience in her own life. For instance, while lying in a cast on her hospital bed one night, and not being able to sleep because of pain, she reached for a pencil and paper and, in the darkness, entertained herself by writing this poem:

PILLOWS.

Soft as downy pillows are;
On flowery beds of ease;
These pleasant-sounding phrases,
The imagination please;
But experience will tell you
When you're flat upon your back,
These selfsame downy pillows,
Sometimes get out of whack.

Then, these pillows full of feathers,
Become pillows full of pain;
So many humps and bumps in them,
They drive one most insane;
They seem full of ugly fingers
That poke along the spine;
I know, because I've felt them
Go poking along mine.

I might have wakened Nancy
And made a great big fuss.
She'd have beaten up the pillows
And created lots of dust,
But I chose another method;
Mind rules matter as is known,
So I let my mind get busy,
And my pillows all smooth down.

I just set my mind a-rhyming,
I love to make a rhyme,
It keeps me from repining,
And occupies my time;
It makes for entertainment,
Without charges, if you please,
It serves me as a tonic;
And saves the doctor's fees.

"Mrs. Abraham is a benediction to all who come and go at the home of the Pethicks. May her useful life be an inspiration to all of us."

Several other poems by Mrs. Abraham are used in this issue of THE SUN, and others will be given from time to time. We are sure all of the readers will enjoy them.

Missions at Home and Abroad

Total of Relief Supplies Breaks Annual Record

A record-breaking total of nearly 30 million pounds of emergency relief supplies—twice as much as in any previous year—were shipped abroad in 1953 by Church World Service, international relief agency of the National Council of Churches.

With 36 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox communions cooperating, the agency sent materials, valued at close to $10,000,000, to some 40 different countries and territorial areas.

The figures highlighted a detailed report presented at the February 28 annual meeting of the agency's policy-making board of managers by Dr. Wayland Zwyer, associate director in charge of material relief. Most of the food, clothing, medicines and other supplies went to distress areas in Europe and Asia, with Europe receiving 12,887,391 pounds valued at $5,140,667, and Asia getting 15,453,842 pounds valued at $4,517,379.

A major factor in the achievement by the churches of this record-breaking relief shipments was the release of their programs of government surplus products by the United States government. However, Dr. Zwyer said, even without government surplus commodities, the 1953 CWS relief shipments to distressed areas overseas exceeded those for any of the previous five years. The government surplus materials, while furnished to the churches free for distribution abroad, required nearly $100,000 in financing by the denominations for shipping and distribution.

In addition to sustaining programs in continuing areas of emergency need such as Korea, the Near East, India and refugee areas of Europe, the relief materials were applied in emergency action in disaster-stricken areas, being used to alleviate distress among the victims of floods in Holland, England, India, Japan and Italy, of the Pusan and Hong Kong fires, and of the Greek earthquake.

The Material Relief Program and other relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction programs of Church World Service are made possible through specific funds raised by the churches, largely through collections of the Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP), a Church World Service project, and through other contributed clothing and commodity effects of CWS and the denominations.

CWS distribution of government surpluses financed by the denominations in 1953, Dr. Zwyer said, totaled 15,666,081 lbs. of dried milk, 1,569,868 lbs. of butter and 61,699 lbs. of cheese. Special fund appeals, appropriations and gifts financed a large part of the surplus commodity distribution.

Of the 1953 total shipped abroad, in excess of 25,000,000 lbs. valued at $7,767,580 were for Church World Service programs supported cooperatively by the 36 CWS constituent denominations, Dr. Zwyer said, while slightly more than 3,000,000 lbs., valued at $1,932,039 were shipped on behalf of denominational boards, the Heifer project and other CWS-related agencies.

Dr. Carleton Becomes American Board Vice-President

The American Board has recently announced the appointment of Dr. Alford Carleton to the post of executive vice-president. Dr. Carleton has, for the past 27 years been a Congregational Christian educator in the strategic Near East, having been the president of Aleppo College, Aleppo, Syria, since 1937.

At the age of 51, one of the younger Christian leaders, Dr. Carleton, paradoxically, has been referred to as "the elder statesman" of American educational work in the Near East. He has been in demand as an adviser from Egypt to Greece and Turkey, and from Lebanon to Iran.

Thoroughly versed in the economic, political and social problems of the Near and Middle East, with an unusual grasp on the psychology and history of these areas, Dr. Carleton, who speaks Arabic, Turkish and French fluently, has been able to interpret points of view between divergent Near Eastern groups and between the Near East and the West.

After installation as executive vice-president of the American Board this June, Dr. Carleton will go to Syria for the commencement exercises of Aleppo College. The college, under the administration of Dr. Carleton, had a student body of over 500, made up of different racial groups. Under his guidance it has developed rapidly in its physical plant and its academic standing.

Dr. Carleton was born in Albany, New York. He was educated at Oberlin College, where he received an A. B. degree, and at Hartford Theological Seminary, receiving his B. D. and Ph. D. there.

THE SECRET OF POWER FOR ANY CHURCH.

(Continued from page 5.)

practical, consistent Christian living on the part of church members can give a church power in effective service to its day and generation.

As a result of the Christ-like living of the early disciples, there were added to the church daily new recruits in Kingdom Service.

There are those today who believe that if the preaching from the pulpits were of a higher order that people would be flocking to the churches. But the truth is that regardless of how high the order of preaching may be from any pulpit, unless the preaching of the pew—the preaching of the members in the common walks of every day life, is not convincing, the unbelievers will continue to "pass by on the other side."

Outstanding leaders in the work of the church today declare that there never has been a time in all the history of the church when the preaching from the pulpits was of a higher average order than that of today. Nevertheless no minister should ever be satisfied with his preaching but should constantly strive to do better. However, not better preaching, but better practicing of the Gospel is what our day most needs. There is enough Gospel in almost any sermon from the pulpit of any church to save the entire community of which it is a part. What is needed is a whole-hearted response on the part of those who hear.

For churches to have power in effective service, they must have men and women who by their daily lives remind people of Jesus. A man who was a non-churchman said he could not see any difference between himself and his partner who was a prominent member of a church. There ought to be a very definite difference—and that difference is what gives power to a church. A woman had a

(Continued on page 15.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Perhaps you have some free time at home or in church school and would like to make a gift for a friend, a shut-in, or just have something for yourself. There is nothing new about this, but it will set you to thinking of what you can do.

Let's make an animal. Decide whether you will shape it from newspaper alone or if you will take a milk carton or icecream container to make the body. Wash it carefully and after it has dried, make legs of several thicknesses of newspaper folded, tie securely onto the body. The head may be shaped the same way or may be a smaller container taped on firmly.

Now for the gooey part. Tear or cut old newspaper into one inch strips as long as you like. Soak these in very hot water for an hour. While the papier mache is softening, assemble your animal parts and get the paste or glue ready. Wrap the wet paper around and smooth over with a layer of paste or glue, continue this until you have the shape you want. Finish your animal with an outer coat of paper towel cut and soaked, this gives a nice finish. Let it dry for several days and it will be ready to paint. Use cold water paints and then shellac. Buttons may be glued on for eyes or unusual effects. Your animal may be of any kind, shape or color you like. Feel like a sculptor?

Want to make a mask? Using the same wet paper and glue you may add to a round paper plate. Cut eye and mouth holes in the plate and soak for a little while, then curve the edges gently and add layers for making cheeks, eyebrows, lips and chin. Paint as you did your animal. It may be hung on the wall.

* * * * *

"The Other Fellow's Dollar"

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"When I take my nephew to dinner," said a chancée acquaintance, "he orders the most expensive meal on the menu. Just last week it was escargots bourguignonne! The boy likes to impress me with his French, and he knows so little about money."

It occurred to me that, in many families, the young people of today know little about money. There was a time when children learned its value and use naturally. They saw that Dad's hard-earned income—wisely apportioned by Mother—was spent carefully. They were permitted, when they went to the grocery store, to pay for the marketing, and they observed the thought that went into expenditures.

I remember my father, a successful lawyer, handing Mother five dollars each week to "run the house" and telling her, with a flourish, that she could have what she saved for pin money. And, mind you, just about every month Mother did end up with pin money to put into the chocolate-pot bank! It took "a bit of planning," but it taught me the extravagance of spending a large sum for food when delightful meals could be provided for a small sum. However, no one else could make an inexpensive cut of meat taste as delicious as Mother could!

When a family is going to dine out, if the mother cautions beforehand, "Dad wants us to enjoy our dinner, but let's be considerate and think about prices," she is using wisdom that will be appreciated not only by Dad but, also by future hosts. There is no doubt about it! No one likes to feel a guest is ordering expensively simply from lack of information. Be sure your young people understand the difference between a la carte and table d'hôte. Then tell them straight out, "If you want to be well liked remember your host's pocketbook! Do not order a la carte, if a full-course dinner is contemplated, when there are table-d'hôte meals on the menu!"

Our hospitable friend, Aileen, invited a dozen friends to a farewell dinner for her young cousin, who was on her way to college.

"What will you have, my dear?" the hostess asked Betty Ann.

It was a warm night; the guest of honor decided she would have orangeade with her dinner. All the girls liked the idea!

"Now orangeade was not on the menu," my friend relates, "so the dinner cost six dollars extra because of Betty Ann's whim."

Does this make good sense to you? Should not some alert youngster have shown independence by setting an example and saying, for instance, "There's milk with the dinner. I'll take that!"?

We want our boys and girls to be well-mannered, gracious, and considerate in personal relationship. But, know-how does not come ready-made. It must be taught. Mothers often discuss, even rehearse, the proper etiquette for Bill's or Karen's first dinner out—entering, being seated, table procedure, who orders, and so forth—but the practical exhortation, "Think of your host's pocketbook," is usually left unsaid.

When dining in a hotel or restaurant, Susan, an observant young person, asks, "What are you having, Mother? And you, Daddy?" And then she orders for herself a meal of comparable price. If she is not with her parents she asks her host, using his reply as her guide. Her tendency is to order even less than he does.

Is it not better to have friends and relatives think our children appreciative and thoughtful rather than just clever and "sophisticated"? Besides, who really wants those expensive delicacies, anyway?

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

(Continued from page 7.)

college has grown and increased its prestige through the years. It means a great deal to have a great church back of a great college, willing to give its support and anxious to see it grow, and grow it must!

Previously reported $ 1,086.20

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Fayetteville$ 6.00
Plymouth 19.50

Eastern Va. Conference:
Norfolk, First$ 35.00
Rosemont 40.00
Oak Grove 20.00
Oakland S. S. 30.61
Richmond, First 50.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Greensboro, First$ 52.87
Pleasant Ridge 35.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Union$ 10.00

Virginia Valley Conference:
Newport S. S.$ 31.29
Palmyra S. S. 3.00
Winchester S. S. 8.34

341.61

Total to date $ 1,427.61

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Teen-Agers Tell of Extensive Student Drinking

A serious picture about drinking among teen-age high school students has been presented by Dr. George W. Crane in a section called "Problem Clinic" in the Miami, Florida, Herald. The article, in its entirety, follows:

Daniel, 17, was graduated from high school.

Near graduation time, he and Judy were sitting at the table in the kitchen drinking milk about midnight when I was heading for bed, so I stopped to join them.

"Where've you been?" I inquired of Daniel.

"Oh, we have had a lot of graduation parties," he replied, "and I just got home.

"A lot of the kids have been having 'open house' for their classmates. But I came home early. The last place was just a drunken brawl."

"Yes," Judy added. "I don't think you and Mamma really know what goes on nowadays. Most of the kids drink, even at high school parties and their parents either don't know about it, or don't care."

Buys Case of Beer.

"Yeah," Danny took up the conversation. "I was riding with one of my classmates this afternoon. He stopped and went into a tavern. Then he came out with a case of beer.

"I asked him how he got the bartender to sell him the beer since he is not only under age but he looks even younger than he really is.

"He said the taverns don't care around here. They'll sell to anybody who lays the money on the counter.

"And if anybody objects, the kids carry forged credentials. A lot of them use phony draft registration cards, too, which they show when they want to buy liquor.

"Dad, were they as bad in your day as they are now?" Daniel added. "Why, at this last house where I stopped with my girl, they were half drunk and breaking up furniture.

"The parents weren't even home though they knew their house was being used for a high school graduation party. When I saw what was going on I took my girl and left.

Some Parents Help.

"But I know that some of the parents actually provide beer for the kids. Then they leave the house and let them have a wild party.

"So it isn't all the fault of the high school kids. They seem to think it is smart to serve liquor.

"But their parents are just as bad, for some of them think it is 'cute' for their kids to serve liquor at their school parties.

"So why blame the teen-agers when it is their parents' fault more than their own?"

"How do they react to you when you don't accept liquor?" I asked.

WISHING.

I am wishing for tomorrow,
For, I have spoiled today,
I want to start all new again
And try a better way.
You Say, "Tomorrow never comes"?
Then I'll begin again today,
And that which I so badly soiled
I'll give to yesterday.

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

Son Gets Kidded.

"Oh, they say: 'Crane doesn't drink or smoke, either. He doesn't do anything, and then they kid me about not being a man,'" Danny replied.

"That doesn't bother me, though, for there are enough of us kids here in our own family to back me up.

"But, Dad, the kids who have no brothers and sisters and who are 'only' children, have a tough time.

"When they get out in a crowd, even though they don't want to drink or smoke, they can't stand the kidding and ridicule. So they usually go along with the crowd, just like sheep.

"The teachers tell us that liquor causes a lot of automobile accidents and immorality. Yet the parents often serve liquor or let their kids have it at parties."

* * *

Wan't some of you young people write us your reaction to this story? Is it really so bad where you live as is related here?

"THE CONQUEST OF MOUNT EVEREST."

(Continued from page 2.)

John Hunt, who relentlessly directed, encouraged and inspired his comrades into achieving their tremendous objective.

The scenic backgrounds are of breathtaking beauty. And the suspense as these men claw their way up the great peak is developed to an almost unbearable degree. A fine score of accompanying music has been composed by Arthur Benjamin, and sharing in the overall excellence is Louis Macneice's commentary, which is read in turn by various members of the expedition. In technicolor.

"A TIME OF TESTING."

(Continued from page 6.)

ment and other community enterprises.

This is a time of testing. This is particularly true for those of us who lay some claim to being Christian. It is often said that the most segregated hour in America is at 11 o'clock on Sunday morning. Our Congregational Christian Churches have as a goal "a non-segregated church in a non-segregated community." There isn't much enthusiasm for the goal throughout the Southern Convention. There isn't much enthusiasm for it right here. Yet the predominating witness of Christianity is in radical opposition to segregation. Those who believe that racial segregation is Christian are in a minority. From that it does not follow necessarily that they are wrong. Thank God there have been courageous and eloquent minorities who persisted because they were absolutely convinced of the basic rightness of their position. But the whole historical movement on this race question points to the conclusion that segregation is un-Christian and un-democratic.

My own conviction is well known to you. I am convinced that racial segregation is not Christian and is not democratic. Therefore I place before us again the solemn plea to search our souls on the basis of the Christian ethic of love—"You shall love the Lord your God . . . and your neighbor as yourself." The Negro is our neighbor. And as surely as God is our Father so the Negro is our Brother. "Who serves my Father as a son is surely kin to me."

Don't forget to get your "Cent-a-Meal" sticker.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The New Commandment"

LESSON XII—MARCH 24, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another; even as I have loved you, that you also love one another."—John 13:34.

SCRIPTURE BACKGROUND: John 13, 14.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I. John 4:11-21.

Is that the Lord Jesus Christ on his knees, washing the feet of the disciples! Surely it cannot be he, the Son of God, doing such menial work—work usually reserved for servants in the household! It just does not seem to make sense. But it is he. If anything, they should be washing his feet, and here he is on his knees, washing their feet. And he has not forgotten his dignity, nor laid away his majesty.

In recording the incident, John says, "Knowing that he was come from and went to God . . . he took a towel and girded himself . . . and began to wash the disciples' feet." Conscious of his divine origin and his divine destiny, he took upon himself the form of a servant and made himself the minister of all.

Why, for goodness sake, why did he do this? Perhaps for two reasons: first, to give the disciples an example of his humility, his matchless humility, and, secondly, to show them what God was like. God in Christ, was still high above men, yet he moved among men as one willing and eager to serve men. Humility is not weakness: it is strength used in serving others. That picture of Jesus on his knees washing the feet of his disciples ought to humble every one of us and cause us to pour contempt on all our pride, love of preferment and jealousy of place.

An Example.

"For I have given you an example, that you also should do as I have done to you." Did he mean that we ought to wash one another's feet? Some folks take it literally, and to this day have a ceremony of foot-washing. That is all right, but that is not what Jesus had in mind. He was simply saying that in his willingness to become the servant of all and to minister to all, he had given us an example. And we need an example, here, as well as elsewhere. Words are not enough; we want words in action. "Blessed are the meek, said Jesus." "I am meek and lowly in heart," he said on another occasion. But in the scene in the upper room, he shows what humility is. He translates the precept into example. And he adds that "the servant is not greater than his master." If the Master could do this, so likewise must we.

Joy Through Doing.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Joy comes through doing. There are many people who want the joy of some great experience, but they are unwilling to do the thing that makes possible that joy. It is not enough to know; one must do. Only obedience brings the blessing. In fact, to know and not to do, brings unhappiness. Knowing and doing bring happiness. Feeling is not a prerequisite for action; it is a product of action. Do what one should do, and he will have the joy that comes from doing it. And there can be no joy without the doing. "If you know these things, blessed are you if you do them."

A New Commandment.

A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another." Goodness knows there were already too many commandments in Jesus' day, so many that the ordinary man could not possibly keep up with them. And here was the Master giving another commandment. It was a new one, too, "that you also love one another." In one sense it was a new commandment, but in another sense it was simply an old commandment with a new viewpoint. It included all the other commandments. Its spring or motive was the fact that Christ had first loved them. It was a special love of Christian to Christian. There is to be a new love circle, the Christian Church, dependent on a new center of love, Christ.

The Badge of Discipleship.

"By this all men will know that you are my disciples, if you have love for one another." Men and women wear badges and pins and buttons of all kinds to show that they belong to some order or organization or club. There is such a means of identification for the follower of Christ—the spirit of love. That's right, the spirit of love. Not primarily, how regularly we attend services of worship, how much we give to Kingdom enterprises, how much service we render, not even how many sacrifices we make, but whether we love—that is the test of the follower of Christ. That is the acid test. The great heresy and the worst unorthodoxy of the unbeliever is the lack of love. That is the primary and ultimate way in which we show that we are followers of Christ. Nothing humiliates the writer of these Notes more than to bring his life to this test of love. Every follower of Christ might well ask himself or herself as to how conspicuous is the badge of his discipleship, love to Christ and love to fellowman.

Love and Obedience.

"If a man loves me, he will keep my word." That is simple enough. If we love our Lord, we will try to obey him. Obedience is the fruit of love. Love is the root of obedience. "He who has my words and keeps them, he it is who loves me." Simple words, but disturbing words. How diligently and persistently do we try to bring our lives under the control of Christ?

Love and Revelation.

"I will love him and manifest myself to him." "How is it that you will manifest yourself to us, and not to the world?" asked Judas, not Iscariot. A fuller manifestation of the love of Christ comes to those who love him and obey him. Christ cannot reveal himself to everybody. The law operates on the human level. Love can be revealed only to those who are responsive to love. One can never know the fulness of love until he loves in return. Just as there were those during the days when Jesus was here in the flesh, to whom he could reveal himself in a fuller way than to others, because of their response—Peter and James and John, for instance, shared some of the more intimate experiences of Jesus because they were more responsive to him—just so can and does God make known his love today to those who are open and responsive and obedient to his love. If a man loves God and keeps his commandments, God will make known his love to that man.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

"Pride and Love"

By REV. HENRY V. HARMON.

We are dealing with two things, pride and love.

In his book, The White Tower, James Ramsey Ullman tells the story of six people who set out to climb a mountain in Switzerland during the second World War. Two of them are interned fighters; one a German, one an American. As they near the top, the German, Siegfried Hein, starts off without the others to reach the top alone. For he believes himself, as a German, superior to the rest in strength of both body and will. The American, Martin Ordway, catches up with Hein as he prepares to cross an almost sheer wall by going hand over hand along a four-inch crack in the precipice. Martin suggests that they rope up and continue together. Hein shakes his head and starts across the narrow ledge hanging only by his hands. Suddenly the ledge gives way. Hein drops several feet to a small patch of snow which is obviously insecure and below which there is nothing—nothing but eight thousand feet of air.

Martin starts off across the ledge; also hand over hand. As he reaches the point where the ledge broke, he wedges his right arm into the ledge and extends his left hand to Hein, who cannot reach back to the ledge without assistance.

"Take it," he said.

"Hein did not move.

"Take it!"

"But even now as he spoke, he knew, with sudden and absolute certainty, that Siegfried Hein was not going to take his hand. The German stood, motionless and silent, looking at him, and Ordway looked back at him across the intervening yard of space and the arc of his extended arm. . . . He saw the bleak gray unmoving eyes. And in the same instant it seemed to him that he was seeing everything that was behind the eyes. For one flashing, timeless instant on that forlorn and timeless mountainside he looked into a man's eyes, and everything that the man was was there. He saw it all now, naked and manifest before him; the frustration and bitterness and contumacy; the fear and the pride and the bottomless sterility of pride; the despairing, lonely hunger of the unloving and unloved; the will to conquer and the will to die."

Love reaches out its hand, but Pride will not take it. Pride must go alone.

* * *

Cry the Beloved Country is Alan Paton's story of pride and love amid the racial bitterness of South Africa. There is the pride and the hatred of the native African feeling that the white man has stolen his land; the pride and hatred of the white Afrikaner considering himself superior to all whose skin is black.

There are two young men in this story, also. One is a young white man dedicating his life to bridge, by means of love, the gap of pride that separates black and white. One is a young black man, the son of a native Episcopal minister. This young native has left his poor home in the country to seek the white man's gold in the city. But instead of gold he finds greed; and in this greed he murders that young white man who is doing so much to help his own native people.

This book has made into a movie. One scene from that movie dramatically shows the difference between love and pride.

There is a funeral service for the young white man; a service in a small church packed with his friends, both white and black.

Following the service, friends file by the parents to express their sympathy. The first black man approaches the father. He is an older man, obviously a leader of his people. He looks into the eyes of the white man and holds out his hand.

"Your son was a good man, Sir," he says.

The father hesitates. He has never shared his son's sympathy towards the natives. Here, before him, stands a man whose skin is the same color as his who slew his son—his only son. His pride says no.

The father hesitates. He has been reading a speech his son had been preparing the very evening on which he was shot. His son was writing that the hatred between the races would lead only to bloodshed and grief; that somehow love must go where pride cannot.

The father seizes the negro's hand.

Suddenly, it is as though a curtain is torn away; as though a very great weight has been lifted up; a mountain moved (our faith can move mountains, you know).

Where Pride had been; now is Love.

* * *

Pride separates the nations and causes war.

Pride separates the races and perpetuates hatred.

Pride comes between families, so that where there should be love and friendship, there is only hatred and distrust. Even among families who live in the same community; who should be going to the same church.

You have been hurt. You feel that you have been wronged. Instead of seeking out the cause of your hurt, you turn your back. You turn your back and stiffen your pride. If you have been wrong, you will not dare admit it. If he has been wrong, you will not listen when he asks forgiveness.

The breach broadens; the gap deepens; the community is broken; families are in a continuous cold war. Only love can bridge the gap; can heal the wounds.

* * *

Romeo was a Montague; Juliet was a Capulet. They loved each other but their families despised the other. Family pride would have nothing of their love. Family pride would disown before it would permit. But where pride stands apart; love brings together. Even in death they are not divided.

* * *

"Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth."

* * *

Love and Pride.

Pride walks with a goosetstep; with a fixed bayonet; to the tune of martial music; insists that his will alone is right.

Love walks swiftly and quietly like Indian feet in the forest, intent, not upon being heard, but upon getting somewhere; doing something—for somebody.

Pride draws the line and defiantly
(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

This is the picture. There they are 81 children from the ages of Brenda Proffit, 4, to Jeanne Cook, 17, and five matrons and two guests. At the twelve tables 88 of us. Miss Foster was there in charge of a regularly scheduled worship service. I was there to bring the sermonette, or children's sermon. Look at the tables before they enter. They are pretty. The dining room is clean, warm and cheerful. In come the older girls. They are followed by the little folks. I was standing at their door as they came in. I tell you it was a pretty sight . . . they kept coming, and coming until finally Mrs. Glover, their matron, and Mrs. Stadler, the sewing matron, were in. Following them came the boys, with my friend and your friend, Jackie Wilkins, leading the way. They entered quietly, taking their places quickly. The matrons say the children do a little better when the superintendent is in the diningroom. But I know they do nicely all the time (except when some one of them does otherwise). Finally we are all in our places. Mrs. Rash, the girls' matron, taps the bell, and all are seated. I stand and say grace.

At each of the 12 tables there is either a matron or a larger girl. It is the evening meal, "supper" here! Hot biscuits are being brought in by four or five waitresses—girls chosen to "wait tables." Food is being served and plenty of it. Good fresh milk, a big platter of fried ham in the middle of each table, gravy (of course), applesauce, green peas and corn, more biscuits, more milk—and for desert there was syrup and butter biscuits. Too much? Well don't eat so much. Select and choose but if you do not get enough it is your own fault. There is plenty and I ought to know.

When we are through Miss Foster stands and ask everyone to finish eating very quietly as we are about to begin the devotions. There was a call to worship, prayer, songs and I spoke on "Commit thy ways unto the Lord, and he will direct thy paths." Something fine was happening in the hearts and minds of many of the boys and girls present. You were going about your own evening meal. Your church and convention had a piece of work going on here at the orphanage. You had sent in your contributions and you were sharing in that work. I wish you could have been with us. There was the closing prayer and benediction, and when the bell tapped there was not the usual "bounce out", but rather a hesitant, friendly arising and going that meant more than could be seen on the surface.

For your contributions and your encouraging letters, and your many ways of showing friendship and kindness I thank you everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 4, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Clothing:
Mrs. E. N. King, Emporia, Va.
Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rawles, Suffolk, Va.
Mrs. H. E. Ollerhead, Chapel Hill, N. C.
Ladies Auxiliary, First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C.
Damascus Church, Sunbury, N. C., Coupons.
Mrs. Frances P. Lowe, Suffolk, Va., Glasses.
Cheerful Workers Class, Reidsville Christian Church, Material, clothing and glasses.
Monticello Christian Church, Coupons and glasses.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 2,432.39
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Beulah, Thanksgiving	$ 18.62
Mt. Herman	10.00
Plymouth S. S.	7.21
Wake Chapel	50.00
	85.83
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Liberty Spring S. S.	$ 20.00
Norfolk, First	28.60
Rosemont, Special	40.00
Oakland	10.00
	98.60
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mt. Zion S. S.	$ 4.50

Reidsville S. S.	64.00
		68.50
Western N. C. Conference:
Seagrove	$ 40.00
		40.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Newport S. S.	$ 27.17
		27.17
Total	$	320.10
Grand total	$	2,752.49

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$5,542.51
Woman's Fellowship, Bay View Church $ 13.60
Mary Sue Brittle S. S. Class, Bethlehem (Nansemound)	5.00
Mrs. J. E. Bryant, Harrisonburg, Va.	11.00
The children of Bethlehem Christian Ch., Broadway, Va., for the furnace	4.20
A Friend, High Point, N. C.	80.00
Chester H. Roth Co., Inc. (interest)	30.00
Mrs. Grace Remars, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Columbus United S. S., Columbus, Ga.	5.02
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va.	15.00
Miss Vera Gilliam, Greensboro, N. C.	10.00
In Memory of Mrs. E. C. Buckner	5.00
Special Gifts	308.80
	492.62

Grand total $ 6,035.13

Total for the week $ 812.72

Total for the year $ 8,787.62

The Elon College Choir of forty trained voices will be presented in the Richmond Church, Grove Avenue at Sheppard Street, Sunday, March 14, at 8:15 p. m.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ _____ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

MORGAN.

Whereas, on Thanksgiving Day, November 26, 1953, Mrs. Eula Lilly Morgan, who had been a member, faithful and active out of proportion to her few years, of the Mount Olivet (R) Church; did pass to an untimely end together with her husband, Marine Sergeant Robert Morgan, who was a friend of our church and a faithful servant of his nation in two wars; we, as a church, wish to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss and to extend to the parents, children, and relatives of these two our deepest sympathy.

* * *

HARMON.

Whereas, on January 14, 1954, Mrs. Emma Harmon, a woman of highest Christian virtues and steadfast devotion, who, although a member of the Evangelical United Brethren Church, did give of her life and talent to this, the Mount Olivet (R) Church, passed away, and we, as a church wish to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the congregation has suffered the loss of a sincere friend and neighbor who was willing to lend a helping hand to all when needed.

That all the members extend to the family their sincere sympathy in the passing of their mother and faithful friend to us all.

* * *

STOVER.

On January 17, 1954, Mrs. Annie B. Stover, the oldest member of the Mount Olivet (R) Church passed away. She illustrated in her life and character the highest Christian witness; quiet, unassuming, yet firm in her devotion to Christian principals and practices.

Therefore, let it be resolved that in her death the church and members will suffer the loss of a sincere friend who was faithful and zealous in the work of the church.

That the members extend their sincere sympathy to the family in the passing of this their mother and faithful friend of us all.

Mrs. JULIA FRY,
Miss LURA LAM, Secretary,
Rev. H. V. HARMAN, Pastor.

FITCH.

On October 8, 1953, Jim Fitch and his wife, Mrs. Fannie Rascoe Fitch, were killed in an automobile accident. Funeral services were conducted in the Bethel Congregational Christian Church on October 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitch are survived by two sons, two daughters, 13 grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, and Mrs. Fitch by four sisters and two brothers.

We, the members of the Bethel Church, realize we have lost two devoted and loyal members. Our lives have been enriched and blessed by their examples of Christian living and by our associations with them. We are resolved to honor their memory by striving to carry forward with greater zeal and more earnest purpose the interests of this church, to which they both gave so largely of their lives.

Mrs. T. P. MILES,
Mrs. G. M. HERNDON,
Mrs. J. H. KING,
Mrs. W. T. King.

THE SECRET OF POWER FOR ANY CHURCH.

(Continued from page 9.)

friend say to her one day, "I've been watching you, and because your life is so different from mine—so much kinder, so much more worth while—I want to know how to make my life like yours." And the answer was, "My faith in God is the secret of any good you may see in my life."

The early Christians had power to influence others for God because they continued steadfastly not only in the Apostles' teachings, but also in the

MY GARDEN.

I went into my garden
At the close of day.
The evening dew were falling.
They seemed to wash away
All the day stains from the flowers.
Their spirits were reborn;
Fresh in beauty and in fragrance
They would rise to meet the morn.
Musing on this transformation,
I knew that Heaven's dew
Would cleanse me, even as the flowers,
My spirit would renew.
Then, with day stains disappearing,
Blessed hope would be reborn,
So, with faith and courage strengthened,
I would rise to meet the morn.

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

fellowship of Christian conduct and in prayer.

Harmony prevailed in the early church, and harmony must prevail in any church today that would have power—any church that would have power in influencing others to become Christians and enter into its fellowship of good-will and service. A divided church might as well close up shop and turn the keys over to the devil, for he is the generalissimo in charge of every divided church. The early church continued steadfastly in the fellowship of believers, the fellowship of harmony and of high purposes for God. And so must a church continue today that would render effective service and be a power in winning converts.

Love is the keynote of Christian fellowship. "Be kindly affectioned one toward another in brotherly love" is a divine injunction. "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with the other." "By this shall all men know that you are my disciples, if you love one another."

Well may we sing, "The fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above." And any church which lacks fellowship in Christian love and service soon becomes but another organization without point and without purpose, just a sort of social club or a mutual admiration society, when it ought to be a living, throbbing, empowering factor in the entire community life.

People who love the church and whose highest ambition in life is to be a worthy member of the church, to do everything they can for the church, are the people who continue steadfastly in prayer. They begin each day with a prayer. They close each day with a prayer. They live in the spirit of prayer.

It is such people who make it possible for a church to "Grow and Glow and Go."

PRIDE AND LOVE.

(Continued from page 13.)

stands back; only those whose color is right may walk on this side.

Love doesn't even see the line. For love is not interested in lines but in lives; not concerned with the color of a man's skin but with the quality of his heart.

Pride stands with chest expanded; arms fiercely crossed; a frown upon his face.

Love merely smiles softly, throws her arms around Pride's neck and smothers him with kisses.

Pride appears stronger.

Love is stronger.

For deep down inside himself, Pride is afraid—afraid of being alone and of being not wanted; afraid of the deep darkness of the world.

But Love is not afraid. For Love has nothing of which to be afraid. Perfect love casts out fear. Where there is love, there is God; and where there is God, there is light and no darkness at all.

* * *

"Love never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

. . . and now abideth faith, hope, love; these three; but the greatest of these is love."

* * *

The greatest thing in the world is Love.

"Of course," you say, "I knew it all along."

STANDARDS of LIVING vs. GIVING

We need to think of giving, not in terms of obligation or duty, nor yet in terms of something that may be left to undisciplined inclination, but as a privilege of family life. As children of the Father, as followers of Christ who shared completely his Father's purpose, ours is the privilege of partnership. Our Father has placed the material resources of the world in the hands of his children. He has counted on our love and loyalty to use them in keeping with his purpose for the world. And that purpose is handicapped in whatever measure we use these resources for our selfish pleasure without regard to the needs of his other children.

We are the big brothers and sisters of the world—not just of other nations, but of the handicapped everywhere. Most of us were brought up in Christian homes, or at least under the influence of the church. Most of us have had a chance at a fair education. We have been brought up in surroundings in which decency and honor and right were taken for granted. We have had every opportunity to achieve for ourselves the rich and abundant life that our Father wants every child of his to have.

But there are a multitude of people in the world today who are much younger than we are—younger spiritually, morally, socially, economically; people who have never had a fair chance to learn of decency and honor and right; people who have had no real opportunity to know of a Father who wants for his children the best. Handicapped by poverty, by ignorance, by disease, by unwholesome surroundings, these younger brothers and sisters of ours are growing up without a chance. They will get this chance only as those of us who are more privileged share with them in money and love and service.

All these underprivileged people in the world could have a chance if only those of us who call ourselves Christian cared enough. We do anything we want to do in the material realm. We laugh at those who say a thing cannot be done. We build impossible bridges, we dig impossible canals, we put up impossible skyscrapers, we fly impossible air ships, and nobody thinks anything of it. What we need is some such daring and consecration in the spiritual realm. The infinite spiritual resources of God are as much at our disposal as are the material resources of the world, if only we cared enough to pay the price of using them. It isn't a lack of means. The United States is in peril from excessive wealth. The burden of the world's gold is upon us. Our doom may be in how we spend this wealth. Our greatest trouble is that our standard of living has quite run away with our standard of giving.

—Anonymous.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1954

NUMBER 11

Breaking Ground for the Moonelon Project . . .

Delegates from many churches of the Southern Convention were present for the groundbreaking ceremonies that marked the beginning of the building program for the Conference Center at Moonelon on last Sunday. Shown above turning earth is Dr. Henry E. Robinson of Burlington, N. C., chairman of the Convention's Moonelon Committee. The immediate plans call for the construction of a building which will serve as a dining and assembly hall. Later it is intended to provide a group of cabins and other facilities.

(Photo by Ed McCauley, courtesy Burlington Times-News.)

News Flashes

If you think the A Bomb is a menace to America, we suggest that you read the report on alcoholism among high school students on page 7.

The North Carolina CROP executive board has recently been notified that its reappointment of Rev. Carl R. Key as state director for this year has been approved. The state body, in notifying Mr. Key of this approval expressed its own gratitude to Mr. Key for his leadership in the program during the past two years. We also offer him our felicitations.

A letter written by Martin Luther on December 12, 1538, was sold at auction at the Parke-Bernet Galleries in New York City on February 23. A private collector, whose name was not divulged by the auctioneers, acquired the letter for the sum of $500. In Luther's handwriting, it was addressed to Nikolai Spect, schoolmaster at Boelzen, Germany. In it the Reformer said he was sending a portrait of "the holy man John Huss" to his friend as "a token of remembrance," adding that the gift should be prized for its spiritual rather than for its material value. The galleries withheld information on the rare letter's former owners.

Our church at Fayetteville, under the leadership of Rev. Carl Wallace, is making fine progress. During the month of February, 14 new members were received into the church, and 26 new pupils were enrolled in the Sunday school. The church now has a membership of 77 and the average attendance at the church service during the month of February was 90. Membership in the Sunday school is 119. The grounds have been beautified with beautiful shrubbery added, and plans have been underway for the robing of the choir and the purchase of chapel chairs and blinds. The church recently observed its third anniversary. Heartiest congratulations to this new church and to the pastor.

Operation "Sky Pilots"

Religious services on Sunday are a usual routine for folks who live on land, but to seagoing men, scattered in formation with a Naval Task Force they are something special.

On a recent Sunday with Task Force 77, operating in the Far Eastern waters on training exercises, nearly every ship in this unit was afforded an opportunity to pass the word that religious services would be held. Many of the smaller ships do not have a chaplain aboard, and helicopters were used to fly six Navy Chaplains from carriers and a cruiser to destroyers of the Force. The arial "Sky Pilots" conducted nineteen Services for their seagoing congregations in Mess Halls, Reception Rooms and on Hanger Decks.

Services were held from dawn to dusk, as the clergymen shuttled back and forth to ships in the Task Force via the copters. At the day's end, the Navy men could say that the Word of the Lord literally came to them direct from the heavens.

Senate Asks Special Prayer for Freedom of Worship

An unanimously adopted Senate resolution calls upon all churches and synagogues of the nation to offer special prayers on Sunday, April 18, "for the deliverance of all those behind the Iron Curtain" who are denied freedom of worship.

Declaring that "atheistic dictatorship has subjected religious leaders and their congregations to barbaric persecutions such as the world has not seen for nearly 2,000 years," the Senate resolution named the deposed Lutheran Bishop Lajos Ordass of Hungary as one victim of church persecution behind the Iron Curtain.

It said that the "torture of Cardinal Mindszenty and Lutheran Bishop Lajos Ordass in Hungary, the incarceration of Cardinal Wyszynski in Poland, the imprisonment of Archbishop Stepinac in Yugoslavia, the oppression of Protestant ministers in Bulgaria, and the persecution of Jews throughout all the area dominated by Communism," were examples of religious persecution.

The resolution indicated that April 18 had been selected as the day for special prayers because both Easter Sunday and the first day of Passover fall on that day this year.

Introduced by Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.) with Senator John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Senator H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) as co-sponsors, the resolution was adopted without previous discussion in committee. The unprecedented prompt action was endorsed by both the majority and minority leaders of the Senate.

The measure was sent to the House where early consideration is expected, according to sources in the Senate.

"Gypsy Colt"

PICTURE OF THE MONTH.

A drought-improverished farmer finds he has to sell his horse, Gypsy, which is the pet and companion of his young daughter, Meg. Gypsy takes the child to school every morning and then calls for her at three o'clock with such punctuality that the neighbors set their watches when they see them go by. When Gypsy is bought by a neighbor who owns a famous racing stable, the parting, while a sad one for the child, is even worse for the horse, for although he is afforded every material comfort, he is treated with occasional cruelty. On two occasions he escapes and returns to his young mistress, but each time he is brought back to the purchaser.

Taken on a long trip, for the purpose of entering a race, he again escapes, and once more sets out for the home he loves. When some cowboys attempt to lasso him, he cleverly eludes them. When four young motocyclists, having heard that a large reward has been offered for his return, attempt to corner him in a canyon, he promptly outraces them. Through mountains and desert he evades pursuit until, near exhaustion, he is discovered by a Mexican boy who revives him with water which enables him to continue on to his destination. When the owner comes to claim him for the third time, the farmer counters with an offer to make an amicable settlement as soon as his next crop is brought in.

Based on a novel by the late Eric Knight, this delightful story tells of a child's love for an animal, and how this love is fully reciprocated. It is also the portrayal of a family bearing hardship together. For parents and children alike, it is an excellent lesson in honestly facing what must be done for the good of all.

Gypsy emerges as a remarkable and masterfully trained horse, and there is no resort to undue sentimentality. Splendidly directed and acted, with mountain and desert scenery beautifully revealed in Anasco Color, this MGM film is excellent entertainment.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

1954 Emphases

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Churches, says Dr. Douglas Horton, "is the laymen of the churches organized for worship, study, fellowship and work together. It is by no means something apart from the churches—a kind of mildly religious club which uses the church buildings as meeting places. It is one aspect of the life of the churches themselves, a force within the churches, of, by, for and from the churches."

What is the program of the Laymen's Fellowship? This question is often asked and the answer is very simple: The program of the Laymen's Fellowship is laymen at work in the entire program of the Congregational Christian Churches, as set forth by, in or through the General Council, The Board of Home Missions, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the Council for Social Action and related organizations.

The Board of Directors meets each year and discusses the policy, program and progress of the Laymen's Fellowship. As items to be emphasized in 1954, called Emphases, the Board suggests and recommends for the organized, as well as the unorganized, group of men in our churches, the following five items:

1. Complete Church Building Loan Fund Campaign.
2. Strengthen the Youth Program.
3. Establish an Organization for Men in every local church and enrich the program of men's groups now organized.
4. Promote schools of Churchmanship with Stewardship as a central theme.
5. Develop personal evangelism and regular church attendance.

A four page pamphlet has been prepared on each of the five emphases. Send orders to National Director, Pembroke, Kentucky.

Details of Laymen's Fellowship.

The Laymen's Fellowship is organized in accordance with the working rules which were adopted by laymen attending the Oberlin, Ohio General Council Meeting in 1948.

The National Committee of 48 men, elected by the Board of Home Missions after nominations by the present committee in three classes of 16 men each for a term of six years, meets once every two years at the same time and place as the General Council.

The Board of Directors of 16 men, elected from and by the National Committee for a term of two years, meets annually, usually in December in Chicago, Illinois.

Financial support for the work of the National Laymen's Fellowship is furnished by the Board of Home Missions. A budget is prepared each year by the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Fellowship and the Board of Home Missions grants what it believes will be necessary for the work of the year. All laymen who contribute to general benevolences in their local churches thus have a part in sharing in the Laymen's Fellowship financial support.

The Laymen's Fellowship has made cooperation with all of the agencies of the Congregational Christian Churches one of its prime purpose. Many fine laymen are serving on all of the boards, commissions and committees, and their loyalty, time, effort and financial participation are sincerely appreciated.

The Laymen's Fellowship is also officially represented by the Director, in the various organizations of the church.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"Preaching Missions"

Many of our churches will be holding "A Preaching Mission" for ten days to two weeks during Lent. A well planned mission of this kind is one of the most important Evangelistic Emphases a church can include in its program.

Preaching per se is not the distinguishing feature of "A Preaching Mission." The distinguishing characteristic is the nature of the preaching—it is distinctively evangelistic in content, spirit and purpose—it is "preaching for a verdict," preaching to persuade personal commitments, preaching to enlist new recruits for Christ and his church. Such preaching calls for the best and all any preacher has of scholarship and power in public address.

Churches large and small, in village, town and city, have reported rich spiritual uplift and rewarding ingatherings of new members through the medium of a carefully planned Preaching Mission.

There are four "Musts" to take into account in planning "A Preaching Mission":

First. The pastor must want it. The pastor must be absolutely sold on the vital need and the rewarding possibilities of "A Preaching Mission" in his church, in the interest of quickening the religious thinking and spiritual life of pastor and people, and of the community as a whole.

Second. The congregation which is considering having "A Preaching Mission" must feel an impelling Evangelistic urge—a keen desire to share their faith and their fellowship with people outside the church circle.

Third. The date of the Preaching Mission must be announced well in advance. After the Preaching Mission has been publicly announced, the major emphasis of all church activities and of the messages from the pulpit, as well as the prayers of pastor and members during the intervening period should focus on the coming Preaching Mission.

Fourth. The mission must be widely publicized. An intensive publicity campaign by telephone, by personal contacts, through the local press and by local radio broadcasts, should be carried on from the date the mission is announced—that everyone may know of the important coming event and reserve the dates. The publicity must be clear-cut, informing and cumulative in interest and in emphasis.

In addition to the general publicity campaign in connection with the Preaching Mission, a carefully written letter of cordial invitation "to our Preaching Mission" should be sent by the Prudential Committee or Board of Deacons to each individual or family on the "prospect" or "responsibility" list of the church a week or two before the mission begins.

Regardless of when a church decides to hold its Preaching Mission, the entire period of the Church Year, preceding the date set for the mission, should be used by the congregation and pastor for a systematically organized schedule of "Hospitality Evangelism." This plan calls for several homes within the membership, the pastor's home leading the way, to agree to invite as dinner guests at least six individuals or couples from the list of prospects or possible prospects during the year, on which occasions the members of the host home will direct that the life, accomplishments, advantages and interests of the church shall be the chief (not the exclusive) topic of conversation. Hospitality and Good Neighbor Evangelism afford the best possible build-up for "A Preaching Mission."

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

Breaking Ground for the Future

Approximately one hundred laymen and others interested from churches throughout the Southern Convention met at Moonelon on last Sunday for the ground breaking ceremonies that marked the start of a conference center building program.

Participating in the program were Dr. Henry E. Robinson, representing the Southern Convention; Paul Robinson, representing the children; Betty Rhodes, representing youth; Mrs. W. B. Williams, representing the convention women; John Robert Walker, representing the laymen, and Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, representing the ministers of the convention.

Coinciding with the ground breaking program was the weekend meeting of the Laymen's Council, which had been called by Mr. W. B. Williams, the president of the Laymen's Fellowship, and at which Mr. Walter A. Graham, director of men's work for the entire denomination was present.

Significant was this ground breaking in the program of the Southern Convention. It should mean great things for the future of our denomination in the South. But there is something that is much more significant. That is that, to our knowledge, the laymen of the Convention have for the first time, as an organized unit, chosen a project for their endeavors. That portends even greater things for the future.

J. T. K.

Dr. John A. Reuling Reports On the Situation in South Africa

"I do not feel that American press reports of fear, tension, violence, hatred and danger in South Africa have been exaggerated. In fact, I think that most such reports have been very moderate and balanced in so far as they have reported specific situations," says Dr. John A. Reuling, who has just returned to Boston, Mass., after a five months intensive visit to South Africa, Rhodesia and Angola, Africa, during which he spent much time talking with leaders of the African, Indian, Colored and White groups.

Dr. Reuling is Africa Secretary of the American Board and this was his third visit to Africa since 1946. Prior to that time he was for 14 years a Congregational Christian educator among the Bantus in Adams, South Africa.

Those visitors to South Africa who feel that the racial strife there is "greatly exaggerated" probably have seen only the model townships, of which there are a number, but not the "squalor, filth and generally unsavory character of places like Moroka (a shanty town of some 75,000 Africans near Johannesburg)—nor have they seen the statistics of death through tuberculosis run recently as a public service feature by a white South African newspaper which is trying to arouse the public conscience," adds Dr. Reuling.

"Africans are naturally lawabiding," declares Dr. Reuling, "but there are numerous instances where they have been dangerously aroused. . . . The really responsible Africans still hold out for cooperation and for lawful and orderly approach, but they are finding it increasingly difficult to maintain their position of leadership.

" . . . There is a strong element of anti-whiteism in each of the non-white groups who are against collaboration or cooperation in any form. These are generally younger men, impatient for action. . . . This is a new and disturbing phenomenon in South Africa, but entirely understandable. The black leaders who are free from race prejudice are subject to attack by these young rebels."

"There is too much complacency among a large section of the white population," says Dr. Reuling but on the other hand he feels that "reports coming to America do not give full recognition to those white South Africans, Dutch and English alike, who on Christian, ethical and economic grounds have been waging a valiant battle against the forces of evil that are abroad. These folks are often discouraged by world criticism from America, Europe and Asia, which conveys the impression that every white South African stands over the colored African with a whip in his hands.

"It is gratifying to know that all responsible leaders of the non-white groups all representative organizations such as the African Congress, the Indian Congress, etc., have declared themselves to be for cooperation and against anti-whiteism and black nationalism. . . . They are fully aware of all that the liberal element of white South Africa is trying to do for them and for South Africa. . . . The liberal whites feel that they are not just 'doing something for the native people,' but that they are struggling for the welfare of the whole country realizing that freedom is indivisible."

Dr. Reuling bases his feeling that South Africa's problems will not be solved easily and that that country may well become a grave danger to the rest of the world, not alone on his own observances over the years, but on the statements, and actions, of responsible white South Africans who have been observing conditions first hand for a lifetime.

"All but those who for one reason or another are firmly committed to the principle of complete apartheid (separation of the races) express deep concern not only for their own future security, but also for the rights of the non-white peoples," he says.

For example, he cites a Johannesburg Rotary Club luncheon which he attended at which the Native Education Bill was being discussed. This Bill removed education of Africans from the control of the four Provinces and transferred it to the Union Government, not under the Union Education Department, but rather to a special department of Native Affairs.

"These white business and professional men, as hard-headed and practical as their American counterparts, held a lively discussion. Many were quick to point out injustices in the bill. Others protested the dangers of creating a 'state within a state' and of giving arbitrary powers to the Minister without any provision whatsoever for legal review."

In Durban recently the Medical Officer of Health reported that in Cato Manor, a small African location near Durban, 700 children under the ages of two would surely die of malnutrition before the end of this coming summer and thousands more have malformed bodies. "An appeal has been made to the United States Ambassador by Durban people to get a hundred tons or so of the powdered milk that the United States is giving away to other parts of the world."

In this agitated picture Christian churches and Christian missions are playing an important and significant part, Dr. Reuling points out, stating "The African section of the community sees these Christian missionaries rendering a real, urgently needed service, and is grateful. The European section sees a solid contribution being made to the whole country, stops to question, then admires and praises, and, in many instances, becomes involved itself, cooperating and developing increasing fellowship."

The problems of the great slum areas of Johannesburg are well known but Dr. Reuling points out another terrific economic problem, namely, the "rural slums." Thousands of communities, depopulated of men, who have gone to work in the cities, are left with only a few traders, farmers or teachers and the majority of the population women and children.

For these Christian rural missions are doing much under difficult and discouraging conditions. They teach better agriculture, provide through the churches social contacts, spiritual uplift and material help including instruction in child care, home hygiene, gardening and regular schools.

Rhodesia, says Mr. Reuling "is still a pioneer country, pioneer in the sense of white settlement, pioneer in the formation of a new and untried government, pioneer in the development of its indigenous people. . . . The Rhodesian government is doing

(Continued on page 9.)

Missions at Home and Abroad

Protestantism and the Philippines

"In August 1898 a few days after the occupation of Manila an American business man then in the city began religious services for protestants. It was the beginning of Evangelical Christianity in the Philippines which had known only Roman Catholicism for over 350 years. In August 1953, a little over half a century later, in the same city that had heard that first Evangelical sermon, two Filipino couples were commissioned as the first missionaries abroad," says Jose Jacinto of Silliman University, Dunaguate, Philippine Islands.

Since 1898 Philippine Protestantism has grown, with successes and failures, Mr. Jacinto points out, adding that there are many "challenging opportunities as well as problems with which Philippine Protestantism has had to cope."

The first and foremost task of the church is evangelism, Mr. Jacinto declares, adding that this task in the Philippines is beset by peculiar problems. "First of all, the difficulty of communication, both spacially and evangelization. We still have places ideologically, hinders the progress of in the archipelago which are inaccessible to the outside world."

Another problem is that of the great percentage of the Filipino people who do not know how to read and write and the need of more literature of the right kind.

"It may seem strange to you here in America that there is religious persecution, both passive and active, of the Protestants in the Philippines. Political Roman Catholicism is on the move toward discrediting the Protestant voice in the islands while ingratiating themselves with the rulers of state. The question of religious instruction in public education is being revived and their proponents are bringing pressure to bear on the legislature to make religious instruction compulsory. Protestants must be aware that tolerance is not enough, if it means that our cause will be trampled by inimical forces. Evangelism is a positive answer to the need of the higher allegiance for the common man of the Philippines."

A great problem connected with evangelism in the Philippines is that of indigenous leadership, says Mr. Jacinto, adding that to this and education in Protestant schools and colleges is aimed. While the growth of schools under Protestant auspices is encouraging, they are predominately small and hard pressed for funds. Mr. Jacinto believes that "leadership in the future Philippines will depend upon the quality of products that Protestant schools turn out." Above all there must be evangelization and penetration of the whole life by the spirit and gospel of Jesus Christ.

A second great need in Philippine Protestantism is that of churchmanship. As too often occurs in other lands Protestants are so tolerant that they become indifferent to their responsibilities toward the Gospel. "... inspired and inspiring leadership from among the ranks of Filipino churches will go a long way toward the realization of the goal."

Mexican Government Forces Obedience

After years of bullying and open defiance by the Vatican authorities, the Mexican Government has at last forced the hierarchy to obey the law and does not hesitate to prosecute those of its creatures who, following the hierarchy's example, also attempt to flout its edicts.

The Mexico City correspondent of The Christian Century briefly outlined the facts. In Tepeji del Rio, in the State of Hidalgo, a mob destroyed a Protestant chapel while the police and other local authorities looked the other way. Most of those who took part in the disorder worked in La Josefina, a nearby manufacturing plant. The Roman Catholic extremists had demanded that Protestant workers be discharged and that Protestant worship in Tepeji be suppressed. As both of these demands were contrary to law, they were refused. The extremists then took the law into their own hands and threatened to drive the Protestants out of town, whereupon the latter appealed to the mayor, who refused to help them.

Upon being furnished with the particulars, however, the Hidalgo State authorities were ordered by the Federal Ministry of Government (the State Department) to proceed to the protection of the complainants. Action was delayed, however, and the Protestants fled the town. Immediately Federal troops established order in Tepeji, and both civil and military officials arrived to investigate the incident. The Hidalgo Attorney General then forced the discharge of the three ringleaders from La Josefina, and the Undersecretary of National Property instituted suit against mob members for deliberate destruction of government property, a proper step, because in Mexico all church buildings are owned by the government.

The new national administration in Mexico is unwilling to overlook open violations of the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom. Under former regimes, more than 1,000 applications for the establishment of Protestant chapels and other places of public worship had been quietly ignored. Government permission is necessary in order to open them, but the official in charge explained that "on orders from above" he had neither approved nor rejected the applications. Had they been rejected, the applicants could then have appealed to the Supreme Court.

The new Minister of Government has informed his subordinate that, from this time forward, there will be no "orders from above" to put aside applications for chapels, and the Protestants there feel that at last they may be sure of receiving fair treatment from the authorities. The power of the Roman Catholic Church appears to have been broken.

—Scottish Rite News.

The Timeless in Christianity

Now that we seem to be moving into a new age, in many quarters Christianity is being assailed as an outworn relic of the past, an obstacle in the path of progress. In some lands the very existence of Christianity is threatened.

Yet the history of the past nineteen centuries contains a record of the fashion in which Christianity has broken out afresh and with enhanced power after each major age of transition. This is because there is within Christianity that which meets the continuing needs of men.

—Kenneth Scott Latourette.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

"The Christian Sun"

There is one encouraging thing about our church paper and its future, it seems to be on the minds and hearts of our people. Wherever you go, somebody is asking, "What about THE CHRISTIAN SUN; how are we going to finance it?" These are questions to be considered. They are important questions. The right answer to these questions is essential to the continuance of our church paper. No one could ever begin to estimate the value of the printing press and of the United States Postal System. When information is put to print, it is of little value, unless it is delivered to those for whom it was intended.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been one of the most, if not the most potent factor in the extension and development of our church in the South. In a real sense, it has been the medium of all the church's undertakings. It was through the pages of THE CHRISTIAN SUN that the church was moved to necessarily adventure and to organize our people for the sending of the gospel to the ends of the earth. THE CHRISTIAN SUN was the principal agitation for an educated ministry, a trained laity, and the founding of Elon College. It was through the pages of THE CHRISTIAN SUN that information was carried to our people concerning unfortunate children among us which resulted in the founding and the building of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College. Truly, THE CHRISTIAN SUN has provided the information, pointed the way, inspired our people to great undertakings to meet the needs of the day, administer to the unfortunate and to carry the gospel to all who are without Christ.

When we think of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, our church paper, the need it has met and the services it has rendered, we realize what a debt we owe to such a periodical. It may have its faults, it does have its shortcomings, it is without necessary funds but nevertheless, it is ours and it has rendered a great service. To the ones of us who love our church and believe in its future, it is impossible to think of conducting a program of education, information, and inspiration, without the columns of our church paper. It costs money to print it and to circulate it. It always has, it always will. It may cost more money in the future than it has in the past, but the need for the periodical is correspondingly greater. Whatever the cost, somehow, the cost must be met. It must be met by the church people. We can't hope for it to be met from any other source. To keep THE CHRISTIAN SUN going to the homes of our people and to keep the bills paid promptly, the active participation and complete co-operation will be required of all of us. It is time to stop considering if we shall be able to continue to print THE CHRISTIAN SUN but instead begin to discover and lay plans for its financial support, that there shall be no cessation in publishing it. It is the privilege, opportunity, and responsibility of our pastors and local church officials. By working together and giving cooperatively, we can finance our church paper.

High-School Drinking Report Reveals Startling Facts

Approximately 90 per cent of high school students in Nassau County, New York, drink alcoholic beverages. And 79 per cent were drinking "on occasion" by the time they were 14 years of age.

These figures are part of what is probably the first extensive and scientific report on high-school drinking. The report was developed by Dr. Matthew N. Chappell, psychology head at Nassau County's Hofstra College in response to a request and grant of $10,000 for the study from a private foundation. First reports of the survey appeared in the March 1954, Better Homes and Gardens.

Do the figures reflect a national average? Probably not, since Nassau County cannot be typed as "typical." It is a rich suburban county with an average family income that is more than $1,000 over the national median.

However, many of the findings parallel those in the Yale University report on student drinking in 27 colleges across the country, and thus it may indicate national trends.

Most telling point of the survey, which is substantiated by almost all studies, lays the major responsibility for teen-age drinking directly on the parents. The survey definitely indicates that the child of abstaining parents tends to abstain and the child of drinking parents tends to drink. The conclusion is supported by Dr. Chappell who says "Nothing is clearer in modern society than the fact that children will resemble parents in attitudes, values and behavior."

Interviewers questioned 1,000 students between the ages of 14 and 18. Group interviews were held at 29 of Nassau County's 31 public and private high schools. Groups were divided about equally as to sexes and background, and each student answered 47 detailed questions.

Some of the findings:

Girls drank more hard liquor than boys, but boys consumed more alcohol per person when beer is included.

By age sixteen, 90 per cent of those questioned were drinking on occasion. Older students tended to drink more per individual but there was no increase in the number of drinkers in the age brackets above 16. In fact, a slight decline was revealed. This would seem to indicate that the majority of young people (in Nassau) who decided to drink do so before they are 16 years of age and a few decide to quit later on.

Generally parents wanted their children to drink at home. While 95 per cent of the parents allowed their 18 year-olds to drink at home, only 84 per cent permitted them to drink elsewhere.

One factor which would tend to indicate the Nassau County survey would not give a national norm, was that 95 per cent of the parents of the young people questioned drank, and 93 per cent kept liquor stocks in their homes.

Adding weight to the parental influence theory, the survey found almost all of the children of frequent drinkers were frequent drinkers; while 52 per cent of the children of abstaining parents were themselves abstainers. It was also discovered that children of non-drinkers consumed only about half as much as children of drinking parents.

About one-third of the students did more drinking away from home than their parents knew about. About a third of the group gave alcohol beverage parties while their

(Continued on page 15.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Spring District Rallies of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference of the

PROGRAM

Thirty-Fourth Annual Session

March 23, 24, 25, 1954

10:30 o'clock

THEME: "A World Christian Fellowship."

Prelude

Call to Worship—Mrs. R. E. Brittle

Service of Devotion—Mrs. Clyde Fields

Superintendent's Message

Recognition Service

Appointment of Committees

Special Music—Mrs. George D. Alley

Address—Miss Margaret Hargrove,

Executive Secretary National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women

Offering

Announcements

Hymn

Benediction

Afternoon Session.

Hymn

Prayer

Open Forum

Business

Closing Meditation

Superintendents and Places of Meeting.

March 23—Waverly District, Spring Hill, Mrs. Frank Sodomka, Superintendent

March 24—Suffolk District, Union, Southampton, Mrs. L. H. Wilroy, Superintendent

March 25—Norfolk District, Bay View, Mrs. C. V. Hargrove, Superintendent

* * * * *

Our Rally Speaker

Miss Margaret Hargrove, National Secretary of Woman's Work for the Congregational Christian Churches, will make her first visit to the Southern Convention since assuming that office in 1951. We are delighted that the person who is responsible for leadership in our field of work can be with us. We knew well and loved her predecessor, Mrs. Berta McClintock, and our women are looking forward to the opportunity of seeing and hearing Miss Hargrove.

Her work includes the organization and direction of over 700,000 of our women in 45 state conferences from coast to coast. She is the editor of Guide Post and is responsible for other publications for women in our denomination.

Miss Hargrove has her doctor of philosophy degree, but prefers "Miss" to "Doctor." She is a native of Louisville, Kentucky, who graduated from Randolph-Macon Woman's College, has her master's and doctor's degree from Cornell University and has done additional work at the University of Virginia, the University of Wisconsin and Columbia. She has been a college professor, a dean, and a national Red Cross executive.

MISS MARGARET HARGROVE

Since accepting work with our denomination, Miss Hargrove has traveled abroad, attending the International Congregational Council meeting in Scotland, at which time she was guest speaker in London before the Assembly of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. She also visited the work of the Congregational Christian Service Committee, including College Cevenol in France, public health work in Italy and Pierce College in Athens, Greece.

She feels that women should take their places in church work on the basis of qualification and not just because they are women. "Women's work in the church is not something separate, but rather a part of the total church," she declares. "I like to think of men and women as citizens of the Commonwealth of God with equal rights and equal responsibilities."

We shall be delighted to welcome Margaret Hargrove to the Southern Convention.

* * * * *

Bayview Activities Include Kindergarten

We are joyous in the Bayview Congregational Christian Church to welcome our new minister, Rev. Harry Titeombe, and his lovely family into our midst. We gave the Titeombes a reception on February 21 and served homemade cakes, cookies and punch in one of the newly decorated rooms of the Educational Building. Even the children were happy to be part of the welcoming group and entertained Elaine, Timothy, and Paul with their own little reception in the kindergarten room.

Because of the absence of a full-time minister this past year, we have felt a deep responsibility toward our church, and have put our shoulders to the wheel in a concerned effort to make this a successful and fruitful year.

We organized a daily kindergarten which now employs two full-time teachers and provides transportation to pick up our little pupils. We have sent many coupons to the orphanage; sent $30 to Puerto Rico for a goat; served a turkey dinner in November and held a big bazaar. We have been steadily improving the appearance of the rooms in the new Educational Building by adding pictures, carpets, curtains and draperies. We have also had our cross, candlesticks and eagles refinished to add new splendor to the altar.

Almost fifty percent of our ladies of the Fellowship represented us at the fall rally of the Eastern Virginia Conference in Franklin, and we are now busily preparing to hold the spring rally at Bayview. We helped celebrate World Community Day by giving a blanket to Church World Service; and carried out the program suggested in the packet for our December Christmas party. We entertained our husbands at our party and had a gay evening of fun and games and fellowship. We were hostesses for several neighboring churches on World Day of Prayer. We are making plans for the showing of "The Hidden Heart" in April.

With the stimulus of our new pastor, there is much enthusiasm among our members, and we are happy to be well underway in our work for this year.

MRS. MARGERY FUSON,
Corresponding Secretary.

* * * * *

World Day of Prayer at Pleasant Ridge

A very meaningful World Day of Prayer service was held at Pleasant Ridge Church on March 5 by the missionary societies of Pleasant Ridge and Spoon's Chapel Christian Churches and Holly Springs Friends Meeting.

Miss Sarah Chakko, who wrote the service for the 1954 observance, passed away at the first of the year. She had been president of Isabella Thoburn College, located at Lucknow, India.

The theme was "That They May Have Life." Mrs. Sybrant Pell was program leader and Mrs. Quinton Hicks, pianist. Rev. Max Vestal opened the service by reading the hymn "Praise Ye the Lord, the Almighty," followed by prayer by Rev. Waldo Woody. "O Worship the King" was sung by the congregation.

Those taking part in the "Act of Praise" were Mrs. Sybrant Pell, Mrs. Herman Pell, Mrs. Colbert Allen, and Mrs. J. C. Newell. A trio, composed of Miss Kitty Lee Cox, Miss Emma Allen, and Miss Velma Allen, sang a beautiful hymn.

Mrs. Ernest Scott was leader of the "Act of Penitence," a responsive reading.

"Words of Assurance" was led by Mrs. Sybrant Pell with Mrs. Harry Stewart, Miss Shirley Lowdermilk, Mrs. Jimmy Scott, and Mrs. Earl Lowdermilk participating.

Mrs. Waldo Woody led the "Intercession" with moments of silent prayer. Rev. Allie Kemp then led in prayer.

The Rev. Waldo Woody led the offering prayer. The offering will aid American Indians, low-income farm communities, and migrants. It will also go toward Christian literature in India, Burma, Japan, Egypt, Africa, and Latin America, and toward helping 30,000 foreign students in the United States and education of Christian leaders in India, Pakistan, Japan, China, and Korea.

The "Act of Dedication" was led by Mrs. Sybrant Pell, and the congregation sang "Now the Day is Over."

The Rev. Allie Kemp pronounced the benediction and the service came DAWN.

I love the gentle stillness
Of the early morning hours;
The air made pure and fragrant
By dew's life-giving showers;
The flowers that were drooping
So sadly yester'en
Now bravely lift their lovely heads
To greet the day again.
The clouds are turning golden,
The leaves begin to stir,
As morn, with rosy fingers,
Beckons day to follow her.
Bright wings go flashing by us,
The birds are all awake
And ready for their matins,
As the day begins to break.
We listen to their carols
And seem to hear them say
"Thank God for night's refreshing
And a beautiful new day."

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

ENVIRONMENT.

One day I chanced beside a stagnant pool,
Reeking its poison. Upon its foul bosom
A water lily bloomed in all its purity,
Emitting its fragrance.
As I gazed upon this miracle
I thought of the little Maid of Domremy,
Who, in the darkest of the dark ages,
When hope had fled and courage was unknown,
Listened to the heavenly voices,
Obeyed their call,
And led to victory the arms of France.
Still further musing, I saw the Holy Spirit
Brooding o'er this wicked world, and I knew
That one imbued by Him could pass
Through temptations dire, and be immune,
Even as the water lily on the stagnant pool.

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

GOD'S LOVE.

O, Welcome dawn
That brings the light
Of day, new-washed
By dews of night.

It brings to us
Each blessed morn,
A page all white;
New hope is born.
Hear Mercy's voice,

In sweet refrain,
" 'Tis blotted out
Now try again."

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

REGRETS.

Regrets are always futile;
A temptation dire;
Just a place to wallow,
With feet fast in the mire.

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

to a prayerful end to the softly played hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

RUTH NEWELL,
Reporter.

DR REULING REPORTS ON SOUTH AFRICA.

(Continued from page 5.)

everything that it can to help the African people develop.

"There are vast land reclamation projects, irrigation schemes, urban housing projects, public health schemes and ever increasing grants to missions in aid of hospitals and schools. But the total productivity of the country, in relation to the population, is still low, and there just isn't enough money to meet needs. The only direct taxation on Africans is $2.80 per adult male and even this is a tremendously heavy burden on most. . . . Industry is still in the infant stages, although growing. Outside capital is urgently needed. Taxes on industry are the only source of revenue to meet the growing overall needs of the country," says Dr. Reuling.

"The great majority of the people is still primitive, pagan, steeped in fear and ignorance, believing in witchcraft and unable to perform anything but the most ordinary type of unskilled labor," said Dr. Reuling, adding, however, "a very impressive thing is the growth of African owned and managed stores and shops. The African has long been accused of having no financial sense, but many of these little businesses are prospering, to the general benefit of the whole area."

"It is heartening to see the growth of the Christian and the educated community, for the most part, the Christian group is the educated group in Africa. New homes, better care of children, improved tillage of fields, the entrance by Africans into the field of skilled labor, full support by Africans of their own Christian ministers, voluntary contributions to the building of village schools, are all signs of helpful growth," says Dr. Reuling.

He found the vitality of the Christian churches increasing and though the earnest Christians are still greatly outnumbered by those in paganism, the churches are facing their problems realistically and with courage. "A few real leaders, capable of receiving the highest professional training (not available in their country) are emerging and it is one of our major tasks to see that they get training and integrate them into the total work."

In Angola, Africa, Dr. Reuling found one of the strongest and most
(Continued on page 15.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

That Sweet Story of Old

There is a children's hymn which is dear to every child and also dear to all lovers of childhood and children. It is "That Sweet Story of Old." It tells us about God's Son and how he loved little children when he was on earth. Do you know the story of how it came to be written? The author, Miss Jemima Thompson, wasn't sitting quietly in her study when she wrote or composed the words, but was traveling in an old-fashioned stage coach over rough English country roads.

It was just about two years before she married the Rev. Samuel Luke, that Miss Thompson, a young lady of Islington, England, went to learn the system of teaching which was used there. While at this school she met Mary Moffat, who was to become the wife of David Livingston, the courageous explorer and missionary to Africa. In the marching pieces of music, which she heard played while at the school, there was one which immediately caught Miss Thompson's fancy. It was the beautiful old Greek air, "Salamis."

"What a lovely children's hymn that would make, if I could find the right words for it," she thought. So, she searched through many books of poems for children but none of the poems quite fitted the music.

Not many days afterward Miss Thompson took the stage coach to go on some missionary business several miles away. The morning was a beautiful one in spring. She was the only passenger in the coach for the first hour of her journey. Once more the old melody started running through her mind. Right there in the coach, in spite of its joltings, she thought of the words which have come to be loved as much in our country as they are in her own.

Upon her return home she taught the hymn to her Sunday school class. Her class sang the song that Sunday morning for the worship service. Her father who was superintendent of the Sunday school, the next day, sent her song to The Sunday School Magazine without Jemima's knowing it. The magazine published it—so we love it and sing it today.

Spectatoritis

By MABLE-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"What do you have a piano for, Marjory?" Mr. Ransom's father asked, looking over at the closed instrument.

"Why—" His daughter-in-law hesitated. "Well, I used to play, but, well, we could get such wonderful music on the radio—much better than anything I could ever produce—so, as a result, I stopped playing."

Mrs. Ransom, Jr., liked her husband's father immensely. He was so gentle and understanding and often offered in a casual, sugar-coated way some wise advice that helped her with the children. She had a feeling that he had something in mind now.

"One of my pleasantest recollections," he went on, setting his glasses more firmly on his nose, "is standing around our old piano while Mother played for us. How we did sing! Old songs and new songs. Hymns, folk songs—all kinds."

"I know," Marjory said eagerly. "We did, too. I can see Daddy yet. He couldn't carry a tune, but I believe he enjoyed it more than anyone else. He would stand up behind Joan—my sister who did the accompanying—hook his thumbs in his vest and just let go!"

Father Ransom laughed gently. "You didn't have to have an expensive musical education to join in those family sings," he said.

They both were silent for a few moments, each thinking back to those happy days. "It's different now," Marjory remarked. "The youngsters settle themselves before the radio and get their entertainment that way."

"I read an article once," said Father Ransom thoughtfully, "that made quite an impression on me. It was to the effect that the American people were afflicted with spectatoritis. They sit on benches and watch groups playing baseball, football, basket ball, and all the other sports. They go to concerts and let trained musicians entertain them. They go to movies—" He looked earnestly at his daughter-in-law, "The point is Marjory, they are merely spectators. They're not experiencing the joy of doing things themselves. They let comparatively small groups express themselves, do the creating. And that isn't right. Our people should be doing things themselves."

"I see what you mean," responded Marjorie. "Even if one can't play, sing, paint, or write like professionals, he should, nevertheless, for relaxation, do whatever gives him enjoyment. It will make his life richer and more satisfying. I believe that applies particularly to children."

Father Ransom nodded his head slowly, pleased that he had put his point across. "You're a good girl, Marjory," he commented as he stood up to go, "and a good mother."

That evening Marjory Ransom wandered casually to the piano, lifted the lid and began to play. Little Roger ran over to her immediately and sat on the bench beside her, watching her fingers on the keys. Ten-year-old Lynette deserted her book. Then her husband came sauntering over. "Play When I Get Too Old to Dream," he suggested.

Before long they were all singing away enjoyably, maybe not making excellent music, but having a grand time.

"That was fun Mummy," said Lynette. "Let's do it again."

"Do it again," echoed Roger.

"We surely will," promised their mother, resolving they would have Father Ransom present next time. He would be delighted to know how members of the family were reacting to this antidote for spectatoritis.

"The Springtime of the Soul"

Someone has called Lent "The Springtime of the Soul." Indeed, it can be just that, if we use the challenge and opportunity of this meaningful season to enrich our spiritual lives and to increase our devotion to our Lord. Lent is the time of remembrance of the passion of Christ for the souls of men. It is a time of remembrance of his suffering and death in our behalf. It is the prelude to the glory of his resurrection, the time of victory over death. If Lent can bring us closer to Christ and to one another, it will be for us "The Springtime of our Souls."

When we consider the matchless love of God for us as it is revealed in Jesus Christ, we cannot but want to do more for him, both in service and

(Continued on page 14.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Youth Activities in Minnesota

Several days ago, Curtis Young gave me a letter which he had received from a group of young people in Minnesota. The letter told of their activities and what they were doing in their young people's group. We thought it would be of interest to our young people to know what was going on in other parts of the country. Here is the letter as he received it.

* * *

Carleton College,
Northfield, Minnesota.

Dear Curt,

I thought you might be interested in seeing the enclosed Lenten Devotional which our Carleton U. S. F. group worked on this year. It has rather grown from the mimeographed booklet I sent you last year. As the National Faith Commission of U. S. F. asked us to do it on a national basis, 1700 copies were printed and will go to U. S. F. groups throughout the country. We're very proud of it. Our Dean of the Chapel here, David Stone, who is a former American Board Missionary to China and later minister of the First Church in Berkeley, Calif., helped us with it. He is just tremendous.

This has continued to be a busy year but one which I have enjoyed so much. I love advising the P. F. We only have 15 members but our attendance averages 15, so they are all active. We made $22.50 at a bake sale yesterday and plan another work week this spring. We made $60 at the last one. Our P. F. assisted in the church service on Youth Sunday and in the evening, the minister explained the meaning of Communion and administered it to the young people. We also had a Parents Night in January at which Ed. Field, state advisor, spoke and showed slides on the meaning of P. F. This afternoon we're meeting with the Methodist Young People. We may use the Sunrise Services outlined in P. F. Program News as part of our interdenominational service on Easter.

Campus things keep me busy too, planning of worship services for weekly and extra services during Lent. Tuesday I am leading the 20 minute chapel service for the college again. I'm speaking on Brotherhood in connection with February as Brotherhood Month. Music occupies so much time too, church and chapel choir plus three hours practice a day (2 voice and 1 organ). Must put out another M. C. S. F. newsletter this week also.

Suppose you'll be going to National Council. I'll probably be canvassing or working in a camp for underprivileged people near Chicago.

Hope you enjoy the devotional.

In fellowship,

MARY M. NELSON.

* * * * *

Lenten Devotional

Editor's Note: Here is one of the devotionals of the book of Lenten Devotionals that the group of Carleton College in Minnesota worked on. This was mentioned in the above letter to Curt Young from that group.

BEHOLD MY SERVANT SHALL PROSPER.

"No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will be devoted to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon." Luke 16:13.

In our serving the masters of wealth, fame, and material happiness we lose sight of the real Master of our lives. Life becomes perverted from the way God intended it if we seek material blessings as ends instead of as instruments toward serving God.

A Christian finds himself faced constantly with a great sensitivity towards money and possessions. We want a pair of cord pants, a velvet purse, or a classical record for our library. We have the money to spend. Yet, we stop and wonder whether someone else doesn't need the money for something really essential. Rules don't help us make these decisions, for every situation is unique. Christian love must be spontaneous and free from rules and regulations.

God has shown us the way out of this predicament through Jesus Christ. By becoming devoted servants to the Master of our lives,

Jesus Christ, we will have a new purpose for our possessions.

Vinoba Bhave, the spiritual heir of Gandhi in India today, is a servant of the Lord. In 1953, Vinoba decided to help the poor in India acquire land of their own. Walking a thousand miles from his home near Wardha to Delhi, he awakened landowners in every town to the need of the poor. These men responded by giving over a million acres of land to local land committees for distribution to landless people.

When God has mastery over our lives we can live fully. If God be for us, who can be against us! With the single purpose of serving our Lord, our way will be clear and our purpose plain.

Prayer: Our Father, use us, Thy servants. Amen.

Group Project,
Mankato Teacher's College.

The Tragedy of Quitting the Church

The church seems sometimes to be the easiest of all things to quit. A social ripple, a fancied inattention, a difference of opinion, or a decrease in interest becomes an occasion for the surrender of membership. Disagreement with the pastor or a dislike of his style brings up the question of non-attendance upon the services. When the political campaign years come around, the churches nearly always lose some members. Defense of a national party becomes to a few people a thing more to be observed and cherished than continuance in a church. Sometimes there is a man who will stay in his bank or company or firm or lodge or club whatever the heat of discussion among the members, but let his church brethren oppose his political views, and he is in a rage. He shows he holds his religious contacts cheaper than others. The life of his spirit, which he should regard above all other things, falls into neglect, and he becomes embittered, prayerless, and, sometimes, profane. He has fallen out with his church, and the moorings of his soul are loosened. He may be aware that his case is tragic, but he blames not himself. The traditions of family religion are violated, the sweet ties of neighborliness are severed, memories of holy hours at the altar are hushed, and the agitated man takes his way into strange associations.

(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Jesus Strengthens His Disciples"

LESSON XIII—MARCH 28, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "When the Spirit of truth comes, he will guide you into all the truth." John 16: 13.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 15-16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Acts 2: 1-4, 33, 37-39.

The Things He Had Said.

Jesus was about to leave his disciples and to go away. He knew what lay before him, but they did not know. He knew what a terrible shock his death would be, especially the manner of his death. He also knew human nature all too well, and he knew what would happen to his disciples after his death. He wanted to strengthen them, to encourage them and prepare them for what lay ahead. "All this have I said to you to keep you from falling away" or "to keep you from stumbling." He told them what his enemies would do to them, why they would do it, and what the disciples were to do when they did it. "They will put you out of the synagogues"—they would be cut off from the fellowship of believers, they would be denied the rights and privileges of their ancient faith, they would be shut out as outsiders of the household of faith. Excommunication from the synagogue—there could be nothing much worse than that to the devout Jew. But more. They would be killed, after suffering torture and being excommunicated. The thing that would make it even worse was the fact that the people who did this would think that they were actually doing God a favor, that they were offering service to God. This was true, not only of the disciples; it was true of thousands of Christ's followers through the centuries. The torturers of the Inquisition during the Middle Ages thought they were doing God a favor in killing heretics!

And why would folks do these horrid things? Because "they have not known the Father or me," said Jesus. They did not know the heart of the Father or the spirit of love which filled his heart.

Jesus goes on to say that he has told his disciples "all this," especially the words recorded in John 14, 15 and 16, so that when this hour did come, they might "remember that I told you of them." Forewarned is often forearmed. No telling what might have happened if Jesus had not forewarned his disciples what was about to happen. It was bad enough as it was. But when the fires of persecution and opposition did come, they were prepared for it, they came out victorious.

The Things He Had Not Said.

"I did not say these things to you from the beginning, because I was with you." The fact is, he could not have said them at the beginning. It would have been too great a shock, too much for the men to receive and to bear. But the hour had come when he must tell them. So gently, lovingly, he tells them that his death is not far off, and that they must go on without him. He has to tell them. Their hearts were filled with sorrow because he was going away.

Then amazingly enough to them it must have seemed, he told them that it was to their advantage that he was going away. Thus far they had depended upon his physical presence. He wanted to prepare them to depend upon his spiritual presence. They were sure of him when they could see him. He wanted them to feel sure that he was with them when they could not see him. Suppose Jesus had continued to live in the flesh in the Holy Land. How limited would have been his contacts with, and influence upon men! It was only as his personal appearance was withdrawn from their sight that they could feel his spiritual presence at work in their hearts. The ministry of Jesus would have been defeated if he had gone on living in the flesh.

If he went away in the flesh, he would come again in the Spirit. That Spirit would convict the world of sin, and righteousness and judgment. Of sin, because sin is essentially unbelief—the Holy Spirit alone can reveal sin in its true nature. Of righteousness, because the Holy Spirit alone can reveal the true righteousness of God. Of judgment, because the Holy Spirit expressly reveals the judgment of God against all sin, and brings men under the fear of judgment. It is the Holy Spirit which convicts and condemns "the ruler of this world." The Holy Spirit is "the present tense of God" as Dr. Lucecock says. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of God and of Christ, everywhere available and everywhere active in the world here and now.

The Things He Could Not Say.

"I have yet many things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now." As Moody once said, "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." There were many things which Jesus wanted to tell his disciples, but they just were not ready for them, they just could not have taken them. Thus was his grace and gentleness expressed. It is still characteristic of the loving Heavenly Father. Suppose he did tell us all the things that were going to happen to us! We could hardly bear the good things. It is certainly true that we could not bear the bad things. Furthermore here is the promise that God has more light for us and more truth for us, and new insights for us, and new revelations for us. His Holy Spirit will guide us into all truth for he will speak out of himself but of God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

"And he will declare to you the things that are to come." Here is the statement that revelation had not been closed, that there was new truth to break forth from God's Word as Pastor Robinson said when he bade farewell to the Pilgrims, that there are fresh insights to be gained, that God still leads his people on. For those with open minds and responsive hearts God still makes known his purpose and his power.

The mistake so many people make is in thinking of the historic Jesus instead of developing friendship for and fellowship with, the living, present Christ. The gist of the lesson today is that in all experiences of life, its joys, its sorrows, its successes and its failures, its temptations and its trials, its gains and its losses, its heartaches and its heartbreaks, its discouragements and defeats, its losses and its loneliness, its confusions and its indecisions, God is, through his Holy Spirit, here and now available, to guide, to comfort, to cheer, to forgive, to strengthen, to console, to comfort, to convict, to convert, to help and to heal. The Comforter is come, the Counselor is come, the Christ is come.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Watchmen of Israel

A Sermon

By DR. RICHARD K. MORTON.

The Christian faith is proclaimed and spread in our times by ministries—ministries of the word and of the hand and the heart. It is carried forward by great and varied company of the priesthood—the priesthood of all who believe on his name, who love him, and who serve him. We are all ministers, and we all have a part in serving the people of God.

In our Congregational Christian fellowship and tradition we place no high fences around our clergy, and we do not look only to them for spiritual insight and power. The Holy Spirit is manifest, at times, to all of us, even the humblest and the least gifted and the least worthy.

We have a priestly function, rather than a priestly class. We do not depend upon a laying-on of hands as much as we do upon what is laid upon our hearts and what illuminates our souls. What we have does not have to be handed down in a special way in order to be handed on in a glorious way. Ours is a priesthood, an inclusive fellowship, and it is a priesthood, a holy priesthood—and is a priesthood of all believers.

In the prophecy of Ezekial (3:4), "the voice of one that spake" said: "Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them." And again (verse 17): "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warnings from me." And, in verse 22: "And the hand of the Lord was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, go forth into the plain, and I will there talk with thee."

Whatever the circumstances of the original context of these verses, they have a tremendous significance for us today in their present form. All the ministers of the Lord, all the inclusive company of the priesthood of the beloved, need to be listening to the voice of God and to be reassuring themselves that they do God's will. They need to go with enthusiasm and a sense of urgent mission, to the house of modern Israel, to all people who need God, and speak his word. This means that they must often go down from the high places of power and insight and triumph, unto the uninviting and often perilous plains. And it is there that many find that God will speak to them most poignantly and most commandingly. We cannot always be dealing with the dramatic and popular aspects of religion, for it is in the plains that the need is greatest. We have a word to speak. We have a kind of life to live. We have a ministry to perform. We have a new society to construct.

In some ways, I think that there are two major phases in the Christian life. The first has to do with the awakening or conversion to Christian truth and power. The second deals with the undertaking of one's chosen and fitting ministry in his name. We are "watchmen unto the house of Israel."

We are not watchmen simply because we serve from pulpit instead of pew or from seminary classroom instead of work bench. We are not watchmen simply because we accept some set of principles or affiliate with some organization, even the Church of Christ. We are watchmen and people of God when we serve as well as believe, sacrifice as well as pray, and possess the power of the Holy Spirit within us as well as claim association with that which connects us with the heritage of the past.

We are watchmen, in pulpit or pew, when we have the spirit of the Alabama football player who was "so full of Alabama" that he sprang from his bench to tackle an opposing runner passing near him on the field. We have a ministry when we respond in the way described by young Episcopal Bishop Gordon of Alaska, a plane pilot in his own right, who says: "There is an unwritten law in the North that, when one man is down, all stop what they are doing and go out to find him!" That word rings and pounds in my ears. What a missionary challenge! What a call to the ministry. Men and women are down everywhere, lost, bewildered, friendless, overburdened. We must all stop what we are doing—no matter who or what we are—and go out to find them!

It was very interesting to many of us to read that in connection with the Berlin Olympic games, a relay of torch-bearers conveyed a flame from the site of the original ancient games to the Berlin stadium, opening those modern contests. What the church is doing in the name of Christ is in some respects like a relay race. The torch must be passed along and kept aflame. The task of Christ in the world cannot be consummated by some new caste of Levites nor by the learning of some new class of Pharisees. It must be completed by the efforts of all of us, working together, praying, loving, serving, courageously and consecratedly living.

Watchmen of Israel, watch with keenness and diligence. Having watched, go out into the plains. Speak the words of God, not just some commentary of your own. Go into the fields of need and anxiety and stress and bring the comfort and hope that is in God!

Construction engineers in a certain community were lamenting, the other day, that so often roads are built poorly and of poor material, whereas they ought to be built to endure for 50 years. I am afraid that the same error is often made in our religious affairs. We do not build for endurance. We satisfy the whims and desires of the moment. We do not watch for the guidance of God, we say words we think men want to hear and will reward us handsomely for repeating in their hearing. Or we stay loftily upon the hills, proclaiming some selfish arrogance of our own littleness, ignoring the divine word we should carry to the plains!

Watchmen of our modern Israel, in the name of Christ must have clear vision and do much long and patient watching! Then they must make their perilous and often unrewarding way to the plains and deliver what the voice within tells them to say. How great is the joy and how deep the responsibility of one who is watchman of Israel! How carefully he must weigh his words. How humbly he must search his heart. How fully he must love his hearers, and how much time he must spend with his Lord!

Watchmen of the Pilgrim tradition, accept the glorious challenge of your ministry. Watch from the towers, that you may with power descend to the plains. Develop your priesthood not from some churchly

(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

The church has under its charge and care 81 children. Circumstances such as make it necessary for a home to be provided them as homeless have placed them in the hands of the church.

To me that is a great challenge, a great opportunity. In every ease they need to be taught, and loved, and given a sense of security and being wanted. They need to be shown the love of God, and encouraged to give him their hearts.

Some of them will be kept only so long as they are "best off" here. When it is possible for them to be given a private home and more personal attention and rearing they are given the new home. Frequently our service is only for a year or so. Always it is with the thought that we have a real opportunity to help a little girl or boy find himself and have his or her feet set in the right direction.

Some of the children find this their home through the most beautiful years of their childhood until they reach the age of 18. They come to be leaders on the campus, a part of "our family" and their is an esprit de corps that is a blessing to all concerned. Mainly on them our records of achievement rest. They return on occasion and proudly tell of the "time when."

However, the church deserves just as much credit for the less spectacular task of taking in some needy child and helping them with all the blessings we are able to offer them for a few months or for a year or two.

In either case your church has a glorious opportunity to show its compassion and care for needy youth—helpless children—homeless boys and girls. Your church may take a just pride in the work being done for these boys and girls here. I look on it as being a real challenge not only to the church but to me as the church's representative to do my best for every child here. I know them each one personally, and try to see to it that they have in me a friend on whom they may rely for whatever they really need. That is the spirit of our matrons and workers. And that is the spirit of our board of trustees. The records show that you feel that way, too. Your voluntary gifts amount to considerable every year. Nobody forces you to contribute, and yet out of your kind hearts and consideration of this enterprise of your church you make this home possible. I thank you.

I covet your prayers, your goodwill and whenever you can spare them your gifts. I want to make this institution what I believe you would want it to be, and do the work which I believe you would want me to do. We are praying that we shall have good seasons this year and that we can make a good record. Thank you for your help.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 11, 1954. Commodities for the Week.

Coupons:
Mrs. Elmer Wileox, Braintree, Mass.
Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.
Mrs. Inez Darden Harrell, Holland, Va.
Clothing:
Miss Margaret Alston, Henderson, N. C.
Mrs. T. G. Proctor, Sanford, N. C.
Mrs. James C. Beale, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. J. W. Holland, Newport News, Va.
Mrs. Inez Darden Harrell, Holland, Va.
Glasses:
Johnson's Grove Church, Courtland, Va.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 2,752.49
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans.) S. S. ...$ 37.80
Mt. Carmel S. S. 20.00
Rosemont 60.00
Oak Grove 10.00
Oakland S. S. 25.32
153.12
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Durham S. S.$ 23.95
Greensboro, Palm St., for furnace 33.50
Mebane 5.00
Pleasant Ridge 24.00
86.45

Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Union$ 14.50
14.50
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.$ 2.00
Palmyra S. S. 3.00
Winchester S. S. 8.34
13.34

Total $ 267.41

Grand total $3,019.90

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 6,035.13
New Hope Christian Ch.,
Roanoke, Alabama ...$ 4.40
Miss Wilmer C. Holt, Burlington, N. C. 25.00
Mrs. Grace Remars, Burlington, N. C. 2.00
Mrs. Herbert Womack, Charlottesville, Va. ... 2.00
S. H. Basnight & Sons, Chapel Hill, N. C. ... 5.00
A friend 3.00
In Memory of Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Sr. 5.00
In Memory of Lloyd Bradshaw 2.00
In Memory of Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Sr. 5.00
In Memory of Lloyd Bradshaw 3.50
Special gifts 231.40
288.30

Grand total $ 6,323.43

Total for the week $ 555.71

Total for the year $ 9,343.33

"SPRINGTIME OF THE SOUL." (Continued from page 10.)

in worship. To this end we seek to provide opportunities of extra service to our God through the church each Lenten Season. . . . Share in these extra services, and this Lent will be "The Springtime of your Soul."—W. Millard Stevens, in Temple Tidings.

MEMORIAL GIFTS "Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name

Address

In Memoriam

POOLE.

"For her work is not done

No deed of love or goodness ever dies

But in the lives of others multiply."

We, the women of the Missionary Society of the Haw River Congregational Christian Church of Haw River, North Carolina, do wish to pay tribute and honor to the treasured memory of our beloved friend and fellow member, Mrs. Artelia Holt Poole.

She was deeply interested in the total work of the Congregational Christian Church. She served most capably in the various phases of the local church work, having been president of our Missionary Society for twenty years. She was sincerely interested in people, especially young people, and taught the Young Men's Sunday school class for many years.

We, the women of the Missionary Society, pray God give us grace to live so that when our shadow hour approaches, we may be ready and worthy to answer the call. And may we meet again in that heavenly land, where meeting is eternal and parting no more, and enjoy the happiness of loving and serving Thee for ever.

The Wonder of the World

I am in love with this world; it has been home. It has been my point of outlook upon the universe. I have not bruised myself against it nor tried to use it ignobly. I have tilled its soil. I have gathered its harvests, I have waited upon its seasons, and always have I reaped what I have sown.

While I delved, I did not lose sight of the sky overhead. While I gathered its bread and meat for my body, I did not neglect to gather its bread and meat for my soul. I have climbed its mountains, crossed its forests, sailed its waters, crossed its deserts, felt the sting of its frosts, the oppression of its heats, the drench of its rains, the fury of its winds, and always have beauty and joy waited upon my goings and comings.

—John Burroughs.

HIGH-SCHOOL DRINKING.

(Continued from page 7.)

parents were away, and only about one-in-four of those parties had parental approval.

Asked what they thought of non-drinking schoolmates, most students answered that they considered them wholly "regular."

Although two questions in the survey failed to support the idea that kids drink because it's "smart," two others added weight to the theory. Asked why they started to drink,

25 per cent said they did so to "conform to the group;" while 60 per cent began out of curiosity."

One-tenth of the students admitted carrying false identification as proof of age. More than half had tried to purchase alcohol illegally from time to time. Though they rarely succeeded in liquor stores they had somewhat better luck in bars and were frequently successful in grocery stores.

Although in one section of the findings the report stated that legal control seemed to have "little relation to drinking of high school students," another section seemed to indicate at least one reason for the distribution of purchase success indicated above was that under the New York law, penalties for under age sales are much more severe against liquor stores than they are against other establishments.

Although the conclusions of the Nassau study may not be applicable to the entire nation, the fact that 90 per cent of the young people questioned were drinking by age 16 is staggering. Both Dr. Chappell's staff and the trustees of the Mrs. John S. Sheppard Foundation (which sponsored the survey) are convinced that similar surveys are a must in other parts of the country so that a true picture of the problem of teen-age drinking can be obtained and effective solutions worked out.

THE TRAGEDY OF QUITTING THE CHURCH.

(Continued from page 11.)

The only certain thing in his mind is that he is quitting his church and leaving the shelter which has blessed him through the years. Where he can ever find more harmony, more affection, more sympathy, more charity and more responsive helpfulness than he has had in his church he does not know. He deserves the pity and the prayers of his long-time friends as they behold him button his coat against the storm that strikes him as soon as the church doors and the warm lights of the altar are no longer his protection and blessing.

If these lines fall under the eye of any disaffected brother, let him be assured the church-desires to befriend him and will be patient toward his resentments. His spiritual good is the concern of his brethren, and they will rejoice when he again takes his place among them.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

DR. REULING REPORTS ON SOUTH AFRICA.

(Continued from page 9.)

interesting native Christian churches in Africa. Called the Church of Christ in Angola, each area is organized as an autonomous, self-governing, self-supporting church. The Elende church, for example, in the American Board mission, has 10,000 full members and inquirers, with seven pastors among whom are divided 400 Christian villages which they visit somewhat like the old circuit riders of our pioneer West.

"The African people generally are eager for education and are going to get it some way, no matter what the cost," says Dr. Reuling. "It is particularly difficult for them in Angola . . . where the entire cost must be borne by the people themselves with such aid as missions can give. Nevertheless, the schools are filled to overflowing. Fees are low, but cash income of parents is even lower. . . It demands great and constant sacrifice . . . to send the children to school.

"It is well that the people are getting leaders of character, wisdom and devotion. Ideas of all kinds, good and bad, are pouring into this rapidly developing country. . . The old tribal knowledge of the people is no longer adequate to help them meet modern problems. . . Christian missions have done the maximum possible with the men and money available during the 75 years they have been there, but the task of lifting a whole people is tremendous. We have need for large numbers of Africans with the highest training."

WATCHMEN OF ISRAEL.

(Continued from page 13.)

tradition but from the ever-accessible power of the Spirit working in you!

If you would believe more deeply, serve more diligently! If you would realize the highest in the heritage which is yours, perform your ministry in the plains and be unsleeping in your vigilance that you may learn what he would have you say or do!

Watchmen of Israel, to your post! Watchmen of Israel, yours is the greatest message of redemption and peace and hope ever given to man! O God, give us more watchmen. Send us in loyalty and devotion to the plains, and grant us wisdom and love and strength for our own ministry in his name. For thus in our time will thy will be done!

I Like It Because . . .

By EDWIN RAYMOND ANDERSON

I'M SURE, at one time or another, you've turned on your radio and heard the announcer say, with breathless eagerness: "Listen carefully now! Here's all you have to do: Finish this sentence in twenty-five words or less . . ." That's all there is to it. Just finish that sentence and mail your entry, together with one box-top from the large-sized package of their product, and you may be the winner of one of the giant cash awards.

Sure, you've heard it many times! Yet there is a very serious and important lesson to learn from the above, which is the reason we are calling it to your attention.

I am not an announcer and have nothing to sell, yet would like to give you one sentence to finish; not with twenty-five words or less, but with ONE word. That's all it will take. What is the giant award? An accurate diagnosis of your present life.

This is the important question; it contains but six words, your answer making the seventh. The significance of it is proven by the fact that it's found in the Word of God, the Holy Bible.

"FOR ME, TO LIVE IS . . ." How would you honestly finish that sentence? For you to live is what?

CURRENCY? Money is some people's mania and master, but a life wrapped about a dollar sign learns that wealth often turns to woe; money becomes a mockery.

CREDIT? How some pant after the plaudits of men, yet how quickly praise can perish and applause can become the agony of past remembrance.

CAREER? Blind to everything except business and making a name for themselves in this world, many fail to comprehend that the ever-living soul must do business with the living God.

CAROUSING? How many are lured into sin's pleasures, with many a ghost of remorse to keep company with the poor soul, long after the game, the glass and the gamble are forever departed!

There are many ways in which some people would finish that sentence. If your answer is included with any of the above, then life for you is not holding all that it should. It is comforting to know, however, that the Bible not only records this all-important sentence, but also reveals how one man gave it the satisfying finish. "For me to live is CHRIST" (Phil. 1:21). Can you say that? Those who can, by faith, have truly entered into the secret of life at its highest, its fullest and its best. But it is no secret at all, for what God has done for others, he longs to do for you, through his atonement on Calvary. Life can be turned from misery into melody if you will accept Jesus Christ into your life and make him a partner in all you do.

What steps are necessary to make "For me to live is Christ" a reality in your life? First, realize that you need a Saviour; then confess your sins . . . and have faith to believe: "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Romans 10:10).

From a tract of the American Society, 21 W 46th St, New York 36, N. Y.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1954

NUMBER 12

The Christian's Manual

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service. And be not fashioned according to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

For I say, through the grace that was given me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but so to think as to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to each man his measure of faith. For even as we have many members in one body, and all the members have not the same office: so we, who are many, are one body in Christ, and severally members one of another. And having gifts differing according to the grace that was given us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of our faith; or ministry, let us give ourselves to our ministry; or he that teacheth, to his teaching; or he that exhorteth, to his exhorting: he that giveth, let him do it with liberality; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness.

Let love be without hypocrisy. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. In love of the brethren be tenderly affectioned one to another; in honor preferring one another; in diligence not slothful; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord; rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing steadfastly in prayer; communicating to the necessities of the saints; given to hospitality. Bless them that persecute you; bless, and curse not. Rejoice with them that rejoice; weep with them that weep. Be of the same mind one toward another. Set not your mind on high things, but condescend to things that are lowly. Be not wise in your own conceits. Render to no man evil for evil. Take thought for things honorable in the sight of all men. If it be possible, as much as in you lieth, be at peace with all men.

News Flashes

On page eight of this issue we are presenting an address by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, at the First Presbyterian Church of Watertown, New York, upon the occasion of its 150th anniversary. We commend to each of you its reading.

The Southern Convention Office has recently received two additional Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund, both from the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. They are Happy Home, Rev. Thurman F. Bowers, pastor, $1,320; and Hebron, Rev. Mark W. Andes, pastor, $350. What church will be next?

Western Carolina Sunday School Superintendents to Meet

The Western North Carolina Sunday School Superintendents' Annual Meeting will be held on Saturday night, April 3, 1954, at the Ramseur City Hall. The meeting will begin with a fish supper at 6:30 p.m. All superintendents, their assistants, pastors and any others who would like to attend are invited.

The guest speaker will be Dr. J. Earl Danieleley, recently appointed dean of Elon College. We hope that all of our churches in the Conference will be represented at this meeting.

THEODORE COX,
President.

Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer to Visit Congregational Christian Chaplains

Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, associate minister of the General Council and the director of the Department of the Ministry, flew this week from New York City on the first leg of an extended visit to Congregational Christian Chaplains serving the U. S. Military Forces in the United States and the Pacific area. In addition to his position with the Congregational Christian Churches, Dr. Buschmeyer is vice-chairman of the Joint Commission on Chaplains representing the major Protestant denominations. His first stop was at Lakeland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas, where he met a group

(Continued on page 15.)

General Council to Meet in Biennial Session, June 23-30

The biennial meeting of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches will take place June 23 through June 30. The meeting will be held at Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, bringing from all parts of the United States as well as other lands more than 2500 Congregational Christian men and women representing both the laity and the clergy.

Connecticut, the host state, for this session, is rich in Congregational history, dating back to the early days of the Colony of New Haven and the founding of Yale University.

In line with the denomination's democratic procedure, no advance blueprint can be drawn of what will transpire, but a few of the issues sure to engage the delegates are the acceptance and implementation of the important report of the Board of Review on the Council for Social Action; the proposed merger with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and the completion of the $4,500,000 Church Building Loan Fund.

Several distinguished speakers will appear on the program; a dozen or more "working seminars" will dig into vital subjects; and important commissions will report on matters to be acted upon by the Council. The elections will, of course, include that of Moderator, and the Moderator for the coming biennium is due to be selected from the clergy.

The American Board, our foreign mission board; the Board of Home Missions, and the Council for Social Action, will hold their annual meetings during the Council. The National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship, youth organization of the denomination, will meet simultaneously at Yale Divinity School.

An Open Letter

To Members and Friends of the Southern Convention—

Dear Friends:

Did you know that Fayetteville is a town of more than 50,000 persons? Did you know that Fort Bragg has a standing army of over 50,000 men? Furthermore, did you know that of this total of more than 100,000, approximately two out of every three come from outside this locality? and many come from North Carolina and Virginia, either as service men or as civilians?

(Continued on page 14.)

Religion and the Public Schools

A common topic for the bull session or gab fest is the lack of religion in the political and educational life of America today. Many people decry the fact that no religious instruction is given to children in public schools.

We cannot speak for all schools, but can testify that many of them in North Carolina and Virginia do start the day with scripture and prayer, and the teachers use everyday experiences to show the relationship of religion to total life. For example, one of the schools on Virginia's Peninsula observed quietly but effectively World Day of Prayer.

It is true, however, that much is needed to be done in this field, and the announcement has just been made that the American Association for Teacher Education will conduct a study of Religion in Teacher Education. This is being made possible through a $60,000 grant from the Danforth Foundation. Sixteen out of 59 schools applying have been tentatively accepted as participants in the study. East Carolina, at Greenville, is the closest to us. This group of schools will develop "experimental materials and serve as demonstration centers."

The chief purpose of the study of the teacher and religion is to find and develop ways and means to teach "reciprocal relation between religion and other elements in human culture in order that the prospective teacher, whether he teaches literature, history, the arts, science or any other subject, be prepared to understand, to appreciate and to convey to his students the significance of religion in human affairs." This then, seems to be a step in a goodly direction.

It is proposed that the committee appointed make a two-year study and that during the third year the data gathered and the materials published should be widely distributed. The committee is to be headed by Eugene E. Dawson, dean of students and professor of psychology, Kansas State Teachers College. Other members include professors, college presidents, religious leaders and representatives of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths.

Church people can rejoice that such a study is to be made. Let us hope that much good will come to teacher and pupil alike in this venture.

JUNE JOY HOUSE.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Ground Breaking Ceremony Used at Moonclon on March 14, 1954

OPENING SENTENCES—Dr. Robinson.

"The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men.

"Is not the Lord your God with you, and hath he not given you rest on every side? Now set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God: arise, therefore, and build."

INVOCATION—Dr. Scott.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE—

PLEDGE OF SUPPORT—President Williams and Conference Laymen's Fellowship Presidents.

LITANY OF COMMITMENT—

Leader: Eternal God, Father of mankind and Lord of all, we acknowledge thy great goodness as shown in the abounding gifts with which thou hast surrounded us. In the waters, trees, hills and skies thy handiwork is traced. In all thy creation we see thy remembrance toward us.

People: Bless us with thy continued mereies.

Leader: To better know and understand thy ways, we would come closer to the good earth of which we are a part and out of which we are sustained. Teach us, Good Lord, to blend our voices with the creatures of the air and to hear with gladness the whispering of the wind, tokens of mightier currents which are gathered and sent forth at thy command.

People: Let us be still before our Maker.

Leader: In these fields and forests help us build structures which will house our youth as they draw apart from city and farm to learn thy ways and to hear thy voice. As we labor to this end may we seek to magnify thee and not ourselves. May young men and women follow in this path of service, so that as we build for them they will want to build for others.

People: Grant us strength through sharing.

Leader: In our love toward thee we would be committed to those high endeavors which will make the church strong. We lend our labors and goods to the cause of Christ and to the planting of his kingdom in the hearts of men, that all may know the King of kings and the Lord of lords.

People: Take all that we have, Oh Lord, that is worthy of thy using and in the taking purge our lives and make them whole through Christ. Amen.

ADDRESS—Mr. Walter Graham.

GROUND BREAKING—

For Our Children, Paul Robinson;
For Our Youth, Betty Rhodes;
For Our Women, Mrs. W. B. Williams;
For Our Men, John Robert Walker;
For Our Ministers, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell.

DOXOLOGY.

PRAYER OF CONSECRATION (Unison):

"Almighty God, our Father: The earth is thine and the fulness thereof. Thou hast made it fruitful and filled it with beauty; and hast taught us to occupy the earth and subdue it, and to pray that thy kingdom may come, as in heaven so on earth. Consecrate this spot of ground which we set apart in the midst of thy vineyard. Accept the sacrificial act by which we break this sod. Sow there the good
(Continued on page 6.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (in interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"No Substitute for Good Reading"

In the current issue of ADVANCE the editorial by Andrew Vance McCracken is on the very timely topic, "There is no Substitute for Good Reading." I wish that every member of our constituency could read this editorial. It is quite challenging and pointed. Of course, all of us will not read it, because so few of us subscribe to Advance. However, the implications of the topic itself should be food for thought for us all. "There is No Substitute for Good Reading."

I dare say that most of us read very little. The pressures of our time have driven us to an attitude which says, "Let them tell me what they want me to know, I don't have time to read." Actually, we do not have the patience to read or the desire to learn. We have lost the art of spiritual and mental discipline. We didn't intend to loose it, but we did. But, if we are to have a strong spiritual community and a strong democracy in America, we must regain these disciplines. An informed people is essential to a democratic society and to a democratic church. Reading is still our best source of reliable information. We need to learn to read again.

W. MILLARD STEVENS.

Editorial Note.—That a larger number of the members of our church in the South may have the same opportunity that Mr. Stevens and the writer of this note had, we are taking the liberty of reproducing the editorial of Dr. McCracken in this issue of The Christian Sun.

J. T. K.

"There Was a Reason"

When Superintendent Wm. T. Scott wrote to the writer of this article a few weeks ago, while I was in Florida, suggesting the desirability of calling a meeting of the pastors of the Southern Convention to counsel with the Board of Publications on the best way to promote the interests of The Christian Sun, which has meant so much to the life and growth of our churches in the Convention area, I heartily agreed that it would be an excellent idea, if the ministers would attend.

The call was issued by our Superintendent for the suggested meeting to be held at the Congregational Christian Church in Henderson, North Carolina, on Tuesday of last week. The number of pastors responding by their presence was not so large as we had hoped for, but the pastors who did attend gave evidence of clear thinking and of deep interest in the future of The Christian Sun. Several items of invaluable counsel were given by the group to the Board of Publications for its consideration at its last meeting before the Southern Convention meets the last of April.

Others of our pastors were not present because of good and sufficient reasons. There must have been a reason for each absence, for every pastor realizes how important The Christian Sun is to the life and progress of our churches, our college, our orphanage, and to every department of our church life. That importance cannot be over-emphasized!

Let every pastor and every church member in the Southern Convention remember The Christian Sun in special prayer each day between now and Convention time—April 27-29. Your prayers are needed in order to "keep The Sun shining."

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

There Is No Substitute For Good Reading

An Editorial in Advance

By ANDREW VANCE McCracken

The satisfaction and reward of thoughtful reading, the moral obligation of each individual to be informed and intelligent, the importance of an enlightened public opinion to the functioning of a democracy—those propositions or considerations have lain at the very core and have comprised the essence of our Congregational Christian tradition—a tradition founded on God's revelation in a Book.

Foundation Stone.

To read, so as to be rightly informed, Congregational Christians have consistently believed, is a prerequisite of personal growth and maturity, the foundation stone of the democratic way of life and the guarantee of a life of inner peace, of spiritual freedom and of ethical consistency.

Congregationalism has been known, accordingly, as a teaching-learning-reading fellowship—from Steeven Daye's the Whole Booke of Psalms, Faithfully Translated into English Meter, which was published by the Cambridge Press within twenty years after the landing of the Mayflower, down to the current issue of Advance which, according to our records as far back as they go, now has approximately twice the number of subscribers on its rolls than at any time in its long and honorable history.

Although the value and satisfaction of reading have never been so great—indeed never so basic to a rationally spiritual mode of life as in these superficially sophisticated times—there is danger that we lose or forfeit our cherished heritage.

For one thing, competition from the radio, television and the movies has been insidiously successful. "Is the love of reading being killed by these inventions?" inquired the Book-of-the-Month Club in a recent issue of the New York Times. All too few of us have time to wait for an answer.

In the second place, this is the age of labor-saving devices when a concerted effort is made to reduce the rigors of that most onerous and painful of all labor, namely, thought. It is in the line of least resistance to permit radio commentators, newspaper columnist and television panelists to do much of our thinking for us.

In the third place, the most formidable enemy of good reading habits is that cynically morbid anti-intellectualism which has no concern or respect for moral, mental and spiritual aims but, by branding thoughtful books as "subversive" and by intimidation or arbitrary censorship, proceeds to undermine the structure of enlightened liberalism upon which our democratic culture has been built.

Altho these factors are powerful and constitute a threat to what is finest in our way of life, it is hardly conceivable that Congregational Christians on the whole will fall victim to their sinister compulsions. We know there is no substitute for "solid" books and serious reading. As an outstanding missionary educator has well said: "No other agency or medium penetrates so deeply, witnesses so daringly and influences so irresistibly as the printed page." Why is this so?

1. The practice of serious reading can enlarge enormously the range of ones living, creating contacts impossible to make in any other way. It stirs and deepens the emotions and lends new meaning to one's own experiences. Gradually the reader finds that he is actually thinking, that he is speaking knowledgeably of ideas and situations he had never thought about before. He feels "in on" salient discussions from which he had felt "left out" before. He feels sure and well-informed where formerly he felt uncertain and inept.

2. Thoughtful reading is important, moreover, because the institutions of a liberal democracy cannot sustain themselves without the steady reinforcement of enlightened public opinion. "The real basis of democracy is opinion," says the well-known opinion research authority, Dr. George H. Gallup, "and the most disturbing fact about the present American scene is the ignorance on the part of a large segment of our population regarding issues vital to their very existence." We do not gain the essence of wise judgment from advertising displays, nor from the "comics," nor from the so-called "whodunits."

Wider Perspectives.

3. What is still more vital, the printed page provides a most effective medium through which one may gain a faith sufficient for life's stresses and a character well enough disciplined to stand up against life's major shocks. Good reading introduces perspectives wider than our own which we may nevertheless appropriate for our own. As a means to personal growth in spiritual grace, there is nothing like the soul-searching literature of all the ages. "Reading," said Bacon, "maketh a full man."

Among the more trenchant, interesting and relevant publications designed specifically for church people and covering many significant aspects of our common life, Advance—we dare to suggest—occupies an honorable place and, as we have indicated, is becoming a regular part of the reading of more and more Congregational Christians.

While enjoying the worthwhile TV programs, while dealing the cards for another game of canasta or bridge, or sitting down to a round of scrabble, while subscribing to an armload of picture and story books, make a place, too, for the journal of our fellowship!

According to the testimonies of an increasing number of readers, you will find in Advance a high quality of pertinent information and trustworthy comment. We are glad to announce that the number of our readers is now at its peak, and increasing week by week. To all who have had a part in the preparation of Advance and in its wider distribution, grateful appreciation is due. Advance is a good magazine and a readable one," we have been told. And for good reading there is no substitute!

GROUND BREAKING AT MOONELON.

(Continued from page 3.)

seed of thy kingdom, and bring forth in this place the rich fruitage of an abundant spiritual harvest to the honor of thy great name. Amen.

HYMN—"For the Beauty of the Earth."

For the beauty of the earth;
For the glory of the skies;
For the love which from our birth
Over and around us lies;
Lord of all, to thee we raise
This our hymn of grateful praise.

For thy Church that evermore
Lifteth holy hands above,
Offering up on every shore
Her pure sacrifice of love;
Lord of all, to thee we raise
This our hymn of grateful praise.

BENEDICTION.

* * * * *

Establish an Organization for Men in Every Local Church

A farmer was driving along one day in a spring wagon with his small son of about eight years. Soon they came to a group of pigs and the farmer very expertly snapped the end of his whip on the back of a large pig and the whole group ran away.

Presently, they came to a herd of cows and again, the farmer lightly touched the back of one of them with his whip and they too ran away. Soon, they passed near a group of trees and hanging on one of the lower branches was a hornets nest.

The young boy pointed the nest out to his daddy and asked why he did not strike it whereupon the father replied, "No sir, son, they're organized."

A. How Do You Start?

The only reason for an organization of men in every local church is that they may accomplish something—may take a project and successfully put it across—may tackle a church or community problem and satisfactorily solve it—may bring more men into the fellowship of the church and make the church more effective.

Two men and the minister are enough to start a men's group.

Let them meet at one of their homes, at an office or at the minister's study. They can discuss the present program for men in the church and the needs of interests which the men can do something about. Light refreshments always improve the fellowship of such an occasion.

Without passing any resolutions or adopting any motions, they can agree on the next step which generally would be another meeting of the same group with a few others that they personally know are already interested or will be when they know of their plans.

B. What Should Our Men's Club Program Be?

This question can best be answered by asking the men of the church and community what they are most interested in, when to meet and where.

A sample Interest Finder is found on page 30 and 31 of the revised edition of the Laymen's Fellowship pamphlet entitled "What is the Laymen's Fellowship? How is it Organized? What Does it Do?" This interest finder can be altered to suit the needs of any local church and when filled in by all the men now in the church and community, some concrete facts will be available on which a program can be started.

C. Organization Details.

The details concerning a constitution, charter membership, projects, budget and all related items can be worked out as the organization gets under way. The entire organization ought to be as flexible as possible with the thought in mind that it is a means to an end and never an end in itself.

The Laymen's Fellowship should exist for one single purpose and that is to make the Gospel, the good news of Christ, a living force in the life of every man and, through his local church, to enlist his active participation in helping build the Kingdom of God in the hearts and minds of all men.

D. Enriching Program Now Organized.

Granting that an organization has either just been started or has been going for some time but operating rather ineffectually, what can be done to make it more successful? There is no easy answer to this question; for men's clubs, just like other organizations and institutions, do come and go, thrive and die, have their ups and downs. Asking the question is a good beginning.

There are certain inherent or fundamental principles which are found in most successful men's clubs. No one of them is or should be the entire answer but all should be carefully analyzed.

1. Purpose.

What is the purpose of your men's club? Do all of your members know what it is? Purposes of men's clubs will vary with individual churches and localities, even change within a local church. The original purpose for which a club was organized may no longer be in existence and the purpose should be changed if the club is to grow.

The purpose of the Laymen's Fellowship is set forth on pages eight and 20 of the Laymen's Fellowship booklet. Note especially that action is called for in every single phase of the purpose.

2. Program.

The overall program of the men's club should carry out the purposes. It should be well planned, advertised and promoted. Each meeting should be a successful affair, holding the attention of the regular members, causing the visitors to want to join and building enthusiasm in all participants.

As to a suggested outline or content of a particular meeting of the men's club, see pages 40 and 41 of the Laymen's pamphlet. The meeting should both start and stop on time. Faith must be kept with busy men who will not fritter away their time for a haphazard meeting, especially at the church.

The program of the meetings should be varied; it ought not to be just another worship service. There is no reason why it should not have spiritual content, both in the message and in the discussion, but there is no need for an emotional or inspirational type of service at every meeting.

A speaker is not necessary for every meeting. A round table discussion with the various points of view presented and then the meeting thrown open for general discussion by all of the audience is always good. A book review is often appropriate. An up to date religious film or film strip will usually gain and hold attention.

The program committee of the club ought to have representation from all of the elements of the club and the best minds. The chairmanship should change from year to year if there is sufficient leadership. However, if one man is especially adept at planning and presenting programs, he should be maintained from year to year.

(Continued on page 15.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

William Henry Boone, M. D.

During the writer's absence from Elon College in February, the college suffered a tragic and irreparable loss in the death of Dr. W. H. Boone, on February 16, 1954. Dr. Boone was a senior member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College. He graduated from Graham Normal Institute and later graduated from Elon College in 1894. He was elected to membership on the Board of Trustees in May, 1924, and was elected chairman of the Board in May, 1934. Serving in these capacities, Dr. Boone rendered the college and his church a significant service. He was calm and deliberate in discussions and impartial in presiding over the sessions of the Board of Trustees. The Senior Class of 1945 dedicated the PHIPSLI to Dr. Boone, and in May, 1953, he was elected the alumnus of the year of Elon College.

Dr. Boone has been a constant and generous supporter of Elon College during the greater part of its history, contributing to the campaigns in the interest of the college and otherwise assisting in the financial support of Elon College. In April, 1953, Dr. Boone established the Annie Elizabeth Moring Boone Memorial Fund at the college in the amount of $25,125.00. The fund was established in the Trust Department of Durham Bank and Trust Company, Durham, North Carolina, at which time he expressed the hope that he and members of the family might be able to add to this fund as the years passed. In this generous act, Dr. Boone linked his name and the name of Annie Elizabeth Moring to Elon College permanently and beneficially. The family will have the consolation of knowing that every year a contribution is made to their college through the thoughtfulness and generosity of their father, in the name of their mother.

Dr. Boone was a faithful and loyal member of the Durham Church. He was a valuable churchman and a Christian statesman in the councils of the church and all religious affairs.

On October 31, 1953, Dr. Boone was married to Mrs. Bess Sears Pickard of Durham, who is head of the Calvert School of Durham, and has served in this capacity for years. The Calvert School is for children from four to twelve years of age and has become quite a factor in the field of education in the City of Durham.

Elon College shall miss Dr. Boone sorely. We mourn his death but are grateful for his devotion and services.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

It so happens that at the College we are beginning a new quarter. Students enrolled last week. When they are admitted, they are expected to pay that quarter's expenses in advance. This helps the college greatly.

Last week we had only one contribution of $6.00 from the churches, and that was from the Virginia Valley Conference. This week, we are a little better off—one payment of $31.00 from the Eastern North Carolina Conference, two payments from the Eastern Virginia Conference totaling $18.06, no contributions from the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, two from the Western North Carolina Conference, one for $25.00 and one for $0.45, and one from the Valley of Virginia Conference for $7.50, making a grand total for the two weeks of $88.01 from 200 churches and Sunday schools for the support of a great college.

DR. W. H. BOONE.

I would not minimize the contributions, because at Elon College a dollar is a dollar, and it goes a long way—it has to go a long way. We are encouraged greatly to think of the vast number of churches and Sunday schools that have not made payments on apportionments for the last two weeks, for surely they will send in generous contributions in the weeks that lie ahead.

Previously reported	$ 1,427.81
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Oak Level	$ 31.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Disp.) S. S.	14.01
Union (Surry)	4.05
Western N. C. Conference:
Albemarle	$ 25.00
Flint Hill (M)45
Virginia Valley Conference:
Beulah	$ 6.00
Linville S. S.	7.50
	88.01
Total to date	$ 1,515.82

Adult School Materials Needed in the Philippines

Rev. Leila W. Anderson, who is a Field Representative of our National Division of Christian Education and well-known in the Southern Convention, visited our work in the Philippines last year. She asked if it would be possible for some of our churches to send Sunday school materials for Adult Groups, and I am quoting below her answer to my inquiry:

"It would be fine if your churches could send some adult class quarterlies or adult Pilgrim Series books to the Philippines. They publish nothing for adults, so the classes depend on using our quarterlies a year late. Often they get one copy per church. It seems to me that we ought to be able to do better than that. I'd prefer to have our own publications sent, rather than some that churches might be using. I know that many of your churches use Church in the Home and the Pilgrim Adult Quarterly in large numbers. They could be collected at the end of each quarter and mailed overseas. The postage would be expensive and would involve taking an offering.

"The following especially want adult books and quarterlies.

Rev. Paul Pruitt, Davao City, Mindanao, Philippines, Care of the United Church of Christ; and Rev. Wiron Santiago, Oroquieta, Misamis, Occidental, Mindanao, Philippines.

"These men travel in churches and could distribute the books. If a church would like to assume responsibility for furnishing material regularly to a specific church, correspondence with either or both of these men would secure such an assignment.

(Continued on page 10.)

Faith of Our Fathers

By JOHN FOSTER DULLES

Secretary of State

A Noble Heritage.

This is the 150th anniversary of the founding of our church. To me this church is richer in memories than any other earthly spot. My father preached here for 16 years and radiated a spiritual influence that is still felt here, and elsewhere, as I have learned in my travels about the world. Our family life revolved around this church. Before me is the pew in which we sat three times on belief that there is a God; that he is the Author of a moral law which all can know and should obey; that he imparts to each human being a spiritual dignity and worth which all should respect. Our founders sought to reflect these truths in their political institutions, seeking thus that God's will should be done on earth.

The Bill of Rights puts into our supreme law the concept of the Dec-

Sunday and frequently during weekday evenings.

At times the church services seemed overlong and overfrequent. But through them I was taught of the two great commandments, love of God and love of fellow man. Ordained ministers are uniquely qualified to deal with the relations of man to God. But laymen, who have to deal with national and international problems, are perhaps qualified to make some observations on the relations of man to fellow man.

Our American political institutions are what they are because our founders were deeply religious people. As soon as a community was founded, a church was built. Also, whenever a community was founded, its members developed practices and ways of life which reflected their belief that there is a God; that he is the Author of a moral law which all men are endowed by their Creator with "certain unalienable rights." Our Constitution says, in unmistakable terms, that men, even in the guise of government, cannot lawfully deny other men their fundamental rights and freedoms.

From the beginning of our Nation, those who made its laws and system of justice looked upon them as means to assure what seemed just and right. Thus we became heirs to a noble heritage.

Need to Revitalize the Words.

We must, however, remember that that heritage is not inexhaustible. Our institutions of freedom will not survive unless they are constantly replenished by the faith that gave them birth.

General Washington, in his Farewell Address pointed out that morality and religion are the two pillars of our society. He went on to say that morality cannot be maintained without religion. "Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion or religious principle."

Arnold Toynbee, the great student of civilizations has recently pointed out that the political and social practices of our civilization derive from their Christian content, and, he says, they will not long survive unless they are replenished by faith. His profound study convinces him that "practice unsupported by belief is a wasting asset."

Many other nations have modeled their constitution after ours. But they have not obtained the same results unless there was a faith to vitalize the words.

The terrible things that are happening in some parts of the world are due to the fact that political and social practices have been separated from spiritual content.

That separation is almost total in the Soviet Communist world. There the rulers hold a materialistic creed which denies the existence of moral law. It denies that men are spiritual beings. It denies that there are any such things as eternal verities.

As a result the Soviet institutions treat human beings as primarily important from the standpoint of how much they can be made to produce for the glorification of the state. Labor is essentially slave labor, working to build up the military and material might of the state, so that those who rule can assert ever greater and more frightening power.

Such conditions repel us. But it is important to understand what causes those conditions. It is irreligion. If ever the political forces in this country became irreligious, our institutions would change. The change might come about slowly, but it would come surely. Institutions born of faith will inevitably change unless they are constantly nurtured by faith.

The Power of Moral Forces.

It may be asked, may not aggressive material forces prevail unless met by materialism? It sometimes seems that material power is so potent that it should be sought at any price, even at the sacrifice of spiritual

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions
 MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor
 840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Last Minute Reminder

Twice each year members of a women's society are expected to attend meetings outside their local area—in the fall the Conference, and in the spring the Rally. The Rallies, which occur in the Southern Convention in the immediate future, are each for a small group of churches; hence no group is far from the meeting place, and it is hoped that many from each society can attend.

This year there is an extra reason for going, for Miss Margaret Hargrove, the relatively new secretary for women's work in our denomination, is to make her first visit to the women of our area. We are looking forward with real anticipation to her visit, and we hope that each district will give her a hearty welcome—the kind which comes from good attendance and enthusiastic participation in the meetings.

The Eastern Virginia program and schedule of Rallies was given on this page last week. Rallies for the other two sections of our work are listed below.

Valley of Virginia.

- Districts 2 and 3—March 26, 7:30 p. m.—Newport.
- District 4—March 28, 2:30 p. m.—Woods Chapel.
- District 1—March 28, 7:30 p. m.—New Hope.
- District 5—March 29, 7:30 p. m.—Timber Ridge.

North Carolina.

- Halifax—March 31—Ingram.
- Henderson-Raleigh—April 1—Liberty Vanee.
- Sanford—April 2—Fayetteville.
- Asheboro—April 5—Ramseur.
- Greensboro—April 6—Winston-Salem.
- Burlington—April 7—Union Ridge.

* * * * *

Greensboro District Rally

The Winston-Salem Church cordially invites you to attend the Greensboro District Rally on Tuesday, April 6, beginning at ten o'clock.

Directions for reaching the church—

Coming in from Kernersville, take a left turn at the stop light, or take the by-pass to the left. As you enter Winston-Salem, keep to the right and go to Salem College. Take a left turn at the stop light and enter Academy Street. Follow this street until you reach our church on the right side of the street.

Coming in from Reidsville and other points, after you pass City Hospital on the left, stay on Fifth Street until you reach Broad Street at a stop light. Turn left here, and turn right at Sears Roebuck. Turn left again after passing Sears at Burke Street. At the bottom of the hill, where you have another stop light, turn left, and go up the hill past the Baptist Hospital. After passing the hospital, you have a stop light at Academy Street. Turn left here, and the church is about a block away on the left.

MRS. W. J. ANDES.

* * * * *

Advance Notice

This is an announcement of a "coming event" which should interest the women in our churches in the Southern Convention. On the first evening of the Southern Convention, April 27, there will be a banquet for women at Bethlehem Church, while the laymen have a meeting at Suffolk. Details will come to you later, but plans should be made now to attend. No doubt women from the nearby churches will want to attend this banquet and the evening session, even though they may not be able to attend all the other sessions. The women's banquet at the last Southern Convention proved to be a fine affair, and this one should be even "bigger and better."

* * * * *

Spring Is Here

Don't know what the weather will be like as you read this, but according to the calendar it is spring. And that may mean "spring cleaning" for our minds or for our church work, as well as for our homes.

Do you have old packets of literature that need cleaning out? Some of the material will be so good that you will want to save it for future reference. You can make a "filing cabinet" out of a plain pasteboard box—the busy wife of one of our important ministers used such a "system" the last I knew. Make some section headings for "worship," "missions," etc. You will find this helpful. Apparently one minister's family, whom we visited recently, has a good filing system, for it thrilled us to find on their front room table a quarterly for which "Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Lester" were the lesson writers in 1947. The subject was the Gospel of John, which is being currently studied by our people.

And do you need to go over the plans made at the first of the year for your society to see how well they have worked out so far, what things are not yet accomplished, and if you need to add new projects to make your year's work complete? Half of our women's year is gone now, and it is a good time to check up.

What things are coming up before long that need attention? Have you sent in a Life Membership or Memorial? Will the women do anything special in connection with Holy Week or Easter? Will you need to get material in hand for use during Christian Family Week or for Mother's Day? Will you help plan the Vacation Bible School? Have you planned for your two mission studies for the year? Have you sent Friendly Service gifts? Yes, spring is here, and we need to get to work.

* * * * *

A Timely Study

No more timely study could have been devised than that of Spanish Speaking Americans. The newspapers are full of material about Puerto Ricans, about "Wetbacks," about laws regarding Mexican laborers in the United States. Those of you who have read the home mission study book, or have heard it reviewed (as I have heard it done, in a fine way by Mrs. Roy Moore of Asheboro, who is reviewing this book for societies in this area) will be looking at pictures of Puerto Ricans and Mexicans in such magazines as Life with special interest, and will be following dispatches in our newspapers with more than a passing glance. Let us keep up our study during the entire year, and not just let it end with a book review.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

When we go to school and read our books it is hard to believe that boys and girls everywhere do not have as many books, magazines and comic books as we do.

It is hard to recall that books have not always been plentiful. One of the first books for children was called a Horn Book. It was just that—thin slices of horn on which one could write. Shaped something like a hand mirror, (or tennis racket) it had a hole in the handle so the little owner could wear it tied at the waist or around his neck on a cord. The alphabet and Lord's Prayer were written on it and sometimes the Ten Commandments. Lucky was the boy who owned a Horn Book.

Families had no books. They were fortunate if they belonged to a church that owned a Bible. It was big, hand-written and chained to the lectern or reading stand. For a long time we believed that a German printer, named Johann Gutenberg, printed the first book, the Bible in the year 1450. Recently those who study and know old books say that an even older book of Gutenberg's was one called The Constance Missal. This is a collection of services and masses to be said in a church in Constance. It was printed around 1450. Before then, church men had copied by hand the words of the Holy Scripture. Such work was long and slow and often had mistakes in it. We know ourselves how easy it is to slip while copying.

Today we have many books, on many subjects. But there are boys and girls who have nothing to read. Many of them do not know how to read. Perhaps your class would like to save old church school papers and stories to send to such boys and girls. Part of our World Day of Prayer money goes to print materials for those who have so little. When you give money for missions, you may be helping someone to learn to read and write.

Think the next time you flip a book down. A lot of work, sweat and thought has gone into books and printing.

"Parents and Baby Sitters"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"How nice to find you here!" I exclaimed to my friend, Marcia Wilver, as I took a place beside her at a downtown lunch counter. "We've missed you at our club meetings all winter!"

Months before our chance meeting, Marcia had suffered the loss of her husband. It didn't seem to be in keeping with her character, but her long period of absence had made her friends begin to wonder if grief could have turned her genial personality into that of a recluse.

I was glad to have Marcia answer my greeting with a pleased smile. "I've missed attending the meetings and seeing my friends, too," she told me, "but my evenings have had to be devoted to my new profession."

Noting my puzzled expression, she went on to explain. "Of course I was joking," she said, "when I called my new occupation a profession, but its importance is so great that it might well be dignified by that title."

"When my husband's sudden death occurred last fall, I found that, both materially and spiritually, I was in need of some sort of occupation. Unfortunately I had had no experience in work outside of my home, and I wasn't young enough, nor well enough equipped financially, to undergo a period of preparation. I decided to take up the only work I really could do well—caring for children."

"You would be most successful at that," I interposed confidently.

"Yes," Marcia agreed, "I'm having some measure of success as I learn more about modern baby-care, and the lore of childhood comes back to me, but I wish there could be more rapport between parents and baby sitters."

"You mean that the parents as well as the baby sitters should receive some training," I suggested.

"Yes, Lucia, that pretty accurately expressed my idea," Marcia continued. "Often the parents are so eager to get away from home that they do not take time to tell the sitter anything about the routine of the household—what foods should be given to the children, what time they should go to bed, where their sleeping garments are kept, and so forth. Sometimes I arrive a little early, expecting to familiarize myself with such details, only to find the parents too much interested in their evening's outing to think of the well-being of their children.

"Also, I should like to be welcomed by the children as a friend instead of being shunned as a wicked ogre, ready to inflict punishment if they do not behave themselves. Fortunately I can show the children that I am their friend in most cases, and I try hard to establish friendship even when foolish parents have presented me as a potential enemy.

"The parental conduct that violates most harshly my code of honor is sneaking away from a child or telling him his parents will return in a few minutes when they definitely plan to be gone for several hours. How much better to set an example of honesty for the child to follow! How much kinder just to assure him of his parents eventual return!

"It is good for parents to take an occasional vacation from the monotony of feeding and clothing a tiny baby or from the watchful care that must be given to the toddler, who has no knowledge of height or distance. But it is good for children to have the baby sitter come into their home and for her quietly to carry on their regular routine, so there is no bickering about bedtime and no rejection of proffered food.

"If parents will learn to give baby sitters more thoughtful cooperation," Marcia concluded, "I am sure the children will be greatly benefited and both the parents and the baby sitter will find their experiences at such times more enjoyable and worthwhile."

SCHOOL MATERIALS NEEDED.

(Continued from page 7.)

"Both men are glad to have Pilgrim Series material of any kind. Mr. Santiago wants devotional material and anything available for the use of ministers. They can use anything which our ministers find helpful. I've wished that some of our ministers might have a Philippine box in the church and send a mailing occasionally, instead of throwing in the waste basket what they have read and found of some help."

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

I attended the Eastern North Carolina Youth Rally and thought they had a very successful meeting. Let us have a news article about the rally so others may know of the progress of your conference.

* * *

Letters went out last week from the office of Phil Man, president of the Convention Young People, about the Convention-wide Rally to be held April 24-25, 1954. Much preparation has been made for this meeting, so let's turn out for it.

* * *

Everyone has a right to the expression of opinion, and we would like to hear yours. Write us your opinion concerning ideas that appear on this page, such as the article about Drinking and also the one on Brotherhood. Share your thoughts with others, that they may benefit by them.

* * *

Ted Fields, whose article on Brotherhood given in this issue was presented during Brotherhood Week at the Hunterdale Christian Church, Franklin, Va., is the son of Rev. Clyde Fields. Ted was at one time president of the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship. He is now a senior in the Franklin High School.

* * *

Youth Sunday was observed at the Gibsonville Congregational Christian Church, Rev. J. Lester Stanley, pastor, on Sunday, March 14. The Young People had charge of the service and Roland Shepherd, ministerial student and a senior in the Gibsonville High School, was the speaker. Mr. Shepherd plans to enter Elon College to study for the ministry in the fall of 1954.

* * * * *

Brotherhood

By TED FIELDS.

"A dictionary defines brotherhood as being all members of a particular race, or all races in general. In my conception of brotherhood, I like to consider the latter.

"In speaking of brotherhood, I am inclined to theorize for I feel that no widespread example of brotherhood is prevalent today. We speak of loving our neighbors as ourselves, but who among the brotherhood of men will meet a poor ignorant negro, stupid in centuries of traditional ignorance, poverty, and slavery, and offer him the handshake of warm Christian fellowship.

"We orate about the equality of man but who among us does not offer a little prayer, thanking God that Americans are just a little better than everyone else.

"Here I have mentioned just two examples of phases of brotherhood and how they are forgotten and trampled beneath prejudices and pride.

"For a man to possess true brotherhood in his heart, he must be willing to trust. Disbelief is an undermining factor in the destruction of human relations. For men to be spiritual brothers they must be able to trust each other, they must be able to sit down and iron out difficulties, and must be able to forget. Yes, to forget past trivialities, is a marked step toward accomplishing brotherhood.

"A second requisite for brotherhood is sacrifice. A greater love hath no man than to lay down his life for his country. I'd like to paraphrase that to say—'A greater love hath no man than to lay down his life in the cause of brotherhood.' A willingness to sacrifice physical things is a visible means of proving one's appreciation of brotherhood.

"The third and most important requisite for brotherhood is God. Love for God should surely be a guide light to the true meaning of brotherhood.

"What fraternity can boast of a larger membership than the children of God. What labor-union can do more for its members than Christianity. So in the final analysis my definition of brotherhood follows thus; Men—trust—sacrifice—love for God—these are the constituents of Brotherhood."

* * * * *

Youth Fellowship of New Hope Church

On January 3, 1954, the Youth Fellowship group of the New Hope Christian Church of the Eastern North Carolina Conference met at their usual time. Sherrell Lester was in charge of a very inspiring service that officially installed the officers and counsellors of the group.

The officers elected were James Chamblie, president; Patricia Strickland, vice-president; Charles Hagwood, secretary; Phyllis Tally, treasurer; Betty Arnold, program chairman; Sylvia Lester and Harlowe Arnold, devotional leaders; Rev. R. Eugene Tally and Mrs. J. C. Hoyle, counsellors.

We meet each Sunday evening at six o'clock. Everyone seems to have a go forward attitude. We are hoping to have a progressive time in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Our project for this year is the buying of a nice mimeograph outfit for the benefit of the church. We have some very good material to get the programs from for each Sunday of this year. Each program is based on the use of the Bible.

We observed Youth Fellowship Week, the topic being "So Send I You." On Wednesday evening we had complete charge of prayer service. The following Sunday morning at eleven o'clock we had charge of a very inspiring worship service, with our pastor, Rev. Eugene Tally, making an important talk on "Why Parents Should So Necessarily Back up the Youth of Today." This same Sunday evening we were invited to go to a neighboring church to give the same worship service. Joyfully we accepted the invitation as home mission work. This church has no Youth Fellowship program. We did it to get them interested in this phase of work. We are hoping that they, too, will soon begin meeting, because we see the need of young people getting this kind of training.

On February 23, the Youth Fellowship gave a special party inviting the young people in the community that did not seem interested very much in this work. Games were played and delicious refreshments were served. All seemed to have a big time. The party was a success, and we are hoping we gained new members.

Youth working in our church help to make the work more complete. The parents of today should encourage them in every way they possibly can to attend church services regularly. We must remember that the youth of today will be tomorrow's church leaders. So let's all make every effort we can to stand by them.

MRS. JOSEPH C. HOYLE,

Counsellor.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Jesus' Intercessory Prayer"

LESSON I—APRIL 4, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Whatever you ask in my name, I will do it, that the Father may be glorified in the Son."—John 14:13.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 17.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Tim. 2:1-8.

Jesus was praying. He was praying in the presence of his disciples, and in part for them. He evidently was not on his knees, at least John makes no mention of that. He simply says that "Jesus lifted up his eyes to heaven and said." This does not mean that it is not a good thing to get down on one's knees when one prays, or that Jesus never got down on his knees when he prayed. It simply means that the spirit in one's heart is more important than the posture of one's body, when he prays. One can pray in any position. But the bowed head, the closed eyes, and the bended knee have value.

The Master's Prayer for Himself.

The Master prayed for himself; but he did not pray for things for himself. "Glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee." "Glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory that I had with thee before the world was." He asked God to help him to glorify his Father. He was seeking not his own glory, but the glory of God. One can well pray for that. How often we seek our own glory, rather than the glory of God.

It should be noted that Jesus was praying that he might glorify God in the difficult and dangerous and disastrous situation that confronted him. "The hour is come" . . . the hour of supreme trial and trouble. He wanted to glorify his Father in that hour. There are many followers of Christ who do not glorify him when trouble or trial or disappointment or sickness or death comes. The followers of Christ often act as if there were no divine resources available in the hour of trouble. On the other hand, there are those who take the broken things of life and glorify God in spite of and even by virtue of them.

There was a note of thanksgiving in the Master's prayer. He had "manifested" God's name to the men whom God had given him. He had made known the nature and character of God. He had made these men sure that he had come from God, and they believed on him. Furthermore, he had finished the work which the Father had given him to do. Wherefore he thanked God and was glad.

The Master's Prayer for the Disciples.

"I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me . . . and I am glorified in them." In this part of his prayer, the Master was praying specifically for the disciples. Listen to him as he prays: "Keep them through thine own name." And keep them, "that they may be one, as we are." He knew the strong and subtle temptations that would assail these men. He knew the centrifugal forces that would threaten their unity. He prayed that they might be kept, and that they might be kept in unity of spirit.

"I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from evil," or the evil. Christ's followers are not to withdraw from life—the world cannot be saved that way. They are to be in the world, but not of the world. Salt never savors or saves anything unless it comes in contact with something. There is a place for a "retreat" for Christian workers—it is good to get away from the hustle and bustle of the world, to think, to pray, to plan, for Christian work. But the Christian "retreats" only to go forward. Christ's command is to "Go." "Forward, march" is the command.

He prays, "Sanctify them through thy truth." The basic meaning of that word is to "set apart." Christians are to be sanctified, but they do not have to be sanctimonious. There are a lot of folks who are sanctimonious who are hard to live with, and whose goodness is not at all attractive. But a Christian is a man set apart by Christ. He is supposed to be dedicated to the work to which God has called him, whether that work be preaching the gospel or digging ditches or washing dishes, or what have you. Even as God sent Christ into the world, even so does Christ send us into the world; to manifest God's character, to reveal God to men, to do God's work, to help to bring in the Kingdom of God. Christians are people who have been "earmarked" for specific tasks.

The Master's Prayer for Us.

The Master also prayed for us. "Neither do I pray for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." That means us, doesn't it? It means all Christians everywhere. Our Lord is the Great Intercessor. He has us all on his Prayer List. He ever liveth to make intercession for the saints, for his followers, for that is what the word "saint" means in the New Testament.

He prays that we may be one. Twice in brief compass, Jesus prays that we "may be one" even as he and the Father are one. He was not praying for uniformity. God forbid that we should all be alike, that we should all be poured into one mold. But he was praying for unity of spirit, oneness of purpose, union of forces. The present divisions in Christendom are a scandal. And they are a stumbling block to the world of unbelievers. "That the world may know that thou hast sent me"—that is why Jesus wanted his followers to be one.

The Master also prays for something else for his followers: "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me." He went to prepare a place for us, that we might be with him where he is. And with simple faith in him, we can be with him where he is. Death cannot keep us from that. Indeed death makes it even more possible.

"I have declared thy name, and will declare it." On the Cross he declared in an eloquent way, the Father's name or character. "Truly, this Man was the Son of God," said the centurion, when he saw the Master die on the Cross.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

There are many persons that smile on hearing talk of building a better world and say that the world cares nothing for that. These persons have lost faith in people and God because of their own mistakes.

—John S. Bonnell.

FAITH OF OUR FATHERS.

(Continued from page 8.)

values. Always, however, in the past those who took that path have met disaster. Martial aggression often is formidable. It is dynamic, and we must admit that the dynamic usually prevails over the static.

But it is gross error to assume that material forces have a monopoly of dynamism. Moral forces too are mighty. Christians, to be sure, do not believe in invoking brute power to secure their ends. But that does not mean that they have no ends or that they have no means of getting there. Christians are not negative, supine people.

Jesus told the disciples to go out into all the world and to preach the gospel to all the nations. Any nation which bases its institutions on Christian principles cannot but be a dynamic nation.

Our forebears felt keenly that this nation had a mission to perform. In the opening paragraph of the Federalist Papers it is said that "It seems to have been reserved to the people of this country, by their conduct and example," to show the way to political freedom.

Our Declaration of Independence meant, as Lincoln said, "liberty, not alone to the people of this country but hope for the world for all future time. It was that which gave promise that in due time the weight should be lifted from the shoulders of all men and that all should have an equal chance."

The Great American Experiment.

What our forebears did became known as "the Great American Experiment." They created here a society of material, intellectual, and spiritual richness the like of which the world had never known. It was not selfishly designed, but for ourselves and others. We sought through conduct, example, and influence to promote everywhere the cause of human freedom.

Through missionaries, physicians, educators, and merchants, the American people carried their ideas and ideals to others. They availed themselves of every opportunity to spread their gospel of freedom, their good news, throughout the world.

That performance so caught the imagination of the peoples of the world that everywhere men wanted for themselves a political freedom which could bear such fruits.

The despotisms of the last century faded away largely under the influence of that conduct and example. There is no despotism in the world which can stand up against the impact of such a gospel. That needs to be remembered today. Our best reliance is not more and bigger bombs but a way of life which reflects religious faith.

Faith and the Atomic Age.

Do our people still have that faith which in the past made our nation truly great and which we need today? That is the ultimate testing of our time. Admittedly some have come to think primarily in material terms. They calculate the atomic stockpiles, the bombers, the tanks, the standing armies of the various nations and seem to assume that the victory will go to whichever is shown by these scales to have the greater weight of armament.

Unfortunately under present conditions we do need to have a strong military establishment. We are opposed by those who respect only visible strength and who are tempted to encroach where there seems to be material weakness. Therefore, without military strength, we could not expect to deter aggression which, even though it would ultimately fail, would in the process cause immense misery and loss. But your Government does not put its faith primarily in material things.

The greatest weakness of our opponents is that they are professed materialists. They have forcibly extended their rule over some 800 million people, a third of the people of the world. They are seeking to make these people into a pliant, physical mass which completely conforms to the will of the rulers.

But these people are religious people and they are patriotic people. They have shown that over the centuries. We believe that the Soviet rulers are attempting the impossible when they attempt to subject such people to their materialistic and repressive rule. We believe that the subject peoples have faith and hope which cannot indefinitely be suppressed.

Putting First Things First.

The President, the Cabinet, and the Congress all recognize the priority of spiritual forces. We do not intend to turn this nation into a purely material fortress and to suppress the freedom of thought and expression of the inmates, so that our people would more and more assume the likeness of that which threatens and which we hate.

There are a few within this nation who do not share that viewpoint. They honestly feel that the danger is so great and of such a kind that we must give an absolute priority to material efforts. There are others who honestly feel that the danger is so imminent that we should impose uniformity of thought, or at least of expression, abolishing diversity and tolerance within our nation and within our alliances.

Such points of view, while often heard, represent a small minority. Certainly there is some confusion of thinking, which needs to be dispelled. But I believe that the great majority of the American people and of their representatives in government still accept the words of the prophet: "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Faith is Contagious.

How shall we surely become infused with that spirit? That is my concluding concern.

There is no mystery about that. The way to get faith is to expose oneself to the faith of others. It is not only diseases that are contagious. Faith is contagious. A strong faith, rooted in fact and in reason, inevitably spreads if contacts are provided. If, therefore, we want spiritual strength, we must maintain contact with those who have it and with those who have had it.

That is above all the task of our churches. The Bible is the greatest book because, as Paul pointed out to the Hebrews, it is a story of faith. It recounts lapses from faith and their consequences and revival and restoration of faith. Most of all, it is a story of men who lived by faith and died in faith, bequeathing it to successors who molded it into something finer, truer, and more worthy.

Our American history, like Hebrew history, is also rich in the story of men who through faith wrought mightily.

In earlier days our homes, schools, and colleges were largely consecrated to the development of faith. They were places of prayer and of Bible reading. Parents and teachers told daily the story of those who had gone before and who had lived by faith.

The Burden of the Churches.

Today our schools and colleges and, I am afraid, our homes largely omit this study in faith. That throws a heavier burden on our churches. They today provide the principal

(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

During 1953 the orphanage cared for 99 children. There are 81 children here now. To private homes went 13, one died, one was returned to the County Welfare, and four completed their training here.

Of the number in the orphanage at present 50 are half-orphans, and 31 are from broken homes. If one homeless child is more needy than another the most needy are from broken homes.

We received during the year $59,633.47. Of this amount $25,301.98 came from church. The remaining $34,331.49 came from others as follows:

Social Security and Veterans Admin.	$1,609.53
Welfare Departments ..	2,531.30
Parents and relatives ...	1,741.10
Duke Endowment	2,975.34
Cash sales from farm and dairy	7,659.09
Business firms, and individuals	17,815.13

So you can see that while it does cost us a lot of money to run this institution we do not give it all by a right good bit.

Measles has pervaded our buildings and several children are being laid up with it. However, we have been well blessed this winter with comparatively good health. There have been so few colds, and very few times when we have had to call on the doctor.

Our children are delighted with the coming of spring. And the sunny skies and greening lawns and fields, the planting of gardens, and the general clean up all around keep our place pretty and busy. I do not know which is more sprightly the singing of the birds or the laughter and chatter of the children. There is just enough school, and chores to keep all the children on an even keel. One little fellow hit the nail right on the head when he said: "I love to work and I love to play."

Speaking of play reminds me that tonight the Rotary Club of Burlington is going to bring an evening of fun for the entire orphanage family and a "treat" for every child. So many people find so many ways to do nice things for the children here.

I think of the lovely homes I have known while I served as a pastor, the parents and children, their neighbors and friends; the happy times they had together at home, and the good times away at school or church. I recall how they used to look forward to Easter, the school programs and church programs and festivities; yes, and the pretty new shoes and cloths. Flowers and flowers, fun and joy and happiness for everybody. Food and trips, and pleasant rides. Gee! Easter is beautiful.

You will see to it that it is beautiful here, too! Thank you!

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 18, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Clothing for Clara Lee Arnold, Henderson Church.

Shoes for Jackie Wilkins, Miss Gertrude Herring, Richmond, Va.

Coupons:

Mr. & Mrs. F. H. Pickard, Liberty, N. C.
C. T. Moore, Kernersville, N. C.
Woman's Auxiliary, First Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Va.
Mary Robertson, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.

Golden Rule Bible Class, Newport News Church, Glasses.

Older Ladies Class, Smithwood Christian Church, Linens, Clothing and candy.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 3,019.90
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Liberty (Vance) $ 50.00
Mt. Auburn S. S. 5.23

55.23

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Bethel S. S. $ 5.10
Hebron S. S. 10.00
Union (Va.) 5.00

20.10

Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Cross S. S. $ 9.21
Pleasant Union 13.05
Shady Grove 20.00

Spoon's Chapel	20.00
		62.26
Virginia Valley Conference:
Beulah	$ 6.00
		6.00
Total	$	143.59
Grand total	$	3,163.49

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 6,323.43
Mr. & Mrs. F. H. Pickard, Liberty, N. C.	$ 1.00
Lawrence S. Holt Trust Fund	150.00
Miss L. Kennedy, Worth- ville, N. C., for boiler	1.00
Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church	10.00
In Memory of Lonnie S. Riley	5.00
In Memory of Mrs. W. C. Nelson	5.00
Special Gifts	58.08
	<hr/>
	230.08

Grand total $ 6,553.51

Total for the week $ 373.67

Total for the year $ 9,717.00

AN OPEN LETTER.

(Continued from page 2.)

You can render a great service to our new church in Fayetteville, if you will think long and hard about members and friends of your church and community who may be here. Then drop a postcard, with names (and addresses if possible) to the Eutaw Community Church, No. 900 Stamper Road, Fayetteville, N. C. This may be your opportunity to enlist someone you are concerned about into an active church of our fellowship.

Your cooperation in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

CARL WALLACE,
Pastor.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

DR. FRED BUSCHMEYER TO VISIT CHAPLAINS

(Continued from page 2.)

of Congregational Christian Chaplains from the entire Central Midwest and spoke at the graduation exercises of the Air Force Officers School at Lakeland Base.

Says Dr. Buschmeyer in regard to the importance of the work of the Chaplaincy: "More young men and women are serving in the Armed Forces of the United States than are in all the colleges and universities in America put together. Apart from home and high school experiences, military service will be the largest single common factor in the experience of the majority of these young people from our churches far into the indefinite future. What then will be the memories of religion and the church that will stand out in their minds as they come out of this experience?"

From Texas, Dr. Bushmeyer goes to San Diego, California, and from there he will fly to Honolulu, Hawaii. Before returning to the United States around April 21, he will visit Japan, Okinawa, Guam and the Philippine Islands.

ESTABLISH AN ORGANIZATION
IN EVERY LOCAL CHURCH.

(Continued from page 6.)

3. Projects.

What has your club done for the church, itself or its members in recent years? Many clubs are proud of their contributions to the church and the community and their project committee vies with the program committee for importance and attention.

Does the church and community have a boy or girl scout troop? Is the youth program properly staffed with leadership? Do the men attend worship gatherings? Are the buildings and grounds adequately cared for or attractive? Does the church need additional equipment to do its designated task?

Projects should change from year to year. Projects of a men's club should not duplicate or overlap any other organization of the church. It should augment and complement the programs of all the other organizations and bear a special responsibility for the men.

4. Special Services.

Much can be done to enrich the program of the men's club through special services. Heading the list of these is the Early Morning Communion Service on Easter Sunday for men only.

Father and Son Banquets, Men and Missions Sunday, Laymen's Sunday, Lenten Services for men, Memorial Day Services, Forefathers' Day, Anniversary Celebrations, Evening Vespers, and many other special services have been used to attract and hold men in their local churches. Many of these are annual affairs and each year shows a larger attendance and a deeper interest.

5. Fellowship.

Much has been said about fellowship and the men's club. It is a most important phase of the entire church life. Fun, food and fellowship are essentials in the life of any men's group. At the same time, the fellowship must not be only temporal.

The spiritual fellowship is a requisite in any men's club that will completely fulfill its mission. Prayer by different men should be found in every meeting. Training in the complete understanding of the symbols, history and functions of the church helps build real fellowship.

Fellowship among the men ought to be in evidence in and out of the church, on weekdays and Sundays alike, in good times and in times of adversity. The kind of fellowship that existed between Jesus and his disciples ought to be the aim of every men's club.

6. Growth.

Training in leadership, conducting meetings, presenting their views of principles of Christianity, understanding their duties as deacons, or stewards or trustees, treasurers, ushers or Christian followers—all these ought to be found sometime and somewhere in every men's club.

How much have you grown spiritually in the last ten years? This may be an embarrassing question, but it is a good one, and should be answered by every member of the men's club. Our understanding of spiritual matters ought to be increased because of our activity in the men's club. If it hasn't, then we ought to examine our program all over again.

Participation in the club's activity on the part of every member, taking a turn at serving and leading, putting as much thought and energy into the men's club life as in business, setting goals and attaining them—all these will bring growth.

"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favour with God and man." This is reason enough for every men's club to want to enrich its present program. Such an undertaking is not easy, but it will bring a joy and satisfaction in well-doing that money cannot buy.

FAITH OF OUR FATHERS.

(Continued from page 13.)

means of drawing together the men, women, and children of our land and of bringing to them knowledge of the faith of those who have gone before, so that today's faith is a contagious and vital force.

As our churches, synagogues, and other places of worship thus carry an ever greater share of vital responsibility, they should be strongly supported by all our citizens, for they all profit from the institutions which faith inspires.

Sometimes we feel that we are indeed compassed about by a great cloud of witnesses. Each of us knows that, in terms of loved ones who have gone before. We know it as we have heard read the great Book of Faith and as we are taught the lessons drawn from the story of the great prophets and disciples of the past.

Let us maintain spiritual communion with them. Let us draw faith and inspiration from their lives. Let us act as we know they would want us to act. Then we, in our turn, will run with steadfastness the course that is set before us. Then we, in our turn, will play worthily our part in keeping alight the flame of freedom.

Faith of our Fathers.

Our fathers have left us a rich spiritual legacy. Surely it is our duty not to squander it but to leave it replenished so that we, in our generation, may bequeath to those who come after us a tradition as noble as was left to us.

A church spire is symbolic. It points upward to the Power above us, from which we derive our spiritual strength. It marks a building as a place where we can gather for a communion that renews our faith.

Let us be ever thankful for the church of our forebears, remembering those who founded it. Let us remember also those who during the succeeding decades maintained it, enlarged it, beautified it, and enriched it with their Christian labors. Let us dedicate ourselves to follow in their way.

Girl Scouts Invest in World Friendship

The first Girl Scout Troop was organized by Juliette Low, March 12, 1912. Because of her interest in peace and her belief that peace could only come through understanding, one of her great dreams was that Girl Scouting would help people of different nations become better acquainted. From this dream grew the International World Friendship Fund—money contributed by the girls toward paying the expenses of counselors visiting foreign countries and for return counselor visits from those countries to the United States. In 1953 a total of $155,878.66 was collected throughout the United States, which has an approximate membership of 2,000,000 Girl Scouts. More than 200 Alamance County, North Carolina, Girl Scouts participated in the recent birthday celebration held in the First Congregational Christian Church in Burlington, and the sum of $53 was contributed to the friendship fund. Four of the Scouts participating are pictured above. They are, left to right, Bonnie Lynn Cheshire and Janice Matkins, both Brownies; Mariel Horner, Senior Scout, and June Wicker, Intermediate.

—Photo by McCauley, courtesy Times-News.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1954

NUMBER 13

The Whole Program

By DR. W. MILLARD STEVENS

President, The Southern Convention

If You Were an Orphan, or your children were orphans, would it not be a gloriously blessed thing for someone to adequately support and equip the orphan's home—For You?

If You Were Young, with a bright mind, plastic and ready for the molding hands of Christian teachers, would it not be a gloriously blessed thing for someone to support Christian schools and colleges—For You?

If You Were Old, having spent your strength as a preacher of the Gospel, or the wife of a preacher, would it not be a gloriously blessed thing if someone provided adequate ministerial relief funds—For You?

If You Were Lost, unsaved, in some destitute part of the homeland, or in some foreign land, would it not be a gloriously blessed thing if someone sent a missionary your way to preach Jesus—For You?

If You Met Christ, walking your way, looking for those who help him bless and save the world, would it not be a gloriously blessed thing if you could say to him, "Master all these things have I done—For You?"

News Flashes

Dr. W. Millard Stevens served as Chaplain for the Norfolk Youth Center during the month of March. Services are conducted at the center on each Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. In addition to the worship services, many young people each week are given guidance and counsel.

We are presenting in this issue a sermon by Dr. Elden H. Mills, D. D., LL. D., of West Hartford, Connecticut. The sermon is a transcript of one preached at Elon College during Religious Emphasis Week. We wish to thank Dr. Mills for the sermon and Rev. Howard Bozarth, pastor of the Community Church at Elon College, for securing it.

Revival services were held at the Bethel Christian Church, Virginia Valley Central Conference, March 3 to 12. Three guest speakers, including Rev. E. J. Rohart, Rev. Henry V. Harmon and Rev. Walstein Snyder, a son of Bethel and pastor of the Beverly Hills Church of Burlington, N. C., spoke. Fourteen young people made their confessions for Christ and united with the church.

Elon College Alumnus Dies Suddenly

Simeon M. Atkinson, Richmond, Virginia attorney and an alumnus of Elon College, died very suddenly on last Monday, March 29. He suffered a heart attack while discussing a pending case in the Law and Equity Court, and died at 1:25 p. m., in a local hospital.

Mr. Atkinson was a native of Wake County, North Carolina, and was a nephew of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson. He graduated from Elon College in 1909, and studied at Harvard and Boston Universities. He had practiced law in Richmond since 1915, with the exception of two years during World War I, when he served as a lieutenant.

He is survived by his wife, the former Margaret Brickhouse of Norfolk, and by one brother and one sister, both of Orlando, Florida.

He became a member of the Second Baptist Church on coming to Richmond, and was chairman of the board of deacons at the time of his death.

Funeral services were held from that church, and burial was in Norfolk.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends its sympathy to his family and his many friends.

Concerning the Coming Session of the Southern Convention

To Churches and Pastors—

Dear Friends:

The forty-first biennial session of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches will be held at Bethlehem Church, Suffolk, Virginia, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 27-29. We hope that your church and all our pastors are making plans to attend this important meeting of our fellowship.

Delegates should be nominated by each church as soon as possible, and the names should be sent to your Conference Secretary. Please attend to this important matter at once, won't you?

The Constitution of the Convention provides for delegates as follows:

"Churches within the Convention are requested to nominate lay delegates to the Convention. These delegates shall be elected by the Conference. Each Church is entitled to one delegate. Churches which have more than 200 members are entitled to one additional delegate for each additional 200 members, or major fraction thereof, provided that no Church shall have more than four delegates."

Visitors, of course, will be welcome.

Bethlehem Church expects to provide overnight accommodations for delegates desiring same, but it will be the helpful and courteous thing for us to send them the number (and names, if possible) of delegates from each church expecting or desiring such accommodations. Your early action on this matter will enable us to be helpful to our host church.

The Convention will convene at 2:00 p. m., on Tuesday, April 27, and will adjourn at noon on Thursday, April 29.

We have some very able and interesting speakers for the program: Dr. W. C. Timmons, who will serve as chaplain; Dr. Samuel Stevens, Grinnell, Iowa; Rev. David H. Sandstrom, Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Stanley U. North, New York; Dr. Raymond B.

Dudley, Boston, Mass.; President W. Millard Stevens, Norfolk, Va., and others.

Two great dinner meetings will be held at 6:00 p. m. on Tuesday, April 27: one for the men at the Suffolk Christian Church, and one for women at Bethlehem Church. Advance reservations must be made for those who expect to attend these dinner meetings.

The program is now being completed and copies will be mailed to all churches shortly, together with other information. But—please do nominate your delegates now, and send their names to your Conference Secretary.

Cordially yours,

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

A Report on the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

New York City,
March 23, 1954.

To Loan Fund Co-Workers:

As of March 19, the Church Building Loan Fund passed the $4,150,000 mark in gifts and pledges. More than $1,000,000 has been paid to the Church Building Society and is at work!

Victory can be fully ours. It would be a pity not to achieve it by General Council time in June.

For all that you have done for the Fund—thanks! For all that you will be doing in these three crucial months lying ahead—once again, thanks!

The issue is basic—the boy and girl, the young mother and father, by the thousands in the hundreds of new communities across America.

Or, to put it another way, it is safeguarding the spiritual undergirding of our democracy.

There are other issues among us but, in comparison with the expanding secularism in American society, they are trivial.

The old fund has helped churches across the nation to more than $23,000,000. The new fund, once pledges are fully paid, will do much to relieve the present frustration of opportunities for service almost unlimited but with funds far from adequate to meet a fraction of the applications for aid.

Ours is a task to take God's Word to places where it now is not.

(Continued on page 6.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Laymen Should Develop Personal Visitation Evangelism and Church Attendance

One of the characteristics of the modern age is high-powered salesmanship and super-duper promotion. It is heard on the radio, seen on television and billboards and read in the newspapers, magazines and a seeming never-ending series of printed or mimeographed letters and trial offers.

Despite all of these so-called advances in advertising, the best results are still often secured by personal demonstration and presentation. This is especially true with the program of activities of the Christian church.

A. Callers Ought to be Trained.

Any church will do well to take considerable time in training its crew of visitors. How to approach people—what to say—how to meet objections or criticism—when to leave—what decisions or actions to request—all of these items and others deserve careful attention and definite instructions.

Practice demonstrations and friendly but frank appraisal are extremely valuable. Even after the actual visitation has begun, many men report a profitable result from discussing the good and bad points after each interview. This practice begets a better visit next time.

The question of who should do the training is a good one. The answer is not always "The Minister" as some might desire or suppose. In many cases, if he has had much experience in making calls, he may be the proper one. In others, it may be there is a consecrated insurance salesman, a devout politician, a person experienced in personal relations, labor or management, that would be an excellent trainer. In still others, the group as a whole may have to act as their own teacher, trying and erring together.

B. Product Ought to Be Well Known.

One of the best assurances to successful selling is familiarity with the product to be sold. This is especially true in church visitation. The purpose of visitation evangelism is not just another friendly social call. It is that and more. It includes a definite affirmation of belief in the Christian faith and of the institution which is locally and currently promoting it, the church.

The entire program of the local church ought to be well known to every caller. How much is the budget? What are the individual items that compose it? What is the membership of the church? What is the purpose of this church? How is it organized to accomplish that purpose? What is its missionary or outreach program? What are its future needs and plans to meet those needs?

Of especial importance is the relationship of the local church to other churches and to its community. Is it affiliated with the city or state federation? Does it have regular rotated representation at association, state conference and general council meetings? What is the local church's interest or share in those larger programs?

C. Some Other Miscellaneous Items.

1. PRINTED MATERIAL.

Every caller ought to have some printed material to leave with the person or family called upon. Special material is always good but if such is not available because of expense or other reasons, a copy of the most recent church bulletin is appropriate.

(Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Trnitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church
Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"Christ--the Hope of the World"

The Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches will be held during the month of August at Evanston, Ill. This marks the first time a major ecumenical gathering has been held in the United States of America. Let us hope it will not be the last. The assembly may be decisive for the World Council. What of its future?

Certainly two factors must be kept in mind. On the one hand, the World council represents a major attempt to secure Christian unity. The particular patterns for unity that are possible of realization in contemporary Christendom remain to be defined, but unless the various branches of Christendom presently cooperating in the World Council are interested in some basic form of unity that makes unnecessary the various barriers of denominationalism, the World Council will lose much of its vitality and effectiveness.

Congregational Christians should take keen interest in the ecumenical goal of some basic form of unity. Historically that interest has been manifested in action. The present picture is blurred because of recent experiences in the field of merger, but if the experience leads to the position of favoring union in general and opposing it in particular, the cause will be lost. Our fellowship of churches well can serve the cause of the World Council by keeping in sight the ecumenical goal of the practical unity of the followers of Christ.

In the second place, undoubtedly there will be sincere and powerful influence to restrict the proclamations of the Council to "religious interests"—which would mean the Council should be silent on matters of economic, political and social concern. Much of this influence probably will come from Americans. It will be unfortunate if the Council yields to the influence, just as it will be unfortunate if our fellowship of churches so restricts the activities of the Council for Social Action it cannot bear witness in these areas.

If the Christian Gospel has relevance for the world, then its witness must be strong and clear—and it must deal with the problems that confront people and nations. That witness will be taken more seriously when the world can see concrete unity among the followers of Christ. These two factors, the ecumenical goal of the unity of the followers of Christ and the Christian witness to the social order, go together. Unless they are vital to the World Council there will be little use for a World Council. They can be vital to the World Council only if delegates to it make them so.

The theme of the assembly: Christ—the Hope of the World," is an excellent sermon topic for Palm Sunday or Easter. There is something for us to proclaim, for Christ is the hope of the world, even if the world doesn't know it.

JAS. H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

Let's Use Educational TV

The Church too often has been guilty of a "too little, too late" action. It hasn't shown very good insight and it has often allowed other agencies to get the jump on it, as they have been able to see the values that would accrue from some policy or action.

Educational television may be another case in point. In several sections it will shortly become possible to present, on commercial stations or on newly established educational stations, television programs that have potential audiences of many thousands.

Radio and television stations must allot—as a condition of their license—a proportion of time on the air to religion. So far, however, we have not begun to mobilize our forces to use fruitfully the educational opportunities of the church on radio, to say nothing of television. We need to plan right now for regional and conference-wide, as well as local, programs of an instructive and human-interest nature. Broadcasts of services, Sunday school lessons, etc., is not enough. What is particularly needed is something to compare with summaries of secular news and the inclusion of live, up-to-date human-interest material on television.

Many suggestions come to mind. There can be choir festivals and special programs for the great days of the church year. There can be interviews with those doing notable works in each area. There can be panel discussions, and there can be visits by film to hospitals, and other institutions. There can be specially prepared material for shut-ins, the handicapped, and the troubled. There can be dramatic and illustrative material of various kinds.

Many local churches and regional agencies are weak in handling their own publicity—to great loss to themselves. It is hoped that we may see before it is too late, the tremendous opportunity, particularly in education, which television offers. We must be able to do this work promptly, expertly and effectively—it cannot be an offhand, clumsy, aimless job. Let's not bungle it—and let's not delay in taking action on this matter.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

"The Spiritual Gain in All Events"

A Sermon

By REV ELDEN H. MILLS.

"And they plaited a crown of thorns, and put it on his head."

Matthew 27:29.

At the turn of the year on the Pullman I picked up a World Telegram and glanced it through, but stopped to ponder over one news-item. Its tragic report was a brief microcosm of the world view of many. It was the story of a suicide of a twenty-year-old girl on New Year's Day. She was employed and apparently had a good home, but possessed a sense of frustration. One year before, on New Year's Day, her resolution was in the shape of a vow, that if the coming year did not bring to her some outstanding event or fortuitous occurrence that would make or prove her life worth while, she would end it on next New Year's Day. The news item recorded her vow had been kept. The varying elements of the twelve months did not conspire together to bring about anything of distinctive excellence for her particular sake, although day by day she awaited the godsend. So she kept her vow.

This brings into relief the implications of a popular sort of philosophy which, hardly Christian, is held by many professing Christians. In the masses, it is rampant. The demand for more and more by giving less and less; the radio "get rich" programs so popular, the upsurge of gambling—all these give evidence. But who of us can live radiant, victorious lives simply on the basis of the sweetly sugared gratuities which, unearned, circumstance hands to us? I find so many people looking for happiness, but expecting natural and spiritual forces outside themselves to combine to bestow it. And many good people have the covert and often overt assumption that a sincere effort to be just and good should be rewarded by an exemption from the experience of disappointment, injustice and evil. Those who have left their mark in this world are not those who found life as it was handed to them, worth it. Time and again they had to accept it, and then, chastened by the experience, find it released some power they did not know was there.

Paul had a thorn. We know he had our common weaknesses. In his early years he was conscientious but utterly mistaken. He flew easily into heated controversy. He quarreled with his closest friend, Barnabas, and they parted company. In describing himself, he says, "I cannot be good as I want to be, and I do wrong against my wishes." These are characteristics of ordinary men. Paul did not resign to his thorn; he accepted it. At a private school after the Second World War, several hundred young men, who in the flash of a moment discovered their world changed from light to utter darkness, were not resigned to selling apples, but prepared for creative usefulness. They had to give up ever seeing light again. That probably was a battle. On the streets those men became common sights, and now they have gone out into the world living useful, creative self-supporting lives. Paul prayed—and knowing how he could talk to men, one can imagine how he talked to God—he prayed to escape his thorn. When he found it could not be got rid of he discovered a release of new energy—later to say he could do anything through the power he had got hold of.

REV. ELDEN H. MILLS

Says Leslie Weatherhead: "I wonder if you ever thought of this: that the good man is not made good by what we call the good things of life becoming his. The good man is made good usually by the bad things that happen to him. Not that the bad automatically produces the good, but because the good man takes such an attitude toward bad things that he changes their effect on himself." If men were made good by the good things that happen to them, then our richest men would be our greatest saints. True character is possible only because an evil life is also possible. If there were no possibility of defeat there would be no possibility of victory. The child learns to walk by falling down. So God "allows disaster because by taking the risk of disaster, man can become a far grander being than he ever could become if disaster were not allowed." We had better accept that. There is spiritual gain in all events.

For there is an inwardness to every event. The materialist finds in an event only the outward significance of it. If it is tragedy, then it is tragic for him; if it is beautiful, then he embraces it and thinks he has achieved happiness.

You must see that the philosophy that demands exemption from the suffering of pain and injustice for those who are godly falls to the ground at Calvary. The world never saw his kind of goodness before. His was the whole life—the holy life. At the end those he came to serve and show the way to fullest living plaited thorns and thrust them upon his head, seeing to it that they pointed in toward the flesh and were driven home. Jesus did not stop with the outward circumstances. He wore those thorns as a crown.

One summer Sunday afternoon I spoke at the chapel service at Bread Loaf, the summer English School of Middlebury College. Professor Odell Shepard was in the congregation, and in the half hour that followed the sermon I had the honor, albeit with trembling, of a critical analysis from him of one thing I had said. In keeping with the day's temperature I had become warmed upon the subject, had departed from the manuscript (I always get in trouble when I ad lib), (Abe Martin once said, "People who speak out what they think would be a good deal better if they thought.") and in an unguarded moment I had said, "When one is victim of a tragedy one does not deserve." The professor asked me what I meant by that statement, and in answer I cited Jesus at Calvary. Certainly Jesus did not deserve what happened there.

(Continued on page 13.)

Our Churches Report . . .

Recognition Service for South Boston Church

Sunday night, March 21, was a red letter day for our new church at South Boston. In an impressive service held at the Powell Memorial Chapel approximately 100 persons shared the inspiration of helping to welcome into the fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches a new church. The service was sponsored by the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

The service was presided over by Superintendent Wm. T. Scott. Mrs. Herman Chandler of South Boston was guest organist, and special music was rendered by Mr. Robert Hankins also of South Boston. Following a brief worship service, the history of the South Boston Church was read by Mr. Thomas S. Earp, Rev. Mark W. Andes, pastor-elect, welcomed the 58 charter members into the fellowship of the church, all members present taking the vows of membership either upon letter of transfer or confession of faith. Rev. Wm. J. Andes, secretary of the N. C. and Va. Conference, read the official action of the Executive Committee of the conference which gave membership to this newly organized church. Impressive greetings were given by Rev. Weldon T. Madren for the "Neighboring Congregational Christian Churches," and by Mrs. J. G. Truitt, chairman of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention. Dr. Truitt delivered a sermon for the occasion, and following the singing of the hymn, "Lead On, O King Eternal," Rev. Mark W. Andes pronounced the benediction. It was good to have been present for this great occasion.

WM. T. SCOTT

Rev. Gaylord B. Noyce to Become Pastor of Raleigh Church

The Rev. Gaylord B. Noyce, now associate minister of the Hancock Congregational Church of Lexington, Massachusetts, has been chosen as the new minister of the United Church of Raleigh and will assume his duties on August first. The Rev. Mr. Noyce, who has been called one of the most promising young ministers of the Congregational faith, is a graduate of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and of Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn. He was born in Burlington, Iowa, the son of a Congregational minister now serving in Richmond, Ill.

After his high school graduation, he entered the Navy for a 26-month tour of duty. Part of this time was spent in the V-12 program at Miami University and he remained on the Ohio campus for the completion of his degree, receiving a Bachelor of Arts there in 1947. Immediately following his graduation, Mr. Noyce went to Istanbul, Turkey to teach English in Robert College, remaining for two years. He and Mrs. Noyce were married there in June, 1949. They returned to the United States in the fall and spent the next three years at Yale Divinity School, where the young minister received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity in 1952.

REV. GAYLORD B. NOYCE

He was called to the associate pastorate of the Congregational Church in Lexington, Mass. in September 1952 and was ordained to the ministry there October 8, 1952. In addition to his teaching and his pastoral duties, the Rev. Mr. Noyce has participated in work camps in Germany and France under the World Council of Churches. For the past two summers, he and his wife have directed work camps for college young people on the grounds of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen at Swannanoa, N. C. While he was attending Yale, he spent summers in pastorates in Oregon, Connecticut and Pennsylvania, the latter under the ministry-industry program in Pittsburg.

The Noyces and their small daughter expect to move to the United Church parsonage, 1326 Dixie Trail, some time in July. He will assume his official duties on August first, preaching his first sermon that day.

CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND CAMPAIGN.

(Continued from page 2.)

Surely we can count on his Word to solve all lesser problems.

Sincerely,

STANLEY U. NORTH,
Executive Director.

* * *

Since last report from the office of the Southern Convention, two Declarations of Purpose have been sent in: Woods Chapel, Rev. Ralph M. Galt, pastor, Virginia Valley Conference, for $45.00; and Asheville, in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, Rev. Frank E. Ratzell, pastor, for $750.00.

The total of the quotas of churches in the Southern Convention is $136,454. Of this amount $95,248 has been pledged to date, leaving still to be pledged, $41,206. There are still 77 churches to be heard from.

The churches of North Carolina and Virginia (the area of the Southern Convention) have received aid from the Church Building Society totaling $338,564.89. Of this amount over $150,000 in aid has been given within the past five years. Surely we can and will do our share by raising the entire quota of the Southern Convention.

Further information and material may be had from Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Superintendent, the Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Research is an organized method of trying to find out what you are going to do after you cannot do what you are doing now. It may also be said to be the method of keeping a customer reasonably dissatisfied with what he has. That means constant improvement and change, so that the customer will be stimulated to desire the new product enough to buy it to replace the one he has.

Chas. F. Kettering.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Virginia Valley Central Conference

For years the Valley Conference has been meeting twice annually, in the spring and also in the fall. The Spring Meeting of the conference is more for the purpose of revealing plans on the part of each individual church for the coming year and as a means to inspire each church to do its part, they give reports on what has been accomplished the previous year. This plan seems to be working very well. It at least brings the churches into communication with each other during their planning period and also during the days following the harvest and in days of gathering.

There are twenty churches in the Valley. Many of these churches are on the mountains rather than in the Valley. They are served by six pastors. Each pastor has his hands and heart full. Too much is expected of each one. The opportunities in the Valley are great. Truly, the fields are white unto the harvest; the laborers are far too few.

By far the majority of these churches are in the open country. The leaders are beginning to see the necessity of organization and church plans within the principal cities of that section. Definite steps were taken at this session of conference to begin a church organization and building in Harrisonburg. There has been a need for our church in this city for years. Let us hope and pray that with this improvement, the need may be met and that we may soon look with pride upon a beautiful church in this growing city.

Reverend R. A. Whitten of Winchester, Virginia, is the president of the Valley Conference, and Mr. Clarence Phillips of Broadway, Virginia, is the secretary. The majority of the churches were represented by official delegates. Dr. William T. Scott, superintendent of the Southern Convention, Dr. John G. Truitt, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, and Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, were the visiting officials for this session of conference. Dr. Scott spoke on the task of the church. Dr. Truitt spoke on the Christian Orphanage, and Dr. Smith spoke emphasizing stewardship and challenging our people to give the church a share of their earnings. If all members of the church would give us as they should, there would be plenty of money for missions at home and abroad, for church buildings, for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for orphan children, and for young people seeking an education. The conference convened at Bethlehem Church; a beautiful new church. The people of the Bethlehem Church and community are congenial, courteous, and hospitable. They served a delicious lunch and offered the conference the facilities of their church.

It was a very good conference; it was good to be there and we trust much good was done.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

If it did not cost money to run the church and bring in the Kingdom of God, those who conduct the church would become too selfish to be known as Christians. What the man does with his money is a pretty sure evidence as to what he has done with his life. If his life has been committed to service and sacrifice, while he is on earth and in the flesh, you may count on it without question that his earnings will go to help accomplish his mission and purpose in life. It is as impossible for a person to give his life to God and use the earnings of his life for selfish purposes as it is for him to "eat his cake and keep it too." Where your treasure is, there your heart will be also; where your heart is, there will be your love. If we love God, we will share our earnings that his Kingdom may come in our hearts and in the hearts of others.

Previously reported	$ 1,515.82
Eastern Va. Conference:
Damascus	$ 75.00
Bay View	40.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Apple's Chapel	$ 68.00
Burlington, First S. S. ..	$ 87.84
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Grove	$ 10.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Lynchville S. S.	$ 7.50
	288.34
Total to date	$ 1,804.16

Week of Evangelism in Western N. C. Conference

The week of April 4-11 has been designated by the churches of the Western N. C. Conference as a time for A Christian Crusade to secure members for our churches. This plan was recommended by the conference committee on evangelism, voted by the conference, planned by the ministers of the conference in their monthly meetings, and then discussed at the recent mid-year session of conference.

Some of the churches will hold services during Holy Week, or at some other time, but many are cooperating in one way or another even though they may not be holding services each evening during the designated week. At last report, visiting ministers were scheduled as follows:

Dr. John G. Truitt with Rev. G. H. Veazey at High Point,
 Rev. W. J. Andes with Rev. Avery Brown at Flint Hill and Sophia,
 Dr. W. E. Wisseman with Rev. Avery Brown at Bailey's Grove,
 Rev. Melvin Dollar with Dr. F. C. Lester at Asheboro,
 Rev. W. W. Snyder with Rev. Max Vestal at Pleasant Ridge and Spoon's Chapel,
 Rev. John Littiken with Rev. Bill Simmons at Pleasant Grove,
 Rev. John Lackey with Rev. R. L. Clapp at Seagrove.
 Rev. Bland Lebrick with Rev. R. L. Clapp at Shady Grove,
 Rev. W. T. Madren with Rev. R. L. Clapp at Ether,
 Rev. Max Welch with Rev. Winfred Bray at Antioch (R),
 Rev. Fred Allred with Rev. Winfred Bray at Union Grove.

The pastors, guest ministers, and leaders from the various churches are to meet at the Asheboro church Monday, April 5, to discuss the crusade. They meet at four o'clock and have supper at five. Several short talks are to be made on topics like, "What We Hope to Do," "Work of Laymen in Evangelism," "Making and Using a Prospective List," "Receiving and Using New Members," and "The King's Business Demands Haste."

F. C. LESTER.

Christians are supposed not merely to endure change, nor even to profit by it, but to cause it.

Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Use This Material

Sometimes we print material on this page which is too late to be of much help to our readers. However, below is an Easter devotional message which might well be used in the April meetings of our groups. Coming to you in the issue of April 1, that should make it reach you in time.

We suggest that if you use it in your society, you take it "as is" in this issue of THE SUN. That will show some of the nonreaders of our church paper that it sometimes has value for the society meetings, as well as in other ways. In other words, say a word for THE SUN at the time you use the fine material!

* * * * *

An Easter Devotional

By MRS. RAYE V. KNIGHT.

*Eastern Virginia Spiritual Life
Chairman.*

To a background of soft music:

There is one who is standing, waiting,
pleading,
He points to his hands and his side;
His wounds for the world are interceding,
Go save them for whom he has died.

This is our task! True our services and our efforts take many forms; but the center of all our actions is our desire to reach others, to tell them the good news, to teach them that Christ is their hope and their salvation—the answer to their every need—and to have them believe on him who came to seek and to save.

It is a glorious message that is ours to proclaim—one of light and gladness, of joy and love, the message of life everlasting.

And so, this afternoon, as we quietly share these moments of devotion, when we are approaching the celebration of the most significant event in the Christian's calendar, turn your thoughts with me to that cold, gray dawn over nineteen hundred years ago, when the most important announcement of all time was proclaimed.

Three women came to a lonely tomb
In the morning cold and chill.
Their hearts were sad and their thoughts went back
To a Cross on a lonely hill.

To a cruel cross whereon had died
The one they loved the best,
The one whose form in this silent tomb
Had now been laid to rest.

They spoke of the beauty of his life
In voices hushed and low.
They spoke of the tenderness and love
That from his heart did flow.
They spoke of the sick whom he had healed,
The multitudes he fed,
Not only with the daily food
But with the living bread.
He had stilled the storm, he had raised the dead,
Brought comfort to friend and foe.
Alas, that life so rich and full
Should end on a cross of woe.

With tear-dimmed eyes they lingered there,
When a sudden burst of light
Surprised them and showed to their startled gaze

A heavenly, radiant sight.
The rocky tomb was open now,
The door was swinging wide;
An angel robed in shining white
Was sitting just inside.
"Be not afraid, O troubled ones,"
The angel smiling said,
"The one you loved and seek today
Is risen from the dead."

Again the angel spoke, "He left
A message. Heed it well.
Its words are few, their meaning clear;
The Master saith, "Go tell!"
Down through the years the message comes;
Today we hear him say,
"O friend of mine, go now and tell
The Lord is risen today!"

Let us pray:

O, God, the Giver of every good and perfect gift, hear us, we beseech Thee, as we lift our hearts to Thee in praise and thanksgiving.

Help us, we pray, as we dedicate ourselves anew to Thee and Thy service. May we find everwidening fields of service open to us, and may we find ourselves willing and able to labor in these fields.

Grant, we pray, that with Christian people everywhere we may even be mindful of those who need to know of Thy great love—that love for all mankind that expressed itself in the Gift of Thy Son: in whom to trust and to believe is to find eternal life.

And now, may the message of Easter—that message that offers peace and comfort, hope and joy—abide in our hearts.

These things we ask in the name of him whom we acclaim Lord and Master of our lives, and in whose name

we sing:

Sing prayerfully verses 1 and 2 of
"My Jesus, I Love Thee."

Amen.

* * * * *

New Type of "Friendly Service"

HELP OTHERS AND YOURSELF.

It has proved difficult in recent months to send packages overseas to our missionaries. Sometimes the sender has to go through a great deal of "red tape," for regulations change frequently. More often the receiver of the package has had to pay high duty on the package and thus the purpose of sending it has been defeated.

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, our convention chairman for Friendly Service, is suggesting a new type of overseas help which will eliminate these two difficulties.

How? By us doing the ordering, and thus getting on the "receiving" end. Materials made by the women in India in our mission workshops are sold to groups in this country.
In turn, these lovely handmade articles may be purchased by the women of your society for gifts, or may be sold to others at a bazaar. The package will always contain articles worth at least the amount you pay.

There are two addresses:

Mrs. Joseph L. Moulton, Sisal
Fiber Industry, Ahmednagar, India.
The check should be made to Sisal
Fiber Industry, Ahmednagar, for $25.00 and you will receive a shipment of sisal fiber bags.

Mrs. G. Ross Thomas, Crafts, All-India Village Industries Sales Center, Nagpada Neighbourhood House, Byculla, Bombay 8, India. This check is also for $25.00 and the shipment will include an assortment of brass, sisal, leather, silver, rosewood, linen, handwoven cotton articles and Indian character dolls.

By ordering these packages (for which 3 to 4 months should be allowed for delivery) we are helping people to help themselves, as well as bringing another land close to our people. And you may have attractive thing for sale, which will be "different" from the usual assortment at bazaars.

At the March general meeting of the Asheboro society, it was voted to order one of these packages so the material would be on hand for sale next fall. The Greensboro, First, Church did this last year. Why not try it?

Financial Report for Second Quarter 1953-54

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

Quarter Ending March 15, 1954.

RECEIPTS.

Women's Societies.

Albemarle	$ 38.75
Amelia	5.00
Apple's Chapel	27.25
Asheboro	65.00
Asheville	106.37
Auburn	15.45
Belews Creek	10.00
Berea	10.00
Bethel	27.42
Beulah	6.00
Burlington	414.10
Calvary	10.00
Carolina	6.00
Chapel Hill	40.00
Church of Wide Fellowship	120.00
Concord	6.25
Damascus	5.00
Durham	65.43
Elon College	178.47
Erskine Memorial	62.50
Eutaw Community	50.00
Flint Hill (R)	17.40
Fuller's Chapel	12.00
Gibsonville	40.60
Greensboro, First Ch.	277.31
Greensboro, Palm Street	19.00
Hank's Chapel	12.00
Haw River	52.50
Hebron, Virginia	10.00
Henderson	35.00
High Point	6.25
Hines' Chapel	24.60
Hopedale	23.67
Ingram, Virginia	35.10
Kallam's Grove	2.50
Lebanon	8.00
Liberty, Vance	80.00
Morrisville	10.00
Monticello	82.10
Mount Auburn	13.85
Mount Bethel	11.00
New Lebanon	15.00
Oak Leval	14.00
Pfafftown	7.50
Pleasant Grove, N. C.	25.08
Pleasant Grove, Virginia	7.50
Pleasant Hill	18.00
Pleasant Ridge (G)	34.00
Pleasant Ridge (R)	20.00
Raleigh	79.00
Ramseur	10.00
Reidsville	155.00
Salem Chapel	42.00
Sanford	40.00
Shallow Ford	10.00
Shallow Well	25.00
Smithwood	5.00
Sophia	42.11
Spoon's Chapel	13.75
Turner's Chapel	18.33
Union Grove	7.50
Union, N. C.	75.00
Union, Virginia	45.40
Wake Chapel	55.00
Winston-Salem	27.00
Youngsville	12.50
	$ 2,845.54

Junior Societies.

Apple's Chapel	$ 23.27
Durham	23.38
Greensboro, First	8.70
Henderson	9.00
Ingram, Virginia	4.00
	68.35

Cradle Roll.

Asheboro	$ 13.40
Durham	14.44
Greensboro, First	8.70
	36.54
Total receipts	$ 2,950.43

DISBURSEMENTS.

United Church Women—
World Day of Prayer	$ 83.93
Space in Annual	24.00
Convention Office—Tel.
Calls & Mimeo. work	7.32
Literature Packets for
New Societies	7.70
Travel Expense—District
Supts.	19.90
Expense of the president	8.51
	$ 151.36
Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Treasurer,
For:
Life Memberships	$ 50.00
Thank Offering	168.34
Puerto Rican Goat Fund	556.26
Memorial	10.00
Our Christian World Mission	14.60
CARE Pkg. to India	10.00
Rachanyapuram School—
for A. Pappas	9.00
Ellis Island	7.50
Foreign Missions, Special
Fund	60.00
Home Missions, Special
Fund	20.00
Missions, General Fund	1893.37
	2,799.07
Total disbursements	$ 2,950.43

Respectfully submitted,

SUSIE D. ALLEN,
Treasurer.

* * * * *

World Day of Prayer Observed

WAVERLY.

Mrs. O. C. Osborne, reporter for our Waverly society, sends a copy of a note of appreciation which came from the local chairman for the Waverly World Day of Prayer Observance, which was held in the Episcopal Church. Here is the note, which was written by Norma A. Stierly:

"As chairman of the observance of the World Day of Prayer I want to thank you for your wonderful cooperation in connection with this observance. Every one of your members who were asked to help in any way did so graciously and gladly. It was a real pleasure to work with you on this project. The offering in its entirety has been sent to the National Council and the acknowledgement of receipt has recently been sent to me. The offering was $25.00. As you know the worldwide offerings will be apportioned to interdenominational projects in the mission fields. Thus we help to bring his Kingdom on earth."

And, in passing, may we say that this note is the gracious kind of thanks which leads to even fuller cooperation another year. Too bad all of us do not take the time and the thought to send such words of appreciation on this and similar occasions!

MONTICELLO.

Our Women's Missionary Society at Monticello enjoyed a most inspiring World Day of Prayer at our church. Four other churches joined us and members from each church had a part on the program, written by an Indian mother. This added to the interest and variety of the program. Friendship Methodist Church choir joined with our choir and helped with appropriate songs for the service.

Our attendance was the largest we have ever had and we enjoy the fellowship and interest of each church. By working together we can obtain great goals and accomplish more for the Master.

MRS. JENNINGS KERNODLE,
Reporter.

"Commissioning Members to Become Charter Members of a New Church"

Reverend Weldon T. Madren, pastor of Ingram, Pleasant Grove, and Liberty Churches, held most impressive services in each of his churches recently when members living in South Boston were granted letters of transfer to our newly organized church. The pastor and members joined in bidding farewell and God's blessings upon those members who band themselves together in this new church in South Boston. It was a sad occasion, in some respects, but the joys far exceeded any sorrow for a new and good work for Christ, our Lord, was being sponsored. Joining hands around the altar of each church, Pastor Madren and his people sang, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

As a part of this impressive service of commissioning, Mr. Madren gave the following message:

"To the members of the Ingram, Pleasant Grove and Liberty Churches who leave our fellowship to unite in forming the new Congregational Christian Church of South Boston, we have just granted to you, upon your request, letters of transfer of church membership. For all practical purposes you are ceasing to be

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

We have seen several interesting movies lately. The first was "Martin Luther" which we discovered that even a very young child could enjoy if a simple history was given before seeing the picture.

Next we saw and liked Rachel Carson's "The Sea Around Us." Since we lived on the coast, and see the tides come and go, we found it fascinating.

More recently we have seen Maurice Herzog's "Annapurna." Here again, a little explanation was necessary for the youngest, but the simple tale of how a group of Frenchmen climbed a 26,000 foot mountain, was liked by all.

Last year, just before Queen Elizabeth received her crown, some Britishers climbed a Himalayan peak, too, but the French were the first.

Filmed in brilliant color, carefully narrated and shown with restraint, we found it a moving experience. First we saw the Nepal villages where the porters were gathered. Next we saw the trip to Tibet and the spinning prayer wheels. Then the struggle to the ice and snow covered peaks and finally the desperate trip to the top of the world.

Then the more desperate flight down the mountain, the swollen streams, the rickety bridges, the men who were frostbitten, the kinds of people who helped and the arrival at the bottom.

The beauty, pain, teamwork, clouds, snow, ice, rushing streams, and the men—all—gave us a sense of God's bountiful goodness and a sense of how little we know of his world. It was a spiritual experience to witness bravery, and we recommend it for families to see together.

* * * * *

"Beginnings are Important"

By FLORENCE JANE OVENS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Public School Kindergartens, once opened, are seldom closed in order to save money or space, except when there is a lack of understanding on the part of those responsible for closing them. "Let the little ones stay at home with their mothers another year" will not be said by those who realize how serious would be the outcome. Kindergartens are not merely for little children. They are for the children of every grade and for the students of high school and of college. They are, likewise, for the self-made man and woman. They are the foundation of Education.

Of course, the kindergarten is first of all a beginning; it begins with children a year younger than those of the first grade. But so is the foundation for your house a beginning. It cannot be built at the same time as the first floor is built. What would you think of making a saving this year by omitting the foundations of all buildings that are constructed? Yet, surely, buildings are not as important as men and women.

When boys and girls enter school by way of the first grade they enter without a foundation. As a consequence, most of them know little about correct attitudes of thought and next to nothing about the purpose of reading. Few of them, therefore, can accomplish the first-grade work in one year. But the schools are crowded and so these boys and girls must be pushed on into the next grade. Their pride is saved by this promotion, but otherwise they are worse off than before, for the second grade is too difficult for them. Why doesn't the teacher help them? The classes are so crowded it is seldom possible for her to give individual assistance. Oh, for the "Reading Readiness" program they would have had in kindergarten! As it is, the little child, at times miserably unhappy, struggles on. Even many of those who are of more than average ability never do learn to read intelligently, and so they go on from grade to grade, handicapped at every step. How can they have good lessons in such studies as geography, history, and language, or how can they attack arithmetic problems wisely when their reading ability is so poor?

Discouragement and humiliation become daily experiences and school becomes an unhappy place. Some children dread it to such an extent that they play truant, and, as you know, truancy leads to delinquency in many forms.

Now let us look a few moments at the kindergarten and see what it is and what it does. Supt. of Schools, F. J. Sickles, of New Brunswick, New Jersey, writing on this subject, says in substance:

"The kindergarten is a laboratory for the right kind of social development, where the child engages with pleasure in all kinds of self-expression. Lessons in cooperation, tolerance, self-control, citizenship, group living and the like are learned in completely valid fashion—through use. The kindergarten is also a workshop where the child may experiment freely with varied materials. Here, for him, are the beginnings of science, language expression, the arts, concepts of number, space, and relationships.

"The healthful mental hygiene attitudes of the kindergarten give the young child the right start for a successful life in school. He learns self-confidence, the way to accomplish his purpose without infringing on the rights of others, how to follow directions, how to take responsibility to the degree reasonable for his development, and how to make friends. All of these things make the actual task of learning to read definitely easier—if one wishes to stress the purely practical angel. The learnings incident to living in a friendly, well-run kindergarten are much broader than this, however, and function equally well at the sixth, tenth, or the twelfth grade levels. Truly, beginnings are important."

And Col. James M. Jones, Warden of the Nebraska State Penitentiary, tells us:

"There is little doubt that an educational system which takes the young child of very tender years and places him in the classroom, without the transition period provided for by the kindergarten, makes a big contribution toward his feeling of confusion and helplessness. The problems of childhood are thus compounded beyond the ability of the child to adapt himself. It is highly possible that the lack of a kindergarten program has been the beginning of many adult delinquencies."

Many imagine that the higher you go, the easier the climbing. Don't be governed by that theory unless you have a soft spot to fall back in.

J. L. Boggus.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Youth Fellowship of Bethlehem (Nans.) at Work Under the Leadership of Mrs. Evelyn Graham

We meet first and third Sunday nights of each month at the church. The group joined together in November for the World Day for Christ. We made and sold ninety-six pounds of chicken salad, besides cakes. One member sold greeting cards. From these activities our group collected $109.00.

The first Sunday night in December we conducted a church worship program showing the picture "O Holy Night." A fellowship hour was enjoyed after the service in the Fellowship Hall. Third Sunday night in December the Senior Choir joined with us in Christmas Caroling. We divided into groups and visited twenty-one shut-ins, and carried each a Poinsetta. We came back to the Fellowship Hall for sandwiches and cocoa and shared our experiences.

We feel that we have had one of the most interesting Youth Weeks in the history of our church. Our Junior High Young People filled the choir fifth Sunday morning. That night we visited the parsonage at which time Father Joseph Leitch, Catholic Priest of St. Mary's Church, Suffolk, Virginia, talked to us. Wednesday morning our young people presented a broadcast of morning worship over radio station W. L. P. M. Wednesday night our young people's Sunday school class served a bar-be-cue supper, after which the Bethlehem Church women sponsored the film, "The Hidden Heart" for the public, then entertained at a lovely reception in the Fellowship Hall. First Sunday morning the youth were in charge of the morning worship service at church. The Senior Young People filled the choir. Edward Felton of the Holland Baptist Church spoke to us.

At our regular meeting Sunday night Mrs. Brittle carried us on a visit to many of our mission posts.

We were privileged to hear Dr. Murray Kantar of the Jewish Synagogue in Suffolk, who talked on world community or one world.

On Sunday night, February 14, we visited the Holland Youth Fellowship and heard Miss Pattie Lee Coghill review our study book, "Who."

PATRICIA BRYANT,
Reporter.

WANTED!!!

News

From

Your

Youth

Group

For

This Column

Juvenile Delinquency—What About It?

By S. M. SMITH.

This has come to be one of the nation's greatest problems. What are we going to do about it? Who is responsible?

Let's look at the facts. It is evident that the responsibility rests, first upon parents in the home; second, on the teachers in our Sunday and day schools. Next let's see what the Attorney General of the United States, Dr. Herbert Brownell, has to say: "If it were announced that one million children would show the symptoms of cholera in the next twelve months, it would be headline news in all our daily papers. Phone bells would ring in every physician's office. Parents would be alarmed." This doesn't happen to be the case. J. Edgar Hoover, in Washington is admired for the fine work he has done and is doing for our nation in building a higher type of citizenship. Let's see what he says in the Syracuse Law Review: "The solution of the problem of juvenile delinquency lies in intelligent, co-ordinated action on the part of parents which demands full cooperation of adult society generally." All this helps to create a respect on the part of the youngster himself.

It is estimated that during the next twelve months around one million boys and girls will be picked up by the police. What were they doing?—all manner of things, most of them not very serious. Some are just pranks. The more serious of these cases land in court. The wise judge will summon the parents. All too many of these youngsters are the victims of divorce courts—separation of parents, etc.

This writer served some years ago as Educational and Religious Work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Memphis, Tenn. The Juvenile Judge was a very fine young fellow—unmarried. He felt keenly his responsibility. There was in the city an elderly lady who was a retired teacher and playground director. She seemed to know all the youngsters and they loved her. The young judge never held court unless she could be present. The writer was called into conference. It was decided that if a boy seemed to be disposed to be incorrigible, he should be sentenced to the Y. M. C. A. for so many hours

(Continued on page 14.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Betrayal and Crucifixion"

LESSON II—APRIL 11, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I, when I am lifted up from the earth, will draw all men to myself." John 12: 32.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 18, 19.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 16.

"There they crucified him." John gives us but a few of the details of the crucifixion. He simply states the fact that Jesus was crucified. That is enough. There is no need to dwell on the gruesome details of that unthinkable mode of putting people to death. There is need to think about what the death of Christ on the Cross meant. It tells us a great deal about the badness of men and the goodness of God.

The Cross and the Badness of Men.

It seems unthinkable that such an one as the Son of God should be put to death, and to death on the Cross. There is only one explanation of it—the badness or the meanness or the sinfulness of men. It was sin that nailed Jesus to the Cross. And that sin found expression in various forms. Cupidity, avarice, cowardice, pride, selfishness, envy, love of prestige, love of power, indifference, callousness, cruelty, and other sins of the spirit entered into the Crucifixion. These sins found embodiment in the lives of those who were participants in this great tragedy—the Jews, the Scribes, the Pharisees, Judas, Pilate, the Herodians, the crowd, the Romans, the soldiers, even the disciples of Jesus themselves. One does not understand the Crucifixion if he looks only at those who had a part in it; he must discover the motives and the passions that actually caused it. And when one considers all this, he is awed, and he should be humbled by what he sees. As the prophet of old said, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked, who can know it?" (Jer. 17: 9) If human nature in the raw could do what was done to Jesus, then it needs redemption. Nothing so clearly and dramatically shows the need of sinful humanity for radical, inward change of heart, more than the Crucifixion.

It should be noted that these same sins of the spirit are still crucifying

"The Son of God afresh." When we are cruel or unkind, when we are bigoted and prejudiced and intolerant, when we are wilful and disobedient, when we are unloving and unlovable, we drive the nails again into the body of our Lord. The Cross is a continuing or continuous affair. Before we condemn the men of Jesus' day for crucifying him, let us take a look at ourselves and ask ourselves whether we are not now participants in the tragedy.

The Cross and the Goodness of God.

Even as the Cross reveals the badness of men, so does it reveal the goodness and grace of God. "If God were good," says the world, "the sin of the earth would break his heart." To which the Christian replies, pointing to the Cross, "It does, see his breaking heart." (Buttrick) Even as it was sin that sent Jesus to the Cross, so was it love that prompted him to go there. One misses the whole point of Calvary if he thinks it was a mechanical, arbitrary, forced thing; for Jesus did not have to go to the Cross. "I lay down my life; no man taketh it from me. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." In Gethsemane Jesus made his final decision to go to the Cross. And that decision was based on his obedience to the Father and on his love for men. In the Cross, God in Christ was showing men how much he loved them, to what extent he would go to save them, and what it cost to effect their salvation. God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself. Christ on the Cross was beseeching men to become reconciled to God.

There have been many theories as to what happened on the Cross, many interpretations as to its meaning for our salvation. But underlying them all has been the conviction that what happened there had meaning for our salvation. Christ died for our sins. He gave himself for us. By his death, he made possible, salvation through faith. The basic idea is expressed by an old negro woman who brought her five year old boy to see the body of Abraham Lincoln as it lay in state in Cleveland. She said to the boy, "Take a long, long look at him, boy; dat man died for you." "Christ died for me"—that is the message of the Cross. It is the greatest expression of the love of God—greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. It is the greatest incentive to noble living and sacrificial service—freely we have received, freely we ought to give.

* * *

John gives us a few touches concerning the Cross and the Crucifixion worth consideration. He tells about the inscription which Pilate had had fastened to the Cross, "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." It was irony and satire and cynicism on his part. But it was an unwitting tribute to the true character and mission of Jesus. The broken man was a King, a King to win and hold men through all the ages, while men shudder at the mention of the name of Pilate.

And then there is that beautiful incident when Jesus sees his mother standing near the Cross, and commends her to John's keeping, and commends John to her. Even in the hour of death, he was thinking of others. Even at death's door, he made provision for his mother. He was always thinking of others. Having loved his own he loved then unto the end.

"It is finished." What was finished? His work? His influence? His power? No, in a way they had just begun. To be sure his earthly life was about to come to an end. And his earthly work was finished. But the work of salvation was just beginning. And his influence and his power were beginning a redemptive work that has continued and grown until this day, and the end is not yet.

There is a note of tragedy in the Cross. But there is a note of triumph in the Cross too. Indeed that is the dominant note. After men had done their worst, in spite of the worst that they could do, God was victor in the Cross. Human sin is powerful but God is more powerful. Wherein sin abounds, grace does much more abound.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

When a man becomes a true Christian, he becomes industrious, trustworthy and prosperous. Now, if that man, whilst he gets all he can and saves all he can, does not give all he can, I have more hope of Judas Iscariot than for him.—John Wesley.

"THE SPIRITUAL GAIN IN ALL EVENTS."

(Continued from page 5.)

"But," said the professor, "you said tragedy. Tragic for whom? Certainly not for Jesus." Then the professor made this statement which I still stutter over and have not mastered: "There is no such thing as being a victim of a tragedy one does not deserve." That is a strong statement, but I believe he was driving at the thing we are after here, namely, that the Christian must look upon every event according to the stuff that is within us. Jesus wore plaited thorns, and wore them as a crown.

Golgotha signifies a unique occurrence in Christian history. But Golgotha was a little hill—what happened there that night might have happened anywhere—there is nothing significant about the place. There is nothing significant about the people who caused it—had Jesus lived in our day, our own sins would have contrived the same. The manner of his death—there are other cruel deaths. We speak of the crucifixion, but there were three crucifixions that day, on the same hill, at the same time, done by the same citizens. One man, by his own admission, received the just reward for his acts. Tradition has it that the second man was innocent, caught with a robber band of which he was an accidental and momentary member, but unable to prove his innocence. But the third Sufferer was there for an entirely different reason, and the significance of his being there was so great that it has eclipsed all other events in history. It was by reason of the kind of person that hung there that redemptive value ensued. So every event has its inwardness—its spiritual gain—not just the apparent tragedy or triumph. Jesus wore the thorns they placed upon his head as a crown.

To the person without God, then, events, if they be disastrous, have no value whatsoever except their face value. To him they mean that there is no God at all, or if there be one, he either has no power in his world or he does not care. When all is pleasant it is a good sort of life, but when disaster befalls, then rebellion and bitterness and resentment pile up. The event has only face value. And because of its nature it is all loss.

But to the Christian there is spiritual significance to every event. The secret of spiritual gain, even in tragedy, is to be found, not in asking, "What have I done to deserve this?" but rather to say, "Out of this I shall win something splendid; God help me, that in the wearing of thorns, I make of them a crown."

Dr. Gossip goes even further—I'm not too clear about this now, but I always listen, breathless, when the great Scotch preacher speaks. He confesses that the mysteries of Providence are very deep and catch the breath, with darkness too dark for our poor eyesight. But to Christ this is an orderly universe, not haphazard. He condemned in strongest terms the accusation that the 18 men upon whom the tower of Siloam fell were unusual sinners—that was too easy a solution. But listen to the great preacher: "When it grew plain that the influential folk and learned people had decided against him, and were about to bring all their authority to bear to put him down, he did not say, faced by disappointment and seeming disaster, 'Call it prejudice or conservatism, or human narrow-mindedness, but don't call it God.' He did call it God, and accepted it as put into his hands by God's. 'The cup that my Father giveth me, will I not drink it?' So it is if the harsh things of life are faced and accepted, not with snarls and snapping teeth of a trapped brute, but with the loving trusting spirit of a child, they do deepen and beautify character, and do teach many central things, not easily if at all, to be learned by any gentler or less painful method." Ah, this is very deep. But if we had no trials, no struggles, no disappointments, no suffering—if all life were a tropical lush of satisfaction and ease, what idiots we would be, characterless, devoid of courage or gratitude or patience or sympathy; just wooden Charlie McCartys pulled by the strings of a whimsical Edgar Bergen. Even Christ was made perfect through the things which he suffered. No—whether they are willed by God or just allowed by God—I only know that while Jesus did not make plain just why there are the thorns, when he had to wear them, he wore them as a crown.

Personality is God's greatest gift. It is the most powerful force in the world. It is the most tremendous thing of which we are stewards. The obligation of the person to develop himself and all his powers is his first and most important obligation as a steward.—J Earl Crawford.

"COMMISSIONING MEMBERS TO A NEW CHURCH."

(Continued from page 9.)

active members of this church (these churches) and becoming members of our infant church of South Boston. You join with men and women of like mind to form a new church within the fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches. With these letters go our love and blessings. We, too, believe that you are following the commission of our Lord.

"The establishing of a Church in South Boston is a great challenge, demanding great sacrifice. It takes great faith for a few men and women to separate from traditions and sentiments of an established church which they love and undertake such a venture as this new church is.

"You have not made this decision alone. Ingram, Pleasant Grove, Liberty and other churches of this area share membership and hopes with us in this new venture of faith. We promise we will still share this challenge with you through prayer and through such material assistance as we can give.

"Many and varied reasons have been given for the establishment of a church in South Boston. We recognize the need for an additional church in that growing center, to which many of our people in the past have moved, and more will follow in the future. There is need for a church of our faith in that growing city because there are still unchurched people, and because we desire to help fulfil the commission given us by our Lord.

"It is with deep affection and respect for you and the cause to which you devote yourself that we bid you God's blessings. Sentimentally, we regret to lose so many loyal and devoted members. Yet we know we continue that fellowship in our larger work. We claim with you that promise of our Lord, 'I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' 'Lo., I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.' May God richly bless you and the work you shall do in his name."

It is our prophesy that these good churches will not lose but will gain in this new life. "He that loseth his life for my sake shall save it." Those are words of promise from our Lord—to individuals—yes, and to churches also. Our thanks to Mr. Madren for this thoughtful service.

WM. T. SCOTT.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

This is not a good day for me to write my letter for THE SUN since tomorrow is pay day for the orphanage staff and we lack $626.69 of having enough to meet the pay roll. I have been trying to stop worrying over our finances, and was doing fairly well, but now what am I going to do. No, I know it will not bring in any more money, may be less; but it is hard to stop worrying when we do not have enough to pay the wages and the same amount for current bills. To be sure we do get a trickle, and we can always hope that before the next month's pay roll has to be met it may come a "rain of good fortune, or funds, or something."

My friends want the facts, well, there goes—and with Easter just around the corner. Only this one more word. The members of our staff are doing a full days work every day and they are happy, and the children are well and happy.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 25, 1954.
Commodities for the Week.

Clothing:
Mrs. R. C. Luke, Sr., Hampton, Va.
Flint Hill Missionary Society, Sophia, N. C.
Coupons:
Liberty Missionary Society, Liberty, N. C.
Pay View Cong. Christian Church.
Woman's Missionary Society, Elm Ave.
Cong. Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 3,163.49
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Clayton	$ 33.00
	33.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Newport News S. S.	$ 15.00
Windsor S. S.	10.00
	25.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Albemarle	$ 25.00
Flint Hill (M)	9.26
Shiloh	9.37
Zion	30.00
	73.63
Virginia Valley Conference:
Linville S. S.	$ 5.83
	5.83
Total	$ 137.46

Grand total $ 3,300.95

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 6,553.51
A Friend	$ 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. W. Kern-
stine, Greensboro, N. C.	5.00

Sunday School Children, Cong. Christian Church, Lincoln, Kansas	5.00
Women's Fellowship, Bay View Church	16.55
W. T. Oakes, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Friendship Bible Class, Cong. Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.	25.00
H. F. Mitchell, Jr., Bur- lington, N. C.	5.00
A Friend, Greensboro, N. C. (For Easter Shoes)	25.00
	91.55
Grand total	$ 6,645.06
Total for the week	$ 229.01
Total for the year	$ 9,946.01

Knowing and Doing

No one who really has knowledge fails to practice it. Knowledge without practice should be interpreted as lack of knowledge. Sages and virtuous men teach men to know how to act, because they wish them to return to Nature. They do not tell them merely to reflect and let that suffice.

A person must certainly have experienced pain before he can know what it is; and to understand hunger, one must have been hungry. How, then, can knowledge and practice be separated? The sage instructs the individual that he must practice before he may be said to have understanding. If he fails to practice, he does not understand. Knowledge is the beginning of practice; doing is the completion of knowing.

The sooner we come to understand that things can be done without our assistance, the sooner we reach our philosophy of life.—Batten.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY—
WHAT ABOUT IT?

(Continued from page 11.)

each day. He was provided with a membership card in the boys' department. There he spent a part of each day under the supervision of the Boys' Work secretary. He had no opportunity to run with the old gang. He learned a new language, acquired better habits. Some of these boys are today successful Y. M. C. A. secretaries. Too much cannot be said in favor of what the Boy Scout movement has done to build strong men out of average boys. His promise is to "do a good turn every day." He is taught to respect the uniform he wears, as does an officer in the United States Army. He is taught to live Boy Scout principles in his home and in his neighborhood.

The age of juvenile delinquents is usually from ten to seventeen years.

The closing of schools during the summer months creates another problem—a youngster's hands as well as his mind must be kept busy.

To meet this, summer camps are provided. Here the civic clubs and churches step in and take over the supervision. The boys and girls of today are the fathers and mothers of tomorrow—the future citizenship of our nation. One of the Ten Commandments reads: "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Truly great then is the responsibility of every one of us. May we feel the weight of it.

All worthwhile men have good thoughts, good ideas and good intentions, but precious few of them ever translate those into action.—Field.

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

LAYMEN SHOULD DEVELOP EVANGELISM and CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

(Continued from page 3.)

especially for those who are not regular attendants or members.

When a call is made, the conversation may not touch on all of the necessary sources of interest. If a well written, attractive piece of material can be left, it may serve as the clinching argument for a particular decision or a concrete action.

The information left should always have the name and address of the church and something of its program, together with a notation as to the name at least of the caller. Even a plain calling card with a written notation on it is better than nothing at all.

2. MORE THAN ONE VISIT.

One large metropolitan church has four separate visitations each year and only one of them is concerned with money. The visitors are instructed not to accept payments on contributions or discuss money.

Frequent visits, at least two a year, will let the regular attendant know that he is appreciated and encourage the irregular member to know that he is desired in the future. Visits to shut-ins are especially valuable and should be made as frequently as possible.

3. DIFFERENT CALLERS.

Like it or not, there are occasionally conflicts in personalities. This is something immediately felt by both parties and more often, it is well concealed. Even such a possibility is avoided if the callers do not always call on the same people.

Many men have been reluctant to make calls on the ground that they did not know at all, or very well, the persons to be called upon. This may be one of the best results of the visitation because friendship is best appreciated when the circle is wide and new friends are brought in.

Excellent results can be achieved when callers change just one partner of the pair making the calls, thereby leaving some connection with the past visit but allowing for a fresh approach and a new contact by the new person.

4. VISITORS GO IN PAIRS.

Most visitation is done by two persons, going as a team. Of course this has biblical approval but there are many other good reasons for its adoption.

Two heads are usually better than one, even in church work.

Visitation should not be done by only men or only women. There are some couples, just married, middle age and even of the older group, that do an excellent job of visiting as a team. Such a visit might be a valuable ministry to a home where marital conditions are slightly strained.

5. RECORDS OF VISITS.

While the greatest result for a visit should be manifest at the time or immediately following, it is well to have some sort of a record made of the call. Many churches use elaborate reports while others use a 3x5 card with a very few blanks to be filled in.

Some churches have the name and address of the people to be called

INFLUENCE.

If self in love is hidden,
And we listen carefully,
Our hearts will be filled with longing
To set some spirit free.

For oft in the heart lies buried
A spark that will there remain
'Til magic wand of word or deed
Fans it into flame.

How well do we remember
The joy that has been ours;
How our hearts have been uplifted
By a note, a book, or flowers.

As I look o're the long, long years
I have journeyed on life's way,
Such little acts of kindness
Shine in my memory.

—GRACE ABRAHAM.

upon on a small card and ask their visitors to place their remarks on the back of the same card. This prevents duplication of visits altho it necessitates preparation of a complete set of cards for each visitation.

6. FOLLOW UP.

The followup of visitation evangelism is most important. A decision to move a membership or join on some other basis was secured. Was it done? Some one wanted to participate in some program of the church. Did he attend and was it profitably enjoyed? These and hundreds of other questions will be answered only by a follow-through of the visit made.

The best results of a personal visitation evangelism are secured by continuous visits, sometimes through a phone call, a birthday, anniversary or other greeting card or through personal prayer in times of sorrow or difficulty.

A good follow-through helps build fellowship, not only among the people involved but between them and their church and, we hope, between them and their God. This is the supreme object of personal visitation evangelism.

Goal—Regular Church Attendance.

Many churches have recently been making an exact count of the people who attend church on Sunday morning, often keeping record for the number of men, women and children in separate categories. This is good. Records are posted, showing attendance of men is on the increase.

Regular church attendance is not the key to unlock the gates of Heaven but it will help. The person who goes to church regularly helps himself, the minister and others. His presence is an affirmation of his belief in the Christian way of life.

One of the easiest items to talk about in making calls for the church is church attendance. Church attendance means more than Sunday morning worship services, too; it includes participation in all of the church meetings, business, worship and social.

Why do some people not attend church? One reason is that they have never been asked. How many people have you told recently that "I'll see you in church Sunday"? Better still, have you tried calling for them and taking them in your car? Even letting people know that they are expected to go to church regularly will help increase attendance some.

Church attendance by Protestants is always compared to Mass attendance by Catholics. So far as the loyalty, devotion and regularity is concerned, this is also good. Each person is responsible for his own relationship with God and pointing an accusing finger at the practices or failures of someone else is poor business.

The principal of regularity in life, especially in church attendance, is extremely noteworthy. The world of nature was created with full appreciation of an orderly routine and regularity of events. The stars, sun and moon, all shine and the seasons come and go with clocklike precision. Is not the least man can do to acknowledge his appreciation to be regular in giving thanks, worshiping God and enjoying fellowship with the Maker and mankind?

Let's go to church more often and regularly!

Ordination Prayer

At the Ordination of Wm. T. Scott, Jr.
Cornwall, Connecticut, February 10, 1954

O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth. Thou hast made us and not we ourselves. Through all time and in all places thou hast caused to rise up true witnesses of thyself. Thou hast made thyself known throughout all ages by thy manifold works and by thy servants. Thy world and all things great and small tell us thy loving greatness. Through thy Son, Jesus Christ, thou hast given us the revelation of thy great and endless love. Through him we know thou art our Father, and through him we dare approach thy throne of Grace.

O most loving Father, who hast made us for thyself and who gavest us life abundant in finding thee, in loving thee and in serving those whom thou dost love; we come to thee in this high moment to give thee thanks for thyself and to remember thy bountiful and precious gifts to us all the days of our life.

For all the lovely moments of home, of adorable infancy, bounding childhood, eager youth, and devoted young manhood, we give thee thanks. That thou hast entrusted to us the parenthood of this thy servant, we give thee thanks, bowing in humble gratitude. For all our failures and inadequacies we pray for thy pardon. For the gracious calling of the Lord coming upon this our firstborn we adore thee and bow in humble, glad surrender and devotion.

We give thee thanks for his lovely companion and for their little son. Bless their home with thy holy presence, that together they may praise thee. Deliver them from faithless fears and worldly anxiety, and grant that no clouds of this mortal life may hide from them the light of thy love. Uphold them in thy holy purpose. Honor them with good the doors of peace.

"Make him a prophet of thy truth, O Lord, seeing clearly and speaking bravely, without hatred, bitterness or fear, but ever with his face turned toward the morning of a better day. May every cause of righteousness and brotherhood be stronger for his ministry. Help him to bring wider horizons of sympathy and social vision to all who hear him.

Use him as a clarion call to justice and good will.

"Send him forth, we pray thee, an architect and builder of the universal Church, lofty as the love of God and ample as the needs of health, alert minds and ready hands to do thy will.

We give thee thanks for all who have taught and encouraged this thy servant to this good day. To the people of this community and the church with which he serves thee may there come the beauty of thy peace. Together may they seek and find the secret of thy presence, and may they lose themselves in thy service that they may find thee and life eternal which thou art.

"O God, our heavenly Father, who art also the God of the living Church: send thy benediction, we pray thee, upon this thy servant whom we set aside this day for the work of the Christian ministry. Ordain him to thine own service and make him wholly thine. Quicken within him an abiding sensitivity to thy presence, that he may ever live not in himself but in thee. Deepen his sense of fellowship with all sorts and conditions of men and give him an understanding heart, that he may minister to all troubled souls and open to them man. Above all races, creeds and nations give him the vision of universal peace and brotherhood that the kingdom of God may come close to men because of him.

"To this end we pray that he may walk very close to Jesus Christ, his Saviour and the Lord and Bishop of his soul, that, whatever else men may think or say of him, they may take note that he has been with Jesus. So shall he be ordained indeed a Minister of Christ and servant of the Most High."

Be thou to us holy hands laid upon his head in benediction. Transmit to him now the secret of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

"And now unto him who is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy. To the only wise God, our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

WM. T. SCOTT, SR.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES
In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1954

NUMBER 14

Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church

Host Church to

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

April 27, 28, 29, 1954

News Flashes

Timothy S. Chang was a guest of Supt. and Mrs. Wm. T. Scott in Elon College, last week. Timothy is continuing his studies at Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Would you like to see 7,000 families in The Southern Convention receiving THE CHRISTIAN SUN each week? In a letter to our pastors this week, Dr. Scott tells how he thinks it can be done. We reprint his letter for your consideration.

Rev. Melvin Dollar completed his second year as pastor of Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, on March 14. On that day he received sixteen new members into the church, making a total of 173 new members received in the two years of his pastorate.

We honestly believe that if a half-dozen of our ministers would write a half-dozen letters each week as newsy as that addressed by Dr. Scott to "Dear John T." in this week's issue, the larger part of our subscription problem would be eliminated.

Rev. and Mrs. William Richards, who have been spending the winter months with their son, Dr. Charles Richards of the Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, have returned to their home in Cambridge, Nebraska. The church looks forward to their return this fall.

In this issue is reprinted in part a letter from Supt. Scott relative to the Easter Offering for Missions. While addressed primarily to our ministers, it applies equally to laymen. We might add that Easter is a good time for you to bring your Cent-a-Meal offering for Missions to the church.

Anyone interested in attending the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches, June 23-30, New Haven, Conn., and attending as a delegate from the North Carolina & Virginia Conference, should notify the conference secretary, Wm. J. Andes, 637 S. Simset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Sloan of Elon College are serving as supply pastors at the Belew Creek and Salem Chapel Churches, near Winston-Salem, N. C. Salem Chapel is progressing nicely with the renovation of the church building. A lovely brick structure with white plastered walls on the inside, speaks "Church" to the passerby and to the attendant at its services.

The First Christian Church in the city of Burlington, N. C., Dr. H. E. Robinson, pastor, and the Beverly Hills Christian Church, Rev. W. W. Snider, pastor, united this week in a series of pre-Easter Evangelistic services. Dr. Wofford C. Timmons, who recently became pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship at Southern Pines, has brought the series of messages for the week.

Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean emeritus of the Yale University Divinity School and chairman of the Standard Bible Committee, announced recently that the sales of the various RSV editions since the original edition of the Revised Standard Version was released some 17 months ago, had reached 2,647,000. Sales of the Pulpit Bible, RSV, which came off the press last month have passed the 2000 mark.

The community and churches of Pfafftown, N. C., recently won an "Honor Award" for achieving a better looking community and developing and bettering the homes and the community's various buildings. Our Community Congregational Church at Pfafftown has bought additional land, improved the driveway around the church and is landscaping its grounds. The church building is to be painted on the outside this spring.

Oscar Smith Memorial Plaque Dedicated at Rosemont

The Service of Dedication of the Oscar Smith Memorial Plaque of the Rosemont Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, was held on Sunday, April 4, at 2:30 p.m. The church consecrated the new Religious Education Building, and the Memorial Plaque was erected in memory of Mr. Smith for his life-long service to the church.

Mr. Irving B. Kline, a business man, gave a most inspiring tribute to Mr. Smith as a friend. All those who

(Continued on page 15.)

Holy Week at Winston-Salem

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, Conn., will be the guest speaker at the Winston-Salem United Congregational Church, April 13 to 18. Services are planned in co-operation with the St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, now also using our church building. Dr. Potter arrives on Monday, April 12, and speaks to the Wentz Memorial Congregational Church on East Fourteenth Street, Winston-Salem.

Tuesday, Dr. Potter begins at the United Church, W. Academy Street, and continues each night at 7:30 through Friday night. Friday afternoon and Saturday, he will attend functions of the Moravian Church relative to their Easter Sunrise Service. He will speak again at 11 a.m., Sunday at our church.

Music for the week will be furnished by the following choirs: Tuesday, Junior Choirs of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church and of our church. Wednesday, Choirs of Belew Creek and Pfafftown Churches, with Salem Chapel furnishing the ushers. Thursday at the Communion Service we will have congregational singing. On Friday, the Adult Choirs of both our church and St. Timothy's Church. Sunday at 11 a.m., both Choirs of the Congregational Church will sing.

Many people in this area know and love Dr. Potter. They are invited to hear and see him, April 13 to 18, in Winston-Salem.

W. J. ANDES,
Minister.

A Newsy Letter from W. T. Scott

April 4, 1954.
Suffolk, Va.,

Dear John T.:

I talked with Mrs. Scott via phone tonight and learned from her that Timothy Chang's mother passed away in China, following a long illness. News is hard to get from China and though her death occurred several weeks ago, Timothy has just received the news.

She was a second-generation Christian and for many years was the head of one of our American Board schools. She reared a large family of wonderful children. Paul, Silas, Timothy, Philip, Miriam, Simon, are the names of six of them, and their names tell how dear to this good woman was her Christian faith.

(Continued on page 11.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

A Letter from President Williams

1253—24th Street

Newport News, Virginia

Dear Co-Workers:

The Southern Convention Laymen's Fellowship will hold a banquet in connection with the biennial session of the Southern Convention which will be held at the Bethlehem (Nansemond) Congregational Christian Church, located near Suffolk, Va., April 27, 28, 29, 1954.

We have been most fortunate in securing for our guest speaker, Dr. Samuel N. Stevens, the president of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa. Dr. Stevens will have for the subject of his address, "Tomorrow's Challenge to Higher Christian Education."

Plans have been made for our banquet to be held at the Suffolk Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., on Tuesday evening, April 27, beginning at 6:00 o'clock. The cost of the tickets will be $1.50.

In order to let the women of the Suffolk Church know just how many to prepare for, we have sent out cards to the various church organizations. These should be returned immediately.

We hope you will plan now to attend this very important meeting of our laymen.

Yours very sincerely,

W. B. WILLIAMS,

Chairman.

* * * * *

Complete Moonelon Report Will Be Given at the Southern Convention Meeting

A complete report of the work which has been done and the money which has been secured will be given at the biennial session of the Southern Convention when it meets in Suffolk, April 27, 1954. In order for the report to be complete, it is requested that all men's groups which have collected monies for this project send them to Mr. S. H. Pell, Ramseur, N. C., immediately. This should be done not later than the 15 of April if the results of your work are to be included in the report to the convention. Won't you please check in your local groups to see that this has been taken care of? Thank you very much.

J. E. DANIELEY.

Nation's Television Stations Will Present "I Beheld His Glory."

The nation's television stations will give nearly blanket coverage this Easter to a one-hour film story of Christ's last days on earth, entitled, "I Beheld His Glory."

The program, which will emphasize the religious significance of Easter to millions of Christians, has been made available to the 370 stations now operating by the 30 Protestant and Orthodox communions working through the National Council of Churches' Broadcasting and Film Commission.

DR. SAMUEL N. STEVENS

When the film had its premier a year ago, church leaders acclaimed it (Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim)J. T. Kernodle

Managing EditorJ. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stauley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year$3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun

() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Are You a Delegate to the Convention?

In just a little more than two weeks The Southern Convention will be in session at Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, for the consideration of the carrying on of the work of God's Kingdom here on earth.

Have you been selected by your church as a delegate to this important meeting? If so this short message is to you.

Each two years, the churches of Virginia and North Carolina that are a part of the denomination called Congregational Christian send their representatives that they may confer together as to the best ways and means of carrying on their work. It is true that we have boards, committees, officers and a superintendent, who are charged with the responsibility of carrying out the program of these united churches. But is you, the delegates of these churches who are responsible for seeing that these agencies carry out the will of the churches. So the ultimate responsibility is your own.

May we suggest, then, that if you are a delegate, that you familiarize yourself with the program as it is presented in this issue. That you find your 1952 Annual and read carefully the actions that were taken in the 1952 session of the Convention, and that you make as sure as possible what the program for the coming biennium should be.

Have a good time while you are at the Convention, sure. But do not let a good time interfere with the solemn obligation of seeing that there is outlined for the officers, boards and committees that must function during the next two years a program that will advance the total work of the Kingdom in the Southern Convention.

If you are an appointed delegate, think on these things. *

Make Camp This Year

Camps and conferences have happily become one of the most important features in the life of our churches and of our state or regional conferences. With special emphasis upon the needs of young people and children, they nevertheless can fill a tremendously urgent need in the religious experience of any adult.

We urge you, then, to make camp somewhere this year, and to make it possible for your children to do likewise.

Summer camps, conferences, and institutes may vary, of course, in their relative value and relevance to our various needs. They differ widely in skill and training of their faculties and in the adequacy of their facilities.

Many, however, are the arguments which can be brought forward to urge our attention upon camps. We can help to make up, for instance, the perilous deficiency in the amount of time we ordinarily give to religious affairs. We get to a beautiful spot where Nature herself brings us a message of love and works of God. We get out of our own little backyard and see another section of the country. We meet new people. We can more easily concentrate on the affairs of the Kingdom. We find ourselves often exceptionally stirred in heart and mind. We come to understand the minds of young people or older people. We come to know the benefits of prayer and discussion together and of quiet reading. We enjoy the lighter moments at the dining table or in the social hall or in the recreation rooms.

Every pastor can cite instances of complete transformation at camps, in the lives of young and old alike. Anyone who has served as counselor or leader, too, knows what wonderful enrichment can come thereby into his life (even if, as a result of the experiences, he may be more tired physically than he has been in years!).

We need camps and institutions because most of us cannot find an adequate, well-rounded program in our own locality, and many of the features offered are practical only for a larger and more representative group. We can well discuss at regional camps some of our distinctively Southeast programs and perhaps set up an institute on the spiritual life or on church and community which could draw leaders from all over the South and delegates from all our conferences. We need to interpret to one another our Congregational Christian mission in the South and we need to set up a type of institute or conference which will rank with the best, concentrating each year, perhaps, on some one great need.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

Program of the Forty-First Biennial Session of
The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc.

* * *

BETHLEHEM CONGREGATIONAL
CHRISTIAN CHURCH
SUFFOLK, VIRGINIA

APRIL 27, 28, 29, 1954

* * *

REV. R. E. BRITTLE, Minister

* * *

CONVENTION THEME: "Life and Task of the Church"

"I will build my Church . . ."

"As the Father hath sent me, so send I you . . ."

"Go ye therefore and teach all nations . . ."

* * *

CONVENTION HYMN: "God of Grace and God of Glory"

* * *

PROGRAM

TUESDAY, APRIL 27, 1954

Afternoon Session

2:00 Convention called to order by
Rev. W. Millard Stevens, D.
D., President, Norfolk, Virginia

Convention Hymn: "God of Grace and God of Glory."

Invocation—Rev. I. W. Johnson, D. D., Suffolk, Virginia.

Words of Welcome—Rev. R.
E. Brittle, Host Pastor.

Determining Quorum.

Recognition of New Ministers,
Fraternal Delegates and Visitors.

Report of Program Committee.
Announcement of Committee appointments.

Worship Service—Rev. W. C.
Timmons, Chaplain, Southern Pines, N. C.

2:30 Reports (To be considered for adoption Wednesday Morning):

Executive Board—Rev. Henry
E. Robinson, D.D., Secretary,
Burlington, N. C.

Superintendent—Rev. Wm. T.
Scott, D. D., Elon College,
N. C.

Educational Secretary—Miss
Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon
College, N. C.

Treasurer—Geo. D. Coleclough,
Elon College, N. C.

Mission Board—Mrs. John G.
Truitt, Chairman, Elon College, N. C.

Board of Christian Education
—Rev. W. J. Andes, Chairman, Winston-Salem, N. C.
Board of Publications—Rev.
Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D.,
Chairman, Richmond, Va.

Rural Church Committee—
Rev. James H. Lightbourne,
Chairman, Holland, Va.

Stewardship Commission—
Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, D. D.,
Chairman, Suffolk, Va.

Finance Committee (First Reading)—Rev. Stanley C.
Harrell, D. D. Chairman,
Durham, N. C.

3:45 Hymn 141—"Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken."

Address—"The Nature of the Church"—Dr. W. Millard
Stevens.

4:30 Adjournment of Afternoon
Session.

4:40 Hearings:

Finance Committee Report—
Dr. S. C. Harrell, presiding.

Board of Publications—Dr. R.
C. Helfenstein, presiding.

6:00 Dinner Meetings:

"The Laymen's Fellowship"
at Suffolk Christian Church.

Subject: "Tomorrow's Challenge to Higher Christian Education"—Dr. Samuel N.
Stevens, Grinnell, Iowa.

"The Women" at Bethlehem
Church.

Subject: "Women in India"—
Dr. Raymond B. Dudley,
Boston, Mass.

* * *

Evening Session.

8:00 Worship Service—Dr. W. C.
Timmons, Chaplain.

Music by the Host Choir.

Offering for Korean Relief.

Address: "Life and Task of the Church in America,"—
Dr. Stanley U. North, New York City.

The Lord's Supper—Dr. Timmons and Mr. Brittle.

Benediction.

* * *

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28, 1954

Morning Session

9:15 Convention Hymn: "God of Grace and God of Glory."

Invocation—Rev. Geo. D. Alley, Suffolk, Va.

9:20 Business Session: Action on Tuesday Reports.

10:00 Address—"Our Oblation to God"—Rev. David H. Sandstrom, Chicago, Ill.

10:30 Report of Finance Committee.

11:00 Report of Elon College—Dr.
L. E. Smith, President.

Address—"The Redemptive Power of Christian Education"—President Samuel N.
Stevens, Grinnell College,
Grinnell, Iowa.

12:15 Worship Service—Dr. Timmons, Chaplain.

12:30 Adjournment of the Morning
Session.

* * *

Afternoon Session

2:00 Hymn 241—"My Jesus, As Thou Wilt."

Invocation—Rev. Dwight O.
Jackson, Haw River, N. C.

Reports (To be considered for adoption Thursday Morning):

Woman's Missionary Convention—Mrs. W. B. Williams,
President, Newport News,
Va.

Laymen's Fellowship—W. B.
Williams, Chairman, Newport News, Va.

Pilgrim Fellowship—Phillip
Mann, Chairman, Cypress
Chapel, Va.

Committee on the Ministry—
Prof. F. E. Reynolds, Ph.D.,
Elon College, N. C.

Moonclon (Convention Conference Center)—Rev. Henry
E. Robinson, D. D., Chairman.

The Ministerial Student Loan
Fund and the Ministerial
Scholarship Fund—Rev. J.
G. Truitt, D. D., Chairman.

Committee on Evangelism—
Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein,
Chairman.

2:50 Church Building Loan Fund
Campaign—Martin Garren,
An Address, William Kincaid
Chairman, Greenboro, N. C.
Newman, New York.

3:15 Report of Nominating Committee, and Election of Officers—Rev. Jas. H. Light-bourne, Jr., Chairman.

3:30 Report of the Christian Orphanage—Rev. John G. Truitt,
D. D., Superintendent.

4:00 Miscellaneous Business.

4:30 Adjournment of the Afternoon Session.

* * *

Evening Session

7:30 Worship Service—Dr. Timmons, Chaplain.

(Continued on page 13.)

Convention Guest Speakers . . .

WOFFORD C. TIMMONS.

Better churchmanship through better evangelism has been the keynote of the national program carried on by Dr. Wofford Colquit Timmons, now pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship at Southern Pines, North Carolina, but for nine years the national director of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life for Congregational Christian Churches of America. Dr. Timmons will serve as Chaplain of the Southern Convention in its biennial session, April 27 to 29.

On March 1, Dr. Timmons took over the pastorate of the church in Southern Pines, thus returning to a local pulpit after an absence of nine years. His retirement from national service was recognized by a special citation for meritorious service conferred on him by the Board of Home Missions under which he worked.

In his national post, Dr. Timmons developed committees, seminars and convocations enlisting hundreds of ministers; directed the publication of devotional literature and aided in the preparation of a manual for pastors' classes and a Book of Worship. He also initiated campus missions, institutes on evangelism, and in many ways stimulated "better churchmanship" among the churches of the entire country.

DR. WOFFORD C. TIMMONS

Born in a Georgia parsonage, Dr. Timmons was educated at Southwestern College in Kansas, Drew Seminary, Union Seminary, Columbia University and Oxford University, England.

He was a chaplain during World War I, and held pastorates in Minnesota, Missouri and Connecticut before taking his national post. Dr. Timmons was traveling in Europe in 1939 when World War II broke out.

* * * * *

STANLEY U. NORTH.

"The Protestant Churches of the United States face the greatest opportunity for church extension in the history of the nation. Literally thousands of new communities need to be churchified. It would be tragic indeed, were the task to be performed in a spirit of cut-throat competition; such is wasteful at best and unbrotherly and un-Christian to say the least. Over-churching a community is almost, if not quite, as indefensible as underchurching," states Dr. Stanley U. North, general secretary of the Division of Church Extension and Evangelism, who will address the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches at Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, Virginia, on Tuesday evening, April 7. He will use as his subject, "The Life and Task of the Church in America."

DR. STANLEY U. NORTH

Dr. North, in addition to his responsibilities as general secretary, is the executive director for the Congregational Christian Church Building Loan Fund Campaign of $4,500,000, which is being conducted over the biennium of 1952-54.

Rapid increases in population and the extraordinary mobility of the American people during the past ten years have resulted in the establishment of large numbers of new, un-churchified communities and an overwhelming growth of older communities either destitute of churches or inadequately churchified. With inflation reducing the purchasing power of the dollar, the present Congregational Christian Building Society Revolving Fund, used in helping to meet such situations, is totally inadequate.

Believing that if cooperation among the churches is not achieved, "Protestantism will lack the essential strength in terms of leadership, program and plant to perform the requisite task," Dr. North adds, "Ecclesiastical isolation is as outmoded as political isolationism."

REV. DAVID H. SANDSTROM

A native of New Jersey, Dr. North is a graduate of Rutgers University, where he majored in Engineering; Union Theological Seminary and Columbia University, M. A. in Sociology. He holds an honorary D. D. from Elon College.

* * * * *

DAVID H. SANDSTROM.

Rev. David H. Sandstrom of Chicago, Illinois, associate executive secretary of the Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches will speak at the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches at its 41st biennial session at Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, Virginia, April 27-29.

Among Mr. Sandstrom's major responsibilities are the promotion of the Christian World Mission of the Congregational Christian Churches through increased emphasis on Christian Stewardship and the direction

(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Student Enrollment

The enrollment at Elon College for the year 1953-54 is unusual to say the least. The increases that have been made during the year breaks all previous records. Seldom, if ever, has the enrollment in the second and third quarters equaled or surpassed in number the enrollment for the first quarter in September. In September, there were 685 students total as compared with 665 in September, 1952. The second quarter enrollment, November 30 and December 1, surpassed the September enrollment by a net gain of 1. The enrollment for the Spring Quarter, the third quarter, March 10 and 11, surpassed the Winter Quarter enrollment by 21, which gives a total enrollment on the campus for the present quarter of 707, including specials. The total enrollment for the year will surpass 800. Of this number there are 252 boarding students, which leaves 455 as day students. The day student enrollment should be broken down as follows: 63 in Veteran's Apartments. These are married students and live off the campus but in college property. There are 121 enrolled in the evening school, which means that these students have jobs in the day time and come to school at night from 7:00 to 10:00. They have the same curriculum that the other students have. These two features have contributed greatly to the student enrollment in the college. The above statistics are given to correct certain erroneous ideas that are being officially distributed throughout the church. In the judgment of the ones of us who live on the campus, we have an excellent student body; enthusiastic, capable, and alert. I do not recall a day when Elon College has been in a higher state of efficiency and satisfaction than today. I mean the actual school—accommodations for boarding students are below par but in better condition than in many years. We are hopeful that we shall soon begin to erect new dormitories and a new dining room for the comfort, convenience and health of our students at Elon. When we do begin these improvements, it will be a new day for the college and will bring new enthusiasm and new hope to all who are interested.

Reports from the Admissions Office are that applications for summer school for 1954-55 are received in encouraging numbers. To date, sixty-five students have been accepted for next year. This indicates that Elon College will enroll a freshman class for 1954-55 of from 250 to 325. The increased enrollment for the Spring Quarter is also indicative that we shall have a larger number of upper-classmen to return for the summer session and fall quarter. It is the responsibility of all who are interested in the college to make ample and satisfactory provision for the young people who wish to enroll in Elon College for their education.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

They say that there are too many calls for funds for support of our college, Elon College, and that fewer calls would result in larger amounts. Experience is to the contrary. People buy installment plans. When the government curtailed this practice, there was general dissatisfaction. The five and ten cent stores with their many articles have amassed fortunes. The stock market, believe it or not, is multiplying its calls for investors and offering the installment plan for purchasing so that anyone with little or much money to spare may invest it, the directors say, with profit. It takes money to operate Elon College in amounts difficult to realize by those without responsibility for financing the college. There would be no particular need for calls if the constituency of Elon College would put their giving on the basis of Biblical requirements and trust the wisdom and judgment of the officials of the church for a just and fair distribution.

It costs money to operate Elon College; it always has and it always will. Its supporters are in the church, the alumni and among friends. If they respond, wonderful. If they do not respond, let no one be disappointed on account of the results.

Previously reported $ 1,804.16
 Eastern Va. Conference:
 Barrett's$20.00
 Dendron S. S. 4.70

SOUTHERN CONVENTION GUEST SPEAKERS.

(Continued from page 6.)

of the Mid-West Regional Offices of the Missions Council in Chicago.

Born on the Pacific Coast in Seattle, Washington, Mr. Sandstrom was educated at the University of California and at Harvard University and Union Seminary.

* * * * *

RAYMOND A. DUDLEY.

"India's great leaders are profoundly committed to the welfare of India's people and to peaceful international relations. At the same time they know that sound progress requires an army of leaders from the national to the village level who are likewise honest, able and public spirited. That is one reason why it is so important that the scope and quality of the Christian movement be improved and Indian Christian leadership be developed," says Rev. Raymond A. Dudley, secretary for India of the American Board, who will speak on April 27 and 28 at the 41st biennial session of the Southern Convention, at Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, Virginia.

Dr. Dudley will address the woman's banquet at 6:00 p. m., on April 27, and will speak to the convention on the 28th on the subject, "The Life and Task of the Church in India."

Mr. Dudley's latest visit to Asia was in the spring of 1953, when he spent over two months in India and brought back some vivid impressions of that country and the contribution which Christian missions are making to its development.

A Connecticut Yankee by birth and education (Yale University and Hartford Seminary), Mr. Dudley has lived in India for 24 years as a missionary.

The American Board now has 235 schools of varying grade in India and Ceylon, with nearly 38,000 pupils. Over 86,000 patients are cared for in its 16 hospitals and dispensaries. More than 1900 Indian nationals are working with the American Board missions in paid service, and the

(Continued on page 15.)

N. C. and Va. Conference:
New Lebanon S. S.	$ 12.30
Virginia Valley Conference:
Antioch S. S.	$ 44.25
Dry Run S. S.	12.06
Winchester S. S.	8.24
	101.65
Total to date	$ 1,905.81

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheville, N. C.

Southern Convention Women to Meet

The guest speaker at the Woman's banquet to be held in connection with the Southern Convention will be Dr. Raymond Dudley, secretary for India and Ceylon for the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

This supper will be held on Tuesday evening, April 27, at 6 o'clock in the Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, Virginia, in which the sessions of the Convention will take place. The price is $1.00. Each society has received a card for reservations for this supper. This card is to be returned to Mrs. R. E. Brittle, Route 3, Suffolk, Va., by April 20. (You do not need worry about your husband—the men are to be holding a supper at the same time in Suffolk Church!)

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, vice-president of the Southern Convention women, will preside at the supper and will serve as toastmistress. The program is sure to be good. It is hoped that many women in Eastern Virginia will plan to attend this banquet, even though they may not be able to be present for other sessions.

Mr. Dudley is no stranger to the Southern Convention, for he has visited this area a number of times—first while a missionary to India, and several times since 1944 when he became board secretary for that area. He is a friendly, sincere person, whose message will be worthwhile.

It is especially fortunate that we can hear Dr. Dudley this spring, for our foreign mission study next year is to be India. He was a missionary there for 24 years, and has made two trips to that country since assuming his present post of leadership. He also attended the International Missionary Council at Willigen, Germany, in 1952. He is serving for the next biennium as chairman of the Division of Foreign Missions in the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

This is a call for the women of the Southern Convention to meet at the Bethlehem Church on April 27. Let's have a good group present to enjoy food, fellowship and inspiration.

How to Work with Your Children

If our people are to be mission-minded, we must begin with our children. They must be taught to think in terms of other people and to develop a concern for others. That is our responsibility. What are we doing about it?

Last year the number of churches reporting active missionary education and giving among our children was alarmingly low—only 19 of our 87 churches. I can't believe that this is a true picture, however. Perhaps some just didn't report this phase of their work. Anyway, let me suggest that we check now, and see what progress is being made. If you do not have a Children's Leader in your church, by all means elect one.

DR. RAYMOND A. DUDLEY

In case your children have not had their mission study books for the year, it seems that now, during the Mission Period (March-April-May-June) would be an ideal time to concentrate on them. Also emphasis on mission giving should be stressed along with a friendly service project. If you do not have a Children's Society, perhaps this special study might be done at the worship period in the Sunday school during this Mission Period. Whatever the method may be, the important thing is that we do use our materials and train our children.

The selected mission study books for children are considered some of the loveliest printed. The following have been suggested for our use this year:

Home Mission.

Primary—"New Friends for Nena" by Margaret McDowell, Paper cover, $1.25. Teacher's Guide for the same, 50c.

Juniors—"The Secret Suitease" by Scott and Andrews, Paper cover, $1.25. Teacher's Guide for same, 50c.

Foreign Mission.

Primary—"The Round Window" by Elizabeth Allstrom, Paper cover, $1.25. Teacher's Guide for same, 50c.

Juniors—"Many Hands in Many Lands" by Alice Kelsey, Paper cover, $1.25. Teacher's Guide for same, 50c.

You may order these books from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston 8, Mass.

I trust that we are making this our best year in the missionary education of our boys and girls. I still have a few copies of the free booklet, "Missionary Plans for Children, 1953-54," which was available at the Women's Conference last fall. It contains valuable information as to available materials, goals, suggestions. If you wish a copy, or if I can be of any help, please write me.

MRS. W. A. GRISSOM,

R. 1, Henderson, N. C.

Chairman, Children's Department, N. C. Woman's Missionary Conference.

* * * * *

Concord Ladies' Aid Has Bible Study

Mrs. Edna Lloyd was hostess to the Ladies' Aid of Concord Christian Church on March 18, at her home near Timberville, Virginia. The day was spent in Bible study and prayer. The study was based on Psalm 103, and was led by Mrs. Ralph Galt, the pastor's wife. At noon a covered dish dinner was enjoyed by all present.

The members present, in addition to the hostess and leader, were: Mrs. Galen Salyards, Mrs. Norman Shirley, Mrs. Burr High, and Mrs. Meda Litten. Visitors present were Mrs. Charles Pence of Timberville, and Mrs. O. B. Rhodes of Broadway.

The next meeting will be held on April 15, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Galt, with Mrs. Galt as leader.

Financial Report for Second Quarter 1953-54

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE,
EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Quarter Ending March 15, 1954.

Balance brought forward $ 272.72
Postage refund12

RECEIPTS.

Woman's Societies.

Antioch	$ 17.50
Berea	25.00
Bethlehem	110.00
Cypress Chapel	50.00
Cypress Chapel (Anges B.)	15.00
Dendron	25.00
Eure	14.00
Franklin	75.00
Great Bridge	20.00
Holland	40.00
Holy Neck	37.50
Hopewell	3.10
Isle of Wight	20.00
Liberty Spring	55.00
Mt. Carmel	24.50
Mt. Zion	7.50
Newport News	35.00
Norfolk:
Christian Temple	93.75
First	20.00
Little Creek	8.75
Rosemont	30.00
Second	20.00
Oak Grove	9.60
Oakland	25.00
Portsmouth:
Elm Avenue	15.00
First	25.00
Shelton Memorial	5.00
S. M. Young W.	14.00
Richmond	15.00
South Norfolk	30.00
Spring Hill	3.00
Sunbury	25.00
Union Southampton	26.25
Wakefield	10.20
Waverly	15.00
Windsor	69.50

Young People.

Bethlehem	$ 50.00
Burton's Grove	10.00
Cypress Chapel	25.00
Dendron	5.00
Eure	5.00
Franklin	9.00
Holland	6.25
Holy Neck	18.75
Liberty Spring	25.00
Mt. Carmel	9.00
Mt. Zion	1.00
New Lebanon	14.40
Norfolk:
Little Creek	2.50
Rosemont	15.00
Oak Grove	2.50
Oakland	12.50
Union Southampton	12.50
Windsor	10.00

Junior Societies.

Antioch	$ 4.65
Bethlehem	5.00
Cypress Chapel	5.00
Eure	1.25
Franklin	7.50
Holland	5.00
Holy Neck	5.00
Liberty Spring	6.85

1,034.15

233.10

Missions at Home and Abroad

A Letter from the Mission Board of The Southern Convention in Regard to Our Easter Missions Offering

Elon College, N. C.,
April 5, 1954.

To Pastors and Churches—

Dear Christian Friends:

The seal of Christ's Divinity and his Saviourhood may be found in his Resurrection. Easter is the fulfillment of God's promise of immortality. It is the gift of God. What shall be our expression of gratitude? What shall we bring to him on our Easter Day of Victory? Surely, we ought to bring ourselves to the house of worship dedicated to proclaim this Good News of the Life, Sacrifice, Death and Glorious Resurrection of our Lord, God's Son. Surely, we ought to burn with the desire to share this Good News with all mankind. If we love him, we will keep his commandments, he said. His commission to us is clear:

Mt. Carmel	3.00
Norfolk:
Bay View	4.50
Christian Temple	12.00
Little Creek	2.07
Oakland	1.25
Portsmouth:
First	3.00
Union Southampton	8.00
Windsor	5.00

79.07

Cradle Roll.

Cypress Chapel	$ 1.00
Dendron80
Eure	1.25
Franklin	2.00
Liberty Spring	10.00
Mt. Carmel	2.00
Oakland	3.26
Portsmouth:
First	1.00

21.31

Life Memberships.

Eure	$ 10.00
Norfolk:
Rosemont	20.00
Richmond	10.00

40.00

Memorials.

Berea	$ 10.00
Windsor	10.00

20.00

Thank Offering.

Bethlehem	$ 20.00
Holy Neck	37.20
Norfolk:
Rosemont	19.60

(Continued on page 10.)

"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

"... ye shall receive power, and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Your Church at home and abroad offers you your best chance of manifesting your love and gratitude to a Loving Heavenly Father and a Victorious Saviour. Your Mission Board seeks in his name—and on your behalf—to fulfill our Christian World Mission. That mission is sorely limited by lack of funds.

If the world is to be Christian, our beloved America must be Christian. There are growing cities in North Carolina and Virginia where our Church is needed. We have the opportunity and responsibility to organize churches in at least four growing cities of the Convention. We are delayed or prevented from doing so only because of lack of funds.

A materialistic enemy of Christ is trying to win India, Africa, Japan, and the islands of the sea. Our answer and security lie in the victory of Jesus Christ. His victory may well depend upon us. A generous offering for Foreign Missions can mean that the Church can proclaim Christ with power—unto the ends of the earth.

Easter Sunday has been set aside in the Southern Convention as a time for our Special Offering for Missions. We hope that every church and/or Sunday school will receive a generous offering on that day.

The Easter Offering for missions may be credited to your church's Mission Apportionment, or it may be a special "over and above"—a love offering to help a little more than is expected. The offering should be sent in promptly to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., designated as you wish it to go.

Sincerely yours,

WM. T. SCOTT,
Executive Secretary.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Are you dropping pennies in your Cent-A-Meal Box? We hope so. Each year during Lent (the 40 days before Easter) Congregational Christian people are asked to put their boxes or jars on their tables and to think of others as they drop in a penny for each meal. Just a penny.

What will a penny buy? Here in America it will buy a stamp (but you can't use it alone), a piece of bubble gum, a small piece of candy, and give your weight and fortune.

In far off lands a penny may help buy milk, grain or bread. It may buy a story paper to tell of Jesus and his teachings. It may pay a minister, teacher, or helper.

God's people are everywhere. Some of them have not heard the happy good news of Christ living on our earth and his care and promises for people who loved him and did good. Drop in those pennies and make it come true!

* * * * *

Acquiring an Awareness of Beauty

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Five-year-old Jean loved flowers. Whenever she especially wanted to please me she brought me a posy or perhaps a gay weed. I always showed my appreciation! But one day I felt startled and unhappy, for Jean ran into the living room clutching a bright yellow blossom. It was a spring daffodil and it had been pulled up by the roots! "Look, Mummy, look!" The child's blue eyes crinkled at the corners. "Isn't this a pretty flower?"

The and there I decided Jean must have a small garden of her own—and learn how to nurture and care for flowers.

It wasn't long before the living-room table was piled with seed catalogues. Daddy, who then knew as little about gardening as did his child, dug up the earth, and he and she began learning how to "grow magic." No one who observed them could fail to know their joy. First, Daddy prepared the soil; then he and Jean put in seeds and bulbs in prim rows. Next came the excitement of cultivating, weeding, and watching tender sprouts push their way toward the light. As the seeds were of different kinds the sprouts appeared at different times, so each day there was something new to look for.

Then a difficulty arose. Several birds caught sight of the garden and came to see what they could find. At first Jean was delighted, but when their little feet began scratching where her seeds were planted, she was troubled. "What shall we do, Mummy?" she asked.

"We will dig up a space away from your garden and scatter some grass seed there," I answered.

When Daddy came home he enlarged the birds' seedbed that we had started. And, if you will believe it, the birds seemed quite satisfied.

One Sunday, a little later, we went for a walk and Jean was thrilled when we passed a garden where there was a birdbath, which a sparrow was enjoying to the highest degree. Jean had never seen a birdbath before. "Oh, Mummy, Daddy," she cried, "could we have one?"

"Not like that," her father answered. "It would be too expensive. But I can build a rustic birdbath, if you and Mother will gather for me all the small stones you can find. The large one I will bring."

This gave new exciting pleasure to Jean. Dressed in her work clothes collecting small stones, she felt important and needed. Being barely five she naturally did not have enough stick-to-itiveness to stay with her projects very long at a time, but her eyes danced and she was brown from the sun. She slept and ate like the healthy, interested child she was. Daddy, at a desk all day, fairly ran up the steps at night to get into his blue jeans. And Saturday was the day of days. Every bright week end you could see father and child working in the garden or on the birdbath.

And then such joy it was, when the plants were in blossom and the family all went one Sunday for a late afternoon stroll by the side of the little garden, to see perched on the side of the agate basin, that was the finishing touch of the birdbath, a thirsty bluebird!

To me it is interesting that a delightful and worth-while family project developed from a small incident as a flower pulled up by the roots from a neighbor's garden by a little child. Now that the neighbor whose daffodil started it all can no longer work in her garden, Jean proudly presents her with bouquets from her garden. The small gardener has already acquired an awareness of beauty—a significant part of life.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

(Continued from page 9.)

Portsmouth:
Elm Avenue	6.25
S. M. Young W.	10.12
South Norfolk	20.00
Windsor	15.77
		128.94

Goats.

Berea	$ 1.54
Cypress Chapel	5.40
Great Bridge	30.00
Holland	30.00
Holy Neck	4.00
Johnson's Grove	16.50
Liberty Spring	32.00
Newport News	60.00
Norfolk:
Bay View	30.00
Rosemont	60.00
Portsmouth:
Shelton Mem.	15.00
S. M. Young W.	15.00
Sunbury	30.00
Union Southampton	90.00
Waverly	30.00
		449.44

Specials.

Holland (Betty McDon-
ald)	$ 24.76
Johnson's Grove (Riggs)	10.00
		34.76
Grand total	$ 2,040.77
Total receipts	$ 2,313.61

DISBURSEMENTS.

Treasur's supplies	$ 3.65
Board luncheon	19.00
Expense of Conference
president	13.74
Geo. D. Colclough87
Va. Council of Church
Women	50.00
Sussex—Surry Dispatch—
Programs	6.00
Convention Office—1953
Minutes in Annual ...	108.00
Mrs. W. V. Leathers—
Conv. treasurer	1,863.07
Mrs. Barbara B. Nelms
—Y. P. treasurer	77.70
		2,142.03
Total receipts	$ 2,313.61
Total disbursements	$ 2,142.03
Balance forward	$ 171.58
Respectfully submitted,
MRS. GEORGE M. CORNELL,
Treasurer.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Tips from Tom

Have you elected delegates for the Rally. If not, do so at once and let the secretary know about them for overnight reservations.

* * *

Interested in work for the summer. Openings for Student Summer Service in working with youth camps, caravanning, and assisting with other youth activities. For more information contact Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

* * *

When and where will your Summer Conference Camp be held? See about this and make reservations early.

* * *

Max once spoke of receiving a road-map (letter written all over) from Pattie Lee. I was in her office yesterday when Doris and Wanda were spring cleaning her files. I saw "roadmaps" of all sorts all over the place.

* * *

The time draws near when Wedding Bells will ring for Rev. Reuben Askew, student at Elon, who is engaged to Miss Joyce Beek, of Norfolk, Va. The date is set for June 12.

* * * * *

A Report from Seagrove

I especially liked Ted Field's article of March twenty-fifth on Brotherhood. We at Seagrove Christian Church have our Youth Fellowship Meetings each Friday night at seven o'clock and on Friday night March twenty-sixth we invited some Negro children to come and visit us and give us a program.

They had charge of worship, their prayer was about Brotherhood, they read poems. One was "A Friendly Church" it had a lot of good meaning. One was "The Two Highways" and the last was "When Life is Done." They all were real good. Then they sang several songs and we enjoyed having these colored children with us. The ladies of the church served refreshments. We had thirty-five visitors.

MRS. W. E. SPENCER,
Counsellor.

Mount Auburn Group Writes

There was a new group which had just organized a Youth Group at the last Rally of the Eastern N. C. Conference and they have written telling about their new organization and how much they enjoyed the rally. They report that it was the first rally they had attended and it was a great inspiration to them in their work as a new group. From this type of news, it seems that the rallies are serving their purpose.

They also expressed an opinion about recent issues appearing on this page. Following is a paragraph taken from that letter:

"In reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN which was published March 11, I saw your question on Teenagers drinking, and I decided to answer it.

"I am very happy to say that in our community it is not like that at all with the teen-agers. None of the teen-agers in our community drink. This is something that we should all be thankful for, and I am sure we are.

"The teen-agers in our community have completely different outlooks on life, not only in the way of drinking but also in many other things, from most teen-agers. They are always looking for some good deed to perform; instead of thinking of something bad they can do.

"I would also like to say that we, at Mount Auburn Church, have just organized a Pilgrim Fellowship, and we are very proud of the attendance the young people are giving it."

Sincerely,
MOLLIE JEFFRESS.

North Carolina & Virginia Sunday School Superintendents Meet

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference Superintendents meeting was held on March 27, 1954 at 6:30 p.m., in the First Congregational Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Prior to this dinner meeting the officers of the Sunday School Convention met to plan for the coming Sunday School Convention to be held at the Hopedale Church.

The dinner meeting began promptly, with Martin T. Garren presiding.

The recognition of the officers of the Sunday School Convention, ministers, superintendents and assistants was by standing. There were two lady superintendents present.

Mr. Robert Kirk of the Greensboro Church sang two selections, "Dear Lord, Forgive," and at the close, "The Lord's Prayer."

Rev. W. J. Andes spoke on "Christian Education in the Local Church, the Conference and the Convention," giving specific ways of improving this work through such organizations as the Sunday school and Pilgrim Fellowship, Vacation Bible Schools, Summer Conferences, etc.

Mr. John S. Graves of Burlington, added to what Mr. Andes had said, among other things he suggested being a Parent Council and meetings to preview the quarter's work in the Sunday school.

Mrs. W. J. Andes introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Clarice Bowman, Professor of Religious Education in High Point College. Her most timely subject was "Guiding Growth Godward."

At the conclusion of her address, in recognition of the splendid meal and service rendered, we stood and gave the ladies of the church a hand.

The meeting adjourned after benediction by Rev. Kenneth Register.

MAYNIE FLYNT NEAL,
Secretary.

LETTER FROM BILL SCOTT.

(Continued from page 2.)

I thought you might run a little story in THE SUN. Friends might wish to write to Timothy. His address is: Timothy S. Chang, c/o Poultry Department, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Today, I have been at Rosemont, Norfolk, for the morning service in the beautiful new sanctuary—and this afternoon shared in the "Unveiling" of a plaque there in memory of the late Oscar F. Smith.

I also visited First Church, Norfolk, with Rev. Olive Pendleton.

Yesterday I met with a Conference Committee on Church Extension in the Norfolk area. We are hoping a new church in growing Norfolk may be started soon.

Monday I go to Newport News to do some work with Lanson Granger on a proposed church extension project there.

Cordially,
BILL SCOTT.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Christ the Living Lord"

(EASTER)

LESSON III—APRIL 18, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed."—John 20:29.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: John 20, 21.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Peter 4:1-11.

Jesus was alive again. (The fact is, he had never died, that is, his spirit had never died.) And the disciples knew that he was alive again. They had seen him. They had seen him individually and as a group. They could hardly believe it. In fact at first they did not believe it. It was too good to be true. But they gradually came to believe it, and they rejoiced in that fact. Their Lord, whom they had seen nailed to a Cross on Friday, and laid in a tomb on Friday evening, had come from the tomb alive, and alive forevermore. "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." That is putting it mildly. It is certainly an understatement.

Jesus and Thomas.

But Thomas did not share this joy of, and with, the disciples. "He was not with the disciples when Jesus came." We do not know why he was not there. He might have been like so many modern-day Christians, who stay away from the church when they are depressed, despondent, down in the mouth, out of luck, in trouble, or in bereavement. Strangely indeed, many people stay away from church just when they ought to go to church. In any event, Thomas was not with the disciples when Jesus came. Why, we do not know. But we do know what he missed because he was not there.

He missed the joy which the other disciples had who knew that their Lord was alive. For eight days, he lived in a world in which Jesus was dead, a world in which there was no meaning to life, no new dimensions to life, no confirmation that personal values have survival, no witness to the power of the human spirit to survive death, no evidence of God's power, no basis for belief in Christ's word that he would rise again from the dead.

He also missed the inspiration and uplift of the presence of the living Christ. He was not there when Jesus spoke peace to the disciples, and when they talked with their risen Lord. He was not there when Jesus breathed upon them and gave them his Holy Spirit. He was not there when the Master sent them out even as the Father had sent him out. In other words, Thomas missed a sense of fellowship with the living Christ, a sense of mission in life, a sense of direction to life. And every man who habitually stays away from church misses these great factors in great living. The public worship of God gives a sense of fellowship with God, a sense of serenity and peace within the heart, and a sense of mission in the world.

Thomas was a doubter. He was "from Missouri"—he had to be shown. "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." He was not a cynic or a critic—he was simply a doubter.

But Thomas was an honest doubter. He was willing to accept the evidence. And when, eight days later, Jesus again appeared to the disciples, this time Thomas being with them, he believed, even though he did not do the things he said he would have to do to believe. How gently Christ dealt with this honest doubter! How his doubts were resolved in the presence of the living Christ! Let every man who has honest doubts bring his doubts to the living Christ. Any man who follows the light he has will get more light. The man who does the best he knows will know better.

One of the strongest arguments for the Resurrection of Christ—if arguments are needed—is the fact that Thomas was convinced that Jesus was alive again. He was not the kind of man to be swept off his feet. "My Lord and my God," he exclaimed when he saw the living Christ before him.

"Because thou hast seen, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." It was given to only a comparatively few to see the living Christ in person after his resurrection. Blessed were those who thus did see him. But blessed, and perhaps more blessed, indeed, are those of us who, although we have not seen him in person, yet through faith do believe, and who know that he is alive, and alive forevermore.

Jesus and Peter.

John gives us another intriguing scene in the post-resurrection life of Jesus. In this one, Peter is the central figure. After the meal on the shore of the Galilean Lake, Jesus thrice asks Peter, "Lovest thou me?" Each time Peter replies, "You know I love you." He was somewhat "put out" that Jesus asked him the same question three times. And after each reply, Jesus told him to feed the sheep or to feed the lambs. He was simply saying that if we really love him, we will do something for him. We show our love for God by doing something for our fellowmen. A man shows his love for God, whom he has not seen, and cannot see, by his love for his fellowmen whom he can see.

Jesus and the Disciples.

The Risen Christ's ministry to the disciples, or apostles, at the Sea of Galilee was significant and suggestive.

First of all, He gave them something to eat. Christ is concerned that men get something to eat. Man cannot live by bread alone; but he cannot live without bread. Furthermore we can never have a stable world, if that world is hungry. Revolutions are spawned not so much in men's minds as in their stomachs. Food is one of the mightiest instruments of peace.

And then Christ gave the disciples something to do. Idle hands are dangerous hands. A sound society should seek to provide work for everybody who wants to work. In the Master's Kingdom there is a place for all, there is something for all to do.

Finally, Christ gave the disciples Someone to love. To feel that someone cares, that there is someone for whom to care, to give and to receive affection, this is one of the basic requirements for a healthy and wholesome life. Christ is altogether lovely, the fairest among ten thousand. In him we have Someone whom we can love, and Someone who in return loves us.

The Risen Christ and Us.

Easter will mean but little to those who know Christ only at second-hand.

(Continued on page 14.)

A Personal Letter from Supt. Scott

Elon College, N. C.,
April 2, 1954.

Dear Brother Pastor:

Won't you please regard this as a personal letter? It is of great importance to our fellowship in the Southern Convention. Please take a couple of minutes and read it!

We are all concerned about THE CHRISTIAN SUN. How to make it more effective; how to finance it; how to get it to more people, etc. At the present time we have only about 1600 subscribers (and this is not much worse than it has been for the past 10 years)! We are operating on a possible deficit of around $600 per year. The paper ought to be going to more of our people. We must find the answer to this problem.

There are doubtless those who would say we ought to discontinue THE SUN; others might say reduce the size, publish it every two weeks, get a full-time editor, etc.

The Board of Publications has given hours of thought to these and other suggestions. It is the general thought among the people I have contacted that to have THE SUN discontinued would be a serious blow to our churches and cause. To reduce the size and, or reduce the number of issues will not solve the problem. We have contacted three printers, and the saving thus effected would not solve the financial problem, but might increase it!

There is but one solution—and that has been found, we believe. Here it is: Get the paper into more of our homes! (Please read on.) This can be done, we are confident, if the pastors and churches will support a plan the Board now offers. We invite you and urge you to consider it with your people. The plan is as follows:

1. A subscription rate of $2.00 per year for THE CHRISTIAN SUN to each church that will subscribe in block for 80 per cent or more of its families.
2. A rate of $2.50 per year to each church subscribing for 60 per cent of its families.

Several of our pastors already contacted have indicated they will present one of these proposals to their churches. In some cases, the pastors said they expected to ask the church to include in their budget the whole amount of $2.00 or $2.50 per church family and send the paper to them as a part of the service of the church, just as they supply the weekly bulletin, etc. Others indicated that they would ask each family to pay one-half and the church budget include the other half.

I would like to see this plan tried. We have approximately 10,000 families in the Southern Convention. It is possible, I believe, for us to have THE SUN going to at least 7,500 of our families. That would do something wonderful for our whole fellowship. Won't you lend your support to give the plan a chance? I hope you will.

On behalf of the Board of Publications, I make this request of you: Present the above outlined plan to your church, get a vote on it, and notify me your decision before April 20, if possible, so we can tabulate the results and present them to the Convention when it meets on April 27. We count upon your help.

Thank you.

Faithfully yours,
WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

CONVENTION PROGRAM.

(Continued from page 5.)

The Elon College Choir—Prof. John Westmoreland, Director.

Offering.

Address: "Life and Task of the Church—the India in Which We Work"—Dr. R. B. Dudley.

Benediction.

THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1954

9:00 Hymn No. 8—"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Invocation—Rev. M. A. Pollard, Liberty, N. C.

Reports:

Committee on Memoirs, Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, D. D., Chairman, Chuckatuck, Va.

Historian.

Committee on Superintendent's Home—George D. Colclough, Chairman.

9:30 Business Session (Action on Wednesday reports):
Miscellaneous Business.

Social Action Committee Report—Rev. Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., Chairman.

Credentials Committee Report.
Resolutions Committee Report.

10:30 Address: "Kindle It with Love"—Rev. D. H. Sandstrom, Chicago, Ill.

Closing Worship Service—Dr. Timmons, Chaplain.

Final Adjournment.
Benediction.

A Tribute to G. W. Rothgeb

On Saturday morning, March 6, 1954, as the sun was coming over the Blue Ridge Mountains to light another day for the beautiful little Page Valley, a new day was also dawning for George W. Rothgeb. It was at this hour that he left behind him all of the toils, heartaches and cares of this world, to be present at the first roll-call of his name in that better land above.

Brother Rothgeb, who was in his ninety-fifth year at the time of his passing, had answered many roll-calls in the Leaksville Christian Church. He was the last charter member of that church which was organized in 1880. He was a man who loved his Lord and his church above everything else and was one of the church's most liberal supporters. No sacrifice was too great for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom here on earth.

In early life Mr. Rothgeb pursued a number of vocations, but is most vividly remembered by many as a rural mail carrier until his retirement about thirty years ago. Well do we remember and can almost hear again the sound of horses' hoofs against the limestones and the rattle of the little "white box" mounted on wheels, as he came down the highway; but above all of these his merry whistle as he peeled forth the tune of some old hymn of Zion. Not only did he deliver the daily papers, some anxiously awaited letters and other bits of mail, but he always brought cheer and spread sunshine along the way. He will be remembered by many for his deeds of kindness and helpfulness.

His age could only be counted by years, because he was always young in spirit and enjoyed the activities of a man many years younger.

Brother Rothgeb was regular in his attendance at church and missed coming only when his strength failed him a few weeks before his passing. He had been a very capable Bible teacher for many years and had held many positions of responsibility in the local church. At the time of his death he was a trustee of the Virginia Valley Conference, a position he had held for years.

Surely Leaksville Church has lost a strong pillar, the community a good friend, and throughout the Valley Conference and the Southern Convention, where he had many acquaintances and friends, he will be sadly missed. B. F. McDANIEL.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thanks for the total for this week of $598.52. That is good, and I am grateful. It takes more than $1,000.00 per week, but our big income time is Thanksgiving. However, we appreciate and need your help now, and every week. The churches whose Sunday schools do receive for the orphanage a monthly offering help to carry us over these lean months. Look at the churches on this list today and see what fine things they did for us. In the four weekly reports we have four times as many. These fine churches "save the day" for us in these lean months, for these forty churches once each month remember us. How nice it would be to have every Sunday school in the convention, two hundred of them, give their people an opportunity to make an offering however small to the homeless children who are the care of the churches.

This morning in my daily reading from the Bible I read: "Thus Hezekiah did . . . he did what was good and right and faithful before the Lord his God." What a record! I like that. "Good and right and faithful," and in words of Holy Writ. And how about this next line: "He did with all his heart every work he undertook, seeking his God, and he prospered." No wonder God heard his prayer and lengthened his life. No wonder. And by the way who knows how many times your own life has been spared, and how many times God has blessed you with added days. You can perhaps recall some catastrophe or accident that could have cut you off but you were spared. Try to have that line . . . he was good and right and faithful before the Lord his God . . . said of you.

Hezekiah's people prospered. I read in the same chapter, "And Azariah the priest said, 'Since they began to bring the contributions into the house of the Lord we have eaten and had enough and plenty left.' " How about that! The people had orders to bring in the Lord's portion and they did it. . . "and plenty left, for the Lord has blessed his people." Well, I believe God will bless us today if we do our duty, and love and serve him with all our hearts. And be not hearers only but doers of his word. Try to teach these boys and girls that they will be happier if they try to do right. If they be courteous and obedient and faithful and true they will grow in favor with the folks around them and with God. "And he grew in favor with God and man." There is more song on our campus after a really deeply moving religious service. There is more courage in our hearts when we have been brought face to face with God. Please pray for every child here, and every matron and worker that we may be "good and right and faithful before the Lord our God."

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MARCH 31, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Missionary Society, Leaksville, Va. Ch.,
Clothing, shoes, soap and coupons.
Antioch Woman's Fellowship, Harrisonburg, Va., Coupons.
Mrs. James C. Beal, Franklin, Va., Clothing.
Mrs. L. E. Carlton, Paces, Va., Easter dresses and suit.
Mrs. Walter Crabtree, Chapel Hill, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 3,300.95
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Plymouth S. S. $ 6.41
Wake Chapel 64.83
..... 70.84
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Apple's Chapel $ 68.00
Burlington, First S. S. . 183.93
Mt. Zion S. S. 5.04
..... 256.97
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Grove $ 10.00
Shiloh S. S. 22.04
..... 32.04

Virginia Valley Conference:
Linville S. S. $ 5.83
Newport S. S. 27.56
..... 33.39
Total $ 393.24
Grand total $ 3,694.19

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 6,645.06
Mary Sus Brittle S. S.
Class, Bethlehem (Nausemond) $ 5.00
W. B. Fuller, Harrisonburg, Va. 1.00
A Friend 1.00
Mrs. Austin Kipps, New Market, Va. 2.00
Mrs. E. Lena Rothgeb,
Luray, Va. 2.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. Thomas
Brown, Elon College, N.
C. 10.00
Cong. Christian S. S.,
Columbus, Ga. 5.72
Mrs. John Miler, Elkton,
Va. 5.00
12 and 13-year old S. S.
members, Franklin, Va. 28.00
Ingram Christian Church,
Easter offering 60.00
Special Gifts 85.56
..... 205.28

Grand total $ 6,850.34

Total for the week $ 598.52

Total for the year $10,544.53

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

But it will be a glorious occasion for those who not only believe that he rose from the dead on the testimony of others, but who know that Christ is alive because of his living spirit in their hearts.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

WILSON.

Miss Alice Adaline Wilson, daughter of the late William W. and Ethelyn Wilson, passed away at her home near Virgilina, Va., on November 20, 1953. She was born January 25, 1874 in Halifax County, Virginia.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andies, at her home, with burial following in the family cemetery.

Surviving her are three sisters, Misses Birdie and Sallie Wilson, of the home, and Mrs. Mary Smith of Danville, Virginia; one brother, J. R. Wilson of Virgilina, Virginia.

Miss Wilson united with the Union Congregational Christian Church at an early age and actively participated in the church's life to the end of her life.

May the Father God bless and sustain the memory of her life that fruit for the Kingdom may blossom forth.

M. W. ANDES.

FLETCHER.

Mrs. Mary Ann Loftis Fletcher, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Loftis, passed away on November 29, 1953 at her home near Virgilina, Virginia, at the age of 77 years. She was a native of Halifax County, Virginia. She married James S. Fletcher in 1895.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andes, at Union Congregational Christian Church, Virgilina, Virginia, with burial following in the town cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. J. S. Fletcher; five daughters, Mrs. Walter Elliott, Mrs. Walter Morris, and Miss Nettie Fletcher of Virgilina, and Mrs. L. C. Ladd of South Boston, Virginia, and Mrs. H. W. Cunningham of Newport News, Virginia; one son, Arthur Fletcher of Virgilina; 20 grandchildren and 18 great grandchildren.

Mrs. Fletcher was a member of Union Church and maintained her membership in good and regular standing all her life.

May the Father God keep our hearts as he did Mrs. Fletcher's.

M. W. ANDES.

OSCAR SMITH MEMORIAL PLAQUE.

(Continued from page 2.)

knew him felt the deep sincerity with which the tribute was given.

Dr. William T. Scott, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, was the speaker for the occasion. He gave not only a tribute for the service which Mr. Smith had rendered, but a challenge to the church to go forward in the use of the new building for the Kingdom of God.

Others who took part in the service were: Dr. I. W. Johnson, and Dr. H. S. Harcastle, former pastors of the church, and Rev Melvin Dollar, the present pastor. Mrs. Royall Gallup sang "My Prayer for Rosemont," which was written by Mrs. J. H. Booth, Jr., and Mrs. F. A. Goforth.

We are very proud of our new church, which was completed November 15, 1953. Since that time we have been having almost a capacity attendance on Sunday mornings. The average attendance for morning services has been about three hundred, twenty-four, and one hundred, fifteen for the evening services.

We feel that we are making good progress under Mr. Dollar's leadership and we also feel the increasing responsibilities for the work of our community which our new facilities make possible.

MRS. H. R. MORRISON, JR.,
Reporter.

"I BEHELD HIS GLORY."

(Continued from page 3.)

as the finest dramatization yet produced of the crucifixion and resurrection story. Shown on more than 90 per cent of the 140 television stations operating last Easter, the film recounts the story of a Roman centurion who becomes a convert to Christianity after witnessing Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection.

"The nation-wide approval given this production last year has led virtually all television exhibitors to take up their options for repeat presentation this Easter," said Dr. S. Franklin Maek, executive director of the commission. "In addition, so many new stations will be showing 'I Beheld His Glory,' that every citizen with a receiver will be able to view it."

A three-time award winner produced by Cathedral Films, the film will be shown on most stations on Good Friday, Easter Saturday or Easter Sunday, which fall respectively on April 16, 17, 18.

Through the commission, which is the Radio-TV-Film producing and distributing agency of the churches, the National Council of Churches is making the Easter Film available without charge as a contribution to the spiritual life of the nation.

SOUTHERN CONVENTION GUEST SPEAKERS.

(Continued from page 7.)

Christian community connected with these missions numbers, in round figures 60,000.

SAMUEL NOWELL STEVENS.

Dr. Samuel Nowell Stevens has been president of Grinnell College since 1940. Prior to that date he was a member of the faculty and administration of Northwestern University for 16 years. During his tenure at Northwestern he served as professor of Applied Psychology and later as dean of the University College.

Dr. Stevens' professional preparation includes graduation from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.; graduate work at Johns Hopkins; theological studies at Garrett Biblical Institute and Theological Seminary, and advanced graduate studies culminating in a Ph.D. degree at Northwestern.

His professional experiences include a wide range of activities. He was adviser to the Chicago Crime Commission and chairman of the city-wide Commission on Industrial Relations. As a consultant in industrial psychology, he has served the interests of many large corporations and several departments of the government. In one of the most troubled periods of our economic life, his work as an arbitrator in industrial disputes has won the confidence of both management and labor. He is now president of Stevens, Thurow and Associates, specialists in personnel, of Chicago.

Dr. Stevens, who enjoys a national reputation as an interesting and forceful speaker, will deliver two addresses at the 41st biennial session of the Southern Convention to be held at Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk. He will also address the Laymen's Banquet which will be held at the Suffolk Christian Church, Tuesday evening, April 27.

The vitality of a church may be tested by its ministry to children. Only a church which is content to die and which has a cold disregard for souls will relegate children to a minor place in its program. Across the centuries, the faith of the church has been transmitted to each succeeding generation; the old faith has been renewed in new lives. The churches of our generation must appreciate, appropriate and share the Christian Heritage.—Selected.

The government can destroy wealth but it cannot create wealth, which is produced of labor and management working with creation.

—"Alfalfa Bill" Murray.

Highlights of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

MEETING IN FORTY-FIRST BIENNIAL SESSION WITH Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church

TWO MILES WEST OF SUFFOLK, VIRGINIA

APRIL 27, 28, 29, 1954

* * * * *

TUESDAY, APRIL 27—AFTERNOON SESSION

Report of the Executive Board by Rev. Henry E. Robinson, D.D., Secretary

Report of the Superintendent, Rev. William T. Scott, D.D.

Address—"The Nature of the Church," President W. Millard Stevens, D.D.

* * * * *

Laymen's Fellowship Banquet, at Suffolk Christian Church

Address: "Tomorrow's Challenge to Higher Christian Education," by Dr.
Samuel N. Stevens, LL. D., President of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa

Women's Banquet, at Bethlehem Church

Address: "Women in India," by Dr. Raymond B. Dudley, Secretary for India

TUESDAY EVENING

Address: "The Life and Task of the Church in America," by Dr. Stanley U.
North, General Secretary for Church Extension and Evangelism

The Lord's Supper—Dr. Wofford C. Timons and Rev. R. E. Brittle

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28—MORNING SESSION

Business Session

Address: "Our Obligation to God," by Rev. David H. Sandstrom, Associate Secretary of the Missions Council

Address: "The Redemptive Power of Christian Education," by President
Stevens of Grinnell College

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

Reports and Business Session

Report on the Progress of the Building Loan Fund, followed by an address by Mr. William Kincaid Newman of New York, Area Director

EVENING SESSION

The Elon College Choir, under the direction of Prof. John Westmoreland

Address: "The India in Which We Work," by Dr. Raymond B. Dudley

THURSDAY, APRIL 29—MORNING SESSION

Business Session

Address: "Kindle It with Love," by Rev. David H. Sandstrom

Closing Worship Service and Final Adjournment

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1954

NUMBER 15

From Thorns to Roses

There is an ancient legend which tells of a monk who is said to have found the crown of thorns that had mockingly encircled the brow of the Master. It goes on to tell how the saintly man carried it into the chapel of the cathedral on Good Friday morning and set it upon the altar.

What a ghastly looking thing it was, rugged, cruel and stained with blood. It was no wonder his flock merely glanced at it for a moment in their devotions and turned away sick at its ugliness. But it was a true symbol of Good Friday. All the ugliness of men's hearts which crucified the Lord, all the physical horrors, the mental nausea and spiritual torture through which our Lord passed, were indicated in the crown of mockery that he wore.

Very early Easter morning the monk hurried to the chapel to remove the symbol of sin, suffering and death. He knew it would be strangely out of place in the glory of the resurrection morning. Imagine his surprise, when upon opening the door, he found the place filled with a wonderful fragrance. At first all he saw was the sun shining through a stained glass window directly upon the altar upon which the thorns lay. Fixing his gaze upon the spot on which the sun had concentrated its glory upon the altar, he saw the crown of thorns.

But the thorns and barrenness of twisted twigs had undergone a marvelous transformation; the whole thing had blossomed into roses of the rarest beauty and the most delicate fragrance. That gory symbol of crucifixion and death had become the emblem of loveliness and life.

—S. J. B. Parsans.

News Flashes

The front page today is taken from the monthly news letter of our Asheville, North Carolina, Church, Rev. Frank Ratzell, pastor. We think it a pretty Easter story.

Frank Laubach makes The Saturday Evening Post! If you have not seen this week's copy, get one. The article on Dr. Laubach is well worth the price of the magazine.

We welcome Dr. Jesse H. Dollar of our Liberty Spring Church as our guest editor for the Easter season. We commend his editorial to your serious consideration on that glorious day.

The Eastern North Carolina ministers voted at their meeting in Raleigh on April 5, to recommend to the Executive Committee of Conference that the proposed Spring Rally be postponed until the spring of 1955.

Rev. Perfecto Yasay of the Philippines, who is studying at Andover Newton Seminary this year through the Cora L. Anthony Trust Fund, is spending his spring vacation with the W. E. Wissemans and the Greensboro First Church. He arrived in Greensboro on April 12.

On the Editorial page is an Easter sonnet by Dr. C. Rexford Raymond. Dr. Raymond was for many years pastor at Southern Pines, and after leaving there held the rural pastorate of Sunbury, Eure and Oak Grove. To his many friends in these places the sonnet will be a pleasant reminder.

Our readers will be pleased to learn that Rev. Clyde Fields, pastor of the Union Church at Hunterdale, Franklin, Virginia, has returned home after a four week's stay in the Raiford Hospital, Franklin. Mr. Fields is rapidly improving from his recent illness and after a much needed rest hopes to resume his work. Among those who filled his pulpit during his absence were Revs. R. E. Brittle of Bethlehem, Nansemond; R. D. Stephenson of Franklin; J. D. Kitchen of Blackstone; H. L. Carnes of Franklin; Jesse H. Dollar of Liberty Spring, and Mr. Lee Davis, layman, of Franklin.

Evangelistic Services at Sophia and Flint Hill

Sophia and Flint Hill Congregational Christian Churches held joint evangelistic services the week of April 4-11, the services being held at Sophia on April 5, 6 and 7, and at Flint Hill on April 8, 9 and 10. The guest minister was Rev. W. J. Andes of Winston-Salem, and his messages were most instructive and were well received. Sophia added three members.

Sophia Sunday School held its Rally Day on April 4, with 118 attending.

Rev. Avery Brown is the wide awake pastor of these churches.

Information Regarding Delegates to the General Council

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT
JUNE 23 - 30, 1954

If you are interested in attending the General Council as a delegate from the Southern Convention, please notify your Conference Secretary immediately.

Application for registration, room and meals may be obtained from Superintendent Wm. T. Scott, Elon College, N. C. The cost for these items will be as follows:

(Continued on page 7.)

Less Than Three Months To Go

By the time you read this, there will remain less than three months in which to secure pledges and gifts for the Church Building Loan Fund of $4,500,000. As of March first, $4,114,225.43 was assured from the churches and individuals, leaving $385,774.57 to be raised by General Council time in June.

The need for new churches and for modernizing older churches throughout the nation is truly critical. There remain hundreds of communities and thousands of people totally unchurched. The issue concerns the future witness of our Fellowship. It involves the health of Protestantism throughout our land. Our democracy, which guarantees to us our freedoms, will be in jeopardy if its undergirding is to be impaired. Certain issues are being debated among us, as is to be expected in the nature of our freedom, but there can be no debate over the importance of taking the Gospel of Jesus Christ to every community throughout the nation.

Our Fathers gave sacrificially that the feeble churches "at the West" should be strengthened. We are called upon in their spirit to make our contribution to the end that the modern frontier, which is the new community, shall be adequately (Continued on page 15.)

Crosses

At the Easter time we think of a cross,
And some of us deck it with flowers,
Others make it a thing to be feared,
To be covered with tears like showers.

Yes, the crosses are many, every kind,
We have ours to bear, you and me;
From the tiniest shadow hidden within,
To a wooden thing hewn from a tree.

And yours may be light, or a heavy dread,
Mine—the loss of one I love,
Or suffering borne in silence alone,
Dark night hours—no light of love.

And up the hill that the world calls Life,
We bear them, come gain or come loss,
For the strength He will give—He understands Because He, too, bore a cross.

—Grace Marie Prince.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Laymen's Banquet Planned

The Laymen of the Southern Convention will meet for a banquet at the Suffolk Christian Church in Suffolk, Virginia, Tuesday, April 27, at 6:00 o'clock. Those who are planning to attend should send their reservations to P. D. Howell of Chuckatuck, Virginia, before April 21. This means that the decision should be made this week end at each of the churches and the report made and sent in immediately.

An interesting program is being planned for this banquet which includes an address by President Stevens of Grinnell College. Make your plans to be present and bring with you other men from your church.

* * * * *

Executive Committee Meeting

The Executive Committee of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention met April 13, 1954 in Alamance Hotel in Burlington, North Carolina. Many items of business were considered and the following represents some of the action which was taken.

a. Decided to request that local Laymen's Fellowships elect officers by November 1 of this year in order to get the names printed in the Annual.

b. Voted to hold the annual rally the third Sunday in February instead of the second Sunday as has been the custom in the past.

c. Decided to offer assistance to those churches not being served by full-time ministers so that every church will be able to have a service on Easter Sunday, Layman's Sunday, and Christmas.

d. Voted to print a small booklet which will include the constitution and other helpful materials and to make it available for distribution at the banquet in Suffolk.

e. Named the committee to work on the organization of a Conference Laymen's Fellowship in the Eastern North Carolina Conference.

f. Discussed the Moonelon Project and made plans for a "work day" to be held at Moonelon June 5 beginning at 8:00 a. m. in the morning, and will be for all the men in our convention who are able to come. Further details on the "work day" will be published in this column in an earlier issue.

g. Voted that the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Fellowship heartily approves of the employment of a full-time worker in stewardship and evangelism for the Southern Convention and that the Executive Committee looks with favor on the suggestion that part of the time of such a person should be designated for work with the Laymen of the convention.

The Executive Committee heard a statement by William A. Graham, who is the director of the National Laymen's Fellowship. Mr. Graham complimented the group on the work which it has been doing and made several suggestions for the work in the future.

J. E. D.

A Bus Route for Sunday Schools

Rev. Ralph M. Galt of New Market, the pastor of the Shenrock Charge of the Virginia Valley Conference, has been credited with initiating a project which should increase Sunday school attendance in that section of the Valley.

On Sunday, April 11, a bus was put in operation to take people to Sunday school. This service is sponsored by all of the churches along the route and is interdenominational. The bus service is available free of charge

(Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Coleclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Trnitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun

() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Easter: A Fact or Fiction?

While some seven hundred millions of people who have signed the roster of Christian Discipleship could be called to testify to the fact of Easter, there are other millions who know only that at this season of the year they are caught up by some surge of emotions, and are made a part of the greatest pageant ever devised by the minds or emotions of men. To this great throng Easter is only fiction.

There are those who complain that so many professed Christians never come to church, except on Easter Sunday. While we could wish they would find their way to the house of God more often, there is room for rejoicing that they have come at all. Their presence gives witness to the fact that they have, in the words of Dr. N. G. Newman, been "Evangelized, though not yet Christianized." Whatever the occasion of the presence in the Sanctuary of God gives hope that the process of their Christianization may be furthered, and that eventually they will be caught up by the colossal fact that there is in the world a Living Christ to whom they may pledge their lives and their deepest devotions.

Think of the millions of dollars that will be spent this year on Easter costumes and flowers! Many do it because others do it, and they don't want to be left out of the parade. But underneath, and perhaps unconsciously, there is universal joy brought in on the wings of Easter morning, turning our minds to thoughts of something new and beautiful let loose in the world; something that inspires a desire for better looks expressed in Easter clothes, and an inexpressible beauty symbolized in corsages of flowers. Is it not, however unconscious, a desire to brighten up what would otherwise be, without the fact of Easter, a drab and ugly world?

Suppose Easter be not true.

Then there would be no churches calling us to worship. None of the most beautiful music ever written would be ours to sing. Our Bible would end with Malachi, since the story of the birth of Jesus would be left meaningless without the fact of the resurrection. There would be no inner "pull" toward new freshness and beauty for life. There would be no hope that wars will ever end. The freedoms of our national and personal lives would never have been ours to enjoy. Let us try to imagine what life in our world would be if Easter be not true!

"If Christ be not risen from the dead, your faith is in vain and ye are yet in your sins." Let us cry out with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth!" and again with St. Paul, "I am not ashamed (to suffer as I do), for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have entrusted to him."

The proclamation of such a faith will lend new meaning to our Easter observances. Our Christian World Mission will then receive the full weight of that faith in our lives. Our offerings to the mission of making a World Christian Community will flow in greater volume through our Easter Offerings, and those who have not heard will hear and believe that the Easter we observe is not an empty parade, based upon fiction and flowers, but the greatest fact ever recorded in history, or upon the tablets of men's hearts. He is risen, indeed!

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

Our Easter Faith

By C. REXFORD RAYMOND

Our life on earth is but our soul's beginning:
 When our terrestrial bodies turn to dust,
 Celestial bodies we shall then be winning.
 "If only here we hope in Christ, we must
 Of all men be most pittied," thus Paul wrote
 The church in Corinth, saying: "Flesh and blood Cannot inherit heaven." Christians quote
 The good news spoken by our Lord that flood
 All life with light; for Christ abolished death
 And on the Cross he brought immortal life
 To light. For when our bodies lose their breath,
 We leave behind the woes of sin and strife.
 Our Easter faith declares we do not die,
 But leave the earth, our life to glorify.

The Road from the Tomb . . .

By DR. RICHARD K. MORTON

Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Fla.

The joyous Easter message proclaims both that Jesus rose from the dead and that his spirit may today rise in us. As we suffer with him, we shall also rise with him. As in Adam, all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive. By one man came death—and by another comes life, life eternal and abundant.

No one, so far as Bible records go, actually witnessed the resurrection of Jesus. And few there were who were at once upon the scene in that glorious dawn: there were Mary Magdalene, Mary the Mother of James, and Salome, and Joanna, and Peter. Soon they ran to others, and the news spread, some believing, some doubting.

The resurrection story has always seemed to me inseparably linked with the need of the risen life in man. If God could raise Jesus, and the story ends there, we look in vain for power that conquers and love that redeems. If Jesus could break the seals of the tomb, but cannot break the bonds of our hearts, then is he risen from the dead in vain, and our preaching is in vain.

First of all, Jesus rose—this is a thoroughly attested fact, which has endured the erosions and investigations of history. This was according to the Scriptures and to prophecies, and is quite what is to be expected from the life he lived and the mission he had upon the earth. The tomb is empty. Death can have no dominion over his Spirit. Here is shown forth the tremendous spirit and fact that the spiritual cannot be encompassed and shackled by the temporal, and love cannot be destroyed by hate.

The empty tomb expresses in convincing form the spiritual value of life and the inseparable link existing between a loving heavenly Father and his creatures who stand in need of redemption from their sins if they are to live the risen life which is possible for them.

The tomb symbolizes the worst that the world can do—it thought to put an end to Jesus and his works, and now stands defeated. It stands as a kind of grim monument to the best that man achieved—all his proud strivings have led to this tomb wherein he consigned one who sought to help and bless him. With all man's proud achievements and powers, this is what happened according to his will and way. As I remarked to our people the other night, the Scriptures indicate that the only kind words addressed to Jesus while he was on the cross came from a man on another cross, that of the penitent thief. It may well be that we best understand the cross of Christ when

The Empty Tomb

By Mildred M. North.

Once long ago in Judea
Lay the dear Lord in a tomb,
Pondrous the stone in the doorway,
Tireless the watch in the gloom.

Tender hands wrapped Him in Grave clothes,
Tender hands laid Him away,
Tender hearts grieved at His passing
Knowing no glad Easter Day.

Then when the midnight was over,
Jesus came forth from the grave,
Bringing to earth in its sorrow
Hope in His power to save.

Empty the tomb when they sought it,
Gone was the stone from the door,
Mary found Christ in the shadows,
Living, to live evermore.

Beautiful story of Easter,
Sweet is the message it gives,
Wonderful loving Redeemer,
Risen, our Savior, He lives.

Gone is death's power forever,
Gone is the gloom of the grave,
Jesus came forth from its prison
Mighty forever to save.

we have dared to come to a cross of our own.

Secondly, Jesus appeared unto many. The resurrection is not an event, however well attested, that was actually witnessed by nobody, and where very few were soon upon the scene, and nothing further was known or seen of Jesus. He appeared unto many. We have seen in our Gospels the brief references to the individuals and groups to whom he appeared, and they are most important. In one reference we read that he appeared (Mark 16:12) "in another form" to two of them as they walked into the country.

What I am trying to suggest, on this glorious Easter occasion, is that the Easter power comes not alone from Jesus' resurrection, but also from the fact that he made himself known at once to many. Fellowship was renewed, and their hearts were made glad—those who believed—as they beheld. But right here begins the age-long challenge of the resurrection. All the Gospels report that some doubted. They doubted, and they did not become those in whom the risen life was manifest. Jesus did not rise in their hearts and minds.

It seems to me, then, that the urgent plea of Easter is this: Believe! Know that your Lord is victor over death! He rose from the dead. He appeared to many. Now we see the link between this life and the Beyond, and we see that it is worth while to strive in this life for the good and eternal. Tomorrow is real. Love is dominant.

We must have an impassioned belief in the risen Lord, who makes himself known to his loved ones and those who believe, but we must not forget for a moment that in a real sense the incarnation and resurrection alike are not complete and in fulfillment until the life and spirit of Christ rises in us. I feel we should be right in saying that our risen life of the spirit is part of the resurrection story. God will not redeem the world simply through a risen Christ. He must do it through a risen Savior who rises in those who believe.

In another way, let us say that we need to go with humble awe and reverence to the tomb, and see that it is empty. We need to have a spiritual awareness of Christ's presence upon our way, but then we must make our way back from the tomb with the spirit of one in whom Christ has risen. "If ye then be risen with Christ," wrote Paul to the Colossians (3:1), "set your affection on things above."

We must ask ourselves, amid all the glitter and tumult and argument of our modern world, whether the resurrection power remains with us on the journey, as it were, from the tomb. Here is the test and challenge of the modern church and churchmanship. We say we believe that Jesus rose—and yet we live obviously as if he never had risen in us. We believe he appeared unto many—but we do not live as if he had appeared to us. We flock to Easter services to celebrate his rising from the dead, but as soon as the great services break up, we seem to be right back where we were before. Our Christianity is tested, and our faith is tried, on that

(Continued on page 15.)

Dr. Smith's Challenge--An Editorial In Greensboro Daily News

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, raised what he knew in advance would be a controversial issue when he told the Greensboro Kiwanis Club that partial tuitional aid should be advanced to all Tar Heel students qualified for and wishing to enter college.

His plan was projected as part of a speech in which he predicted that unless more financial aid is found for church-related colleges, "it is only a question of time when a great percentage of these church schools will be forced out of existence."

Dr. Smith's plan to give all college-eligible students tuitional assistance was based on the fact that students now attending state colleges and universities get that kind of tuitional help from all the taxpayers of North Carolina. He compared benefits accruing to two mythical girls in Greensboro, one of whom enrolled at Woman's College, where her tuition bill reflected state aid, and the other who entered Greensboro College, where it did not.

Dr. Smith's plan to help individual students rather than institutions avoids, as he sees it, the dangers of merger of church and state.

We know, with the president of Elon, that many church colleges, especially the smaller ones, are in dire financial straits. Many privately endowed colleges simply cannot make the grade in these times when high costs make large income mandatory. They also, as Dr. Smith notes, face increased competition from state-supported schools which are stepping up their pressure for money through various foundations and also by newly organized programs like the "Alumni Giving" program at Chapel Hill.

There is no reason, as we see it, why state-supported institutions would not call on their alumni for more support just as privately endowed colleges do, but we know as well as Dr. Smith does that it brings on powerful new competition in an already over-crowded field.

Is Dr. Smith's plan sound? We frankly don't know, but we would like to raise several questions which its supporters might find hard to answer. With primary and secondary education facilities lagging far behind in meeting the needs of North Carolina school children, how could the state, in all good conscience, take on an even larger job of underwriting college education for all its young people? Should college education, after all, become that much dependent on the state for its survival? Is channeling money through government the most economical and efficient way to get it?

Regardless of the practicality of Dr. Smith's plan, we commend him for the unique and stimulating manner in which he dramatized the problems of church-related colleges. We have no doubt that these financial needs are critical and that the time has come for the state to realize it.

* * *

Dr. Smith's Address Before the Kiwanis Club of Greensboro

I have been invited to speak to you about education; education as conducted in our privately endowed or church related colleges, and concerning the North Carolina Foundation of Church Related Colleges for the support of these colleges. In the United States and in North Carolina we have what is known as a dual system of education; state or tax supported colleges and universities and the privately endowed colleges and universities that are supported by voluntary contributions. Our state government has been increasing its appropriations for the support of our state schools year after year. It is interesting and encouraging how it has upped and upped and upped these appropriations.

The appropriations are made in two packages—capital improvements and current needs. Capital funds last year ranged from $483,000 to $5,823,000 per individual college. Appropriations for instruction or current needs ranged from $218 per student to $615 per student; from $581,000 to $2,261,000 per individual school.

The church related colleges of our state are finding it pretty hard sledging financially. When you depend on voluntary contributions you must put in a lot of effort, see a lot of people and talk a lot if you are going to secure the necessary funds to finance the operation of your college. We haven't been too successful in these last years, particularly the last two years. I should say that ninety percent of the church related colleges in North Carolina are in certain financial difficulties either from the standpoint of capital improvements or from the standpoint of current funds and many of us are having difficulties with both.

Our state schools are ill-content with what would seem to be adequate appropriations with which to finance their programs including capital funds, they have invaded the field of benevolence, the one field at present to which the privately endowed colleges may go. Our state schools have on at present campaigns under the guise of foundations to raise a total in excess of $50,000,000 and this is not all. A campaign is to be conducted independent of foundations that will total another $50,000,000. These campaigns are put on with the leading business men of the State, executives, and politicians, with a force that dwarfs into insignificance any program that our privately endowed colleges have ever considered or even thought of. You can easily see what the results will eventually be. Unless business men and church men who are interested in freedom in education and the free enterprise system of our country assert themselves in the interest of these privately endowed colleges, it is only a question of time when a greater percentage of these church schools will be forced out of existence.

What happens then? Take a look at Germany. Germany had the dual system of education, her state schools and her privately endowed schools. The state kept increasing its support to her schools until Hitler came into power, then the state under Fascism, closed all privately endowed schools and purged the professors who would not accept the mandates of the state. The same thing happened in Russia and obtains today. When the Communist took over China, the first thing they did was to close all church activities, close all private schools and order the missionaries and the teachers from foreign countries out of their country. I say it will be a sad day when the entire program of higher education is placed in the hands of the state. In the first place, until equipment could be provided, the cost of providing higher education

(Continued on page 13.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Why The Cross?

We count time not only by years but by the seasons of the year as well. Springtime, summer, and harvest. Springtime is the time of new life, a time when the seeds sprout, the trees bud, and the flowers bloom, when man's faith is quickened by the retelling of the resurrection of our Lord. Of course, the story of the cross comes before the story of the resurrection, but the story of the cross rests upon the story of the resurrection. But for the story of the resurrection, the story of the cross would long since have been buried beneath the doubts of the ages. "For if Christ be not risen from the dead, then is our preaching vain." Our faith is also vain and our sacrifices would be useless.

The Christian Church through the years has glorified the cross. I am ever mindful of the fact that Christ was nailed to the cross, "crucified, dead, and buried." The cross was an instrument of death and shame. The Christ, the Son of God, was innocent, pure, and honest, and yet he willingly paid the penalty of death on the cruel cross. I don't think he cherished the cross. I don't think he loved the cross. Inwardly and humanly speaking I think he despised the cross; I think he hated the cross. He didn't care for the instrument of destruction. He loved life and everything that ennobled life, that saved life, that lifted life from the pit-falls of evil. He loved life so much that he gave his own life that life might be saved; that man might have life and have it more abundantly.

Today the church seems to glorify the cross. Our own church has adopted the custom of displaying the cross in our altars of prayer and of worship. Truly, we do glory in the cross, not as such but as the way by which it was the will of the Father; that he should go to bring to man cleansing and redemption and ultimately life eternal, through the power of God that brought him forth from the grave, even the resurrection of his body. Man's salvation depends upon the fact of his resurrection. Is there some way that the church could dramatize to the world the faith of the resurrected life of our Lord? The empty tomb is more essential to the Christian religion than the cruel cross. The cross was and is a means to an end. The resurrection was the purpose of his coming and the meaning of his sacrifice. Through and by the resurrection, we have the hope, yea the assurance that our own blessed dead and we ourselves shall ultimately come out of the darkness of the tomb into the glorious light shed abroad in our Father's House from his resurrected countenance.

We shall bear the cross. We shall be resurrected from the dead, and know even as we are known.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

When this month shall have passed, one-third of the year will be behind us. Contributions from the churches on conference apportionments will be approximately one-sixth of the amount apportioned. It would seem that it would be better for the individual churches to keep these payments up and it certainly would be of tremendous help to the college.

Expenses at the college continue to increase. There is a slight decrease in the cost of foods, but the cost of other necessary supplies seem to increase. Labor has gotten in the habit of expecting raises in salaries. This is not only true on a college campus but it is true in almost all industry and other fields of employment. True, the laborer is worthy of his hire and he should be amply paid but there are times when the sources from which money comes to make payments must be considered.

I hope some day to be able to report contributions from at least fifty percent of our churches in one report. We have a very good offering for this week but there are only twelve churches out of two hundred and one making reports. If we could add eighty-eight to that, in all probability we would have a good report to make.

The college is grateful for the support given by the Sunday schools and churches.

Previously reported $ 1,905.81
 Eastern N. C. Conference:
 Mt. Auburn $ 25.00
 Piney Plain 15.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Antioch	$ 40.00
Bethlehem (Dis)	12.00
Rosemont	60.00
Suffolk S. S.	72.54
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Ingram	$ 35.00
Long's Chapel	17.86
Winston-Salem	43.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Hank's Chapel	60.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethlehem S. S.	$ 23.00
Linville S. S.	7.50
	<hr/>
	410.90

Total to date $ 2,316.71

* * * * *

Ministers Will Meet on Campus

All ministerial alumni of Elon College will be invited back to the campus on Tuesday, April 20, for a Religious Leadership Convocation, which is to be staged under the sponsorship and direction of the campus Ministerial Association.

Plans for this first annual gathering of the Elon College ministers, who are now serving congregations in various parts of the country, were announced by Dr. F. E. Reynolds, who is faculty advisor for the organization of ministerial students.

The plans for the convocation call for two workshop meetings to be held in the afternoon, followed by a banquet session that evening in the college dining hall, and those in charge of the meeting expect a large number of former Elon ministerial students to return to the campus at that time.

Dr. O. S. McColl, retired minister from Woodford, Conn., will be one speaker at one of the workshop gatherings in the afternoon, and he will also be the principal speaker for the banquet that evening. The other workshop speaker will be Rev. Wofford Timmons, pastor of the Congregational Christian Church at Southern Pines, North Carolina.

INFORMATION REGARDING THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

(Continued from page 2.)

Registration for all delegates, associate delegates and visitors, $4.00.

Room and meals from noon, Wednesday, June 23, through noon, Wednesday, June 30, $41.00.

Room and meals by the day, $7.00, or $3.50 for meals and $3.50 for room per day.

The sessions will be held at Yale University, and the delegates will be housed in the facilities of the University.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Hats Off to Miss Hargrove

Miss Margaret Hargrove "hit the ground running" when she arrived in the Southern Convention and never stopped during her two weeks in this area. And wherever she went she made friends for herself and for the denomination. We should all be grateful to our president, Mrs. W. B. Williams, who chauffeured Miss Hargrove in her Cadillac—the score was about fifteen hundred miles in travel together here in the Southern Convention. Miss Hargrove declares it was the nicest way to travel one can imagine—for Mrs. Williams provided everything, from typewriter to stops at nice quiet spots along the road for that last-minute touch to a speech!

Many of us have felt that the denomination would find it very difficult to secure a person to fill Berta McClintock's place as executive secretary for our women's work. However, we all seem agreed that Margaret Hargrove is able to do just that in an excellent way.

We want to thank Miss Hargrove for taking this time in her busy schedule to become acquainted with our women in the Southern Convention and to let them get to know her. She made a great contribution to the life and the work of our churches through her speeches and discussion periods at the Rallies. We hope it will not be long before she can return to our area. And we hope she has taken with her pleasant memories of springtime in the Southland—even though it was not as warm as she had expected until that last day at Union Ridge!

It is hoped that reports of the Rallies will come in to be published on this page. At this writing one secretary, Miss Flossie Bray, has reported. The Asheboro District in North Carolina had thirteen churches represented by 83 women, with an offering of $25.00. The new officers of this district for next year are: superintendent, Mrs. Bill Simmons, R. 1, Bennett; assistant superintendent, Mrs. Winfred Bray, Randleman; secretary, Mrs. Sherman Maness, Ramseur; assistant secretary, Miss Flossie Bray, Route 1, Bennett.

Hines Chapel Woman Honored

At the district meeting of the Home Demonstration Clubs of Guilford, Randolph and Rockingham counties held in Asheboro, North Carolina, on April 13, two club women from each county were honored as "club women

Arisen!

By John Clark Williams.

Arisen!

From his own grave Christ did arise;
He reigns immortal in the skies;—
No more to pass the way of death.

Arisen!

From my own grave, I shall arise
And be immortal in the skies;—
No more to pass the way of death.

Arisen!

From every grave men may arise
And be immortal in the skies;—
No more to pass the way of death.

Arisen!

And thus His glorious morning
Predicts the end of mourning;—
For death is swallowed up of life.

Arisen!

Our words so faintly, poorly tell
How our dear Lord Immanuel,
Changed mid-night into perfect light.

Arisen!

I can not doubt that God was wise
In planning life within the skies,
Upon the simple terms of faith.

Arisen!

From every land I see them come
To possess the Heavenly home;—
The everlasting Paradise.

Arisen!

Let us share this Blessed Gospel
With all the nations; let us tell
This story of God's perfect love.

of the year." Each was presented with a beautiful orchid.

We are proud that one of these women was Mrs. Turner Smith of the Monticello Club, who is a faithful member of our Hines Chapel Church.

This is the citation read as Mrs. Smith was presented with her orchid:

"A really outstanding club member from Monticello is Mrs. Turner Smith, who was a charter member of the group. The logs that were used in building the club house were cut from her farm and donated by her.

"Always active in club work, she was one of the first twenty-three to help organize the cooperative dairy in 1930. They carry out modern farm practices on their place. She has a dairy and carries the milk to Guilford Dairy every morning.

"In recent years she has been a Scout leader and would take the Girl Scouts to the skating rink each week for recreation. She helped for twelve consecutive years at summer camp.

"For several years she has been 4-H Club leader and is very active in transporting 4-H Club members to County Council meetings. She is raising her granddaughter in 4-H Club work, and giving her every opportunity to advance in this work. She has sent her son and daughter through college. She has helped raise four other boys, taken care of her mother-in-law for several years, visited the sick and given milk to underprivileged children.

"She is a very active member of Hines Chapel Christian Church, where she has been the president of the Ladies Aid and of the Missionary Society. She is a member of the planning committee for an educational building for that church.

"Besides all her household and dairy work, she is very active in helping every cause in the community. Therefore, Mrs. Turner Smith is truly an outstanding club member—we say orchids to Mrs. Smith!"

* * * * *

Christian Family Life

The observance of Family Life Week is brought to our attention by Mrs. Rollings, convention superintendent, and Mrs. Millard Stevens, Eastern Virginia superintendent. Mrs. Stevens reminds us in a forceful way:

"Your family is the greatest possession you have. The primary loyalties of your life should be to those things which enrich the life of your family. It is planning time for special activities in your homes and as a church family during National Family Week, May 2-9, 1954."

* * *

MESSAGE FROM CONVENTION SUPERINTENDENT.

I trust that the promotion of Christian Family Life is going well in your church. First and foremost

"A Tribute to Jesus"

There have been thousands of beautiful tributes paid to the Man of Galilee down through the centuries since he walked in the flesh upon the paths of earth. But no tribute of man can do justice to Jesus—son of man and Son of God.

Human language cannot fully express the love and adoration which sincere commitment to Christ as Saviour, Lord and Redeemer inspires within the human soul.

One man who for years had rejected Jesus, but who was inspired by a neighbor's faithfulness to the church and by his noble Christian living, decided to make investigation for himself about what Christian faith might mean to his own life. As it always is, so it was with this new in importance, of course, is the development of a Family Altar or Daily Devotions in each home. As an aid in this direction, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, our Literature Chairman for the Convention, tells me that the following booklets she likes better for family life devotions than any other she has seen:

"Pages of Power," Part I and Part II, 5c each, or $3.50 per 100.

In only a few weeks now, Christian Family Week for 1954 will be coming up—May 2-9. The week's theme is, "A Troubled World Needs Christian Families." The following material is suggested for use during this week: "Family Week in the Churches," 5c each or $4.00 per 100; "Family Week in Your Home," 5c each or $3.00 per 100; "Poster," 10c each.

This material may be secured from the Department of Publications, National Council of Churches, 79 East Adams Street, Chicago 3, Illinois. Send 10c for handling charges on orders under $2.00.

It would seem a good idea to concentrate on the observance of May Fellowship Day, Friday, May 7, to develop the lighter side of Christian Family Life Week, and bring it to a spiritual climax on Sunday, May 9, with a "Festival of the Christian Home" (Mother's Day) and Rural Life Sunday.

I do hope we can bring about a more wide-spread participation in the Family Camp program within the Convention this summer. Be thinking about how this can be accomplished in your church

MRS. J. S. ROLLINGS, SR., Ch'n,
Christian Family Life.

enquirer—that if with all one's heart one truly seeks to find God, he will find him, to the greatest delight of one's soul in the life of Jesus of Nazareth—"The Christ of Everywhere." And this man, who for so many years had rejected Jesus and rudely spurned his love, but who because of the devotion of a neighbor to the Church of Christ, himself sought Christ and yielded his life to Christ's Lordship over life, wrote these words in tribute to Jesus:

"Down across the ages there has come one unique and radiant life—that of the incomparable Man of Galilee. The world has seen none other to compare with him. With all our modern progress, we are waiting in vain for any life that shall match the beauty, the power, the utter selflessness and the absolute love and self-control of the Great Galilean. Many stories may have been better told than his, but there has been no such other story to tell. To look upon his God-like life for one earnest moment is to be haunted by it evermore and to be lured by it into a new and deeper meaning of living."

We may well ponder in these days of Lent on the challenge of that tribute of one who, for so long rejected Jesus.

Another writer has put his tribute to Jesus in these words:

"Here is a man who was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in another obscure village. He worked in a carpenter shop until he was thirty, and then for three years he was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held an office. He never owned a house. He never had a family. He never went to college. He never traveled two hundred miles from the place where he was born. He never did one of the things that usually accompany greatness. He had no credentials but himself.

"While still a young man, the tide of popular opinion turned against him. His friends ran away. One of them denied him. He was turned over to his enemies. He went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed upon a cross between two thieves. His executioners gambled for the one piece of property he had on earth, while he was dying, and that was his coat. When he was dead he was taken down and laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone, and today this provincial Peasant is the central character of the human race and the outstanding leader in the march of progress. I am far within the truth when I say that all the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that ever were built, and all the parliaments that ever sat, and all the kings that ever reigned, all put together—have not affected the life of man upon this earth as powerfully as has that One Solitary Life—the life of Jesus, the Man of Galilee."

What a tribute! And how deserving is Jesus of such a tribute! Christian people who take their Christian responsibilities so lightly and so indifferently would profit by reading again and again these tributes to Jesus before Easter Sunday, and after reading, feel enough ashamed for having failed to appreciate one so great and so good as Jesus—enough ashamed to fall to their knees in prayer on Easter morning in rededication of their life, their love and their loyalty to the Christ of Galilee and to the church that bears his name.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

"Be a Good Leader," Sunday School Convention was Told

The annual meeting of Western North Carolina Sunday School Superintendents of Congregational Christian Churches was held Saturday evening at 6:30 in the Ramseur city hall, with thirty-two superintendents and pastors attending.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mr. Theodore Cox of Ramseur. The invocation was given by Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, after which the laymen of the Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church, near Ramseur were host for the evening meal, serving a delicious fish supper.

After the evening meal, special guests were introduced by President Cox. Those introduced were: Dr. L. E. Smith of Elon College, Mr. Martin Garren, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Superintendents Convention, Mr. E. W. Kellam and R. W. Iseley of McLeansville, N. C.

Dean J. Earl Danieleley of Elon College, the guest speaker, was introduced and led a most interesting panel discussion concerning the problems of our Sunday schools. The

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Easter is a special time in the church year—an old, old custom. The Jewish people had their Passover from the days of the break with Egyptian rule. Other peoples had spring festivals too.

The egg became the symbol of new life. Ducks, chickens and rabbits became signs of new life too. Flowers bloomed, old, heavy winter clothing was laid away, and the house was swept clean and made fresh. New, light, colorful clothing was worn to show the passing of the seasons.

In England there was a custom that if a young man lifted a young lady off her feet, high into the air, that she must grant him a wish, usually a kiss. People had a holiday, they cooked many things, especially little cakes and boiled eggs, which they gave to their visiting friends. We borrowed the name Easter from the spring festival of the Nordic people who came to England.

Our country has school holiday. Our Jewish friends and neighbors are celebrating the Passover. We dye eggs and hide them, we have colorful Easter baskets and wear fresh, new clothing. Lovely flowers and sweet lilies are in our churches. We mark the passing of the old winter and the arrival of the new spring.

But most important of all, we think about Jesus, his life, his love, his work, and how he lived that all people should have a full life. In the midst of our frolic and fun, let us remember his love and goodness. The church, with its flowers and its music, will help us to think on him.

* * * * *

She Didn't Want Her Lunch

By LAURA GRAY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association

For a number of days three-year-old Susan had eaten very little lunch! Here was a sturdy youngster, usually eager for a meal, suddenly refusing all but a glass of milk and sometimes, part of a tomato or apple at lunchtime.

I coaxed, and I questioned. I let her choose. But when I set before her a scrambled egg and some canned apricots—her own order—she gulped a little of the egg with obvious effort and looked up in evident distress.

“Never mind, dear, if you don’t feel like eating,” I said. “Run off to bed and have your nap.”

“My milk first!” She gave me a relieved grin and downed the cold drink.

Susan was not ill, I decided, but why could she not eat? What had happened? How were conditions different now from what they were a month ago? Spring days had arrived, and she was able to be out of doors more. A new family of five children had come to live in our block, providing playmates for Susan. All authorities say an only child must play with other children for proper development. Susan was now out all of each morning playing. And sunshine and play should give her an appetite, not rob her of one, I considered.

However, at the end of another week Susan was definitely growing thin, and she was becoming irritable. Something had to be done. But what? No use to try to force food down her throat when she obviously had no appetite for it. I was floored.

That afternoon I met Mrs. Brown with her three-year-old, John, going shopping. Although I scarcely knew her I found myself telling her my troubles. “I just don’t know what to do!” I concluded.

“Do you think Susan could be too tired to eat?” asked Mrs. Brown.

“But being tired should make her hungry,” I said.

“Yes, if she is not too tired. I once did nursing in a child clinic. There they were careful to protect the little ones from fatigue. There were many rest periods and always one before eating. Those children you speak of are most likely all older than Susan and play vigorously.”

“They are,” I answered. “They fight, snatch toys, and scream. It tires me just to watch them. They call for Susan sometimes before we’ve finished breakfast, and she is out playing all the morning.”

“I try to keep John playing quietly at home most of the morning,” said Mrs. Brown. “One hour with the other children is quite enough. Fortunately, the girl next door is the same age as John, and the two play well together, and not too strenuously.”

“Thank you for giving me an idea,” I said.

The next morning, at twenty minutes to eight, Susan’s playmates arrived. “Can Susan come out to play?” one asked.

I spoke plainly. “Susan is only three.” I looked at the youngest, a chubby boy of five. “It tires her too much to play all the morning with you. You are all older than she is. So I want her to play at home. She can’t come out yet.”

They went off. Then Susan burst into loud crying. “I want to go! I want to play! Boohoo!”

But I was prepared. I had on hand some new outout books, new crayons, and a pot of paste; and I sat down and helped her use them. A knock malled me to the door. There stood red-haired Bobby, who had been going around with the five other children.

“Am I too big to play with Susan?” he asked, smiling. “I’m four.”

“No, Bobby, come in,” I answered, and I brought out another cutout book and another pair of scissors. The lad was as pleased as he could be, and Susan was delighted. The morning passed happily and restfully. A while before lunch I sent Bob home. Now he comes often. The two romp and play under supervision, which is not generally visible but is always there. This takes time and effort—some housework goes undone—but Susan’s appetite has returned, she is her own happy self once more, and she has a playmate.

Announcement

The Spring Issue of the “Program Manual” carries the Children’s Day Service, “We Would Be Christian.”

It also has a program for an all-church project entitled “Neighborhood Family Night.” Worship services for the entire quarter are also contained in it.

Each Sunday school should have at least one copy of “The Program Manual” each quarter. The price is 30 cents.

Order from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Mass. This time ask for the spring quarter.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

"Revenge Scoop"

R. 1, Ramseur, N. C.,
March 31, 1954.

Dear Pattie Lee,

I will be unable to help in camps. Plan to be married June 12. Will not let this happen again!

Yours,
Max.

* * * * *

Tips From Tom

Seems Pattie Lee found material for publication in revenge against Max.

* * *

Don't forget! Next weekend is the date, April 24 and 25. All officers, commission ehairmen, and two delegates from each church to assemble for a mass rally in Burlington.

* * *

With school work to keep up, churches to serve, studies and sermons to prepare, visits and calls to make, along with preparations for marriage in June, Max hasn't had time to relax lately.

* * *

Next week the featured lead will be centered on Summer camps. Notice times, places and address of the one of your choice. This will be Two weeks for and with the youth of our churches.

* * *

How do you get members to your group? What do you try to offer to attraet new members and keep others interested? Will some of the youth groups write us and share the ideas on these questions with all of us. Write today, will you.

* * * * *

Report of Junior Youth Fellowship at Liberty Vance

We meet every Sunday night at 6:30 o'clock except on second Sunday then at 6:00 o'clock because Henderson group meets with us every second Sunday or we go to Henderson. We look forward to the fellowship suppers which are given by the different missionary groups. Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Fuller, Jr., eounsellors, opened their home and entertained the society Saturday evening, March 27. Their helper had charge of the games, and my, what fun we had for two hours. Then the refreshment time which was banana splits for all.

You should have seen the children playing with balloons, trying to keep them up in the air with one hand as they went aecross the room and back without touching anyone else. Mr. W. A. Grissom took pictures of them. It will be fun in the fall to see the pictures of what our group has been doing.

Our group had charge of the evening devotional at the Worship Service in church on March 28. We sponsored the motion picture of "Christ Before Pilate." Mr. Grissom has presented the entire group of pictures entitled "The Lining Bible," except the ones to come each Sunday night until Easter.

There were only 53 young people present for our Senior and Junior meetings but we should have had 100. Please tell us how to win them in?

Reverend and Mrs. W. A. Grissom are giving their time and cooperation in all our church work and we all love them and I hope we can win more to our church. They do appreciate cooperation so much. They will lead us right if we will follow and help work. Please come and fill your places.

F. B. FULLER, JR.,
Counsellor.

* * * * *

A Letter to Eastern North Carolina Youth

Hello P. F'ers!

Well, we certainly haven't been in touch with each other for quite some time; have we? At any rate, it's good to be back in contact with you again. How is the P. F. work progressing in your church? If anything outstanding is happening or has happened, write to Tommy Madren, our youth page editor in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and tell him. He is wanting news for the youth page. Don't let him down. His address is Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Have you been reading in THE CHRISTIAN SUN about the P. F. Convention which is to be held in the spring? If you have, here is some more information concerning it for you; If you haven't the following is what you will need to know: On April 24 and 25 there is going to be two days of discussion, business sessions, worship services, and fellowship in general. All of this is to help you learn more about Christian Education and Pilgrim Fellowship.

The place we shall have our meetings is the First Congregational Christian Church in Burlington; however, all of our churches in Alamance Connty are to be our hosts. The time for the first session is 2 p. m., Saturday, the 24.

Due to limited accomodations each church is being asked to send only two delegates; but if their are more than these two who would like to attend, by all means, be sure to send them.

If you have no organized P. F. group, it is even more necessary that you feel obligated to send your two delegates.

It has been requested that everyone bring a picnic supper for Saturday night.

I ask you to please elect your delegates immediately and to be sure that you are represented.

Yours in fellowship,
CURTIS YOUNG, President,
N. C. and Va. P. F.

The Challenge

Unlike the passive watching of a drama or a football game, the Christian call demands a deal of doing. Christ expects a response not just in assenting thoughts, or even in appropriate words. There must be the demonstration of conviction in daily conduct and conversation, in serving and sharing. For after all, the only testimony that really counts is the witness of life itself, in its real quality. Christian faith is not merely thinking the truth, nor even saying the right thing. Essentially it is being the right kind of a person.

—Robbins Wolcott Barstow, Missions Council Church Calendar.

From Richmond Church Calendar

Our Youth Fellowship will hold a "Sunrise Service" in the sanctuary on Easter Morning at 7 o'clock. The assistant pastor, Robert H. Fernandez, will give the message. All are welcome to attend. Following the service, breakfast will be served, to which all of those attending the service are invited.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Ahijah Foresees a Divided Kingdom"

LESSON IV—APRIL 25, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "If thou wilt harken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways . . . I will be with thee, and will build thee a sure house."—I King 11: 38.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: I Kings 11: 1-12, 24.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 1.

By Way of Introduction.

We begin today a series of lessons on The Northern Kingdom and its Prophets. We pass from the New to the Old Testament, from Jesus to Jereboam. It is quite a change. The lessons will be difficult to teach—do not fool yourself about that. It will be necessary to know more of the background material. It will require skill and insight and prayer to get at the heart of these Old Testament lessons and to apply the truths in them to our modern world and our contemporary life. But it will be a rewarding exercise. When seen in their setting against the times in which they were written, and the life which they reflect, these old stories have a startling pertinency to our own times and our own problems. They have a message for our modern world and our way of life.

One more word by way of introduction. We will be considering again and again in this Quarter's lessons, the prophets of the Northern Kingdom. Let us get clearly in mind the essential meaning and mission of a prophet. He was not, as many people believe a glorified "fortune teller" a gypsy-like fellow who could look into a crystal ball and "tell your fortune." The word prophet comes from two words, "pro" in behalf of or for and "phemi" which means to speak. A prophet was one who spoke "for," or "in behalf of," someone, or in the case of the Old Testament prophets, one who spoke "for God" or "in behalf of God." To be sure there was sometimes an element of prediction in their messages. They did tell of things to come. But this was because they knew how to read "the signs of the times." They could put two and two together and make four out of it. They knew God and his ethical will and his sovereign power, and they could get beneath the surface of things and events, and discern tendencies and trends. Knowing God as they did, and being convinced of his righteous rule, and his sovereignty, and seeing things as they really were, these men of God had no hesitancy in saying that certain things were coming to pass. And they came to pass so regularly that people came to recognize that these men really were speaking "for God." Today's lesson is a case in point. Ahijah's prophecy was based on shrewd observation of things as they were, and the enlightening spirit of God as to the inevitable result of what was going on in the national life of his day.

The Roots of Revolution.

A college professor used to tell his students of history that there were always two causes of war, the immediate, and the long-developing cause or causes. The firing on Fort Sumpter was the beginning of the Civil War (or the War Between the States if you prefer it that way) but the cause of that war was rooted deeply in the controversy over slavery and especially States' Rights. The same thing is true of revolutions. Back of the Revolution in Russia there was the long period of the tyranny and the power of those in authority.

Thus it was in the case of the actual splitting of Solomon's Kingdom. Back of this actual, specific event there were historic, long-developing causes. Let us look at the picture.

Solomon had wrought a revolution in Hebrew life. He had taken a nation of shepherds and farmers and welded them into a strong nation, economically, socially, and religiously. (Israel never was strong militarily.) He had built great buildings, centralized religion, raised the standard of living, and promoted peace. But he had done a great deal of this by forced labor and by heavy taxes. Even the lowest people were beginning to chafe under the heavy load, and there was a spirit of rebellion which now and then broke forth here and there. Furthermore, and more to the point, Solomon "went after strange gods." He had married foreign wives and in deference to them he had built "high places" and temples, and had worshiped in them. His kingdom had become largely secular—he had left God out of it and out of his life. The moral and spiritual life of the nation was in decay. The hand-writing was on the wall. And Ahijah saw it. Under the illumination of the spirit of God, he read the signs of the times, and forthwith predicted what was to happen.

The Leader of the Revolution.

Jereboam was the leader of the revolution. He had been employed by Solomon in some of his building projects. Solomon had been impressed by his valor and by his industry, and made him "foreman" of the vast enterprise—he gave him charge over all the labor of the house of Joseph. While he was walking in the rural section outside of Jerusalem one day, the prophet Ahijah met him. The prophet was wearing a new mantle or cloak. Taking it off, he tore it into twelve pieces and gave ten of them to Jereboam, telling him that this was a symbol and a pledge that he would become the leader of ten of the tribes of Israel. The prophet went on to say that if this young man would walk in Jehovah's way, Jehovah would be with him, and would build him a "sure house" and would give Israel unto him.

Unfortunately Jereboam could not keep his mouth shut—he talked too much. And Solomon heard about what had happened. He immediately sought to lay hold on this young revolutionist, who had to flee for his life to Egypt, where he remained until after Solomon's death. We will hear more about this young man later.

It Can Happen Here.

Now of course there are folks who say "Well what of it?" "So what?" The point of this story is that what happened to Israel can happen here. "Because they have forsaken me . . . and have not walked in my ways. To do what is right in my eyes"—that was why Israel was destroyed as a nation. And if America becomes secular, if she forgets God, or she becomes selfish and secular, she too will be destroyed. It can happen here.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

DR. SMITH'S ADDRESS.

(Continued from page 6.)

tion by the state would double and our taxes would double. In the second place, it is bad for any country when higher education becomes the football of unscrupulous politicians.

You say that could not happen in this country. Human nature is not different in America to what it is in Europe and Asia. What could happen in European countries could easily happen in our country under similar circumstances. It will be a sad day when the entire program of higher education in our country is placed in the hands of the state. Should that day come, the cost of public education to the taxpayer would be doubled. Forty-three percent of the college population in North Carolina today is enrolled in our privately endowed and church related colleges.

What then is the remedy? This is my idea and nobody else's. You may not agree; many do not. I think that the state should appropriate money in sufficient sums to provide for capital improvements on the campuses of our state colleges, seeing that the kind and type of equipment needed is put there in sufficient quantities. I think that the privately endowed colleges should provide their own equipment; that is, erect their own buildings and equip them for the kind and type of work that they are doing in the field of higher education. I do not think that the state should appropriate one dollar to our state schools for instruction and current needs—the needs that are usually covered by the appropriations to colleges for students. This, I think, should not be done. I think that the state should not appropriate one dollar to our church related colleges for any capital improvements, grounds, buildings, or any of these things. But I do think that the State of North Carolina should be interested in the education of its total student population and that appropriations should be made to the student and not to the college.

Take this example—there are two citizens in Greensboro. They live on the same street. They live next door to each other. They both have daughters who have graduated from high school. They both want to go to college. Both of these citizens pay taxes, quite a bit of taxes. One says he will send his daughter to Woman's College, the state is putting up a total for four years of twelve to fifteen hundred dollars for your daughter's education. The other neighbor elects to send his daughter to Greensboro College, a privately endowed school. The state takes no knowledge of the interest of this student in Greensboro College. They both pay taxes but the one gets no benefit from his taxes. This all adds up to taxation without the privilege of sharing, which amounts to the same thing as taxation without representation.

In my judgment, the only fair thing for the State of North Carolina to do for the support of its local college population is to appropriate for current needs so much per student provided he is a citizen of North Carolina and provided he enters a college in North Carolina fully accredited. That is to say, the state should appropriate money for the instruction of North Carolina Students—to the individual student—and let him select his college within the state. This could be no violation of the principle of the separation of church and state. This is exactly what the United States government is doing today.

But you say, what are these colleges to do now, today? They find themselves in financial difficulties. These colleges have faced these difficulties in conference and counsel together. They have elected to bind themselves together in what we call the North Carolina Foundation of Church Related Colleges. The purpose of this conference is to make a united appeal to business and industry in our state or having an interest in our state. Instead of every individual going to plead, each individual goes to plead the case for all. It is a kind of community fund. We calculate our needs, we go the business interests of our state and ask them to contribute to help meet these needs. It is a favor to all. You would rather have one call than twenty-four calls. Business has a stake in education. Education has a stake in business. We are mutually dependent upon each other. You need the products of our schools, our colleges. We need a share of the earnings of your business. Neither can very well get along without the other.

But you wonder how much you are to give. You have so many calls. I wonder too. It is a difficult question to answer. One way to find out how much you should give would be to get down your tax receipts and figure how much taxes you pay and figure how much of the tax dollar goes into higher education as it is today and then give an equal amount to our privately endowed and church related colleges. Our laws are so constructed that when the tax man comes around, you can't say, "I haven't made any money this year, I can't give you anything." You can't tell Uncle Sam or Aunt North Carolina that kind of a story and get by with it, but you can tell the representatives of our privately endowed colleges this and get by with it.

It would be interesting if you would turn, at your convenience, to your daily papers, magazines and current periodicals, and see what many of the leading businessmen of this nation are saying about our privately endowed colleges and their needs. The dependence of business upon the products of our colleges and the obligations that businesses have to our colleges—Abrams of Standard Oil, Olds of United States Steel, Sloan of General Motors, Spencer Love of Burlington Mills, and many others. I should make an appeal to you not to turn a deaf ear or close your purses against the need of our privately endowed colleges. They need you; you need them.

I have left the most important thing to say to the last. God is in this world. God should be in education. If Christ and the Christian gospel are left out of education, then we face continual conflicts in social living and ultimate disintegration of our civilization. One swallow does not make a spring; a religious emphasis period on a college campus does not make it Christian or religious. It is the faculty, carefully chosen from the standpoint of Christianity that makes a college Christian and education worthwhile.

"BE A GOOD LEADER"

(Continued from page 9.)

panel was made up of four Sunday school superintendents and one visitor. After the discussion, Dr. Daniele spoke on the subject, "Being a Good Leader," breaking it down to being a leader in the community that sets forth a good light, being a Good Samaritan in the name of Christ, introducing the good news which the church leadership should seek to make their motive.

The meeting adjourned to meet again in the spring of 1955 at a time and place which will be announced at a later date.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Total for this week $4,404.78. How about that! I mean that is plenty good! And how did it get that way? Well, for one thing 11 churches sent us a total of $543.72. About 40 churches out of 200 send us monthly offerings. That is an average of ten each week. How fine it would be if your church along with every other church in the convention sent in to the convention office a contribution each month for the orphanage! It may be that your church has a unified budget wherein all money goes directly to your church treasurer—even so, there must be some organized class or other organization in the church which would not mind, once each month, giving the members of the organization a chance to make a small donation to the homeless children—most of them orphans—which are the charge of the church. A very small amount from each of our 200 churches monthly, would help us with our monthly bills. This year we are trying to overcome a $13,298.61 handicap of bills due and unpaid at the end of the past year. That is what the drought did to us, locally, and also through so many of our good farmer folk and rural churches.

Yes, this week the churches—11 of them—sent us $543.72; and also this week we received a check from the Duke Foundation in the amount of $3,359.70. Prior claim on this were several months past-due insurance bills of $2,029.25 which our good neighbors had carried for the orphanage until this time. The total insurance bill covering the three dormitories, the dairy barn and houses, the residences, the grain, meat, potato and food houses; and the comprehensive insurance on tractors and machinery amounts to $3,168.82 annually. You must realize that fire-fighting ability in a little town like this is low and the insurance rate high. Also the board of trustees feel that it cannot afford not to have this property properly insured. This Duke Foundation check usually helps tide us over into the summer but this time there was a place for it. This check was figured on the basis of approximately 19 cents per day for each orphan and half-orphan. It is the largest amount we have had from the Duke Foundation since I came to the orphanage. It is very much appreciated.

Again I want everyone who reads these lines, or this page—and I wish there were many more who did read it—to know how much I appreciate the kindness on the part of everybody. Daily I pray that these children here may so develop as to make us all feel happy that we had a part in helping them. When I am tired or over-worked or preplexed I remember how Jesus said, "In as much as ye do it unto one of these ye do it unto me." Life is made for helping others. And I know so many more ways than helping poor little homeless children, and I like to share in some of them, but one of the good ways is looking out for a homeless, forsaken, little child.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR APRIL 8, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Coupons:
Woman's Fellowship, Pfafftown Congregational Christian Church.
Missionary Society, Mt. Bethel Christian Ch.
Clothing:
Junior Missionary Group, Holland, Va. Christian Church.
Charles W. Parker, Jr., Washington, D. C.
Mt. Carmel Missionary Circle, Walters, Va.
The boys and girls of the Primary Department, Berea (Nans.) Church.
Mt. Gilead (E. N. C.) Sunday school.
Union Christian Church, Dendron, Va.
Sophia Church Missionary Society.
Progressive Bible Class, Newport News Ch., for Betty Oakes.
Candy:
Mrs. Sam Scott, Winston-Salem, N. C.
Troop 17, Girl Scouts, Reidsville, N. C., Box of Flower Seeds.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 3,694.19
Eastern Va. Conference:
Barrett's	$ 6.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)	50.00
Dendron S. S.	26.00
Liberty Spring S S.	20.00
Mt. Carmel S. S.	17.13
Windsor S. S.	10.00
	129.13
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Reidsville S. S.	$ 66.00
Greensboro, First	225.25
Reidsville S. S., for boiler	30.00
	321.25
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro	$ 75.00
	75.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Dry Run S. S.	$ 10.00
Winchester S. S.	8.34
	18.34
Total	$ 543.72
Grand total	$ 4,237.91

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 6,850.34
Reliable Bible Class, First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va.
Chester H. Roth Co., Inc. (Interest)	7.50
Miss Margaret Morey, Fredericktown, Pa. ...	3.00
A Friend, Easter Gift ...	25.00
New Hope Christian Ch., Roanoke, Alabama ...	2.53
Pillsbury Mills, Inc. (for coupons)	13.90
Elder Cong. Christian Ch., Dadeville, Ala.	10.00
W. B. Truitt, Greensboro, N. C.	100.00
Woman's Fellowship of Damascus Ch., Sunbury, N. C.	25.00
Woman's Guild, Shelton Mem. Ch., Easter gift .	10.00
Misses Birdie & Sallie Wilson, Virginia, Va. ...	10.00
Dorothy Williams S. S. Class, Franklin, Va. ...	5.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name

Address

In Memoriam

LOWE.

We, the members of the Elon College Missionary Society, wish to pay tribute to the memory of our friend and coworker, Mrs. W. E. Lowe who passed away on February 28, 1954.

Cheerful, modest, loyal and faithful—these words describe the life of our departed friend and fellow member.

Her outlook on life was bright—always radiantly cheerful, calm, and serene—modest and retiring in her manner, yet always ready and willing to respond to any call of Christian service.

In her passing, our society has lost a loyal and faithful member. Therefore be it resolved:

- 1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.
- 2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be recorded in the minutes of our society, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. A. L. RICH,
Mrs. L. E. SMITH,
Mrs. W. P. LAWRENCE.

LESS THAN THREE MONTHS TO GO.

(Continued from page 2.)

churched. There is no church among us that does not have serious local problems. Some are in the process of building new sanctuaries. Others are renovating old buildings. Still others have purchased parsonages, and among some there are outstanding debts to be paid. The fact remains, however, that few of us are unduly burdened by our giving to the church. The Loan Fund is definitely a plus. We are, quite frankly, asking our people to give over and above their local church contributions to the end that the resources that are so desperately needed shall be provided to enable us to meet our proportionate responsibility for the churching of America today and tomorrow.

The church that accepts its quota will be blessed. The program which will be developed to raise the quota will quicken its spirit. The joy of achievement will create the desire that the experience will be repeated. The sense that one's gift is never spent, always lent, and will help church after church across the country and down through the years, is exciting. The fact that the members of every church aided, in a very real sense, become the agents of the donor in the building of the Kingdom of God is satisfying beyond words and beyond price.

Our freedom is a precious heritage, but no less so is our sense of fellowship. We cannot quite possess our Lord and Master without also sharing him.

We covet for every church the sense of well-being that participation in the Loan Fund creates, and for every individual the joy that comes through the experience of a second mile gift.

If your church has not yet sent in a Declaration of Purpose, won't you please see that action to that end is taken. If you, yourself, have not made an individual gift over and above your share in your church's quota, won't you please do so now without delay.

Victory is in sight. May it not escape us.

STANLEY U. NORTH.

A BUS ROUTE FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL.

(Continued from page 3.)

to anyone who does not have transportation to the church of their choice along the route.

Mr. Galt has given much time to this work. He is president of the local Ministerial Association, and has assisted with religious surveys in the community.

There are four main reasons given by the local newspaper why advantage should be taken of this opportunity to attend Sunday school: (1) for your own sake; (2) for your children's sake; (3) for the sake of the community and nation; and (4) for the sake of the church itself, which needs moral and material support.

We congratulate Rev. Mr. Galt on his successful efforts to obtain this service, and hope it will prove a most successful venture for the churches concerned.

THE ROAD FROM THE TOMB.

(Continued from page 5.)

road away from the tomb. It is easy to believe in a victory over the grave as you stand before an open tomb, as it were—but not so easy when you get back into the strife and fret of the world.

The physical universe is full of the power and glory of God. Is not the spiritual world even more so? If we believe that Jesus conquered death, can we also believe that he can conquer the bonds that shackle us to sin and keep us earthbound? Is it easier for him to win over the great enemy, Death, than to win us, who call ourselves his friends?

How seriously we ought to think, on this Easter day, about this road from the tomb. We have heard the good news. Our hearts have been warmed and our minds renewed. We believe; we are thrilled. We see that good has triumphed, and that Christ could not be holden of death. God has given us life eternal and abundant, in Christ, and there blossoms forth life that shall endless be. But we who so captivously worship, do we realize the call to live the risen life? The resurrection means—let me remind us all again—not just that Jesus rose from the dead, but also that we too rise with him, and new life comes forth within us and the old life has passed away. How much easier it is for us to say simply that Jesus rose, and to ignore the fact that we too must rise—that we must day by day live a risen, and loving, and faithful life.

It is clear, from the Scriptures, what this risen life involves. It means see what has come to pass, and going into one's field of service to tell others and to make possible for them the joy that comes from the risen life. He means telling abroad everywhere what has come to pass, that the victory in Christ may be possible for all. And it certainly also means work: casting out devils and all their works, of whatever kind and doing much else to implement the risen life for any, in their need.

There is no reasonable doubt of what God did through Jesus, nor about what this meant. What remains is for us so to pray and work and strive, that we may likewise live, day by day, in our time and where we are stationed, the risen life. If we can keep with us on the road away from the tomb, the faith of the Easter dawn, we shall have brought to fulfillment the mission of the Master.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

The Duke Endowment	3,359.43
In Memory of R. Roy
Hasaflook	5.00
In Memory of Mrs. Edd
Alberts	5.00
In Memory of Raymond
W. Ward	5.00
Special Gifts	269.70
	3,861.06
Grand total	$10,711.40
Total for the week	$ 4,404.78
Total for the year	$14,949.31

EASTER'S DEFINITE MEANING

By C. B. RIDDLE

Easter has a definite meaning for those who devoutly hold a specific faith and a more general meaning for others. There is no clash between the two types of significance, for the doctrine of the Resurrection is basic in Christianity. The symbolism of rebirth, of triumph over death, of an undying hope even in a world where death seems to reign, is deep in the hearts of all mankind.

The world needs the symbol of Easter in 1954 as much as it was needed during the generations when the Roman Empire was rising to its lurid glory and rotting to its fall. The ancient world, in spite of its feverish bursts of creative energy, was mainly a world of thoughtless cruelty and of indifference to the welfare of the great majority of mankind. Then the human individual had no inherent dignity, but only such worth as rank or wealth bestowed upon him. On such foundations no great and lasting civilization could be built.

Through nearly twenty centuries, man has lifted himself from a state of indignity largely because of his acceptance of the concept of him who came to give a more abundant life. Yet in a recent decade the world saw the rise of an organized and almost successful attempt to wipe out that human progress and again to enslave, debase, torture and kill those for whom Jesus died. And sadly enough in the present decade the methods that failed in one attempt to enslave people are being tried in other forms. But so long as the meaning of Easter lives in the heart of mankind ultimate victory for the demons of earth will never prevail.

Man at last has realized that he must make his own Easter, carve his own destiny, and seek his own salvation under God. The processes of experience and education by which he has arrived at that point in his progress toward a better world have been cruel, indeed, but they have not been fruitless.

That is why the anniversary of the Resurrection in 1954 has a meaning more definite and symbolic than ever.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1954

NUMBER 16

Girl Scout Troop of Beverly Hills Church

The Girl Scouts shown in this picture are: Front row — Janice Purgason, Carole Pournelle, Theresa Rizzo, Sue Boswell, Harriet Blue, Ann Hall, Jackie Rhodes, Leslie Ann Hefke, Kathy Wrenn, Vickey McKenney; second row — Faye Hurdle, Sarabeth White, Mary Hair, Susan Apple, Elaine Apple, Linda Gresham. The leaders are Mrs. J. A. Purgason and Mrs. Robert Blue. We congratulate our Beverly Hills Church, Burlington, North Carolina on such an outstanding Scout Troop. It would do credit to a much larger church.

News Flashes

Rural Life Sunday is May 23, 1954. Special orders of service for the observance of Rural Life Sunday may be obtained through Dr. Thomas Alfred Tripp, Board of Home Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., at the rate of 75c per hundred.

Due to the overflow crowd, Rosemont Christian Church held two morning services Easter Sunday, at 8:45 and 11:00. The total attendance for the two services was 542. There was also a good attendance for the Sunrise Service sponsored by the young people and the Cantata in the evening given by the Senior Choir.

Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury, educational secretary of the American for Foreign Missions, will address a union service of churches of the Elkton Group of the Virginia Valley, on Sunday, May 2, at 11:15 a.m., at the Bethel Christian Church. Miss Seabury will be one of the speakers addressing the Virginia Convocation of Churches in Richmond, the preceding week. Miss Seabury is an excellent speaker and the Bethel meeting should be well attended. There will be a fellowship dinner following the service.

High Point Church Reports

The Congregational Christian Church at High Point, N. C. closed its revival on April 9. There were no additions to the church roll, but Dr. John G. Truitt was with us and did some mighty good preaching that caused the church to do some thinking and working.

We held a Pastor's class each evening from Palm Sunday to Easter, and received and baptized ten members at the morning service Easter Sunday. Three adults and seven children, and expect others in the near future.

The Christian Education building is about ready to use now. It is in nowise complete, but is usable, and it will solve our problem for classrooms for the present. The Sunday school is growing under the efficient leadership of Superintendent D. J. Cates.

REPORTER.

Holy Week and Easter Services Well Attended in Richmond

The attendance at the Lenten, Holy Week and Easter services of our Richmond Church was declared by the "old timers" to have set a new record. There have been eight new members received into the church since conference.

The new Recreation Room is proving to be a great asset in the entire program of the church—appreciated by all ages represented in the membership.

The Board of Deacons, with the pastor, assistant pastor and the choir, conducted the annual Maundy Thursday Candle Light Communion Service, greatly appreciated by the people. The service was patterned after the ancient Maundy Thursday service of the Waldenses' churches, founded in Northern Italy in the Twelfth Century, they being the first organized Protestant group in church history. Luther and Calvin did not come upon the stage until three centuries later.

The Pilgrim Fellowship Group this past year has had a "Three F" program of food, faith and fun each Sunday evening from 6:30 to 8:30. At Easter, the group had charge of the Sunrise Service held in the sanctuary, and were hosts at an Easter Breakfast in the Recreation Room, following the service. The assistant pastor gave the message at the Sunrise Service, and the young people had full charge of the program.

The unusually beautiful floral decorations were solicited and arranged by the Youth Group.

The Easter music presented by the Junior and Adult choirs was of a very high order and was greatly appreciated by all attending the services.

The "Three M's Club," for Mr., Mrs. and Miss, proves to be meeting a great need in the life of the church.

All groups in the church lay emphasis upon the importance of the old saying, "Nothing is too good for the Church of our Lord"—hence the beautifying of the church building, equipment and grounds is a growing concern of all groups.

R. C. HELFENSTEIN,
Pastor.

Government is not reason, it is not eloquence—it is force! Like fire, it is a dangerous servant and a fearful master; never for a moment should it be left to irresponsible action.

—George Washington.

The Minister's Equipment

By REV. MARTIN L. FOGLEMAN.

Paul says, in the first chapter of his letter to the Romans: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

As we think of that great soldier of the Cross, the one who carried on a continued and successful warfare, we are made to realize that we must be equipped with weapons if we, as ministers, are to fight a good fight.

In this passage of scripture Paul tells us of that of which he is not ashamed. He really felt proud of this "sword" he was carrying. It was a powerful weapon—it was then, and still is the power of God. It was this power that Paul urged Timothy to use, "Preach the Word."

As we look at the forces of evil in our land today, with all of their power, we sometimes are tempted to cry out, What is the use, we are powerless." Has the Word of God lost its power?

Nations have risen to power; they have fallen in weakness. Things have changed greatly, but the weapon that Paul used still abides and is still the power of God.

Many people in our land today do not seem to be proud of the Gospel. It is not to them the most important thing. We, like Martha, are cumbered about other things. Some of our churches have closed their doors, some are struggling along with a dozen members, who like Mary, have chosen that better part by listening to the Word of the Lord.

We believe there is a reason for this unconcern on the part of people. We believe that as ministers we will have to take our share of the fault. We, many times, have minimized the importance of the Word of God. The true mission of a minister is not to make for himself a great name, but to present a Name which is above every name—the Name of Christ.

We as ministers should realize that in every community there may be people who are in need of the material things of life. They are important, but that is not the minister's greatest work.

In our denomination we have men chosen for the purpose of seeing that the temporal needs of the poor are supplied. If we are interested only in supplying for the needs and welfare of these people, without personal honor, let us bring our offerings into

(Continued on page 6.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Laymen Add Room to Parsonage

The parsonage at Union Christian Church in Hunterdale has been given something new. Recently the Laymen's Fellowship group met and decided to do something about providing a downstairs bedroom for their pastor, the Rev. Clyde Fields, who would soon be coming home to convalescence from a four weeks stay in Raeford Memorial Hospital, Franklin.

Plans were made and immediately work began, the laymen doing most of the work themselves.

The original garage, which was a part of the house itself, was no longer in use since a car port and utility room had been added some time ago. Using this foundation a floor was laid, walls paneled, and windows added. With the addition of an annex providing shower room and half bath, the room was completed at an approximate cost of $1000.

The room will later be used as a den in the parsonage.

This job was financed by the Laymen's group.

J. E. D.

"The Holly and the Ivy"

PICTURE OF THE MONTH.

This English drama is a sensitive study of the members of a clergyman's family who, gathered to celebrate Christmas, find that, to be happy, they must re-assess their purposes, their attitudes and re-orient their lives.

The characters drawn distinctly are of different moral and spiritual texture. Several have in common an uncertainty and a fear of life. A veneer of reserve covering inner emotional disillusionments blunts their mutual understanding, mainly because the son and daughters have lived under the misapprehension that because their father was a parson, he could neither know nor sympathize with life's temptations, obstacles and failures. When the hidden and tortured selves emerge from natural concealment, dramatic self-disclosure meets infinite compassion from the most unexpected quarter. The result is a healthy, purified relationship and a happier outlook for all.

In an adult manner, the most important ingredient of a good life—honesty with oneself and with others—is given full play in every related incident. This is no sentimental approach to Christmas joyility while ignoring the meaning of Christmas and the implications of the Christian life. Christmas' traditional observances, trimming the tree, singing carols, preparing the church creche, a choir rehearsal, punctuate the family drama and they do not recover their significance until the former is resolved.

Because the viewer feels so much a part of the family circle, this picture holds a special appeal to mature and discerning audiences. The characterizations are so perfect that it is difficult to think of the members of the cast as "actors." The country parish church and the vicarage are natural settings. Christmas carols are embodied in a fine musical score, beautifully rendered.

While we would not expect the presence of liquor in an American pastor's household, we find it here. Whatever difficulties we may encounter in the matter of differences they have a factual basis and do not detract from the quality and import of the film. It is a memorable experience.

This is a London Films production and a Pacemaker Pictures, Inc., release.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle

Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

The Christian Use of Summer

Summer "letdowns" or "slumps" are commonplace among many of our churches in all sections of the country. While some decline in areas not at all sought out in the summer is inevitable, much of the difficulty comes from a sleepy inflexibility and unawareness of real needs on our part. We usually have just the same time schedule and program as before.

Many pastors and laymen have successfully tried various methods by which to beat the summer slump. There is, for instance, the special-guest artist type, drawing us such good extra talent that many who have not gone away will feel they must attend. Then there is the service that is simpler and held at an earlier hour, or in a cool basement, instead of a hot auditorium. There is also the supplementary outdoor service, held on the church grounds or at a resort or beach or picnic ground or roadside gathering place—or anywhere else, such as a baseball diamond or a bandstand—where people may readily gather.

We should not think of our Christian use of summer, moreover, as dealing only with the Sunday morning service. Why not have classes and study courses at other times, excursions and visits to other churches and other points of constructive interest. There could also be efforts to distribute literature to motels and hotels and resorts, and to make calls at individual cottages or places where out-of-towners have come in. Some simple roadside shrines can easily be set up. As a matter of fact, at least one concerned laywoman has offered a desirable piece of land along a Georgia highway for a roadside chapel or shrine, if any Christian group will take it up and develop it for that purpose.

Then there are many projects for Christians during the summer—e. g., to arrange picnics for the needy and handicapped; to take children on parties; to engage in enterprises to benefit some local group or on a mission field.

Daily vacation Bible schools have not been undertaken by enough churches, and even then they have not been developed as broadly as they can be. An informal, yet earnest approach to some great Christian interests would be very rewarding and would sustain the participation of many a member who is staying home during the summer, and simply needs to be challenged.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

Advertising or Mental Coercion?

When any idea is forced upon any group of people over and over again, until that idea seems to be a part of the pattern of their own thinking, it is coercion. And when that idea is deliberately false, and misleading the situation is even worse.

When over and over again, in homes, at places of business, in public transportation, in entertainment, that idea is repeated, it will eventually have an effect upon any group of people. If the idea is presented in enough different ways, in enough different places, at enough different times, it can shape a society and the pattern of living of a generation and of a nation.

It sounds insidious. And yet that is exactly what has happened to the American people and their attitude toward beverage alcohol.

Over a period of years the liquor traffic has set about deliberately, to change the pattern of American thinking. By connecting beer with the founding fathers of democracy, by dramatically portraying a beverage that "belongs" as a part of the American way of life, by associating the highball with financial success and the cocktail with social prestige, the alcohol beverage traffic has shrewdly forced upon the American people a social pattern completely foreign in the very conditions with which it is paralleled.

This is mental coercion. It is a program of propaganda that spends at least $250,000,000 a year in magazine and newspaper advertising alone. It is a program that creates $250,000,000 worth of pressure—to ram home a false idea and to force a habit pattern of a nation.

There is nothing basically wrong with advertising. Advertising is an important part of the system of economics we call free enterprise. But advertising that is deliberately misleading, that does not tell the truth, that is designed to force a product on society, to that society's detriment, is wrong. And when that advertising program, fed by the enormous profits of a traffic which capitalizes on the weaknesses and the miseries of men, begins to enter into every possible area of human life until not even little children are immune to its effects, it must be stopped. It is coercion on a multi-million-dollar scale.

The Terrific Impact of Television Upon the Home Life of Our Children

The first major study into family TV habits and attitudes released on Tuesday of this week showed that children average 13 hours a week viewing their favorite programs. The survey of America's first television generation further revealed that:

The great majority of children's TV shows were westerns—which average 10.5 violent episodes per hour.

Some children's programs averaged as high as 25 violence scenes an hour.

Nearly 70 per cent of parents favored children's TV fare as it stands.

Some 25 per cent of parents, mostly in upper income brackets, were strongly critical and wanted radical improvements.

Reaction of the remaining five per cent was mixed.

The survey covered a five per cent sample of the population of New Haven, Conn. Sponsored jointly by the National Council of Churches through its Broadcasting and Film Commission and by Yale Divinity School, the study took a small army of interviewers into more than 3,500 homes. Data was gathered over a two-year period, some of it based on interviews lasting up to five hours.

The greatest disapproval was registered by the best educated families and by parents of children four through nine years old, one-third of whom were generally unfavorable toward what their children are watching.

These findings on the controversial subject of children and the television turned up as part of an over-all survey into the entire use and effect of radio and TV in a metropolitan community. In addition to the city's single TV station, New Haven viewers also watch programs on the six channels operating in New York City.

The Rev. Dr. Liston Pope, dean of Yale Divinity School and administrative chairman of the jointly sponsored Communications Research project, linked the survey with the churches' "deep concern for Christian character and the values by which people live." He said, "Obviously communication media that invade the privacy of millions of homes every day cannot be ignored by ministers or churches."

Referring to the entire study of which the TV survey was a part, he said the results when published some months hence "may both inform and arouse those who read them."

The report on television showed:

1. Parents reported that in addition to the 13 hours a week their children spend regularly viewing TV, they also do random viewing. Time spent by children listening to radio programs, on the other hand, averaged no more than two hours per week.

2. Parents said their children spend about half their regular viewing time watching variety shows and another third of their time watching westerns. Only four per cent of time was spent watching informational and instructional programs.

3. Parental attitudes toward present children's TV fare are conditioned by various cultural, socio-economic, age and religious factors, with the higher-income, more highly educated parents providing the most criticism.

4. Howdy Doody was the most popular children's program, pulling 21.6 per cent of the 71,300 homes in New Haven as regular viewers. Next most popular was Hopalong Cassidy with 7.2 per cent, and Super Circus with 6.2 per cent.

5. A strongly recurrent criticism by parents was that there are too many westerns on TV for their children. Westerns constitute 79 per cent of the dramatic programs available for children, and six of the first 11 shows in popularity among the children were this type. But no western, the report said, was able to garner more than one-third of the audience of the most popular programs, leading to the conclusion that all westerns look pretty much the same to children.

6. Another frequent criticism among parents was that children's TV is restricted to extremely narrow formulas—westerns and variety shows—and that there are many untapped sources for interesting new programming, notably in the classics, fairy tales and the Bible, and in the fields of science and general information.

7. One-fourth of all objections voiced by parents were directed at excessive violence in children's shows.

8. Additional parental objections were raised over the conflict of programs with the supper hour and bedtime, the difficulties of supervision of viewing, and the "silliness" of much of the program content.

Details of the children's TV report were announced by the Rev. Everett C. Parker, Director of the project for the National Council's Broadcasting and Film Commission and Yale Lecturer in Religious Radio and Television; and the Rev. David Barry, Director of the National Council's Central Department of Research and Survey in New York City.

"In our sampling of opinion" said Mr. Parker, "we were building a massive body of facts and statistics which would be of service, both to the television industry and to the viewing public. Because the concern of the research centered in the development and the reinforcement of constructive character patterns, the question of the importance of the effects of TV on children became apparent early in the development of the research design."

The sample divided New Haven families into five classifications based on an "index of social class position" and computed from three factors: educational level, rated occupation, and place of residence.

Critical judgments about children's TV programs, the report states, were closely related to social class, and presumably involved such factors as level of education and optional resources for employment of leisure time.

Parents in the upper three social classes, for example found to be less than half as well disposed toward the present programming as the lower two levels. On the other hand, satisfaction with the present program structure, and requests for more of the same kind came most frequently from the two-thirds of all households found in the bottom two levels.

On the critical side, comments by parents including the following:

"An older person knows crime does not pay, but children do not properly understand." And this one from an exasperated mother of two: "He drives the family crazy with this bang-bang! Bang-bang from early Sunday morning until late Saturday night." A father said: "They do not influence a child in the

(Continued on page 9.)

"The Quality of Mercy"

A Sermon

By DR. HENRY E. ROBINSON.

"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." Matthew 5:7.

These words of Jesus, familiar as a portion of the Beatitudes, express a self-evident truth which requires little explaining. But such obvious truths have a way of getting lost either through triteness, or in competition with the more dramatic sayings of our Lord. Yet these great self-evident truths of our faith need frequent and strong voices lifted in their behalf.

Mercy is a Christian virtue which has many applications. We may be merciful to a homeless family, a delinquent child, a bereaved friend, a hungry man, or a confused young person. Only a short time ago I sat in the circle of a large family deeply grieved at the death of the mother and burdened with anxiety concerning the father who had been critically injured in the same auto crash. During these hours of difficulty and sorrow friends came from a distant state to express their sympathy and concern. The effect of their arrival was evident at once in the help and comfort brought by their presence. Here was mercy in action plain to see. This act had in it the qualities of sacrifice and sincerity. It was more than a gesture. It was a deed of kindness. It helped to lift a burden. It was a sharing of life.

Do you remember when the sick woman touched the hem of Jesus' garment and was healed? He said: "Virtue has gone out of me." The healing work of the Master took something out of him. Something that had to be constantly replaced by vigils of prayer and hours of meditation. The mercy Jesus was talking about in the text requires his best. In order to show that mercy to others we have not only to prepare ourselves, we have to keep our eyes open to see the need, and our hands free to serve that need.

One never ceases to wonder how a priest and a Levite could walk past the man half dead beside the road. Is it not true, however, that we read this story from Luke that on the same day we have been as blind to human suffering around us? I marvel at how indifferent we become to human ills. A few months ago a terrible earthquake killed hundreds and made homeless thousands of Greek Islanders. The appeal for help went out. Did you send a check? If so, God bless you. If not, it is the drama of the priest and the Levite of the Good Samaritan parable reenacted not only in our day, but with ourselves in the cast.

Often the barrier to being merciful is not the lack of money, but the lack of time. How many days are our intentions good, but we forget to pause long enough to write a check and mail a letter. Most of us could perform an act of mercy if we had the minutes to spare. Almost daily someone says to me, "I intended to drop by and see Mrs. Smith when she was in the hospital, but she was home before I got around to it." No, the truth is that being merciful costs something in time, thought, money, and effort. We want to be virtuous, but we do not want virtue to flow out of us. That costs something.

If ever there were both the need for mercy and the opportunity to show mercy it is in this present hour. We come to that season of the year when a society of mercy seeks our support—the American Cancer Society. Not one of us needs to be told of cancer, the dread disease. We know it in all its ugly forms as it strikes down our kindred and friends. We have wept with those who weep because cancer has robbed them of their dearest and best. Bitter are those tears because more often than not education, examination, or treatment at the right time would have saved that very life. Such tragic and unnecessary losses can only prompt us to one thing: the saving of some other family from a similar valley of sorrow. And this we can do through the agency of mercy which is chartered and dedicated to fight, and if God is willing, to eliminate this scourge of the human race. And scourge it is. Over 500,000 Americans at this moment are afflicted with cancer. Each year some 66,000 of them die. At least one fourth of this number could be saved by the weapons already available if they had been alerted to their illness in the early stages, and then had received the best professional care. Even more important is the indomitable faith and hope that eventually, not some, but all will be spared from this destroyer of human life and values.

If there is to come to each of us the quality of mercy, then we, after the text, must extend mercy of quality. In the spirit of sacrifice, at the cost of time and money, at the price of prayer and devotion we must do what we can in terms of our opportunity.

The daily prayer of every Christian is: "Lord, help me to be more like Jesus Christ." Among other things, to be like him we must exercise the power of healing. Such power, in a measure, is given to everyone in that all can have a part in combatting, through our health agencies, the diseases of the race. Here is mercy in action, at home, and among those we love. Here is a mission for the disciples of the Great Physician who said: "I am come that ye might have life." Here is a matchless opportunity to obtain mercy by being merciful and thus to receive a blessing from God reserved for those who have been faithful over a few things, that they may become ruler over many things.

THE MINISTER'S EQUIPMENT.

(Continued from page 2.)

the storehouse, so that the deacons may have something to carry to the needy families in the name of Christ and his Church.

As we think of the Gospel of Christ with its unsearchable riches, it should make us humble. No message, regardless of how much it may contain, does not contain all the truth there is. "We know in part."

Some try to become great by minimizing the work of someone else; politicians are at the throats of one another; nations are against each other; but there is no place in the pulpit that pride or self-honor should be allowed to occupy.

Let us realize that we have a great gospel to preach, a great mission to perform, a great Name to present—a Name which is above every name, Jesus Christ. Let us be clothed with humility, that we can truthfully say, "I am least among the saints," going forth in unity, studying for approval, seeking for guidance, praying, "Thy will be done on earth"

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Convention

I have received a copy of the proposed program for the approaching session of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. I have read the highlights of the convention by Superintendent William T. Scott, printed in a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. These two documents call attention and emphasize the more important matters to be considered by the church in council.

The convention is a delegated body; representatives will come from different sections of our church, different professions, businesses and employment. They will represent the various and varying walks of life. Doubtless some will come to the convention with pre-conceived opinions and judgments already made. In such a delegation, there will inevitably be divergent opinions conflicting desires and purposes. We should face each other and face the needs of the boards, institutions, and cause of the church, not in the interest of any one particular need, but in the interest of the total program of our church, recognizing the place and importance of each and the rightness of the claims of each. We all realize that the church is a God-given institution, that its primary needs are spiritual and that its conquest should be in the name of Christ and for the salvation of mankind at home and abroad, but we also are face to face with the stark reality that all of these boards, institutions, and causes of our church need money, a great deal of money. The Mission Board needs money for its expansion program, there are scores of places within the bounds of our own convention where if we had the money and the ministers, we could establish churches, not for the convention only, but for the good of the communities and the glory of God. Elon College and the Christian Orphanage need money for immediate needs and the needs of the future, and so does every cause and organization within the convention need increased funds for the responsibilities that are upon it and the opportunities that confront it.

The delegates assembled in convention should be careful not to put the emphasis upon the needs of any one particular interest or upon the monetary demands of the combined interests of our church, but we should be careful to take the requirements of the gospel to the door of every individual member and put these requirements upon the heart of every individual. The gospel of Christ places the responsibility upon every one who is his own to contribute a definite amount of his earnings for the cause of Christ, that his kingdom may come. It is not only essential for every one as a Christian to contribute that the kingdom may come without, but that first of all it may come within his own heart. The fruits of an individual life determine what has taken place within that life. If every individual member of the Congregational Christian Church in the Southern Convention would heed the divine injunction in making his contribution, there would be plenty of money to meet every need within our convention and the local church as well as the need of the convention at large.

Emphasis should be put on the need, not the need to be found within our churches, but the need to be found within the individual heart and purse. There is no greater need confronting every individual in the church than his personal need to contribute out of his earnings as God Almighty has commanded. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse of God."

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

On every salary check that is issued by Elon College to its employees is indicated "withholding tax." This means that the bookkeeper is compelled by law to withhold a certain percentage of that check and forward the same to the United States Government to help bear the expenses of operating this government in behalf of its total population.

On every check that every individual receives, there is the invisible law of Almighty God requiring the withholding of a certain amount of that check to be forwarded to the treasury of the Kingdom of God that the financial cost of operating the church in the midst of a sinful world may be met without delay, preventing any criticism from the would-be enemies of the church. The difference is that the United States Government enforces its law. The law is compulsory. The Kingdom of God puts on the individual heart the requirements of the gospel but leaves the matter of compliance entirely with the individual. It is voluntary on his part.

Do Christian men and women have to be compelled to do their Christian duty or shall we do it voluntarily, gladly, and thereby receive the blessing of our Heavenly Father for the discharging of our responsibility and opportunities in the joy of his service.

Previously reported	$ 2,316.71
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Good Hope	$ 18.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Elk Spur	$ 2.00
	20.00
Total to date	$ 2,336.71

Fellowship of Tithers

I have just received a copy of the list of tithers among Congregational Christian Church folk sent to its members. The list was made January 1, 1954. All together there are 1,176 names listed. North Carolina has twelve people registered and Virginia (Valley of Virginia and Eastern Virginia) thirty-eight. I know there are a great many more tithers among our churches who are not registered with our denominational fellowship of tithers. If you would care to have your name listed if you are a tither, will you write to Dr. Stanbury J. Nichols, 56 Public Square, Medina, Ohio.

During the past year the Envelope Series on Stewardship was mailed to all members, also Stewardship Facts for 1952-53 were sent to all members. Reprints were made for the leaflets, "We Tithe—Will You?"; "On Tithing"; "What Tithing Did For Our Church," and "You Are Invited." There is no membership fee for this organization. However, from time to time people do make small donations which take care of literature and postage. Ninety-six new members were enrolled in 1953, and it would be nice if the membership could increase this year by the addition of a few members from North Carolina and Virginia.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Suggestions for Family Week

Mrs. Edd Chilton, North Carolina Family Life Superintendent, has recently sent out material concerning Family Week. Here are suggestions from her letter:

Sunday, May 2—Family groups sit in church together.

Monday, May 3—Stay-at-Home Night—each family makes plans as to what to do as a family group that evening in their home.

Tuesday, May 4—Visitation Night—every church family visit another family—be sure some visits are to non-church families.

Wednesday, May 5—Covered dish supper at church with devotional, games, stunts; elect one family as "Family of the Year" to be recognized at church the next Sunday.

Thursday, May 6—Visit some underprivileged family, taking some food, clothing and other gifts; be sure to share with them your spiritual life.

Friday, May 7—Music—gather around the piano and have fun. Invite some other family to share this evening with you.

Saturday, May 8—Make a resume of what you have done this week as a family, and see how it meets with your approval. Plan for all to attend church on Sunday.

Sunday, May 9—Mother's Day. Honor this day by being in church. Let this be a day of thanksgiving for the true American Family.

* * * * *

Christian Declaration of Loyalty

We are indebted to Superintendent Scott for a copy of Congregational New Hampshire (Spring, 1954), which has on the front page a message from Miss Mary Stearns, president of the New Hampshire Council of Church Women. Miss Stearns is a member of a prominent Congregational family in New Hampshire, her father having been secretary of the conference for twenty years. She has served on the staff of the conference and as moderator.

She recommends to her women that they consider the "Christian Declaration of Loyalty" adopted by the Board of Managers of United Church Women. It reads as follows:

"As Christian Americans we are dedicated to maintaining the freedom for all Americans and their institutions. No body of citizens is more alert to the threat of communist thought and conspiracy both to the Christian faith and to freedom than the Christian Churches. . . .

"At this moment when national unity based upon mutual confidence is of paramount importance to our security, men in responsible positions must not, through unsubstantiated charges and blanket indictments, destroy confidence in our American schools, colleges, and universities. Men in responsible positions and self-appointed groups and individuals are even now spreading distrust of churches, of charitable foundations, and of loyal American citizens with whom they disagree. We view these threats to American freedom as among the most serious dangers ever faced by our people. As witness to our Christian faith we therefore accept the following disciplines and responsibilities:

This is God's World and we are in his care . . .

We do believe.

Earth might be fair. . .

We will strive to do our part in making it so.

Fear comes of the unknown. . .

We will know.

The young and uninformed are open to false teachings. . .

We will share the truth.

Forces of dissension would undermine the very institutions that can overcome Communism. . .

We will become aware of these forces and throw our strength with the superior forces of Christianity.

Many valiant defenders of God-given freedom are being wrongfully accused. . .

We will uphold them.

We ourselves may for our beliefs face disapproval, insinuation or slander . . .

We will stand.

It is our heritage from the Old Testament, from Greek knowledge, from the American founding fathers and from the Christian gospel of love, to think freely and to speak our thoughts. . .

We do our own thinking.

We are sovereign American citizens, followers of Jesus Christ, children of God. . .

We dare to speak out.

* * * * *

Want to Travel and Study?

Mrs. W. B. Williams has sent information concerning conferences of national importance in which our mission-minded women might be interested. How wonderful it would be if some of our people would combine travel, vacation, and study this summer. Here are some opportunities:

Northfield Missionary Conference (July 6-14) meets on the historic spot in Massachusetts where Dwight L. Moody called gatherings of students, ministers and lay people years ago. The conference specializes in women's work and offers a separate program for girls. Courses in the current mission study theme are offered along with discussions of world order, the United Nations and the work of the United Church Women. For information write: Dorothy Stevens, American Baptist Convention, 1703 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Penna.

Silver Bay Conference (July 14-21) meets on the shore of beautiful Lake George in New York. Sixteen courses are offered, along with opportunities for recreation for the entire family. There will be a workshop in audio-visual materials and a seminar for teachers of children. Further information from: Dr. J. A. Ranek, 257 Fourth Ave., 8th Floor, New York 10, New York.

Lake Forest Conference (August 2-6) on campus of Lake Forest College is close to the shore of cooling Lake Michigan. Lay people and ministers meet here for a study of missionary education and related subjects. Leaders are to be drawn from among those attending World Council of Churches. Write: Mrs. Marie Ried, Missions Council, 19 S. LaSalle St., Chicago 3, Illinois.

Chatauqua Conference in New York (August 20-27) is called the "In- (Continued on page 13.)

Universal Cry of Human Needs

By REV. CARL R. KEY.

There is a universal cry of human need, glaringly worse in some countries than in others. It is the same cry throughout the world today. It is a cry of the needy to churches and Christian people of America from Western Europe, Greece, Palestine, India, Pakistan, Korea, Hongkong and other spot situations. Human suffering knows no boundaries and is no respecter of persons. It is now found wherever disaster has struck or where persons by the millions have fled in its wake.

In almost every instance where disaster and war have left maimed, bleeding, broken and dying, food and clothing and shelter are the three major needs. Medicines, tools, building materials and sometimes even cash are on the critical list to bring new life and new hope. The most frequent causes resulting in such conditions and needs are floods, earthquakes, drought, political expulsion and war. Over such inhuman forces the individual has no control and is always an easy victim.

Out of our abundant earning power and surpluses of food and extra clothing and other materials we must heed this disturbing cry of the millions of dispossessed, refugees, expellees, sick and wounded and dying. Americans have and always will give generously where there is an understandable need.

Some of the most needy spots on earth today are:

Emergency Ones—such as Holland and Japan where flood relief was necessary; earthquake suffers as in Greek Islands; drought relief in Yugoslavia.

West Germany—where 12,000,000 refugees and expellees must be given aid while they adjust to a new land and find homes and a job.

Austria—300,000 refugees live in open barges, shacks made of waste material and old barracks. Thousands more eke out a miserable existence hopefully waiting for help. Sufficient food is not available on the wages paid or the government dole.

Trieste—a camp not fit to house cattle still is temporary home for 4,000 refugees in the middle of the city without chance of work in the present economy; many of them are TB patients.

Greece—still has 5,000 Greek village and Albanian refugees to house and feed while they get settled permanently.

South Korea—has 10,000,000 or one half of its population as refugees, orphans, widows, amputees and other needy. Food and clothing are needed in vast quantities. There is no way to measure the need there. All relief supplies from America would not adequately meet it.

India—suffered from drought for six years in many provinces. After water supplies dried up whole populations left their farms and home villages and trekked to the cities, causing dislocation and suffering of more than eight million people. Missionaries write that they dare not face the people without food to distribute.

Pakistan—has its drought and refugee problems which still require much outside assistance.

The Near East—has an Arab Refugee group of 850,000 housed in tent camps unfit for human dwelling and no means of livelihood, now in their sixth year there, and hope gone.

Hongkong—has become the home of 300,000 refugees needing food and shelter. Thirty thousand of them were made homeless by a disastrous fire just before Christmas as was the case in Pusan. A very capable relief representative is on hand doing modern miracles with the "little" we send.

So the cry for help may be heard in these places and many more. It is not the numbers of refugees and other needy people that make so much difference. There are 38,000,000 refugees in the world today. There are so many that we can only do the best we can to get the greatest amount of relief to them as quickly as possible. It is what we as individuals do about it that counts most. The more people we can enlist to help the better it will be for the needy and for those of us who can share. The best way to build a reservoir of good will toward America and other nations is to help our needy neighbors now. We must minister to their needs out of Christian love and not as a matter of political expediency. Such aid will become as ashes before our very eyes. The kindly deed of the Good Samaritan with no thought of gain is just as applicable to great blocks of humanity and even nations today as it was two thousand years ago. Our vaunted peaceful intentions and good will can best be buttressed with our gifts of food and clothing and medicines,

Segments of "the Protestant Churches are asking Christian people to give 6,000,000 pounds of food and 2,000,000 pounds of clothing, bedding and miscellaneous supplies for shipment to Europe; and for shipment to Asia, 9,000,000 pounds of food, 3,000,000 pounds of clothing, cloth and cotton. These programs require 327,800 pounds of soap and $235,000 worth of vitamins, enough to purchase 47,000,000 vitamin tablets to meet emergency requests for Asia and for refugees in Central Europe."

Our many needy brothers need our help. We cannot "pass them by on the other side." Love should impel us to do all we can for our brother man any where he may be found in need at any time. It will help the recipient little and us less if we do not give sacrificially. Church World Service—CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program) is the channel thirty-six denominations use to provide the above relief supplies. Together we can best serve the needs of mankind in this turbulent century of the homeless and helpless man.

"One gives away, and still he grows the richer. Another keeps what he should give, and is the poorer. . . . Life thrives like a tree on generosity, but grasping greed is death to men." (Prov. 11:24, 30).

THE TERRIFIC IMPACT OF TV UPON CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 5.)

right direction; kids imitate all the wrong things."

How does religion affect parental attitudes?

General parental attitudes, by religious affiliation, toward children's TV shows were: Roman Catholic, 80 per cent favorable, 20 per cent opposed; Protestant 59 per cent favorable, 41 per cent opposed; Jewish 56 per cent favorable and 44 per cent opposed.

The report notes that Catholic and Protestant parents volunteered some concern over the lack of religious programs for children, especially the parents in social classes three and four. Most suggestions were for more Bible stories and Bible dramatizations.

No parent reported any imitation by children of "desirable" traits depicted by TV characters.

Nothing that no effort was made by the survey to evaluate the impact of

(Continued on page 15.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

On getting lost. We have never been lost very much. Once, aged 7, a wrong turn in Roanoke led us away from our mother and the church where we were to have met her, and years, years later a wrong turn at a detour sent us in the middle of nowhere in the good old North State. This was a funny lost time for we were returning from a 7,500 mile journey to the West Coast, and to be lost so near home was a real joke! We were born with a good sense of direction and find our way about strange towns and cities with ease.

One Saturday not long ago, the children climbed in the car and we set out on a minor errand. Enroute home, mother recalled a quaint old flower shop and orchard known in her youth, and a sidetrack was made, and what a sidetrack that turned out to be—.

We passed house after house, lovely ones with tidy lawns and blooming posies. We turned and twisted, and crossed super highways and military highways and just roads. The lookouts looked right and left, fore and aft, but we finally admitted the old flower shop was gone, like mother's youth.

But what a glorious time we had exploring the countryside on our "lost" journey. We saw a blooming pink wonder of an orchard, and soon a white one. A green and yellow sea of turnip greens gone to seed beckoned us. A field of lambs, a new country school that looked as modern as any city's building, a runaway spread of thrift, and balmy air that drifted through our car windows.

It was so much fun that we have decided to "get lost again" real soon. We recommend it for family fun!

* * * * *

Story of the "Average" Drawing

By GEORGE M. DODSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Quite clearly, Edith Gillen had a duty to perform. And her actions proved she had planned to get it accomplished as quickly as possible.

Coming into the room where her mother was entertaining a guest, Edith said very politely, "Good afternoon, Mrs. Carr." Then she turned and repeated the little talk she had been rehearsing on her way home from school: "Mother, here is the drawing I made today. Our teacher told us to bring our work home to show our parents. You will see this is a picture of our school building."

Almost immediately, Edith started to leave the room. But Mrs. Gillen remarked casually, "Your drawing is splendid. We shall keep it in your collection, so that you will have your own picture of the school where you are learning so many wonderful things." There was a slight pause, but too slight to permit Edith to slip through the doorway, and Mrs. Gillen continued in a friendly and conversational tone as she asked, "Did the other boys and girls draw such excellent pictures, too?"

Edith's face clouded just a bit, for her mother had brought up the very subject the little girl had been trying to avoid. "Yes, they did," she replied. And she added slowly, "Robert and Clara and Inez had better pictures than mine. The teacher said maybe they tried harder than I did."

Apparently Mrs. Gillen dismissed the matter then and there, for she smiled at her daughter and said, "I see several children coming up the walk, so you may run along and play now. Mrs. Carr is telling me about a new cake that you and I may bake next week for Daddy's birthday."

But the cake recipe had to wait. Mrs. Carr had some questions, and she did not feel she need hesitate to put them to her friend. "Would you mind explaining why you were so concerned about Edith's drawing?" she asked. "After all, the children bring something like that home from school every week or so. And what does it matter whether several of Edith's classmates did as well or better on a routine drawing assignment?"

"Perhaps we had better begin to clear up some of those questions before you ask any more!" Mrs. Gillen answered, smiling. "The truth is, Edith has considerable talent in drawing. To be outranked would seem to indicate that she had failed to put her best efforts into the task, just as her teacher suggested."

Mrs. Carr looked puzzled. "But you told me only last week that Edith could be classed as no more than an average pupil. I don't understand this sudden interest in having her at the top of the class."

"It is really very simple, Mrs. Carr," Edith's mother responded. "My daughter has only average ability in most of her school subjects, so I expect only that much from her. However, her 'specialty' or talent is in drawing, and in that her father and I must encourage her to produce the finest results possible. Her teacher agrees with us on this point. Accomplishment in one field, even if minor in nature, may be valuable in creating poise and self-confidence, particularly when a child can be grouped as average in most other ways."

Mrs. Carr had almost forgotten about the cake recipe which had seemed so important a little while before. "I believe you have given me some help in handling Richard's problem," she said. "Thinking it over, quite likely he is average in most respects, too. But he demonstrated quite a bit of ability when the teacher allowed him to organize the play period at school on at least half-a-dozen occasions. Do you think we should encourage him to be a leader, and be satisfied?"

Mrs. Gillen nodded slowly. "Don't you think this ability of his can be made a steppingstone to improved effort in all his studies?" she asked. "If he is encouraged regarding his success in organizing he can be shown that to be a good leader one must have an all-round education. Why not tell him you won't expect him to excel in all his studies but merely to do his best? and, then—of course you will—praise him whenever there is a chance."

"What you advise is sensible and will help me," said Mrs. Carr.

"I am inclined to believe we have found the proper solution," continued Mrs. Gillen, "but why not talk it over with Richard's teacher? Frankly, it was Edith's teacher who proved to have the magic answer in our case. And now let's finish this recipe, or I'll have to bake the cake after the birthday party!"

Democracy means not "I am equal to you," but "you are equal to me."

—James Russell Lowell.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

1954 SUMMER CAMPS AND CONFERENCES OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

* * * * *

This year all of our Camps and Conferences will come during the first three weeks of June. Please do everything possible to have your young people share in at least one of these. Help pay their expenses.

VALLEY OF VIRGINIA

June 7-13 Powell's Fort Camp, Woodstock, Virginia. Cost, $9.50
Rev. Henry V. Harman and Rev. Ralph M. Galt, Co-Deans

NORTH CAROLINA

June 6-11 Crabtree Camp, Route 1, Cary, North Carolina
Junior High Camp (12-14 years). Cost, $12.50
Rev. John R. Lackey, Dean

June 11-15 and

June 15-19 Crabtree Camp, Route 1, Cary, North Carolina
Junior Camps (9-11 years). Cost, each, $8.50
Rev. Carl Wallace, Dean

EASTERN VIRGINIA

June 13-18 Y. M. C. A. Camp, Bayside, Virginia
Junior High Camp (12-14 years). Cost, $17.00
Rev. Thomas H. Britton, Dean

SOUTHERN CONVENTION

June 13-19 Elon College Young People's Conference, Elon College, N. C.
Youth Conference (15 years and up). Cost, $15.00
Rev. James H. Lighbourne, Jr., Dean

For further information write to Pattie Lee Coghill, Registrar, Elon College, N. C. In the Virginia Valley, write to one of the co-deans.

"TWO WEEKS FOR and WITH THE YOUTH of OUR CHURCHES"

Recommended Vacation Bible School Materials

All courses available are written for ten sessions and, therefore, must be adapted if your school is for one week only. Some churches will use the second half of the text-books used last year on the theme, "Jesus," or on the theme for 1952, "The Church." The addresses for ordering all materials are given below. We do not have any of these books in the convention office.

Summer Student Worker available in churches without sufficient leadership.

Here are the recommendations on the theme, "God and His World."

(Choose one for each department).

Kindergarten.

(Beginners)

"THE WORLD ABOUT US," Lucy Bickel, 75 cents.
"GOD'S PLAN FOR HAPPY HOMES," Elizabeth B. McKinney, 75 cents.

Primary.

"THE EARTH IS FULL OF HIS RICHES," Rebecca Rice, Teacher's Book, $2.50.
Children's Book, 35 cents.
"OUR DAILY BREAD," Lula Doyle Baird, 75 cents.
"LEARNING MORE ABOUT GOD," Louise S. Linder, 75 cents.

Junior.

"UNDERSTANDING GOD'S WORLD," Mary S. Warren, $2.25.
Two units of two weeks each: (1) "The Physical World and God;" (2) "God and the World of People,"

"FINDING GOD THROUGH WORK AND WORSHIP," Mary Esther McWhirter, Teacher's Book, $2.00.
Pupil's Book, 50 cents.
"WORSHIPPING GOD," Grace M. Smeltzer, 75 cents.

Junior High.

"GOD IN OUR LIVES," Estelle Blanton, Teacher's Book, $1.50.
Pupil's Book, 40 cents.
"I FIND GOD," Marion Brawn, 75 cents.

FOR THE SMALL SCHOOL.

In churches not having enough children to conduct classes for each department the following are recommended:

"LEARNING TO KNOW JESUS," (Ages 4-8) Mary K. Williamson and Pearl S. Rodd.

Teacher's Book, $1.00.

Work Sheets (1 set per child), 20 cents.

"JESUS, FRIEND OF ALL," (Ages 8-13) Margaret S. Ward.

Teacher's Book, $1.00.

Work Sheets (1 set per child), 20 cents.

Order from the Cokesbury Book Store, Fifth and Grace Streets, P. O. Box 2058, Richmond 16, Virginia. Send money order or check with order.

Theme: "How and Why We Worship."

New Vacation Bible School teacher's books have been prepared for the use with the Pilgrim Series lessons for the Summer Quarter on the theme above. If you do not use our Pilgrim Series Materials, the Vacation School will give you a good opportunity to try them.

Suggestions.

Kindergarten—Select from those listed under theme, "God and His World."

Primary—Select from those listed under theme, "God and His World."

Lower Juniors—"Children at Worship Around the World," Gertrude Sheldon and Mitchel Little.

Pupil's Book, 30 cents.

Teacher's Guide, 30 cents.

Vacation Church School Guide, 25 cents.

(Will need all three.)

Upper Junior—"WHEN WE WORSHIP," by Sarah Dunning, Pupil's Book, 30 cents.

Teacher's Guide, 30 cents.

Vacation Church School Guide, 25 cents.

(Will need all three.)

Junior High—"WAYS WE WORSHIP," Estred Schwantes, Pupil's Book, 40 cents.

Teacher's Book, 65 cents.

Vacational Church School Guide, 25 cents.

(Will need all three.)

Order the above from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Mass. Enclose a check or money order to save delay. (Materials will be shipped May 15 but filled in the order in which received, so write immediately.)

FRIENDSHIP PRESS MATERIAL.

(Current Missionary Study Books)

Excellent for Bible Schools. A number of our churches like to use

(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Judgment on Jereboam"

LESSON V—MAY 2, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Beware, lest thou forget the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments." Deut. 8:11.

SCRIPTURE BACKGROUND: I Kings 12: 25-33; 14: 1-20.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 9: 1-8.

The lesson for today might well be entitled "Two Men Who Missed the Bus." Both Rehoboam and Jereboam had a golden opportunity before them, and both of them missed the ball. They are tragic figures in Israel's history.

Consider, for example, Rehoboam. He was Solomon's son, and when his father died after a reign that started out so auspiciously and ended so ingloriously, Rehoboam inherited the throne of Israel. He had an opportunity to make a name for himself, and to render great service to his people. As was pointed out in last week's lesson, Solomon, his father had compromised his early religious ideals, and had introduced the worship of strange gods in Israel. Furthermore, by his great building projects, and by his personal extravagances, and by his practice of forced labor, he had laid heavy burdens on the people, and had stirred up the spirit of rebellion and revolution. When Rehoboam came to the throne, the people came unto him and asked him for some relief. "Now therefore, make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us lighter, and we will serve thee," they said. The king said he would think it over for three days and then give them an answer. He first of all consulted his elders, men of experience and the wisdom growing out of it, and they counselled moderation and amelioration. "The people are right," they said; "accept thy public office as a public trust, and the people will be thy servants forever."

But the king decided that he would like to know what the young men had to say concerning the matter, so he called them into court and asked for their advice. They blatantly told him to make the yoke heavier, and to put the people in their places. The king foolishly decided to follow the advice of the young men. And thereby hangs a tale. "What portion have we in David?" asked the people. "To your tents, O Israel." So departed Israel unto their tents. Ten tribes of them walked out, revolted, renounced Rehoboam as their king, and set up an independent kingdom with Jereboam as their king. Thus the breach was formed which was never healed. Rehoboam set out on an ill-advised expedition to conquer the ten tribes but he was unsuccessful, and he died a disillusioned, defeated old man. He is another of the long list of men "who might have been." Tyranny breeds revolt and revolution. Old men do not know it all. But neither do young men. Unless public office is regarded as a public trust, men cannot rule successfully. The good of all should be the goal of government. Justice and mercy are the foundations of sound government. Rulers must be righteous and responsive to human needs.

Consider in the second place, Jereboam. We met him in last Sunday's lesson. Remember him? He was the young man who showed such ability and such initiative that Solomon made him "ruler over all the charge of the house of Joseph." But when Solomon heard what Ahijah, the prophet had said concerning Jereboam—how he would inherit the throne over ten tribes of Israel, Solomon sought to kill Jereboam. To save his life, Jereboam fled to Egypt—he became a "political exile"—and remained there until he heard of Solomon's death.

Then he came back home, and the people asked him to be their spokesman to Rehoboam concerning their grievances. When their requests were denied, and when they revolted, they made Jereboam their king. He built Shechem on Mount Ephraim, and dwelt there. Like Rehoboam, he had a great opportunity, but like Rehoboam, Jereboam "fumbled the ball" too.

He made a lot of blunders. First of all, he was afraid that if the people went up to Jerusalem to worship, they might get weaned away from him, so he built altars at Dan and Bethel, the one on the Northern border of his kingdom and the other on the Southern border. At these altars he set up "golden calves" and made the people worship them. Furthermore he disregarded the Mosaic law in regard to the selection and ordination of priests, and "made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi." He ordained a feast to displace the regular feasts of the Jewish people. He sacrificed unto the golden calves, and burnt incense on their altars. It was a sorry course of action. It was not only irreligious; it was blasphemy itself. And the handwriting was already on the wall.

The thing came to a head, or out in the open, when Jereboam's child became ill and he sent his wife, disguised as he and she thought so that nobody would recognize her, to consult the prophet Ahijah, now grown older and practically blind. The old man recognized her through her disguise, however, and told her that God had already pronounced judgment upon the house of Jereboam. Because of his sins, God would take the kingdom away from him, and it would be taken away from his line. The prophecy found literal fulfillment in Jereboam's life and line. Here was another man "who might have been." He started so well; he came to such a sorry end.

The wise man of old said "Righteousness exaleth a nation, but sin is a reproach to the people." A great French general put the matter in an unforgettable way when he said concerning the French nation and its fall in World War II. Listen to him: "The breakdown of the family life and the home; the uninterrupted pursuit of personal enjoyment and amusement; the universal disregard of the Sabbath; the negation on the part of the people of everything spiritual, ideal, or divine; the unwillingness to work or to endure discipline; the urge to become rich through dishonesty or intrigue; the placing of the center of life in the corner cafe where alcohol flows freely"—these are the reasons he gave for the fall of France. They sound strikingly like the reasons Gibbon gives for the causes of the fall of Rome. And many of these same factors are operating powerfully in our American life today.

God is no respecter of nations. What has happened to other nations, many of them seemingly favored nations (Continued on page 15.)

A Bible in Every Man's Tongue

This goal, designed to give each man on earth a Bible which he can read in his native language, is so rapidly nearing its objective it is difficult to realize that most of the progress in translations has been made in comparatively recent years.

Today, the Bible—or at least one Book—has been translated and published into 1,077 languages and dialects. This includes 200 whole Bible translations, 257 complete Testament translations, and 620 whole Books.

Despite these truly amazing strides, there is still a long way to go, for at least another 1,000 languages await translations.

Five hundred years ago when Gutenberg completed the first printing of the Bible from movable type, only 33 translations existed. The invention of modern printing greatly stimulated the translators, yet in 1804, three and a half centuries later, only 71 languages and dialects had some printed portion of the Bible.

In that year was founded the British and Foreign Bible Society, first of the great national Bible Societies. Within a dozen years thereafter, the American Bible Society was organized on this side of the Atlantic, and quickly the number of translations spiraled upward. The pace has been picking up steadily.

Translators have worked among people who have been touched by civilization as well as in strange lands, among folk entirely illiterate, among people whose language has never been reduced to written form. The translator has been described as phonetician, lexicographer, grammarian, teacher and minister, all in one. In some remote places the natives have called them "White men who carry a book who pester us with questions."

Often it takes translators years to master a single language. Endless hours are spent listing to, and transcribing folk tales and conversations. Many of the languages with which they have worked are complicated beyond belief. For example, in the Quechua language, spoken by Indians in the Andes, "ca" means grindstone, "e'a" means better, "ka" means if, "k'a" means boy. All sound alike, even look alike, yet all have entirely different meanings.

In the Nupe tongue, spoken in Nigeria, there are 100 different words for greatness, and 60 words which mean long. In the Bulu language, spoken in the Cameroons, there is no word for trust or holy, but there are ten words for different kinds of seeing. In the Ponape tongue, in Oceania, there is no word for father, but many ways of saying brother.

Since mistakes inevitably occur, due to a translator's misunderstanding of idioms, sounds or grammar, first translations occasionally have meanings which were not intended. The Bible Societies therefore issue tentative editions. One translator, working on an Eskimo dialect, found he had rendered "nation shall rise up against nation" by "a pair of snowshoes shall rise up against a pair of snowshoes." The difference was a single letter in a 17-letter word. In a Solomon Island translation, the phrase, "the wild asses quench their thirst" was later found to mean, "the cannibal pigs drink water to stop hiccoughs."

Among many people in India the conception arose that God was a bluish being because the first word of the phrase, "heavenly Father" was taken to mean, "having the color of the sky."

One group of Indians in Latin America held a disdainful opinion of Paul because they read in one of the tentative translations that the Apostle talked of "leading a wife around like an ox." The translator had overlooked the right word "to lead around like an unruly animal."

Today's needs are probably more urgent than ever before in history. Millions of people in the Far East, the Middle East, Latin America, are eagerly awaiting shipments of Bibles. Even in the United States, tens of thousands are without Bibles, and all over Europe Bibles are as eagerly sought as food and shelter.

To help meet these needs, the United Bible Societies are now engaged in a two-fold project. It is 150 years since the British and Foreign Bible Society was launched, and the Jubilee is being celebrated throughout the world.

As part of the far-flung celebration, the United Bible Societies have united in sponsorship of a "World Good Will Book," which will be a compilation of signatures of people who have made a contribution of a single dollar or more to a special fund to make Scriptures available wherever wanted, wherever needed, throughout the world.

Each national society will collect its own signatures. The pages will be sent to the United States for binding when the campaign has been completed. Thereafter the "World Good Will Book" will be displayed in principal cities throughout the world, and then lent for one year to each of the participating Societies.

The goal which the United Bible Societies have set for themselves is an increase in distribution from 20 million volumes annually—their present distribution—to 50 million Bibles annually by 1960.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

stitute of World Missions" and will be the concluding week of "the season" at famous Chataqua. There will be a wide range of courses covering the mission theme and world order, work of United Church Women, and related subjects. Here will be enjoyed the regular Chataqua features, such as the Chaplain's Hour, Amphitheater lectures, outstanding musical and dramatic offerings plus every kind of recreation. Write: Miss Mabel Head, 135 East 52nd St., New York 22, New York.

* * * * *

The Woman's Pulpit Announces Contest Winners

In the recent sermon contest, open to women ministers only, sponsored by The Woman's Pulpit, official organ of the American Association of Women Ministers, edited by the Rev. Florence Resor Jardine, Methodist minister of Letts, Iowa, awards were as follows:

$50.00 to Rev. Mildred E. Hooper, South Berwick, Maine, of the Christian Church, for her sermon, "Dwelling Places of God."

$25.00 to Rev. Ruth Sergeant Bast, Binger, Okla., Congregationalist, whose subject was "Six Magie Words."

$15.00 to Rev. Laura E. Bradbury, Linn, Kansas, Methodist, for her sermon on "The Revolt of Youth."

Honorable Mention to Rev. Emma Baneroff Yinger, Marshall, Mich., Methodist, for her sermon, "I Have Come Into The Garden to Gather Lilies."

The contest was judged by the following: Dr. M. Willard Lampe, Professor Emeritus of the School of Religion at the State University of Iowa; President Katherine Gillette Blyley, Keuka College, Keuka Park, New York; and Dr. Frank Nelson Gardner, Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dera Friends:

Thanks so much for the nice report this week. You either keep me up or down. Now I am happy. It would be better if I did not get "blue" for in the long run you have never failed these boys and girls, nor this orphanage. Thank you and God bless you. So many dresses for girls and shoes and suits for boys have come in that we are all quite thrilled.

I wish you could see these children on Easter morning. They will be pretty, and their clothes will be sweet.

Let me tell you about the Young Adult Sunday school class of the First Baptist Church of Graham, N. C. Well at Christmas they called and told me they wanted to buy some toys. I told them that we had more horns, and tractors and dolls—that Santa Claus, if he knew what was going on at the Christian Orphanage, would think somebody was cutting in on his business! Please could they wait till Easter and buy some pretty white shoes, and some shiny black shoes, for some lovely little girls. Well, yes, they guessed they could. And they did. Monday of this week they came up and got every boy and girl who was without shoes for Easter, or who did not have some on the way by their "class," and took them to Graham to the Crawford Department store and had them fitted, twenty-three of them, with lovely shoes. The sizes ranged all the way from baby shoes to number elevens for Larry Rowland! The dainty little girls were just about all already fitted out, so they took them all the way from little Alvis Oaks to that six-footer, Larry. By the way Larry stands tall in school too, if you call all "A's" standing tall!

I have been praying for enough to do our work here, and I wish to express my gratitude humbly to our gracious heavenly Father for putting into your hearts to help us. I am hoping and praying for a good crop this year, and now it looks like it is on the way.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR APRIL 15, 1954. Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. R. T. Brittle, Smithfield, Va., Clothing.
Missionary Society, Liberty Christian Church, Clothing.

Smithwood Christian Church, Clothing & Glasses.

First Cong. Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., Shoes & Clothing.

Woman's Aux., First Cong. Christian Ch., Greensboro, N. C., Wash cloths.

Mrs. A. Y. Allred, High Point, N. C., Clothing.

Mt. Gilead S. S., Louisburg, N. C., Clothing & Coupons.

Mrs. Irving Beale, Franklin, Va., Clothing & Coupons.

Pleasant Ridge (W. N. C.) Church, Clothing & Shoes.

Spoon's Chapel Christian Church, Clothing. Woman's Missionary Society, Pleasant

Grove (N. C.-Va.) Church, Clothing.

Young Adult S. S. Class, First Baptist Church, Graham, N. C., 23 pairs of shoes.

Miss Bessie Thomas, Burlington, N. C., Coat.

Mrs. Cliff Outlaw, Driver, Va., Clothing. Woman's Missionary Society, Union (Va.)

Church, Clothing and Coupons.

Mrs. Williamson, Buffalo Junction, Va., Shoes.

Ladies' Star Class, Bethlehem (Nans.) Christian Church, Easter Clothing for Betty Lue Wilson.

Barrett Circle, Bethlehem (Nans.) Christian Church, Easter clothing for Cecelia Wilson.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 4,237.91

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Auburn S. S. $ 53.65

Morrisville 18.93

72.58

Eastern Va. Conference:

Bethlehem (Disp.) $ 5.00

Norfolk, Little Creek ... 30.00

Rosemont, for Jo Ann

Arnold 40.00

Suffolk S. S. 150.00

225.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Bethel S. S. $ 5.10

Durham S. S. 29.35

Ingram 30.00

Long's Chapel 54.53

Mebane 5.00

123.98

Western N. C. Conference:

Pleasant Cross S. S. $ 9.41

9.41

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethel S. S. $ 2.00

Bethlehem S. S. 16.75

Linville S. S. 5.83

24.58

Total $ 455.55

Grand total $ 4,693.46

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $10,711.40

Mrs. Sam H. Scott, Winston-Salem, N. C. $ 5.00

Mr. & Mrs. Milton M. Vipond, Norfolk, Va. ... 10.00

Mrs. A. M. Johnson, St. Petersburg, Florida ... 5.00

Miss Ruth Madren, Elon College, N. C. 20.00

I. L. Alger, Aliquippa, Penn. 5.00

Progressive Bible Class, Newport News Church

Bethlehem (Nans.) Jr. High Class, Easter gift

Vanceville S. S., Tifton, Georgia 3.00

Johnson's Grove Missionary Society 10.00

Wake Chapel Missionary Society 20.00

Happy Sharer's Club, Greensboro, N. C., Easter

Philathea Class, Reidsville Church 20.00

A Friend 100.00

Mrs. Esther E. Jinkens, St. Paris, Ohio 2.00

Mrs. W. H. Garrett, Sr., South Norfolk, Va. ... 5.00

Circle No. 3, Women's Aux., First Cong. Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., for shoes 7.00

Circle No. 7, Women's Aux., First Cong. Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., for shoes 10.00

Women's Aux., First Cong. Christian Ch. Greensboro, N. C., for shoes . 41.15

Mrs. Belle F. Robinson, Albany, N. Y. 10.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

McBRYDE.

Whereas, on March 30, 1954, Mr. John H. McBryde, a member of Kallam Grove Congregational Christian Church, a faithful deacon, and a friend to all who knew him passed away, we, as a church wish to record our appreciation for all that he has meant to the church and our sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the congregation has suffered a loss in its membership and the loss of a sincere friend and neighbor who was willing to lend a helping hand to all when needed.

That all the members extend to the family their sincere sympathy in the passing of this dear one: A devoted husband, a loving father, a true and faithful deacon, a helpful neighbor and a faithful friend of us all.

- I. A. WASHBURN,
Chm. Deacons,
- J. RALPH McCOLLUM,
Secretary,
- C. FRED ALLRED,
Pastor.

THE TERRIFIC IMPACT OF TV UPON CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 9.)

television on children. Mrs. Alice Goddard, children's work director for the National Council of Churches said the study, "raises as many questions as it answers."

"The most important question raised," she said, "seems to be: what are the effects on children of this medium and the various types of programs offered over it? . . . In his 13 hours before the TV set," she continued, "what is happening to a child's religious ideals and ideas? Why do not more programs deal with values that are eternal?" she asked.

At the outset of the survey, August deB. Hollingshead, well-known Yale professor of Sociology, had already constructed a five per cent random sample of all New Haven households and made this sample available to the project. Its actual size was 3,559 households and information was obtained from each of these homes by telephone and doorstep interviews.

There were minor children in 62.3 per cent of the homes in the sample.

While only about four-fifths of all households have television sets, the report asserts, virtually all of the families with children four years old and older reported that the children watched television regularly, at a neighbor's home if none was available in their own.

The survey report's opening section, "The First Television Generation," reviews the current controversy among educators and broadcasters over the effects of TV on children.

It then states: One interested person whose opinion has not been systematically solicited and reported is the child's parent. The study reported here attempts partially to fill this gap by reporting the attitudes of parents in one American city toward the television fare their children were consuming.

New Haven and four of its adjoining suburbs—West Haven, Hamden, North Haven, and East Haven—were surveyed by a staff of research assistants, statisticians, psychologists and sociologists totalling more than 35.

The project was established late in 1951 to study the effect of current religious television, radio and motion pictures on audiences, and to develop experimental programs to suit audience tastes and needs.

The work has been largely financed by the National Council through its Broadcasting and Film Commission. Assisting grants for the completion of the studies have been made by the Carnegie Corporation and the Hazen Foundation.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL MATERIALS.

(Continued from page 11)

them in summer. Theme "India, Pakistan and Ceylon."

Kindergarten.
(Beginners)

"THE THREE CAMELS," Elsie Helena Spriggs, 50 cents.

A story-picture book of Christmas in India and three little girls who celebrated it. (No course on India is available for this age.)

Primary.

"FIG TREE VILLAGE," Grace W. McGavran, $1.25.
(One copy for the teacher is sufficient).

Guide on "India, Pakistan and Ceylon," by Lois E. McDonnell, 50 cents.

Juniors.

"CHAND OF INDIA," Irene Mason Harper, $1.25.
(One copy for the teacher is sufficient).

Guide on "India, Pakistan and Ceylon," by Florence B. Lee, 50 cents.

Junior High.

"THE HIDDEN TREASURE," Jean Bothwell, $1.25.
(One copy for the teacher is sufficient).

Guide: How to use "The Hidden Treasure," by Margaret L. Copland, 50 cents.

Picture Map of India, Pakistan and Ceylon, 75 cents.

Order all the Friendship Press Materials from Friendship Press, 257 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N Y.

Study the list, select carefully, and order immediately.

Our Vacation Bible Schools are one of the finest things we have. We couldn't do without them. They are a real lift to our Sunday schools and a fine recruiting agency for these schools.

This list has been mailed to pastors and is reprinted for the convenience of others interested.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Continued from page 12.)

tions, can happen here. The mills of the gods grind slowly. But God sends his judgment on the nations as well as the individuals who break his laws, or who forget him. The message of these prophets have a relevancy for us. Lord God of hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget!

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

Woman's Fellowship, First Cong. Church, Asheville, N. C., Easter gift	50.00
Circle No. 3, Women's Fellowship, Suffolk Christian Church, Easter gift	10.00
Miss L. Kennedy, Worthville, N. C.	25.00
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. Philathea Class, Cong. Christian Church Henderson, N. C.	10.00
Amelia Missionary Society Ladies' Star Class, Bethlehem (Nans.) Christian Ch., shoes for Betty Lou Wilson	6.50
Barrett Circle, Bethlehem (Nans.) Christian Ch., shoes for Cecelia Wilson	6.00
Women's Missionary Society, Ramseur Christian Ch., Easter gift	10.00
A Friend, High Point, N. C.	70.00
Mr. & Mrs. M. W. McPherson, Burlington, N. C. . . .	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. E. Ollerhead, Chapel Hill, N. C. . . .	15.00
In Memory of Tazewell Eure, Sr.	5.00
In Memory of Walter Lewis Brett	5.00
Special Gifts	271.25
	823.40

Grand total $11,534.80

Total for the week $ 1,278.95

Total for the year $16,228.26

"Your Church and Family Week"

THE NATIONAL FAMILY LIFE PROGRAM

That Will Be Presented by

THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH OF BURLINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA

MAY 2-9, 1954

Theme—"Church Women in the Scheme of Things"

- | | | |
|---------------|----------|---|
| Sunday, May 2 | 11 a. m. | Families attend Church together
Sermon, "The Church, a Family"—Dr. Henry E. Robinson. Communion Service |
| | 7 p. m. | A Concert—All of Church Choirs participating |
| Monday | | Auxiliary Program
Presenting Byrd Nest Kindergarten—Mrs. W. G. Cox and Mrs. John Robert Kernodle
Mrs. King—Subject, "Making a Success of Everyday Living" |
| Monday Night | | Circle No. 6—Book Review by Mrs. Henry E. Robinson—"Recovery of Family Life" by Elton and Pauline Trueblood
Circle No. 7—Native Arabia Girls (Exchange of Family Life Ideas) |
| Tuesday | | Theatres—Cooperating with Good Pictures |
| Wednesday | 6 p. m. | Family Night—Covered Dish Supper for the entire family
Twenty-minute Picture and fun for all ages. |
| Thursday | | Home Night—Story Hour, Television, Radio |
| Friday | | United Church Women Fellowship Luncheon
Address—Mrs. E. L. Hillman. |
| Saturday | | Remember Persons away from home with gifts, notes, cards, telegrams for Mother's Day, etc. |
| Sunday, May 9 | | Mother's Day—Sermon, "Why Families Should Worship Together,"—Dr. Robinson
Cradle Roll Service at the Sunday School Assembly Hour (10:25 a. m.) |

HIGHLIGHTS OF FAMILY LIFE WEEK

- Mayor declare Family Life Week in newspaper
- Special drive for subscriptions and renewals for The Christian Sun
- Special Editorials in local newspaper
- Family Life Devotionals, each morning from May 2 through May 9.

Editorial Note: Possibly your church has, too, arranged a program to cover National Family Life Week. If you have, we would be glad to carry in the columns of The Sun an account of such activities. We are giving the above program this prominence because of the excellence of its arrangement and because of its adaptability to almost any other church in our convention. If you have not arranged a program for the period, May 2-9, we suggest that you use this one as a pattern, changing names of course, and adapting where it is necessary.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1954

NUMBER 17

I Speak Fifteen Languages

By REV. JESSE H. DOLLAR, D.D.
President Elect, The Southern Convention

N ADDITION to my native English, I speak fourteen other languages fluently. I know no barriers of language, color or creed. I am a Physician. I stand by the suffering at home and abroad. My mind is trained and my hands are skilled in handling delicate instruments used in all kinds of surgery. I am a Teacher. I stand before thousands of classes of boys and girls in numerous schools across the world. It thrills me to see how eagerly they cling to my every word. They are so anxious to know, and they know so little!

I am a Nurse. I stand by the Doctor when he operates. I stay by when he has to go to other patients with so many diseases. I change their bandages, bathe them, feed them, put fresh linen on their beds; I even bathe their tired and feverish bodies. I give them the medicines the Doctor prescribes, take their temperature regularly and watch over them while they sleep. I am a Farmer. I show the men of many countries the value of plowing with good horse-drawn plows, and I even show them how to use a tractor to do the heavy work of the farm, when all they have known before is to plow with a stick. I teach them better methods of farming, and how to grow ten times as much on their little plots of land as they have grown before. I build terraces to keep the land from washing, and I dig ditches to drain off excess water.

I buy food for millions of hungry children who have never known what a "square" meal was before. I buy little girls' dresses, or pay the postage on those sent by Christian people in America. I put shoes on many feet that have never had shoes before. Many of the children I clothe have never had more than a dirty wrap before. The joy I bring these millions is beyond description. There are many more services I render, but if I went on to tell you of them you might think me a brag. This may give you some idea of how busy I am, and how many services I render for you. Who am I? I am the dollar you give to our Christian World Mission through your Cent-a-Meal boxes, and your offerings for missions at any time.

News Flashes

Rev. and Mrs. J. Everette Neese of Central Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, announce the birth of their third child, second son, Rodney David Neese, April 8. Mrs. Neese is the former Miss Lelya Payne of Greensboro, N. C.

Superintendent Seott assisted Rev. Fred Allred in a week-end series of special evangelistic services at New Lebanon Church April 14-17. Good attendance and interest indicated strength and devotion at New Lebanon. New Lebanon has started the construction of a new parsonage near the church.

Rev. George D. Alley of Suffolk Christian Church reports: "I am indeed happy to report the reception of twenty-one new members: three adults, and eighteen young people. It has been a very real pleasure to work with the members of this year's Pastor's Class and our experience together has been one of mutual helpfulness."

Rev. W. Walter Hall has accepted a call from the Third Avenue Christian Church, Danville, Va., to become pastor of that church July 1. Mr. Hall is at present a student at Andover Newton Seminary, Newton Center, Mass., and is serving as minister of the Congregational Church of Carlisle, Mass. Prior to going to Andover Newton, Mr. Hall served as pastor of Carolina, Albemarle, and other churches of the Southern Convention. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hall are consecrated workers, and we cordially welcome them "back home."

A Statement Concerning the Merger

A five-point statement regarding the proposed merger between Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church was issued this week by the Executive Committee of the General Council meeting in New York City.

(1) Acting upon the instructions of the General Council which met in Claremont, California, in 1952, the Executive Committee will hold a joint meeting with the Evangelical and Reformed General Council on October 12 and 13, 1954.

(Continued on page 15.)

The Southern Convention in Session at Bethlehem

While this is being written the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches is still in session at Bethlehem Church, Suffolk, Virginia; but when you read it, the forty-first biennial session of the convention will have become history—and we believe that it will be history well worth recording.

The convention was opened with a hymn, followed by an invocation by Dr. I. W. Johnson, and words of welcome from the host pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle. After the necessary routine matters in connection with the opening of the convention, the first of several most impressive devotional services was led by Dr. W. C. Timmons who served as chaplain and who has recently come from the devotional work of our national body to serve the church at Southern Pines.

Then followed the presentation of various reports which were to be acted upon at the Wednesday morning session.

The high light of the first session, and the closing item, was the address, "The Nature of the Church," by the retiring president of the convention. We present it in its entirety in lieu of editorials for this issue. It is a worthwhile commentary on the church. Dr. Stevens has been a faithful and most efficient servant of The Southern Convention during the past four years, and THE SUN believes it is speaking for its entire constituency when it says that we are grateful.

Dinner meetings were held at six o'clock, the laymen of the church enjoyed a Smithfield ham dinner at the Suffolk Christian Church, and the women of the church being served at Bethlehem. Two outstanding speakers furnished the mental food for these occasions. Dr. Samuel N. Stevens, president of Grinnell College in Iowa, impressed upon the men very forcefully the importance of higher Christian education; while Dr. Raymond B. Dudley addressed the women.

At the evening service, Dr. Stanley U. North of the Home Mission Board was at his very best in presenting "The Task of the Church in America." His address was followed by an impressive Communion service.

Rev. George D. Alley gave the opening invocation at the Wednesday morning session. Following this, action was taken on the reports presented at the Tuesday afternoon session. Then came two addresses: Rev. David H. Sandstrom of Chicago, Ill., spoke on "Our Oblation to God," and President Stevens of Grinnell College presented "The Redemptive Power of Christian Education." The fraternal delegate from the Convention of the South, we greatly regret not learning his name, made a most impressive talk in response to his recognition.

After an intermission for lunch, discussion of the report on Elon College, previously presented by President Smith, was continued, and the report adopted. Following this was the Finance Committee's report which was presented by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, and adopted first by items and then as a whole. This report showed much study and thought on the part of the committee and its chairman. The hearty adoption of these reports indicates that the convention is beginning to accept the admonition of St. Paul that we walk by faith in the work of God's kingdom.

Mr. Martin T. Garren of Greensboro, chairman of the Building Loan Fund Committee, introduced Mr. William Kincaid Newman of New York, who addressed the convention.

Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., presented the report of the Committee on Nominations. Dr. Jesse H. Dollar was elected president, and Mr. George D. Colclough becomes vice-president. The Committee's report will be given in a subsequent issue of THE SUN.

We were compelled to miss the other reports and addresses of the afternoon and evening, as well as the Thursday morning session. We know that the presentation by Prof. Westmoreland of the Elon College Choir was most enjoyable and regret not hearing it.

If the remainder of the sessions approached those we were privileged to attend, the forty-first annual convention was an outstanding one, and if its program is carried out it can only mean advancement for our work in the South.

J. T. K.

Building Loan Fund Campaign

Two more churches have recently sent in Declarations of Purpose for the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign. They are Gibsonville, J. L. Stanley, pastor, $500.00; and the new church at South Boston, M. W. Andes, pastor. Both of these are N. C.-Va. churches.

Our Churches Report . . .

A Series of Special Services Closes With Annual Revival

A series of special services at Liberty Congregational Christian Church, which were held each Sunday evening for a period of six months and were conducted and sponsored by the youth group of the church, came to a close Palm Sunday night. A well planned and presented program was given each time followed by a film, entitled, "The Loving Bible," based on the life of Christ and leading up to his crucifixion and resurrection. These programs were thoroughly enjoyed and largely attended. The messages brought in these pictures left a lasting impression in the minds of the people of how much Jesus suffered to redeem us from our sins.

Then beginning Monday night after Palm Sunday, Community Holy Week Services, sponsored jointly by Liberty Christian Church and Bethel Baptist Church were held at the Baptist Church with the pastor of Liberty, Rev. W. A. Grisson and the pastor of Bethel, Rev. B. R. Littleton alternating in bringing the messages. The choirs and ushers of each church alternated in their part of the worship service. On Thursday night the two churches joined in observance of the Lord's Supper. Wonderful messages were brought by both ministers. Both choirs did a wonderful job in presenting the gospel in song. All services were well attended by members of both churches and many visitors. Union services of this type just seem to have a great influence in bringing and holding the community together in Christian cooperation.

Easter Sunday morning at 5:30 a. m., a sunrise service was observed at Liberty Church with thirty-five members present. These sunrise services are found to be most sacred and certainly very beautiful.

The eleven o'clock worship hour was filled by the choir in their presentation of the Easter story in music in the cantata, "Christ, the Victor" by Lave. This Easter message in song was well presented and greatly enjoyed by a large audience.

After a wonderful week of union services and the very sacred observance of the resurrection, the church entered into their annual revival services, with the Rev. Eryen Talley of Louisburg as guest speaker. Mr. Talley's topics for the week were as follows: Monday night, "Just One Word," emphasizing the word "Down." The scripture reference was Phil. 2:1-18. Tuesday night, "Three Circles of Christians," scripture, Matt. 27:33-51. Wednesday night, "Lost Power," the scripture, Second Kings 6:1-7. Thursday night, "A Tried Salvation," scripture unknown. Friday night's topic was "Morally Clean, But Lost," scripture, John 3, 9 and Luke 19.

Every message brought during the entire week was all that could be hoped for. Filled with gospel truths, power, need of research work in our own lives, instruction to better Christian living, higher goals and better living for the making of a bigger and better church and community. Mr. Talley presented every message in such a clear and distinct way that even the smallest child could understand. He left the community food for thought and as one member of the church said, "Certainly if we are no better after hearing these wonderful messages, we must be classed as a bad people."

There were ten to unite with the church, eight by profession and two by transfer.

MRS. FLETCHER FULLER,
Reporter.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"On the Nature of the Church"

The Address of

PRESIDENT W. MILLARD STEVENS

To the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

It is not my desire or purpose to enter into a theological discussion of the nature of the church, however important such a discussion might be, and it is important. It is rather my desire and purpose to discuss two or three practical matters with reference to the nature of the church to the end that our own individual relationship to the church might be more clearly defined in our own minds.

It will be obvious that many of the specific theological considerations involved in this topic will undergird what I want to say and will often shine through what I do say. For example, I shall not undertake to present such concepts as "The Church as the Body of Christ," but shall assume the fact of this in what I have to say. Moreover, I will not discuss the "visible" and "invisible" church or try to attempt to define the so-called "true church." I will rather presuppose that what we need most to consider here is that enterprise with which we are connected and which we are concerned with in this connection and call "our church."

With these self-imposed limitations clearly in mind, let me present two or three things about the nature of the church which seem important to me for our individual and group concern, now.

I.

The first thing that I would say is this: The church is not just a social institution organized to promote or achieve certain social ends for a given group of people or to provide social intercourse for a selected group of individuals with a common interest. These things might well describe a civic club or a social club or even a fraternal order or a neighborhood group. But the church is more than these.

To be sure, the church is a social institution in the same sense that the school, the family, or even a neighborhood store is a social institution. But it is more than just a social order, it is a Divine order, and by the sheer force of Divine Will it compels a greater devotion than any mere social institution. The truth of this is well demonstrated in the fact that the church is still alive after being burdened by man's sins and follies through almost twenty centuries. There is something eternal about an institution like that. There is something eternal against which the gates of hell cannot prevail.

To be sure, the church has always sought to promote and to achieve certain social gains. But the church has sought these for no special group, but for all humanity. But the church seeks more than social gain through social and political pressure; she seeks these gains through redeemed individuals and redeemed social life. The church has always known that you could not change a man's social habits without changing his whole life. A mere social institution can cause a man to conform to a given social pattern in any controlled surroundings, but when the surroundings change, the conformity ceases. Such a practice is taking hold of life with just one hand, while the Christian Gospel seeks to grasp life firmly with both hands and condition a man's habits and actions under every circumstance by giving him a firm and solid foundation upon which to build his habits and his actions—a solid foundation of Christian faith. Therefore, the true church never seeks to confer its ministry upon any selected group, but opens wide its doors and invites who-so-ever-will to come and receive that ministry. That means everyone. It is the same call which Jesus issued which the church must always give, "If any man would come after me, let him forget himself, and take up his cross and follow me."

II.

In the second place, the church is not a distinct entity apart from the group of people which compose it. It is not a building which has personality and the ability to act within itself apart from its human components. It is not an individual force free to act or not to act as you and I are individual entities who can act at will to perform an act, declare an opinion or express an idea. No, the church is not a distinctive entity by itself, the church is rather the sum total of the faith, the devotion and the Christian personal and social actions of those who make up the body of the church. This is the membership of the church. For example, if a church is strong in its zeal and loyalty to the worship of God, it is because the members of that church are zealous and loyal in the worship of God, or if a church is known as a strong supporter of missions or of social reform, it is because the members of that church are devoted to these things.

Take a simple matter of warmth and friendship within the church, these things cannot and will not mark any church unless they are made a part of the church by the warmth and friendship expressing itself in the people who make up the congregation. The church itself cannot act apart from its membership.

This truth is well illustrated in a story told by Edward Bragg, which I read for the first time only last week. Here is the story:

"There is an Eastern story of four brothers who decided to have a feast. As wine was rather expensive, they concluded that each one should bring an equal quantity and add it to the common stock. But one of the brothers thought that he might escape making his contribution. He decided to bring water instead of wine. 'It won't be noticed,' he thought. But when, at the feast, the wine was poured out from the common stock, it wasn't wine after all, it was water; for all of the four brothers had thought alike. Each one had said: 'Let the others do it.' That story is a parable. In it you will find wrapped up the secret of the failure and inactivity of many a church."

This parable may also give you the key to the effectiveness and success of any given church. It is the faith, devotion and zeal of the members pooled together making the church. The force and effectiveness of the church is neither more nor less than the force and effectiveness of the faith and devotion of its members.

Several years ago, a minister of resourcefulness and imagination came to be pastor of a church which was not noted for any great measure of activity or life. After a period of trying to revive the church with little or no success, he announced that on the following Sunday he would conduct the funeral of the church. With considerable curiosity the whole community came to see what the minister would say or do. He had a casket placed in the altar and, after an appropriate ritual and funeral oration for this particular church, he invited the congregation to pass by and view the remains of the deceased. Of course, everyone came. But as each one looked into the casket he turned away in utter amazement. He saw there the church all right, because in the casket was a mirror, and each one saw reflected in that mirror himself.

No, the church is not an entity within itself apart from its human components. The church is the sum total of the faith, zeal and devotion of its members. It is nothing more or less than that. Your church is just what you are!

III.

This brings us to the third and final thing which I would like to say about the church. It is this, in the final analysis the church is an Assembly of Christian Believers, that is the gathered church. Martin Luther called it "The Community or the Assembly of the Saints." That is what Paul meant when he referred to "The church which is in thy house." The church is not the clergy or the group of church officers but it is the gathered group of Christian believers.

John Robinson, Pastor of the Pilgrims in Lyden, said it this way:

"And for the gathering of a church I do tell you, that in what plan soever, two or three faithful people do arise, separating themselves from the world, into the fellowship of the Gospel, they are a church truly gathered, though ever so weak."

This is the concept of the church upon which the churches of our faith and order, that is Congregational Christian Churches, are founded and upon which we have moved and had our being through these many centuries. We believe that the church is gathered and bound together, not upon the basis of a common interest or a common creed or even a common culture, but upon a common love for and devotion to Jesus Christ. In all our sins and common frailties we seek to become more like him and declare and promote his Gospel of love and redemption among all mankind. We believe like Martin Luther, "Where two or three are gathered together in his name they shall have the right and the liberty to proclaim and promise to each other comfort and the forgiveness of sins."

It is this kind of church which can employ the hearts and hands of men and women and young people to change the culture and habits of men to conform to the gospel of Christ. John Henry Newman has said, "The church was framed for the expressed purpose of interfering (or, as irreligious men will say, meddling) with the world." The church, therefore, must be so convincing in its witness, so faithful in the way of life it commends, that plain men cannot but be persuaded of the truth, the power, and beauty of the Gospel.

If the church, therefore, is to be convincing in its witness, it must be a devoted assembly of believers and it can be that only if we as individuals are faithful in our devotion to our Lord and loyal in our support of his followers.

Such considerations as these place squarely upon you and me a great responsibility for the effectiveness of the witness of the church both in our own community and around the world. When we accept these truths we can no longer with good conscious shift the burden to others. We must know that we have the responsibility ourselves to see that our church is a vital instrument of service to our God and his kingdom.

Resettlement Seen as Spiritual Aid

It is fear bred of insecurity rather than misery that makes the refugees in Europe ache for a chance to start life anew in countries where their children would have a future. The country most of them dream of is the United States.

This, in capsule, is the opinion unanimously expressed by the Lutheran church workers who went from the United States to Germany and Austria to interview candidates for resettlement under the 1953 Refugee Relief Act.

By helping these refugees to find new permanent homes, the church would not only aid them materially, but, to an even greater degree spiritually, said the Lutheran "dossier" team members, back after two months of interviews with thousands of refugees overseas.

The team spent two months in Germany and Austria interviewing people selected by the Lutheran World Federation and "Hilfswerk," welfare agency of the Evangelical Church in Germany, from among the many who hope the new U. S. emergency immigration law may give them an opportunity for new life.

Chief objectives of these interviews was to get personal impressions of the people on whom the team members wrote so-called "dossiers" or descriptions. These will be circulated in the United States by the National Lutheran Council's Service to Immigrants in order to show potential sponsors what kind of people they may help.

Seven of the eight team members, who have returned to the United States, unanimously agreed that the misery of the refugees creates a new challenge to Lutherans in this country to help them in the spirit of Christian love.

"Anyone who has sat for eight weeks listening daily to the stories of the plight of these unfortunate people knows that to help them is an unquestioned Christian obligation," it was stated here by Dr. H. W. Siefkes of Waterloo, Iowa, first vice-president of the American Lutheran Church.

Dr. Siefkes and his wife, also a member of the team, spent most of their time overseas interviewing refugees in Berlin. "In this work, we sat right at the very stream of human misery. If ever the words of Christ:

"I was hungry, and ye gave me meat . . . I was a stranger and ye took me in . . ." took on a new and vital meaning for our day, they did so here," said Dr. Siefkes.

Other members of the team worked in different areas of Germany and Austria, but all agreed with Dr. Siefkes' statement that neither West Germany nor Austria can absorb the constant stream of refugees from Communist-ruled areas, and that help to the refugees "cannot be postponed lest our complacency be our own curse some day."

Stressing that not only the material well-being of the refugees is at stake, but that they suffer spiritually as well, Miss Henriette Lund, consultant in the National Lutheran Council's Division of Welfare, said that "they need freedom from fear even more than they need freedom from want."

Especially, she said, help is necessary for the many young people in refugee camps who have never known anything but spiritual as well as material insecurity in their lives.

The Rev. Fredrick M. Otto of Fremont, Ohio, who had been assigned to Schleswig-Holstein, the area of Germany most crowded by refugees, said that even the refugees who apparently had begun "to put roots down" in their new environment were "psychologically still in flight."

Nearly all whom he interviewed said they wanted only one thing: "Once again to find peace of mind in feeling that there is a future for us and our children and of being useful."

The fact that practically all refugees in West Germany and Austria suffered from the feeling of being unwanted by the communities in which they now live, was cited by all members of the team as the chief reason why they could not "come to the end of their flight."

Henry A. Daum, public relations director of the Lutheran Welfare Society for Minnesota, described one refugee who had for two years attended a local Lutheran church in Wurttemberg, but claimed that he felt "as much a stranger as when I first arrived here because I happen not to be Schwabisch."

Mr. Daum added that other Lutheran refugees are in an even worse plight because they have been placed in solidly Roman Catholic communities.

On the other hand, the team members pointed out that refugees in overcrowded West Germany often were treated as unwanted strangers because they actually had been imposed upon communities still suffering from the aftermaths of a devastating war which made even the old-timers feel extremely insecure.

Miss Lund said that in Kassel, which was the center of the area in which she worked, local people claimed they "just cannot live down the fact that back in 1943, 35,000 people of their town were killed in a single twenty-minute air-raid."

In Austria, which has been much slower to recover economically than West Germany, the refugee's lot is plainly hopeless, according to the Rev. Harry Wolf, executive secretary of Lutheran Charities in Detroit, Mich., who was assigned to do interviews in that country.

Young people as well as adults who are not Austrian citizens have no opportunities to do professional work and even at menial labor the refugees are constantly in danger of losing the job to Austrian citizens, for whom the country also does not have enough work, Mr. Wolf said.

"We want to go somewhere where there would, at least, be some hope for our children," refugee parents told Mr. Wolf again and again.

Claiming that, through no fault of the inmates, refugee camp barracks in Austria literally rotted away and often smelled "worse than any pig pen," Mr. Wolf said these camps were "no place to raise children, but are breeding places for immorality and crime."

If a refugee in Austria had held ten different jobs within a few years, it did not mean that he himself wanted to drift, but rather that authorities had so many times put pressure on the refugee's employer to dismiss him in favor of a citizen, Mr. Wolf said.

He explained that the Austrians could hardly be blamed for the situation, citing statistics that in the little country with no resources of its own one out of twelve people is now a refugee.

In spite of West Germany's remarkable and much publicized economic recovery, the refugees' situation there is only slightly better than in Austria, according to what the dossier team observed.

(Continued on page 13.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Elon Ministerial Alumni Return to Campus

Ministerial alumni of Elon College from throughout North Carolina and adjoining states returned to the campus on April 20 for the first annual Religious Leaders Convocation which was staged under the sponsorship of the campus ministerial association.

Student leaders of the Ministerial Association, who worked with the co-operation of the alumni office and the college in planning the event, declared last night that they were well pleased with the attendance and results, and plans are to make the Convocation an annual affair on the campus. Plans for the Second Convocation are in progress and it was announced at the evening banquet that the date for the event next year would be February 15, 1955.

The purpose of this meeting was to provide workshop discussion groups for the religious leader in which he may share ideas with his fellow alumni. Also to renew old acquaintances and make new ones among Elon's alumni, with the graduates of yesterday as well as ones of tomorrow.

A well planned program with excellent leaders for the discussion groups was designed for the meeting. Dr. O. W. S. McColl, of Woodford, Conn., who is retired from the active ministry, spoke twice during the convocation, first at a workshop session in the afternoon and again at a banquet meeting last night. Also speaking at a workshop gathering during the afternoon was Dr. Wofford C. Timmons, pastor of the Congregational Christian Church at Southern Pines.

The presence among Elon's returning ministerial graduates of a large number of outstanding pastors from all parts of the Southern Convention of the Congregational Christian Church served to show clearly the great value of Elon College to the convention as a source of trained leadership.

It is where a man spends his money that shows where his heart lies.

—Keigwin,

Elon Student Awarded Morehead Scholarship

Charles Phillips, of Burlington, a member of the Elon College senior class, who is to complete his pre-medical work at Elon and receive his diploma and degree with the class of 1954, was recently elected as a Morehead scholar at the University of North Carolina and was awarded a graduate scholarship valued at $1,500 per year.

He was one of three senior college students who were awarded the graduate scholarships, being chosen from a field of twenty college students competing for the awards. The scholarships in each case will be renewed each year providing the recipients maintain a satisfactory scholastic standing.

CHARLES PHILLIPS

The scholarships were awarded on the basis of an applicant's academic record, personality, field of study and the impression he made upon the examining group. The awards were announced on March 11 after the applicants were subjected to three days of interviews with members of the central scholarship committee and trustee of the Morehead Foundation.

The awards were announced by John Motley Morehead, of New York City, a University of North Carolina graduate of the Class of 1891, who has gained world-wide recognition as a chemist, industrialist, engineer and a former United States ambassador to Sweden, who established the scholarship fund of the Morehead Foundation.

Phillips is the second Elon student or graduate to receive one of the Morehead Scholarships. Hugh Rankin, who graduated from Elon with the Class of 1949, was named a Morehead Scholar two years ago and has been using his award for advanced study in the field of history.

Charlie Phillips, who has made a fine scholastic record during his four years at Elon, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Phillips, Sr., of Elon College, Route 2, and is married to the former Miss Jerry Lynn Duff, of Burlington. He and his wife now reside in Burlington. He was graduated from Altamahaw-Ossipee High School in 1950 and entered Elon College that fall. Much interested in dramatics and speech, Phillips has been an announcer with Radio Station WBBB for the past six years. He plans to enter medical school at the University of North Carolina this fall.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The days come and go and the weeks pass as they make up the months. With every passing week come additional opportunities; opportunities for church members and Christian people to do their duty, confirming the genuineness of their confessions. It is impossible to think of life apart from its earnings. It is equally as impossible to think of the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth without human submission and cooperation. It is impossible to give full cooperation without sharing the earnings of the individual life. To give one's self means to give one's earnings.

Elon College, our college, has no one else to whom it may look for necessary support than its natural constituency, church members, alumni, and friends. Contributions from these sources resulted in the founding of the college and have given it partial support through the years. May their kind increase and their contributions multiply from year to year.

Previously reported	$ 2,336.71
Eastern N. C. Conference:
New Hope	$ 30.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Pleasant Grove	$ 20.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Spring Hill S. S.	$ 3.40
Holland	56.00
	109.40
Total to date	$ 2,446.11

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Buttons

Every one uses buttons—and loses buttons. Dr. John G. Truitt, in his April newsletter, reminds us that the children at the orphanage are no exception to that rule. This is the way he puts it:

"Mrs. Stadler, our sewing matron, says, 'Tell the ladies that we need buttons.' Do your children lose their buttons? There are 81 children here and some of them have lost—some of them come up with buttons missing. Oh! to be sure other people need buttons, too, because sometimes we receive clothing with the buttons cut off. And we have to hunt up buttons to sew back on. Now maybe you have been saving buttons—all sorts and sizes of buttons. Maybe you have more buttons than you need and could spare a few buttons. Send us your spare buttons."

Dr. Truitt also says "Coupons, still need them, more and more!"

These are simple ways in which the women of our churches can help our orphanage. Of course, Dr. John would rather have "folding money" than anything!

* * * * *

News From Our Overseas Friends

Here are portions from letters from some of our missionary friends. Miss Nicholson spoke at our Rallies several years ago; Miss Corrine Nordquest has been the recipient of funds from our women; Hale Cook visited our Carroll County churches, just before leaving for India originally, when his friend Allen Gleason was pastor there.

From Oline Nicholson,
Lucy Perry Noble Institute,
K. Pudur P. O., Maduria S. India.

"Peace on Earth, Good-will towards Men" is very meaningful to our little ones who have been the recipients of your active good-will through your prayers, scholarships, boxes and letters which have been coming this year and past years. May God bless you and renew in your hearts a joy and peace that will continue throughout the New Year.

The use-it-as-you-like, small gifts, in amount, but large in meeting the needs of our under-nourished children have bought gallons of shark-liver oil. This is more potent than cod-liver oil, as you might expect. Also the children have a snack after school now as well as three meals a day. Sometimes it is a cucumber, eaten with skin on, a banana, peanuts (about a dozen per child) or some Indian fruit. Thank you again for making all these things possible. . . .

Women are taking their places in the life of this growing nation. We rejoice over the choice of Madame Pandit for the United Nations. We are rejoicing in South India over the appointment of a woman director of Public Education. She is a very capable and fine woman, the first to be appointed to this position in India. In our local post-office there are six of our graduates from our mission high school, and in the station, telegraph offices, government employment offices and other offices are women. . . .

Though apart yet we will be together at Christmas as we light our Christmas lamps renewing in our hearts a promise to practice "Good-will to men" in an active way.

* * *

From John Reuling,
Africa Secretary,
About Corrine Nordquest.

Her primary work is of course in religious education. She gives advice, talks, lectures and helps at the monthly meeting of pastors and evangelists, held in the Bergsman home, and of course visits the many, many Sunday schools, small and large, that are scattered all over this vast area. . . .

I was fortunate enough to see something of her most recent activity, an interdenominational training camp for Sunday school teachers. This was the first of its kind ever held in this region, and it was largely organized by Corrine. The course, which lasted for three days, was held in a little country school some miles out of Johannesburg, and was attended by thirty-five Africans who stayed the full time, in addition to others who could make only part of the session. It was an excellent example of interracial and interdenominational cooperation, and Corrine is to be congratulated for having initiated and carried it through. . . .

I am happy that we have Corrine here. The going has been very difficult indeed. Christian pastors and other leaders need and desire help in young people's work, but at first find it difficult to break away from old formal ways. However, I am sure that her patient and persistent work and teaching are already having a beneficial effect, which will increase in years to come.

* * *

The Hale Cooks,
Hume House, 165 Grove St.,
Auburndale 66, Massachusetts.

This last year has been full of the best laid plans of mice and men going astray. According to usual schedule, we would have left Wai (India) on furlough last April. But we were requested by the hospital staff to stay on an extra year. No sooner had we acceded to that request than I came down with a cough and fever, which finally turned out to be virus pneumonia with two ribs broken by coughing. . . .

In June all went smoothly, and we got our house nicely set up after the hot season, and plans sketched out for the coming year. Timothy was sick and "fluely" for a day but seemed well on his second birthday next day (June 25). Then on Sunday he started complaining of pains in his arms, legs, and head, and developed quite a bit of fever. Next day Jim Donaldson, Miraj's new orthopedic surgeon, came and confirmed the diagnosis of polio. . . .

Recovery from the effects of polio is a prolonged affair, requiring expert guidance all the way if optimum results are to be obtained. So we shifted our mental gears again, and began to seek passage to the USA for as soon as Timmy could travel. . . .

Margit (Note: Mrs. Cook is from Sweden and went from that country as a nurse to India in 1947; she married our missionary in 1950 and this is her first visit to the U. S.) finds herself feeling quite at home—at least as much as Hale—for we both do not like the constant feeling of rush, rush, rush which is so prevalent here. Nor do we like the constant pressure of advertising. This is

(Continued on page 13.)

Why Elon College? . . .

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

For three decades and more the thinking and progressively inclined element of our church in the Southern Convention has been clamoring for the founding and support of our own college. There has always been a sizable number of our people who have questioned the ability of our church to support a college of our own. They have questioned the advisability of such an undertaking. Those of our number requesting a college for the Southern Convention have realized the cost of such an undertaking but have at the same time considered the cost of failure to build and support a college of our own. Looking far into the future and considering both angles of the undertaking, they could see clearly the marked advantages accruing to our church and to the kingdom of Christ in the founding and support of a liberal arts college to be known as our own.

Those who question the advisability of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches owning and supporting its own college are still with us. They hesitate because of the money required for the conduct of such an institution. They offer the suggestion that the state could do just as good a job as the church in the field of higher education. Could such a division of our people be serious today? There are so many reasons why our church should have its own college.

First of all, we need a college for the training of our own young people. Only in the confines of a church college can there be a really Christian atmosphere. The atmosphere of a campus is determined by its buildings, its curriculum, its students, its extracurricular activities, but most of all by its faculty. Only the Christian church college is permitted to select its faculty members on the basis of theological dogma, religious conviction, and church affiliation. These are the qualities that enter into faculty members that make the college and the campus Christian.

Today when emphasis on the spiritual aspect of student life is returning to the campus, no religious body can afford to abandon its college. A church can ill afford to give its college insufficient financial support. It is through the church college that a denomination or a church group may make its contribution to Christian education so much needed and so much in demand today. To turn from our college would be to withdraw our support from this potent factor on the college and university campus molding Christian character today. It is an avenue through which the church may make its definite contribution through the years that lie ahead.

Second, Elon College, our college, is the one intelligent factor in our church contributing to the corporate solidarity of our college students. When our own church young people come to our college campus from different sections of the church, they meet each other, they learn of the church from which they come, they get a definite idea of the church's program and how that every local church forms an integral part of our great denomination. This is a prime factor in church building that our people fail to consider when the elect to enter their sons and daughters in other institutions of higher learning.

Third, it is the opportunity of the church to provide first class opportunities in the field of higher education to its own young people. As a church and a church college, it must provide an adequate curriculum of studies, an efficient corps of professors and make sure that its contribution in the field of higher education is second to none. This means, of course, buildings, equipment, and facilities that are first class. This is no time to question the advisability of providing efficient and effective education for our own young people in a Christian atmosphere with a Christian perspective.

No one questions the fact that it is expensive to maintain Elon College. Its cost has always been excessive and always will be. Its contributions have always been decisive and abundant and always shall be. The fruits of the college far exceed its financial cost. The cost of the college to the church will increase rather than decrease. Today, as we glance at the balance sheet of the college, it is encouraging, inspiring, but as we take a look at the demands that are upon us now, we are inclined to hesitate. We are faced with the responsibility of providing adequate, comfortable, and appealing accommodations for boarding students on our campus. The minimum requirements in the immediate future are two new dormitories and a dining room. The minimum cost of these will be approximately $650,000. This is a lot of money, but when we face the necessity and consider the alternative, there is nothing left for courageous Christian people other than to take the step, assume the responsibilities, and in faith begin to build.

Keynote to Philippians—"Rejoice"

When one thinks about Paul's relationship to the Macedonia City of Philippi, he is utterly amazed at what Christ—the Living Christ—can do for a man and in a man! It is in this letter that the Apostle tells us more about himself than in any other place (3:1-11). If we would get a suggestion as to the background of his relationship to this city and community as such, we should read Acts 16:11-40. After receiving such treatment as is here described, what would one expect from a man who started out as a "Pharisee of the Pharisees"? One might expect him to become another Elijah to call down fire from heaven to burn up that city. Instead of this, when he was there, he sang songs of praise to God when they had him in prison—in the "inner" prison at that. Now that he has passed on and is away from them, he writes back a letter whose key word is "Rejoice." There are four chapters in the little letter, and each of these has this key word at its heart. For example, in chapter one (v. 18), we note that immature or misleading teachers had been at work among them. What does he say of them? Does he exhort his followers to withdraw from them and have no fellowship with them? Here are his own words: "Whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice." He believes that God could and would use imperfect preaching. What encouragement is here for all of us! (2) In the midst of his labors, hardships and sufferings, he declares, that "if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy and rejoice with you all. For the same cause also do ye joy and re-

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Two of the Youngsters had gone to get haircuts for Sunday, two of them were playing happily and the last one was working on climbing the apple tree (he made it too!), while the minister's wife and I chatted over a cup of tea.

Our conversation covered many subjects: school, church, tempers, clothes, budgets, neurotic mothers, and on and on. Then I noticed a tiny book on the buffet. Picking it up, and examining it, I decided it was quite worthwhile. The minister's wife said: "Perfect, the children can read it themselves." It was Prayer Time: daily devotions for families with young children, by Ed. D. Staples and it costs less than a dollar. The conversation moved to the whole subject of family worship: finding a time, suitable material, helpful ideas. The young mother told me of another book just acquired.

It is Guideposts to Creative Worship, by Edward W. and Anna Laura Gebhard. Mr. Gebhard is a minister and the father of four children. It is a most excellent book in content, arrangement and readability. It costs less than $3.00 and is an Abingdon-Cokesbury publication. Buy it for your home, church school or minister. The Bible, church, Hymnal and Table Talk are described. In the back of the book is an excellent collection of poetry, worship material, grace and prayers. You will be pleased with this book.

Family Week is beginning. If you don't have a quiet time for your family, begin now. What are some ways that you can help your children to know God? By music: singing hymns with or without accompaniment. The same minister's family mentioned, buys records of religious music with voices so they might sing along with the record. Listening to records of master church music, listening to the radio, reading the Bible. Do you know "Wings of Morning"? It is a lovely little book of beautiful illustrations and Bible verses suited to children's interests. Modern translations, children's versions, Bible stories, memorizing verses and repeating scripture will make the Book of Books meaningful for your family.

Your prayers may come in the morning or in the eventide. They may be a simple grace, ones made up by the family, or old classic prayers like the one by St. Francis. Some families say a prayer of blessing as each member of the family departs in the morning, others pray for "journey mercy" on undertaking a trip.

God may become real to your family as you see his handiwork out of doors. But most of all you will find him in your church, be it great or small. Worship as a family.

* * * * *

"That Television Set"

By MABLE-RUTH JACKSON.
Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Mrs. Graham was entertaining several friends—young mothers like herself—at an afternoon tea, and the conversation turned on the new complication that television had brought into the family life.

"It's been a big help to me, I can tell you," said lively Mrs. Jansen. "I let Teddy turn on the programs himself. He pulls his own small chair up in front of the screen and there's not a peep out of him for hours. I can get more things done while he's quiet."

"Yes," said little Mrs. Claussen thoughtfully, "but what does it do to Teddy?"

"Do to Teddy?" repeated Mrs. Jansen, looking a bit exasperated. "It doesn't do anything to him. What do you mean?"

"I see some of the afternoon programs; those are the ones you're referring to, I imagine. Part of them are programs for women—interviews, and the like. But some of them are old films that include gangster features, with plenty of guns and fighting in them. I'd be willing to wager that Teddy sees himself with a gun in each hand—bang, bang, bang, and another man falls dead! I'd much rather have my Larry and June playing at regular children's games or even playing by themselves, doing things on their own."

Mrs. Austin laughed. "It's surprising how ingenious the youngsters are. Billy and Dean are building a miniature town out beside the earport, where it's sandy. They're finding a use for all those little plastic toys they received for Christmas—so many of them. They're just right for their little town."

"I thought we were talking about television," said Mrs. Jansen tartly.

"Well, I just mean I believe building this town is better for them than sitting in front of a screen so much, watching other people doing things, even if the films aren't about gangsters. Very often there are other actions shown that I don't want my boy or girl to be thinking about now when they're at the imitative stage. There are some programs just for children that I consider are fine, and I keep in mind the time they come on."

"I guess you're right," conceded Mrs. Jansen. She sighed humorously. "I don't like to think so, because it has been so peaceful around the house with Teddy wrapped up in the pictures. After this I'm going to keep track of the television programs in the paper and not turn them on at random—nor let Teddy."

"My problem is how long to let my children stay up at night watching the programs," said Mrs. Graham. "It seems a little unkind to tell them to go to bed when there's something they want to see and they know their father and I will be able to do so—but—"

"I know just how you feel," said Mrs. Claussen, "but after all we are better judges than they are as to what's good for them, and while they're young we should exercise our authority, but with thoughtfulness. Too many parents give in to children's teasing. Eight o'clock has been Larry's and June's bedtime. When we first secured our set we let them stay up beyond their usual bedtime for a couple of nights. Then I realized I must put a stop to it. I took the time to talk to each of them after they were in bed and had quieted down. They will listen then, I've found. I told them it was necessary while they were growing to have plenty of sleep so they would be well and strong. I think if you give a child a good reason for not doing what he wishes to do he will be less apt to be resentful."

"Thanks, Hazel," said Mrs. Graham. "I think we all feel that it's been good to talk over this new problem we are having to deal with."

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Tips From Tom

Filmstrips for youth programs are excellent ideas. The services that Pattie Lee and the office provide are worth taking advantage of. Write for material today.

* * *

An address made by Betty Ruth Carden of the Rosemont Church of Norfolk, Va., is published on this page for your interest. This speech was made during Youth Week in services conducted by the young people.

* * *

Several of our young people are making plans for marriage in the near future. This is news for a "Cupid's Column." If you know of some who will soon be newlyweds, write us at once so we may include them in the list.

* * *

Many youth groups took active parts in the Worship Services on Easter. Some took charge of the Sunrise Services. I have heard of several just in this area. Write us and share your Easter experiences with other youth of your church.

* * * * *

"Youth—Face Today's World"

By BETTY RUTH CARDEN.

As Youth Week begins, we, as young people, would like to take this opportunity to let you in on what we are doing to prepare ourselves to face the world situation today.

We are not sitting idly by or sleeping while the world passes on. No, we, the young people of the world, realize our responsibility to ourselves and the church.

The Youth are conscious of the world conditions; turmoil, chaos and destruction and we feel that Christianity is the only answer. And through the church only, can Christianity become predominant.

Some will ask, "What is the church doing about this problem with its youth?" Training of the young people is the first and most important step toward a solution.

Through the World Youth Conferences the young people gain a portion of this training.

The World Youth Conference is an interdenominational meeting held once every two years in a chosen place somewhere in the world. They meet representatives from other countries for the purpose of worshipping, studying and having fellowship together.

In this way, we are gaining more knowledge of our many neighbors and only by learning to know each other better, are we able to get along as one group working together under Christ. Only through this may war cease and peace reign.

The National Youth Conference also helps to prepare the youth of the world. A meeting is held once every two years, which is also interdenominational. At this meeting the problems of the individual youth groups are discussed and projects and meetings for the youth all over the country are planned. They exchange ideas and gain much which they carry with them to their own churches. An example of this work is the Youth Week Program which we are observing tonight.

There's a feeling which comes with this observance that makes you feel "right good" to be a part of such an inspirational service and to know that all over the nation at one time or another this week others will be meeting together and thinking just as you are. There's a feeling of oneness which makes the youth feel that they are accomplishing what they set out to do.

Another large part the church plays is sending young people to the denominational Youth Conferences. Most of us know someone from our own church who has attended these meetings. It is very easy to tell just by talking to them that they are preparing to face the world's problems.

There is also a job for the local church and community in this great problem which concerns us so much. The local community affords schools in which to learn more about different people and to understand. This is the only way that peace and calm may become predominant.

Through the local church we have many aids. The Youth Fellowship groups get together and study and prepare the young people of today to be better church members and citizens of tomorrow. Through the Youth Fellowship, we are able to correspond with missionaries all over the world.

All these things play a large part in helping us to face today's world. We, the young people of the world, are seeking to learn more about the Christian way of life and to take our place in the church and community. Yes, we are doing our part, are you?

* * * * *

New Youth Work Sound Filmstrips

The Board of Christian Education has just purchased the kit of seven new sound (records) filmstrips on Youth Work. These were produced by cooperating denominations through the Department of Youth Work and the Department of Audio-Visual and Radio Education, National Council of the Churches of Christ, 79 East Adams Street, Chicago 3, Illinois.

They are as follows: (Each filmstrip has a leader's guide with detailed suggestions for using.)

1. "We Have This Fellowship"—This filmstrip, showing a Youth Fellowship at work, and what it means to an individual youth, is designed for:

- The Planning Retreat.
- Leadership Training Classes.
- Church School Classes.
- Evening Meetings of the Youth Fellowship.
- Orientation of New Members.
- Youth Rallies.
- Adult Leaders of Youth.

2. "The Faith of A Guy"—How one boy's Christian faith grew through the faith of a friend and counseling of a pastor will be helpful in:

- The committee, Commission, or special study group on Christian faith.
- Pastor's Church Membership Classes.
- Church School Classes.
- Special Worship Services.
- Summer Camps and Conferences.
- Evening Meetings of the Youth Fellowship.

3. "Gallery Of Witnesses"—A half-dozen vignettes of different young people and different kinds of witnessing will stimulate self-examination and decisions in:

- Classes or conferences on Christian Vocation.

(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Elijah Challenges Baal Worship"

LESSON VI—MAY 6, 1954.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: I Kings 17: 1; 18: 17-24. 37-39.

MEMORY SELECTION: "And Elijah came to all the people and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him." I Kings 18: 21.

The times were out of joint, and a man was needed to set them right. It was a time of moral and spiritual decline and decay in Israel. Ahab the king had married a woman, Jezebel, the daughter of a Sidonian king, and she was a hussy if ever there was one. She was a woman with a strong will and unending determination, and she "wore the pants" in the family. A heathen herself, and a worshipper of the heathen god, Baal, she influenced Ahab very greatly, and prevailed upon him to introduce the degrading worship of Baal into Israel and, what was worse, to make it the state religion. Thus when Elijah came upon the scene, apostasy in the nation had reached the lowest depths. The times were out of joint, all right, and Elijah was sent to set them right. It was a man's sized job.

But Elijah was a man's sized man. A man of rugged constitution, he was a man of rugged courage and heroic spirit. Because he had seen the face of God, he was not afraid of the face of man. Not even the king himself. Bursting on the scene with startling suddenness, he bluntly told Ahab, the king, and the husband of Jezebel, that the long drought which had plagued Israel for three and a half years, was the judgment of Jehovah on the sins of the nation. God is not mocked. He executes his judgment on the sins of men and of nations. There is an interesting sidelight on human character in Ahab's remark as he meets Elijah. "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" whined the king. That sounds familiar, doesn't it? Aren't we all prone to blame things on the other fellow? Don't we pass the buck? Isn't it human nature to blame our failures, and the fruits of our follies and our sins on the other fellow? It took a lot of courage on the part of this simple prophet to say bluntly to the king, "thou and thy father's house" are the ones to blame for this disaster. "Thou hast forsaken the commandments of the Lord and thou hast followed Baalim."

Then the fiery prophet called the king's hand. He was tired of the wishy-washy attitude and action of the people. Let there be once and for all a test of the two religions. He challenged the king to get the prophets of Baal, and the priests of Baal, on Mount Carmel for a showdown. He called the people of Israel together, and chided them for their dillydallying and their compromising spirit. "If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him." Then, as later in the New Testament times, and in our own time, God cannot bear lukewarmness. He has more respect for the person who is outrightly against him, than for the person who is lukewarm and halfhearted toward him. Religion does not have as much to fear from its avowed enemies as it does from its half-hearted and luke-warm members. There are so many people who do not nail their flags to the mast, who do not stand up to be counted. God is always saying, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." No decision is in itself a decision against God.

The old prophet had a flair for the dramatic. He staged the affair on Mt. Carmel, a high promontory which jutted out in the Mediterranean Sea. He gave the prophets and priests of Baal all the odds. The fact that the contest was held on a high place was a concession on Elijah's part—the high places were where Baal was worshipped. He was willing to stake his cause on a single test—the test of fire. He stood there one man against eight hundred and fifty prophets and priests. He gave his opponents first chance. And when it came his turn, he poured water and then more water on the sacrifice on the altar until it ran off and filled a big trench that he had dug around it. Furthermore he gave his opponents all the time they wanted. The old fellow's faith was magnificent and inspiring. He knew he had a God who could stand the test. He knew that his system was better than any other system. He was willing to have the people put his religion to a practical test. There are a lot of folks who try to keep religion in moth balls. They are afraid to bring it out into the open. They are afraid of what scientific investigation, and critical study of it will do. They are unwilling to pit it against the isms that abound in modern life. These things ought not so to be. Christianity has nothing to be afraid of, except the indifference of its followers. Jesus was always saying, "Come and see." "O taste and see that the Lord is good," said the Psalmist. We are to carry Christianity out into the world, to match it in the arena of life against all the forces of our modern world. It does not have to be defended; it needs only to be proclaimed, to be demonstrated, to be lived. It is superior to any other way of life or system of thought. We need not fear the odds that are against us. Even one righteous man with God is a majority. The other religious systems of the world, and the other philosophies of life, cannot compete with Christianity. As a great man once said, Christianity has not been tried and found wanting, it simply has not been tried.

After the prophets and priests of Baal had done their best and had failed, Elijah had his turn. First of all he rebuilt the altar that had been allowed to fall into disrepair through disuse. Then after laying the sacrifice on the altar, and drenching it with water as stated above, he prayed a simple prayer. And "the fire of the Lord fell" and consumed everything, sacrifice, wood, stones, dust, and even licked up the water in the trench! It was a demonstration of the power of the living God. It was the final argument and proof of the superiority of the living God over the heathen gods, and the revelation of his power over false gods. "When the people saw it, they fell on their faces; and they said, The Lord, he is God, the Lord, he is God."

The people of America need to be brought to the "mount of decision." All too many people, good people, have never taken a stand. We have too many spectators in religion, and too few participants. What our nation needs is commitment to Christ. There are too many people who are halting between two opinions. Compromises are sometimes necessary and helpful in dealing with men, but we cannot compromise between God and the world. We cannot serve God and mammon. Choose one or the other. Register and enlist in the cause of Christ.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

RESETTLEMENT SEEN AS SPIRITUAL AID.
(Continued from page 6.)

Mr. Otto said that ninety per cent of the interviewed families wanted to start life all over because they saw no future in Germany for their children. Most of these people fully realized that they needed freedom even more than a better economic situation; many resented "the welfare state forced upon them," Mr. Otto added.

Mr. Wolf, who through his work in Michigan has had wide experience with people resettled under the previous Displaced Persons Act, said that, just as the people who already have been resettled by the National Lutheran Council have "taken deep roots," the refugees now waiting for an opportunity "are eager to build something solid."

Adding that the refugees themselves will be the "best advertisement for the new program," Mr. Otto emphasized that it is "the church's deepest obligation to help them to the end of their flight and find rest in a spiritual sense."

Mr. Daum said that of all the people whom he interviewed only a few heads of large families were interested in what they would earn in the United States. The others were primarily interested in an opportunity "again to live normally and be useful."

Dr. Siefkes emphasized the aspects which "make our Lutheran stake in the present refugee problem the greater." He pointed out that more than 90 per cent of the refugees fleeing west from East Germany are Lutheran.

Adding that the great need at this moment is for sponsors willing to sign assurances, Dr. Siefkes voiced confidence that "our church will also rise to this challenge for Christ's sake."

As a result of two months of intensive work, the dossier team has prepared nearly two thousand descriptions of refugee families. These, said Dr. Cordelia Cox, director of Service to Immigrants, will be classified according to skills, family size and otherwise and circulated to all congregations interested in the program.

Dr. Cox expressed hope that each one of the over 10,000 congregations cooperating through their church bodies in the National Lutheran Council will sponsor at least one refugee family.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.
(Continued from page 8.)

probably hardest on Stevie, who finds it hard to understand why he can't, all at once, have everything which is advertised as essential to the properly equipped boy. Likewise the attitude of mind which throws out anything once damaged rather than repairing it we can understand as logical in a country where labor is expensive as compared with materials or mass-production projects, but after six years in poverty-stricken India, where time is so cheap compared with materials that everything must be made to last as long as possible, it still bothers us to throw away perfectly good tin cans and glass jars.

Future plans are still uncertain. We should be hearing from our General council in India whether we are to return to Wai, or to be sent to Vadala or even Miraj to develop a public health education and an extension program there.

* * * * *

Treasurer's Report

The following is the Quarterly Report of the Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

RECEIPTS.
North Carolina Conference:
Women	$2,694.18
Juniors	68.35
Cradle Rolls	36.54
	$2,799.07
Valley Conference:
Women	$ 248.99
Young People	22.50
	271.49
Eastern Va. Conference:
Women	$1,607.29
Young People	155.40
Juniors	79.07
Cradle Roll	21.31
	1,863.07
Total	$4,933.63

DISBURSEMENTS.
Home Missions, General Fund
Young People's Home Mission Fund	$1,450.57
Puerto Rican Goat Fund	88.95
Ryder Memorial Hospital	1,061.45
Ellis Island, Miss Jennie Pratt	24.76
Home Missions, Special Fund	7.50
	20.00
	$2,653.23
Foreign Missions, General Fund
Young People's Foreign Mission Fund	$1,450.57
Thank Offering, Minda-nao	88.95
Christian World Mission Care Package, India ..	297.28
A. Pappas, Rachanapuram School for girls ..	14.60
Dr. Riggs	10.00
Foreign Missions, Special Fund	10.00
	60.00
	1,940.40
Check George D. Colelough Treasurer S. C. C.
Check, Mrs. Leathers Treas., Life Memberships & Memorials	$4,593.63
Cash in Bank	140.00
	200.00
Total	$4,933.63
MRS. W. V. LEATHERS, Treasurer.

KEYNOTE TO PHILIPPIANS.
(Continued from page 9.)

joyce with me" (2:17-18). (3) In 3:1 the Apostle says, "Finally, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord," and passes right on to give one of the strongest and richest personal testimonies for Christ and the Kingdom that has ever been uttered at any time or in any place (v. 1-16). (4) In 4:4 he exhorts them to "rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say, rejoice." Immediately following this exhortation he proceeds to enumerate some of the things they have to rejoice over—the assurance that God will supply their every need, that God's peace will guard their hearts. And then follows what is to me one of the most sublime passages in all the Bible (v. 8). This little group had sent him a "love gift," and in his closing verses he bubbles over in his expression of gratitude to them. What is there in the heavens above or in the earth beneath like the fellowship of those who love and serve God in Christ Jesus. Nor do people have to wait until they die to share this fellowship: it is ours here and now if we will take it and use it. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." "Rejoice in the Lord Always."

W. R. CULLOM.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

The children at the orphanage had a lovely Easter. For weeks friends who sponsor children had been sending in pretty dresses, suits, shoes or money for shoes so that by Easter everyone was dressed neatly and in readiness for the beautiful day.

And our wholesale grocers sent us complimentary four big boxes of Easter eggs. A Hebrew friend in Suffolk sent us a big box of candy, enough for everybody to have a share.

And the Lesters and the Asheboro church brought us about a dozen as pretty cakes as people commonly cook for Easter! Well, we were a happy lot. It was more than the cake, more than the candy, more even than the shoes and suits and jackets and dresses—more than all these—it was the fact that when people were themselves happy and thinking of others whom they wished to make happy they thought of us. Yes, that is it. We rated their affection and remembrance. I speak for every child here in saying thank you.

This report is good this week, but to get the full effect of what I am writing you would have to look back over several weeks. The Easter funds, gifts, etc., have been coming in for several weeks, and they encourage us all here at the orphanage.

By the way, one of my fourth grade boys has just come in with his report card. He has collected thus far this year 36 A's and 2 B's-plus. How about that? A few minutes ahead of him was a pretty little girl in the sixth grade with a report card that looked almost as good. Perhaps it was every bit as good as the boy's will look when he is in the sixth grade. It is a real pleasure to have these boys and girls come in to my office to show me their report cards.

I wish you could have seen our boys and girls at the Easter sunrise service over on the college campus. And at Sunday school and church. They were so well behaved. I was proud of them everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR APRIL 22, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Coupons:

Women's Society, Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C.

Woman's Fellowship, Cong. Christian Ch., Pfafftown, N. C.

Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Sr., Burlington, N. C.

Clothing:

Mrs. L. A. Logan, Elberon, Va.

Mrs. P. G. Fleming, Guilford College, N. C.

Mrs. J. S. Johnson, Walters, Va.

Mrs. E. C. Lewis, Vernon Hill, Va.

Mrs. George Lamb, Jr., Randleman, N. C.

Mrs. Brewer, Randleman, N. C.

Mrs. Wade Robbins, Randleman, N. C.

Dorothy Williams Sunday school class, Cong. Christian Ch., Franklin, Va.

Mrs. Burton Daniels, Beaufort, N. C.

Mrs. J. M. Riddle, Sanford, N. C., Clothing, shoes, glasses, buttons and a quilt.

Woman's Missionary Society, Antioch (R) Christian Church, Clothing, toilet articles & glasses.

Central Grocery Co., Burlington, N. C., 4 boxes of Easter eggs.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va., 20 neck ties.

Economy Dry Cleaners, Randleman, N. C., Cleaning clothes.

Candy:

Henry I Jaffe, Suffolk, Va.

Dresses:

Katie Jo McAdams, Elon College, N. C.

Asheboro Cong. Christian Church, Cakes & cookies.

Mrs. G. C. Crutchfield, Elon College, N. C. salt herring.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 4,693.46

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Christian Chapel$ 5.35

Good Hope 18.00

Mt. Auburn S. S. 12.25

35.60

Eastern Va. Conference:

Christian Temple$ 20.00

20.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Elk Spur$ 2.00

Mt. Zion S. S. 3.48

5.48

Western N. C. Conference:

Flint Hill (R)$ 10.00

10.00

Total $ 71.08

Grand total $ 4,764.54

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $11,534.80

Mr. & Mrs. N. O. Terry, Gibsonville, N. C.$ 5.00

Miss Pattie Adams, South Boston, Va. 10.00

Miss Willie Adams, South Boston, Va. 15.00

Janet Gail & Helen Kay Twiford, Bayside, Va. . 5.00

Mr. & Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Jr., Susan and Cathy Gilliam, Burlington, N. C. 25.00

A Friend, Suffolk, Va. . 10.00

Young People's Missionary Society, Burton's Grove Church 7.00

Miss Bronza Dockery, Reidsville, N. C. 10.00

Maude Hedley Bible Class 10.00

Heart Sisters' Society, Randleman, N. C. 25.00

Mr. & Mrs. Clyde Rudd & family, Greensboro, N. C. 10.00

A Friend, Greensboro, N. C. 15.00

Oak Grove Ch., Special Easter Offering 15.00

Woman's Fellowship, Bay View Cong. Christian Ch. 14.85

Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. (interest) 1.20

Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church 5.00

Women's Missionary Society of Liberty (Va.) Church 5.00

Liberty (Vance) Christian Church, Special Holy Week Offering .. 60.85

Special Gifts 45.00

293.90

Grand total $11,828.70

Total for the week $ 364.98

Total for the year $16,593.24

It is the growling man who lives a dog's life.—Coleman Cox.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address

In Memoriam

BOONE.

Dr. W. H. Boone, 83 year old Durham resident, died on February 16, 1954. He was born in Chatham County and educated there, at Graham Institute and Elon College. He later received his Medical degree and had been a considerate, successful physician for a number of years. He began his practice in Morrisville, North Carolina and moved from there to Durham in 1910.

He was a life long member of Congregational Christian Churches and of the Durham church since 1911. He was interested in all its organizations and gave generously of his time and means. He served for thirty years as teacher of the Men's Bible Class. Dr. Boone's interest was not confined to the local church only but to all phases of the work of his denomination.

In his memory the Durham Congregational Christian Church presents the following resolutions:

That we express our gratitude for having known and worked with this Christian gentleman and strive to honor his life by being true to the cause he loved and served.

That we show appreciation for his long Christian life, for his strength of character and for his friendly disposition.

That the memory and influence of his long, useful life prove a benediction to our church and community.

Mrs. D. M. ESTES,
Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE.

LASSATER.

Miss Rosa Ellen Lassater, age 71, passed away March 25, 1954. She was born in Chatham County but had been a resident of Durham for the past forty years and a member of the Congregational Christian Church.

In memory of Miss Lassater we, the members of the Congregational Christian Church, offer the following resolutions:

That we express our admiration for her devotion to her family.

That the influence of her sweet spirit be an inspiration to those whom she loved and for whom she cared.

That we appreciate her continued interest in our church even though she was unable to take an active part in its activities in recent years.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS.

CHANDLER.

Mrs. Ella Sanford Chandler, age 82, passed to her eternal home on March 15, 1954. She was born in Granville County, was educated there and at Elon College.

She moved to Durham in 1908 and has been a loyal member of the Congregational Christian Church for more than forty years. She was interested in our college, our orphanage, missions and in all phases of our denominational work.

In memory of this devoted and loyal member the Durham Congregational Christian Church presents the following resolutions:

That we hold in lasting memory her strong Christian character, her kind demeanor and her gentle disposition.

That we express appreciation for her loyalty to the church and its enterprises, and for her broad influence as a good homemaker, neighbor and friend.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS.

DOWDY.

Miss Vallie Dowdy died at her home on March 9, 1954. She was born in Franklin County and received her education there. She had been a resident of Durham for the past forty years. She united with the Congregational Christian Church in early life and despite her long illness she never lost interest in the physical and spiritual progress of our church.

In memory of her the Durham Church presents the following resolutions:

That we appreciate her loyalty to her church, her family and her friends.

That we shall cherish the memory of her unflinching cheerfulness though she suffered intensely for many months.

That her sweet spirit will always be an inspiration to her loved ones and friends.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS.

THE PROPOSED MERGER.

(Continued from page 2.)

(2) The Executive Committee said that it felt it "desirable to have further time to study the problems relating to the proposed union."

(3) The Executive Committee made it clear that it would see that "various points of view" in the Congregational Christian fellowship are represented on the committees as the study proceeds.

(4) The Executive Committee does not propose that any action on the merger be taken at the forthcoming meeting of the General Council at Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, June 23-30.

(5) The Executive Committee further stated that it does not anticipate that it will have any recommendations on the proposed merger to present to the General Council until the council meeting of 1956.

YOUTH WORK FILMSTRIPS.

(Continued from page 11.)

- b. Classes or conferences on Evangelism.
- c. United Christian Youth Mission—Conference on "My Christian Witness."
- d. Church School Classes.
- e. Evening Meetings of the Youth Fellowship.
- f. Commission or committee on Christian Witness.

4. "I Found A New World" (color filmstrip)—The story of how a news reporter, touring mission fields, discovers the church in a new light—his experiences will be helpful to:

- a. Mission Study Groups (youth and adult).
- b. Conferences on World Order.
- c. Church School Classes.
- d. Evening Meetings of the Youth Fellowship.
- e. Mission Festivals.
- f. Summer Camps and Conferences.
- g. Youth Rallies.

5. "The Measure of A Man" (color filmstrip)—Jerry's visit to the clinic of Drs. Insight, Farsight, and Truesight results in a transformation of attitudes toward others, and lays a basis for discussion in:

- a. Church School Classes.
- b. Evening Meetings of the Youth Fellowship.
- c. Weekend Work Camps.
- d. Youth Rallies.
- e. Summer Camps and Conferences.
- f. Committee on Christian Citizenship.

6. "How Wide Is Our Circle"—The story of a youth Fellowship that becomes truly "a fellowship"—inclusive, yet distinctive—a story to be shared in:

- a. Family Night Programs.
- b. Church School Classes.
- c. Evening Meetings of the Youth Fellowship.
- d. Leadership Training Classes.
- e. Adult Leaders of Youth.
- f. Summer Camps and Conferences.

7. "Big Enough To Tackle"—A compelling story of how two kids stirred a community to tackle problems together through a Christian Youth Council—a story to be used in:

- a. Christian Youth Councils.
- b. Committees considering forming a Christian Youth Council.
- c. Local church Youth Groups.
- d. Denominational and Inter-denominational Youth Rallies.
- e. Summer Camps and Conferences.

With the exception of the two indicated above, all are black and white filmstrips.

They are free except for (return) postage. Stamps to help pay the postage both ways would be a great help. These filmstrips may be reserved through Miss Doris Boswell, Box 336, Elon College, N. C.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

They're Giving a Cent-a-Meal

Pictured above is the Arnold Humphrey family of Greensboro, First Church, showing Richard putting his coin in the Cent-a-Meal box. Sitting between Arnold and Helen is Clyde Neal. All are participating in the support of Our Christian World Mission.

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches has designated March, April, May and June as Missions Period, and it is during these months that we like to stress, more than normally, missionary education and giving.

The box is a reminder and we hope a thought-provoker—so that as we partake of God's abundant gifts to us, we will remember that there are people around the world who need our help.

"Because I have been much given, I too must give, Because of thy bounty Lord, each day I live . . ."

The cent a meal does not mean that we must limit our giving to that amount, but it is hoped that at least that much will be given by all of our families.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1953.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1954

NUMBER 18

Dedicated to the Service of Christ's Kingdom

Palm Street Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro, North Carolina, shown above, observed its dedication and mortgage burning on Sunday morning, May 2, 1954. We congratulate church, pastor and members.

(A short story of the dedication is given on page 2.)

News Flashes

The Lutherans are doing an especially fine work of rehabilitation the world around. The story on page six of this issue should prove informative as well as interesting. It should also inspire us to do a better job.

At the request of Supt. Wm. T. Scott, we are printing in its entirety in this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN the Report of the Committee on Finance of the Southern Convention as submitted by its chairman, Dr. S. C. Harrell, and adopted by the Convention.

Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn., will be the place of meeting for the National Council of Pilgrim Fellowship, June 23-30. It is expected that more than two hundred and fifty young people and their leaders will attend, including delegates from Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Mexico.

Rear Admiral Edward B. Harp, Jr., Chief of Chaplains of the United States Navy, will leave Washington, D. C. on May 10, for a month's tour of naval activities in the European Area. Chaplain Harp says that it is his desire "to visit all areas where our Navy Chaplains are serving and to meet them personally." He adds, "The Navy is vitally concerned with the spiritual and moral welfare of naval personnel serving in the European Area, both ashore and afloat." The Chief of Chaplains expects to return to Washington about June 6.

Dr. W. Millard Stevens was elected this week to the office of president of the Norfolk Ministers' Association for the next year. He will be installed, with the other newly elected officers of the association, on June 7, when the association meets for lunch at the Y. M. C. A. Beach Club. The Norfolk Ministers' Association is composed of more than one hundred Protestant ministers in the Norfolk area. It sponsors a number of co-operative Christian activities in the city. Their two largest projects are the Norfolk Preaching Mission and a regular ministry to the Institutions located at the Norfolk City Welfare Center.

Virginia Summer School for Rural Ministers to be Held

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Virginia Summer School for Rural Ministers will be observed during the annual session of the school, July 5 to 9 of this year.

Under the auspices of the Extension Service of the College of Agriculture, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and the Rural Church Department of the Virginia Council of Churches, the school is held annually on the campus of V. P. I. at Blacksburg, Virginia.

This year the school will begin with registration on Monday afternoon, July 5, and will end with lunch on Friday, July 9. The cost for full-time attendance at the school will be $15.00. Wives of ministers are cordially invited to attend and they are charged the same fee. There are no facilities available for children.

According to the latest information received, Dr. Charles E. Lively, University of Missouri, will teach the course in Rural Sociology; Dr. James M. Carr and Dr. Frank Price will teach the course on "The Rural Church"; Dr. W. E. Garnett will lecture on his research on the rural church; and Mr. W. H. Daughtrey, Dr. W. E. Skelton, and Miss Maude Wallace will give lectures on Agricultural extension.

Seminars will be conducted by Rev. Dale Madearis, Indianapolis, Indiana; Mr. W. W. Eure, National Youth Foundation, Washington, D. C., and Dr. D. R. Fessler of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Lectures in the evening will be given by state and national leaders.

The "Rural Minister of the Year" will be named at the Twenty-fifth Anniversary Banquet on Thursday night of the week.

Further information can be secured by writing to B. L. Hummel, Rural Sociologist, V. P. I., Blacksburg, Va. Information concerning scholarships can be secured from Dr. W. T. Scott, Elon College, N. C.

JAS. H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.,
Chairman, Rural Church Committee.

Rev. T. L. Sasser, city missions superintendent of Greensboro, North Carolina, was elected president of the Southern Baptist City Missions Conference at its tenth annual session, which was held recently at Nashville, Tennessee.

Palm Street Church Burns Mortgage on Church Property

The Palm Street Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., was dedicated on last Sunday morning, May 2, at which time the mortgage on the property was burned. Co-incidental with this program was the fourth anniversary of the present minister, Rev. Mack V. Welch.

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, superintendent of the Southern Convention, delivered the dedicatory sermon Sunday morning, and the dedicatory prayer was made by President L. E. Smith of Elon College.

Mrs. John G. Truitt, chairman of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, extended greetings from the Convention. Rev. G. B. Bennett, a member of the church, minister to the Martha's Chapel Congregational Christian Church, near Chapel Hill, and a student at Elon College, read the scripture lesson for the occasion.

Palm Street Church is 49 years old. The present building was begun in 1950 and completed in 1951, with the first service in the building in January of that year. The building fund was started in 1941, during the ministry of Rev. M. A. Pollard, who served the church from 1937 to 1947. Plans were continued during the pastorate of Rev. J. L. Neese who served from 1948 to 1950. The actual building program was culminated during the ministry of Rev. Mr. Welch.

The church has approximately 200 members and has paid off its $20,000 debt in three years. The cost of the new building was around $60,000.

Taking part in the mortgage burning ceremony were Rev. Mr. Welch, chairman of the building committee; P. R. Hall, chairman of the board of trustees; Mrs. Lois Winslow, member of the building committee; A. J. Harris, church treasurer and chairman of the building fund committee; R. S. Yarborough, secretary of the building fund committee, and Mack Fulk, its treasurer.

Revival services started on Sunday evening and are continuing through this week. Rev. M. A. Pollard, former minister, is the visiting evangelist.

The recently dedicated building is shown on page one.

Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, strongest defender of the Methodist Federation for Social Action at the last General Conference of the denomination, has resigned from its Board of Directors.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

NOTE: The office of publication has received no material for this page from the Laymen's headquarters this week. Therefore, knowing that the laymen of our church are actively interested in camp-building, we are submitting this article released by the National Council of Churches, for consideration.—MANAGING EDITOR.

* * *

Relation of Camping to Christian Education

New ideas in relating camping to Christian education are being spelled out at seven regional training camps across the country this spring. They are sponsored by the special committee on camps and conferences of the National Council of Churches.

Held annually since 1951, these training camps are designated for denominational and interdenominational leaders of junior and junior high church camps who are concerned with camping as a part of Christian education. Participants will later take to their own camps new insights and skills in program planning, counseling methods, administrative procedures, and guidance for development of camp leadership.

Work, exploration and experience in out-of-door living will be related to worship and Christian fellowship. Program activities will include constructing shelters, planning and preparing out-of-door meals, finding expression of God's powers in plants, rocks, streams and other natural resources. The interpretation of these activities as opportunities for creative Christian youth will be the major emphasis. Importance will be attached to health and safety as aspects of Christian stewardship.

In small groups, each person will participate in planning, carrying out and evaluating group experiences such as cooking out, exploration, story-telling, camp crafts, nature lore and worship. Development of responsibility through camp duties, meal service and campfire worship service will be demonstrated.

Through camping, Protestantism is finding a new and significant opportunity in Christian education. Over 175,000 junior and junior boys and girls will enroll in camps this summer. In addition, there are countless day camps, trip camps, family camps and week-end camps for youth and adults. For all this, thousands of Protestant camp leaders are needed.

It was to assist the denominations in the training of their camp leaders that the National Council of Churches established these regional training camps three years ago.

Leaders for the regional camps have been drawn from national denominational staffs and others with wide experience in church camping. The director of the program is Edward L. Schlingman of Philadelphia, director of camps and conferences of the Evangelical & Reformed Church.

The training camp for the Southeastern Area of the United States is currently being held at Camp New Hope, Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

Government Issues New Stamp

The first regular United States postage stamp to bear the motto, "In God We Trust," was issued early in April. The eight-cent stamp, printed in red, white and blue, bears a picture of the Statue of Liberty. It is the first multi-colored regular stamp of small denomination in the history of the United States. "The Statue of Liberty is a beacon of hope and opportunity today, just as it has been down through the years to oppressed

(Continued on page 14.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim)J. T. Kernodle

Managing EditorJ. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year	$3.00
Two Years	5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"Good News for Church Colleges"

The heading of this editorial is the title of an article appearing in the April 21st issue of "The Christian Century." The opening paragraph of the article stated, "Church giving to denominational colleges is on the increase!" and the statement is made on the basis of a survey of 116 co-educational liberal arts colleges in 33 states and representing 25 Protestant denominations.

The article is written by Joseph M. Hopkins, a professor of Bible and Philosophy at Westminster College, Wilmington, Pa. It is interesting to note that in 1951-52 six denominations contributed to the operating budgets of each of their colleges an average of $70,000 or more, and that eight denominations gave an average of less than $20,000 to each of their colleges. The Congregational Christian Churches were in the latter group.

With approximately 40,000 members per college, the Church of the Nazarene contributed an average of more than $70,000 to each of its colleges, while the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., gave only slightly more than an average of $15,000 to each of its colleges on a basis of approximately 70,000 members per college. "The Congregational Christian Churches, with over 88,000 members per co-ed college, gave less than $10,000 to each of the denomination's four reporting colleges." The writer is not certain as to whether Elon College is included in this study, but the probability is that it is not.

Roughly speaking, on the basis of about 35,000 members, the Southern Convention has contributed, from its churches, an average of $23,910 per year to Elon College for the conference years 1951-52-53. This figure includes the Sustaining Fund, which was applicable for each of the years involved. Prior to the adoption of the Sustaining Fund, the average amount per year received by the college from churches was closer to $13,500.

In comparison with what other denominations are doing for their colleges, the figure of $35,000 per year to be raised by the churches of the Southern Convention for Elon College certainly is not unreasonably large. It is questionable if it is large enough. In terms of value received in the past and expectations for the future, it is a sound investment. The amount can and should be raised. It is approximately the average amount received per institution from their sponsoring churches.

We can make the title of the article true for our college through cheerful acceptance of the opportunity to support her. When the apportionment report is in for the next conference year, let it be "Good News for Elon College!"

JAS. H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

Idle Funds

The church committee met, and there was talk of what the church might vote toward a Christian project. At once, however, some members started hemming and hawing. They feared to see the fund in question go below $500.00—that seemed a grave danger point. When had the fund last been used? Well, one member thought that he remembered that $25.00 was drawn three years ago.

Commenting on such an episode as this, a rather forthright and energetic church member affirmed: "If I give money to my church, I want that money to be active, to be used, to get in there doing some of the things a church ought to do!"

Now it may be that too many of our churches do not have many funds, active or inactive. But there is considerable backing for doing something about funds of various kinds that lie unused and almost forgotten and untouchable for years. There are even deacons' funds for which no need has been found for years. It would seem deplorable, under normal conditions, for churches to add to funds such as these, and yet never put the money to work performing a spiritual ministry in cases of need.

Why this reluctance to permit funds to be used for the purpose for which they were designated?

There is real doubt, also, concerning the wisdom of bequeathing or otherwise giving to churches and similar groups funds for purposes so narrow or circumscribed that the funds, in effect, do little good.

Our churches can very easily get sluggish and timid and fearful of doing anything. They want to keep some funds sleepily growing, but no one, it would seem, at times, ever wants them to be drawn on—especially to be drawn on heavily. It would be interesting to note how much good many of our churches could do with various types of small funds now just idling away, not doing the good donors probably hoped for in giving them.

Let us wake up our inactive funds. Let us use our assets. Let us do what we can. Then when we have decided to do some real work in fields where we do have a little money to work with, we may catch the vision of larger efforts and larger fields. And then we shall be, as a fellowship more truly a part of the Church of Christ.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

This is "Christian Family Week"

It is Concerned with . . .

THE CHRISTIAN HOME

A Thesis

By WESLEY L. GUSTAFSON

St. Paul, Minnesota

The Christian Home is the most important institution in the world. That does not minimize the position of the church or state; they also have been ordained of God. But he places the home first—in time as well as in importance. It is the foundation upon which all other institutions are built; upon it the church and the state will either stand or fall. What the homes are, the churches and the schools are—and the government will be. Every place where there has been a neglect of home responsibility there eventually has been a crumbling of the nation.

It is imperative, therefore, that utmost care be taken in establishing and maintaining our Christian homes. And for this tremendous responsibility, God has given us a perfect plan, which is a most beautiful picture. Two who know him meet, they gradually learn to know each other, take time to seek the plan of God for their lives, exchange vows, establish a Christian home. Then a baby comes. Prayer is offered for the child before and after it is born. The parents trust God for it, but they know that its destiny is influenced by them.

Accepting Responsibility.

Unfortunately, some parents do not accept that responsibility. They shirk it or shift it on to someone else. Parents who know the Lord Jesus Christ, who have the Word, and yet who blame the church for the downfall of their child deserve little sympathy. The church has a real part in his training, but the home has the first responsibility; its influence is the greatest force in the life of the child. Neither are the mother and father excused who blame the school for their boy's or girl's delinquency. A child can be sent through a "pack of wolves" without becoming harmed if he has been properly trained in his home.

But think of the joy that comes to parents who do accept the challenge of guiding aright the destiny of their children. To see their child respond to the teaching of the Word of God, accept Jesus Christ as Saviour, take his responsibility in the home and in the community, develop a burden for the people around him, for the world, and desire to do the will of God (though there be a great deal of fumbling)—to see that spiritual development brings complete satisfaction to the Christian parents.

Results of Neglect.

On the other hand, consider the great anguish resulting when mother and father are careless and prayerless—slothful in training the one entrusted to them. The child is disrespectful to his home—and oft times a disgrace to the nation. For the many thousands whom this child represents, twenty billion dollars a year is spent in penal institutions. Orphanages, jails and reformatories are filled!

There is little spiritual hope for any home until the father takes his place as the spiritual leader. Many Christians fail in this important matter. They have been so taken up with their Christian service—with the work of the church, evangelization of the community, of the world—that they have not had time to evangelize their own children. If it is to be done, they must do it. The responsibility is heavy, but it is also very rewarding.

Remember the Word of God: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6). This promise to other generations is for us to claim today. God will bring unto himself those who have had proper training. This is an absolute fact. But we can't let the training go and claim the promise. If I want my children to know God, I have to train them. Then I can trust his promise—he will take care of bringing each of them to himself.

You may ask, "How can we build a home?" Here again let us look to the Bible for direction. In Matthew 6:6, the Lord Jesus tells us very clearly how to proceed: "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

In the first place, we must walk personally with God. No one can lead any person further than he has gone himself. Unless the parents are walking with the Lord, the children may not have that privilege.

Then we must have a definite period for prayer. This takes discipline and planning—we must make the time. The matter of time is probably where we fail most often. We are terribly busy—sometimes sinfully so. How can we make time? If I don't have fifteen minutes that I can spend in prayer and fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ and in the study of God's Word all alone during the day, something is wrong. If I have the time for reading the newspaper, listening to the radio, or watching television, then I have fifteen minutes for prayer. Although each of these activities may be good in itself, it is harmful if I do not have time to spend with God.

The Ultimate Reward.

And now we come to the promise: "Thy Father . . . shall reward thee openly." Walking together as a family with God! God honors family discipline. My father always had a family altar, in the morning and in the evening. As soon as the meal was over in the evening, he would get out the family Bible and read. And in the morning, even when we had much work to do in the field and would have to be out early, he would get us up early enough to spend time with Christ before we would go to our work. Now he sees the promise fulfilled in his children's homes.

The maintaining of a Christian home is our first responsibility. The destinies of our children are to a great extent determined by us. How to "train them in the way that they should go" has been very clearly shown to us in the Word. What are we going to do about it?—From the April 1 issue of Action.

God has ordained that happiness, like every other good thing, should cost us something: He has willed that it should be a moral achievement, and not an accident.—De Gasparin.

Reuben, the Money Changer

By Dr. EDWIN MOLL, Director
Near East Branch, Lutheran World Federation

Tho' mid-winter, the hills of Judea were reveling in a tepid sunbath. The first flowers were already thrusting shy heads through the earth. If only this gold-washed day were har-binger of an early spring! For winter marching very early, had so far behaved badly. That had been hard, very hard on the refugees. A flimsy tent, a mud hut is poor cover against the artillery of an irate winter, against relentless raw winds and lashing chill rains and numbing snow-storms. Only once in every four or five years does snow fall in the Holy Land—and this was one of those years.

There were four of us in the car—Doctors Reuben Youngdahl of Minneapolis, Melvin Hammerburg of St. Paul, my wife and I. We were on our way to Kibya—the Arab village on the tenuous Jordan-Israel armistice line in which Israel soldiers had brutally done to death 67 inhabitants on the night of October 14, 1953. What other thoughts and speech, except grave, could we have?

Here and there could be seen evidences of the tragedy that has engulfed this part of the world—several refugee camps in which since 1948, lived Arabs under rotting tents or in mud huts on a monotonous diet of 1500 calories daily supplied by the United Nations Relief and Work Agency and clothed for the most part by Lutheran World Relief, their farms, towns and villages now in the possession of the Israelis; here and there, too, were littlefully-armed groups of the Arab Legion poised to spring into action in the event of a new aggression or the resumption of larger-scale warfare. How frighteningly precarious the peace! What awful things has man here done to man! What hatreds have here been spawned—what physical suffering and mental anguish has been caused! How many innocents have gone to untimely deaths for want of shelter and food and clothing!

For several minutes Reuben in the front seat had been busy with his gold-tipped Parker 51 and a little black-covered book. Presently he turned and thrust into my hand a sheaf of endorsed traveller's checks. Gold-tipped pen indeed!

"Here" he said "is some money. It was given to me by members of my several choirs in Mt. Olivet Lutheran Church to use as I see fit. I'm turning it over to you on one strict condition—that you use it for refugees and that you write and tell me how you use it. Promise me that your report will be on my desk when I get back to Mt. Olivet."

"Reuben," I replied "for the refugees I'll do and promise almost anything."

Hereto I append the letter that I have now sent to Reuben:

My dear Reuben,

From what you and I know from the New Testament about stewardship I dare to say the following. A dollar in the possession of a child of God gets real value when it is changed into the currency of immortal human beings. There will be no dollar millionaires in heaven—you can't take it with you!—but only soul millionaires. You get what I mean! Will you please tell the dear people who gave you that money and will you, who passed it on to me, please know that I'm taking parts of it from time to time, to the "Bank of God" where I am changing it into human beings. And this is how the transaction works out. This is how your good money will be and is being changed.

Little orphaned Ahmed, eight years old, child of a refugee peasant, was struck in the left eye by a bit of shrapnel during an Israel attack on the Old City of Jerusalem in 1948. The eye had to be removed. One day I saw him in narrow cobblestone paved Christian Street. His clothing was in tatters. He had nothing to eat for several days except some decayed cabbage leaves that he had found in the streets. His empty eye-socket was clustered with flies and yellow with pus. I took him to our relief head-quarters, near the church of the Holy Sepulchre, had him bathed, decently dressed and shod, his hair cut and gave him nourishing food. I took him to the shop which sells plastic eyes where he was fitted. Today Ahmed is one of the bright pupils in our Lutheran School in Old Jerusalem. Now his little body is well-padded with good flesh, his eyes have a healthy sparkle and his cheeks glow. You should see him take the part of one of the Wise Men in our Christmas playlet, and hear him as he joins his class in the singing of Christmas hymns and listen to his repertory of Scripture texts and stories! Look at Ahmed! Look at him again! But for your money he would still be a filthy begging thieving street gamin. What a miracle your money has wrought—money that has been exchanged in the Bank of God for a priceless little boy.

I can't tell you off-hand how many boys and girls have thus been metamorphosed, how many plastic eyes have been provided, how many emaciated little bodies have been fed and clothed and healed, into how many darkened little minds the light of the Gospel has shone—but they number hundreds upon hundreds. You will find them in our two Lutheran Orphanages, in our three schools and our Home for the Blind.

Then there is the very recent case of Mohammed Khaleel. Mohammed was a Muslim. He died suddenly of heart-failure the day after you and Melvin left Jerusalem in mid-January. I had a pleasant friendship with him in the old days when he operated a lucrative taxie-service. Then he was driven out of his home and business. He lost everything, barely saving his wife and nine children and several old people who were dependent upon him. No work, no clothing except what Lutheran World Relief gave him, pitifully inadequate rations from the United Nations! The only home he could afford was one damp room, packed with 13 people. One child soon perished, another contracted tuberculosis, the others grew thinner and thinner. From time to time Lutheran World Relief provided some food and clothing. We did what we could.

Then suddenly Mohammed's father—heart collapsed because the burden was too great. The widow and surviving children came to appeal to me for help. Of course, help was given—by you, Reuben; by the good people who gave the money to you to give to me. These Muslims (the family Khaleel) felt a Christian caress in the outstretched helping hands—your hands, really; they heard voices speaking comfort and compassion in the example of the great Comforter—your voices, really. Your money is being changed at the Bank of God

(Continued on page 15.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH. Elon College, N. C.

The Actions of the Convention in the Interest of Elon College

The forty-first biennial session of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches convened at the Bethlehem Church, Nansemond County, Virginia, April 27-29. There was, as usual, a good representation of the pastors of the Convention and a fair representation of the laymen and laywomen of the Convention, and a large number of visitors. The church was filled to overflowing for most of the sessions, and was fairly well filled for the closing session on Thursday, which is unusual and very encouraging.

There was expressed interest in all items of concern of the Convention. Differences of opinion were expressed, but a fine Christian spirit prevailed.

The program opened Tuesday afternoon with the enrollment of delegates, the appointment of committees and a worship service by Dr. W. C. Timmons, chaplain, of Southern Pines. Various reports were given without discussion, to be voted on later. Dr. W. M. Stevens, president of the Convention gave a brief but forceful address on the nature of the church which has been printed in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

For the evening session, the laymen met in Suffolk Church banquet hall for a banquet and an address by President Samuel N. Stevens of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa. The ladies of the Suffolk Church served a delicious and sumptuous banquet, as they always do. President Stevens gave a challenging and telling address on the subject, "Tomorrow's Challenge to Christian Higher Education." There were 250 men present who listened attentively through the address to the last word. He also spoke pending the adoption of the report of Elon College on the topic, "The Redemptive Character of Christian Education." Seldom, if ever, has anyone addressed the Southern Convention with equal force, power and eloquence.

This is not to be a report, however, on the entire program of the Convention but to mention some items that are of interest to Elon College.

The report of the college dealt with conditions on the campus and with achievements during the biennium then closing. By vote, the Convention urged the completion of the Two and One Half Million Dollar Campaign which is now slightly past the half-way mark. It is to be completed by December 31, 1955. It also authorized the Convention to cooperate with the administration of the college to join in organization and a complete program for the conduct of the campaign. The intent of this action is that the officials of the Convention, the officials of the Board of Trustees, together with representatives of the faculty, conferences and other representatives, should be brought together for the purpose of planning the program and giving direction for the securing of the funds.

The resolutions to approve the application of the Board of Trustees to the proper authorities of the United States Government for a loan of $650,000.00 with which to construct two dormitories and a dining room on Elon College's campus provoked considerable discussion. There was a difference of opinion as to the advisability of securing a loan from the government, as would be expected, but after a thorough discussion, the Convention voted approving the loan. This is no guarantee that the loan will be obtained. For the assurance of those who question the safety of the college in securing such a loan, they may be doubly sure that the assets of Elon College will not be endangered in guaranteeing the payment of the loan. Of course, the college must comply with the usual requirements in getting such a loan, but the total interest of the college will be safeguarded.

In September, the college will begin its sixty-fifth year of operation without interruption. The founding of Elon College was authorized by an extraordinary session of the Southern Christian Convention meeting in Old Providence Church, Graham, North Carolina, September, 1890. It is both proper and historically correct that Founders Day be observed annually. September 21, 1954 has been designated by the Convention as Founders Day and directed that appropriate services be held on that occasion. The Convention authorities and college officials will determine a program for that day to which, it is hoped, all of our ministers in the Southern Convention and representatives from every local church, as well as the alumni of the college will be in attendance.

The program outlined for Elon College by the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches in session at Bethlehem Church is a tremendous one. If carried through to completion, it will not only mean the life of the church, but its efficiency and effectiveness as it operates in the field of Christian higher education. To realize these achievements, careful planning, tactful and complete presentation and a world of down right hard work will be required. To this end, it is the hope and the prayer of all that there may be perfect understanding and complete cooperation in behalf of our college and our church.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

There are so many calls for the few dollars that individuals earn today that caution, fairness, ingenuity and charity are required in deciding how much of the dollar should be given and to what causes the gifts should go to support. As the earner is wrestling with the foregoing questions, he should not forget to tabulate the number of dollars that he has, for usually he has more than one. The more dollars that he has, the more he has to contribute.

I had a friend who began tithing with a salary of $75.00 a month. He lived to see the day when his earnings were considerable. As we talked about a Christian's obligation to support his church and its institutions and other community and benevolent causes, he remarked, "It was much easier to tithe when my income was small than it is now that my income is proportionately large."

This doubtless is the experience of many of us. We should be reminded, however, that a man's gift to the causes of Christ and to his church are determined not by the amount that he gives but by the amount that he has after he has given. Truly, the individuals of wealth on that far away day when the Lord himself stood by the treasury, cast in much out of their abundance, but when the poor widow gave her mites, the Lord

(Continued on page 11.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

The New Manual

One of the bits of fine "advertising" Miss Margaret Hargrove did while in our area for the Rallies was concerning the new edition of the Manual issued for the women of our churches. It costs 25 cents and may be ordered from the National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

A statement from the Manual that puts meaning into our women's organizations and their work is given in the center box on this page. You may wish to use it in one of your local meetings.

The Manual contains a section on "Our Purpose," one on "Our Task," "The Local Fellowship," and a section on each of the widening groups until "The World Fellowship." Also, there is a sample constitution for a local group, and a list of helps for women's work and where they may be secured.

The work of the local fellowship is divided into these sections: Organization, fellowship, worship, education, giving, friendly service, and action. The essential points under each are discussed briefly.

One item which will interest some of our group is "The Church Woman's Benevolence Dollar," showing where our money (as a national average) goes.

If you do not have a copy of the Manual, or if you would like to have a 1954 edition, a quarter spent for it will prove to be a good investment.

* * * * *

Bethlehem in the Valley

"Bethlehem" is a familiar word to our church people—of course, we remember that Bethlehem in Palestine, where, 1900 years ago, Jesus was born. And there are five churches with that name within the Southern Convention.

The Bethlehem Church in the Valley of Virginia has, within the year, moved into a beautiful new brick building, next to the stone church built long, long ago. The Rev. Ralph Galt and his family live not far away in a beautiful location among the "hills." Mrs. Galt, who lived with her husband in China before this Valley pastorate, is doing an excellent job of planning with the women of Bethlehem and the other churches her husband serves.

Mrs. J. S. Sellers of Bethlehem has recently sent for publication in THE Unto Us Are Entrusted the Most Precious Things!

Unto us as church women are entrusted the most precious things in the world. It is ours to cherish and to nourish all that is best in human life and experience. The church is our bulwark; God is our source of strength and inspiration. And yet in a most marvelous way, he is dependent upon us to do his work in the world—dependent upon our human hearts and minds and hands. In the brief moment of time in which we are privileged to live in this challenging world, what a task is ours to perform, what a high service to discharge!

As organizations of church women our purpose is to cultivate the spirit of Christ, beginning with our own lives and reaching out into home and community and the uttermost parts of the earth.

A new consciousness of the importance of daily life in the places where we live is coming to us all. It is in the home and the community that solutions to world problems will be found. If world peace becomes a reality, it will be because you and I cultivate good relations with our neighbors and live at peace with our towns-folk of every race and creed. If the world church becomes a great force for righteousness, it will be because you and I serve loyally and enthusiastically and wisely in our local churches, and then extend our efforts in the state, the nation, and the world.

—From the "Manual" published by the National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women.

SUN a list of the things the women of her church have done and are doing:

1. Thank Offering bank of the world to go to Philippine Islands.
2. Ladies led Thank Offering service in church.
3. Christmas baskets to shut-ins.
4. Bible study of the Psalms.
5. Clothing for Church World Service.
6. Led worship services for Women's Conference.
7. Send cards to the ill.
8. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Foltz are leading the young people of the church.

Stories from India

Here are stories of three children who have come under the influence of Miss Oline Nicholson, who represents us in India, as told in her Christmas letter:

"These faces will glow in the light of their first experience of Christmas. LITTLE ISAAC will be holding his lamp very carefully as he hippity-hops down the aisle. He was very nearly turned away in June when his grandmother begged us to admit him in school. We do not have either the money or accommodations to admit boys as well as girls. His two sisters came to us last year. The parents are dead. They come from the famine area. Isaac had polio, which had left him a cripple—just able to move around, not able to climb up and down steps. When he looked up at us with his big wistful eyes and scrambled across the porch on the little sticks of legs, our hearts turned over, and Isaac became one more "co-ed" in our girls' school. Now, six-months later, he walks and even runs. When his grandmother came to see him lately and he ran across the compound she burst into tears of joy. His extra food and milk had made the difference. No, we don't admit boys—well, hardly ever!

"MURUGESAN stood by the side of a bus, begging, as I sat at the central bus stand waiting for the bus to start. He was dressed in a long, ragged bus driver's coat which hung to his heels. His hair was a sunburned brown, his face was dirty, but his grin was wide. When he asked for money, I told him what I have told beggar children for twenty years, 'No, I don't give money to beggars, but if you want an education, I will give you that.' To my surprise, Murugesan beamed on me and said, 'Yes, that is just what I want. Before my parents died I studied in the first class.' When I asked him where he lived, he pointed to a stone bench at the bus stand and said, 'There.' 'But you must tell someone where you're going, if you go with me,' I protested. 'Oh, no, there is only my sister, and she does not care. She begs, too.' I saw his sister, and she refused to come with us. Thus Murugesan came to Ranchy. We haven't been the same since! Wherever anything is happening, there you will find him. He is always on the doorstep to meet you on your return from town, and often with a take me with you expression whenever the van goes any-

(Continued on page 15.)

Report to the Southern Convention of the Committee on Finance

In order that our churches may the better work on a regular benevolence budget system, your Finance Committee has endeavored to devise a plan for reducing the number of special appeals. To that end it has been necessary to increase the apportionment to a more realistic figure. You will note that the total Annual Apportionment recommended for the Convention causes, National Home Missions and Foreign Missions, is $143,000. Since the total contributed in the Conference Year 1952-53 was $130,013 for these causes, we believe the increase is not beyond our ability, if we will take seriously the principles of Christian Stewardship. You will note that the budget provides for the employment of a Stewardship and Evangelism Secretary, who we hope may be on the job before the fall of 1954. We urge the conferences and churches to undertake joyfully the apportionments recommended.

We recommend the following Annual Apportionments and Budget for the 1954-56 Biennium—effective with the Conference Year 1954-55, and in order that the churches may be advised in advance of the conference sessions of the increased apportionments, we recommend that the Conference Executive Committees and Apportionment Committees take the proper action thereon:

Apportionments.

Convention Home Missions and Church Extension Fund, $20,000, plus $3,750 from Women, $23,750.

Christian Orphanage, $20,000, plus Specials of $25,000, $45,000.

Elon College, $35,000.

Christian Education, $6,000.

Convention Fund, $25,000.

Ministerial Scholarships, $1,500.

CHRISTIAN SUN, $5,000.

Per Capita Dues, $7,000.

National Home Missions and Ministerial Relief, $11,000, plus Women, $3,750, $14,750.

Foreign Missions, $12,500, Women, $7,500, $20,000.

Totals, Conference, $143,000; from other sources, $47,500; grand total, $190,500.

It should be noted that the Convention H. M. and C. Ex. Fund includes total Mission Board administrative expenses currently shared by National Home Missions and Foreign Missions. It will make for better bookkeeping if these expenses are carried in one fund.

Recommendations.

1. We recommend that the $143,000 be apportioned to the conferences and distributed as follows (effective with Conference Year 1954-55):

Convention Home Missions and Church Extension: Valley, $1,700; Eastern Virginia, $7,400; Eastern N. C., $2,360; Western N. C., $1,700; N. C.-Va., $6,840; total, $20,000.

Christian Orphanage: Valley, $1,280; Eastern Va., $5,400; Eastern N. C., $4,300; Western N. C., $2,020; N. C.-Va., $7,000; total $20,000.

Elon College: Valley, $2,240; Eastern Va., $12,953; Eastern N. C., $4,900; Western N. C., $2,660; N. C.-Va., $12,247; total $35,000.

Christian Education: Valley, $495; Eastern Va., $2,175; Eastern N. C., $803; Western N. C., $495; N. C.-Va., $2,032; total, $6,000.

Convention Fund: Valley, $2,000; Eastern Va., $8,575; Eastern N. C., $3,350; Western N. C., $2,500; N. C.-Va., $8,575; total, $25,000.

Ministerial Scholarship: Valley, $125; Eastern Va., $500; Eastern N. C., $225; Western N. C., $150; N. C.-Va., $500; total, $1,500.

Christian Sun: Valley, $375; Eastern Va., $1,750; Eastern N. C., $625; Western N. C., $500; N. C.-Va., $1,750; total, $5,000.

Per Capita Dues: Valley, $532; Eastern Va., $2,373; Eastern N. C., $1,183; Western N. C., $805; N. C.-Va., $2,107; total, $7,000.

National Home Missions and Ministerial Relief: Valley, $935; Eastern Va., $4,070; Eastern N. C., $1,300; Western N. C., $935; N. C.-Va., $3,760; total, $11,000.

Foreign Missions: Valley, $1,072; Eastern Va., $4,281; Eastern N. C., $1,429; Western N. C., $1,072; N. C.-Va., $4,645; total, $12,500.

Totals: Valley, $10,754; Eastern Va., $49,477; Eastern N. C., $20,475; Western N. C., $12,837; N. C.-Va., $49,457; total, $143,000.

2. We recommend an Annual Operating Budget of $29,500, effective January 1, 1955, for Convention Leadership, Promotion, Stewardship and Evangelism Secretary, and the Convention Office, to be administered by the Executive Board of the Convention.

Proposed sources of income: The Convention Fund, $25,000; Board of Christian Education, $4,500; total, $29,500.

3. We recommend that the Board of Publications prepare an annual budget and subsidy schedule for the publishing of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and to present same to the Executive Board for approval.

4. It is recommended that boards and institutions pay the amounts specified for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the Operating Budget of the Convention Office in monthly installments; and that appropriations from boards and institutions begin January 1, 1955, and run through the fiscal year ending December 31, 1956.

5. Elon College has made commendable progress and advancement. Our college has served our constituency well. The place of the denominational college and the church in higher Christian education has never been in greater need of support. Our support of Elon College needs to be greater, both in material and human resources. It will be noted that the Sustaining Fund was set up as an emergency measure four years ago. In lieu of the Sustaining Fund as a "special" for the approaching biennium, we recommend an increased apportionment for Elon College. We recommend an annual apportionment of $35,000 for Elon College.

The Convention at its last session reaffirmed the special campaign for Elon College and approved increasing the campaign to $2,500,000. We urge the constituency of the Convention to cooperate with the college authorities in the campaign to raise these necessary funds, that our college may be strengthened.

6. The Christian Orphanage. We recommend an annual apportionment of $20,000 for the Christian Orphanage, and that the Convention authorize the orphanage to raise during the Orphanage Period an "Authorized Special" of $25,000 annually from the Convention constituency for the rehabilitation of buildings and current budget purposes, such "Authorized Special" gifts from the Convention churches, organizations and individuals to be channeled through the Southern Convention Office and credited to the churches in a special column of The Annual. We recommend that this "Authorized Special" be a ceiling on special funds raised from the church constituency of the Convention for current operations.

We further recommend that the Convention authorize the Christian Orphanage to raise $20,000 per year
(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Mother's Day comes again with each person having a different view of his own mother. Some folk remember her right at that time, rush out and buy a box of candy or a card and have done their duty! Others give her a lavish meal, served in bed, wash dishes and clean, and then forget until the next May. Mother's Day ought to be often. Dr. House liked to tell about his mother, a very wonderful woman who is still living, but not very well. She was a school teacher and she taught her son at home, in the kitchen. He learned the multiplication tables amid the bread making and cake baking and could recite the tables and recipes slightly mixed! He recalled the things she did that brought joy to his heart and those of his brothers: she sang, mostly hymns; she read the Bible aloud and answered many questions with a Scripture quotation; she went to church every time services were held, and she helped to carry the program of Pope's Chapel Church. By telling this, I pay tribute to a godly woman.

My own mother followed such a plan too. She never taught public school but taught primary children in Newport News Church for many years. She was a good story teller, musician and artistic, and she knew what boys and girls liked. Through her leadership a great many people served the church. One young man became a minister and a young lady became the president of the Woman's Convention. And I guess if she hadn't turned my feet into the right path I would never have written this page!

But what of your mother? You can't write about it for this week's issue as I have done. How can you describe her? Do you feel her love all the year, and not just on Mother's Day? Of course! Mothers were made to kiss and heal, patch and peel, love and protect, guide and hide.

The story is told of a mother who got on a bus with two little boys. She was a plain, ordinary, everyday sort of mother and no one paid much attention to her. One of her sons sat by the window, she sat in the middle, and the smaller boy partly on her lap and on the remaining bit of seat. As they rode along the little boy glanced at her and said, "Mother, I love you!" His mother gave him a big smile, and people all over the bus felt better because a little boy said: "Mother, I love you."

* * * * *

Train!

By JANICE A. McDONALD.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Do you live near a railroad and wish you didn't for your own sake or the children's? Do you realize the intense pleasure children find in being near trains?

From the time the child is able to say "Choo-choo," Train is something to love, to be happy and excited about, to be in awe of. Train is a big, black wonder, to watch in the distance as a small speck, to watch and listen to as it approaches the station, and to continue watching until it is only a small, black spot in the opposite direction. No matter if it is the huffing, puffing steam engine, the lady-like smooth electric train, or the heavy, speeding, roaring Diesel, Train is a joy to the child.

Do you remember how, as a child, you thrilled if someone, anyone, waved to you from a train window, especially if it was the Engineer! Perhaps it was a wave from this important person that later gave your little boy the ambition to be an engineer.

But we haven't mentioned the freight train. The child loves it. No people to see here, but each car is different, and in a different color: red, yellow, and dark brown. The little boy enjoys their slowness. In trips in the car with his daddy and mommie, he thrills in anticipation when two huge black and white arms are lowered from the sky, forming a gate, because the freight train is coming. If he is a very young child he will sit and admire. The older children count the cars.

A ride on a train is an enthralling experience to any child. He will be as quiet as you could want when sitting next to the window watching the world go by. Do you remember the thrill you had watching railroad tracks slide together and then part? The little boy at the window hasn't forgotten the time another train came by. He had waved. Then suddenly, the people in the other train were gone. How surprised he had been when he discovered that his own train had stopped!

Not many children know the joy of eating on a train, or the excitement of sleeping in a Pullman berth. What wonder it brings to the child to see a seat being made into a bed, to put his clothes into a hammock, to complete the solitary, lovely privacy of his own room with the big, dark green curtains!

Maybe Train is an intellectual thing, as well, with your little boy. Perhaps he is talking now in such an adult manner that he has you thrilled. "He knows more about a train than I do!" proud mothers say. "He can tell me everything!" Little boys of four and five often have this amazing accomplishment. Wisely and seriously they tell friends, or strangers, about the parts of the train, the kinds of trains, and their functions. They are well informed about their friend.

Train! Children love it. It is a big spot in the life of any child who sees one close at hand. But children grow. Some day, Train, that used to make the boy's heart beat wildly, his cheeks glow, his eyes widen, may become instead a convenient and efficient means of transportation, something to check for accuracy of running time. Business will then be the important thing; train will be written in small letters. Today, when his train comes, the boy, now a man, will sink into his half of the seat to read his paper or talk with his neighbor about sports or the world situation, or his garden, or some radio or television program, or maybe—in an amused, proud voice—of the thrill and joy that his little son gets out of coming to watch Train!

We believe the time has come for America to restudy the doctrine of the Separation of Church and State, especially as it pertains to our public schools, to determine whether the law of the land requires the complete divorce of Christianity from our national institutions. If it does, we face the loss of all that is richest and best in our national heritage.

—James DeForest Murch.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Tips from Tom

Here is the report of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship Rally in Burlington, N. C., on April 24, as covered by your columnist.

Night session, meeting called to order at 7 o'clock, after picnic supper at Moonelon. Winchester, Virginia, young people led inspiring opening worship service. President Phil Mann called for reports from secretary and treasurer, which were given and approved. Called for delegates from churches to stand by conferences. Valley of Virginia was represented with over 40 delegates, who travelled over 250 miles to the meeting, showing great interest on their part.

Called for conference presidents to stand. They stood.

Rev. John S. Graves gave overnight assignments. Many worried youth relieved. Everyone placed somewhere. Everyone slept. John gave his own apartment as "Old Maids' Home" for women delegates.

Report of Nominating Committee, Lois Scott, chairman, reporting, recommended officers for next year except for president. Tom Madren nominated Lois Scott for president from the floor, after small campaign speech. Recommended officers, with nomination were passed, approved and unanimously elected by vote of delegates. Congratulations.

Pattie Lee stood up, spoke few but important words, suggested we give Ex-President Phil Mann thanks for his splendid work in past years. Every one applauded. Phil blushed. Curtis Young taught and led the group in the official handclap of the P. F.'ers in appreciation of the services of Phil. Youth Page Editor Madren got up to say a few words. He urged each group to elect a reporter and send in news for the page. Please do. His words ended up in a filibuster.

Other business: National Council at New Haven, Conn., in June. Officers meeting in July.

Someone moved that we adjourn. Everyone else moved also. We adjourned to the Recreation Hall where Rev. Hank Harman and Miss Laverne Brady led the group in stunts and games. The evening closed with singing and the closing prayer by Miss Brady.

We went to our guest homes for the night to return for services on Sunday morning. Installation of new officers. Communion service conducted by Dr. Henry E. Robinson.

The delegates returned to share experiences with their home groups, and to prepare for the next biennial meeting of the Southern Convention youth.

This does not by any means cover all that was done at this meeting. The writeup by the convention reporter will be given next week.

* * * * *

Palm Sunday Pageant and Easter Service at Rosemont

On Palm Sunday, April 11, the youth of Rosemont Christian Church presented an Easter Pageant. Those participating in the pageant were: Robert Carawan as Jesus, Bobby Yates as Peter, Charles Phelps and Louis Platt as Roman Guards, Bucky Flenning as Judas, Jimmy Hodges, Ralph Haywood and Richard Gladstone as Priests, Audrey DeBaun as Mary, Mrs. Frank Wentz as Mary Magdalene, Doris Jean West, Gayle Ainsley and Patsy Trotman as Angels, and Ellen Hewitt, Connie Forehand, Margaret Anne Milteer, Freddie Congleton and Julian Worrell as Palm Bearers.

The Narrator was Beauford Dobbs. Music was rendered by the Youth Choir with solos by Diane Small, Betty Lou Morrison, Carol Richardson, Richard Milteer and Bill Neill. The pageant was under the direction of Mrs. Herbert Fisher and the choir of Mrs. Royall Gallup. Mrs. Frank Goforth was the organist.

The pageant was enjoyed by an outstanding crowd and proved a fine portrayal of the last week of Christ's life on earth.

The Easter Sunrise Service was held at 5:40 Sunday morning and was sponsored by the youth of the church. Those taking part in the program were: Russell Johnson as leader; Ellen Hewitt, who read a poem; Betty Ruth Carden, who read the scripture lesson, and Richard Milteer, who led in prayer.

The guest speaker for the service was Donald Traylor, a ministerial student at Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Virginia. He gave a very inspiring talk on "Christ—Yesterday, Today and Forever." The music was rendered by the Youth Choir.

After the service, doughnuts and coffee were served in the Recreation Hall of the church.

DONNA LITCHFIELD, Sec'y,
Senior Youth Fellowship.

* * * * *

Easter Sunrise Service at Union Grove

The Youth Fellowship of the Union Grove Congregational Christian Church sponsored the Easter Sunrise Service on Easter Sunday with a very good attendance, including visitors from nearby churches in the community.

The guest speaker for this service was Gale Brady of Pleasant Grove Christian Church, near Asheboro. Gale is a young ministerial student preparing in study at Elon College.

The youth group conducted a very inspiring and interesting program. The service was concluded at the cemetery.

FARREL WILSON,
Reporter.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

said that she had given more than all the rest, in that she gave her all.

We should not hesitate to give out of what we have, whether it be much or little, but what we have left after we have given under the blessing of Almighty God will be greater by far than what might seem to be our abundance in selfishness. If all should lay aside on the first day of every week as the Lord has prospered them, there would be plenty to spare for all the causes, institutions and boards of our church.

Previously reported	$ 2,446.11
Eastern N. C. Conference:
New Hope	$ 30.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Holland	$ 56.00
Isle of Wight	4.00
Spring Hill S. S.	3.40
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Pleasant Grove	$ 20.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Wood's Chapel S. S.	5.00
	118.40
Total to date	$ 2,564.40

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Elijah Rebukes Ahab"

LESSON VII—MAY 16, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Thou shalt not covet."—Exodus 20:17.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: I Kings 21.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 32.

A Covetous King.

This man, and king, Ahab had a palace, a garden, and broad acres of good and fruitful land. But he wanted more. He was covetous, greedy and grasping. Near his holdings there was a small vineyard owned by a man named Naboth. Ahab thought this vineyard would make him a lovely garden. So he demanded it of Naboth. He thought that, as a king, he would over-ride the rights of a private citizen and get what he wanted.

This demand on Ahab's part was not only an example of covetousness; it was the beginning of a transition from small peasant ownership of the land to that of large estates. It was an example of that pattern of action which in all the centuries has sought to increase the holdings of a few at the expense of the many, of the movement from the ownership by freemen of small land holdings, to the ownership of large tracts of land by the few.

Perhaps its most recent expression is the program of "collectivism" or "collective farms" in the Communist system in Russia and in the satellite countries. It is a dangerous tendency.

A Sentimental Man.

Naboth refused to sell his vineyard. He probably could have got a good price for it. He was not being very cooperative about the matter—so it would seem. After all, Ahab was the king, and he was but a poor peasant. And the money would have come in handy if he wanted to buy another bit of land. But this man had some sentiment in his nature. He felt that there were some things that did not have a price tag on them. That vineyard had been left him as an inheritance from his father. There was a sentimental value attached to it. He did not want to part with it, certainly not to gratify the whim of a king.

Furthermore, he refused on religious grounds. "Jehovah forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee!"

There is something spine-tingling here if you get the full import of it. Here was a man, perhaps a poor man, daring to assert the rights of a free man concerning property, and daring to refuse a king the right to take it. "You may be king, but I am a free man, and you have no right to my property," said this heroic man. Of course, there are occasions when the state or the government, or even a municipality can, and must condemn land or property in the interests of public safety or welfare. But this was not one of them. We are living in a period when not only in other countries, but in our own country, the rights of free citizens are being infringed upon, and when the "little fellow" is being threatened by great corporations and monopolies. Let every man stand fast in the liberty wherewith our Constitution sets him free.

There are those of us who know that there are some things that are not for sale. We have trinkets, possessions, heirlooms, that do not have a price tag on them—they are inheritances of our fathers and our mothers, and they do not have any money value on them. We would not sell them for anything.

A Sulky Child.

Ahab knew that Naboth was right. Even as a king, he respected the man's rights. It seemed as if there was nothing that he could do about it. So what did he do? He went home, went to bed, and sulked like a little boy that had been denied a stick of candy. He turned his face to the wall and would not eat. Look at him! Listen at him! Here he was, a king with almost everything a man could desire, and yet sulking, sniffing, because he could not have one more little piece of property. Having so much, he wanted more. And lacking the one little thing he could not have, he was unhappy in spite of the much that he did have. He was like us, wasn't he? Countless people who have so much for which to be thankful, are wretched and unhappy and sulky because there is some little thing which they do not have. Some folks, big in stature can be small in spirit.

A Scheming Woman.

Jezebel, Ahab's wife, was made of sterner stuff. When she wanted a thing, she knew how to get it. To be sure, she was not troubled about the ethics of how she got it. Like so many people today, getting what she wanted was the main thing—morals did not count. "Get up from there, you cry-baby," she said in so many words. "The idea of you, a king, sniffing and sulking like a little child because a poor peasant won't sell you a piece of land! You ought to be ashamed of yourself." And forthwith she proposed a plan. It was simple enough. Proclaim a great festival, set Naboth on high, secure a couple of smooth liars to prefer charges of blasphemy against him, have him convicted of treason, put him to death, and then because of his treason (alleged) confiscate his property. Easy did it! "Come on, big boy, let's get going."

The plan, shrewdly conceived, was quickly executed. Naboth was accused of blaspheming God and the king, was given a travesty of a trial, was condemned, and was stoned to death. When word of this had been brought to Jezebel, she said to Ahab, "Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth, for Naboth is not alive, but dead." It was as simple as that. Or was it?

A Courageous Prophet.

Jezebel was not the only one who got word about Naboth's death. Elijah, the prophet, also heard about it. And the spirit of the living God told him it was time to act. Great issues were at stake. Here was a denial of everything that the character of God and the moral law of the universe stood for. Something had to be done, and he was the one to do it. It took courage, seeds of courage to do it, but Elijah had what it took. When the old king went down to take a look at his new piece of property, there stood the shaggy-haired old prophet barring the way. What a dramatic scene it is. Here is evil-doing facing righteousness, here is guilt facing Conscience Incarnate! Here is the whole method of seeking pleasure, or making profit in ways that God does not approve, being brought to judgment and having the cup of joy dashed from its

(Continued on page 14.)

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

(Continued from page 9.)

from non-Convention sources for building rehabilitation purposes.

7. The Mission Board. We recommend an annual apportionment of $20,000 for Convention Home Missions and Church Extension; $11,000 for National Home Missions and Ministerial Relief; and $12,500 for Foreign Missions, these funds to be supplemented by the generous gifts from the Woman's Missionary Convention as shown above.

We further recommend an annual "Authorized Special" for Foreign Missions of $7,500, such "Authorized Special" to be channeled through the Convention Office and credited to the churches in The Annual.

In view of the fact that the quota for the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign of $135,000 has not been subscribed, and since the churches of the Convention will need aid from our Congregational Christian Church Building Society if they are to expand their facilities as needed, and further since it is a matter of self-respect that we pay our full quota to the CBLF, we recommend that the Mission Board be permitted to seek "Declarations of Purpose" from the churches not having yet made declarations, and to complete the quota of $135,000.

8. We recommend that all churches be urged to raise their Missions and Benevolent Funds through a budget, supported by the Every Member Canvass, for their entire Conference Apportionments. Churches which do not raise their entire apportionments by this budget should receive a special offering for Missions at Easter, a special Thanksgiving Offering for the Orphanage, a special Christmas Offering for Ministerial Relief, and a special offering for Elon College during the College Period. Until the regular contributions are sufficient to meet apportionments, churches should seek to raise the apportionments in full by seeking special gifts from individuals.

9. We recommend the continuance of the present plan of regular monthly offerings for Missions and the Orphanage, and the Fifth Sunday offering for Elon College, to be taken by Sunday schools, until the amount of the apportionment for each shall be raised in full, thereafter all benevolent contributions from the Sunday schools should be allotted to the other items of apportionments which have not been raised in full. Contributions from Sunday schools should be forwarded through the designated channels and credited on the respective Conference apportionments.

It is recommended that all contributions from churches, church organizations, and from individuals from churches be credited either to apportionment or "Authorized Special" and so reported in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and The Annual. When apportionment and/or "Authorized Special" is reached, that fact should be noted and observed, with no other appeals. Approved capital and permanent funds may be sought from individuals, but not through churches or church organizations, except as they may have special approval of the Convention or the Executive Board.

10. We recommend that the Orphanage, the Mission Board and Elon College be authorized to make appeals for contributions, each during the periods herein designated, as follows: Elon College—January, February, September and October; Missions—March, April, May and June; Orphanage—November and December; that Communion offerings may be received for Ministerial Relief; and that at Christmas a special offering may be taken for the "Christmas Fund for Veterans of the Cross," said offering to be forwarded to the Division of Ministerial Relief of the Board of Home Missions, New York, as an emergency fund and extra appropriation to the superannuates. It is recommended that the practice of making appeals to churches, Sunday schools and auxiliaries for material or financial gifts at other times during the periods designated, be discontinued.

11. We recommend that the Board of Christian Education be authorized to appeal for offerings on Children's Day from Sunday schools, and from individuals during July and August.

We recommend that all funds contributed by churches, church organizations, or by individuals of churches of the Convention be credited to their churches, be transmitted to the Convention Treasurer through the Convention Office; that the Convention Office report such gifts to the secretary of the Conference in which the local church holds membership; and that each local church be furnished with quarterly reports of all funds sent from that church for Convention enterprises, together with the balances due.

12. During the past biennium several churches have followed the practice of sending contributions to the Convention Office with the request that they be distributed proportionately to all apportionment items. We commend these churches in this practice and recommend it to all of the churches of the Convention for their favorable consideration.

13. The Finance Committee was requested to prepare a formula whereby Conference Apportionment Committees might work out the distribution to the churches of the various benevolence items adopted by the Convention as the part each respective Conference should have in raising Convention benevolences. Such a formula has been prepared, based upon the previous record of the local church, for a three-year period, as to membership, amounts raised for Convention benevolences, and the amount spent on church expense. This formula is available upon request to the Convention Office.

14. The Southern Convention Office and the treasurer of the Convention have submitted regular statements of the accounts to the chairman and to the Executive Board. These financial records have been audited by Owen, Hogan and McMillan, C. P. A., Burlington, N. C. We recommend that the financial report of the Southern Convention Office and the treasurer be approved as audited.

STANLEY C. HARRELL,
Chairman.

Geo. D. Cloclough, Clyde W. Gordon, A. H. McIver, S. H. Basnight, K. B. Dofflemeyer, S. H. Pell, I. L. McDowell, Mrs. H. S. Hardecastle, S. T. Holland.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to exempt from income tax the rental allowance given a minister by a church in lieu of furnishing him with a parsonage. Under the present law, a clergyman need not include in his taxable income the rental value of a parsonage furnished him by the congregation he serves. Several bills have been introduced in Congress to provide for tax exemption of rental allowance. Failure to make such provision, the sponsors assert, subjects to unjust discrimination pastors of small or new parishes which are not able to afford a parsonage. The rental allowance would be tax-exempt only if the church specifically earmarked the sum, and only to the extent actually used for rent payments.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Report of the Sunday school offerings did not come in this week because of the extra work which had to be done in the Southern Convention office, mimeographing the "Blue Book" and getting ready for the recent sessions of the Convention at Bethlehem in Eastern Virginia.

The work of the Convention office is a considerable load at all times, but just ahead of the biennial sessions of the Southern Convention it is a very, very heavy load. I have enough office work to know that it can pile up. I suspect that few of us realize how much does go on, keeping the records, reports and preparing materials and reports for the many departments of the church in our Convention office. I wish here to express my appreciation. The office called me and was willing to put in still more extra time if absolutely necessary in order that the Sunday school funds come to us this week.

I am just back in my office from attending the Convention. The host church and its pastor did an excellent job entertaining the Convention. The officials did a good job and are to be commended on the program presented. The guest speakers helped to bring the Convention to a high degree of information and inspiration. It was a pleasure to see so many of our pastors, I believe most of them were there, and such a large number of our friends from churches throughout the Convention area.

It was good to get back home safely and find everything in good shape here. The matrons and children were well and happy, and the gardens and crops were growing. I am most grateful for a staff that carries on when I am away, and seems to rise to the needs of the occasion.

Let me call your attention to the fact that school will be out soon and children will be asking about their vacations. If you or your class, church or group are expecting to give a boy or girl a vacation, it would be well for you to decide what week in the summer you prefer to help the child and let us know. Others may beat you to it. You may select any week or two weeks if you so desire, but let us know as soon as you can so we can have it all fixed up and at the same time save ourselves countless questions along the way.

A good thing for some of our boys and girls would be the church camps under the auspices of our denomination, as well as some other approved camps. Let us know your wishes, and at the same time make some boy or girl happy.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR APRIL 29, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Ladies' Missionary Society, Pleasant Grove (W. N. C.) Church, Shoes and Clothing.

Miss Olga Long, Mebane, N. C., Clothing and buttons.

J. R. Still, Asheboro, N. C., Clothing

Mrs. Ethel Burgess, Leaksville, N. C., Coupons.

Mrs. W. J. Norfleet and Virginia Norfleet, Holland, Va., Shoes and Clothing.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Colicchio, Burlington, N. C., show tickets.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 4,764.54
(No report this week)

Grand total $ 4,764.54

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $11,828.70

Woman's Fellowship, Shallow Ford Christian Ch. $ 25.00

Woman's Missionary Society, Auburn Christian Ch. 5.00

Mrs. Pulley, Richmond, Va. 2.00

Johnson's Grove Christian Ch., Easter Offering .. 13.40

In Memory of Judge James L. McLeMore, Sr. 5.00

Special Gifts 72.44

122.84

Grand total $11,951.54

Total for the week $ 122.84

Total for the year $16,716.08

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

Half in anger, and half in anguish, the king cries out, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Just when he planned to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, he met the day of judgment in the person of that prophet of God. God is not mocked. Be sure that your sins will find you out. When a man sows, what he sows, that shall he also reap. And what he reaps matches the seed he sowed, it may be many years before.

Divine Judgment.

Swiftly, bluntly, courageously, Elijah pronounced judgment and doom upon Ahab and his wife and his house. He would lose his kingdom and his household would be cut off from Israel. Jezebel, his wife, would meet a violent death, and would not have even the deencies of burial, but would be eaten by the dogs. All of these prophecies found speedy and almost literal fulfillment.

Kings may come and kings may go, but the moral law as embodied in Sinai stands forever. The wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

ISSUES NEW STAMP.

(Continued from page 3.)

people everywhere," said Postmaster General Summerfield. Previously, "In God We Trust" appeared on a special stamp of 1927, commemorating the 150th anniversary of Washington's winter at Valley Forge.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Study Made of Stewardship and Benevolent Giving

More than one-half of all the philanthropic giving in the United States goes to the nation's churches, according to the statement of the Rev. Thomas K. Thompson, executive director of the National Council of Churches' Department of Stewardship and Benevolence, made recently at a meeting held in Buck Hill Falls, Pa.

Of the total of four and a half billion dollars Americans give to philanthropies each year, approximately one billion, six hundred million goes to Protestant churches. Assuming that Roman Catholic and Jewish groups give on approximately the same basis, total church giving would be "well over two and a half billion dollars, or more than half," declared Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson spoke before a conference of 75 professional church fund raisers at the three-day semi-annual meeting of the Council department, which was in session April 22, 23 and 24, 1954.

The church executive predicted a 10 per cent gain in church giving throughout the United States during 1953. He based the prediction on preliminary figures gathered to date in an annual survey which will be completed by next November. The average church member's contribution in 1952, according to figures released last fall, was $41.94, an increase of 7.6 per cent over the previous year. Figures on church giving are based on a yearly survey among 46 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox communions, conducted by the National Council of Churches' Department of Research and Survey in cooperation with the Department of Stewardship and Benevolence.

Arnold C. Marts of New York, the president of Marts & Lundy, a fund raising organization, told the conference that the high percentage of church giving is due to the fact that "the church is the chief agency that systematically tries to teach people to give."

"Through all the teaching and preaching of the clergy runs the theme of stewardship," Mr. Marts said. "Man has what he possesses as but a steward of God and should use it to serve God and humanity. It is the church which alone carries the burden of persuading people to give unselfishly and systematically to altruistic activities."

F. Emerson Andrews, who directs philanthropic research for the Russell Sage Foundation, described the church as "the mother of philanthropy" and commented that "although some of the most generous givers confine their philanthropy to the church and church-related causes, it is clear that a substantial portion of present giving to all causes springs from religious motivation."

The fund raisers attending the meeting represented a total of 31 denominations. The sessions were presided over by Rev. James G. Patton of Atlanta, Georgia, secretary of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., and chairman of the stewardship and benevolence department.

REUBEN, the MONEY CHANGER.

(Continued from page 6.)

into living blood-bought people! Instances more or less like this happen every day.

One of our Arab Lutheran families was in dire need. We bought a little knitting machine and some wool and now one of the daughters is earning some money by knitting socks, pull-overs and sweaters. For another most needy Lutheran family in which the husband is blind, we bought a machine to manufacture macaroni. We are now his best customer for we use large quantities of this food in our Augusta Victoria Hospital. For still another Lutheran refugee we bought lead type for his rather primitive printing machine—etc, etc, etc.

As you know, Reuben, there are 890,000 refugees. There is no hunger of body and heart like unto theirs! There is no longing soul such as poignantly smoulders within them! Rightly understood, there is no investment of prayers, compassion and money which will yield such sheer fabulous dividends as the investment in these creatures who, just like us, are unspeakably precious to our blessed Redeemer.

For them, too, he came into the stream of human life; for them, too, he laid down his life upon the cross; for them, too, he rose from the dead and ascended into glory; for them, too, he is even now preparing an eternal place! Will they one dear day possess it?

What is our task, our responsibility? Isn't he counting pretty heavily on us, his church? What a grand institution is the Bank of God where we can change money into men! What a noble, blessed thing you did when you put the money into my hands! I'm simply your agent. That's why I have called you, "Reuben, the Money Changer."

Please give to your generous people our profound gratitude. Many will call them blessed for their great goodness.

I am closing with a fragment of poetry that I came upon some time ago. The theology may not be quite accurate but there's a wealth of truth in it anyway.

No man could tell me what my soul might be
I sought for God but God eluded me
I sought my brother out, and found all three.

Yours in faith and friendship,

EDWIN.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 8.)

where. He is very much liked by the staff and the girls and of course by us. He seems to be absolutely honest and is our office errand boy out of school hours. He has a good capacity for leadership—this lad whose home was a stone bench at the bus stand.

"MUTTULAKSHMI will celebrate her first Christmas as a Christian. She will be baptized in two weeks. She came to us two years ago, a girl of twelve, without parents and with a handicap of being born without any fingertips or toes above the second knuckles—except for her forefingers and thumbs which are normal. She has not let this handicap stop her from passing the 8th standard government examinations along with the other girls. However, now she cannot go to normal training with the others because of a government rule which prevents anyone with a physical disability from training as a teacher. She is studying in our weaving class, hoping to become an assistant weaver. She would be allowed to teach only in a school for the blind.

"Looking at each shining face as the girls and boys carol their song of light and joy in the celebration of the Birthday of Christ, I long to have you meet each one of them."

"Planting must be done in seed-time. Tending must be done in growing time. Harvesting must be done when the crop is ripe. We must make hay while the sun shines. We must live today for tomorrow."

From the Report of the Commission on Stewardship

The time was when there were so many things we did not know about Christian Stewardship and its purposes and possibilities, resolutions were drawn in an effort to stimulate research and trial. No longer is that so. No longer do we need to recommend and resolve on the Convention and Conference level, but to take what we know and begin practicing it on the local church level under the enthusiastic leadership of the local pastor, who can find abundant materials for any church situation and can secure good outside help for the efficient conduct of Stewardship Institutes and Canvasses. The following figures will prove how true this conclusion is.

Though we cannot compare progress by similar answers in past years, every church in the Convention was asked to answer two questions on its church report to Conference for 1953. The questions asked were: 1. Does your church have an annual budget? 2. Does your church have an annual Every Member Canvass? Here are the results:

Churches having budgets, 93; with no budget planned, 60; not answering, 34. Churches conducting annual Every Member Canvass, 54; no canvass, 98; not answering, 47.

This analysis clearly points out what our possibilities are. Whose fault is it that so little is being done in so many of our churches?

The Convention Office and your Stewardship Commission have cooperated in holding Stewardship Institutes for pastors, and in otherwise promoting the cause of Christian Stewardship. According to reports on hand, only one church which went all-out for a good institute and followed with a well-planned canvass, failed to reach its goal, and that shortage will be overcome through loose offerings. Such a program has been tried in every type of church, and it can be as successful in an open country church as in a city church. All it needs is a trial, followed up by sound educational principles. Stewardship is not a financial spasm to meet emergencies. It is a way of life, for all men, and for all churches.

We most heartily commend the action of the Convention in planning to employ a secretary of Stewardship and Evangelism. If the pastors will back this individual up and use him in our churches, a great many of the above figures can be changed to more favorable ones, and the financial needs of our total program can and will be met, and new souls born into the Kingdom.

We urge all pastors to begin now their plans for Stewardship Institutes and Canvasses in their churches this fall.

JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman.

Will B. O'Neill, F. C. Lester, Mark W. Andes, E. J. Rohart.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1954

NUMBER 19

Beverly Hills Breaks Ground for New Sanctuary

A ground breaking service was held at Beverly Hills Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., recently, in preparation for the beginning of their new sanctuary. The pastor, Rev. Walstein W. Snyder, is shown turning the first shovelfull of earth. This young church has made an outstanding record of growth in the past two years, and pastor and members merit congratulations.

News Flashes

Superintendent Wm. T. Scott will be the preacher at the Newport News Church on Sunday, May 16.

The total of Declarations of Purpose for the Church Building Loan Fund continues to grow. This week we report $1,442.00 from the Bethlehem Christian Church of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor.

Mrs. W. Stanley Carne, Mrs. Robert Lee House, Jonathan, Andrea Lee and Joyanna House, were present at First Church, Portsmouth, on May 8, when windows were dedicated as memorials to the Rev. W. Stanley Carne and Dr. Robert Lee House. Both of these men had served the church, Mr. Carne dying while pastor there. The plaques were given by the Women's Fellowship of the church, and appropriate dedicatory services were held by the pastor, Rev. William Smith.

A translation of the New Testament in modern colloquial Japanese was published in Tokyo on April 12. To mark the event, the Japan Bible Society held a reception in the Christian Center for representatives of all denominations. The new version was undertaken more than three years ago by a commission of six leading Japanese Christian scholars because of the vast changes in the Japanese language that have taken place since the war. The commission is now working on an Old Testament translation.

The Communist government of East Germany has given the German Evangelical Church Day movement permission to hold its annual rally of Protestant laymen in Leipzig, July 7 to 11, it has been announced. This is the first time that church laymen have had permission to convene since the war. Permission was conditional upon the church leaders' promise not to allow statements or action at the rally which could be interpreted as support to West German policy or otherwise contrary to the Communist government's national policy.

Dr. Sloan Observes Anniversary of His Ordination

Saturday, April 24, was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Dr. W. W.

Sloan's ordination to the Christian ministry. Mrs. Sloan entertained informally at their home in Elon College on the evening of the 24th, and the invited guests were Dr. and Mrs. John G. Truitt, Rev. and Mrs. Howard P. Bozarth, Rev. James M. Hess, and Superintendent and Mrs. Wm. T. Scott.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by those present when they recounted their many experiences leading up to their decision for the Christian ministry and to their experiences of ordination. The five ministers present added their years of ministry, and the total came to 163 years, the longest period of service being that of Rev. James M. Hess, who has been ordained for 42 years.

We wish for Dr. Sloan many years of continued activity and service in the church. He is professor of Religion at Elon College and serves as supply minister to churches in our convention needing his services.

W. T. SCOTT.

Dr. Helfenstein Attends Meeting on Evangelism in New York City

The spring meeting of the National Council Joint Department of Evangelism was held at the Marble Collegiate Church of New York City, on Wednesday, May 5. The department holds two meetings each year—one during the first week in May and one the first week in December.

Challenging reports, covering the wide range of evangelistic effort promoted by the department, were presented, revealing the important place the Department of Evangelism holds in the organizational life of the National Council of Churches. Reports were presented on Visitation Evangelism, National Christian Teaching Mission, Christian Ministry in the National Parks, Pulpit Evangelism, University Christian Missions, Passenger Ships Chaplaincy Service, Evangelistic Missions, Evangelistic Literature, Spiritual Life, United Christian Youth Missions, Armed Forces Preaching Missions.

A special luncheon was held, honoring the new executive director for the department, Rev. Berlyn V. Faris, successor to Dr. Jesse M. Bader, who recently reached the age of retirement. The new executive secretary of the National Council, Dr. Roy C. Ross, gave the principal address of the program, following the luncheon.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond, who has been a member of the National Department of Evangelism for thirty years, was present throughout the meeting. He states that the program which the department proposes for the coming year is one of which every denomination represented in the National Council may well be proud.

Young Swiss Minister in Valley for Four Weeks

A young minister from Switzerland, Rev. Max Martin Eichrodt, will be helping the rural churches in the Valley for the next four weeks. Mr. Eichrodt came to the United States last September under the exchange program of the World Council of Churches. Since then he has been studying at the Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn. Now he very much desires to gain practical experience in our American rural churches. Several churches in the Valley are just as desirous of Mr. Eichrodt's help as he is to give it. So all of those having to do with the arrangements are enthusiastic over the prospects.

Mr. Eichrodt arrived at the home of the writer, east of New Market, on Wednesday, May 12. We have been arranging the schedule for Mr. Eichrodt.

The first public appearance that Mr. Eichrodt is scheduled to make is as guest speaker at a young people's rally in Bethlehem Church at Tenth Legion, on Friday evening, May 14, at 7:30 o'clock. All of the young people of Bethlehem Church, Concord, Mayland, Palmyra, Wissler's Chapel and Woods Chapel are especially invited to attend. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Foltz, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph White, adult advisors, and Leon Lohr, president of the Bethlehem Young People, will be in charge of the program, which includes singing and games in the basement of the new church.

The general public will have the opportunity to hear Rev. Mr. Eichrodt first at revival services in Concord Church, three miles east of Timberville. Mr. Eichrodt will preach at these services every evening during the week at 7:45, beginning on Monday, May 17, and ending with the Sunday morning worship service at 10 o'clock, May 23. Everyone will be welcome at these services.

RALPH M. GALT.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

An Open Letter to Our Laymen

It was slightly more than one year ago that I was given the responsibility of editing this column for the men of our church; it has been a genuine pleasure. I have attempted to steer clear of personal references except in one case; today I would like to deviate from the policy again and write a letter relating to some recent personal experiences.

This has been more than a busy year. I have been teaching and ear-rying on the work of the offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of the College here at Elon. This has been interesting work, but the job is never done. In addition to this, I have been carrying on in a limited way a program of research as a part of my graduate program at the University of North Carolina. This means that sometimes I have failed to get material to Mr. Kernodle when it should have been ready for publication. He has been kind and helpful in this and I deeply appreciate it. My graduate work is now completed and I will have more time for the doing of this important job.

It was my pleasure to attend the recent sessions of the Southern Convention in Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, Virginia. The people of the Bethlehem Church were very cordial to all of us and made our stay in their community most enjoyable. The Convention Program was full of interesting and helpful addresses. A high point for me was the appearance of Dr. Samuel Stevens, president of Grinnell College in Iowa, who spoke to the laymen in their banquet in the Suffolk Church and later to the entire convention. On both occasions, Dr. Stevens spoke convincingly and with power. It is hoped that all who had the privilege of hearing him will determine to follow the course which he so profoundly outlined. He certainly pointed out the advantages of Christian higher education, the need for it, and the challenge which faces us who are engaged in it.

The Laymen's Banquet was an outstanding and enjoyable occasion. Approximately 250 men gathered in the banquet hall of the Suffolk Church for a good meal and an inspiring address. It was a nice experience to be able to meet with these men of the Eastern Virginia area and to share in the program which was presented. Bill Baker of Newport News led the group in singing several familiar songs. Although Walter Graham could not be present for the occasion, he sent his good wishes and these were conveyed by the undersigned. The invocation was led by the Rev. George Alley of the Suffolk Church. Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, introduced the speaker.

Throughout the convention we all were inspired by the timely, well-planned devotional services by our chaplain, Dr. W. C. Timmons of our Southern Pines Church.

Upon my return to Elon, I began work with our boys who have been doing research in chemistry to prepare them for the presentation to be made at the meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science meeting in Greenville, N. C. This kind of work takes a lot of time, and most of it is spent in work with individuals; this kind of thing can be done only on that level. The chemistry students who appeared on the program there included Richard Newman of Mebane, N. C., Charles Phillips of the Altamahaw-Ossipee community near Elon, York Brannock of Burlington, N. C., and Philip Mann of Cypress Chapel, Va. Mr. Newman's paper was judged to be the second best on the program, and he

(Continued on page 11.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Needed: Actors, Not Spectators

Mass spectation has become one of the largest businesses and chief occupations of our people. We go somewhere to see someone else perform. It is true, of course, that in schools and elsewhere, there is an increased concern to secure the participation—even on a much less expert level—of the rank and file. But this has not achieved, so far, the needed results.

We pay a tremendous tribute, in time and in money, to entertainment. We must relax. We do not want to miss anything in the various fields of sports and films and theatre, and all the rest.

Too often this means an early abandonment of any plans we might have for ourselves in some of these fields. We sell ourselves short. We sigh resignedly that this is not for us, and take the role of spectators. And this, when we might very properly aspire to develop in ourselves skills quite on the level with those we so zealously watch others display.

Our nation is losing a great deal because of this lack of individual self-confidence, this taking of the easy road and failure to make the most of one's own talents and opportunities.

More actors, fewer spectators—this is so often our need.

Few among us need to be reminded that this is also true in the field of religion. A few may show initiative and talent—and this so tragically causes some of the more timid to draw off into spectator roles and let them perform.

We spend, as a people, more time and money than any other, it would seem, to be entertained and to enjoy the attractions of our modern civilization. At the same time, it is probably true that some mental disturbance and much unhappiness and frustration is due to the fact that we never get to the point of acting out something for ourselves. We are ever the spectator and never the actor. Life is much weaker and emptier thereby than it need be. All of us need the thrill of trying out our own ideas and talents, seeing what we can do with what God has given us. It may be that among the people of our churches and communities, tremendous talents and forces lie unrecognized and unused, simply because so many of us so readily assume the passive role of the spectator while others do the work of the world.

Let's spectate in fields where we cannot lead or serve—but let's be an actor in some one field where we can play the game just as well as many others!

RICHARD K. MORTON.

The Virginia Safety Conference

On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 20-22, 1954, there will meet at the Monticello Hotel in the City of Norfolk, the twentieth annual Virginia State-Wide Safety Conference.

Its program, a booklet of some 32 pages, states that this conference is "called by the Governor of Virginia, in the interest of developing a deeper and more sincere state-wide interest in the conservation of the human and material resources of Virginia and the nation." Its aim is given as the "elimination of the sorrow, distress, and great economic waste which travel in the wake of accidents, most of which are preventable."

Governor Stanley says: "It is the responsibility of every Virginian to help conserve the human and material resources of the Commonwealth. Each of you can help by uniting in a common effort for a reduction of preventable accidents. Experience has shown that accidents are reduced in the same ratio that our safety knowledge is advanced. Few accidents would happen if everyone were aware of the potential dangers in walking, riding, working or playing and the simple precautions that could avoid the grief, misery and expense that result from carelessness."

One can but wonder if this is not just another place where the matter of stewardship comes in. We, as professed Christians, talk about the stewardship of time and talents. Should we not also give more thought to the stewardship of fingers, arms, eyes and lives, in working honestly for the prevention of accidents on the road, in the shop and in the home? How many of us forget that we are our brother's keeper when we get behind the steering wheel of a powerful automobile? How many of us forget that our physical beings belong to God when we foolishly risk maiming our bodies or those of others when at our daily task? Jesus has said that his Father notes the fall of a sparrow. How much more is he concerned about our physical selves. For his sake, for our own, let us be careful for ourselves and for others!

J. T. K.

Freedom--Our Heritage, Our Responsibility

By REV. RICHARD L. JACKSON
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

I suppose that there is no country in the world which regards freedom any higher than we do here in America. The Voice of America, 24 hours a day tells the world that we are the land of the free. Ask any American, and he will tell you that our most prized possession is the freedom we enjoy.

Now it's one thing to give lip service to the ideal of freedom—it's still another to practice it. This discrepancy between what we say and what we do is well illustrated in an incident pointed out by Dr. Halford Luccock in a recent article. He said that last year, one radio station carried two very conflicting reports from the lips of Phil Rizzuto, the famous second baseman of the New York Yankees. In an advertising commercial, Mr. Rizzuto maintained that it was his daily dishes of a certain cereal for breakfast that kept him in such wonderful trim on the diamond. The next morning, however, during an interview with a Boston sportswriter, this same Rizzuto made this statement, "I've felt so rotten that I've been taking energy building pills all summer long. If I don't get my pep back soon, I'm seriously considering giving up baseball."

These reports do not seem to go together, do they? On the one hand, "I'm in wonderful trim," then on the heels of that, "I feel so rotten, I'm thinking of giving up baseball."

This same inconsistency can and often does happen over and over again in our profession and in our practice of freedom. No amount of repetitious boasting over the air waves is sufficient to cover up our failure to implement in our common life the freedom we profess to believe in. We ought never to lose sight of the fact that for thousands of Americans, the word "freedom" has a hollow ring.

Because freedom has a wide application in so many areas of life, let us restrict our thinking to the religious concept of freedom which we call "freedom of conscience." This we will define as the right of the individual to follow the dictates of his own conscience in his religious belief. Our text comes from the 2nd letter of Paul to the Corinthian Church. He has this to say, "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom." (R.S. V.)

The Congregational Christian Churches, throughout the years, have been committed resolutely to the principle of freedom of conscience. Our denomination does not claim to be the only church dedicated to this principle, nor do we claim that we have always lived up to our ideal—but for us, it is a dominating principle. The Congregational Christian Church has often welcomed into its fellowship people of independent thought and action, who are made to feel unwanted in denominations where religion is more narrowly and rigidly defined.

Because of our dedication to the principle of freedom of conscience, Congregational Christians have sometimes been accused of not believing anything. We have no creed, it's true, which narrowly defines what people must believe. There is no book of discipline which prescribes rules of conduct. Along with other Christian groups, we accept the Bible as our guide, but even here there is room for private judgment and interpretation. In short, if a person wants his faith all worked out for him, put down in black and white so that he can say "This is what I believe," then he will be forever unhappy in our fellowship.

This does not mean that Congregational Christians do not believe anything—it simply means that we do not aspire for uniformity. We are a fellowship of people, united in a common loyalty to Jesus Christ and committed to the cause for which he lived and for which he gave his life. In that we are one. When we join the church, we accept Jesus Christ as the Lord of our lives and we promise to make his teachings the guiding principles of our lives. In what we consider to be essentials—we are one.

In what we deem as lesser matters, there are wide variances of belief among us. For instance, some Congregational Christians believe that baptism by immersion is scriptural and proper—and no-one questions their right to believe that. Others prefer sprinkling—and they have the right and responsibility of believing that. The important thing is that, in spite of differences, we are still able to live together in peace and harmony.

In the interpretation of the scriptures, some Congregational Christians accept the Bible literally as the infallible word of God; others accept the findings of modern historical criticism and regard the Bible as containing the word of God. Some believe in the actual biological virgin birth of Jesus; others interpret this doctrine only in the spiritual sense. These are a few of our differences—the important thing is that there is room for people of all shades of opinion. Fellowship is denied to no one because intellectually he doesn't see things in the more conventional way. This spirit is well illustrated in the motto carried on the masthead of our church paper, THE CHRISTIAN SUN: "In essentials, Unity;—in non-Essentials, liberty;—In all things, charity."

Congregationalism, you will recall, began in England as a revolt against the state church which demanded uniformity in belief and in religious practice. When the early Pilgrim fathers were not permitted to believe and to worship in accordance with their best consciences, they fled, first of all to Holland, and later to the shores of New England. Similarly, the Christian Church which began in North Carolina as a protest against the tyranny of rigid ecclesiasticism, proclaimed at an early date their dedication to the cause of freedom of conscience.

There have always been, and I suppose there will continue to be, people who will insist on uniformity of belief. They will never be satisfied until everyone believes exactly as they do.

There is a story in Grecian mythology of a famous bandit named Procrustes, who lived in Attica. Part of his robber's equipment consisted in an iron bed. He had the unpleasant habit of forcing all his victims to lie down on his bed, and if the unfortunate traveller were too long, his limbs were lopped off so that he would fit the bed perfectly. If the hapless victim were too short, Procrustes had him put on a rack and stretched until he became the right length.

One day a Grecian youth, Theseus, (Continued on page 9.)

Our Churches Report . . .

Beverly Hills, Burlington Starts New Sanctuary

On Sunday, April 11, 1954, there was held at the Beverly Hills Church, Burlington, N. C., a ground breaking service, toward which we had for the past several years been looking forward with great longing. At last the time had arrived when we would begin our new sanctuary.

We are already in need of this building. Each Sunday morning the present building is filled to capacity. We also have to have all our other meetings in this building during the week.

Those participating in the service were: Walstein W. Snyder, the pastor; Rev. Mark W. Andes, Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. John G. Truitt, Rev. H. E. Stanfield, Dr. Henry E. Robinson, Rev. Bland Leebrick, and Superintendent Wm. T. Scott, who gave the address for the occasion.

Local church members participating in the program were: W. C. Perry, Jr., T. A. Vincent, C. R. Buckner, J. L. Faulkner, Jr., and Mrs. H. J. Hefke, W. H. Oakley, Grace Holt and Norman Burke.

We at Beverly Hills are very happy over the way our program has grown over the past two years. Our Sunday school has increased from an enrollment of 27 to an enrollment of 162. We now have seven classes instead of the original three. We now need to divide several of our present classes, but we do not have any available space until the new building is completed. Three of our classes meet in the present church building and four meet in the basement of the parsonage.

Last month was our best month as far as attendance is concerned in the three year history of our church. We averaged 136 for morning worship during the month of March. Our church now has 125 members. On Easter Sunday morning, we had our best attendance marks in the history of the church for any given Sunday.

There were 119 present for Sunday school and 192 present for morning worship.

Our Women's and Laymen's work continues to make fine progress. In April of 1952 we organized our women's work with less than ten members. Today we have three circles in our women's society with over 60 members. Our laymen's work was organized in July of 1952 with five members; and this group today has over 30 members in it.

We have over 25 members in our Young Adult group and 16 in our Pilgrim Fellowship. These two organized groups were the hardest to get started. However, now that they are organized, they are becoming very active and are growing very fast.

This church has been able to grow in this fine way because of the fact that its members are willing to work together. They not only believe that Jesus Christ is the Saviour of the world, but that he is their personal Saviour as well and that everyone else ought to have him as their Saviour too.

Our church is very thankful to God for the progress it has made in its three year history.

WALSTEIN W. SNYDER,
Pastor.

Indian Christian is Guest Speaker at Wissler's Chapel

At Wissler's Chapel, west of Shendoah Caverns, on Sunday evening, May 16, Henry Solanky will be the guest speaker. Mr. Solanky is a Christian farmer from India. He runs his farm as a model farm, to introduce and demonstrate improved farming techniques to farmers in his community. He cooperates with the Rural Reconstruction Movement of Christian Missions and of the Indian government.

At the 7 p. m. meeting Mr. Solanky will display farm implement models from India and will show photographs from India. He may also show picture slides taken in India by Mrs. Rufus Bowman.

All who are interested in meeting and hearing this fine Christian farmer and rural leader from India are invited to Wissler's chapel. This meeting will be followed by the evening worship service at 8 o'clock, when the pastor, Rev. Ralph M. Galt, will present a message, "Responsibilities of Children and Parents in a Christian Family."

Mr. Solanky is at present a student at Bridgewater College. At the close of his year's study, he will return to India to resume management of his farm.

Former Laymen of Richmond Church Passes

"Truly, a prince in the House of Israel has fallen"! Mr. Bowden W. Ward, 46, died in Norfolk, Va., on Thursday morning of the past week. Mr. Ward, his wife, their son and two daughters had been active members of our Richmond Church for several years, until moving to Birmingham, Alabama, two years ago. For nearly a year, the family had lived in Norfolk, where Mr. Ward was engaged in business. His death came unexpectedly on May 6. Mr. Ward was an outstanding sales promotion leader and a devoted, progressive-minded churchman.

The family had not yet affiliated with a church in Norfolk at the time of Mr. Ward's death; and the writer, pastor of the Richmond Church, conducted the Memorial Service, which was held in a local funeral chapel on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. A. A. Doffiemyer and Mr. L. L. Bond, of the Richmond Church, served as pallbearers.

R. C. HELFENSTEIN.

To Distribute Eight Million Tracts

Eight million tracts are being distributed by Assemblies of God youth in a crusade launched April 25.

Impetus and text for the crusade are taken from Acts 1:8, "But ye shall receive power . . . and ye shall be witnesses." Hence the name "One-Eight Crusade."

At the outset, a nine-lesson course in personal evangelism was presented by local Assemblies of God pastors to their youth groups. Special emphasis was placed on scriptural memorization.

The major phase of the crusade is the distribution of the eight million youth tracts by the 86,000 members of the denomination's Christ's Ambassadors. These youth are between the ages of thirteen and thirty-five. The plan is for each member to distribute eight different tracts each week.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH. Elon College, N. C.

Elon College Stands

During the entire life of Elon College, extending over a period of more than three score years, storms fast and furious have swept at its very foundation. Storms not from conflicting elements, but from conflicting opinions and human interest. Questions generating these conflicts had to do with kinds and types of buildings, furnishings and equipments, the amount of money required to provide the same, and the sources from which funds were to be derived. Some contend that the support of the college depends entirely upon the alumni, that the students and graduates of Elon College are the principal beneficiaries of the college, that the church had fostered the idea, created the campus, and erected the buildings, and that the alumni should be glad to give its support.

Others contend that the college is the institution of the church, that the church founded it, owns it, and controls it; therefore, the church must accept the responsibility of its support, that the church is the chief beneficiary of the college and is dependent upon the fruits of the college for its inspiration and leadership, and therefore should, in cooperation with other forces, provide the principal support for the college in students and in money.

Still others contend that since the church and alumni have made the college possible, that the community in which it is located and renders the greater part of its services is the principal beneficiary of the college, that the community should become its principal benefactor. Since other interests have founded the college, placed it at the door of the citizens of the community (by community is meant a radius of fifty miles from the college) and that the community should be happy to have the privilege of contributing generously to its support and well-being.

These storms resulting from conflicting interest and opinions have been raging and gathering momentum all through the years and even at this day, they continue to rage in their fury. Still the college stands on its original site and principles, towering in strength and service above the clouds that would confuse its purpose and lessen its support. Still it stands; why?

First, because it was founded in faith, faith of our forefathers, the faith of our church, the faith that we all have in Christian education and in God himself. Second, because that part of the church that prayed for its founding and continues to pray for its support and progress, the alumni who have shared in its privileges and benefited from its instruction, still love it.

It is difficult for any storm to sweep an institution of higher learning from the field of its activity when there are so many who love it.

It stands today because of the high quality of service that it has rendered to the church, the community in which it stands, and the nation in which it serves. Because of its depths of efficiency, its breadth of interest, and height of purpose, it stands and lives to continue its high service to mankind.

Yes, these storms, the storms of conflicting ideas and contending problems, continue to sweep at the foundation of our college, but it still stands and shall continue to stand just so long as people believe in it, love it, and are willing to sacrifice for its interest.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Spring is here. The trees bud, the flowers bloom, and the grass is green. These unmistakable signs proclaim the season of the year and yet the chill of winter overtakes us in the midst of the passing days. Even so, the warmth of the sun breaks through to remind us that nature is true to her task and the seasons of the year have not changed. Surely, this is the time when there should spring up in the hearts of our people, alumni, church, and friends, a new interest in our college, a new love for its program and a new desire for its services. Since we have fond hopes for our college today and tomorrow, it would seem almost cruel to remind ourselves that the college is here and that it is ours because somewhere in the dead past, somebody paid the price, somebody made a sacrifice. If those who have sacrificed for the founding and the ongoing of Elon College could arise in the beautiful spring time and give their witness, the truth of their statements would stir our hearts and move us to new efforts in behalf of our college.

Surely, we would be willing to follow in the footsteps of our forefathers and sacrifice, if need be, that the college which they founded would continue to flourish and serve even in this far away day. Week after week the members of the church and the friends of the college not only pour out their prayers in the interest of the same, but open their purses and make their contributions for the support of the college.

Previously reported $ 2,564.51

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Bethlehem$ 6.00

Martha's Chapel 6.00

Piney Plain 33.00

Southern Pines 63.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Burlington, Bev. Hills ...$ 8.00

Greensboro, Palm St 60.00

Shallow Ford 20.00

Tryon S. S. 15.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Norfolk, First$ 35.00

Waverly S. S. 44.11

Western N. C. Conference:

Big Oak$ 1.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Winchester S. S.$ 8.34

297.45

Total to date $ 2,861.96

Billboards Combat Drunk Driving

Roadside billboards aimed at combating alcoholism and drunken driving have been erected in fifteen states by churches and local W. C. T. U. groups, says Mr. Glenn G. Hayes, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. And she added that the campaign will be extended in an effort to blanket the nation's highways.

The standard twenty-four sheet posters are supplied by the national office, and a "flood of orders" is said to have followed the first announcement of their availability.

At present, there are two posters in the series, and a third is expected to be ready shortly. One of the posters shows a man held captive inside a bottle and bears the caption, "Will You Be Next? Four Million Alcoholics Made in the U. S. A." The other depicts a skeleton leaning over a wrecked automobile under the legend, "It Was Only Beer, But Its Companion Was Death."

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Follow-up of Family Week

Many of our churches, at the instigation of the women's society, have recently observed "Family Week." This type of activity should not be confined to one week, but should be an important part of our work throughout the year.

Some of our groups will want to consider what more can be done about it, now that they have enjoyed the special activities of the one week. Here are some suggestions from Mrs. Edd Chilton, family life superintendent for North Carolina:

1. Have a "Family Night" once a month. This may be in the form of a supper followed by family recreation, or a "game night" for the entire church family with light refreshments instead of supper. One church has a devotional service following a meal, then the group divides into smaller groups, with the children and young people playing games, the women mending choir robes or making scrap books for the hospital, the men doing some needed cleaning or repair work or painting around the church. What a fine idea!

2. Have a "Family Night" in each home once a month. Surely that is not too much to ask! This would be a time when the family would not only play together, but would plan together. These plans may include everyday use of the family funds, as well as what to do on vacation.

3. Use your public libraries. In the rural sections there are "Book-mobiles" which bring books to the various areas. Mrs. Chilton recommends these: The Family Fun Book by Eisenberg; Teen Days by Strain; Your Children Today by Gruenberg; and Growing Together by Bacmeister. The following books from The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, she also recommends: Apricot Sky ($3.00); Lemon Jelly Cake ($3.00); Our Amazing Birds ($3.95); God in Our Home (50c); and The Family Discovers God's World (50c).

* * * * *

Ramsur Meeting

The Missionary Society of the Ramsur, North Carolina, Christian Church met on April 10 with Mrs.

R. B. Craven as hostess. Twelve members were present and enjoyed a study of Psalm 8, led by Mrs. Elvin Cox. The society voted to send ten dollars to the orphanage for Easter.

We were pleased to have had the Spring Rally with us in our church this year.

DORTHY CRAVEN,
Reporter.

* * * * *

May Fellowship Day in Asheboro

For the first time in the history of the Asheboro Council of Church Women a luncheon meeting was tried on May Fellowship Day. This was held in the Congregational Christian Church on last Friday.

Following the luncheon, the devotional service provided by the National Council was used. Guest speaker for the occasion was the Rev. Morton Kurtz, executive secretary of the North Carolina Council of Churches, from Durham. He emphasized the importance of Christian fellowship in a world like ours, stating that no one church had the answer to all the problems of our day. He stressed the value of the common witness of cooperating church groups, and deplored the fact that often the church is "the last stronghold of the status quo."

New officers for the year were installed, including Mrs. Bruce Wright of the Congregational Christian church, as treasurer.

More than fifty women attended the meeting, coming from fourteen churches, eight denominations, and two races. Each woman was asked to bring sandwiches, tea and dessert were provided for the group. Mrs. Wright served as chairman of the committee on arrangements.

* * * * *

Congratulations to New Society

Word has come from Mrs. W. T. Scott, president of the North Carolina women, that a new society has been organized at Zion Christian Church.

This church is in the Sanford District, and Mrs. R. M. Cline, the district superintendent, has helped to organize it since the Rally. There were fifteen charter members of this group, with that many more present for the organizational meeting.

The president of the Zion Society is Miss Theda Bara Wicker, Route 5, Sanford.

The good wishes of the women of the Southern Convention go out to this newest society, and we wish for them success as they work in a co-operative unit for the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom.

* * * * *

Congratulations to Mrs. R. G. Williams

We have already expressed on this page congratulations to Mrs. Robert G. Williams, who was elected last January as first president of the Woman's Fellowship of the International Congregational Council, which represents Congregational Christian women in over a dozen countries, from Great Britain to India and from the United States to South Africa.

However, the Woman's Board of the Southern Convention, when it met in March, voted a letter of congratulations to her and $25 to be used in furthering the work of this international organization of our women. And so we thought you might like to know more about her and this organization, too.

Mary Ann Jefferys was born in Mansfield, Ohio. She was educated at the Congregational Training School for Women in Chicago, Illinois and at the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service. She taught school for two years and then was director of religious education in First Church of Kalamazoo, Mich. She spent at least one summer holding vacation Bible schools in North Carolina, for she is fondly remembered by people in our Providence Chapel and Sophia parish churches.

She was director of young people's work in our churches in Florida (preceded Pattie Lee Coghill in that post) and met and married Robert Gregory Williams in 1929, since then making her home in Florida.

There she has been president of the Florida Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women, as well as being active in various civic organizations, such as Lake Worth Woman's Club, Zonta, and PEO. For ten sessions she was head counselor of women at the Conference of Religious Education in Northfield, Massachusetts. She was president of the National Fellowship of our women

An Invitation to Fellowship and Study by Ministers

Conscientious ministers have said so many times: "We must keep up our study if our ministry is to be kept alive, but we have so little time to do so in the busy round of our church responsibilities."

Because this is so generally true, our Board of Home Missions maintains two Summer Schools for Pastors—one at Deering, New Hampshire, the other at La Foret, Colorado. This year, study sessions at Deering will be held from July 7 to 14, and at La Foret from July 7 to August 4. Scholarships covering tuition, board and room for each "student," plus travel expenses in excess of $15.00, are provided by the Board of Home Missions. Deering and La Foret have limited accommodations for ministers' wives, who may enroll at the schools on payment of their own room, board and travel expenses. Neither school accepts children.

Opportunities in both schools are provided for stimulating study under nationally known theologians and scholars, making it possible for ministers to refresh their seminary training and to explore new ideas in religious thinking and experience. The schools own substantial libraries of the latest books on religion, history, psychology and allied subjects.

and member of executive committee of our denomination for six years. One hobby is bell collecting—she has 300 from all parts of the world. Another is traveling—and she hopes to visit Congregational women in various parts of the world in the next few years.

Mrs. Williams was one of four delegates from the Congregational Christian Churches of America (there were only six women delegates from U. S.) to the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam.

The major purposes of the Women's Fellowship of the International Congregational Council is to foster closer relations between women in our churches throughout the world by means of exchange of news, literature, correspondence and visits. Mrs. Williams says about it, "It does not seek to draw Congregational Women together to isolate them from the ecumenical church, rather it should provide a means through which those attributes of true fellowship may be realized in the name of Christ."

The importance of informal discussions among fellow ministers—many of whom, meeting for the first time, form lasting friendships—is underlined during the days set aside for study and recreation in these two centers. Whether in the soft, rolling hills of New Hampshire, or in the mighty forests of La Foret, simple outdoor life, excursions and out-of-door classes and services make the study sessions most memorable experiences.

Ministers living east of the Mississippi River should attend the Deering School. Registration requires endorsement by the conference superintendent, and since accommodations are limited to about fifty students in each school, reservations should be made as soon as possible. Ministers in the Southern Convention should write to either Dr. Wm. T. Scott, the Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., or to the Division of Church Extension and Evangelism, Board of Home Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

FREEDOM—OUR HERITAGE, OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

(Continued from page 5.)

was travelling through the region occupied by Procrustes and engaged him in battle. After a terrific struggle, Procrustes was slain; but according to the story, Theseus did not finish the job. He did not destroy the bed. Today the world is filled with little iron beds into which each one tries to fit everyone else—lopping off limbs here, stretching bodies there.

There seem to be periods in human history, which, in this respect, go to extremes. The world can never forget the horrors of the Inquisition. Drew Pearson recently pointed out in his editorial column that it was just 100 years ago when the Know-Nothing party set out on a campaign of intolerance and persecution aimed at Jews and Catholics. He went on to point out the irony of the fact that the same thing is being done today in America, and that the movement is now led by a Catholic.

It's strange, isn't it, how much more obvious it is when freedom is abridged some place else. Out finger of scorn and condemnation is rightly pointed at totalitarian countries because they refuse to tolerate differences. Last year, the fanfare of Stalin's funeral did not take away from the free world at least, the sharp memory of purges and liquidation, the rule of terror by the secret police. In the Soviet Union, the unforgivable sin is deviationism. Even the slightest deviation is a crime and punishable by death.

Nothing in America is happening on that scale, but there are some very disturbing signs nationally and locally—and so many of us are unconcerned. A recent article in the Christian Century carried a letter from a school teacher which contained these words: "In our town, it is safer to stay at home and watch the 'rassling matches' on television than it is to act on the important issues of the day." It's safer. The independent thinker is often penalized by being called a socialist or a communist, he is ostracized and put on the suspect list. He may even lose his job. Church bodies of many denominations make it clear they want no deviationism from the doctrinal line.

The great temptation for all of us in these days of loyalty oaths, character assassinations and investigating committees is to seek safety in silence. Few voices are raised in protest when injustices are done. We do well to recall Abraham Lincoln's penetrating comment: "To sin by silence, when they should protest, makes cowards of men." Peace at any price is a high one indeed when our freedom is at stake.

Dr. Coulson, professor of Mathematics at Oxford, who gave the McNail lectures at the University of North Carolina this spring, made a very interesting and pertinent observation. He said that in the scientific field, doubt is encouraged. "Doubt," he said, "is the indispensable method of getting at the truth." He went on to point out the obvious fact that all the great gains made in science through the years, came as a result of doubt. Galileo doubted that the world was flat. "Every important gain in science came as a result of doubts." These doubters had to be courageous men because they, too, lived among people who didn't want any of their ideas and theories disturbed.

Doubt is not only the indispensable method of arriving at scientific truth, it is indispensable in all other areas of life, particularly in religion. Jesus was crucified not because of the good things he did, but because he dared doubt—he raised questions about the established religion. If we name those who, through the centuries, made the great contributions to

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

May has been a month of prayer. All over the country, on the first day of the month, churches, synagogues, and Roman churches were having prayer.

Some people are ashamed to let anyone know that they pray. They are ashamed to pray in public or let anyone know that they would ever think of such a way to behave. I know a pretty young lady in Richmond, however, who always asks a blessing, no matter where she may be, and really she is timid and stutters too, but she never skips her prayers.

Not long ago a tiny little boy, who wasn't afraid to pray in public, started a lot of other people praying. It happened like this. A minister took his family to eat dinner in a restaurant, and his six year old son, Bobby Fairman, said grace. His father noticed that many people watched and some of them looked as if they would like to have prayed too. The whole family talked about it, and then the Rev. Mr. Fairman talked with his fellow ministers, priests and rabbis and asked how about printing a grace on the menu card? They agreed in the family and among the churchmen, that it would be a good thing. By now, Over 400,000 (that takes a lot of counting) prayer cards with graces and prayers for every faith have gone all over the country. Some place mats have printed blessings, others are tucked under glass on the table. But it all began with a little boy, who wasn't ashamed or afraid.

Do you sometimes think you can't do much because you are just one, lone, small child? Look what happened to Bobby's prayer. It grew like the loaves and fishes that Jesus blessed when he was eating with his friends and the many people who came to hear him. And the Bible tells us: "A little child shall lead them."

Do you know this motto?
Christ is the Head of this house
The unseen Guest at every meal,
The Silent Listener to every conversation.

Let us not be afraid to speak our prayer aloud, at home and abroad. Let us be like Bobby.

"Own Cents is Good Sense"

By MARION BROWNFIELD.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Betty's always teasing me for money!" complained one of the mothers. "And when I don't give her a dime or a quarter, she wheedles a nickel out of her father!"

"Jimmy has his own money," replied Mrs. Carewe.

Betty's mother looked surprised. She knew Mr. Carewe did not earn as much as her husband.

But Mrs. Carewe went on, "I mean we give Jimmy an allowance, and Clare, who is only five, is anxious to be seven, so she, too, may have one."

Betty's mother answered reflectively, "I'd never thought of giving Betty an allowance, though she has a piggy-bank. We put a dime a week in that, and when ever relatives come they always give her money, from a penny to a dollar. But her father says, 'Let her spend it; that's what they give it to her for!'"

Mrs. Carewe responded, "That's the problem—to teach children how to budget. I think an allowance has to be carefully explained."

"In what way do you mean?"

"Oh, spending and saving. When we began with Jimmy, his dad gave him a dime a week and told him he could have more when he showed he could manage it well. He gave him his choice of ten pennies, two nickels, or a dime. Jimmy thought ten pennies seemed the most!"

Both mothers laughed.

"In the end," continued Mrs. Carewe, "Jimmy decided on a nickel for spending and a nickel for saving. We paid all his transportation, church and school expenses at first. Now, with a larger allowance, he has learned how to plan for those."

Betty's mother said, "I believe I'll try giving Betty an allowance. It would stop her teasing for money and would be teaching her, instead."

"Definitely," answered Mrs. Carewe. "Children make mistakes in the beginning, but we try to show Jimmy we have to plan our budget carefully. We told him there wouldn't be any money for Christmas if we were to spend all our recreation funds for the summer vacation. Saving for vacation fun made him wonderfully thrifty with regard to candy spending! Actually, since we increased his allowance, we have to warn him to spend enough on good food for school lunches!"

Overhearing these two mothers made us recall a boy of ten who planned his own budget. One day, when he mowed our lawn, we asked him, "Billy, what do you do with your lawn money?"

"Well, you see, it's this way," he said. "When my mother came home from the hospital and had to have a nurse all the time, we—I mean my elder brother and myself—had to earn our own spending money. Dad gives us our clothes and our bikes, but we want money for carfare, movies, gifts, Sunday school—well, an' extras."

We nodded, understanding.

"So, every week I figure out how much I'm going to need. Then I hustle around and get enough lawns to mow to cover it. My brother earns his money with a magazine route. I save a dollar every week, so I can go camping for a week next summer with my club."

This boy, later to our knowledge, worked after school and every Saturday morning for the duration of high school. He even worked on a barter basis to earn his own music lessons.

What has this to do with an allowance? It ties in very neatly, for many parents may wish to give the allowance as payment for home duties. In one family the father emphasizes that the weekly allowance—earned by Saturday chores—teaches the children an obligation to render service for what they receive. Also, it bears fruit in wiser spending!

There is nothing our time needs more than a resurgence of intelligent and vital prayer. Without it we shall not have those spiritual resources by which alone a new world can be fashioned.

"Where there is not vision, the people perish." These ancient words have taken on fresh meaning as the release of atomic energy has ushered in a new era.

If we are to have spiritual energy and vision equal to the demands of our time, Christians must discover the way to find prayer—and to make prayer—more meaningful and vital.

—Georgia Harkness.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

In Memoriam

We wish to express our sympathy in sorrow for several youth groups of the Pilgrim Fellowship who seem to be missing and have thus been given up as deceased. They were alive at one time, but for the past several years we have heard nothing from them, no news concerning their group, or what they have been doing. We regret the passing of these youth groups. (There are others that we fear are ill, but hope that they are struggling and will be healed, and that we shall hear from them very soon. Does this group include you? If so, why don't you write?)

* * * * *

Tips from Tom

Registration blanks are now available for summer camps. Write today and get your reservation in early. You can get these from your pastor or superintendent, or from Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, registrar, Elon College, N. C. There are camps for all ages, so make your preference soon.

* * *

If we had to buy this space which is set aside for the news of our youth group, it would cost $20 for just this page; but it is given for our use. So let's use that which has been provided for our benefit.

* * *

The new Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship officers are: Miss Lois Scott, president, Elon College, N. C.; Mr. Reuben Askew, vice-president, Norfolk, Va.; Miss Wanda Dofflemeyer, secretary, Elkton, Va.; Miss Meryle Mauldin, treasurer, Winston-Salem, N. C.

* * * * *

Leaksville Youth Elect Officers

The young people of the Leaksville Church, near Luray, Va., elected officers at the organization of their Pilgrim Fellowship recently. These youth range between the ages of 12 and 16. The officers for the coming year are: Carol Moyer, president; Patricia Rinaca, vice-president; Ann Shoffner, secretary; John Bushey, corresponding secretary. The program committee will be appointed at the next meeting, which will be on Sunday evening at 7:30.

This is a recently organized group and we wish to congratulate them and welcome them with our support.

R. E. NEWTON,
Pastor.

* * * * *

Franklin Youth Present Easter Play

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Church, Franklin, Va., under the direction of their pastor, Rev. Harvey L. Carnes, presented an Easter play in three episodes on the evening of Sunday, April 11. The play was entitled "The Desert Tent." Written by Nancy Bowditch, it was produced in cooperation with W. H. Baker Company.

The youth were in charge of the evening worship program, which was as follows: Prelude, Miss Sarah Lee Johnson; Call to Worship, Jimmy Coggsdale; Hymn, "Christ Arose"; Scripture, Miss Sandra Collins; a Solo, "The Holy City," Miss Sarah Lee Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. H. L. Carnes; Offertory, "Poem."

The play, "The Desert Tent," was directed by Miss Margaret Garwood. The cast of characters was: Karim Akbar, Alden H. Gee, Jr.; Aliff, his son, Hugh Griffin; Zara, the older daughter, Sandra Sandlin; Meda, the younger daughter, Diane Doughty; Hashid, the camel driver, Roger Steinbach; Daphne, the Greek slave girl, Marcelle Long; Asrisasm, the Roman centurion, Jimmy Copeland; Sadra, the Brahman, Barbara Jean Pierce; Monova, the old serving woman, Martha Ann Hareum.

The ushers were Edward Blythe, Leon Olds, Bryan Hastings, Hugh Taylor.

All contributions of the program went to the Missionary Fund of the Pilgrim Fellowship.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of this church plays an important part in the life and activities of the church. Last month, the young people had the entire worship for one Sunday service. At Christmas, they presented a Christmas play. The group has taken as its project the sending of relief packages to needy families over seas.

The group is led by the following very capable officers: Hugh Griffin, president; Barbara Jean Pierce, vice-president; Sandra Collins, treasurer, Sarah Lee Johnson, secretary, and Diane Doughty, corresponding secretary. Bryan Hastings, Sandra Collins, and Roger Steinbach comprise the recreation committee; Marcelle Long and Martha Ann Hareum, the devotional committee; and the counsellors are: Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis W. Pierce and Miss Audrey Lankford.

On behalf of the cast of "The Desert Tent," I wish to extend profound gratitude to Miss Margaret Garwood, without whose assistance this play would not have been possible. We also thank all the others who helped us, especially Miss Audrey Lankford and Mrs. Harvey L. Carnes.

HUGH GRIFFIN,
President.

AN OPEN LETTER TO LAYMEN.

(Continued from page 2.)

was awarded a cash prize, a year's membership in the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a year's subscription to the Scientific Monthly.

Many of you will know some of these young men; others will certainly know "Uncle Ned" Brannock, whose grandson York is, and the G. C. Manns of Eastern Virginia, whose son Phil is. All of these boys have been doing fine work, and they are a real joy to work with. We cannot help feeling proud of them.

I go into all of this detail to give you somewhat of an idea of the type of thing that has been my program for the past few months. I should add that I have occupied the pulpits of a number of churches and spoken to civic clubs in my spare time. With these items out of the way and from the fact that Commencement will soon be a matter of history, I should have more time to give to this column.

I have been mailing material to a number of our groups lately. I hope that it will be helpful and that others of you will write to me if I can be of help. If you will write to me about the activities of your group, I will be happy to report it in this space in THE SUN.

In the meantime, I hope that you will be making plans to attend the "work-day" which we are planning to have at Moonelon, June 5. Don't forget that if you expect to spend the night or eat there, you must have a reservation. Mr. Williams has sent you the publicity; please send the reservations to me as soon as it is convenient.

J. EARL DANIELEY,

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Micaiah Withstands False Prophets"

LESSON VIII—MAY 23, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "As Jehovah liveth, what Jehovah saith unto me, that will I speak." I Kings 22:14.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: I Kings 22:1-40.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 118:1-8.

Asking God About a War.

Ahab, king of Israel, was spoiling for a fight. He did not feel that he was quite equal to the thing, however, so he invited Jehoshaphat, the king of Judah to join him in a war against Syria. It was a stupid thing to do—it was about as stupid as if little Switzerland should go to war against Russia. But Ahab did not have any better sense than to try it, and Jehoshaphat did not have any better sense than to join in with him. But Jehoshaphat did suggest that they ask God about the matter. "Enquire I pray thee, at the word of the Lord today," he said. He must have had some doubts about the matter, so he said "Suppose we ask God about all this."

Well, suppose kings and leaders had always asked God, in all sincerity, about the wars in which they were about to engage! How different things would have been! What a different world we would be living in if the leaders of the nations had "understood what the will of God was, to do it." To be sure, there have been times when there seemed to be no other resort but to war. But fair-minded men will agree that there have been many wars which did not have God's sanction on them. What difference it would make in the situation in the world today, if the nations of the world sought the will of God concerning the settlement of their differences and disputes!

Approval, Not Advice.

"O. K.," said Ahab. So he called together four hundred of the prophets and asked their advice. To a man, they approved his plan. They said, "Go up; for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king." The king accepted the decision with relish —it approved the thing he wanted to do. The fact is that quite often when folks ask us for advice, they do not want advice, but approval. They want us to approve the thing that they want to do and have already made up their minds to do. All too often people ask those who they know will agree with them concerning their course of action.

Smelling A Rat.

The thing seemed too smooth to Jehoshaphat. Four hundred "Ayes" and not a single "Nay." He smelt a rat. He suggested that it might be well to ask at least one other prophet of the Lord concerning the matter. "Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him?" he asked.

"Come to think of it there is," said Ahab. "But I do not want to call on him. That fellow does not prophesy good concerning me, but evil." Do you get that? Those four hundred prophets had sold themselves down the river. They said only what the king wanted them to say. They did not have the courage of their convictions. They were simply saying what the king wanted to hear. They were a craven, cowardly bunch. They were as spineless as a jelly-fish. They played the tune which Ahab called.

They have their kind today. All too many ministers and teachers and leaders are afraid to speak the truth that is unpleasant to people in high places, or in low places for that matter. How few preachers speak consistently against the liquor traffic! How many teachers pussy-foot or soft-pedal the Temperance Lesson every quarter! What about race relations? About divorce? About graft? About gambling? This is no indictment against preachers and teachers and politicians in general. It is simply stating the fact that there are many people who ought to be the conscience of society, who are merely the echo of the powers that be.

A Courageous Prophet.

Against his will and wishes, Ahab called Micaiah, and asked him his opinion about the expedition. Whether at Ahab's direction, or on his own initiative, the messenger whom Ahab sent to fetch Micaiah suggested that he would do well to go along with the crowd. "Let thy word. I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good." There is the subtle and the strong temptation that comes to every man, sooner or later. Go with the crowd, follow the majority, get on the band-wagon, rubber-stamp the thing.

But Micaiah was made of sterner stuff. This fellow had a backbone, and iron in his soul. "As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak." One against four hundred! One against the kings! What is one against so many, and against power in high places? That is the whine of the weak man. One by himself is not much, but one with God is a majority. One thinks of many courageous spirits as he thinks of this rugged old prophet standing before those kings and telling them the truth, and the unpleasant truth. John the Baptist before Herod, Christ before Pilate, Paul before Agrippa, Luther before the power of the Catholic Church, Ghandi arrayed against the British Empire, and so on down the line of a great host of men and women standing heroically and sacrificially before entrenched evil and power and special privilege.

And there are men and women, young men and maidens of like spirit, even though they are not as well known. Here and there, everywhere there are heroes of the commonplace, humble men and women and young people, who are standing by their convictions and bearing their witness, regardless of what the crowd says or does.

"Put this Fellow in Prison."

That was the reaction of Ahab to Micaiah's prediction of judgment. "Throw him in prison." How often have baffled kings and rulers said that concerning the men and women who have dared to stand for God against them. To be sure you can throw a man in prison, but you cannot imprison his spirit. Nor can you put truth in jail. God's truth cannot be handled that way. Jails are often stepping stones to truth and victory in the providence of God.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

The primary problem in building strong rural churches is not economic as some would have us believe. It is the need for leadership and an awakened people.—Alexander Nunn.

The Little White Church

An English paper written by a high school student who is a member of the "Little White Church."

The story I am going to relate to you is really the story of a personality. It is a story of achievement which seems extraordinary and unusual for reasons which I shall tell you. The leading character in my story is a young man just twenty-years of age. He is handsome and well-built, weighing about one hundred-ninety pounds. He is usually dressed in a navy or blue double-breasted suit, a white shirt, and a tie that looks just right. Always he is immaculate as well as becomingly attired. He has a charm of personality that invites confidence and wins friends wherever he goes. His chief interest is always in his fellow-man; his chief work is in trying to help others.

In the heat of the month of July, 1952, this young man began to knock at doors of all the homes in a small rural community. He was making a survey to see how many people were interested in organizing a church and building it on a lot in the center of the community. This lot had been given to the community for just that purpose by the late Mr. C. R. Fauette.

Much interest was shown among the people! This young man was proving himself a leader as he went about with his warm, friendly handshake and his genial, sparkling smile. Almost every home extended him a cordial welcome and gladdened his heart by their eagerness to help in his task.

Finally came the day for that first meeting. It was to be held in the school building. That Sunday afternoon seemed to be the hottest one of the extremely warm summer. The young man was visibly worried as he walked back and forth from the school house door to the auditorium. His plan was close to his heart and the possibility of failure was a cause of grave concern. The opening hour came. The young man stood before thirty-seven people who were enthusiastic in their desire to help, in their willingness to follow their leader. A new church was born! Worship services were held regularly in the school house.

Within six short months money had been raised, work had been completed and the Little White Church on the lot in the center of the community was ready to welcome its congregation.

The dedication Sunday was a happy day for the youthful leader and his followers. They were happy and thankful for what had been accomplished in so short a time. A great change had been wrought in Lakeview Community through the efforts of this young ministerial student from Elon College. His fine leadership and the splendid cooperation of all the people had made possible a place for worship.

The Little White Church is a tribute to its founder, John G. Truitt, Jr. He is loved and admired by all in the community from the youngest to the oldest. The church is a constant reminder to us all of a boy who did a man sized job.

WAYNE PERRY.

FREEDOM--OUR HERITAGE, OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

(Continued from page 9.)

Christian faith—St. Francis, Martin Luther, William Penn, Roger Williams, John Wesley—we see that they were all doubters. How easily we forget these lessons.

Congregational Christians believe that all creeds and statements about God and his activity are inadequate, because God is greater than anything that can be said about him. The human vocabulary simply does not contain words which will do justice to his majesty, his wisdom and his loving-kindness. Creeds and dogma have their place if they are understood to be partial descriptions—milestones along the way, but any attempt to set up any description of God and his activity as absolute for all time and eternity—this is not only the supreme act of egoism, it is blasphemy.

And so today, when ecclesiastics, eager to defend their faith, are trying to build walls around their cherished beliefs, saying "We have the truth for all time, and unless you accept it, you will be damned," we know lots of folks will listen to them, for it's so much easier to believe what you're told than it is to go through the painful and disturbing process of working through faith for yourself. And these wall builders, will stop progress for awhile, but somehow, walls have a way of breaking down—for God will not be confined to our narrow interpretation of him, nor will his truth be bound by the schemes and contrivances of mortal man.

The time has come for all of us who believe in freedom to show our colors. When the lights are going out all around us, if we, too, give into the darkness, what hope is there for the future? We owe it to our children, to our church and to our God, to keep burning the light of freedom of conscience, which can only be kept alive as each one of us makes his own witness in his own way.

There's one more thing I would like to say in this matter. There will be some here who will say, "He's talking about tolerance." Yes, I am, but tolerance is only the beginning of Christian freedom. Paul said, "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom."

When any group of people welcomes into its fellowship those with differing ideas and backgrounds, there are going to be differences—and tolerance is not enough. Unless we can learn to love those with whom we differ, and respect their opinions and feelings—not questioning their intelligence or sincerity, we shall fall far short of the ideal of Christian freedom. Where the spirit of the Lord is—that is where the spirit that was in the Lord Jesus: the spirit of love is present—there is real freedom.

Our aim then, is it not, is to make our churches broad enough to take in people of many points of view; tolerant enough so that no one is ever made to feel inferior because he doesn't see things just as others do; inclusive enough to take in every honest inquirer after truth. Into this kind of a fellowship, everyone is invited to present things as he sees them, to talk over differences and to learn from one another. Broad, tolerant, inclusive, this is the spirit of the Congregational Christian witness.

I don't take any credit for belonging to the Congregational Christian Church—I was born into it, but I am glad that I belong to a fellowship that stresses the right of the individual to believe according to the dictates of his conscience. We can't claim that we are the only ones who believe this, and we are humbled by the fact that we haven't always practiced it as we should; but let us pray, that in the days to come, we may not forget our priceless heritage, and that we may be enabled to know the meaning of Christian freedom—in the sense used by the apostle Paul—that where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Ours is a busy place these days. This week, 32 of our children were in the school May Day program—the daughter of our dairyman, Virgie Perkins, was queen. We were all very proud of her. All our other girls and boys did their parts well. It cost us more than $40 for their costumes, but if they rated it, we wished them to take their places along with the others. They seemed so happy and pleased. Our sewing matron, Mrs. Stadler, had a good time making their costumes and getting them ready. And they all saw to it that I was there to see them. There was a big crowd. Our school has over 900 pupils, therefore quite a number of people came to see the queen and her singing, dancing subjects.

This week saw our farm foree, supplemented by several of our boys, planting 6,000 tomato plants. Our plants came by express from Georgia, arriving one morning about 9 o'clock. We had word from the weatherman that it was going to rain that afternoon, so we waited until the next morning to plant the tomatoes. Sure enough, it did come a good rain that afternoon and night. It was a pretty sight to see the farmer and his helpers planting two large sections of our garden.

Of these plants, 3,000 were planted adjacent to our new lake, with the hope that if it begins to be a dry summer we can get our friends to help us with about $2,000 worth of equipment so we can irrigate several acres of our corn, sweet potatoes, beans, etc., so we may have plenty to eat and plenty to can. We wish we were able to acquire this equipment now and have it in readiness. This dry, hilly land needs some irrigation on gardens every summer. Gardens, if they are to amount to much during the entire summer, must have plenty of water. So far this spring we have had good seasons and the pastures and grain crops are beautiful. We are getting peas from the garden, and spring onions and plenty of greens.

I want to thank you for the good report this week. To be sure it is a two weeks' report, which you understand if you read last week's letter; but it does look mighty good.

If every Sunday school received a monthly offering for us, the list could be longer than this every week.

Yesterday we carried ten children to Burlington dentists. Today we have one who has had to go to an eye specialist. Recently, two boys had to go to the doctor with cuts on their heads resulting from bad falls. Every day has its new demands, but the 82 children here have comparatively few trips to the doctor. The children enjoy a feeling of security, friendship, good food, good fun and proper care and training, all of which makes for health and happiness.

And it is also good that the superintendent feels that you are proud to have a share in making the care of these homeless children a good success. It gives me a sense of joy in my work and genuine appreciation for the privilege of helping you with the good work which you are doing.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MAY 6, 1954.

Commodities for the week.

Clothing:

Mrs. L. J. Brown, Newport News, Va.
Mrs. Earl Danieleley, Elon College, N. C.
William L. Horne, Liberty, N. C.
Mrs. Burton Daniels, Beaufort, N. C.

Coupons:

Samuel Jones, Columbus, Ga.
Mrs. P. H. Williams, Raleigh, N. C.
Ladies' Missionary Society, Isle of Wight Church.
Junior Class, Belew Creek Sunday School.
Ladies' Aid, Mt. Olivet (G) Church.

Fifty copies of "The Upper Room":

J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va.

Coupons & Glasses:

Shelton Mem. Church, Portsmouth, Va.
Bethlehem (Nans.) Christian Church.

Ice Cream:

Pet Dairy Co., Burlington, N. C.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 4,764.54
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Bethel	$ 32.44
Moore Union	12.00
Morrisville	8.75
Mt. Auburn S. S.	10.75
Mt. Herman	24.00
New Hope	30.00
Wake Chapel	60.33
	178.27

Eastern Va. Conference:

Bethlehem (Nans.) S. S. $	48.07
Isle of Wight	30.00
Liberty Spring S. S.	20.00
Mt. Carmel S. S.	16.68
Spring Hill S. S.	8.86
	123.61

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Hines Chapel	$ 6.00
Pleasant Grove	30.00
Union (Va.) S. S.	5.00
	41.00

Western N. C. Conference:

Brown's Chapel S. S. ... $	15.00
Hank's Chapel	60.00
Pleasant Union	14.21
Zion	30.00
	119.21

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethel S. S.	$ 2.00
Newport S. S.	28.00
Wood's Chapel, Special ..	5.66
Wood's Chapel S. S. ...	10.00
	45.66

Total	$ 507.75
-------------	-----------

Grand total	$ 5,272.29
-------------------	-------------

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$11,951.54
New Hope, Roanoke, Ala. $	4.09
United Cong. Christian S.
S., Columbus, Ga.	9.36
General Mills Inc.	31.00
Benjamin Cone, Greensboro, N. C.	100.00
Mary Sue Brittle Class ..	5.00
Special Gifts	314.60
	464.05

Grand total	$12,415.59
-------------------	-------------

Total for the week	$ 971.80
--------------------------	-----------

Total for the year	$17,687.88
--------------------------	-------------

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased)

.....
(City)

.....
(Date of Death)

.....
(Survivor to be Written)

.....
(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Tenth Annual Town and Country School

Applications for the tenth annual Town and Country School at Emory University, Georgia, July 6 to 21, are being received now from ministers and other religious workers of all denominations in the South.

Last summer, one hundred and thirty-four rural church leaders, representing fifteen denominations, sixteen states and Canada, attended this interdenominational, non-sectarian, graduate school.

This summer the participants will share in a remarkable fellowship with "Rural Ministers of the Year," pastors of the "Rural Churches of the Year," an excellent staff, and with special resource persons.

Small discussion groups will investigate methods and resources for planning better church programs under the direction of Dr. Earl D. C. Brewer, Educational Director of the School.

Four subject matter groups will meet for an hour and a half each morning.

Dr. Ira W. Moomaw, executive director, Agricultural Missions, Inc., New York, will teach a course in "The Church and World Problems" in which special consideration will be given to the ideological conflicts in rural areas of the world and agricultural missions.

Dr. John T. Greene, of the Department of Sociology of Boston University, will direct a course on "Marriage and Family Counselling" in which emphasis will be given to the responsibility of the church in this area and some specific guidance will be given ministers for the task.

Dr. Daniel Russell of the Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology of Texas A. and M. College, College Station, Texas, will offer a course on "Community Dynamics" in which a thorough examination of community organization, dynamic factors affecting change, and the role of the church will be made.

Dr. John L. Fulmer, associate professor of Economics, of the School of Business Administration of Emory University, will lead a course entitled "Economics in the Changing South" in which careful attention will be given to agricultural and industrial developments and the effects of population trends on the local level, in the South, and for the world.

Other features will include four lectures on "Rural Evangelism," the annual sponsor's banquet, a one day conference on "Religion and Rural America," presentation of various denominational Town and Country programs, recognition of the "Rural Ministers of the Year," and the top churches in the Church Development Program, and many other things.

A limited number of Tuition and Sustentation Scholarships are available. Anyone interested in attending should write to G. Ross Freeman, Administrative Director, Box 309, Emory University, Georgia.

Tickets to the World Council Assembly

Tickets to the Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches, to be held at Evanston, Illinois, next August, promise to be as hard to come by as duckets for a World Series baseball game. Just 30 days after 33,000 tickets for public sessions of the Assembly went on sale in Evanston, 26,000 had been snapped up. At this rate, all general admissions will be gone by June 1—two and a half months before the World Council convenes!

To enable the general public to sit in on part of the Assembly, 3,000 tickets had been set aside for each of eleven plenary sessions in McGraw Hall on the campus of Northwestern University. These are in addition to 1,600 sets of tickets for all 25 plenary sessions that have been distributed through denominations belonging to the World Council, the councils of churches and the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States.

Ticket restrictions do not apply to the Ecumenical Festival of Faith to be held the night of August 15, in Soldier Field, Chicago, which has a seating capacity of 100,000.

Long before tickets for plenary sessions went on sale on April 1, orders had been pouring into the office of World Council Tickets at 1800 Sheridan Road, Evanston. They came from people in all of the 48 states, plus Canada, Mexico and several other countries. The office has filled orders from individuals, from families planning to make Evanston one of the stops on their vacation itinerary, and from local church groups.

One minister in Texas wrote that 1,000 Texans had chartered buses to bring them to Evanston for the Assembly, whereupon Dr. Paul Macy, who is in charge of the Evanston office, was forced to reply politely that Texans must apply for tickets just like other people! Dr. Macy also expressed surprise at the large number of "rank and file" church members who have flooded his office with orders.

Interested persons who write immediately may still be able to secure tickets on a first come, first served basis. Orders should be accompanied by a stamped, self addressed envelope and $1 for each ticket requested.

Those who miss out on the plenary sessions may still attend the Soldier Field Festival of Faith, which it is hoped will be one of the most impressive experiences of public worship ever arranged by Christian forces of America. Pageantry, music and the spoken word will be used to dramatize God's part in the process of creation, the steps through which salvation is received, and ending on a note of Christian hope.

Protestants Plan to Broadcast from Tangier

It is reported that an international Protestant radio station will begin operating soon in Tangier, Morocco, under the auspices of International Evangelism, Inc.

Rev. Paul E. Freed, a Baptist minister of Greensboro, N. C., made the announcement following his return from a visit to North Africa. He said that non-denominational programs will be broadcast in French, English, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, German and Russian. A staff of seven persons will operate the station which will be known by the call letters WIET, standing for "International Evangelism, Tangier."

"Our aim," said Mr. Freed, "is to reach the 'unbelievers,' those who are members of no church."

"Europe is not godless," he added, "even though church attendance is very low among the masses. There is a vacuum in their hearts which we believe Christ can fill, if the gospel is preached in terms they can understand."

To Spend Millions on Radio-TV

The National Council of Churches Broadcasting and Film Commission plans to spend $1,056,085 this year on religious radio and television programs and film production. Figures recently released show that during 1953 the Protestant and Orthodox churches, working through the commission were responsible for more than 32,000 radio broadcasts and 5,515 telecasts of regularly scheduled religious programs—an all-time high

Thoughts About Our Democratic Church

By REV. CLAYTON S. RICE, D. D.

Jesus taught us that he was the Son of God, and that we are his brethren, and, therefore, we are the sons of God. What a heritage! These bodies of ours, the instruments we use to make ourselves known in this physical universe, are merely tools, temporary things! The real you, the real I—why, we are eternal souls, sons of God, our Heavenly Father, thinking, feeling, willing, self-knowing beings, limited in power and understanding, but nonetheless his sons, with the capacity for development beyond our fondest dreams with a goal, “unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.”

Our church is a religious democracy. In the final analysis, it is based upon this lofty conception of man, man as the son of God. As equals, all sons of God, banded together in the church of his Son, no man has the right to claim that through him the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ can be mediated in any particular, unique, authoritative, official way. We have no priesthood, in the sense of a sacerdotal church. We have no ecclesiastical hierarchy. We believe in the priesthood of all believers!

It is easy to disparage man and his powers today, in a world nearly wrecked by the folly of individual and collective suicidal action. It is therefore not difficult to build up a church which disparages man's birthright and removes him far from God. Sacerdotal churches make great gains in times of the terror which walketh by night and by day as well. A man who does not believe in himself will never dream that he is a son of God. We do not marvel that many men have lost faith in themselves and in their divine origin these puzzling days. Weaklings always crack under strain, and the free churches have bred plenty of weaklings. But we have not lost faith. We still believe in man's divine heritage.

May I share an experience with you, one which is so vivid* that even after years have elapsed, it is still a most vital one? Once I stood on the top of Mount McCalab in the Rockies. The forest supervisor, my friend, had said that so far as he knew no man had ever climbed that particular mountain. He was wrong. Twenty years before I reached the top, another man had made it. He had built a monument there, and had left a note of greeting for the next man who scaled it. I had climbed alone all day to reach the summit. Alone, I stood gazing off into the distance. What a panorama! Sections of four states stretched out before me. Forests, rivers, canyons, then other alluring snow-clad peaks miles and miles away! Thrillingly beautiful and quiet—oh, so quiet! Just man and the Eternal!

Alone, on that topmost pinnacle, I looked up into the clear blue sky. How glorious it was. It seemed as though I could gaze into the very face of God himself. No man has ever seen God at any time, yet there are times that man can feel his presence. It seemed as though he smiled on me that day—he, my God, I, his son. Alone in the quiet of that glory, I communed with him. In that hour, I was sure I had gazed into the eyes of the Eternal!

Yes, the right and the privilege and the duty of man, as the son of God, to stand upon his own feet, and with shoulders back, to look unafraid into the eyes of his loving Father, is something which our fellowship encourages. It is the privilege of our glorious heritage as sons of God through Christ.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1954

NUMBER 20

God of Grace and God of Glory

I

God of grace and God of glory,
On Thy people pour Thy power;
Crown Thine ancient Church's story,
Bring her bud to glorious flower.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
For the facing of this hour.

II

Lo! the hosts of evil round us
Scorn Thy Christ, assail his ways!
Fears and doubts too long have bound us,
Free our hearts to work and praise.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
For the living of these days.

III

Cure Thy children's warring madness.
Bend our pride to Thy control;
Shame our wanton selfish gladness,
Rich in things and poor in soul.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
Lest we miss Thy kingdom's goal.

IV

Set our feet on lofty places;
Gird our lives that they may be Armoured with all Christ-like graces
In the fight to set men free.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
That we fail not man nor Thee.

V

Save us from weak resignation
To the evils we deplore;
Let the search for Thy salvation
Be our glory evermore.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
Serving Thee whom we adore.

—John Hughes.

News Flashes

The Honorable Mills E. Godwin, Jr., outstanding lawyer and member of the Virginia Senate, will deliver the commencement address at Elon College on May 31.

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle on the arrival of a new grandson, Warren Howard Jones, born on May 6 to their son-in-law, J. B. Jones and daughter, Jane Hardeastle Jones, in West Lafayette, Indiana.

We reprint, this week, from the American Beard News Bulletin, the article, "Peace in Our Time," by Rev. Raymond A. Dudley. Many of our people heard Mr. Dudley and greatly enjoyed his presentations at the recent sessions of The Southern Convention. They will find this article, too, worth while.

Palmyra Christian Church, near Edinburg, in the Valley of Virginia, has planned a "singing service" at the church on Sunday evening, May 23, at 7:30 o'clock. Among the numbers expected at the service will be several by the Mount Jackson Candlelighters Chorus. Rev. Martin Riehrdt of Switzerland, who is helping in church work in the valley for four weeks, will bring brief greetings to those present.

The Church Building Loan Fund pledges continue to increase. Declarations of Purpose from the Carolina Church of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, Rev. Bland A. Leebrick, pastor, for $520; and the Eastern Carolina churches, Pleasant Hill, $134, and Piney Plain, $200, both pastored by Rev. George M. Tally have been received by the Convention Office.

A reception will be held in the Recreation Room of the First Congregational Christian Church, in Richmond, on Sunday May 23, at 6:30 p. m. The occasion will be in honor of Robert H. Fernandez and Jerry McLean, who have been acting as assistant pastor and youth director during the past year. The reception will be sponsored by the youth group of the church, and a large crowd is expected to be present in honor of these young people who have served so faithfully.

Children's Day Offering for Christian Education

Many of our Sunday schools and churches will be observing Children's Day in the next few weeks. Certainly there is no more important work of the church than that of providing adequate Christian training for the boys and girls in our communities and homes. With the increased birth rate all over America and particularly in the South, this responsibility is even greater in these days. The fact that more than 15 million children under the age of 10 who are in no Sunday school, constitutes a real problem and opportunity for the churches of the United States of America. Those children will be voting citizens before many years and this is a dangerous minority. If the church fails to reach these boys and girls in their tender years, it is horrible to imagine what may be the result in the moral and spiritual life of America.

Children's Day is a time when special emphasis is given to the work of the Sunday school in training boys and girls in the Christian way of life. The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention is earnestly seeking to promote this important work of teaching boys and girls in our Sunday school and church. They need your help. The Board of Christian Education has to offer aid on a very small budget. Children's Day offers an opportunity for the church and Sunday school to make a special offering for the work of Christian Education to our Board of Christian Education. The Board of Christian Education not only helps to sponsor leadership training courses for teachers that they may be more effective leaders of our youth, but it also promotes the Vacation Bible School Work during the summer months. Your contribution to the Board of Christian Education on Children's Day will give the Board of Christian Education more adequate funds with which to do its important work.

We hope that every Sunday school and church in the convention will receive a special offering on Children's Day or on some occasion when the work of the children is particularly emphasized and that the offering will be sent to the Southern Convention office, Elon College, North Carolina, designated for the Board of Christian Education.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

The Far-Reaching Effects of a Sermon

By REV. H. H. SMITH,
Ashland, Virginia.

"What is a good sermon?" This question was asked of an old-time "presiding elder," and his immediate response was: "A good sermon is a sermon that does good." Judged by this off-hand definition, a certain sermon preached by a Methodist minister in Mississippi over 100 years ago was a mighty good sermon.

It was at a missionary anniversary of the Mississippi Conference that a young lady heard a stirring sermon on China's need of the gospel. When the offering was taken, she dropped five dollars into the basket, with a note which read: "I give five dollars and myself." Her name was Mary McClellan. Shortly afterward she married a missionary, Rev. James W. Lambuth, and sailed for China in 1854. After sailing—and drifting—for 135 days, they reached Shanghai.

James W. Lambuth was a great missionary, who labored 33 years in China and several years in Japan. Dr. J. C. C. Newton said: "It is not too much to say that Dr. Lambuth was the pioneer and founder of much of our work in China, especially the evangelistic work. . . . His 33 years of constant toil in China has imbedded itself in the foundations of Christ's kingdom, which will abide till the end of the world."

In all his labors, evangelistic and educational, Dr. Lambuth was ably assisted by his wife, a most capable and remarkable woman. "She conducted schools for girls in both China and Japan with marked success, and when funds from home were cut off by war, she took in boarders to meet expenses. . . . She aroused the women back home to organize and aid in mission work abroad"—a forerunner of the Methodist Women's organization, the Woman's Society of Christian Service. "For the amount of work done, the many lines of usefulness, for utter self-forgetfulness, for consummate ability, for undying devotion to the Master's cause, we question if Mrs. Lambuth has ever been surpassed. The passion of her life seemed to be service," said one who knew he well.

It must have been "good preaching" that moved Mary McClellan to dedicate her life to the work of making Christ known to the people on the other side of the globe. No
(Continued on page 15.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Workday at Moonclon, June 5

The Executive Committee of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention meeting in Burlington planned a workday for the laymen to be held at Moonclon June 5, 1954. A committee to plan for this workday was named. T. A. Vincent and W. P. Mahan were named as co-chairmen of the committee. Other members included P. D. Howell, Jr., A. E. Pye, C. W. Russom, Ardell Simmons, K. B. Dofflemeyer and J. E. Danieley.

Mr. W. B. Williams, chairman of the laymen of the convention, has already sent publicity to all the men in the convention.

It is to be hoped that many of our men will respond to this challenge. Overnight accommodations will be available for those desiring. Meals will be served at a reasonable cost to all the men who come. However, we must have reservations in advance. Send your reservations to me at Box 515, Elon College, indicating what meals you desire and whether or not you wish a place to spend the night. We cannot ask the ladies to prepare food unless we know you are coming and then we must pay them for all the food which they prepare. None of you would want to do less than this.

This is the first time that the laymen of the convention have undertaken a work project of this type. Talk it up in your church and community. Send in your reservations and bring a large group. With your help this can be a great day.

* * * * *

Union, Virginia, Men Organize

A Men's Fellowship was organized recently in the Union Congregational Church of Virgilina, Virginia. The group elected the following officers: president, A. Woodrow Murray; secretary, William Tuck; treasurer, Leon C. Murray.

This Fellowship has made plans to have regular monthly meetings and has already undertaken some projects in the interest of the church in the local community and the convention. They have done work cleaning the church and lot, work with the Men's Chorus, and have raised $125 in cash and pledges for Moonclon. Finances have been secured from free-will offerings.

Do you have a Men's Organization in your church? If not, we hope that you will seriously consider forming one. If you need materials or assistance, please contact the editor of this column.

J. E. D.

* * * * *

Western Carolina Laymen to Meet

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Western North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches will hold its regular meeting on Saturday, May 29, at the High Point Church.

This is to be "Ladies Night," and each man is asked to bring his wife or sweetheart along. We are expecting laymen from every one of our churches at this meeting, and we are always glad to have our ministers with us, too.

The guest speaker for this occasion will be the Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro. We are sure that all will enjoy his message.

HUBERT L. BEANE,
President.

The vitality of a church may be tested by its ministry to children.

—Harry Thomas Stock.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"Where Do We Go from . . . Segregation?"

"A certain rich man said, 'I will say to my soul, Soul, . . . eat, drink and be merry.' But God said unto him, 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee.'"

"He giveth to all life, . . . and hath made of one blood all nations of men . . . and hath determined . . . the bounds of their habitation."

Many years ago, when the writer was teaching a Bible class of young men in their late teens and early twenties, one of his brightest scholars failed to show up for class, though he did appear for church service. Upon being chided for failing his class meeting, he acknowledged that he had attended a dance on Saturday night, and had failed to awake in time for the earlier meeting. "But," asked he, "doesn't the Bible say, 'Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you may die'?" Agreeing that there was some such saying in the Bible, we asked how God had classified the man who made the statement. He was at class the next Sunday!

What, you are beginning to wonder, does this have to do with segregation? Absolutely nothing. But it does have a bearing on Biblical teaching or Christian ethics. Just as the phrase, "Buried with Christ in baptism," is certainly the strongest if not the only pronouncement for baptism by immersion in the Bible; so the quotation, "He . . . hath made of one blood all nations," is the stronghold of the anti-segregationist. Both of these pronouncements lose strength when taken in their context. On the other hand, the balance of the latter quotation, "He . . . hath determined the bounds of their habitation," lifted from its context, can certainly be construed by those who wish to do so to mean that God has decreed segregation as the natural order.

On Monday of this week the United States Supreme Court ruled unanimously that the segregation of white and Negro students in public schools was unconstitutional and must end. It thus reversed the ruling of that body, made in 1896, that equal schools for the races would satisfy the requirements of the fourteenth amendment.

Actually, the court did not decide the question purely on the basis of that amendment. Chief Justice Warren, who presented the historic decision, wrote in part, The court "cannot turn the clock back" to the enactment of the fourteenth amendment or the imposing of the "separate but equal" doctrine in 1896. "We must consider public education in the light of the full development of its place in American life throughout the nation. Only in this way can it be determined if segregation in public schools deprives these plaintiffs of the equal protection of the laws." The unanimous decision of these nine men was that it did.

While the Court was unanimous in its decision, there is a great lack of unanimity among our law makers. Senator Byrd of Virginia, is quoted as saying the court's decision "will bring implications and dangers of the greatest consequence." Senator Russell of Georgia, Vice-Presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket in the 1952 election, and one of the most liberal of Southerners, termed the decision "a flagrant abuse of judicial power," adding that it was a matter that should be determined by the law makers, not the courts. Governor Umstead of North Carolina stated that he was "terribly disappointed." Representative Whitten of Mississippi, suggests that "the effect is to injure the very group it would propose to help." This might well be so. The advice of Governor Burns of South Carolina, that "all of our people, white and colored, exercise restraint and preserve order," is good advice.

The Raleigh News and Observer typifies the degree of restraint shown in most editorial columns of Southern newspapers. It comments: "No sensible, informed person would minimize the proportions of the problem presented to the South by this decision. The practical dangers and difficulties involved are apparent. The decision . . . involves emotions as well as enducation. . . . It involves great numbers of people who sincerely believe they are right and the court is wrong. Such facts make it imperative that the South . . . face it with all the composure and good sense of which it is capable."

On the other hand, the Jackson Mississippi News heralds the decision as "the worst thing that has happened to the South since carpetbaggers and scalawags took charge of our civil government in Reconstruction days."

The Richmond Times Dispatch sums up a lengthy editorial thus: "What seems desirable today, in the light of the court's finding, is for men and women of good will in both races to keep their heads, to avoid threats and hysteria, and to seek reasonable and sane solutions. It is only thus that the many knotty problems posed by Monday's truly historic decision can be solved."

In the final outcome, it will remain for the Negro and his friends to determine whether he shall gain by the court's decision or if it shall become a Pyrrhic victory

J. T. K.

The Validation of Learning

A Commencement Address

By Dr. RICHARD K. MORTON

First Congregational Christian Church, Jacksonville, Florida

Learning, in these times, must have definite relevance to our own personal existence and to the requirements of the times in which we live. Learning as simply the process of accumulating knowledge is not likely either to stir or to save our society. Nor will the pragmatic test suffice, on the other hand. Learning must be validated as something which contains within it something propulsive and at the same time transforming.

Thousands are asking, in these anxious times, What shall I learn? How shall I link what I learn with the ambition I have to make some sort of an impact upon the environment in which I live? They are seeking the validation of learning as a part of the social progress. They desire it to be an expression of the activity of their own minds, and they seek evidences of its value in all aspects of life.

In our day no one imagines that he can go forth from any institution of learning and, by the simple magic of proudly waving his diploma before his fellows, command position and power. Nor does anyone imagine, I think, that there is much demand for those who would acquire learning as they might assemble a stamp collection or some attractive shells from a beach.

It is not simply that we demand, in the tradition of Pierce or James or from the instrumentalism of John Dewey, a sharply pragmatic element, but rather that we realize that learning must be incorporated integrally in the regular and normal routines of life. It is not something simply validated by a degree or so much residence in an institution of learning. It is not proved by the fact that so many books have been read. It is validated as life becomes a process in which the learning process is an important and inspirational part.

If this is true, then it means likewise that it becomes associated with our faith and our family affairs and other relationships. It enters into our work and our responsibilities to our community. It changes the style of our living and the quality and clarity and vigor of our thinking.

Those who would join the society of educated people must have undergone an intellectual conversion. They must have been transformed and renewed. They must see with new clarity and persuasiveness the condition and the human need of their times. They must have developed a clearer vision of the fuller life and of the better society.

What graduates of these days grope for is a higher state of thinking and serving and understanding which is more than pride in the possession of knowledge and more than a certificate to power and position. It is rather the appropriation of learning for the purposes of the greater enjoyment and implementation of daily living, a process to be accompanied always by a transforming of the mind and its relationship and interests.

I have counselled often enough at institutes and summer camps among adolescents and I have taught enough on the college level to know that there are evidences of a widespread inquiry into what is most surely vital to be learned and where learning is most needed to be applied for the enrichment of the individual personality.

Young men and women going forth from our educational institutions today recognize that few will organize any bands or any shoutings for them, just because they have completed some course. There will be little stir because they have mastered the facts and skills in some course of study. Where they have their chance lies in the divine promise that, in the course of this training, a spark may have kindled within and a vision appeared of a better life and a redeemed society. It lies also in a completely unique contribution from their own heart and mind, which no one else could make.

Those who go forth will be challenged to give themselves more than simply some knowledge from their minds. They will be questioned not so much on the mastery of some course, but rather on whether this has transformed them into better people, more eager and ready to live and to serve their times.

"The excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it" is a word we find in Ecclesiastes 7:12. It can perhaps be used as additional strengthening of the idea that through knowledge which mellows into wisdom the individual finds more abundant living. This is the ultimate validation of learning.

There is also, in the pursuit and possession of learning, the matter of an "ought" or a moral obligation to use it as a means of self-transformation and service. "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." This word from James 4:17 points directly to the social responsibility of learning. If there is no purposeful application of learning to life, it loses its meaning and its value.

Baccalaureate and commencement injunctions and exhortations often come too late to many who have had privileges of special training. They have been so concerned to master facts that they have lost the meaning of life and they have lost a living, vital connection with their fellow beings.

Those who are graduating in these days are sure to be touched, in some degree, by the strength of the need for those who have not only some facts and data and skills, but also wisdom, and who have a desire for personal advancement but also a concern for social betterment. They are seeing learning, not as something set apart from life, but something which should become the most meaningful part of life.

While our generation is a creation of advertising and commercial enterprise and propaganda (both good and bad), there is a heartening realization, among many, of dangers peculiar to our times and of the heritage which is ours.

As a civilization, we have been molded, at least in some degree, by influences from the revolutions and awakenings of the eighteenth century, in France and England particularly, and many of our leaders were long influenced by the leadership of pre-war Germany in philosophy and kindred areas. We have harvested some of the fruits of the philosophy of Voltaire and Rousseau and of Schopenhauer and Nietzsche. We have seen around us the prevailing influence upon so many thinkers of the philosophy of Locke. We have felt the tremendous impact of the teachings of Karl Marx, and we have been

(Continued on page 13.)

Christian Education, a Responsibility Of All Church Members

A broad new concept that Christian education in the communities of the United States is a responsibility of all church members and not just a handful of trained leaders, emerged from a Protestant conference on lay leadership, held recently at Schwenksville, Pa.

Gradual adoption by the churches of up-to-date group training methods to help achieve this goal was widely forecast among the more than 70 denominational executives and lay consultants in leadership training who attended the five-day meeting.

The conference, sponsored by the National Council of Churches through its Commission on Christian General Education, projected other new trends in lay leadership training, including: (1) more on-the-job training, (2) extension of guidance services to local churches, and (3) more training of local pastors and church officers.

Traditionally, lay leadership training programs of the denominations have been geared to instructing voluntary Sunday school teachers in what and how to teach, declared Dr. A. L. Roberts, general director of the National Council mission. Today, however, "emphasis is more and more being placed on broadening this to include training of all members of the church," he said. "Every Christian has a job to do, not just in his church but in his community," he continued, "and ways must be found through group work in which many participate to have all believers exert the influence of their Christian faith."

Among the 18 denominations with 25,000,000 members represented at the meeting, it was reported that 219,000 credits were issued in standard leadership training courses last year. More than 5,000 workers were enrolled in laboratory work, and 877 clinics and similar projects were carried out in local churches.

An increasing number of church bodies are maintaining loan libraries well stocked with source books on leadership education, a conference fact summary pointed out, and a record 8,262 worker conferences were sponsored by the churches throughout the country last year.

Dr. Roberts went on to list other new trends in leadership training methods reported to the conference. There was general agreement that less stress should be laid on the earning of course credits and more emphasis on over-all preparation of trainees to learn the nature and methods of their job, he said. Use of job analysis techniques now in common use in industry is another trend, he indicated.

No formal findings were issued by the conference, which concentrated on four days of study sessions and a final day for summarizing conclusions. The new training techniques developed and discussed will be carried back to denominations and to interdenominational bodies for future consideration and adoption.

Assessing the significance of the conference in the whole field of Christian leadership education, delegates commented:

"Central agreement of the conference was that every church member, whatever his employment, has a contribution to make to his church and his community. Central concern of the conference was how to help every church member do this" . . . Dr. James E. Fidler, Philadelphia, Pa., director of leadership education, American Baptist Convention.

"Unconsciously the church has largely been training the educated two per cent of membership as leaders. The new concept will broaden our training program to motivate and train every believer to his capacities" . . . Dr. Olivia Pearl Stokes, Boston, Mass., education director, the Massachusetts Council of Churches.

"There has evolved a strong opinion . . . that Christian education in the Protestant churches must extend to all age levels and church activities . . . that leadership training and education must be provided . . . and must be continuous . . . and must include more and more informal training, group discussion, work shops, laboratory schools, etc." . . . Gerald Young, Chicago, Ill., conference consultant and specialist in industrial personnel training.

University Students Challenged to New Understanding of Responsibilities

Teams of outstanding Protestant leaders reached an audience of more than 83,000 students on 23 university campuses across the nation this year with a challenge to a new understanding of their Christian responsibilities and commitment to more active churchmanship.

Representing a variety of professional fields, the church leaders conducted five-day student evangelistic programs on campuses in 16 states under the sponsorship of University Christian mission.

Citing "a growing interest in religion in higher education during the past four or five years," Dr. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Chairman of the Mission's Committee, declared that the university mission program has made "a significant contribution to religion in higher education." He paid tribute also to "the competent Christian leaders who gave their time and energies to such an important part of American life." Dr. Kinsolving is Rector of St. James Protestant Episcopal Church in New York.

The University Christian Mission program was started in 1938 and since then has conducted 250 separate campus programs. It is jointly sponsored by the United Student Christian Council, a related agency of the National Council and by the Council's Commission on Christian Higher Education and Joint Department of Evangelism. Next year visits are planned on 20 campuses in 16 states and more than 65 persons have already accepted invitations to participate, according to Mr. Stoner.

"This conference points to a new era of training, not only for Sunday school teachers, but for every church member who has a regular task to perform. Such Christian service training will include: (1) A clear-cut job analysis, (2) Development of skill in human relations and group leadership, and (3) Basic understanding of the nature and mission of the church"

. . . Dr. W. Randolph Thornton, Chicago, Ill., executive director of leadership education and church school administration for the National Council's Division of Christian Education.

Chairman of the conference was Rev. M. Earl Cunningham, Nashville.
(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Proposed Loan

At the direction of the Board of Trustees, officially given, and approved by the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches in session at Bethlehem Church, the college administration has been working faithfully completing the application to the Housing and Home Finance Agency of the United States Government for a loan of $650,000 with which to construct two dormitories, one for men and one for women, and a dining room. The application was presented to the Philadelphia Office Thursday of last week in person.

Mr. William D. Jones, acting head of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and his associates were complimentary of the application as presented but there were some slight changes to be made and other details that must be added before actual negotiations for the loan begin. The architects are working on these details and will have these deficiencies all taken care of in a few days and the application will be re-submitted as amended with the hope that negotiations may begin at once.

Those who have had dealings with the government in matters of this kind are aware of the "red tape" that must be considered before definite action is taken. Assurances were given that when the application is finally accepted there will be no doubt about the money being made available. Students, faculty members, and friends on and off the campus are enthusiastic about the prospects of receiving these much needed equipments in the near future. We are all aware that with these added improvements will come added responsibilities, responsibilities that will include all and require active participation of all who are interested in the welfare and future of our college.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The report for this week sets a very good example. Six of our churches contributed a total of $407.00. If the other one hundred ninety four of our churches would follow the example set by this small number, the total amount would be of great assistance to the college as it moves into the summer months.

Student enrollment for the summer months is necessarily small. About all that we can hope for is that the summer school will pay its own way. Aside from summer school, a total of $105,000 will be required to meet demands of the fourth quarter of the college year. One third of this amount is in sight but the other two thirds will, of necessity, come from the usual sources of support for the college. Conference Apportionment is a very important source of support of the college.

Previously Reported	$ 2,861.96
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Clayton	$ 33.00
Henderson	50.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Rosemont	$ 32.00
Franklin	245.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Asheville	$ 17.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Ether	$ 30.00
	<hr/> 407.00
Total to date	$ 3,268.96

* * * * *

Elon Students Participate in Science Meeting

The North Carolina Academy of Science, in which the faculty of the Elon College Science Department has long been active, met in regular annual session at East Carolina College in Greenville, North Carolina, Friday and Saturday, May 7 and 8,

For the first time in the history of the academy a special session was held for under-graduates. At the meeting of this section, papers representing either library or laboratory research were presented by students from the various colleges in the state—Woman's College, Flora McDonald, Meredith College, Wake Forest College, East Carolina College, Duke University, and Elon College, Wake Forest was represented by two reports; Elon College, by four reports; and each of the other institutions gave one report.

The reports presented by the students from Elon College were all the result of original research carried out in the Department of Chemistry of the college. Each of the men making a report is a member of this year's Senior Class.

Charles W. Phillips, Jr., of Burlington, reported on "Some notes on filter paper electrophoretic separation of amino acid mixtures." Richard H. Newman, of Mebane, North Carolina, gave a paper entitled, "Some applications of paper chromatography to inorganic qualitative analysis." D. York Brannock, Jr., of Burlington, spoke on "Studies related to tertoctylphenol." Phillip Mann, of Cypress Chapell, Virginia, gave a report on some "Studies related to allylmalonic ester."

Judges for the occasion, appointed by the president of the academy from the membership of the academy, awarded the report of Richard Newman a second place rating. As a result of this rating, he was presented with a $15 cash prize, a year's membership in the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a one-year subscription to the "Scientific Monthly."

Each of the other Elon students making a report has announced plans for future work. Charles Phillips has been awarded a Morehead Scholarship to attend the School of Medicine at the University of North Carolina. This scholarship will pay him $1500 per year. York Brannock has accepted an assistantship at Duke University where he will do graduate work in chemistry. The assistantship has a stipend of $1350 annually. Clemson College has awarded Phillip Mann an assistantship valued at $1300 per year.

This speaks well for the work that is being done by the college in general and the Department of Chemistry in particular.

J. E. DANIELEY.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, A RESPONSIBILITY.

(Continued from page 6.)

ville, Tenn., director of leadership education for the Methodist Church. The two co-chairmen were Dr. Floyd Hyde, New York City, director of leadership training for the United Church Women; and the Rev. Alvin J. Cooper, Toronto, Ont., associate secretary of leadership education for the United Church of Canada.

—N. C. N.

Peace in Our Time . . .

By RAMOND A. DUDLEY

A hundred years ago, in a New England village, when a man broke his leg while working in the woods, the neighbors got together and cut a supply of fire wood for his home. When a man was sick in the summer the neighbors cut his hay and put it in the barn. When a house burned, each woman went to her cellar and contributed a can or two of fruit to build up the destroyed larder.

These people were sensitive to human need; and they reacted to suffering intelligently and sacrificially. They not only met the particular needs as they arose, but they built up a community in which this spirit of mutual helpfulness prevailed. If we are to have "peace in our time," this spirit must prevail in the world community—for we are indeed one world now.

Those five young men who were ordained in the Salem Tabernacle in 1812, to go out as the first missionaries from New England to distant lands, were sensitive to human need as they had come to see it. They too reacted intelligently. And theirs was a most impressive sacrifice for they had slim hope of returning to New England.

From this small beginning grew the missionary movement of the "Great Century." Somewhere between 4500 and 5000 young men and women have since gone out as missionaries under the American Board. Today, about 18,000 American Protestant missionaries of all denominations are serving overseas. Such intelligent, sacrificial and sustained effort in response to human need has never been equalled in the world.

This great movement is impressive also because the early initiative to preach the gospel, by the very nature of the gospel, developed into a many-sided effort to meet every kind of human need. Missionaries ministered to body, mind and soul, as did Christ, and they trained the people among whom they worked to do likewise.

But this did not bring peace among the nations. In spite of the great effort of missionaries in China, China went behind a curtain. Even had there been five times as many missionaries spending five times as much of the gifts of the churches in America, probably China still would have gone behind the curtain.

While the missionaries worked, western governments and sometimes business concerns, sought to maintain the colonial system in crass neglect of human need and with the antithesis of sacrificial motives. So China was dominated by Communism, in spite of the efforts of Christian missions. About the time the United States won her freedom, India lost her freedom. And so after 150 years under colonialism, India with a newly won freedom is hypersensitive to anything savoring of political or economic domination from without, in spite of the efforts of Christian missions. Africa was parcelled up among the white nations and her resources exploited. So, in spite of the efforts of Christian missions, the black man burns with resentment and is driven to despair in the frustrations of economic and racial domination.

We cannot hope for peace in our times unless and until the morality of men and women in the New England village is amplified and extended to operate in an organized way on a world-wide scale, and until the techniques developed by the mission movement and by scientists in many branches are backed by the resources and power of governments to help underdeveloped nations to help themselves in meeting human need of every sort.

Arnold Toynbee says that our age will not be remembered for its terrible crimes or for its astounding inventions. But it will be remembered because it was the first age of mankind that dared to think it practicable to make the benefits of a scientific civilization attainable for the whole human race.

In differing degrees men in our time have dared to believe. They dared to organize the World Health Organization to bring health to all nations. They dared to organize the Food and Agricultural Organization to develop the agricultural potentialities of the world. They dared to bring these movements together under the United Nations as its "specialized agencies."

Late in 1948 a former newspaper man, employed in the State Department, dared to believe. He passed on an idea to a White House assistant who gave it to the president. In spite of advice to the contrary, the president dared to believe and in his inaugural address on January 20, 1949, announced the "Bold New Program" which has become the hope of millions who know it as the Point Four Program.

In this program the wealthiest and most powerful nation on earth is called upon to be sensitive to human need—to act intelligently and sacrificially to meet this need. Other nations were invited to join in this effort. The idea has been clearly set forth. We have the scientific knowledge and the material resources to make the idea a reality and progressively to help underdeveloped nations to help themselves in attaining a higher standard of living.

The crucial question today is, do the people of America have the moral and spiritual qualities necessary to sustain on a national scale efforts worthy of this ideal?

If the Point IV program were to fail, probably we would blame the government; but it might be nearer the truth to say that the church has failed, for to the church belong the issues of the spirit.

Gandhiji was far from being materialist. But on one occasion he wrote to his friend the poet Tagore, "The suffering millions ask one poem, invigorating food." Not only do they ask but they believe it is possible for them to have food. There can be no peace in our time until they get food.

Behind the efforts in the New England town were godly men and women who went to church on Sunday. Behind the missionary movement there was and is a mighty spiritual motivation. If the Point Four Program (called by whatever name) is to succeed it must be motivated by a passion for justice and mercy sustained and powerful because it, too, is grounded in God himself, and in loyalty to his purposes.—The American Board News Bulletin.

Since many local church groups do not have access to a theological library, arrangements have been made for churches enrolled in the Town and Country Church Development Program to borrow books from the Extension Library, Candler School of Theology, of Emory University, Ga. Books are loaned for a two week period, borrower paying return postage,

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Plan Now for Representatives

Now is the time to plan for representatives from your society to attend the School of Missions to be held at Elon College, July 13-16. The first session will open at 2:30 p. m. on Tuesday. The cost is to be ten dollars, which will cover registration, room, and board.

Mrs. H. G. Ballinger, chairman, suggests in a recent letter to the society presidents that each society pay the expense of their president, and of the program chairman, too, if possible. Now it may be that your society president will not want to read that suggestion to you, so some other member of the society who reads it here may be the one to suggest it at the next meeting of your group. Of course, there is no limit on the number who may go from each society—the more the better.

Then, too, as Mrs. Ballinger suggests, women are welcome from any of our churches, whether or not there is an active women's organization in their church.

Some of our societies take a "vacation" in July, so this may need to be presented at the June meeting. Be sure something is done about it.

* * * * *

News from Newport News

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Congregational Christian Church of Newport News, Virginia, is enjoying a very interesting and successful year under the leadership of Mrs. F. F. Foster, president. The women meet in a group quarterly and the five circles have regular monthly meetings.

We have had our home and foreign mission study books. Mrs. H. D. Stalnaker and Mrs. L. T. Uzzell, members of the Auxiliary, gave the reviews in a most interesting manner, proving they had spent much time and thought in preparation.

In February the Auxiliary entertained their husbands and friends at the sixteenth anniversary of our organization. A variety program was enjoyed by everyone present.

At the last quarterly meeting Mrs.

W. B. Williams conducted a short but inspiring dedication service for the money received for the "goat fund." Our women contributed $60 toward the fund. We named our goats "Boshy" in honor of Mrs. W. H. Baker, and "Molly" in honor of Mrs. Molly Harwood, the wife of a former pastor of our church.

As we continue our work during the remainder of the year, we will be seeking to do his will and in so doing we will be rejoicing in our task.

Mrs. L. J. BROWN,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Supper Honoring Mothers

The Women's Missionary Society of Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church held a covered dish supper at the church on May 7 in observance of Family Life Week and in honor of mothers and daughters.

Following the supper Mrs. Harry Stewart, president, presided over a short business session. Then Mrs. J. C. Newell, program leader, began the worship program by reading the First Psalm. The group sang "O, Master Let Me Walk with Thee," and Mrs. Newell led a directed prayer. Mrs. Quinton Hicks spoke on "Making a Success of Everyday Living." After the prayer meditation, all repeated the Lord's prayer.

There were three families especially recognized. First was the family with four generations present: Mrs. Donna Cox, Mrs. Dewitt Cox, Mrs. Martin Joyce, and Miss Faye Joyce. Second was a family with three generations present: Mrs. Everett Cox, Mrs. Victor Young and Mrs. Young's two daughters. Third was the family of Mrs. Mary Young, Mrs. V. C. Cox, and little Melinda Cox.

The "Mother and Daughter" program began with the group singing "Faith of Our Mothers," followed by Miss Shirley Jean Lowdermilk giving a "Prayer for Mothers." "What Mothers Are" was told by Mrs. J. C. Newell, and Miss Emma Allen gave a "Tribute to Mother." Mrs. Harry Stewart presented a corsage to the oldest mother present, Mrs. Donna Cox, and to the youngest mother present, Mrs. J. C. Newell. "Words of Praise" was given by Miss Elaine Beane and Miss Evan Cox told about "Good Partners."

Mrs. Newell presented a gift to Mrs. Colbert Allen who was chosen as the "Mother of the Year." Also mentioned were the following mothers who were very worthy: Mrs. Everett Cox, Mrs. Sarah Browne, Mrs. Donna Cox, Mrs. Hattie Wren, and Mrs. Sybrant Pell. Mrs. Colbert Allen closed the program by giving a "Mother's Prayer."

Mrs. J. C. NEWELL.

* * * * *

Family Night at Rosemont

Family Night, sponsored by the Woman's Missionary Society, was held at Rosemont Christian Church, March 24. "The Church Around the World" was the theme of the program.

The departments of the Sunday school had a part in the program, giving music and skits from other lands. The young people conducted the devotions. There was a very interesting exhibit of clothing and objects from nineteen different countries displayed by the intermediate department.

Mrs. Olin Pendleton, the minister's wife of First Church, Norfolk, who with her husband spent several years at the Church of the Crossroads, Honolulu, Hawaii, gave us a very interesting talk about the people and the church in Hawaii.

Ray Morrison, one of our young men who recently returned from Korea, told us about the church in Korea.

After the program we were served delicious refreshments of fruit jello and cookies by four families of the church.

Those who did not attend missed a very interesting program and an evening of pleasant fellowship.

Mrs. O. G. FLEMING,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Tribute to a Former Officer

Mrs. S. E. Albert, who was an officer of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference last year, passed away on April 1, following an illness of several months.

Resolutions concerning this faithful worker in the Mt. Bethel Church and Women's Missionary Society will

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Every month has some special day, week or drive to raise money. During this month we have had Family Week and Mother's Day. This month has also been the time when a drive has been made to enlist the interest of people, especially parents, teachers and church workers in mental health.

Guidance workers and social psychologists can spot children with a tendency toward disturbed emotional or mental life. They are the "quiet ones," the very good children that never do wrong or find any mischief.

As the greatest nation on earth, we owe it to our children to provide for their emotional and mental health. We feed our children well, we give them excellent public education, we dress them, equip and protect them, often without a thought for their peace of mind. Home, school and church may work together to insure that the child grows into rich adulthood, capable of standing on his own.

Modern day ministers preach a gospel of "Peace of Mind," "Faith with Understanding," and "The Mature Mind." The National Association for Mental Health has published a very fine leaflet called "1, 2, 3," which tells the story of good mental health. Like many sermons, it has three parts: how you feel about yourself, how you feel about others, and how you are able to meet the demands of life.

This leaflet tells the characteristics of people with good mental health. "They feel comfortable about themselves"; "They feel right about other people"; and "They are able to meet the demands of life."

It concludes by saying that mentally healthy people are: "Good friends, good workers, good mates, good parents, and good citizens."

"But," you ask, "how does one go about achieving good mental health and passing it on to one's children?" The teachings of Christ are the basic fundamentals for this kind of life. Love of others more than self; interest in the whole of God's plan for us; and devotion to the work of the church. Our own Dr. Paul Reynolds, who works on family problems, has summed it up nicely when he said: "Our children, to mature in body and mind, need the love of two parents, security and religion." All of us can lay their most precious treasure at their feet.

* * * * *

"Grandmothers are Needed, Too"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"How do you like your little grandson?"

That question was directed to Flora Perry as I was having lunch with a group of my friends, several of whom are grandmothers.

"Ronnie is a fine baby," Flora answered.

"For a new grandmother you don't sound very enthusiastic!" exclaimed Amy Tilton. "When my daughter's little Sharon was born I went around telling everybody about her charms."

"Grandmothers are notorious baby-spoilers," declared Marian Phelps teasingly. "Wasn't Grandmother allowed to hold the baby?"

"Oh, yes, I held Ronnie for a moment, under his mother's watchful eyes, but I wasn't supposed to know how to do anything for him!" In Flora's voice there was a note of disappointment.

"That was exactly my experience when I visited my new grandchild," reported Melba Hollis. "There seems to be no place for a grandmother with regard to a young baby in modern life. I am trying to wait patiently until the baby is older, for I look back fondly to many happy hours spent with my grandmother when I was a child."

"So do I!" came a chorus of voices in reply, with comments such as, "I never tired of hearing my grandmother's stories of pioneer days." "My grandmother taught me the names of all the flowers." "I wish I could feel as welcome in my children's homes as my grandmother felt in ours!"

Suddenly a gentle voice checked their clamor, and all eyes turned apologetically toward Mary Landon, whose mother lives permanently in her home. "I think you are mistaken when you infer that young mothers feel grandmothers are no longer needed," Mary told them. "It is true that the constant association of mother and grandmother creates problems, but the solution lies in the cooperation of both."

Quietly the rest of us listened as Mary continued her explanation. "When a severe illness left my mother so frail that she could not live alone, my husband and I decided to take her into our home. We all knew that we were entering into a difficult situation. I think my mother understood that better than anyone else. Before she came to us she insisted that we outline some definite procedures for the benefit of our children. Leslie was then a tiny baby, and both Tommie and Eileen were under school age.

"Mother told me," Mary said, "that modern services and supplies for babies are adequate, so that a grandmother's physical help sometimes seems superfluous, but she believes there is a spiritual need that no one but a grandparent can fill, for grandchildren of all ages. Grandparents form a link in the chain of generations, and children, by listening to them, are helped to build fine characters for the future on the strong foundations of the past.

"Young mothers often fail to share their children with grandparents for fear that the children's schedules for meals, sleep, and rest will be disrupted and bad habits will be established. A frank discussion of that problem will almost always secure the cooperation of any grandparent. No one who really loves a child wants him to grow into a querulous bad-tempered individual.

"Visiting grandmothers," Mary went on, "should first of all learn the regular procedures that have been followed in the home and should be willing to comply with present-day methods of baby care. It is equally important for young mothers to have a little faith in the grandmothers' ability—after all, they wouldn't be grandmothers if they had not first been mothers, and so did have some experience in child rearing.

"I'm sure the basis of living together in harmony," Mary concluded, "is for mother and grandmother to have faith in each other's ability to fill her separate and needful role in the children's lives. For my part, I think there should be a grandmother in every home!"

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Tips from Tom

It is Rally time for the Western North Carolina Conference, as they make preparations for the regular Fifth Sunday Rally, which is to be held in the Albemarle Congregational Christian Church on May 31, 1954. The theme of this meeting will be "Daily Vacation Bible Schools."

* * *

I wish someone would suggest a way to get youth groups to report news of their organizations. These pleas seem to be going in one ear and out the other. Will you cooperate and write today? What you are doing may not seem important to you, but if you are doing anything at all, it is news. Let's hear from you today.

* * *

June 23-30, 1954, at New Haven, Conn., is when you will be represented by delegates to the National Pilgrim Fellowship Council. Support the delegates that you have chosen to represent you at this meeting. There will be youth there from every state and several foreign countries.

* * *

Have you registered for summer camp? It's not long!

* * * * *

"Simon, the Leper"

A four-act play entitled "Simon, the Leper," is being produced and sponsored by the Youth Fellowship of the Pleasant Grove Christian Church of the Western N. C. Conference, under the direction of Pastor Bill Simmons. The play is centered about the story of Jesus around the time of his trial and crucifixion. The characters of the play are portrayed by several of the young adults of the group. They are: Simon, Bill Simmons; Judith, Mrs. Lester Brady; Amon, Wayne Brady; Susanna, Mrs. Gale Hammer; Lazarus, Gale Hammer; Mary, Mrs. Reed Simmons; Martha, Mrs. Leland Jones; Jalon, Leland Jones.

On April 25, this group presented the play in the Amelia Congregational Christian Church, Clayton, N. C. They were invited and sponsored by the Youth Fellowship of the Amelia Church, who prepared a picnic supper for the guests. After this, the youth were in charge of the opening worship preceding the play.

The Pleasant Grove group has presented the play several other times, at Lee's Chapel, near Sanford, and in their home church on last Sunday evening. Capacity crowds have witnessed these performances, and there have been other requests for this group of young people to witness for Christ by bringing their message of the Gospel in the form of a play.

* * * * *

Young Minister from Switzerland Will be at Valley Youth Camp

Rev. Martin Eichrodt, tall, handsome young minister from Switzerland, who arrived in the Virginia Valley on May 12, has been most enthusiastically received.

Mr. Eichrodt has been invited to help lead the youth rally at Linville Christian Church, north of Harrisonburg, Va., on Sunday afternoon, May 30, from 3 to 8 o'clock. More than twenty churches are expected to be represented at this rally.

The last item on Mr. Eichrodt's schedule is the Virginia Valley Conference Youth Camp at Powell's Fort in Fort Valley, June 7 to 13. There he will teach a course on "The Message of Great Old Testament Prophets for Today's World," and will help lead the camp in other ways.

* * * * *

Youth Sponsor Bake Sale

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Church at Elon College, N. C., held a bake sale on Saturday, May 8, 1954, for the purpose of raising money to meet the apportionment of our Pilgrim Fellowship. The sale was held from 9:00 to 12 a. m., Saturday. Included in the sale were cakes, pies, cupcakes and strawberries. The total amount taken in was $27.20. Those taking part in the sale were: Tommie Boland, Kay Hughes, Jean Loy, Judy Horrell, Nina Matlock, Katy Jo McAdams, Mrs. N. R. Franks, Jerry Fuqua and Jerry Steele.

JERRY FUQUA,
Reporter.

"Cupid's Column"

Cupid has the fore-knowledge that June 13 is the date and the place is Liberty (Vance), where Mr. Fred Foster and Miss Annie Margaret Grissom will be united in marriage. These two fine young people are both of the Epsom community.

Fred, the son of Mrs. Tollie G. and the late Mr. Foster, who served as a deacon of Liberty Church for years, graduated from Epsom High School and attended Louisburg College. He is now serving with the U. S. Air Force, stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., after serving for some time in Greenland.

Annie Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Grissom, graduated with highest honors from the Epsom High School and has been an honor student at W. C. U. N. C. in Greensboro, where she will receive her degree as a Math major in May.

These young people are talented, capable, and devoted to the church. Annie Margaret has served as Sunday school organist and assistant church organist, taught in Sunday school, Bible school and other church work. Both have shown interest and devotion in the work they have entered into. Cupid expresses congratulations to this young couple and best wishes for a happy marriage.

* * * * *

Michigan High School Students Visit Talladega Campus

A dozen lively tourists and camera fans from Michigan high schools made rapid acquaintance with students of Talladega College, Talladega, Alabama, during an early May visit. The high school students, ranging from freshmen to seniors, were on a Southern tour as guests of the Michigan Pilgrim Fellowship, youth movement within the Michigan Congregational Christian Churches. The tour leader was the Rev. Wm. T. Matters of Lansing, who was making his third visit to Talladega. The students toured Savery Library, visited class rooms, ate in Fanning Dining Hall, and joined in the social hour in Foster Hall.

* * * * *

Most Important!

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Educational Secretary of the Convention, asks that attention be called to the rapidly approaching Young People's Summer Camp dates. These were given in detail in the April 22 issue of THE SUN. You are asked to check them.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Elisha Reveals Spiritual Resources"

LESSON IX—MAY 30, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "If God is for us, who is against us?"—Romans 8:31.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: II Kings 4: 8-37; 6: 8-23.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 125.

Elisha was Elijah's successor. And a worthy successor he was! He was more concerned with what happened to Israel than with what happened to him. He was constantly calling the attention of the nation to the fact that it had endless resources of strength in faith in God, and that if it used these resources wisely, no other nation could conquer it. The brief story of his life tells, among other things, of how he was used of God to cure the leprosy of Naaman, of how he miraculously replenished vessels with oil, of how he raised a child from the dead, and of his reputation as a patriot and prophet. The lesson for today is concerned with an incident in his life which has meaning for us as individuals and as a nation.

The Situation.

Benhadad, the Syrian is at war with Israel, and he plans an ambush against Jehoram, the king of Israel. He had his trap set, waiting to pull the string and take Jehoram and his army captive. But Elisha, in some way not mentioned in the lesson, found out about the ambush and warned the king not to go near the place. He did this more than once. Benhadad "smelled a rat"—he thought that there were fifth columnist or spies in his army, and he set about to smoke them out. One of his servants told him that it was not one of his own men, but the prophet Elisha who was revealing his plans to the king of Israel. "So that's who it is, eh?" said Benhadad. Well, we'll scotch that fellow right now. Where is he?" They told him that Elisha was at Dothan, so Benhadad sent a party of horsemen and chariots to Dothan to get Elisha. That shows something of the respect this heathen general had for this defenseless prophet. The host came to Dothan by night and surrounded the town, ready to take Elisha the next morning.

The Story.

When Elisha's servant got up the next morning, he was almost paralyzed with fear. "Alas, my master! how shall we do?" he cried in panic. It did look like a hopeless situation, two unarmed men against a great host of armed and mounted soldiers. And it was hopeless if one looked only at the things he could see with the physical eye. That was true of the situation then, and it is true of lots of situations now. When we look only at the things we can see, the situation often seems unpromising, and even hopeless.

But Elisha was not easily stampeded into panic. He had the ability to look at the things which could not be seen as well as the things which could be seen.

He saw the band of armed men, but he saw something else. And he prayed that his servant might see it too. When his eyes were opened, the servant saw it too—the mountain around about Dothan teeming with horses and chariots of fire,—the armies of the Lord God of Israel himself. "Fear not; for they that are with us are more than they that be with them." One may believe that these were literally horses and chariots of fire, or one may believe that they were symbols of God's aid and protection. In any event the heavenly host was encamped around the two men in such a way as to dispel all fear. And they found deliverance in a strange and unexpected way.

The Lessons.

Here is a challenge to trust in the invisible, but the real spiritual sources and resources of life. It is the spirit that quickeneth. We are all too prone to look at the things we can see, and to look only at them. For instance members of a congregation will think about building a church or adding to a church, and they will figure out just how much money they have or can get. They fail to take into consideration the resources of God, which are often available through faith. We have recently completed a somewhat pretentious building project at Oakland, and we thought that we would not have enough money to complete it without borrowing a large sum. But many men gave freely of their labor, and quite a few gifts of generous proportions came from sources not counted on in the original planning. Faith lays hold on God's unseen resources.

The same principle is true of us as individuals. We have unseen, and unsuspected resources, unseen spiritual resources to draw upon in life's battle. Without them we are doomed to failure and defeat. Using them, even weak men and women can be more than conquerors.

The same thing applies to nations. There are other things besides social and economic and military resources. Big nations have gone down to defeat in spite of all these things, while smaller and weaker nations have survived because of the resources of the spirit. The flesh profiteth nothing; it is the spirit that quickens.

There is point in it all for us today. We are living in a world in which we are surrounded in all sides by "chariots and horsemen," armed might frightening in its power and potentiality. We will do well to mobilize our material resources and military power. But these alone are not enough. We must rely on the unseen spiritual allies. We must have a cause that is just, we must be on God's side, we must have clean hands and a pure heart.

God helped Israel through Elisha, a man of God. The nations of the world must have good leaders, godly leaders, strong leaders, men of character and consecration.

It often happens that men are slain while standing for the truth, but the truth is never slain. As long as a child of God is on the path to duty, and until that duty is fulfilled, he is inviolable and invulnerable. God will not permit any mortal force or combination of forces to hinder the accomplishment of the task entrusted to his servant.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons," Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

When the Reverend Claude Hendricks, pastor of St. Paul Methodist Church in Atlanta, Ga., was District Superintendent, he reminded his Quarterly Conference of a statement made by Arthur Wentworth Hewitt many years ago: "Every church ought to look like some body loves it." Does yours?

Christian Education to Hold Religious Drama Workshop

How to give the nation's children a lasting religious faith through the use of drama in Sunday schools will be the broad goal of a religious drama workshop, to be held at Green Lake, Wis., this summer.

Religious plays for youngsters—with the children themselves staging and acting in them—are coming into ever wider use in churches of the United States, said Amy Goodhue Loomis, religious drama director of the American Baptist Assembly. Through meeting together and swapping and testing ideas and drama techniques, church workers will gain "direction, perception and inspiration to enlarge the word of God through this medium," she added.

The Religious Drama Workshop, to be held August 14-21, will be a joint project of the National Council of Churches through its Division of Christian Education, and the American Baptist Assembly. More than 100 religious education workers representing a score or more of major denominations are expected to attend the workshop, which is the only one sponsored cooperatively by Protestant churches in North America.

The dramatic approach to Bible teaching "sets the mood, arouses curiosity and stirs the imagination," Miss Loomis said in announcing this year's program. "It provides for young people emotional development, cooperation in group planning, and an opportunity to express their own ideas and opinions." Also, she added, "Drama applies Christian principles to life, makes Sunday school more dynamic, and makes the child want to come regularly."

Included at this year's workshop—an annual project—will be beginning and advanced production techniques, creative drama for children up to junior high levels, and beginning and advanced play direction. A forum on religious drama will be led by Dr. Harold Ehrensperger, religious drama expert of Boston University, who will also conduct group conferences on writing in the medium.

Registration will be handled by Helen F. Spaulding, assistant director of the workshop, 79 East Adams St., Chicago 3, Ill.—N. C. N.

It is one thing to be moved by events, another thing to be mastered by them.—Ralph W. Sockman.

THE VALIDATION OF LEARNING

(Continued from page 5.)

shaken and changed by the experiences of two world wars.

In our generation, however, we have also seen the distressing and misguided war between science and faith resolve into a cooperation which brings daily more understanding and constructive discoveries. We have seen, too, that many of our young scholars and leaders sense the hidden spiritual and social peril in our very success as a nation, militarily, economically, and industrially. Many are not now looking for salvation by technology. Many see that we shall not be saved because we are clever or skilled, nor because we have many wonderful possessions. And they are seeing that the matter of salvation, personally and collectively, is no irrelevant concern.

The validation of learning, many of these upon whom we must now see, must lie ultimately in whether we have found the secret of our salvation and thus whether we have found Christ. These are age-old conclusions, but we in our times come by them by a long and eventful and stony road.

The validation of our learning, too, must lie in what we are now equipped to do with the vital problems before us. Seeing the tremendous danger of a moral decline, will we stir ourselves, unite, and act? Will we realize, in time, the peril from a strong and clever but immoral civilization? Will we see the calamity in a society which has mastered the world of nature, but has lost control of itself?

Our political realism and determinism must give way, under the leadership of newly trained individuals, to the urgings of the vision of a new kingdom upon earth and of a redeemed society. Our moral laxity must give way to the call to a transformed and purposeful life. Our suspicious provincialism must give way to a new global brotherhood of cooperation and understanding. Our resourceful exploitation of the world of science must not obscure the greater need for a conquest of the world of the spirit and of human relationships.

Concerns of this sort determine what we feel we should learn and what we believe we should do with what we have learned. As we go forth in these times our impact upon our society will be produced not simply by our institutional references and the knowledge we possess, but also by the life we want to live and the goals we want to pursue. It will lie in what we desire to do with and for personality and human relationships, and what interests we will cultivate and what services we will render. It will depend upon whether we approach our time of living with the philosophy of a selfish and determined consumer, or with the mind and spirit of one who would contribute something to the commonwealth from his heart and mind and soul.

What you do on your path that lies ahead will largely validate and give meaning to the diploma you will shortly hold in your hand. What you are as a person and as a member of society will also determine the fruitfulness of the labors of those who labored in this institution of learning to place it in your hand.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

be found elsewhere in this issue. They express the felling of the women of her local church.

Irma Albert was the kind of devoted person who makes up the Kingdom of God on this earth. If you were a visitor in her church, she made you feel at home. She could play the piano, teach a class, bake a cake, or do what needed doing. Several years ago she was the guiding light in reorganizing a missionary society in her church. She served as its president.

But she went beyond her local church. When there was a district meeting or a state conference, Mrs. S. E. Albert was there representing Mt. Bethel. Her interest and loyalty was recognized when she was made a state officer for our North Carolina women. Not until ill health forced her to curtail her activities did she give up any of her regular "jobs" for Christ and his church—and her church, too.

As one who saw her only occasionally, I want to pay tribute to her friendliness, her acts of kindly service, and her faithfulness to her local church and to the larger interests of her denomination.

God has ordained that happiness, like every other good thing, should cost us something: He has willed that it should be a moral achievement, and not an accident.

—De Gasparin.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Following is a speech for a high school student to give at Sunday school, or at a Missionary Society meeting for the Orphanage:

"It is my privilege to tell you about the Christian Orphanage which is located at Elon College. It is under the direction of the churches of the Southern Convention and is supported by them. It opened its doors in January 1907. Since that time the one main building has been increased to three dormitories for children; and the few acres of land has been increased to 290 acres. There is room for a campus with three main buildings and four residences; several pack houses, graneries, machinery sheds, shop, milk house, dairy barn and silo. Almost completed is the Holt Memorial Chapel with a beautiful basement and a pretty sanctuary.

"On the 290 acres is room for pastures for the dairy herd, the beef cattle, the hog houses and pastures, and the chicken houses and runs. Room for fields of corn, oats, wheat, hay, and acres of gardens where sweet potatoes, tomatoes, white potatoes, beans, peas, cabbages, onions, and all sorts of vegetables are grown. It takes a lot of food for the orphanage family, and feed for the live stock. The orphanage is in need of better facilities for storing food for fall, winter and spring. A coldstorage department is badly needed so enough vegetables could be stored for the fall and winter.

"The orphanage cares for 82 homeless and needy children. We who have our own homes and parents cannot now realize how fortunate we are; nor can we realize what a calamity it is to be without any loved ones to take care of us. There are hundreds of children like that, and it is our privilege to provide a good home, loving care, and Christian training for those in our churches and Sunday schools, whose fathers or mothers are dead or who have forsaken them. In the past 47 years the orphanage has taken care of 710 such children. A big record book is kept in an iron safe of every child cared for at the orphanage. Hundreds of boys and girls have gone out from the orphanage to live noble, useful lives.

"Dr. John G. Truitt is the superintendent, L. W. Wagoner is assistant superintendent in charge of the farm and dairy. Charles Perkins is the dairyman and farm assistant. Boys help with the milking and cleaning the dairy and dairying equipment; they help with feeding cows, hogs, chickens. They help on the farm as long as it does not interfere with their school work. The girls help with the cooking, house-cleaning, laundrying, and sewing and mending. Everyone is taught to be neat with their rooms, and in their personal appearance. They are trained in manners at the table and everywhere in and out of the home. Five matrons supervise the three buildings and the kitchen and diningroom. The orphanage makes up a large happy family.

"It is a pleasure to speak for the orphanage today, to tell you about the boys and girls there, their training at school, at church and in Sunday school; and their training in religious devotion for themselves individually and collectively. Dr. Truitt would like to have you visit the children in the orphanage, to become acquainted with its work, to feel that it is your very own, and to see what your funds are doing for such a worthy group of boys and girls. As a high school student I am proud to know the high school students there are making good in school both in their studies and in the athletic games."

Let one of your high school students present such a speech in your church. Thank you.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MAY 13, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. Margaret Everett, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. S. W. Elder, Abanda, Alabama, Buttons and Needles.
Woman's Aux., Cong. Christian Ch., Winston-Salem, N. C., Iron, Ironing Board and Cover.
Johnson's Grove Missionary Society, Coupons and Buttons.
McAdams Office Supply Co., Burlington, N. C., Show Tickets.
Mrs. J. P. Johnson, Richmond, Va., Buttons and Costume Jewelry.
A Friend, Norfolk, Va., Buttons.
Mrs. J. C. Beal, Franklin, Va., Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 5,272.29

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Christian Light	$ 45.00
Liberty (Vance)	24.24
Martha's Chapel	12.00
Pleasant Union	50.00
Southern Pines	63.00
		194.24

Eastern Va. Conference:

Newport News S. S.	$ 16.00
Norfolk, First	24.08
Windsor	10.00
		50.08

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Mebane	$ 5.00
Reidsville S. S.	66.00
Tryon S. S.	15.00
		86.00

Western N. C. Conference:

Big Oak	$ 1.00
Pleasant Cross S. S.	9.88
		10.88

Virginia Valley Conference:

Winchester S. S.	$ 8.34
		8.34

Total $ 349.54

Grand total $ 5,621.83

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $12,415.59
Ladies' Aid, Spring Hill
Church, Waverly, Va. $ 5.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

FORLINES.

The body of Mr. Hiram J. V. Forlines of Virgilina, Virginia, was laid in its resting place, and his soul was committed to God on April 27, 1954.

Whereas, Mr. Forlines was a deacon of Union Congregational Christian Church, Virgilina, Virginia, we, the members of the Board of Deacons, do recommit our interest in and concern for the work of the church.

And whereas, the kindly light of Mr. Forlines' life will continue to point out the Christian way of life, we do strengthen our determination to let our light so shine for the glory of God.

We would express to his widow and family the sincere sympathy of the church during this experience, and of the earnestness of our prayers that the Father God will bless and sustain them now and always.

We desire that a copy of this token of our appreciation for the life of Mr. Forlines and of our deep felt sympathy be sent to his widow and to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

G. W. POLLARD,
Chairman,

Board of Deacons of Union
Congregational Christian Church,
Virgilina, Virginia.

ALBERT.

Mrs. S. E. Albert died April 1, 1954 at Anne Penn Memorial Hospital in Reidsville after an illness of several months. The funeral was held the following day at Mt. Bethel Christian Church of which she was a member. Services were conducted by the Rev. Fred Alred, the pastor, and Dr. John Truitt.

We, the Mt. Bethel Missionary Society, wish to offer the following resolutions in the passing of Mrs. Albert who was a much-loved member, serving in various offices until her illness forced her to leave these tasks to others.

First: Be it therefore resolved that since it pleased the great God whose infinite and incomparable wisdom never errs to call Irma from her earthly home to the home Christ went to prepare for his chosen that we do humbly and with fortitude submit to his will. In our grief for her may we remember with thankful hearts the beautiful life she lived. May we remember the sunshine of her smile, her gentleness of manner, the kindness and love she had for us all. All these a gift God gave her to give us, yet a little while before he called her home.

Second: In her passing the Missionary Society has lost one of its most loyal and valuable members, who worked tirelessly for the society's needs. That the church she loved has lost one who was ever faithful, never shirking her duties even after her illness was taking much of her strength. Her Sunday school has lost one who has labored and loved it since childhood. The class she taught has lost a devoted teacher who maintained interest in it even in the last days of her illness. Her community has lost an active and able leader.

Third: To her husband and children who have lost a wonderful and devoted wife and mother, to her brothers and their wives who have lost a dearly loved sister, and to her aged grandfather we would offer our deepest sympathy, and a prayer that the same God in his greatness who took Irma home, will also be with them in their great sorrow which is also our sorrow.

Mrs. D. C. McCOLLUM.

Seed Corn Sent to India by CROP

Mr. George Watson, manager of Watson Farms, Rocky Mount, N. C., gave 50 pounds each of North Carolina 27 and Dixie 18 Hybrid Seed Corn to go to India for research and experimental purposes, it was announced by the Rev. Carl R. Key of Durham, State CROP director, CROP will ship the seed corn by air freight from New York in time to arrive for planting soon after June 7th of this year. When thanking Mr. Watson for this gift Mr. Key stated that it would "serve as a type of permanent self-help to the people of India."

The seed corn is being sent to a Christian Missionary, the Rev. Donald Rugh, of Delhi, who is chairman of the Indian National Relief Committee and the Church World Service—CROP representative in India. Mr. Rugh will turn the gift over to the Indian Council of Agriculture Research to carry on the experiments in the wider use of hybrids in India.

It is reported by the Iowa State CROP director, Wilson O. Radway of Des Moines, who visited with the Rev. Mr. Rugh and Mr. Nehemiah in early April in Delhi that Indians are "very much interested in improving seed corn," poultry and other livestock. Mr. Radway made a stop to visit with Mr. Rugh and his staff in the course of a round-the-world survey of relief needs and the distribution of such supplies as was contributed last year.

Mr. Radway also stated that North Carolina 27 and Dixie 18 Hybrids have proven to be two of "the best varieties used in India so far for experimental purposes." Mr. Nehemiah is in charge of these experiments at the Agricultural Research Center.

This shipment of seed corn is the second of such relief shipments to be made by North Carolina CROP in 1954-55. Some fifteen counties have been marked for organization in May and June to canvass for wheat at harvest time. Twenty-two District Supervisors and Mr. Key, state director, and Rev. O. L. Riggs of Durham, assistant director, are already at work on county organization.

THE FAR-REACHING EFFECT OF A SERMON.

(Continued from page 2.)

slight sacrifice this—for a young woman to leave her native land and go to spend her life among people of a strange language and strange customs.

Fortunately, we have from her a descriptive word about that sermon. She said: "The minister preached 'earnestly and searchingly.'" The important word here is the word "searchingly." It was a "searching" sermon, no doubt, because the preacher, having it upon his own heart, laid upon the hearts and minds of the hearers the Christian's obligation to send the gospel to all the world, and the Holy Spirit, accompanying the message, pressed it upon the consciences of the hearers.

As ministers of the gospel, let us bear in mind that it is not enough to preach "interestingly" and "earnestly," but, faithfully, speaking the truth in love and depending upon the Holy Spirit, may we ever strive to preach "searchingly."

This young woman, who heard a heart-searching sermon on China's need of the gospel and responded by "giving five dollars and myself," set in motion spiritual forces of such magnitude that eternity alone will reveal the full results. Besides being the wife of a missionary and his able assistant, she was a missionary in her own right. And that is not all. She was the mother of a great missionary—Bishop Walter Russell Lambuth, whose missionary labors in China, Japan, Africa, and other parts of the globe have brought blessings to untold multitudes.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

State of N. C., Gasoline
Refund	48.50
First Cong. Christian Ch., Asheville, N. C., special Contribution	50.00
Thomas H. Andrews, Alex- andria, Virginia	100.00
J. H. Booth, Jr., Hamp- ton, Va.	10.00
In Memory of Mrs. Jane Watkins	5.00
In Memory of Mrs. B. F. Boothe	1.00
Special Gifts	110.00
	<hr/>
	329.50
Grand total	$12,745.09
Total for the week	$ 679.04
Total for the year	$18,366.92

"... and ye clothed me"

By DR. HERBERT H. STROUP of the Congregational Christian Service Committee

Stellatos Themistoklis knocked one day in late October on the door of the Family Service Center in Athens. The center is maintained by the Congregational Christian Service Committee in Kaisariani, a section of the Greek capital.

His immediate need was for clothing, but behind him was a lifetime of hard work for himself and his family when the idea of asking anyone's help was repugnant to him. Now at 73, the balding, still active man was anxious to start all over again.

His early life had been spent in Romania where he managed to develop a thriving farm. In 1914, he was forced by the war to leave his homeland. With his family he came to Greece, where he suffered many privations throughout the Nazi occupation. When his wife died, he lived with his only son in Athens until they were able to move to the island of Cephalonia.

At Argostoli, the island's chief city, Mr. Themistoklis succeeded once again in establishing himself by becoming a successful businessman on one of the downtown streets. Life looked serene again and old age something to look forward to.

On August 9, 1953, a terrific earthquake struch the island and destroyed both the store and their home. Fortunately, Mr. Themistoklis and his son were saved, but his small savings were lost and bleak misery faced them.

After a number of grim weeks on the island, he managed to get to the mainland and to the place he had known best—Athens. But he had only the clothes he was wearing at the time disaster struck. . . .

Late in October, Mr. Themistoklis was offered a job in an Athens store. He liked the position and needed the pay, but he did not have clothes suitable for the job. Through friends who had received help, he learned of the Family Service Center which distributed the clothes sent to Greece by American Congregational Christians. Though uncertain and embarrassed, he took a chance and came to the agency by bus on borrowed money.

Miss Anna Kritikou, one of the center's workers, asked him to come into the office and tell her his problem. At first he was reluctant to tell her about his troubles, but her genuine kindness loosened his tongue. Because he was in a place where Christian love and professional skills are devoted to the service of mankind, in a few moments he felt at home and told of his need.

Checking his story, Miss Kritikou concluded that Mr. Themistoklis was qualified for the center's help. On investigation at the warehouse, however, it was found that all the men's clohing had already been given to needy persons on the islands hit by the earthquake and in Kaisariani.

Many bales of used clothing had come during the early fall—American Congregational Christians had certainly been on the job. But the emergency had stripped the supply. . . . What was to be done? Was this man's future to be jeopardized for want of a suit of clothes?

Miss Kritikou resolved to "scrape the barrel" and finally came upon some suitable clothes for Mr. Themistoklis to wear in his new job. As the old man left with his bundle, his eyes were misty. "You people are good," he said. "You are Christian." But Miss Kritikou realized that without the support of the people "back home" he would have to have been turned away.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1954

NUMBER 21

27

Speakers at Elon College Commencement Exercises

Speakers who will keynote the sixty-fourth annual Commencement Program at Elon College are portrayed above against a background which shows Alamance Hall, a building which houses the administrative offices and many of the classrooms of the college. The speakers are the Hon. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. (upper left), eminent attorney of Chuckatuck and Suffolk, Virginia, and a member of the Virginia Senate, who will deliver the address to the seniors at the graduation exercises on Monday, May 31; Dr. Aaron N. Meckel (bottom left), of St. Petersburg, Fla., pastor of the First Congregational Church of that city, who will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning, May 30; and Mrs. Gwendolyn Patton Fogleman (bottom center), of Burlington, N. C., of Elon's class of 1927, who will deliver the address at the Alumni Banquet on Saturday evening, May 29. President L. E. Smith (bottom right) will guide the college through its 1954 Commencement Program.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Sixty-Fourth Elon College Commencement

The days come and the months go, and they add up to years more quickly than the aging can realize. Another annual commencement is here. These occasions are looked forward to with mingled feelings; some rejoice and others are sad. It is joyful to meet classmates and friends and it is distressing to part with friends not knowing when the pleasure of meeting will come again. Commencement programs at Elon College are enjoyable and pleasing.

Of recent years, the program proper begins with a social on Friday night, May 28, honoring the year's graduates and returning alumni. This festival is held in the gymnasium, attractively decorated and pleasing appointments on all sides.

The second day, Saturday, begins with breakfast for reunion classes. The alumni picnic luncheon is at 12:30 on the South Campus. Mrs. Boyd, Alumni Secretary, is expecting an unusually large attendance for this occasion. All alumni on the campus will meet at 2:00 for reports on the year's work and plans for the ensuing year. The alumni banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m. Mrs. Brown Fogleman of the Class of 1928 will be the speaker. Following the address by Mrs. Fogleman, the Dramatics Department of the College will present Shakespeare's "As You Like It" in the outdoor theatre on South Campus.

Sunday, May 30, is Baccalaureate Day, when the faculty, the parents, and friends of the graduating class and the students who are still on the campus will assemble in the Whitley Auditorium for the morning worship service. The Reverend Aaron Meckel, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church of St. Petersburg, Florida, will deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon to the graduating class and all present. Dr. Meckel is the pastor of one of the largest Protestant churches in Florida and was judged some years ago by the Christian Century as one of the leading Congregational preachers in America and one among the ten top preachers in this country. Dr. Meckel is a comparatively young man and a forceful speaker. Selected students of the Music Department will perform at Vespers in the afternoon at 5:00. The famed Elon College Choir will present the German oratorio, "Requiem," by Faure. The presentation will be in Whitley Auditorium at 8:30 in the evening.

Monday, May 31, will be Graduation Day. Seventy-four of the Senior Class will graduate on Monday. There will be approximately 30 to graduate at the end of summer school. These two sections will constitute the Class of 1954. The Honorable Mills Edwin Godwin, Jr., of Chuckatuck and Suffolk, Virginia, will deliver the Literary Address. Mr. Godwin is a prominent attorney and popular member of the Senate of Virginia. He is a young man of ability, of wide influence, and is recognized by his associates in legal and political circles as having promise of greater influence in the immediate and extended future.

All appearing on the program for this commencement are influential members of the Congregational Christian Church. The graduates and the church at large will be interested in the commendable features of this year's program. The Board of Trustees of Elon College will meet on Monday morning at 9:30 for the purpose of receiving the report of the Registrar of the College presenting recommendations from the faculty and vote to award degrees. The Board will adjourn for its main business meeting at 1:30 p.m.

The church, alumni and friends are cordially invited to any and all exercises of this annual occasion on the Elon College Campus.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

A friend said to me on my trip to New York on Friday of last week that the New York Stock Market caused his spirit to rise and fall. He meant that by watching the sales and prices of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, that he might be personally interested in, it made him feel depressed when the prices declined and made him feel enthusiastic when the prices advanced.

I am not particularly interested in the stock market, but I am interested in the contributions of our churches and Sunday schools to the college for its support. When we have a good report, as we did last week, I feel that everything is going in the right direction and that eventually everything will be wonderful. When we receive a report that is not so exhilarating, as the report is this week, our spirits have a tendency to decline and we feel slightly depressed.

There is such a thing as an inflated feeling and there is also such a thing as a deflated feeling. I am sure that the reader will understand what I am talking about, if only as regards the support of Elon College. We should have a constant occasion for a feeling of inflation. That would be wonderful, and how wonderful it would be if all the churches and Sunday schools should be moved by the spirit to send in a contribution for the same week. It is not impossible, and how wonderful it would be if they should be so moved.

Previously reported	$ 3,268.96
Eastern N. C. Conference:
New Elam	$15.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Oak Grove	$15.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Howard's Chapel	$ 1.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Mt. Pleasant	$12.50
Zion	10.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Linville S. S.	$ 7.50
New Hope S. S.	10.00
	<hr/> 71.00

Total to date $ 3,339.96

In accordance with action taken at the last session of the Southern Convention, this issue is being devoted to an account of the proceedings of the convention as submitted by the secretary.

Bethlehem Church at Tenth Legion,, in the Virginia Valley, has planned a "homecoming" and a big celebration of the first anniversary of the dedication of their new church building, to take place on Sunday, May 30, from 10 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., at the church.

Superintendent W. T. Scott participated in the ordination service for Beverly Cosby and Irving Stubbs at Riverside Church, New York, on Sunday night, May 23. Mr. Cosby and Mr. Stubbs graduate from Union Seminary in June and will work in Lynchburg, Virginia, where a new church is being organized in co-operation with the interdenominational Lynchburg Christian Fellowship.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Men Together at Moonelon on June 5

The Laymen of the Southern Convention are to be together at Moonelon on June 5 for a workday. The Committee of Arrangements from the local area has already met and planned activities which the men will participate in. These include the digging and pouring of the foundation for the new central building, the clearing of a parking area, the preparation of a suitable road into the property, some painting on the house which is already on the Moonelon site, the preparation of the playground for the summer camps, the clearing of some of the wooded area, and other numerous activities. The committee doing the planning consisted of Bill Mahan, Trudy Vincent, and J. E. Danieley, with advice from Dr. W. T. Scott and Dr. H. E. Robinson. Men who plan to spend the night and are in need of accommodations and men who expect to be present for the meals must contact the undersigned immediately for reservations.

J. E. DANIELEY.

* * * * *

Christian Vocation

PROGRAM FOR JUNE.

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "O Master Workman;" "Sun of my Soul, Thou Saviour Dear."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE: Romans 12: 1-21.

PRAYER: When we go to work, Almighty God, help us to feel Thy divine presence. Teach us in our workday world to live the Christian principles which we hear and talk about on Sunday at church. Amen.

MEDITATION: Christian Vocation.

I believe that no matter what a person does for a living that he should consider that work a calling of God. If we truly believe that we are called to do our work in the same sense that a minister is called to do his, it may well lead us to a sober evaluation of the work that we do. Obviously there are a few vocations that could not be considered worthy of God's calling. But by and large, every job that men do is worthy of being done by one of God's men.

We often speak of our vocation in the narrow sense of an occupation. Webster defines vocation as "a calling." As a purely secular word then, vocation has very little meaning, since, unless there is a God vitally concerned about each of us as individuals, there is no one to do the calling. Vocation then, to a Christian is a thrilling word implying that he is called of God to do a certain work and that he is provided by God with the abilities to do that work.

Paul in his letter to the Ephesians tells us "I beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherein ye are called." The early church drew its strength from its laymen. They were fishermen, tradesmen, doctors—but above all they were Christ's men. We laymen in modern churches here in America can learn much from these laymen of first century Christianity. They evidently regarded every phase of their daily life as a part of their religion. We, in our zeal to avoid the state church, have insisted that the church be separated from the state. This has often resulted in divorcing religion from every other area of life—economic, social, and educational, as well as political. I believe that we need to return to a concept in which all of life is regarded as a stewardship.

What might such an outlook mean for our day? Think for a moment (Continued on page 13.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Coleclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date, 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $, for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Dynamic Christianity

The religion of Jesus is something more than a force and value put into action by a gathered fellowship of those who acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour and wish to proclaim his gospel. It is something more than a code of ethics or a set of inspiring principles.

A church fellowship that functions only on Sunday mornings as a spiritual factor is a poor force indeed. As a matter of fact, when is a church? Does it come into existence only on Sundays? Is it a group worship experience largely? What is the church? Is it an organization handed down—without concern daily for what it hands along to those who need it?

More and more, people are taking a more realistic and dynamic view of the church. They see it as a fellowship of worship, but also of action. They see it as standing for moral and spiritual principles taught by Jesus, but also as ever on the march to make possible the kingdom on earth. They see it as deriving power from on high which is used for very definite purposes—to heal, to enlighten, to instruct and to bless.

Churches close to Christ should be constantly experiencing a Pentecost. One of the most lamentable features of its life, so often, is that it suffers in many respects in comparison with other social and civic and educational groups with which people are affiliated.

This is not to suggest that in all places and at all times such situations prevail. But it is to say that we need our Pentecost today. We need fresh visitation of the Holy Spirit. We need newly stirred enthusiasm. We need deepened love for God and man. We need a clearer vision of what we are trying to do. We need a church fellowship that is active, alert, and that has taken the trouble to be prepared to perform those distinctive ministries for which people look to the church.

If we have an awakened Christianity, a dynamic spirit, we shall go far toward commending the church to many to whom, now, it is of no particular importance. Real Christianity must necessarily be dynamic Christianity. Let's see what it can do in our fields of service!

RICHARD K. MORTON.

Advertising Pays!

We wonder if some of our older readers remember an advertisement that appeared from time to time in the magazines of yester years. It was not a large advertisement, never over two columns in width, and usually only one. The feature of the ad that impressed the writer as a child was a black whale—inky black—with a large white spot on his side. On that spot someone was rubbing "Pearline," a then popular soap powder, and the spot was like snow. So popular, we are told was this soap powder that the maker had more business than he could supply; and when his advertising manager asked for an increasing amount of money for advertising commensurate with his increasing business, he replied that he did not need to advertise—and he stopped. And his business stopped, too.

The beverage alcohol manufacturers would not make such a mistake! But they may be making another! Certainly it would seem that the American public will not continue to allow the unbridled invasion of its citadel by the unscrupulous advertising which these forces are now producing. Only this week, hearings were held in the House of Representatives on the Bryson Bill, which has been introduced with the basic purpose of implementing the 21st Amendment, which gives the states the power to regulate alcoholic beverage traffic within their own borders. A similar bill introduced by Senator Langer of North Dakota in 1949, which missed clearing the necessary Senate Committee by one vote, has been reintroduced this year, and the hearings are scheduled for June 21, 22, 23.

The liquor people have no idea of stopping their advertising if they can help it, and allied with them are other forces that might feel the pinch if Congress should move to cut the $250,000,000 figure by limiting advertising.

The proponents of these bills, however, are backing them because they believe that: Alcohol beverage advertising is misleading; it constantly hammers at the home through any and all available media; it pictures only half-truths—pictured as a boon to health, it has just the opposite effect on the individual and the family. And today, it is impossible to read a paper or a magazine, or listen to a play, or watch a ballgame without seeing it.

The claim that advertising is not designed to sell more liquor to more people is absurd. We refer you to the man who once made "Pearline"!

J. T. K.

FORTY-FIRST BIENNIAL SESSION OF
THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL
CHRISTIAN CHURCHES, INC.

APRIL 27-29, 1954

BETHLEHEM CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH
SUFFOLK, VIRGINIA

* * * * *

TUESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION
2:00 P. M.

The session was called to order by President Stevens by the singing of the Convention Hymn: "God of Grace and God of Glory."

The meeting was constituted by prayer by Dr. I. W. Johnson.

A cordial welcome was extended by pastor of the host church, Rev. R. E. Brittle.

The President declared a quorum present.

Introduction of guests and new ministers by Superintendent Scott:

Ministers—Rev. George B. Alley, Rev. Thos. H. Britton, Rev. H. L. Carnes, Rev. H. V. Harman, Rev. C. D. Hayes (absent), Dr. C. H. Heymann (absent), Rev. Olin B. Pendleton, Rev. D. O. Jackson (absent), Rev. C. M. Jones, Dr. Woffard C. Timmons, Rev. H. G. Titcombe, Rev. John W. Rackley, Jr., Rev. J. S. Graves.

Guests—Dr. Stanley U. North, Mr. William K. Newman, Dr. D. H. Sandstrom, Dr. Raymond A. Dudley, Dr. S. N. Stevens.

It was voted to extend the privilege of deliberative members to the distinguished guests presented for all sessions.

The Secretary presented the printed program as the report of the Program Committee which was adopted with such changes as may be necessary to expedite the business of the Convention.

The following committees were appointed for the current sessions: Business Committee—Lanson Granger, Chairman; W. E. Wisseman, H. S. Hardcastle, R. E. Newton.

Resolutions Committee—Wm. J. Andes, Chairman; Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, W. P. Smith, Fred Register.

1

Press Committee—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; J. T. Kennolle, F. C. Lester, George Alley.
Credentials Committee—James H. Lightbourne, Jr., Chairman; Clarence A. Phillips, Richard L. Jackson, W. J. Andes, F. C. Lester.

The host pastor introduced Mrs. O. C. Bradshaw as organist for the sessions.

The opening service of worship was conducted by Dr. Woffard C. Timmons, pastor of the Southern Pines Church and chaplain of the Convention sessions.

The following reports were presented in brief form as compiled in the "Blue Book" for consideration, adoption of same being scheduled for a later session:

Executive Board—Rev. Henry E. Robinson, D. D., Secretary.

Superintendent—Rev. Wm. T. Scott, D. D.

Educational Secretary—Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

Treasurer—George D. Colelough.

Mission Board—Mrs. John G. Truitt.

Board of Christian Education—Rev. Wm. J. Andes.

Board of Publications—Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D.

Rural Church Committee—Rev. James Lightbourne, Jr.

Stewardship Committee—Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, D. D.

Finance Committee (1st reading)—Rev. S. C. Harrell, D. D.

President Stevens then yielded the chair to the Vice President, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar. The President's address, "The Nature of the Church," was delivered for the edification of all.

An offering for Convention expenses was received.

Hearings were announced at 4:30 for the Finance Committee and the Board of Publications.

* * * * *

BANQUETS—6:00 P. M.

Simultaneous banquets were held for the women at the Bethlehem Church, and for men at the Suffolk Church. Dr. S. N. Stevens, president of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, addressed the Laymen's Fellowship on the subject: "Tomorrow's Challenge to Higher Education." Dr. Raymond A. Dudley, Indiana secretary of the American Board spoke to the Women of the Convention on "Women in India."

Both audiences were up to the capacity of the banquet halls.

2

2. That the Mission Board be authorized to seek "Declarations of Purpose" from churches not yet having made "declarations," and to complete the quota of $135,000.00.

It was especially noted that $14,298.00 was given to the National Home Board for Ministerial Relief and that the beneficiaries of the Southern Convention area received back a total of $18,500.00. An expression of gratitude to our National Board for its generous gifts was extended.

On motion it was voted that the report of the Board of Christian Education be adopted and made a part of the record. The Convention authorized the Board of Christian Education to prepare such a charter as was necessary and to make the charter conform to the present structural organization of the Board. Said charter to be presented to the Executive Board for approval. Change of name of the Board of Religious Education is to be mentioned in the new charter.

On motion it was voted to adopt the report of the Board of Publications and to make it a part of the record.

On motion it was voted to adopt the report of the Rural Church Committee and to make it part of the record.

On motion it was voted to adopt the report of the Stewardship Commission and to make it part of the record.

Dr. D. H. Sandstrom of Chicago, Ill., presented a most inspiring address on "Stewardship, a Personal Discipline."

It was moved and voted that Rev. Z. P. Jenkins be welcomed as a fraternal delegate from the Convention of the South and that he be seated as a deliberative delegate. He spoke to bring greetings and stressed the importance of presenting the Gospel to a materialistic civilization.

It was voted to make the report of the Finance Committee the first matter of business in the afternoon session.

The report of the Woman's Missionary Convention was adopted and made a part of the record.

The report of the Laymen's Fellowship was adopted and made part of the record.

The report of the Pilgrim Fellowship was adopted and made part of the record.

The report of the Committee on the Ministry was adopted and made part of the record.

The report of the Moonelon Committee was again presented with the recommendation that the Convention place this entire holding

TUESDAY EVENING SESSION

The evening session was led in worship by the chaplain including special music by the host church choir.

An offering was received for Korean Relief.

Dr. Stanley U. North was speaker of the evening giving a stirring address on, "Life and Task of the Church in America."

The Lord's Supper was administered by Dr. Timmons and Rev. Brittle.

* * * * *

WEDNESDAY MORNING SESSION

The session was opened by hymn and prayer by Rev. George D. Alley.

The report of the Executive Board was adopted and made part of the record.

It was voted to make the actions of the Executive Board during the 52-54 biennium the official actions of the Southern Convention of Congregational Churches, Inc.

On motion it was voted that the report of the Superintendent be adopted and made a part of the record and that the recommendations be referred to the Business Committee.

The report of the Educational Secretary was adopted and made a part of the record.

On motion it was voted that the Treasurer's report be received and referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion it was voted that the report of the Mission Board be made part of the record and that the following recommendation be referred to the Business Committee.

"We recommend that our churches support the CBLF and that the Convention quota of $135,000 be fully subscribed. To that end we request that the Mission Board be permitted to continue to contact the churches not yet having made their Declaration of Purpose."

In accordance with the above vote the following resolutions presented by the Business Committee (at the afternoon session) were adopted:

Be it Resolved:

1. That we adopt the report of the CBLF Campaign Committee with commendation to the Committee.

under the administration and supervision of the Board of Christian Education with the understanding that the Convention continue to hold the title of the property.

The above report and recommendation were later adopted in the afternoon session.

The Elon College report was presented by President Smith with adoption postponed until later. A statement by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell in opposition to approving the Trustees' action of borrowing $650,000.00 from the Federal Government was given. Other statements by Rev. Richard Jackson and Dr. Smith were heard.

An address by Dr. Samuel N. Stevens of Grinnell College, "The Redemptive Power of Christian Education," was heard with a sincere appreciation.

The Convention recessed for lunch served by the ladies of the church.

* * * *

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

A hymn and a prayer by Rev. J. Frank Apple opened the session.

The Business Committee asked that the Elon College report be given the first fifteen minutes of the session. (This time was later extended an additional ten minutes.) It was recommended that Rev. Carl Key of Durham, N. C., be granted five minutes to tell of the program of CROP and that discussion of the Superintendent's Home be put over to the Thursday Session.

The above report of the Business Committee was adopted.

Numerous statements on the Elon College Report were made by Shirley Holland, D. R. Fonville, L. E. Smith, L. W. Johnson, Mills Godwin, W. T. Scott, Jesse Dollar, Earl Danieley, H. V. Harman and H. S. Hardeastle. These men strongly supported favorable action on the Trustees' application for the $650,000.00 government loan. H. E. Robinson and Lanson Granger objected to the lack of time given for considering this very important action, also pointing out the undesirability of our College as our educational arm becoming involved with the state as a definite step toward central control of our free institutions.

On motion the Report on Elon College, with the recommendation to approve the application for the loan, was adopted and made part of the record.

In the above connection the question was asked if it was necessary for the Convention to grant its approval. The answer was given by Mr. Godwin that such permission was not necessary, that the Trustees had the authority to borrow such monies as it saw fit.

Mr. Pendleton pointed out that the real issue, namely who controls the college, the Trustees or the churches, had not been faced.

The Finance Committee presented the various sections of its report separately on vote of the Convention. Page 34 of the "Blue Book" was presented and adopted.

The schedule of Conference apportionments listed on page 35 of the "Blue Book" was adopted.

Items Nos. 2 through 14, pages 35-37, were adopted with item No. 13 received as information.

On motion by Chairman Stanley C. Harrell the Finance Committee's report was adopted as a whole.

Rev. Carl Key presented his statement on CROP.

The Ministerial Scholarship Fund report was presented and was adopted and made part of the record.

On motion the report of the Committee on Evangelism and Devotional Life was received and made part of the record. This report was later adopted at the Thursday morning session. A supporting statement by Melvin Dollar was heard at that time.

On motion the report of the CBLEF Campaign Committee was adopted and made part of the record with special thanks to Mr. Garren and his committee for the excellent job they have done.

The report of the Nominating Committee was presented as follows:

THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS

We, the members of the Nominating Committee, wish to place in nomination the following:

Officers of the Convention—President, Jesse H. Dollar; Vice President, G. C. Colelough; Secretary, Henry E. Robinson; Treasurer, Walter L. Cooper; Historian, J. W. Barney; Editor, The Christian Sun, S. C. Harrell; Managing Editor, J. T. Kernodle; Superintendent and Registrar, W. T. Scott.

The Executive Board—1. Conference Representatives, Class of 1938: Eastern N. C., Miss Susie D. Allen; Western N. C., F. C. Lester; North Carolina & Virginia, W. E. Wiseman; Eastern Va., Clyde L. Fields; Valley of Va., C. A. Phillips.

2. Members-at-large, Class of 1938: Mrs. W. W. Sellers, S. H. Basnight.

3. Board and Auxiliary Representatives, Class of 1958: We recommend that the Executive Committee of the Executive Board be empowered to elect the representatives nominated by the Board of Christian Education, the Board of Publications and the Laymen's Fellowship, and to approve any change in the representatives of the Mission Board, the Woman's Convention and the Youth Fellowship.

The Board of Christian Education—Class of 1956, W. J. Andes; Class of 1958, J. E. Danielew, George O. Alley, Jack P. Shoffner, John S. Graves, Henry V. Harman.

The Board of Publications—Class of 1958, S. T. Holland, F. C. Lester, Melvin Dollar.

We recommend that the Board co-opt as members ex-officio without vote for the biennium the President of the Convention, the Chairman of the Mission Board and the Chairman of the Board of Christian Education.

The Mission Board—Class of 1956, Rex Powell; Class of 1958, Mrs. Russell V. Powell, H. E. Robinson, R. T. Grissom, Carl E. Wallace, W. M. Stevens, H. L. Carnes, Ralph M. Galt.

O'Kelly Foundation Trustees—Class of 1958, S. H. Basnight, L. L. Vaughan, J. W. Barney.

Trustees of the Christian Orphanage—Class of 1960, J. Parker Cross, Harold B. Kernodle, W. J. Ballentine, C. D. West, N. C. Monroe.

Trustees of Elon College—Class of 1958 (Two nominated by the Convention to the Board of Trustees of Elon College of which they will elect one.), J. L. Crumpton, W. E. Wiseman.

Class of 1960 (Twenty-four nominated by the Convention to the Board of Trustees of Elon College, which will then elect twelve.), S. H. Basnight, John Boland, R. T. Bradford, Roy Charles, G. D. Colclough, William P. Davis, Jesse H. Dollar, D. R. Fonville, John R. Foster, Mills E. Godwin, Jr., S. T. Holland, Miss Susie Holland, V. R. Holt, R. A. Maynard, Clarence Phillips, Rex Powell, J. E. Rawles, Jr., J. H. Rountree, W. R. Savage, W. W. Sellers, A. C. Shearer, Cyrus Shoffner, W. M. Stevens, Nathaniel Talmage.

In reference to the various Boards mentioned in this report and nominations to them attention is invited to Article VIII, Section 4 of the Constitution of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Incorporated, which states: "The Superintendent—shall be a member ex officio, without vote, of all Convention Boards and Committees, and of Boards of Trustees of Elon College, the Christian Orphanage, and of the Boards of other Convention Institutions. . . ."

The following recommendations are proposed for action:

1. It is recommended that the President of the Convention ordinarily serve for a single term of two years and that so far as is possible the office be rotated between members of the clergy and the laity.

2. It is recommended that the Executive Board undertake a study for future action of the question of whether a person should serve on more than one Board of the Convention and its Institutions, with the exception of the Executive Board.

3. It is recommended that the Board of Trustees of Elon College be empowered to fill such vacancies as might occur during the biennium from the list of nominees submitted by the convention.

4. It is recommended that the Executive Committee of the Executive Board be empowered to elect the delegates to the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR., Chairman.

Robert A. Whitten, J. E. Danielew, R. T. Grissom, S. H. Basnight,

On motion, the nominations were closed and the Secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for the above slate of nominees. The Secretary cast the ballot as instructed, and the President declared the nominees elected.

The recommendations of the Nominating Committee were presented. No. 1 of these recommendations is interpreted to be suggestive and only a consensus of this Convention meeting.

The report of the Christian Orphanage was submitted by Superintendent John G. Truitt, and it was adopted. Auditor's reports for the years of 1952 and 1953 were placed in the hands of the Secretary.

The Convention recessed for supper served by the ladies of the church.

WEDNESDAY EVENING SESSION

Worship was conducted by the chaplain.

Mr. Jerry Smyre of Elon College rendered a concert of sacred music.

The offering was received ($51.19) for the Department of Music at Elon College.

A most stimulating and informative address by Dr. Raymond A. Dudley, secretary for India of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions followed: "The India in which We Work."

* * * *

THURSDAY MORNING SESSION

The session was opened by a hymn with the invocation given by Rev. M. A. Pollard.

On motion the report of the Committee on Memoirs was adopted and made part of the record.

On motion the report of the O'Kelly Memorial Foundation was adopted and made part of the record.

On motion the report of the Historian, given by Dr. Scott, was adopted. Dr. Scott noted the historical sketch in the revised Manual.

On motion the report on the Superintendent's Home was adopted and made part of the record.

Dr. Scott presented a report on the Group Insurance plan. On motion this report with its recommendations was adopted and made part of the record.

The report of the Business Committee was made by Mr. Granger, as follows:

The Business Committee has considered the recommendations made by Superintendent Scott in his report and proposes that the Convention approve them with instructions that the Executive Board implement them as a part of the Convention's program for the next biennium.

The report of the Ministerial Loan Fund was given. An amendment that Recommendation No. 3 be deleted was lost.

On motion $1330.36 as shown in the Elon College general funds less such additions as have been made since the 1952 session of the Convention was written off. ($1165.92 was thus forgiven.)

On motion the report, so altered, was adopted and made part of the record.

Dr. Smith's question as to what the Convention would have the College do concerning ministerial student scholarships granted by the College was referred to the Survey Committee on motion passed by the Convention.

On motion the report of the Social Action Committee was adopted and made part of the record.

On motion the report of the Committee on Credentials was adopted as follows:

	Delegates	Ministers	Visitors	Total
Eastern North Carolina ..	16	11	12	39
Western North Carolina .	7	8	3	18
N. Carolina & Virginia ...	42	21	8	71
Eastern Virginia	57	29	107	193
Valley Virginia	8	3	2	13
Other	0	5	5	10
Totals	130	77	137	344

Report of Credentials Committee signed: J. H. Lightbourne, Jr., W. J. Andes, Richard L. Jackson, F. C. Lester, C., A. Phillips,

The Committee on Resolutions reported as follows:

Resolved:

1. That we express by rising vote our sincere appreciation:
 - a. To the pastor and members of the Bethlehem Church for the generous hospitality given to the Convention.
 - b. To the officers and committees for all the good work they have done during the past two years.
 - c. To Dr. Samuel N. Stevens, Dr. Raymond B. Dudley, Dr. Stanley U. North, the Rev. David H. Sandstrom, and Mr. William K. Newman for their presence and for their inspiring messages.
 - d. To Dr. W. C. Timmons and others of our Convention who helped make this Convention an inspiring experience for us all.
2. That we heartily approve the work of CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program), that we do what we can to promote it, and that we ask our church people to give generously in trying to supply food for hungry people around the world.

3. That we send our greetings to Clyde Fields, R. A. Whitten, E. J. Rohart, who cannot be present because of illness.

The Committee: W. J. Andes, W. P. Smith, Fred Register.

The resignation of R. L. Jackson from the Board of Christian Education was accepted. (Mr. Jackson had been elected to the Mission Board and did not desire to serve on two boards.) Mr. Martin Garren of Greensboro was elected to fill the vacancy.

On motion it was voted that the Secretary and President be authorized to complete the Minutes.

On motion it was voted that the Minutes be printed in The Annual and that the actions of the Convention be printed as soon as possible in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

It was voted that the Convention acknowledge with thanks the invaluable service of the Convention Office, especially in the preparation of the "Blue Book" used by this session.

An expression of unanimous appreciation was extended to W. Millard Stevens upon the completion of four years of office as President of the Convention. Dr. Stevens at this point passed down the gavel and cane, symbols of office, to his successor, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, who responded with gracious and appropriate remarks.

The concluding service of the 1954 session of the Convention was conducted by the chaplain, following a soul-searching address by Rev. D. H. Sandstrom: "Kindle It with Love."

Final adjournment was at 11:35 a. m.

Respectfully submitted,

W. MILLARD STEVENS, President,

HENRY E. ROBINSON, Secretary.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Memorial Day is almost here. It is a day when we honor the dead, especially those who died serving our country. About one million of our soldiers have been killed since the start of our country, and that is almost too big a number for us to know. It means a lot of fathers, brothers, uncles and cousins went to war and never came home.

May be some of you, like me, have gone to Memorial Day parades. They are especially thrilling in Richmond for usually the Richmond Blues and Grays march. The bands play, the men take perfect steps and excitement fills the air.

This month the Richmond Blues, really the Light Infantry Blues, celebrated their 165th. birthday. You may have seen their pictures in the newspaper. The President of the United States flew to Richmond to be present at the anniversary service which was held in old St. Paul's Church on Mother's Day. The Blues are very handsome in their uniforms. They wear hats topped by a plume or feather called a shako which is just like the ones on the hats of some of Queen Elizabeth's guards. The most thrilling thing about the Richmond Blues is their famous shuffle step in marching. Their very footsteps sound patriotic.

But what of the dead? A great many people don't like to talk about death, and especially to boys and girls. But that isn't the Christian way at all. Death is a part of our life, a part of God's plan for us. We are born, without any help on our part, into God's wonderful world, and then we move to a better world of service. Dr. Peter Marshall, who was a famous Scotch-American preacher, said: "Death is a Christian's graduation." To graduate means to begin. With God a new life begins. The sorrow people feel in death is mostly sorrow for themselves, a selfishness. You may hear grown-ups say; "Why did my friend die?" or "Why did it happen to me?" It happens to all of us. If not now, later we shall lose someone we love dearly. God made it so and we should not be angry with him for it is part of his plan.

We do not need to think about dying very much. What we need to do is to say to ourselves: "Yes, I will die for it is part of my life" and then forget it and spend our days in full living so we shall be ready to graduate and with honors, we trust.

The boys and girls who grow up in mind and bodies will find life a great adventure. To one who wants to find something new and exciting in each day, he has only to look. Death is the most exciting adventure of all for the Christian.

* * * * *

"Are You Guiding Your Children?"

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

This is sometimes called the age of tension. How important it is for parents and teachers to do everything within their power to offset the tensions that pile up around children.

The wrong type of television program excites the young with wild and daring stories. Just a few days ago our home town morning newspaper related the story of a four-year-old who begged his father for a rope "like the cowboy on television had." The father refused to get the rope. Several days later, however, looking out of the window, he observed, with horrified alarm, his son's small feet dangling in the air. The child had found a rope in the basement and had tied it to a porch bannister. It was necessary to rush him to the hospital.

In too few homes is there a constructive effort to keep a day-in, day-out attitude of peaceful, happy, gentle living. For good emotional health there is, among all ages, too much leaning on the excitement of outward stimulation and too little cultivation of inner resources.

As, recently, I waited for a bus, a beautiful three-year-old, with long curling lashes, begged his grandmother, "Please put on my cowboy belt!" When she suggested doing it later he ran up to me with pleading eyes, holding out the belt, which had a holder for a large play knife.

When we boarded the bus his grandmother adjusted the belt and a piping voice announced, "Now I might kill someone!"

Shocked, the grandmother hushed, "Oh, no!" as the wide-eyed little cowboy flourished his knife in his best wild-west manner.

Today's young children seem always to be imitating something they saw or heard or read about. When I was a child, and there were no televisions or radios, I used my imagination and made up my own fun. To me it is important to get our children interested in something to which they can contribute—not just copy or imitate. The creative urge is in all of us, but if not encouraged it will never grow beyond a weak little sprout.

The same is true of all skills and abilities. They need the atmosphere of a gay, happy home, in which youthful, active minds are encouraged to think, originate, develop, and express themselves.

We must also teach our children not to take failure too seriously. It has been wisely said that we often learn more from failure than we do from success, since failure is only the opportunity to begin again more intelligently. It is the not trying our boys and girls must know, or the half-trying, which they should avoid.

It is needful for every youngster's growth and development that some real, worthwhile interest be encouraged. Are you, parent reader, guiding your children in this respect, or are you permitting them to drift and imitate? Whatever we do, let us avoid a sheep-like conformity in our homes and personalities. As parents, we must dare to be ourselves, or we cannot teach our children to think and act independently. Yet such independence is necessary if they are one day to reach an emotional and spiritual maturity that will make them adequate and happy adults. We must teach our up-and-coming boy and girl that they owe it to themselves to gain a full realization of all their powers.

Joint Revival Services

Woods Chapel and Wissler's Chapel are planning a joint revival, to begin on Monday evening, May 31, at 7:45 p., and continue each evening through Sunday June 6. On Monday, Tuesday and Sunday evenings, the services will be held at Woods Chapel; and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at Wissler's Chapel. There will also be services at Wissler's Chapel on Sunday morning, June 6, at 10:30 a. m.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Amos Condemns Social Injustice"

LESSON X—JUNE 6, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live; and so the Lord, the God of hosts, will be with you."—Amos 5: 14.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: II Kings 14: 23-29; Amos 7-8.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 58: 1-8.

This man Amos was "a preaching white man." To be sure, he was not the son of a prophet, nor had he ever had any training for preaching in a technical sense. But he was a preacher and a prophet of the first order, and the first prophet whose sermons have come down to us in written form. Who was the man, where did he come from, what did he have to say, how did he go about it, what did he accomplish? The scope of these "notes" will allow only brief answers to these questions.

The Man.

He was a herdsman, a keeper of sheep, a dresser of sycamore trees and a seller of figs; a plain, blunt, simple living, high thinking, rugged individual. His home was at the edge of the desert, and from the hill on which the little village in which he lived was located, one looked down on one of the most desolate scenes in the Holy Land. This landscape made a solemn impression upon a reflective mind such as Amos'—the spreading desert, the shimmering waters of the Dead Sea, and the high wall of the distant hills of Moab. And the silence of his desert life stimulated reflection and deep thinking.

Several factors entered into his preparation for his prophetic mission. First of all, and dominating all, was his knowledge of God. There is no doubt or uncertainty in his mind about the existence or the character of the God in whose name he speaks. The sway of this God is boundless, his power is infinite, not only controlling the forces of nature, but guiding the movements and destinies of nations. Moreover he is a righteous God, dealing with all nations on moral principles, and although favorable to Israel, he deals with her in a sterner way because of her greater knowledge and therefore her greater responsibility. He searches the hearts of men, deals with them according to moral law, and executes judgment according to righteousness.

To this knowledge of God, Amos adds an acquaintance with the history of his people. And he had reflected deeply on that history and its meaning. Furthermore, he had traveled widely and had observed closely. And he measured what he knew and what he saw by the Divine standard in the light of the Divine light.

The Times.

His book gives much knowledge of the times in which he lived. Wealth was concentrated in the hands of a few, poverty was prevalent among the masses, many of whom were really slaves. The rich were indulging in all kinds of luxury, even having ivory couches, the women were giving themselves to all forms of intemperance, poor people were sold into slavery. Men grudged the coming of the Sabbath because it interfered with their business and their profits, food was adulterated, weights and measures were falsified, justice was perverted, greed, corruption and heartlessness were prevalent. And yet formal religion was at its height. That was the irony of the situation. Religion was divorced from morality. The people had a form of godliness, but they denied the power thereof. It was for such a time as this that this sturdy, rugged old prophet had come. God chose this son of the desert to indict his people and to pronounce the judgment of a righteous God.

The Method.

Amos used several methods. In the beginning, he used the indirect method. Appearing at Bethel in the Northern Kingdom—he was from Judah, the Southern Kingdom—he first arraigned the neighboring nations and pronounced judgment and doom upon them. Then in straight, swift, terrible words, he brought it home to Israel. He aroused the ire of the priest or false prophet, who suggested that he go back home and do his preaching. They felt like the people of the South feel when somebody from the North comes down here and tries to tell us how to do things.

The writer remembers, when he began his ministry in Suffolk years ago, how one man said that he was not going to have any Damn-Yankee telling him how to get to heaven! It should be said, however, that that man later became one of the writer's most faithful members of the church.

Or again, Amos used symbols, or illustrations. A basket of summer fruit, quickly spoiling, was symbolic of Israel. A plumbline held against the wall was suggestive of God's testing of Israel. And he used picturesque and eloquent language to drive home his point. His preaching was vivid, vital, direct, devastating. He spoke with power. He hewed to the line and let the chips fall where they would.

The Message.

There was one central theme in his preaching. God was a God of righteousness and justice and ethical character. Forms meant nothing to him; only the spirit counted. There was no merit in a multitude of sacrifices; only a right inner spirit was of avail. Justice and mercy were more important than formal sacrifice. God was no respecter of nations, and he would execute judgment on even his chosen people. Doom was impending. He prophesied destruction, and it came.

When the people refused to heed his message, he retired again into the desert from which he had come and reduced his message to writing. As has been said, he was the first of the writing prophets. He is listed with the Minor Prophets, but that does not minimize the importance of his work or of his influence. There was a man sent from God whose name was Amos.

It need not be added that our modern world needs the message of Amos. There are many forms and areas of social injustice, there is all too much formality in religion, there is a tendency to substitute profession for practice in religion, corruption, greed and graft are all too prevalent in American life. And material things threaten to take first place in the lives of many of our people. Let justice roll down like the waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream, might well be the theme of modern preaching as it was of the preaching of Amos.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

About Goats

The following letter has been received by Mrs. W. E. Wiseman, Friendly Service Chairman for our Southern Convention Women. It is of interest to all who have shared in the "Goat Fund."

"Through the Rev. Howard E. Spragg, our general secretary of the Board of Home Missions for Puerto Rico, we received the check for $1,092.87, which came through you from the churches in your area for our goat fund.

"We are truly thankful for this splendid gift and especially at this time when we are in the midst of an expansion in our program in the direction of pure-bred stock and with more modern, yet simple and sanitary methods of raising these milk animals. We have found that a good milk goat does not adapt to just any kind of conditions but needs good attention—and once she gets it she does very nicely and pays you for your attention and money. We still have a way to go in order to get more experience and data for passing on to our neighbors, but we feel that there is a growing enthusiasm.

"Just recently the Heifer project sent us ten female saanen kid does and we have on loan a saanen buck from the Puerto Rico Experimental Station, and we are under way toward setting up a model herd. Part of your money will be to pay for this shipment, part for setting up the sheds, and part will be used for bringing the heard to production age.

"We also feel encouraged about the prospects of goats being imported, and with the visit of Dr. Carl Leach, editor of the Dairy Goat Journal, Columbia, Mo., and member of the Heifer Project Inc., we are hoping to make Yuquiqu (U-key-U, I believe is the correct pronunciation—Ed.) a distribution center for those that will be shipped in as kids from the north. At last we feel that the atmosphere is ripe for this move.

"I might say that I personally have two goats, Annie, that gives me four quarts of milk per day (at her best) and Neneen that gives me three and one half quarts.

"Again accept our thanks for this fine effort on your part and on the part of the women of your churches. We feel confident that the Puerto Rican babies will be the benefitters from this generosity within a short time."

Yours sincerely,

IVAN CHATHAM,

Director,

Yuquiqu Rural Life Community
Yuquiqu, Puerto Rico.

* * * * *

Notes on Worship

At each of the North Carolina Rallies this spring someone presented the idea of "Women at Worship." Mrs. W. T. Scott sent each one to present this subject a two-page write-up of some ideas on worship. It seemed too good a summary to let pass without wider circulation. Here are some of the ideas that Mrs. Scott had collected concerning worship:

Why do we Worship?

1. Because of certain impulses or drives given by God—fear, awe, wonder, sense of beauty, etc.
2. Because it has become custom or habit.
3. Because of the training.
4. Because of the example of others whom we admire.
5. Because we have experienced the values of true worship and have been reinforced and strengthened by them. This group has definite convictions and beliefs about the kind of God who is the Creator and Sustainer and Redeemer of all life, convictions which make for an inner compulsion to worship. They cannot help but worship—they cannot do otherwise!

What Hinders True Worship?

1. Attending services unexpectant of anything happening to them or to others.
2. Afraid of what it will cost to be closely in tune with God and his plan.
3. Self-Sufficiency and self-reliance.
4. Lack of faith in a real God.

5. Ignorance of the meaning of worship—lack of training in the home and in the church.
6. Outside distractions.
7. Leader who conducts but who himself fails to worship.

Steps in Development of Worship Services.

1. Vision of God.
2. Confession of sin.
3. Assurance of forgiveness.
4. New challenge or sense of missions.
5. Rededication of self.

"God is too great for our little minds to comprehend him in all his greatness—we need to be confronted in our group workshop by various aspects of his character and nature, such as his power, justice, or love."

LAYMEN AND THE CHURCH.

(Continued from page 3.)

about the men who direct our community, nation, and world affairs. Aren't they largely church men? Perhaps they're not always active but they profess a faith and have membership in our churches. So, what your city school board does, what Congress does, what industry, labor, the cabinet, the President—what any of these people do is done largely by church men who profess religious principles and faith. This means that the responsibility for any conditions which exist today rests largely on church men—and so does the responsibility for betterment. Think what it would mean if each of our secular leaders regarded his work as a calling of God. Think what it would mean if each of us sincerely believed that our work was a part of God's plan for us. That's a tremendous challenge.

If we are to respond to this challenge we must find ways to prepare church men for their positions of leadership and responsibility. First we may need to convince men that their vocation is a part of God's plan for their individual lives. For such a conviction I recommend Elton Trueblood's Your Other Vocation and Wilbur LaRoe's The Church We Love. Both of these books are written in the language of laymen and either can be read in an evening. One of these books might well be reviewed as a program for your men's fellowship. If your review is well done and copies are provided for your men to read,

(Continued on page 14.)

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

This week there are two very interesting items in our report, that of a bequest of $1,003.21 from the estate of the late M. H. Hayes, and a contribution by the Elks Club of Burlington for $2,500.00. You can imagine how thankful I am for both of these contributions, when you realize that we had to carry over into this year's activity a $13,000 deficit.

Remembering the orphanage in one's last will and testament is a most generous thing. It bespeaks the kindness of heart and generosity of the hand as few other things can do. There is something tender and beautiful in the spirit of one who remembers an orphanage in his will.

Both the college and the orphanage here at Elon should feel honored and most grateful that our neighbors right here in Burlington who know us well, were pleased to make us equal recipients in their youth project. They know our needs, and they can estimate the value of our work. On that basis they have been very generous, and we are indeed grateful. If others would rally to our help, we would come out of the difficulty created by last year's losses. And the record so far this year indicates that the people will help us who are trying hard to help ourselves in the worthy work we are doing. I have prayed, and do pray, that God will put it in the hearts of the people to see us through with these children. I have faith in God and in you that if we do our best we shall come out all right.

So far we are having good seasons. Our cabbage, peas, beets and onions are in abundance. Other garden crops are getting a good start. And the grain crop looks now like it will be great. I hope that we have good weather at harvest. We have already harvested around 2,000 bales of hay.

Let us all work humbly and hard to see that this is one of the best years we have ever had.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MAY 20, 1954.
Commodities for the Week.

Buttons:
Woman's Fellowship, Pfafftown Congregational Christian Church.
Mrs. W. A. Newman, Henderson, N. C.
Mrs. Ethel Burgess, Leaksville, N. C.

Glasses:
Mrs. D. E. Harrell, London Bridge, N. C.
Clothing:
Mrs. Bob Moore, Burlington, N. C.
Mrs. J. C. Beal, Franklin, Va.

Coupons:
Mt. Lebanon Cong. Christian Ch., Shenandoah, Va.
Mrs. Elizabeth Hutcherson, San Diego, Calif.
Shirts:
Miss Madeline Rollins, Washington, D. C.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$ 5,621.83
Eastern Va. Conference:
Rosemont	$ 32.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Asheville	$ 16.00
Bethel S. S.	3.96
Burlington, First S. S. ..	83.72
Burlington, Lakeview ...	17.33
Monticello	24.00
	145.01
Total	$ 177.01
Grand total	$ 5,798.84

Special Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$12,745.09
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. .	$ 10.00
Lawrence S. Holt Trust
Fund	150.00
Bequest from Malvery H. Hayes estate	1,003.21
Women's Fellowship of Bay View Cong. Christian Church	16.62
Elks' Club, Burlington, N. C.	2,500.00
In Memory of Harry W. Baals	10.00
In Memory of Charlie C. Griffin	6.00
In Memory of Mrs. Viola Councill Drake	3.50
Special Gifts	404.11
	4,103.44
Grand total	$16,848.53
Total for the week	$ 4,280.45
Total for the year	$22,647.37

LAYMEN AND THE CHURCH.
(Continued from page 13.)
the Christian impact on your community could be tremendous.

Taking one's religion into secular life may not be an easy matter. There are no patterns to follow. Every individual will have to develop a pattern that will suit his ability and his opportunities. I know a fine young deacon whose work is that of laying linoleum and floor tile. He uses his opportunities of meeting people in their homes to witness for Christ and his church. Knowing him as an able and conscientious worker I am certain that this added use of his time does not detract from the efficiency of his work. In fact I believe his conviction that he is doing God's work results in superior workmanship. Truly this man has a vocation in the highest sense of the word. May we all seek patterns in which we can give Christian values to the world in which we live. Until and unless we do, we shall not have a Christian World. This I Believe.

Questions for Discussion.

1. How can a worker other than a minister feel he is called to his vocation?
2. What should the church do especially for young people as to Christian vocations?
3. Why should Christians be concerned about and engaged in politics?
4. What is involved in being an effective witness for Christ?
5. How does a church make a Christian impact on its community?

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

..... (Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

..... (Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

"Tips from Tom"

Cupid has run short of information. If anyone knows where his arrow will strike next, let us in on it.

* * *

As the end of school approaches, it will be graduation time for many of our young people throughout our churches. Graduates in universities, colleges and high schools will be receiving degrees or diplomas, and official congratulations go to these leaders of tomorrow as they take another step in life.

* * *

We are going to try a new system of getting news articles for this page. Post cards will be prepared to send to each group. Once a week, five cards will be mailed out, one to a church in each conference. This will be a personal request for that group to send in an article of what they have been doing. These cards will be addressed to the minister of the church. He is to pass it on to the group. If this fails, it will be one of three reasons. The minister failed to acknowledge it, the youth failed to respond to it, or the card was lost in the mail. When your group gets such a card, please let us hear from you. Thanks go to Reuben Askew of Elon College, for the suggestion of the method mentioned above. You are still asked to send in news whenever you can. Do not wait for a card if you can send in news before. The card is only to encourage more groups to write.

* * * * *

Topic of Youth Rally, "Our Christian Faith"

"Our Christian Faith" will be the topic of our next Valley Conference Youth Rally, which will be held in the Linville Congregational Christian Church on Sunday, May 30, 1954. There will be worship, discussion, fellowship, music, for all attending this youth rally.

The afternoon session begins at 3:00 with worship led by the Linville group. Following on the program will be the United Christian Youth Movement Filmstrip, "Faith of a Guy." Also discussion groups and speakers. Fellowship and recreation will also be provided for all.

For supper, youth are requested to bring their own, and the host church will provide the drink and dessert.

The evening session will begin at 6:00 and the highlight of this program will be sacred musical numbers by the different youth groups. The Winchester group will be in charge of the closing worship service.

An "S. O. S." from Pattie Lee

Please do not overlook or neglect your registrations and the other announcements regarding the Summer Camps and Conferences. All six of the camps come within a two-weeks' period this year, and the first one begins on June 6! This does not give any of us much time, but I know we can depend upon you as interested young people to cooperate with us and send in your registrations at the earliest possible minute. This is necessary, that we may know how to order food and other supplies. Thank you. Pattie Lee Coghill.

We would like to urge that all young people of the Valley area come and represent their groups at this Fellowship Rally.

* * * * *

Western North Carolina Rally

In a recent letter from the president of the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship, May 30, 1954, was announced as the date for their Rally, which is to be held in Albemarle, North Carolina, with the First Congregational Christian Church.

The objective of this rally is centered on work, materials, methods, and suggestions for Bible schools, in which many youth will take part as leaders. The Asheboro youth will be in charge of the opening worship service, following registration at 3:00 p. m. Several capable leaders will be on the program to lead discussions on work with Bible schools. The afternoon program will be devoted to business and discussion-workshops of Bible schools. Groups will be divided into topics of Crafts, and departments such as Kindergarten, Juniors and others. Here ideas and methods will be shared with discussion by the workers.

Young people and adults, come and bring a picnic basket. Don't forget, the trophy will be awarded to the group with the highest percentage of attendance. Come one and all for a big Rally Day.

* * * * *

"Cupid's Column"

The announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Marie Councilman of Burlington, N. C., to Mr. David Thomas Newman of Henderson, N. C., on Sunday, the sixth of June, 1954 at 4:30 o'clock in the First Baptist Church Chapel in Burlington, North Carolina. Both of these young people are now students of Elon College.

* * *

Miss Gireta McPherson and Mr. Max Vestal, both of Asheboro, N. C., will be united in marriage on June 12, 1954, at 4:00 o'clock, in the Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church. Miss McPherson is a student at Elon College. Max, a graduate of Elon, is a seminary student at Duke Divinity School. He is pastor of the Pleasant Ridge and Spoon's Chapel Congregational Christian Churches.

* * *

Miss Joyce Beck of Norfolk, Va., will join hands in wedlock with Mr. Reuben Askew of Norfolk, Va. This young couple will make their home at Elon College where both will be enrolled in school. Mr. Askew is assistant pastor of the Calvary Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

LAYMEN AND THE CHURCH.

(Continued from page 14.)

SPECIAL NOTE:

J. D. Hoff, Jr., of Tulsa, Oklahoma, was the author of this meditation. Mr. Hoff, the Moderator of the Central South Conference of Congregational Christian Churches which includes Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, also president of the Laymen's Fellowship for the same conference, is an accountant with the Warren Petroleum Corporation of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

DELEGATES ATTEND SOUTHERN CONVENTION BANQUETS

The upper picture portrays the group of men attending the Laymen's Fellowship Banquet in the Suffolk Christian Church, while the women were served in the dining hall of the Bethlehem Church. As can be seen, capacity crowds were present for both occasions.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1954

NUMBER 22

Ifs For the Church School Teacher

By ERVIN L. SHAVER

If you can keep your faith in children's futures
When all your teaching seems of no avail;
If you can press your truth when many others
Would close their open minds and doubts assail;
If you can say what you can't help believing,
Yet listen kindly to a younger voice;
And seek to guide your pupils' powers of thinking,
But let them exercise their right or choice.

If you can prepare each lesson plan just so,
But change your plan to meet the pressing need;
If you can cause that interest spark to glow,
And lead from group discussion on to deed;
If you can call to help you instantly
The incident which fits the case in hand;
Or stimulate productive memory
By question from the list at your command.

If you can see the good in flippant smarties;
Nor vent your ire upon those noisy boys;
If you can turn the talk of girls from parties.
To thoughts of character and inner poise.
If you can share with them in liveliest fun,
And make good times a stepping stone to worth;
And lead your group to build their Father's Kingdom,
Extending friendliness throughout the earth.

If you can keep the aim of all your teaching,
Unclouded by the failures on the way;
If you can plan and you can pray unceasing
For each one in your class from day to day;
If you can sense the honor of your calling
As He whom men once named the Lowly One;
You'll find this task your very best demanding—
Then hear the Master Teacher say, "Well done"!

News Flashes

We learn with deep regret of the severe illness of Mrs. A. M. House of Franklinton, N. C. Mrs. House is the mother of our late editor, Dr. Robert Lee House.

The latest addition to the list of churches which have made Declarations of Purpose in the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, is First Church of Norfolk, Virginia. The pledge is for $969.00. Rev. Olin B. Pendleton is pastor of First Church.

Elsewhere in this issue is a statement from the Southern Convention Secretary, announcing the resignation of Miss Patties Lee Coghill as Educational Secretary. We are sure we express the unanimous regret of our readers when we say, "Pattie Lee, we are sorry." And we know all will join us in wishing her joy and success in whatever she may undertake.

The annual Christian Convocation and Pastors' School will be held at Duke University, Durham, N. C., June 8 to 11, 1954. Registration will be on Tuesday, June 8, beginning at 9:00 a.m., in the library reading room of the Divinity School. The registration fee is $2.00. Rooms are free, but a deposit of $1.00 is required for key, which will be refunded. Meals are served at reasonable rates in the university cafetehia. An outstanding program has been prepared, and ministers will do well to consider attending.

The Sloans Leave Elon for Another World Tour

Most of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will remember the series of eleven articles written during the summer of 1952 by Dr. W. W. Sloan, Elon College's professor of Bible religious education, when he and Mrs. Sloan visited seventeen countries of Africa as well as a number of countries in the Middle East and Europe. The Sloans made their trip to gather material for lectures on that year's mission study addresses in North Carolina and Virginia. A majority of these talks have been the result of their experiences.

The Sloans are doing it again. They left Elon College the afternoon of Commencement Day for a trip around the world. This year's journey has a two-fold purpose. First, they have been asked to serve as good-will ambassadors from the churches of America to those of New Zealand and Australia. Second, they have gone to gather material to use in lectures next winter on the new mission study subject, Ceylon, India and Parkistan. The Sloans will also visit Hawaii, the Fiji Islands, Indonesia, and the Middle East, making their third journey to Egypt, Jordan and Israel (Palestine). After a few days in Turkey they will fly across Europe and the Atlantic. The entire trip will be by air.

The following will be the summer addresses of the Sloans, should any of you desire to write to them while they are abroad. Air mail is the only satisfactory service. To Hawaii the price is the same as anywhere else in the United States. To other countries the rate is 25c for regular letters. Air letter sheets may be secured at the postoffice for 10c each. The dates are the times they expect to leave each place. Time should be allowed for transportation.

To June 11—c/o Dr. Harold St. John, 2365 Hoomaka Way, Honolulu 14, Hawaii.

To June 25—c/o National Council of Churches in New Zealand, P. O. Box 297, Christchurch C 1, New Zealand.

To July 10—c/o Rev. A. P. Farr, 98 Limestone Ave., Ainslie, Canberra, Australia.

To July 27—c/o Rev. Sydney Bunker, Vaddukodai, Jaffna, Ceylon.

To August 6—c/o Dr. J. H. Smith, Sri Aurobindo Ashram, Pondicherry, South India.

To August 23—c/o Rev. Charles L. Boss, 74 Garden Road, Karachi 3, Pakistan.

The Story of the Bible Pictured in Film

The tremendously inspiring story of how the Bible has come down to us through the ages has been made into a feature-length motion picture by the American Bible Society. Titled, "Our Bible—How It Came To Us," it will be made available to the churches of America immediately.

"Our Bible—How It Came To Us" is expected to prove a landmark in cinema and Biblical history. Years of diligent planning, research and scholastic collaboration were devoted to the script before the first actor took his place before the camera. A great number of specialists and authorities in the fields of Christian history and religious education—both here and abroad—were consulted on every detail. As a result, the film is undoubtedly the most authentic cinema document ever made on the subject.

"Our Bible—How It Came To Us" traces the history and development of the Bible from the first century A. D., right up to the present time. Because of the huge time span the film covers, it was necessary to employ a cast of more than 250—almost on the scale of a De Mille epic. No actor plays more than one part—the hero of the story is the Bible itself.

The film was designed primarily by the American Bible Society as a general educational film for members of the churches of America. However, it will have values, too, as a source of education in church schools at various grade levels. It will also be made available for educational television, and although theatrical distribution is not contemplated, it may also achieve some showings in motion picture houses. Essentially, however, it is intended for the church-going public, both here and abroad. A plan is under consideration to add sound tracts in foreign languages, so that audiences abroad can understand it.

The film treatment is divided into three main parts—the formation of the Bible; how the Bible spread across Europe, and how the English Bible came into being. "Our Bible—How It Came To Us" may be shown in one continuous form, or it may be shown in its separate, three-unit form. In continuous form, the time is one hour and a half, and the rental fee is $22.50.

In separate form, the first part (the formation of the Bible) rents for $8.00, and its running time is 26 minutes. Part two (the Bible spreads across Europe), rents for $8.00 and runs for 27 minutes. Part three (the making of the English Bible) rents for $9.00 and runs for 35 minutes. For church showings, the separate unite forms are recommended, with the recommendation that the parts be shown in sequence and not too many days apart.

The film is available for rentals beginning immediately from the American Bible Society's district headquarters offices, and somewhat later it will be available at denominational film libraries, and other libraries yet to be designated.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieleley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Plans Made for Moonelon

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, in biennial session at the Bethlehem Church, Suffolk, Virginia, in April of this year, authorized the Board of Christian Education to take the responsibility for the Moonelon Conference Center. The Board of Christian Education, meeting in Burlington, N. C., May 4, 1954, assumed that responsibility and named certain committees to carry out the plans and programs which have been advanced. An executive committee composed of Dr. Henry E. Robinson, chairman; Truby Vincent, vice-chairman; George Alley, secretary; John Graves and S. H. Pell. Ex-officio members of this committee are W. J. Andes, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, and W. T. Scott.

A finance committee was named to take care of promotion and publicity. Henry E. Robinson is the chairman of this committee, and other members are George Alley, Walstein W. Snyder and J. L. Faulkner.

The building committee, which will be in charge of new construction consists of Truby A. Vincent, chairman; Garland Huffman, Osear Wilkins, Carl Monroe, Bill Mahan and J. W. McLennan.

A committee on properties was appointed to look after the small equipment, minor repairs, upkeep, personnel, insurance, and to arrange workdays and schedules for all activities to be held at Moonelon. John Graves, minister of Religious Education at the First Church in Burlington (Phone 6-7428), is chairman of this committee. Serving with him are Mrs. Verona Danieleley, D. Marsh McLelland and George Piekett.

The executive committee has already met and will be announcing plans in the near future for the further development of Moonelon.

This is to call the Laymen's attention to the fact that this is our project and that we have much to do in order to develop it into the kind of conference center which we want. Our motto should be, "Let us all be up and doing."

Miss Coghill Resigns Her Position As Educational Secretary

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, educational secretary for the Southern Convention submitted her resignation to the Executive Board at the latter's meeting on May 31. This action will become effective August 1. The Board voted to accept the resignation with regret. Miss Coghill plans to teach in the public schools near Henderson, N. C., her home. All those associated with Miss Coghill in any way will regret her leaving our Convention Office, and we all wish her the very best of fortune in her new work.

Miss Coghill has suffered from a throat ailment for about two years and has also found difficult the great amount of traveling which the job requires. She will be close-by to give counsel from her wealth of experience in the many fields of labor in which she has served. All of her friends will be sorry to read this announcement and will want to extend to Miss Coghill their own words of appreciation.

In her letter of resignation, Miss Coghill expressed her gratitude to all who have worked with her over the past five-year period and desired that her sentiments be expressed to the Convention through the secretary.

Securing a successor is the responsibility of the Office and Personnel Committee of the Executive Board. This committee will meet shortly for

(Continued on page 11.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieleley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Trnitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Recruiting for Christian Service

Our Congregational Christian record of recruitment for the various types of Christian service is relatively unimpressive when compared with the records of some other denominations.

Some of our finest young men and women are going into secular trades and professions, who undoubtedly would have responded to the call for Christian service, had it been presented persuasively enough, early enough, and under the right conditions.

We have been and still are too afraid to present the demands of our own way of living and thinking. We have been afraid of bringing pressure into the lives of others. In many cases we have been just plain slow and negligent, failing to take the trouble to search out our most promising young people. We are thus not replacing our Christian workers as we should.

To be more specific, let us look into the record of many of our churches, in every area. Is it not true that there are many who for decades have not sent a single young man or woman into the ministry, medical work, missionary service, Christian education, or a similar vocation? Is it not true that in many of these churches, likewise, not one single public (possibly not even a private) appeal to them has ever been made?

In a few cases our Christian groups have subscribed liberally to some mission cause or charity, or spent money for some other purpose. But they have not given anything to facilitate the education of some promising young person in some field of Christian service.

The International University in Japan needs the support of our churches. This is a good and essential work. But we also have a responsibility toward the future and toward our young people. Let us provide scholarships or other means of encouraging young people to train for Christian service. Let us provide at an early date descriptions of these fields and indications of the deep personal rewards to be found in giving one's life to them.

We cannot expect our work to prosper and our church extension and improvement programs to do much if we cannot continue to furnish our leadership from within our own ranks.

Let us do some recruiting now—and do it effectively, and do it enthusiastically. It may bring greater rewards.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

The Days Ahead

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc., at its recent forty-first biennial session, voted "... its conviction that, in the event the Supreme Court rules that segregation in the public schools is unconstitutional, the ruling should be received in good faith, and the system of public schools maintained on a non-segregated basis." Thus the Convention placed itself in line with other church bodies in this section of the South.

This statement of conviction was a part of the report of the Committee on Social Action. The report was received by unanimous vote of those voting. Reaction to the report, as it became fairly widely publicized through the newspaper accounts, indicates that not all members of the churches of the Convention would have voted favorably had they been present and eligible to vote. Now that the Supreme Court has handed down the decision and within a period of months will indicate the period of time available for compliance—and perhaps some of the steps that should be taken to end segregation in the schools—the issue is at hand.

The days ahead will be very difficult in certain sections of North Carolina and Virginia, as well as in large areas of the Southland. It is to be hoped that members of our churches will bring to the front sound leadership that the end of segregation in the public schools may be achieved in peace. The constituency of the Southern Convention should take seriously the action of the Convention.

The recent action of the N. A. A. C. P. at Atlanta, Georgia, will be disturbing to many, including some who will accept the ruling of the Supreme Court in good faith and will seek to bring about orderly compliance. There is the real danger that such pressure at this time will cause more difficulties than it will solve. But in the light of the manner in which the Supreme Court is handling the issue, it is not likely any court will force integration until after the hearings in the fall of the year and the rulings that follow.

Frequently the suggestion is made that the burden of reaching amicable settlement of the problem rests with the Negro and those who support his point of view. Something more should be said. The burden rests equally with those who in good faith and conviction supported segregation, but who now must adjust to a new situation. It is at this point that the Christian witness is sorely needed.

JAS. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Jr.

Church Buildings Should Be Churchly

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

Pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church
Richmond, Virginia

Church architecture is one of the most important factors in the Christian Program, and yet it is one of the most neglected and in many instances the most ignored. The idea that God, being a Spirit, may be worshipped at an economic saving in one kind of a building as well as in another, and that beauty in the architecture or in the furnishings may detract from the beauty of holiness by causing the worshipper to think of his surroundings rather than of his God—these and many other similar fallacious notions have been largely responsible for some of the mistakes in modern church architecture.

To speak of "faults in modern Church Architecture" carries no inference that every period of church architecture has not also had its faults. Medieval church architecture had its faults just as surely as has modern church architecture. Naturally they are different. In medieval days, the major fault in church architecture, as viewed in the light of present day requirements, was the over-emphasis on appearance and a lack of emphasis on utility.

Modern church architecture has swung to the opposite extreme in sacrificing appearance and art to serviceability, and in many instances in absolutely ignoring the importance of churchliness and the artistic. Consequently, our country is dotted with thousands of church buildings which carry no suggestion of churchliness, of art, or of worship. They would as easily pass for a bank building, a library, a public school, a garage, or a mausoleum, as for a church. Every church building should embody in some very definite manner in its type of architecture what is known as "the ecclesiastical suggestion." In other words, every church should have a distinctively churchly appearance. The architecture of every church building should carry the suggestion of a place of worship. The ultra modernistic architecture of many present-day church buildings is absolutely wanting in this regard.

The movement away from distinctive ministerial garb; the practice of ministers discarding the clerical collar, the white necktie, the Prince Albert coat, etc., making the minister appear like men of other vocations was a healthy and wise step, for Protestantism does not advocate "a minister-centered" idea of worship. But the movement away from distinctive church architecture—the practice of doing away with church towers, church spires, traceried windows, cathedral glass, etc., so as to make the church appear like buildings used for various other purposes—has definitely been detrimental to the prestige, the influence, the power and the progress of the church. Correct church architecture constantly reminds people of God, the need of worship, and the importance of religion in every life and to every community. Correct church architecture has a tremendous psychological value, as well as a most significant religious value. Most people who have seen the great cathedrals of Europe have been impressed by the fact that they suggest the majesty of God, and the majestic privilege of worship. The massiveness, permanency and grandeur of such edifices suggest man's dependence upon religion as the keystone in the arch of human experience. The stately pillars, denoting strength; the traceried windows denoting the beauty of holiness, and the towers and spires rising heavenward, all challenge men to "worship and believe."

DR. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

We cannot calculate how much it would mean for the churches of our denomination and to the Kingdom of God, if down through the years each of our churches had built according to the pattern of our New England churches.

Of course, we have also been impressed with the absence of certain worthy features in the great cathedrals—features which we find in the average evangelical church today—such as the items that give the home effect, and an atmosphere of warmth and fellowship as do churches of the Colonial type. Modern church architecture should provide for beauty as well as for comfort; for impressiveness as well as for pleasantness; for the artistic as well as for utility.

The modern church building should not only emphasize the worship unit of the building—the church auditorium—but it also requires proper emphasis upon the religious education unit, the fellowship unit, and in communities where provisions are not otherwise made, the recreational unit should also be included. Only a specialist in Church Architecture can make proper provision for these needs, and every church should also provide for "a private prayer chapel," and should properly co-ordinate these different units into a single building that shall do justice to each and credit to the entire edifice.

It is a mistake to spend an unreasonable proportion of the building fund on any one of the units comprising an adequate modern church building. The major emphasis naturally should be on the worship unit, because of its ecclesiastical distinction, that quality which marks the building as a church—a place of worship. The religious education unit, the fellowship unit, and the recreational unit, though built in direct conjunction with the worship unit, do not need to have, and in fact should not have the so-called "church appearance." Hence opportunity is afforded for simplicity in these units, the which materially lessens their cost. The religious education unit will likely entail the next largest expense because of the space it should provide for departmental church school work. The importance of this

(Continued on page 13.)

Our Churches Report . . .

Newport News Launches New Church

No puns intended in the headline, but for sometime our folk of the ship-building Peninsula have been aware of rapid population growth and the need for a new church.

Last Wednesday evening more than 80 people, some of them members of First Church who live in the area, some new prospects and those of First Church who came to lend moral support, met at Deer Park School, Warwick, Virginia, to plan for the new Church.

This meeting followed a visit and survey from national and convention offices, a survey made by the people of the local churches, and much groundwork on the part of the Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr.

The first services were held last Sunday with an attendance of 72. First Church has granted Mr. Granger time to serve in both places until a worker may be secured. The service was held at 9:30 and the attendance most gratifying. Many recall that First Church started in a public hall with a mere handful of people.

Having launched the new venture, it is hoped that favorable tides and winds attend her sailing.

Huntersdale Will Welcome Minister Back to Pulpit

The Huntersdale Christian Church of Franklin, Virginia, will welcome its pastor back to his pulpit on Sunday, June 6, at the 11:00 hour. Mr. Fields has been recuperating from an illness since February 26. Special services will welcome him in his return to his work for the first two weeks in June.

Huntersdale Church will honor its six high school seniors who are members of the Franklin High School graduating class at the morning service on June 6. Special music, followed by a brief meditation by the pastor will prepare the congregation to receive the sacrament of Holy Communion. Eight new members will be welcomed into the fellowship of the church as a part of the service on June 6.

Children's Day and the Consecration Service for small children will feature the services on Sunday, June 13. The Daily Vacation Bible School will begin on Friday, June 11, and continue through June 18. Mrs. Clyde Fields will be in charge of the school.

The church is most happy to welcome the return of its pastor to active duty.

REPORTER.

Memorial Service at Flint Hill (R)

Members and friends of the Flint Hill Church, near Sophia, North Carolina, met at that church for their annual Memorial Service on Sunday evening, May 23. A picnic supper was enjoyed in a shady grove at the rear of the church. The blessing at the table, by the pastor, Rev. Avery Brown, included not only thanks for all the blessings we enjoy but a plea for remembrance of those in other lands who do not have enough to eat.

Following the supper, the Sunday school superintendent, Harvey Lanier, went into the pretty, fenced cemetery, playing hymns on his accordion. The group followed, and at sunset the Memorial Service was held. Mr. Brown had charge of the service. Miss Eula Smith read a memorial in regard to Mr. Walter Lanier, long-time member and church worker, who recently passed away. Dr. F. C. Lester, of the Asheboro Church, led a meditation. Then Mr. Harvey Lanier led the group into the church, where singing was enjoyed.

Old friends enjoyed this annual return to their former "home church," and present members and visitors enjoyed both the fellowship and the inspiration.

Moving Day for Mark Andes

May fourth was moving day for us, a day filled with mingled emotions. Since December, 1946, I had served as minister of the Virgilina, Va., pastorate of Congregational Christian Churches, and for six and one half years Catherine and I had lived at Virgilina. When the moving van pulled into the driveway of the parsonage, we knew "this was it." The people of this parish had helped us in many ways. Enduring friendships have been established, and we shall cherish the memories of our association with these folks. We are grateful to them for all of their kindness, thoughtfulness, and for the many acts they did which made our work among these churches a real joy. Our hearts are stirred to deep gratitude also for the gifts they bestowed upon us at our departure.

But we felt an inner drive to accept the challenge of the new project in church extension at South Boston, Va. With no church building, no parsonage, no organization, no church program—we accepted the invitation to share the dreams and aspirations of a group of people in the South Boston-Halifax area who want a Congregational Christian Church.

We moved into a rented house at 708 Marshall Ave., South Boston, Va., and found a welcome mat extended to us. A telephone was installed the following day (No. 3-1841).

The new church, which for the present is having Sunday night services at the chapel of the Powell Funeral Home in South Boston, has thirty-two members who have taken the church vows. There are others who have signed an application for charter membership.

On Sunday night, May 16, the congregation voted to have as its name "Center Congregational Christian Church." The geographical location suggests the name, for the community in which the church site is located is called Centerville. The site is in the center of Halifax County, is halfway between South Boston and Halifax. Too, the church, it is hoped, will be the center through which we express our Christian living and ideals.

On Wednesday, May 19, a well-drilling outfit started to sink a well on the building site, which is located on highway No. 501 at Centerville. Plans for the first unit of the building are now in the hands of a local architect to draw up specifications.

Center Church is grateful for the consideration given it by the National Board of Home Missions, the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, the C. M. A. of the N. C. and Va. Conference, and the Church Building Loan Fund.

The loyalty, enthusiasm, and determination of the local group is "catching." Center Church invites your prayers that it may be directed by the Spirit of God and bring honor and glory to his Holy Name.

MARK W. ANDES,

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Elon College Commencement

The sixty-fourth annual Commencement of Elon College was held May 28-31, inclusive. The alumni get-together on Friday night in the gymnasium was a very beautiful and enjoyable occasion. The gymnasium had been tastily decorated and an enjoyable program planned. An unusually large number of alumni returned for the occasion.

All alumni of the 1890's were invited to return for this occasion. The pleasure and the joy of the occasion was greatly increased by the presence of a number of these older graduates of the college. Mrs. Morris, nee Roberta Moffitt, sister of Dr. E. L. Moffitt, one-time president of the college, of the Class of 1894, was present. I believe she is the oldest living alumnus who took her full college work at Elon. Mrs. W. P. Lawrence, the widow of the late Dr. W. P. Lawrence, for a long time professor of English at the college, also of the Class of 1894, was present as she always is. It was good to have these two veterans of the college on the campus again and to have them present at this social occasion and remain through the entire program. Mrs. Harry Trotman of Churchland, Virginia; Mr. Will May, and Mr. John Stratford, Jr., were also present and added to the pleasure and colorfulness of the occasion.

The picnic lunch on South Campus and the alumni meeting on Saturday afternoon, were very successful and enjoyable. The Shakesperian Play, "As You Like It," presented by the Dramatics Department created a great deal of interest and repeated requests that the Dramatics Department provide entertainment features for the commencement occasions hereafter.

The Elon College Choir always does an acceptable job and is appreciated and applauded on all occasions. The Baccalaureate Service on Sunday was outstanding. Dr. Aaron Meckel of St. Petersburg, Florida, gave one of the most eloquent and effective Biblical messages that I have ever heard on a commencement occasion. The Honorable Mills E. Godwin of Suffolk, Virginia, delivered the literary address to the graduating class and all present. His address was historical, patriotic, religious and meaningful in every sense of the word. It was filled with information and effective content from start to finish and was delivered with an attractiveness that you seldom see. Mills demonstrated himself as a good thinker, as a careful logician, and as a captivating speaker. All were delighted with his message.

The weather was everything that could be desired. The attendance for this occasion was unusually large and from every standpoint, it would seem from an unprejudiced opinion that it was one of the best commencement occasions that we have had on our campus in years.

* * * * *

To the Class of 1954

Elon College has placed in your hands a diploma, a certificate of graduation, certifying that you have met requirements for the Bachelor of Arts Degree, fulfilling the dreams of youth and realizing the ambitions of a life-time. This is a joyous occasion. Achievements are always joyous.

These four years in college have not been easy; they have been hard. They have been exacting. They have been costly to you and to those who love you. Hours of toil, days of anxiety, hard-earned dollars, and years of dreaming have gone into your diploma.

Now you face a world filled with tensions, torn by strife, and trembling from fear. The war clouds are dark and lowering, laden with ever-increasing destructive powers beyond man's control, powers sufficient to wreck civilization, to destroy all life, and to leave this earth a seared planet revolving purposelessly in empty space.

As college graduates equipped for life and leadership, it is your opportunity and your responsibility to relieve these tensions that beset the world; to resolve these fears that destroy peace; and to sweep from land and sea, clouds and stratosphere, these missiles of death and destruction, that the world may rest at ease, that man may live in peace and help to fulfill God's mission to mankind.

The big question is what are you going to do about it. What can you do about it? Frankly, of yourselves and by yourselves you can do nothing.

Fortunately, there is one above and beyond all, greater and more powerful than all others—the true and living God whose power is unlimited, whose goodness never faileth, and whose mercy extendeth to all generations. Seek him, find him, hide him in your hearts. Make him your own. If he is yours and you are his, so far as you are concerned your future and the future of the world are secure and civilization will last for generations to come.

L. E. SMITH,
President.

* * * * *

Preamble of President's Report to Board of Trustees

The following is the preamble to the President's Annual Report to the Board of Trustees of Elon College on May 31, 1954:

"Elon College is facing the test, not only of its efficiency and effectiveness in the field of higher education but of its existence, its very life. To continue to serve as it should, the college must have adequate equipment, an acceptable faculty, a specific amount of endowment wisely invested, and a sufficient income to meet all operating costs without embarrassment or delay. At present, seventy-five percent of the operating cost of Elon College is met from student tuition, fees, and other student charges. To maintain this rate of support, there should be at least 350 or fifty percent of the present student body living on the campus. The college must maintain dormitories and a dining room. When these are filled to capacity, they may be operated at a profit. These facilities must be adequate and appealing if they are to attract and hold campus students in sufficient numbers to insure operating cost.

"Elon College has operated on a balanced budget since 1935 with the exception of 1952-53, without outside help other than from the church; on Conference Apportionment and Sustaining Fund which amounts to less than five percent of its annual budget. Currently the college accounts are in balance and indications are that we shall close the year in balance. There are sufficient funds to the credit of current accounts to absorb any reasonable deficit that might occur. To continue to operate in the

(Continued on page 11.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Planned Your Summer Cradle Roll Party?

June is the month when most of our churches sponsor a Cradle Roll Party. Is your church planning such an event, and have you begun to plan in this direction? If not, then begin right away. You will remember that the 1954 party prepared by the Southern Convention Cradle Roll Department was included in the Woman's Packet, but if you would rather plan an original party and program that is fine. If you do not have a copy of our program and would like one, you may write to the address below and one will be sent. By all means do have a party, whether it be in June or some other convenient month.

MRS. CARL WALLACE.

1011 Stamper Road,
Fayetteville, N. C.

* * * * *

Mother-Daughter Supper at Ramseur

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Christian Church of Ramseur met recently for a mother-daughter covered dish supper at the church. Mrs. M. A. Snider, president, welcomed the guests and members. Judy Maness read a poem to the mothers and Mrs. Sherman Maness responded with a poem, "Girl of Mine." Mrs. W. R. Maness was presented a corsage of white roses for being the oldest mother present, and Mrs. Russell Craven was presented with a corsage of red roses for being the youngest mother present.

Immediately following the supper, the group assembled in the sanctuary for a most interesting family life program "Making a Success of Everyday Living" under the direction of Mrs. Jack White and Mrs. C. E. Brown.

Mrs. Roy Barnard and Mrs. Finley Curtis of Asheboro and Mrs. Colvin Williamson of Greensboro furnished flowers for the church in honor of their mother, Mrs. W. R. Maness.

—Asheboro Courier-Tribune.

Antioch Observes Family Night

The Antioch Ladies Missionary Society met Friday night, May 21, at six o'clock at the Antioch Congregational Christian Church, Route One, Seagrove, for the observance of "Family Night." A picnic supper was enjoyed by the ladies and their families on the church grounds.

Following the picnic supper the worship service was opened by the president, Mrs. Gale Brady, who extended a cordial welcome to everyone. Mrs. Billy Norwood was in charge of the program, which was presented by members of the society. The program closed with a panel discussion.

Following the program pictures were shown concerning family life and missionary activities in Puerto Rico. The society will meet at the home of Mrs. Romie Marley, Route One, Ramseur, next month, with Mrs. Jesse Ritter in charge of the program.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Items of Interest

PROGRAM COMMITTEE MEETS.

The program committee of our North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference met at the home of the conference president, Mrs. Wm. T. Scott, on May 19 to make plans for the fall conference to be held in Southern Pines on October 5. Members are Mrs. Russell V. Powell, chairman, and Mrs. Richard L. Jackson and Mrs. Kenneth Register. According to Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Jennie Doidge, who succeeds Mrs. Berta McClintock, will be the featured speaker at the conference.

LITERATURE COMMITTEE MEETS.

The Southern Convention Literature Committee, which is responsible for the contents of the packet for use in our women's societies next year, met at Henderson on May 22. Mrs. Lillian Brown of Newport News and Mrs. John L. Brown of Asheboro assisted the chairman, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, in formulating plans. Mrs. W. B. Williams, convention president, and Mrs. F. C. Lester, convention editor, completed the group. It was about midnight when "Tudor" served homemade banana cake and coffee to the committee, so that they could continue their work for another hour and a half without falling asleep. Several new suggestions are being made for use of the literature, and we hope these ideas will prove helpful. Remember, Bruce Barton says, "When you are through changing, you are through." This applies to organizations, just as it does to individuals.

SYMPATHY.

Sincere sympathy is offered to Mrs. Russell V. Powell, officer of our North Carolina Woman's Conference, in the sudden death of her brother, Mr. William Truitt, on May 19—the night of the day she had served as chairman of the program committee at their meeting in Elon College.

BEST WISHES.

Our best wishes for a quick and complete recovery go to Mrs. Raye Knight of Chuckatuck and Mrs. Harry Nelson of Winchester, both members of the Southern Convention Woman's Board, who have been ill recently.

BUSY THOUGH RETIRED.

Your editor enjoyed worshipping at the Raleigh church on Sunday, May 23, and hearing there a very fine sermon by the Rev. Mr. Ray, recently ousted from his position as student secretary by the Southern Baptist Church. Lunch with Susie Allen, the veteran treasurer of the North Carolina Woman's Board, revealed that "Miss Susie" is a very busy person, even though she has retired after having worked for the State of North Carolina for forty-two years. She must have started as a mere infant, before the days of child labor laws! Active in Y. W. C. A., Business and Professional Women's Club, St. Cecilia Choral Society (and probably many more organizations—that much we gathered from our brief conversation!), she is a regular member of her church choir (which means being present at every practice and every Sunday), and a leader in the Raleigh church. She is a newly elected member of the executive board of the Southern Convention, and we are sure her wisdom and clear thinking will be a help in that capacity.

Don't let us make capital of our miseries; rather let us laugh them out of existence.—R. J. McCracken.

Annual Ministers' Retreat Held At Camp New Hope

By REV. HARVEY L. CARNES

Congregational Christian Church, Franklin, Va.

The second annual Ministers' Retreat was convened at Camp New Hope, near Chapel Hill, N. C., from May 10 to 12, 1954. Of the 90 ministers in the Southern Convention, 30 were present, including Dr. Wm. T. Scott, the Convention Superintendent. The event proved to be so interesting that some who came to inquire, remained for the entire period. This is understandable since the food was generously served and deliciously prepared in the best of Southern tradition. There were quiet moments of worship and periods of energetic recreation in which comradeship and good fellowship prevailed.

Rev. Howard P. Bozarth served as chairman of the committee which guided the Retreat from the early stages of planning to adjournment. He was assisted by Rev. Fred Register, who acted as secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Henry Robinson.

In presenting "The Philosophy of Missions," Dr. James Hess of Elon College emphasized that belief on Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord is the crown, the last step in the conversion of a person to Christianity. It is the aim of the missionary to recognize and use the virtues which are already a part of the culture. Dr. W. W. Sloan, also of Elon College, speaking on the same subject, dealt with the basic question, "Why have foreign missions at all?" and pointed out that the mission of the church comes to us by direct commandment of our Lord, "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

Dr. Sloan observed, "The man who gave us most of our Christian teachings, the Apostle Paul, was himself a missionary; and the people who brought us Christianity were missionaries. Gratitude compels all of us to share the benefits we have received unless we want to be cads! And even if we are cads, we still have our 'skins' to save, so it behooves us to send missionaries instead of soldiers, more likely thereby preventing war and bringing peace to the world."

He noted that all too often our local churches are failing, and even our college is failing, in that our finest young people are not being inspired to serve as missionaries.

We discussed the subject, "Understanding Our Area." Dr. Wesley A. Hotchkiss, research and survey secretary for the Board of Home Missions, gave a new interpretation to the words of Christ, "Go ye into all the world." He made a good case for his belief that Christ meant not only geographic areas, but also strata of society, economic, racial and social groups within the community. He affirmed that great numbers of people are lost today, perhaps more lost than in the days when Jonathan Edwards was preaching about "Sinners in the hands of an angry God," because our people do not know they are "lost." Dr. Hotchkiss urged continuous study of the population trends and characteristics in order that our churches may best fulfil their ministry. He clarified his statement that Christian faith is sometimes destructive as it seeks to transform, by drawing the comparison of the citizen's committee which first destroys slum dwellings in order to make way for more wholesome housing units. Dr. Hotchkiss emphasized again the importance of fellowship in the Christian community, thus elevating the place of the layman. He then noted that an effective church must have a consciousness of space, that is, the geographic area it is supposed to serve, and see to it that every family and every person in that space is given every opportunity to come into the fellowship of the "committed ones."

Our own Dr. Woffard C. Timmons, now of Southern Pines, N. C., while reaffirming his conviction that the greatest need in our pulpits today is for prophetic preaching, emphasized that often our worship lacks a depth and meaning which the human spirit requires. Speaking upon the topic, "The Minister's Job," he urged the pastors to follow the Christian Year in the ordering of worship, thus counteracting a growing secularism centering around our sacred days—Easter and Christmas, especially. This practice, he said, would allow historic continuity and a consciousness of unity among Protestant Christians. In speaking of the needs of the parish, Dr. Timmons lauded the men who serve as deacons, and expressed his belief that they should be called on to do "man-sized" jobs. One such job might be to serve as the spiritual watchman of a colony of eight or ten families, and to enlist others to do the same.

The value of the colony system lies in the vital contacts of the pastor with each member of the community through the colony leader, making it more likely that Christ's redeeming transforming love would reach the otherwise unreached. Dr. Timmons closed his inspiring remarks by describing an experience, in which he saw a dangerous iceberg being towed by a small tugboat from the icy North Atlantic into the warm Gulf stream which flowed nearby. He threw out the challenge that each local congregation could be not a great liner, but a little tug drawing entrenched evil and cold indifference into the warmth of the Christian fellowship, where Christ's love and grace are the Gulf stream of human experience and faith, dispelling the powers of sin. Each faithful, witnessing, Christian becomes a strand in the towline!

A committee with Rev. W. W. Snider as president, Rev. Richard Peterson, vice-president, and Rev. Kenneth D. Register, as secretary-treasurer was elected to complete the arrangements for the third annual Retreat in the spring of 1955.

History's Lesson

A modern historian has stated that, of 19 civilizations which have flourished and disappeared, only three have been overcome by outside forces, 16 have decayed from within. The outward manifestations of this inner decay have been three-fold—drunkenness, idleness and immorality. In other words, virile civilizations have been characterized by sobriety, industry and clean moral living. Both George Washington and Abraham Lincoln foresaw that the greatest danger to this country lay within itself, and cautioned against the perils that had overcome other nations.

—Irvin Raut.

Protestant of America need 10,000 new churches today.—Church Report.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

*It's Children's Day, it's Children's
That's what the lovely flowers say;
The birds and bees all hum a tune
Of Children's Day that comes in June.*

And with the coming of Children's Day is school's end and days at home. Hope you are going to have some time to go to Daily Vacation Bible School. But what of other days? What to do?

Are you a "Mama, what can I do next?" child? Make a list. Yessiree, make a list of things you can do:

1. Make a scrapbook, use pictures from magazines or greeting cards.
2. Decorate a vase or tin can with cut outs from cards.
3. Sow some seeds: flower or vegetables.
4. Help mother with simple house-keeping chores (Know some ministers sons who are cracker jack bed-makers and dishwashers—so boys can be in on this too.)
5. Collect rocks. Not for throwing, but for saving. See your library for books on rocks, and which kind is which.
6. Learn to devil eggs, make instant pudding, bake a cake or cookies with a mix.
7. Ask your Sunday school teacher for a job to do. A visit to a sick friend might help.
8. See if you can help with a Friendly Service project. Collect clothes in your wagon. Save scraps, collect old nylons.
9. Make your own list of things you can do. Then you will be all set when that rainy day arrives, or your friends are gone on vacation.

Next ask your family to make a list of things that can be done together. Such as:

1. Have a stay-at-home picnic. The family sits on the stairs, one on each step right at the top. Dad or Mother may hold a map and describe the places you pass. As you progress, move down a step. When all have arrived at the bottom, Mother produces the sack lunch and the picnic begins. You may have guessed, this was started by a family that had rain on their picnic day.

2. Play some homemade games. Have you tried muffin pan horseshoes? Place muffin tins in center of table, open side down. Each takes turns trying to toss a rubber jar ring on the back of a muffin mold.

3. Work on a family record, scrapbook of places been, things done, and when members of the family have broken in the news.

4. Write a story or tell of something interesting you have done or made and send it to the editor of this page!

5. Visit a Congregational Christian Church when you are on vacation and tell the minister who you are, and what church you work in.

6. Meet a new family. May be someone from a far off place who can tell you interesting things and share fun with you. Best of all, make up your own list for family fun.

* * * * *

Always the Silver Lining

By GEORGE M. DODSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Mrs. Wayne had a most peculiar habit. Often, after giving long and careful thought to a subject, she would suddenly speak out a sentence which made sense to no one except herself. But Miss Granthor, who had known Mrs. Wayne for many years and who now taught one of the Wayne Children in the local school, found the mannerism quite charming.

Therefore, when Mrs. Wayne told her without previous warning or introduction, "Every one of my children has that same outlook on the future," the young teacher showed no surprise.

"I'm sure they do," Miss Granthor responded. "And now let's go back to the beginning and discuss this state of affairs."

Mrs. Wayne hesitated. "I dislike to take up your time. Yet I fully realize that while studying to be a teacher you learned how to handle many problems. So, if you're sure you don't mind, I will accept your suggestion to tell you what I was thinking about before the one remark slipped out.

"My children seem to lack the ability to take setbacks and disappointments. As soon as anything happens to change their plans, they are unable to handle the new situation, which often appears, to me at least, to be of only minor importance."

Miss Granthor asked a question. "Do you tell your children all about the bright spots they expect in the future?"

"Certainly," said Mrs. Wayne. "In fact, right now each of them is looking forward to something—John's birthday party next week, Susan's promised trip to the city with her father, and the mailorder package that will bring a book ordered especially for Richard."

The young teacher chose her words carefully. "I agree you have been very thoughtful in planning for your children's happiness. However, we cannot forget that when a child is very young, most of his pleasures are planned for but that most of his disappointments come unannounced. In their anticipation of good things to come, children borrow from future happiness and joy. As a result, a large part of the fun to be expected has already been accepted as a definite promise. But the unpleasant things which turn up are doubly resented, because they come without advance notice. They are all the more upsetting because the child has been thinking in terms of a pleasant future only."

"I believe your ideas will be helpful, Miss Granthor. Do go on."

The young teacher continued. "You may say a boy or girl has to learn to accept the bad with the good. And there you have not only stated the problem but also hinted at the solution. Allow plenty of the future joys to come without previous discussion; doing this will help to balance the difficulties of childhood, which may be counted upon to arrive the same way.

"Yes, children deserve some pleasant spots to which they may look forward. However, it isn't necessary, nor is it desirable, to so drain the joyous future of the element of surprise that only problems will be left in the group of events which will visit them without warning. Consider what your own reaction would be if you were to know all about every pleasant event that was to occur in the weeks ahead and so could be surprised only when those that were unpleasant came to you."

Mrs. Wayne held up her hand. "Enough for one lesson!" she laughingly said. "Now let's see if I have

(Continued on page 15.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Lost—Found

There was a lapel pin found in Ladies' Hall here at the college. It has been turned over to me as it is believed to belong to one of our young people. It was probably lost while the youth were staying there overnight from the Pilgrim Fellowship Rally in Burlington. If it belongs to you write me and I will send it to you.

* * * * *

What Lies Ahead?

This time of the year, all over the country rings out Commencement and Graduation. We are in the midst of that season. In many schools—men and young women are making steps forward in life. This time when you are completing the course in education is the time for opportunities unlimited. It is not the ending, but only the beginning. The value of what you have received in the past years lies ahead.

Seniors, these are the best hours of your life. God has given you this good hour with its great opportunities. Rise! Climb! There is always room at the top of the mountain, and you have the same opportunities to scale the mountain top. No mountain peak is so great that you may not follow these greats.

Now, what lies ahead? The door of life in the world has been opened to you. You see it as you have never seen it before. You are about to make your first step out into the world. The second step will be determined by the first. Do not trip or fall! It may seem that you are being pushed out into a cold and cruel world. Everything seems dark. This may be true if you have no aim or goal in life. Strive to set your goal. The world may be dark because your light does not shine out brightly.

Our world will seem brighter if we use as our philosophy of life the words of that song, "When you walk through a storm, keep your chin high, and you will never walk alone." Walk by faith, and work by reason. Lincoln once said, "If we never try, we will never succeed." The time for trial is at hand. Will we succeed?

Young People, take advantage of your opportunities. Make the most of what you have. It calls for higher education, your college calls you. If it calls for you to be a leader, then go to lead. It does call for a dedicated life, one who is a follower in fellowship and communion with God. He will lead, if you will follow.

We can see from those who have gone before us that they have been "up and doing." We ought to be able to say of our lives, when we look back, that in departing we have left behind us, "footprints on the sands of time." Make the most of your efforts and preparations today for your life tomorrow. Do not just make a living, make a life! Quo Vadis?

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

black, we must improve our living conditions for boarding students. The only way to permanently improve living conditions on the Elon College Campus is to build new dormitories and a new dining room.

"The Board has voted on two previous occasions authorizing an application to the United States Government for a loan of $650,000 for this purpose. The church has approved the application. The architect has been retained, the application has been completed and is before the proper authorities awaiting final approval and authorization. In the event of its approval and authorization, detailed plans and specifications will be submitted to contractors for bids, and construction will begin shortly thereafter.

"The Board, the church, alumni, and all who are interested in the future of Elon College will face the responsibility of annual payments of interest and principal which will amount to approximately $33,000 and the final payment of the entire loan of $650,000.

"This is a sobering thought, a tremendous undertaking, but it is certainly in the realm of reason and of possibility. If we are in accord, willing and determined, individually and severally, to take our share of the load, to bear our fair share of the burden, the job will be done far sooner than we think."

The Board committed itself to an earnest organized effort to complete the Two and One Half Million Dollar Campaign Fund and called upon the convention and church officers to cooperate in a united effort to properly undergird our college financially and otherwise, that the telling contributions made to the church and the cause of Christian education by Elon College may continue.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The churches of the Southern Convention are interested in Elon College. This interest has been cumulative through the years. Had it not been for the monthly or annual contributions to the college from the churches from year to year, the college could not have survived. The church's contributions to the college have by no means met the cost of operation. These contributions, as I am sure you will agree, have fallen short of what they should have been. Nevertheless, they have been the "leaven" that has kept the "lump" rising. I am sure that as our people are informed and as they realize more fully what the college has done for the church, and the churches need all the fruits of the college, that these contributions will increase.

If more of the members of our church could have been present for the recent commencement exercises, I am sure that their appreciation of the college would have increased to an amazing degree. Contributions on apportionment help to keep the college moving through the summer. I know that our friends will not neglect this opportunity to contribute.

Previously reported	$ 3,339.96
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Niagara	$ 10.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Springs S. S. ...	$ 24.00
Newport News	100.00
	134.00

Total to date $ 3,473.96

MISS COGHILL RESIGNS.

(Continued from page 3.)

the purpose of filling the vacancy which will occur after August 1.

The Board has voted to retain the services of Miss Doris Boswell, secretary to Miss Coghill, who will receive correspondence and carry on other functions of the office at Elon College, N. C.

HENRY E. ROBINSON,
Convention Secretary.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Amos Denounces Intemperance"

LESSON XI—JUNE 13, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Let us conduct ourselves becomingly as in the day, not in revelling and drunkenness." Romans 13:13.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: Amos 2:6-12; 4:1-2; 6.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 13: 7-14.

For the Record.

There is only one theme in this lesson: Drinking. To be sure it is a temperance lesson and there are many forms of intemperance. But Amos is no preaching against them in today's lesson. He is preaching passionately against the sin of intemperance of drinking. He saw that Israel was drinking itself into disaster, and he was trying to prevent that disaster. He does not condone; he condemns. There were other sins of that time, but drunkenness was the basic sin—the others rose out of that sin. And courageously, uncompromisingly, the stern prophet spoke out against this great evil that was sapping the moral fibre of the nation and bringing inevitable doom and disaster.

There are those who say that it does no good to teach and to preach against drinking and against liquor. They say that it only antagonizes people. Is one to keep quiet in the face of the record of legalized liquor, and in the highly-financed, shrewdly organized program of the liquor interests today, and in the efforts of the beer and liquor interest to "educate" people, even young people, to drink and to drink more and to drink more and more? What the church of Jesus Christ needs to day is to develop a conscience on this matter. That is just the trouble today and the reason why Americans are drinking more and more, and why more and more are drinking. What disturbs the writer of these notes is not simply the fact that too much liquor is being drunk in America, and too much of it is being drunk by members of the church, but the fact that so many people have no conscience in the matter. We need more Amoses to show the disintegration which drinking brings upon a nation, and to declare the ultimate disaster which drunkenness brings to people, and to condemn those in low places and in high places who are partners in this business which is a denial of everything for which the church of Jesus Christ stands. Antagonize people indeed! We had better antagonize people! That is much better than to stroke them smoothly, keep silent on this moral issue, or tell them that after all it doesn't make much difference. "You tell that to the Marines," but you had better not tell it to Amos! We church folks would hang our heads in shame if we knew how the liquor interests and the devil are smiling at our attitude toward this matter. The recurring quarterly temperance lessons give every teacher an opportunity to lift his voice against this giant evil, to teach the evils of drinking and the virtues of abstinence, and to bear his witness for Christ and the church in favor of a sober nation.

The Charge.

Why was this old prophet so disturbed about this matter? What was happening in Israel anyway? Scattered verses from his collection of sermons tells us in a graphic way. For instance those who drank were trying to make the Nazarites also to drink, trying to make those who had been set aside to the service of God to partake of wine. "But ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink." How the liquor interests would like to get the ministers and church leaders to drinking! They would if they could. Their advertising is designed to get folks to drink, anybody, everybody. You never see any reservations in liquor ads. Every man and woman, every young person is the object of their shrewdly conceived, and highly financed advertising.

Another thing that aroused the ire of this rugged prophet was the effects that these interests were making to silence the prophets. "And command the prophets saying, prophesy not." How modern it sounds! "Let a preacher stick to the gospel." "Do not preach against drinking!" "Don't teach the Sunday school lesson on Temperance—you might offend somebody!" "If you must preach and teach against intemperance, talk about overeating, or about overworking." "Go easy, soft-pedal the thing, keep quiet." That is what the people were saying then and that is what they are saying now. How little Amos cared for what they said!

Or again, one of the things that irked Amos was the fact that so many women were drinking. He was not very complimentary in referring to them—he called them "cows of Bashan." They "say unto their lords, Bring, and let us drink." A drinking or a drunken man is bad enough, but deliver us from a drinking or a drunken woman. Someone has said that you can judge the morals of any age by the morals of the women of that age, and the morals of Israel's womanhood had struck a new low. It is not a very lovely, or a very encouraging picture of American life, to see how many women, including mothers who are addicts to the liquor habit.

Amos could make some allowances for the poor man, who drank, as he said "to get away from it all" "to forget it all for a while." But he had no excuse for the man in better circumstances in his dissipation. It was these well-placed drinkers that Amos most despised, for he saw what they were doing to the pattern of Israel's life. They made it "the smart thing to do." That is the psychology behind the "Men of Distinction" ads of liquor. Men of Distinction indeed! The writer of these notes thinks that the man of distinction is the man who, regardless of what his associates do, says "No thank you!" when he is offered a drink. And this goes for young people too!

The Prediction.

"Therefore shall they now go captive with the first that go captive, and the revelry of them that stretched themselves shall pass away." Doom was coming. When the moral foundations of a nation decay and crumble, nothing else will save the nation. And doom came. Within twenty-five years Amos' prediction was tragically fulfilled. His beloved nation was conquered and carried captive. And those dissipated leaders were the first to be taken captive. As usual, when a city or a nation falls, the conqueror goes for the biggest prize of all first—the leaders. He can take the commoner whenever he feels like it. The thing Amos said would happen, happened. There came the cap-

(Continued on page 15.)

Letters from Ed and Frances Riggs

2918E Regent St.,
Berkeley 5, Calif.,
May 25, 1954.

Dear Southern Convention Friends:

I know that it is over four months since we sent out our last general letter, because it featured the news of the most recent addition to our family, who is now four and a half months old. She is a good deal more photogenic now, and we wish we could enclose a snapshot of her with one of her friendly grins, but I am afraid money for that sort of things has run out. Watching her develop and take her place in the family circle has certainly been one of the high spots of our experience this spring.

The other notable experience of these months for me has been the rounding out of my public health education course here at the university. These have been awfully busy days, but full of all sorts of valuable experiences in seminars and conferences, and in field trips and projects out in the community. The gradual changing emphasis from the theoretical background in the classroom to the practical application and testing of what we are learning has been very interesting. But the final step is still ahead—twelve weeks of Field Training in an actual work situation in some local health department. I have been assigned to the Health Department at Columbus, Georgia, one of the better local units in the South, where I will have special opportunities along the lines I need for India.

These arrangements have just been completed. I will probably start work there on June 28, which means that we will have a chance for a leisurely trip across the country after school finishes here early in June, and we will be able to visit in Los Angeles and Denver along the way. After we are through there, the third week in September, we will probably have another two or three weeks to visit in the South and New England, before sailing from New York for India again. That is as clearly as I can report our plans at this stage.

Best regards,

ED RIGGS.

* * *

Dear Friends:

Our days here in Berkeley are fast drawing to a close. It has truly been an important part of our lives.

Ed has had a chance to get some very valuable education. At the same time, I have been learning to be an American housewife, with all its satisfactions and frustrations. Louis has turned from babyhood into a rough-and-tumble "cowboy loving" boy, and Joy has changed from baby sweetness to terrible two. She is still a very sweet girl with a cute smile and dancing eyes, but very hard to manage at times. And last, but not least, our little Martha has arrived and become very much a part of us. She has a slow steady smile which she gives only to those she knows, and will take no end of punishment from the older children.

During this period we have played hookey from the Congregational Church, even though we still think it the best in Berkeley, and have found real fellowship in a Presbyterian Church. Their Sunday school has an especially fine teaching staff, who handled our two shy children very well, and taught them as well as winning their friendship. So . . . though we lost some contacts, we made new friends.

We are looking forward to seeing Georgia and the South, in which neither of us have ever lived.

Best wishes,

FRAN RIGGS.

CHURCH BUILDINGS SHOULD BE CHURCHLY

(Continued from page 5.)

unit is equally as great as that of the worship unit. But because it does not require emphasis on ecclesiastical design, the cost may be less. The fellowship and recreational units, because of their relative size, should require less expense than either of the other two units. The congregation shows wisdom when it provides in its building program that the cost of the worship unit shall be practically the same as that of the other three units combined.

Whether a congregation has ten thousand dollars, a hundred thousand dollars, or five hundred thousand dollars to spend in erecting a church edifice, the specialist in church architecture will earn his fee many times over by the economies he secures in efficient planning. The best architect is always the cheapest. None but specialists in Church Architecture should ever be employed to plan a church edifice.

Thousands of ecclesiastical monstrosities are today found in the smaller towns and cities, as well as in some of our larger centers of population, simply because the building committee employed a general architect to design their church building instead of securing a specialist in church architecture. The fact that a general architect is a fellow townsman, a member of the church, or because he offers to make a donation of a portion of his fees, is no reason for securing his services.

The first decision that every church building committee should make is that they are going to secure a specialist in church architecture. Even the smallest church can be designed so as to have that appearance of beauty and dignity which is so essential.

The modern church building, whether large or small, whether in the rural district or in the residential section of a growing city, is of supreme importance in the life of the people, because it serves the highest interest in life—the spiritual. It should stimulate religious thinking, and should inspire religious conduct. It should afford opportunity for impressive and expressive worship, for religious fellowship, for religious nurture, and for social service.

The building of a church offers a congregation opportunity to express the religious sincerity of the members, their religious ideals and their zeal for God in a most definite manner. The erection of a church edifice is a divine enterprise in which every member is given a privilege of sharing. It is an opportunity for the membership of today to erect a monument to their faith and their loyalty for future generations to behold and enjoy. Whether it is the erection of a small church in a village, or of an imposing church edifice in a city, the privilege is divine, and the task should be performed with an eye single to the glory of God and the service of man.

A competent church architect will so design the building that the beauty of the interior and exterior depend upon symmetry of line and harmony of color rather than upon ornamental detail. He will make provision for a churchly appearing edifice which in itself will be a witness to God and an invitation to worship. He will provide for adequate heating facilities which will make it possible to regulate with simplicity the heat of the building to a uniform and worshipful temperature. A competent Church architect will furthermore, make proper provisions for ventilation and air conditioning, which constitute a most important part of a

(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

The Holt Chapel is about completed. Soon we shall be finishing it up and grading the section around it as a part of the building east, and while we are doing that grading, I want to do some smoothing up of the whole section of campus between the main buildings. We shall need some gravel for the drives and some money to help pay for this extra grading. I am wondering if there are not friends who know about our muddy dirt streets and drives in our campus who would like to help us with a donation for this purpose. If you would like to see our campus pretty and smooth, holes all filled up, drives gravelled so we can get around without cutting the campus up in rainy weather, and grass sown, please tell us so with a contribution. Thank you.

Today our public school closed. Our little children and bigger children, too, will have time on their hands. They need playground equipment. At least three sets of croquet are needed. Two or three baseballs and as many baseball bats, some baseball gloves, and two or three soft balls are badly needed. Maybe some Sunday school class would like to send us a donation with which to secure this equipment. A couple of basket balls would help. A couple of sets of horseshoes would be good. I used to play horseshoes with disordered mule shoes, but tractors do not wear muleshoes—not even horseshoes. Certainly would appreciate gifts for some athletic equipment.

Many of our children came home from school with good reports, some of them with very good reports. They ranged all the way from a full count of "D's" to a full house of "A's." Not many pupils in anybody's group make all "A's," but we had three of that kind: Larry Glenn Rowland, John Crumpler, and his brother, James. There were several others in reach of the top. Jeannie Cook won the typing medal. Robert Rowland and W. C. Harvell won their letters in basketball and baseball. Next year we are to have two seniors, two juniors, five sophomores and seven freshmen. That means that we have sixteen who are making their grades in the high school classes.

We are getting along fine here, except for the fact that last year's drought still plagues us financially. We need to catch the minds and hearts of a larger number of helpers. There are a number of people who help us so much, and there are as many more who would help if they knew our needs. Help me to show them the needs. Help me to enlarge the number of contributors, so it will be easy for us to come to the end of this year with every bill paid. It will not hurt you a bit to speak a good word for an institution of the church which is doing a job of caring for a large family of homeless children. I am not asking for more than we need, but I am asking your help on what we do need.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR MAY 27, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Coupons and buttons:
Mrs. W. C. Doffmeyer, Luray, Va.
Coupons:
Ladies Missionary Society, Cong. Ch., Alto Pass, Ill.
Women's Missionary Society, Henderson Cr.
Birthday gifts:
Mrs. C. P. Chamberline, Windsor, Conn.
Clothing:
Mrs. W. A. Welsh, Elon College, N. C.
Patricia Kitchen, Waverly, Va.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 5,798.84
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Turner's Chapel $ 42.00
Wake Chapel 55.62
Wentworth 15.29
..... 112.91
Eastern Va. Conference:
Oak Grove $ 5.00
..... 5.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Happy Home S. S. $ 47.41
Howard's Chapel $ 1.00
..... 48.41

Western N. C. Conference:
Mt. Pleasant $ 12.50
Zion 30.00
..... 42.50

Virginia Valley Conference:
Linville S S $ 5.83
New Hope S. S. 10.00
..... 15.83

Total $ 224.65

Grand total $ 6,023.49

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $16,848.53
Mr. & Mrs. W. M. Jay,
Bendersville, Penn. ... $ 5.00
United Cong. Christian S.
S., Columbus, Ga. 7.02
Philathea Class, Suffolk
Christian Church 5.00
Mary Sue Brittle S. S.
Class 5.00
The Heart Sisters of Ran-dlemann Christian Church (to send a child to camp) 15.00
In Memory of William O.
Truitt 15.00
In Memory of William O.
Truitt 5.00
In Memory of R. H. Riedel 5.00
In Memory of W. T. Barnhill, Sr. 5.00
In Memory of W. E. Winborne 5.00
In Memory of G. Milton
Holland 5.00
Special Gifts 104.40
..... 181.42

Grand total $17,029.95

Total for the week 406.07

Total for the year $23,053.44

Members of the Iris McEwen Class of the First Church Sunday School, Burlington, N. C., will go to camp New Hope, near Chapel Hill, for a two days' outing on Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name

Address

In Memoriam

BALDWIN.

Mr. William Parish Baldwin, member of the First Christian Church of Burlington since October 1894 passed away on May 28, 1954, at his home on Baldwin Road in Burlington. It was singular that he died on his 78th birthday. He was a good husband, father, neighbor and friend. He was simple in his tastes. He was faithful to his church. Mr. Baldwin had been in failing health for several months and unable to attend service for about eight or nine years. He will be remembered as a man of God.

II. E. ROBINSON.

GRIFFIN.

We, the members of the Windsor Congregational Christian Church wish to pay tribute to Mrs. Mattie Persons Griffin, who died April 26, 1954.

In memory of this devoted and loyal member we present the following resolutions:

That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father and show appreciation for her long Christian life, for her strength of character, her friendly disposition, her loyalty to her family and strive to honor her life by being true to the cause she loved and served.

That the members of this church hereby express its profound regret in the loss of this member and express our gratitude for having known and worked with this fine Christian.

That we convey to the bereaved family our genuine sympathy and earnest prayer that God's blessings may be upon their saddened hearts and give them strength.

GLADYSE JOYNER HOLLAND,
OPHIE BAILEY WILKINSON,
F. IVAN STEELE.

EURE.

The members of Eure Christian Church and Sunday School, wish to pay this tribute of respect to the memory of a faithful member, Tazewell A. Eure, who passed from this earthly life to a rich reward on April 6, 1954. He was Sunday school superintendent, a Sunday school teacher, treasurer of the church, he was a deacon, and served communion for around a half century.

With the passing of Mr. Eure we feel that we have lost a valued friend and co-worker in our church. Therefore, be it resolved that Eure's Christian Church holds in sacred memory, the life long service to the church and loyal support of every worthwhile Christian cause that Mr. Eure rendered. To a large extent Eure's Christian Church is the extended shadow of men of the Eure family. In the last months of his life, with Christian grace and unerring judgment, he skillfully transferred the leadership of the church to others so at the time of his death, the work of the church might not falter.

Upon his death, men of all walks of life mourned, and in passing, our community lost one of its most generous, public spirited citizens. Possessed of many Christian graces, loyal to his faith in his personal and public life we hold in sacred memory his labors in the church.

Be it further resolved that this resolution be entered in the minutes of the official church Board, a copy be sent to the family of Tazewell A. Eure and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. W. N. ALEXANDER,
Mrs. LUCY BRISCOE,
Mrs. LUTHER H. EURE.

EURE.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Eure Christian Church, Eure, North Carolina, wish to pay this tribute of love and respect to the memory of our departed member and loved one, Mrs. T. A. Eure, who passed away April 11, 1954.

Quietly and willingly she served her Master and Church. While we miss her presence, we know her memory will live on.

May we be permitted to say "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of the Lord."

Her loving devotion to her family, her friends, her church, and community will ever be remembered.

In appreciation of her beautiful life, we offer these resolutions:

1. That we keep in our hearts the memory of her loyalty.
2. That our love and sympathy be extended to her family.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be included in our minutes, a copy sent to her family and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. W. N. ALEXANDER,
Mrs. LUCY BRISCOE,
Mrs. LUTHER H. EURE.

ALWAYS THE SILVER LINING.

(Continued from page 10.)

it straight. Because a child's life is planned to considerable extent by grownups, the joys of tomorrow should be rather carefully scheduled for him. So, while sharing a portion of the good news with my youngsters, I should hold back enough to add special happiness on its arrival—if only to offset some of the disappointments likely to occur. Is that correct, teacher?"

"One hundred per cent, and you have passed the test. Anything else on your mind?"

"Only a promise to my self and my children," Mrs. Wayne replied. "From now on, I'll keep intact a silver lining to use on the appearance of any dark cloud!"

CHURCH BUILDINGS SHOULD BE CHURCHLY

(Continued from page 13.)

well planned church building. This is a science in itself. Window ventilation is insufficient and impracticable in cold weather. A church that leaves the important item of ventilation to the planning of a contractor or a general architect, is making a serious mistake. One has only to recall the discomfort and disgust experienced in churches that are insufficiently ventilated because they depend upon window ventilation or upon an improvised ceiling ventilation system forcing cold air down upon the heads of people. A competent church architect will also make proper provision for good acoustics in the auditorium. This item alone will justify the employment of such a specialist, for the planning of an auditorium that is acoustically perfect is also a science in itself. Correct acoustics depend not only upon design and arrangement but upon the character of materials used in the building construction. "A thing of beauty" is not the only thing that is "a joy forever." A church auditorium having proper acoustics is likewise a joy to all and a joy always. The competent church architect will similarly make proper provision for the lighting of the church, for the vest co-ordination of the various units, and for the general efficiency of the plant as a whole.

No church launching a new building program can afford to fail to make these various provisions. When the members of a congregation insist on their church building being as inviting, as convenient, as serviceable, and as well furnished as their own homes, they will more worthily witness their love for God. Nothing is too good for the church, for it is our Heavenly Father's House.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

tivity, and the first ones to have the shackles fastened upon their wrists were, naturally, the governing classes.

Some Teaching Points.

Dr. Frank Mead lists some of the teaching points for this lesson as follows:

1. Drinking lowers morale.
2. Drinking pays off in social degeneracy.
3. Drinking is a luxury—few can afford it.
4. Drinking encourages exploitation of the people; the drunkard and the man who creates the drunkard want more and more and more.
5. Drinking endangers the State; drink-befuddled diplomats are Enemy No. 1.
6. Drinking brings a man to the place where he ignores the happiness and welfare of others.

SUMMER CAMPS AND CONFERENCES of the Southern Convention

JUNE 6 to 19, 1954

This year all of our Camps and Conferences come during the first three weeks of June. Please do everything possible to have your young people share in at least one of these camps or conferences. If necessary help pay their expenses. It is still not too late if you hurry.

VALLEY OF VIRGINIA

June 7-13 POWELL'S FORT CAMP, Woodstock, Virginia. Cost, $9.50
Revs. Henry V. Harman and Ralph M. Golt, Co-Deans

NORTH CAROLINA

June 6-11 CRABTREE CAMP, Route 1, Cary, North Carolina
Junior High Camp (12-14 years). Cost, $12.50
Rev. John R. Lackey, Dean

June 11-15 and
June 15-19 CRABTREE CAMP, Route 1, Cary, North Carolina
Junior Camps (9-11 years). Cost, each $8.50
Rev. Carl Wallace, Dean

EASTERN VIRGINIA

June 13-18 Y. M. C. A. CAMP, Bayside, Virginia
Junior High Camp (12-14 years). Cost, $17.00
Rev. Thomas H. Britton, Dean

SOUTHERN CONVENTION

June 13-19 YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE, Elon College, N. C.
Youth Conference (15 years and up). Cost, $15.00
Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., Dean

"TWO WEEKS FOR and WITH THE YOUTH of OUR CHURCHES"

'HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.

Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1954

NUMBER 23

"The Hope of the World"

By GEORGIA HARKNESS

Hope of the world, Thou Christ of great Compassion,
Speak to our fearful hearts by conflict rent.
Save us, Thy people, from consuming passion,
Who by our own false hopes and aims are spent.

Hope of the world, God's gift from highest heaven,
Bringing to hungry souls the bread of life,
Still let Thy spirit unto us be given
To heal earth's wounds and end her bitter strife.

Hope of the world, afoot on dusty highways,
Showing to wandering souls the path of light;
Walk Thou beside us lest the tempting byways
Lure us away from Thee to endless night.

Hope of the World, who by Thy cross didst save us
From death and dark despair, from sin and guilt;
We render back the love Thy mercy gave us;
Take Thou our lives and use them as Thou wilt.

Hope of the world, O Christ, o'er death victorious,
Who by this sign didst conquer grief and pain;
We would be faithful to Thy gospel glorious:
Thou art our Lord! Thou dost forever reign!

News Flashes

Rev. William P. Smith, pastor of First Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, reports that their morning services during the month of June are being broadcast over Station WAVY, the NBC outlet for Tidewater.

Superintendent Scott was the speaker at the Memorial services at Smithwood Church on May 31; and at Salem Chapel on June 6. Salem Chapel will observe its 100th anniversary on the first Sunday of August.

"If I were Superintendent," on page five of this issue, should be required reading for superintendents and all other church school workers. Dr. Sloan had promised us an article for some time. He sent this in just before leaving Elon for his extended trip to Asia and the southern Pacific area.

The total quota of the Building Loan Fund assigned to the Southern Convention is $135,000. In comparison to this, North Carolina has received in building aid $243,508.68, and Virginia has received $129,056.21. In addition to this, Negro churches in the area have received $112,797.84. Can we fail to raise our quota?

In this issue of THE Sun we are presenting the official program of the twelfth biennial session of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches. We suggest to delegates that they clip it and preserve for future reference. It should also prove of interest to others, for whose benefit we will present some of the highlights of the coming meetings in next week's issue.

Rev. David W. Shepherd, D. D., presently the pastor of the Oak Grove Church, Chipley, Georgia, has accepted a call to Union (Va.) and Hebron Churches, and will move his residence to Virgilina, Virginia, about the middle of August. Dr. Shepard is a native of Alamance County, North Carolina, a graduate of Elon College and Vanderbilt University. He has been for the past several years superintendent of the Southeast Convention. We welcome Dr. Shepherd to the Southern Convention area and anticipate for him a very successful ministry amongst us.

Victory for the Building Loan Fund Campaign Is Just Around the Corner

The Claremont General Council authorized a campaign to raise a minimum of $4,500,000 to augment the loan funds of the Church Building Society. As of May 21, $4,334,828 has been pledged. This is no mean achievement. Our gratitude to all those who have made it possible. To those who have not as yet shared in this endeavor with all that it means to the future witness of the Congregational fellowship, to the strengthening of Protestantism throughout the nation, and to guaranteeing that the spiritual undergirding of our democracy shall not be impaired, we offer the privilege of cooperation. Issues there are, over which free churches will differ. But over the extension of the church and the preaching of the gospel in hundreds of new communities, there ought, surely, to be only a single mindedness. This is basic. The churches participating have been richly blessed, for such is the nature of the Christian religion, that those who lost their lives save them. Planning has been necessary. Activities have been accelerated. Fellowship has been increased and deepened. Local programs, instead of suffering, have been strengthened by an awakening interest in the church. The money as a means to an end is important; but fully as important are the values derived by those who care and share.

STANLEY U. NORTH.

A Letter to Pastors of the Southern Convention

June 10, 1954.

Dear Pastor:

Jesus said: "Let the little children come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Today thousands of children grow up knowing nothing of Jesus because towns have no Sunday schools.

Do you want your church to be counted among those who care? If so, send in your Declaration of Purpose saying you will join with other churches giving sacrificially to help build for these children.

Do it now, so we may report your church on the Honor Roll when the General Council meets in biennial session on June 23.

Sincerely,

WM. KINCAID NEWMAN.

Thanks to Southern Convention Mission Board

The Mission Board of the Southern Convention, on April 28, 1954, voted to guarantee $25,000 of the 135,000 quota of the Southern Convention. Quotas as of April 28 total $97,432 (this amount has at this writing passed the $100,000 mark) which, together with the $5,000 pledged by the Mission Board of the Convention, gives promise that the full quota will be subscribed. Other Conferences are giving serious consideration to underwriting, likewise, a part of the unpledged quotas, with the full expectation that the churches that have not yet accepted quotas will want to do so.—Loan Fund Campaign News.

Pacific School Professor Wins Hymn Writing Contest

Some time ago, the Hymn Society of America announced an "invitation by the society to write a new hymn in recognition of the coming Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches" which is to be held during the month of August in Evanston, Illinois. Only recently, Miss Georgia Harkness was announced as the winner of the contest. Miss Harkness is professor of applied theology at the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, California, and is well and favorably known throughout our church.

Dr. G. M. Brydon of Richmond, Virginia, historiographer of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia, was one of ten additional authors who received honorable mention. Rev. Deane Edwards, president of the Hymn Society stated that five hundred texts were received in the contest. Dr. Harkness' hymn is printed on the front page of this issue.

Ministerial Students Graduate

We congratulate two of our young men from the Southern Convention graduating from Seminary in June—Paul Varga from Hartford Seminary; Wm. T. Scott, Jr., from Yale Divinity School; three graduates from Elon College—Thomas W. Madren, Samuel Nelson, and Bill Simmons.

We wish also to recognize the graduation of Roland Shepherd of our Gibsonville Church, who graduated as the president of his class at the Gibsonville High School, and winner of the Civitan award. Roland plans to enter Elon this fall as a ministerial student.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

About the National Convention in Chicago, Next February

The National Laymen's Fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches will meet at the Palmer House in Chicago, Illinois, in February, 1955.

Walter Graham, director of the Fellowship, has asked the cooperation of the men of the Southern Convention in promoting this program. Plans should be made to have the following representatives:

1. At least one other official delegate from your conference, state or convention committee: your president or successor would be fine.
2. At least one official delegate from every association in your state, conference or convention.
3. At least one official delegate from 50 per cent of the churches that now have men's clubs.
4. At least one official delegate from 25 per cent of the churches that do not now have organized men's clubs.
5. At least ten ministers from your state, conference or convention.
6. As many women as would like to come with the above described delegates or any others. Adequate provision is being made by Miss Lillian Gregory for all women who may come.

With the active Laymen's program which is now underway in the Southern Convention, it certainly seems possible that we will be well represented at the National Convention.

An unusually interesting program has been tentatively planned for this meeting, including such speakers as Dr. Douglas Horton, Hon. Walter Judd, Dr. Alford Carleton, Mr. Byron Price, Dr. Truman B. Douglass, Dr. George Crane, and Hon. Richard Nixon. The complete program will be announced at a future date.

* * * * *

Laymen's Work Day at Moonelon A Great Success

Work Day at Moonelon (our Convention Assembly Ground), near Elon College, on Saturday, June 5, was a great success. Bernard Williams, the most efficient president of the Convention Laymen's Fellowship, of Newport News, Va., was on hand at 7:00 a. m. to greet approximately 50 men from at least three conferences who had come to give a day's work for the development of Moonelon's building program. Tractors, a bulldozer, axes, swing blades, and other implements were there for the use of the men, and believe me before the day was over you could see results. The parking area had been cleared, the baseball field enlarged, the foundations dug for the Central Building, trees "whitewashed", underbrush cleared. These were some of the results that give evidence that we have a devoted group of Laymen, who are determined that our Young People shall have a Conference Center before the year is gone. One of the largest single church delegations came from our "baby church"—Center Church of South Boston, just organized within the past two months.

The day was not only profitable from good work done, but the fellowship was wonderful. At noon, a tired group of "fellows" gathered at the picnic area and were served a delicious lunch by the ladies of the Elon College Community Church. A good time was had by all.

Congratulations to the Moonelon Committee headed by Dr. Henry E. Robinson on a successful work day. Another such day will just about "fix" things up.

On Monday, June 7, it is expected
(Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, Richard W. Mortou, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardecastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Is the Cornerstone Missing?

Recent news dispatches related an account of how a cornerstone for a woman's dormitory at a New Jersey institution had been laid, only to be found missing the next day. This unusual occurrence naturally rated considerable attention.

To people of the church, in particular, this is not an unfamiliar episode. We have seen many a course of instruction with its chief cornerstone left out: the awakening of a growing mind to more effective living. We have heard (and, alas! have preached) many a sermon with its chief cornerstone left out—even Christ and his summons to men. We have participated in many a recruitment or evangelistic campaign with its chief cornerstone left out—even the warm, purposeful, implemented acceptance of a new way of life.

The trouble with much of our instruction and our work, in church and out, is that it lacks a cornerstone. We are so afraid we will not be broad and give the individual full sway to think for himself that we do not challenge him to think at all.

We should be "lively stones" as I Peter puts it.

We should not give a stone to those looking for sustenance. We should boldly accept the great Chief Cornerstone, even Christ, that the builders in so many places have rejected.

There is a good deal of effort expended in our churches and communities—needed effort—but it so often lacks a cornerstone, a supreme point or purpose. It is a question whether, in many of our programs and courses of instruction, especially in the summer, we do not leave out very largely the Chief Cornerstone, Christ, and concern ourselves about almost everything else.

Our churches, in the last analysis, will grow and prosper only as the spirit and teachings and power of the Saviour become living, dominant factors in the lives of our people. Let us set in place the Cornerstone, and let no one steal it from us. Let us watch, that, in carrying out some of the new pedagogical and scientific methods, we do not forget that in the structure of the Christian life and community, Christ is still the Chief Cornerstone.

RICHARD K. MORTON.

Counsel for 1954 Graduates

The world will make greater demands of the graduates of 1954 than it made of their parents. Present day graduates will have to compete in life with men and women who have had every advantage that the best schools can offer. Their parents had to compete with high school and college graduates. The 1954 graduate will have to compete with those who have not only graduated from college, but also with those who have specialized in their respective fields of activity by taking graduate courses in the great universities. I would urge the present day graduate also to seriously consider specialization, and then come back to their home community and render the largest possible service. Come back pledged to the task of making their community a model community of their state.

There are some who say that an education spoils people. A little of it is likely to spoil most anyone, but more of it soon brings a person back to his senses. The more people know, the less they think they know, and how little they really do know as compared to what there is to know.

Cultivate the disposition of perseverance. It is only the persevering men and women who arrive. Cyrus Field was defeated fifteen times in trying to lay the Atlantic Cable. He was told that it could not be done, and he was laughed at for continuing to try. But he persevered for nearly seventeen years, and the sixteenth time he tried it, he was successful. There is no short-cut path to achievement, no royal road to learning, no golden highway to success.

Be stable, so the world will always know where to find you. The vacillating men and women who do not know their own minds are not in demand by the forces of progress. Make friends—but above all, choose good friends—the kind that will help you. A bad friendship has meant the ruin of many a boy and girl. It has caused the downfall of thousands. Make as many good friends as you can. Choose only such friends as have as high ideals in life as you yourself cherish. A good friend is one of the greatest inspirations of life. Charles Kingsley, asked by George Elliott what was the secret of his successful life, replied, "I had a friend." That has been the secret of the success of thousands—"a good friend to inspire them to do their best." You graduates of 1954 will need that inspiration.

It may sound like a contradiction to admonish you to select your enemies with the same precaution you do your friends. But it is equally important. Only men and women of flabby morals and shallow minds avoid making enemies. You will be known and the world will judge you, not only by the friends you make, but also by the enemies you make. Choose your enemies with discretion,

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

"If I Were Superintendent"

By W. W. SLOAN

Professor of Christian Education at Elon College

I used to be a Sunday school superintendent. I have been director of religious education, and I have been a pastor of churches. Now, as a college teacher of religious education, I visit numerous Sunday schools and am asked how they can become better. Naturally, I wonder what I should do if I were superintendent again.

If I were again superintendent I would exert every effort to build loyalty to my local church. We sometimes find a Sunday school which was formed as a mission enterprise before the church was organized and is, therefore, older than the church to which it belongs. We often find Sunday schools which used to meet every Sunday, but "preaching" was held only once or twice a month. One or both of these facts gave some of our schools the feeling that they were the big thing, even more important than the church itself.

I should emphasize to myself, to my teachers and officers, and to the pupils that the Sunday school is not separate from or above the church. It is the educational branch of the church. I should refer to the school as the church school rather than the Sunday school. The first Sunday schools had no connection with the churches, but practically all Sunday schools today in America are parts of local churches, meet in church buildings, and therefore can be quite properly called church schools.

I should recognize my pastor as my superior. He is currently the head of the local church, and I am one of his assistants. Therefore I should consult him about the school, ask his advice, be very careful to make no change that he would not approve. I know of a church that used to be referred to as Mr. Jones' church, because Mr. Jones was the superintendent, and as such was a complete dictator. He made life miserable for the pastors who happened to serve that church. He made no study of improved methods, and ran the school as it had been run forty years before, except that it got steadily smaller.

If I were superintendent, I should want all officers and teachers in the school to be members of the church of which the school is a part. In a church I used to serve, a high school teacher who lived in the community for twenty years kept his membership in another church. He felt he was being loyal to the church of his childhood and was doing the local church no harm. Should not the church be a local institution supported by the people living in its neighborhood? This man was hurting the church in which he was working despite his Christian character. When some new enterprise was under consideration he would get up and say, "I don't belong to this church, but if you go ahead with this you will want me to help pay for it. Therefore I should like to give my opinion." His opinion was generally good, but his introductory remarks suggested to young people that it was not essential for them to belong to the church.

There is one exception to requiring all teachers to be members of the local church. When my father retired from the ministry, several churches asked him to teach a series of lessons in adult classes about the history and organization of the denomination. Occasionally a guest teacher who is a specialist in some phase of Christianity may be invited in from another church for a series of lessons, even a quarter. Sometimes a good teacher may spend a winter or a summer in a community which is not his home and can be wisely used. But these are not regular, permanent members of the teaching staff. If people do not believe sufficiently in the local church to become members of it, they should not be used as teachers or officers in the church school or its adult classes. The same principle applies to other church organizations, such as women's societies, brotherhoods and older young people's societies.

If I were superintendent, I would want the officers and teachers of the school to make it a regular practice to attend the chief worship service of the church. The teacher cannot teach successfully unless he continues to learn. He must be an example to his pupils. In a school with which I am acquainted recognition was given a woman who had not missed a class for twenty years. When it was discovered that she had not been at the church worship service twenty times in the twenty years, some light was thrown upon the reason that her children had nothing to do with the church.

What if some children's departments of the school meet at the same hour as the chief worship service of the church? In this case, some provision needs to be made for the officers and teachers who are thus absent from this service. I should do my best to have them attend some other worship service as Sunday evening or midweek. If this proved impossible, I should develop two sets of officers and teachers—of course that is not easy to do. Each group would have an opportunity to attend the church's services of worship half the Sundays of the year.

If I were superintendent, I would determine that my adult classes be assets to the church, not organizations competing with the church. I once belonged to a men's class which bragged that its average attendance was more than a hundred. A survey revealed that a large majority of those men did not attend the church worship service. The class had become a substitute for the church. It had become a competing organization, using the facilities of its competitor. The teacher was preaching a sermon each Sunday. He was a better platform man than the pastor, but his message, while Christian, missed many of the factors of the Christian gospel. Men who were making the class a substitute for the church were getting an inadequate spiritual diet. Class loyalty, if not properly directed, can destroy loyalty to the church.

If I were superintendent, I should have all officers and teachers appointed by the governing body of the local church, the church council, or the board of deacons. The church school is not an independent organization, but an agency of the church. The religious education committee would nominate the officers and teachers after careful consideration, but would not appoint or elect them. That is the task of those responsible for the spiritual welfare of the entire church.

I should ask that appointments be made for only a year, in order that all church school officers and teachers would be in accord with the outlook and trend of the church. I re-

(Continued on page 12.)

Our Churches Report . . .

Elon College Pastor Resigns

Following the morning service of June 6, Rev. Howard P. Bozarth, of the Elon College Community Church tendered his resignation to the congregation, effective September 1, 1954. Rev. Mr. Bozarth has accepted a call to the School of Theology of Yankton College, Yankton, So. Dakota, where he will be Professor of Theology in that institution. Yankton is one of our older Congregational Christian colleges of the middle west, maintaining a close working relationship to the churches of the Dakotas and Nebraska. The School of Theology is a graduate school, offering training to prospective ministers at Yankton College, in Theology and related fields, enabling students to complete their pre-ministerial training in a period of five years from time of enrollment. Those wishing to take further graduate work can secure full credit for their work at Yankton in other seminaries of the middle west. The pastor of the Elon College church has looked forward to a teaching assignment, he stated in his resignation, in one of our denominational schools, and in going to Yankton, he returns to the area of which he is a native.

Rev. Mr. Bozarth came to Elon College from the United Church in Walpole, Mass., after a pastorate of eleven years there, and has served there since August of 1950. He has served the convention on its Board of Christian Education, The Committee on the Ministry, and other departments during his stay here; he was chairman of the Ministerial Retreat at Camp New Hope the past two years. He served as advisor to the Student Christian Association, the four years at Elon. He has written regularly for the Pilgrim Press publications used in adult classes throughout the country.

A fine beginning has been made in preparation for the building of a new church at Elon College, under Mr. Bozarth's leadership, and it is the hope of the church and all in the convention to see this work forwarded with strength under the leadership of his successor who will be chosen at the earliest possible date.

W. T. S.

New Churches Being Organized

Encouraging reports come from two new churches now in the initial stages of organization: Deer Park, near Newport News, under the leadership of Rev. A. L. Granger, Jr., Bayside, near Norfolk, under the leadership of Dr. W. M. Stevens. It is hoped that the Mission Board may be able to provide financial assistance to make additional leadership available for these promising new fields. The payment of your church's "Convention Home Mission" apportionment at this time will be of great assistance to your Mission Board.

Student Conferences to be Held Concurrently with World Assembly Meetings

While delegates to the Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches meet in Evanston, Illinois, this August, their student counterparts from the United States and nations all over the world will also be meeting to weigh together some of the same issues confronting their elders.

Plans for two week-end conferences of American and foreign students to be held concurrently with the World Assembly were announced, following the recent meeting of the executive committee of the United Student Christian Council in New York City.

Delegates to both conferences—an estimated 170 at each—will attend the open plenary sessions of the World Council, and many of the Assembly delegates will give leadership to the students in various meetings and discussion groups.

The first meeting, scheduled August 15-22, is for undergraduates, overseas students, faculty and student workers, and is being arranged in co-operation with the Student Volunteer Movement, one of the nation's oldest ecumenical student groups and also a unit of the National Council. Taking its theme from the World Council's, "Christ, the Hope of the World," it will concern itself with "Christian Hope and Our Life in the Church."

The second meeting, planned for August 23-30, is the Conference of

(Continued on page 15.)

Standing Committees of Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

1954-56 BIENNIUM.

Finance—Stanley C. Harrell, Chairman; I. L. McDowell, S. H. Baskin, I. H. Viekey, W. Millard Stevens, George D. Colelough, S. H. Pell, Walter L. Cooper, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, H. S. Hardeastle.

Social Action—Thomas H. Britton, Chairman; Olin B. Pendleton, Charles M. Jones, Mrs. Allen Isley, Mrs. Cecil Whitlock.

Memoirs—Dr. I. W. Johnson, Chairman; Professor J. W. Barney, J. Frank Apple.

Stewardship Commission—Fred P. Register, Chairman; H. V. Harman, Russell V. Powell, Carl E. Wallace, Max Vestal.

Rural Church—James H. Lightbourne, Jr., Chairman; Ralph M. Galt, John R. Laekey, R. Eugene Tally, Earl T. Farrell.

The Ministry—H. S. Hardeastle, Chairman; R. A. Whitten, Stanley C. Harrell, Fred P. Register, S. E. Madren, L. E. Smith, F. E. Reynolds, G. H. Veazey, W. E. Wiseman.

Evangelism and Spiritual Life—Wofford C. Timmons, Chairman; Melvin Dollar, J. E. Danieley, W. A. Grissom, R. T. Grissom, Roy C. Helfenstein.

Elon College Campaign Planning Committee (to work with Trustee Committee)—Jesse H. Dollar, Chairman; W. M. Stevens, Clarence A. Phillips, H. E. Robinson, Fred P. Register, F. C. Lester, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Wm. T. Scott and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and conference presidents, ex-officio.

EXECUTIVE BOARD COMMITTEES.

Executive—Jesse H. Dollar, Chairman; George Colelough, Henry E. Robinson, Stanley C. Harrell, Mills E. Godwin, Jr., J. E. Danieley, Mrs. W. B. Williams.

Office Personnel—W. E. Wisseman, Chairman; Stanley C. Harrell, George D. Colelough, Wm. J. Andes.

A Correction

We deeply regret that in a recent issue of THE SUN an inexcusable typographical error appeared on the front page. The hymn, "God of Grace and God of Glory" was written by the eminent preacher, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who is also an outstanding hymnologist. We offer him our sincere apologies.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Elon College Presents Degrees and Diplomas to 75 Seniors

By LUTHER N. BYRD.

On May 31, at the concluding exercises of Elon's sixty-fourth annual commencement program, the college presented diplomas and degrees to seventy-five seniors. At the same time certificates were presented to 36 members of the college's commercial class, along with awards to other students for accomplishments and work in special fields.

The commencement program opened with the annual "Alumni Day" events on Saturday, when members of twelve graduating classes between 1894 and 1949 gathered back on the campus for reunions. Chief speaker at the alumni banquet was Mrs. Gwendolyn Patton Fogleman of Burlington, a member of the Class of 1927.

The baccalaureate sermon on Sunday was delivered by Dr. Aaron N. Meekel, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church in Saint Petersburg, Florida. Other Sunday events were the annual vespers recital and the presentation by the Elon Choir of Faure's "Requiem" on Sunday evening.

The address to the seniors at the graduation program was by the Hon. Mills E. Godwin of Suffolk, Va. He was one of three men honored by the college with honorary degrees, others being Dr. Meekel, the baccalaureate minister, and Rev. Edward E. Martz of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sixty-two of Elon's 75 graduating seniors are from North Carolina. Listed in alphabetical order of home towns, they are as follows:

Aberdeen—Lynwood Ivey.
 Albemarle—Thomas Madren.
 Burlington—Allie Abererombie, Ann Abererombie, Don Barrett, Ronald Black, York Brannock, Jr., Aliee Cole, John Cummings, Kathleen Euliss, Ann Harris, Robert Hayes, Lowell Kernodle, Ramona Kernodle, John Malone, Walter McCraw, Sarah Frances Miles, Marvin Moss, A. H. Patterson, Jr., Ervin Pennington, Anthia Phillips, Charles Phillips, Jr., Erwin Porterfield, William Ross, James Terrell and Betty Thompson.
 Durham—Jean James, Hugh Mc-

Farling, Joseph Parker and Norman Rinaldi.

Elon College—Mary Jo Johnson and Cooper Walker.

Erwin—Hoyt Fowler.

Gibsonville—Bernard Butler, Dolly Dennie and Emma Lou Warriek.

Godwin—Virginia Jernegan.

Graham—William Moore, Joseph McVey, John Owens, John Permar and Robert Stockard.

Greensboro—Joe Harvey, Judith Ingram, Calvin Michaels and Curtis Welborne.

Harrellsville—Walter O'Berry.

High Point—Nelvin Cooper.

Lawndale—Ernestine Bridges.

Mayodan—Robert Vernon.

Mebane—Richard Newman.

Mount Airy—William Snow.

Olivia—John Womaek.

Ramseur—Elizabeth Stephenson.

Reidsville—Bob Peters.

Ribbins—Laverne Brady.

Roxboro—Leon Long.

Seagrove—Mary Lee Farlow.

Siler City—C. K. Siler.

Spring Hope—Annie Vince May.

Winston-Salem—Charles Sehrader.

Graduates from Virginia were as follows:

Cypress Chapel—Phillip Mann.

Fieldale—Ned Gauldin.

Lynchburg—Jaek Malloy.

Martinsville—Dwight Dillon.

Norfolk—Stanley Bueh.

Portsmouth—Gary Sears.

Winchester—Richard Pugh.

Graduates from six other states, listed in alphabetical order of states, are as follows:

Arkansas—Roger Phelps, Fort Smith.

Georgia—Sammy Nelson, LaGrange.

New Jersey—William Stoffel, Stratford.

New York—David Henry, Brooklyn.

Pennsylvania—John Olinger, Mt. Pleasant.

South Carolina—Carlton Langston, Timmons ville.

The 36 members of the commercial class, included 28 from North Carolina, seven from Virginia, and one from Georgia.

A diploma in voice was awarded to Judith Ingram of Greensboro, N. C.; a diploma in organ to Laverne Brady of Robbins, N. C., and a diploma College. Several departmental certificates were also awarded.

The Monroe Awards, given each year to the boy and girl who have shown the most improvement in leadership and scholarship, were presented to Alden Owens of Westfield, N. C., and Sue Moore of Hurdle Mills, N. C. Certificates were also presented to ten Elon College students who had been chosen this year for membership in "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges."

* * * * *

Increased College Enrollments May Be Cause for Concern

These wonderful days of high school graduations lead us to visions of ambitious young people seeking higher education at private or church related and state-endowed colleges and universities.

Summaries recently released by Frank Steinbrugge, publicity director of the National Association of Manufacturers, and compiled from a study entitled College Age Population trends—1940-1970, published by The Committee on Special Projects for the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers, give some interesting figures.

The reports show, for example, that there were 8,076,441 persons of college age in the United States in 1952, but by 1960 this figure would climb to 9,273,157. By 1970, if you can imagine it, the total number of persons of college age is estimated at 13,609,831.

The eight Southeastern States of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia, will have a 1870 college enrollment potential of 2,423,707. North Carolina will lead with an expected high of 407,344.

It is not too soon to think about college and university facilities for the period from 1960 to 1970. The "post-war babies" of 1945-46-47 will be of college age beginning in 1962-63-64.

The report states that "at the elementary and secondary school level, it is assumed that the educational needs of the children will be met by the local schools.

"This condition does not prevail at the college and university level. While it is true that many colleges and universities are supported, at least in part, by taxes; others are partially endowed, some are supported by mudy
 (Continued on page 11.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Grateful Appreciation from North Carolina Conference

By MRS. W. T. SCOTT, President.

"The whole is greater than the sum of its parts," so said Miss Margaret Hargrove at one of our spring rallies. Now let's set that aside to simmer down, while we "cook up" this story on the sum totals of our recent missionary rallies, held in the seven districts of our North Carolina Conference. You did a splendid job, every one of you! As I look back on it all, I cannot find a flaw to pick. Please accept my very sincere and heartfelt appreciation for the love, loyalties, capabilities and downright hard work that went into the making of what we have acclaimed a grand success.

To our District Superintendents, Mesdames Cline, Estes, Pollard, Powell, Simmons, Sutton and Wright, we would give our first thanks. It fell their lot to map the plans to write the numerous letters, to attend many committee meetings, to supervise the printing of the programs, and to do all the other usual things assigned to a superintendent. How in the world they came through looking so pretty and presiding so well, is hard to understand. As president, I could not wish for greater nor more consecrated help. Thanks to my very choice superintendents!

We are especially grateful, too, for the "top notch" calibre of the speakers—for our national "top-most," Miss Margaret Hargrove, for our Convention "top-most," Mrs. W. B. Williams, and for our "top-most" advisor, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, and for all those others of our North Carolina Conference whose very names suggest the thought, "They're tops, too." With this brand of Christian ingredients, our rallies were bound to turn out good. Thanks to each of you for making our programs so worthwhile.

Now, may I back up a bit, to become more specific and more personal?

To you, Margaret Hargrove, we are indeed beholden. Never can we remember having had a series of more meaningful and more soul-stirring messages given to us in such a scholarly fashion! Our one regret is that only the "rally troopers" got the full benefit of all the messages. Take it from us, she did a superb job. For six days Margaret poured out the profound truths in "The Heart of

A Southern Christian Attitude Toward Supreme Court Decision

Action of the Supreme Court of the United States recently in regard to segregation practices and laws, has finally concluded a chapter in the history of Social Action, as far as our United States Government is concerned. Echoes of disapproval are resounding in our ears from many of the political leaders of our Southern States. This disapproval will find companionship with the prejudices in the minds of many people.

We do not throw off easily that which has been taught from birth. But if we call ourselves Christians, we should conscientiously examine our feelings and do all within our power to overcome that which we know is contrary to the teachings of Jesus in regard to the sacredness of individuals. Then we will have gone a long way toward also closing a controversial chapter in the history of Christianity.

Therefore, the heart of the matter, as far as we are concerned, is that we be willing by concerted effort to overcome our feelings when they are both unlawful and unchristian. We can, for men through the ages have received power for this kind of effort and this kind of life from the life, death and resurrection of Jesus.

RACHEL WALLACE,
Social Action Chairman,
N. C. Woman's M. C.

the Matter," using six different approaches to the one and ever the same subject; arriving always at that central figure, Christ, and his Commission for us.

Let us share with you a few of her sermonette sentences, chosen from my notebook:

"Beware of what you set your heart on, for that you will surely get."

"The heart of the matter may be described in these three words, Come, Abide, Go."

"Our task begins with ourselves, then reaches into our community, our state, or nation, and into the uttermost parts of the world."

"To answer to His Call—this is My Task."

"We are part of the church and not an adjunct."

"Bishop Chen of China said, 'Recreate this world, O Lord, beginning with me.'"

"Hope springs not from what we have done, but from the task just begun."

"The message and heart of the gospel is not for personal comfort, solace and joy."

"If you are not a missionary, you are not a Christian."

Sincere thanks, Margaret, for the charm of your lovely personality and for all of the Christian influence which you spilled over on us. We loved having you in our Conference and shall look forward to your coming again soon.

How happy we were to have Tudor Williams! Come to think of it, we just couldn't get along without her. It was Tudor who provided the comfortable means of transportation for our team, not only in North Carolina, but also in Eastern Virginia and the Virginia Valley. It's fairly embarrassing, however, to think back on some of the hardships involved in her generous contributions. Looming large in my memory right now is that "wear and tear" on her Cadillac, which suffered a real blow just outside of Southern Pines. Yep! A small accident—no one hurt—car damaged—patrolman arrives and a wrecker takes control—Rally Team assigned to the high front seat of the dangling car—car admitted to garage for observation and two-day treatment—team receives royal hospitality in Southern Pines—thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pethick and Dr. and Mrs. Woffard Timmons.

These were all incidentals in the mind of Tudor. She had promised to bring to our Rallies the highlights and inspiration of the Sixth National Assembly of United Church Women, and this she did in beautiful fashion. Long will we remember the references to the praying and singing assembly and to the fact that "Christ Calls to Unity," to the thrilling choir of 300 voices, to the lovely voice and winning personality of Rosa Page Welch, to the colorful processional in which Tudor carried our denominational flag, to the inspiring messages from Mrs. Wyker, President Eisenhower, Dr. Nils Ferre, Dr. Henry Van Dusen, Dr. Mildred McAfee Horton, and all the others. "Surely God was in this place!" We appreciate the privilege of having our Convention presi-

(Continued on page 13.)

Program of the Twelfth Biennial Session of the General Council

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT,
JUNE 23-30, 1954.

* * *

THEMES "When I have done my duty, I can quietly leave issues and events with God, in whose hands alone they are."*

* * *

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, 1954.

2:00 Call to order and declaration of quorum by the moderator, Dr. Robert Cashman of Illinois.

Service conducted by the chaplain, the Rev. Stuart LeRoy Anderson of California.
Hymn 391: "The Church's One Foundation."

Constituting prayer by the Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Connecticut.

Addresses of welcome by the Rev. David N. Beach, minister of the First Church of New Haven (Congregational), and Dr. Alfred Whiting Griswold, president of Yale University, introduced by the Rev. James F. English, the superintendent of the Connecticut Conference of Congregational Christian Churches.

Appointment of deacons, of official tellers and ushers of the meeting.

Announcement of nominations of assistants to the secretary for the meeting by Mrs. Elmer Otting of Massachusetts, chairman of the nominating committee.

Election of assistants to the secretary.

Presentation of the docket and motions relating to routine business.

Approval of General Council minutes of June 18 to 25, 1952.

Announcement of names of members of the resolutions committee.

Announcement of names of the committee to nominate the nominating committee.

Presentation of proposed amendments to the constitution, by laws and standing rules.

Reports by:

The associate minister and secretary of the General Council.

The secretary of the General Council.

The treasurer of the General Council.

The executive committee.

The corporation for the General Council.

Nomination and election of the moderator for the coming biennium.

First session of the 145th annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Address by the minister of the General Council.

Presentation of the moderator for the biennium.

Presentation of fraternal delegates:

From the American Unitarian Association.

From Universalist Church of America.

Nomination of secretary and associate secretary by the executive committee.

Introduction of other business, greetings, overtures and memorials.

7:30 Evening service, with the owning of the Covenant and the recognition of deacons and new superintendents, according to the Directory for the Public Worship of God, 1644.

The owning of the Covenant.

Recognition of new ministers of state conferences.

Address of the moderator of the General Council.

Installation of deacons.

Service of memorial and holy communion conducted by the minister of the Council, the chaplain, the Rev. Stuart LeRoy Anderson of California, and the Rev. Mary Ely Lyman of New York.

* * * * *

THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1954.

8:30 Worship service conducted by the chaplain.

Business session of the Council:

Discussion and vote upon the proposed amendments to the constitution, bylaws and standing rules.

Preliminary report of the nominating committee.

Nominations from the floor,

Report of the Historical Society.

Presentation of the manuscript minutes of the meetings of the National Council of 1871 and 1874, by the Rev. Ralph A. Christie of the Connecticut Conference. Presentation of the Elias Smith gavel by the Rev. Warren H. Denison.

Report of the Commission on Interechurch Relations and Christain Unity.

Other business.

12:00 Recess.

2:00 Group meetings. The committee on group meetings is composed of Miss Margaret Blemker, the Rev. Ray Gibbons and the Rev. Harry T. Stock, chairman.

4:00 Hour of fellowship.

7:30 Evening service conducted by the members of the Board of Missions, "Beginnings in Connecticut, the Story of Our Mission to America."

* * * * *

FRIDAY, JUNE 25, 1954.

8:30 Worship service conducted by the chaplain.

Report of the Board of Home Missions.

Ninth biennial and eighteenth annual meeting of the Board of Home Missions, the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, president, presiding.

12:00 Recess.

2:00 Group meetings.

4:00 Hour of fellowship.

7:30 Evening service conducted by the Council for Social Action and Churchmanship Awards. Address by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, D. D., of the Washington area of the Methodist Church.

* * * * *

SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1954.

8:30 Worship service conducted by the chaplain.

Report of the Missions Council.

Preliminary report of credentials committee.

Report of the Commission on Stewardship.

Business session of the Missions Council.

Report of the Service Committee.

Report on relief and reconstruction.

(Continued on page 13.)

*The words of this theme were written in 1654, just three hundred years ago, by John Davenport, the first minister of the First (Congregational) Church of New Haven, Connecticut.

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. House, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

The House Family Returns to Elon

The House Family is now in the midst of returning to Elon College to spend the summer. In the early spring of 1953, President Smith of the college, came to visit us in Southern Pines and asked if we would be interested in going to the college in a dual role. At first, we weren't quite certain, but once decided, we looked forward to it and found it to be better than we had thought.

From the time we arrived until the day we left, all of us felt the moving "Elon Spirit." There is something very special about a small church school that knows each of its students and cares about their future. This was in sharp contrast to the large college I had attended and been a member of classes of 300 or 500 students.

The children liked the campus. They made friends with students, ran errands for them, and played with professors' children. They enjoyed staff members and liked the kitchen especially! Moonelon and College Pond held fun for them too.

Girls with whom we worked were very fine. Our dormitory lived a very democratic life—with 14 girls in residence, we were more like a big family. We knew each girl personally, knew her ambitions, depressions and heard about her dating plans! Our special interest was the ministerial students, for we have some ideas about their dreams and plans!

Between times, we enjoyed visits from visiting or passing-by clergy. The young people arrived for conferences, and the women came for the School of Missions.

It is with anticipation we return to our college. We like it all—staff, students, college pastor, townsfolk, dining hall, Sunday night suppers, summer evening serenades, the squirrels, the Senior Oak—we even talk about college poison oak! We hope that many of you will plan to make "our college" YOUR COLLEGE.

* * * * *

The obligation of the person to develop himself is his first and most important obligation as a steward.

—J. Earl Crawford

"Keeping Them Babies Too Long"

By LAURA GRAY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

While sketching at a suburban roadside two small boys paused to watch me. The older child carried his coat and seemed to find it a bother. Both boys' shoes were untied.

"Why don't you put on your coat and tie your shoes?" I asked, noting how trailing laces kept tripping them up.

"Bobby's mom had no time to help us," the older boy complained. "We have been playing with Bobby, and we can't tie bows; I'm only five. Hi, Jim, can you tie bows?"

"Sure!" The newcomer seemed little older than the others.

"Will you tie our shoes?"

"Okay." Jim stooped and busied himself with the shoes. Then he jumped up and strode quickly away.

Howls of dismay drew my attention. "He did it wrong! Look!" I suppressed a giggle when I saw the shoe of one lad was tied to the shoe of the other, and glancing down the road I caught a roguish grin from the culprit as he turned the corner.

A young woman dashed out of a modern new house and came running. "Tommy, whatever is the matter with you two?" She immediately went to work on the tangled laces, while the boys kept up a stream of complaints. "Bobby's mother made us take our shoes off in the house." "And she wouldn't help us," pointing to me. "We asked her, but she wouldn't!"

"I hope these youngsters have not disturbed you," their mother said, smiling when the lads had been straightened out and the coat put on.

"No," I assured her. "I should have given them a hand, but once settled I find it difficult to put down my paints."

Not knowing much about children I concluded this was normal behavior for five-year-olds, but I received a surprise when I visited my friend, Nan, a few days later. Her little daughter Kathy, who was four, made friends at once, and showed me to my room. "Mommy had to go for ice cream," she explained.

Just then Nan entered, apologizing for not being there to greet me.

"Don't worry," I answered. "Kathy has done all that."

"I'm glad; she's been a real help since I've been ill."

Lunch was beautifully set in the dining room. Kathy ate with manners of an adult and listened to the conversation, in which I noticed her mother was careful to include the child. The phone rang. Kathy breezed out of the room and was soon back. "Mommy, Mrs. Brown wants you to ring her after lunch. I told her we had a visitor." She looked at me with a smile.

Kathy helped with the dishwashing. When all was finished, her mother said, "The sun's out, Kathy, and there's Judy with her scooter. Put on your coat and hat and run out to play."

"I'll tie your shoes," I offered, when she brought out a red coat and a pair of brown oxfords.

"No, I can do it. I can tie bows—I'm four," she responded, and in no time the job was done.

"You have a wonderful little girl—so capable," I remarked when we were alone.

"Several have said that. Perhaps it is because I have been laid up a lot. Certainly Kathy has mastered many tasks which, otherwise, she never would have thought of attempting. Her dad bought her a one-egg poacher and taught her how to use it. The first egg slid onto the flour instead of onto the toast, but Frank laughed it off—got the dog in to eat it—and started Kathy with another. She glowed with delight when she carried in my breakfast, cooked all by herself.

"Most of us are happiest when doing needful work—children as well as adults. Youngsters could become useful much sooner than they do if we would let them. Babying sometimes becomes a habit, a habit that is carried too far into the years. The short span of childhood—the time when lifelong habits and ideals are established—is of terrific importance! none of it should be wasted."

It is one thing to be moved by events; it is another thing to be mastered by them. God said: "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."—Ralph W. Sockman.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Plans for the Young People's Conference at Elon

Plans for the Young People's Summer Conference at Elon College, June 13-19 are about set, and the time is ripe for the young people to start sending in their registrations.

This year, Rev. George D. Alley and Rev. Olin B. Pendleton will teach courses on the general theme, "Youth Believes"; Mrs. Olin B. Pendleton and Rev. Henry E. Robinson on the theme of the Bible, and Rev. Ralph M. Galt and Rev. Richard L. Jackson on the general theme of "Missions and Method."

A special treat will be the presence of Rev. Martin Eichrodt, young minister from Switzerland, who is to be at the summer conference in the Valley. An excellent program of recreation and fun is being planned.

Here are some important instructions for the young people who will be attending the conference:

WHEN TO COME: Plan to arrive about 4 p.m., on Sunday afternoon, June 13. Be sure to bring a Picnic Supper—the conference will furnish a drink.

WHAT TO BRING: Bring bed clothing, toilet articles, towels, etc., Bible, notebook, pencils flashlight, swimming suit, tennis racket, sneakers, etc. Girls will be expected to wear dresses to classes, meals and to night programs. During the recreation period in the afternoon, shorts, playsuits, etc., may be worn. Boys will be expected to wear slacks and sport shirts for classes, meals, programs, and can wear shorts, etc., for the recreation period.

Send your registration to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Box 336, Elon College, North Carolina.

JAS. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Dean.

* * * * *

"Pilgrim Youth Fellowship"

It was only on February 25, 1954 that the Young People of the Elm Avenue Christian Church re-organized their Pilgrim Fellowship Meeting. Since then we have accomplished many interesting things and the Lord has richly blessed us.

We elected a very wonderful Christian couple to be our counselors and also Christian officers. To install our officers we held our first young people's meeting on Sunday, with a Candlelight service. Those installed are as follows: Beulah Wetherbee, president; Gideon Auman, vice-president; Janet Richardson, secretary-treasurer; Jeannette Jefferson, song leader; Peggy Deans, pianist; Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Branch, counselors.

We have held several socials to get new members. Some of those were: a Spaghetti Supper, a HoBo Party, and now we are working on a contest until July 4 with the losing side giving the winning side a "Chicken Dinner" while they eat "Beans."

Our Young People's group also sent delegates to the Pilgrim Fellowship Convention which was held April 24 and 25 in Burlington, N. C. Several other members also attended.

The youth held the morning service on Palm Sunday with many taking part in it. Also on Mother's Day we had a very beautiful service and plan to do the same for Father's Day, in appreciation of our wonderful parents.

In our young people's group we have many parents who have boys in the service for their country who are members of our group. We now are writing letters to each of them once a week, letting them know we are thinking and remembering them in prayer.

The aim and prayer of each of our members is to first win others to Christ, second, encourage others to attend our young people's meeting and last, but not least, trusting others might see Christ living in our lives.

In Christ,
JANET RICKARDSON,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Young People Meet

A somewhat smaller group than usual, but yet a house full, of the youth from the Western North Carolina Conference gathered at the Albemarle Congregational Christian Church on May 30, 1954, for their regular Fifth Sunday Youth Rally. In spite of conflicts such as graduation commencements and Memorial Sunday, several hundred youth were present to represent their local church.

The meeting opened with registration and the opening worship service by the Asheboro young people under the leadership of Rev. Gale Brady. The roll call found 11 churches present with seven ministers. Miss Sylvia Coggins, of Sanford, who is vice-president made a report about her trip to New Haven in June as conference delegate to National Pilgrim Fellowship Council. Following the rally offering Miss Judy Yates, talented vocalist from Denton, rendered special music.

The theme of the rally was "Vacation Bible School Work" and the afternoon program consisted of group discussions on this topic. The group was divided into four sections which were lead by very capable leaders. Leader for the Kindergarten-Primary group was Mrs. Winfred Bray; Juniors, Mrs. Julius Rice; Junior High, Rev. Julius Rice; Arts and Crafts, Rev. James Madren and Rev. Silas Madren. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill led the closing discussion on methods of financing, schedules and publicity.

Following a very delicious picnic supper, a religious film, "Bible on the Table" was shown. In closing the group gathered in a friendship circle for the closing prayer by Rev. Avery Brown. The next rally is to be held in Randleman Christian Church on August 29, 1954.

THOMAS MADREN,
President.

COLLEGE ENROLLMENTS.

(Continued from page 7.)

municipalities, some are church affiliated, and others are privately controlled and supported. Decisions must then be made concerning the amount of expansion each college or university can support. Undoubtedly it will be necessary to establish new schools and add branches to existing schools. The ultimate provision for the expanding number of college and university students will take years of planning and building."

These are the observations of registrars and enrollment officers. "We should begin heeding them now," says Mr. Steinbrugge, "so we can prevent the crowded conditions in colleges that now exist in elementary and secondary schools."

We of the Southern Convention should also take heed, if we are to provide for our own youth in the future that is just around the corner,

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Hosea Pleads With Israel"

LESSON XII—JUNE 20, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I desire goodness, and not sacrifice, and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings." Hosea 6:6.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: Hosea 4:6-7, 16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Hosea 11:1-4; 14:1-4.

The best preaching comes not out of books, but out of life. Like a spider, a man must develop his message from within. A man's preaching is far more effective if he knows God than if he simply knows about God. Experience is the best teacher. A man should preach out of the overflow. Take the case of Hosea.

A Broken Home.

Hosea had a broken home. He was married to a woman named Gomer. She was an attractive, capable woman. But for some reason she grew tired of her husband Hosea. Perhaps, like so many preachers, he was so busy that he neglected her to some extent. At any rate, she left him, went away with another man, and lived with him. As is so often the case, the man became tired of her and abandoned her. She went from bad to worse, and finally skidded to the bottom—she was actually put up and sold as a slave.

A Broken Heart.

The thing just about broke Hosea's heart. He loved Gomer, and nothing she did kept him from loving her. When he heard that she was going to be sold, he went downtown and bought her himself, and brought her back to the homeplace. He put her on probation, as it were for a while, and eventually took her back into the home. His love would not let her go. And that love was a redemptive factor in her life.

A Lesson is Learned.

As Hosea thought about his experiences he learned a lesson about God. Here was he, a mere man, loving a woman who had been untrue to him, and who had broken his heart. Could there possibly be any analogy there to the way in which God felt toward Israel, his espoused people? Could it be that God still loved Israel in spite of her unfaithfulness and her backsliding? Could it be that behind and beyond his justice there was mercy? As he thought on these things it dawned upon him that this was indeed a parable of the love of God, and his justice tempered with mercy. The sin and sorrieness of Israel had broken God's heart, but it had not hardened it. As a God of justice he would have to execute judgment on the unfaithful nation, but as a God of mercy and love, he would not hold his anger forever, and he would abundantly pardon and joyously receive his unfaithful spouse again. Amos emphasized the justice of God; Hosea emphasized the love of God.

A Judgment is Pronounced.

The nation had sinned, and sin would bring inevitable and inescapable punishment. The formalism of religion, the social degeneracy of the people, the immorality of the leaders, the hardness of heart of the wealthy, the disloyalty of the nation was bringing doom and even destruction on the nation. It was the hard lot of Hosea to proclaim the judgment of the Almighty. The judgment of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. "There is a harvest appointed for thee, O Judah. . . ." What a nation sows, it, like a man reaps. It broke Hosea's heart to preach this, but preach it he must.

A Restoration is Promised.

Amos went only so far as to pronounce doom. Hosea went further and promised restoration. God's heart had been crushed by the errant, profligate Israel, but he would not give her up. He will smite her for her sins, but in the end he will bind up her wounds, take her back to "His House" and they would start all over again. The law and justice came by Amos, but mercy and love came with Hosea.

A Principle is Proclaimed.

"For I desire goodness and not sacrifice, and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings." There was plenty of religion in Hosea's day, but it was formal religion. There was too much sham in it, too little life in it. Their goodness was like a morning cloud, fair-looking, promising, but lacking substantiality and producing nothing.

How much of our religion is a sham and a fraud! How much of our righteousness is cheap and meaningless! How often are we thinking more of ourselves when we worship than of God! How imperceptibly does our religion change our disposition or affect our conduct! How often is our religion confined to an hour or two in a colistered place on Sunday, and then forgot throughout the week! All too often we have a form of godliness but we deny the power thereof. God demands a right spirit within and not a material sacrifice for show.

"And he will come as the rain, as the latter rain that watereth the earth." God's judgments are punitive and redemptive. He punishes that he may heal. He executes judgment because he must. He shows mercy because he loves. This does not mean that we can sin with impunity. But it does mean that if any man does sin, he has an Advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ. And it means that if we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

IF I WERE SUPERINTENDENT.

(Continued from page 5.)

cently visited a church whose deacons and pastor had decided to use a religious education motion picture to develop the evangelical work of the church. Before coming to this decision, the officers had seen the picture themselves. The day I visited the church the teacher of one of the adult classes spent the entire lesson period attacking all motion pictures. He had a right to his convictions, but he was disrupting the church by criticising a program carefully planned by the deacons. Because of him that church is failing to be a united force for Christianity in the community. I should not want any part of my school to be fighting the program of the church. I should want my school to be completely loyal to the church, to be the educational agency of the church.

There are a lot more things that I should try to do if I were superintendent again, but I should put first on my list this matter of getting the school to be a loyal part of the church.

PROGRAM OF THE TWELFTH BIENNIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

(Continued from page 9.)

12:00 Recess.

2:00 Report of the Board of Review of the Council for Social Action.

4:30 Reception by the moderator and Mrs. Cashman for the moderator-elect, to which all delegates are invited.

7:30 Evening service conducted by members of the Laymen's Fellowship and the Fellowship of Congregational
Christian Women. Mrs. W.
Bayard Buckham, president,
National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women, presiding. Dedication of The Woman's Gift. The speakers: Dr. and Mrs. Elton Trueblood of Earlham College.

* * * * *

SUNDAY, JUNE 27, 1954.

11:00 The Council service, conducted by the Rev. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, associate minister of the council. The Rev. Fred Hoskins of Illinois will preach the council sermon.

2:30 Laymen's meeting.
Women's meeting.

7:30 Evening service celebrating the Church Building Loan Fund.

* * * * *

MONDAY, JUNE 28, 1954.

8:30 Worship service conducted by the chaplain.

Report of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Second sessions of the 145th annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.
Dr. Ronald Bridges, president, presiding.

12:00 Recess.

2:00 Group meetings.

4:00 Hour of fellowship.

7:30 Evening service conducted by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Installation of the executive vice-president, Dr.
Alford Carleton. Address
by the Hon. Chester A.
Bowles.

TUESDAY, JUNE 29, 1954.

8:30 Worship service conducted by the chaplain.

Report of the Council for Social Action.

Meeting of the Council for Social Action.

Report of the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers.

Report of the Retirement Fund for lay workers.

Report of the Department of the Ministry.

First report of the resolutions
committee.

Report of the International Congregational Council, by Miss Dorothy Biggs of London, England.

2:00 Presentation of the findings of the group meetings.

4:00 Hour of fellowship.

7:30 Evening service conducted by Pilgrim Fellowship.

Address by Dr. W. A. Visser 't
Hooft.

* * * * *

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 30, 1954.

8:30 Business session of the council.

Report of the committee on conscientious objectors.

Final report of the nominating committee.

Announcement of the names of the nominating committee for the coming biennium.

Final report of the resolutions
committee.

Report of the committee on credentials.

Appointment of the chairman of the committee on resolutions for the coming biennium.

A word about Pilgrim Place and Plymouth Place.

Report of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

Report of the World Council of Churches.

Report of the American Bible Society.

Report from the seminaries.

Final session of the annual meetings of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Meeting of the General Convention of the Christian Church.

Meeting of the National Council of Congregational Churches.

11:30 Closing service:

The transmitting of the mod-erator's cross.

"The Song of Moses and the Lamb" (Revelation 15).

Benediction from the Cambridge Platform.

2:00 Extra session, if needed.

GRATEFUL APPRECIATION
FROM NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

(Continued from page 8.)

dent with us for our North Carolina
Rallies—thanks again, Tudor.

Now the after midnight oil is burning low, and still I am conscious of the fact that I have not expressed gratitude for the fine worship services led by Mesdames Bray, Grissom, Madren, Petersen, Pethick and Welch and for those professional strokes of art found in the talks on "Women at Worship" conducted by Mesdames
Andes, Jackson, Lester, Robinson,
Wallace and Wisseman. Really, these should all be published. Without them, our Rallies would have been sadly lacking. Thank you, everyone, very much!

We have saved a special word of appreciation and thanks for the wonderful job done by the host churches.
Everywhere we received a cordial welcome and comfortable entertainment. Everywhere the churches had that "new look"—clean from top to bottom and decorated beautifully with flowers. In every instance, the local society president was on hand to extend words of welcome. The host minister, too, was right there, giving his time and self completely to our happiness. We appreciate such genuine hospitality.

To each and every one who attended our Rallies, we give thanks. We have an extra special thanks for the twenty-five ministers who came, indicating their interest and lending their support.

Now we have left our first thought "simmering" for so long that it has no doubt "boiled away." But add up, if you will, all that we as lay witnesses have done and are doing in our missionary work—and mathematics could never give the sum total of all that we have accomplished.

Tasks done in the name and spirit of our Lord always tend to multiply beyond our count, thus making it impossible to give sum totals of our Rallies. The whole is greater than the sum of its parts!

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Last week I wrote that we needed baseball and softball equipment. I had just mailed the letter when in walked B. G. York from the Rowland Bible Class, Greensboro, with more than $100.00 worth of balls, gloves, bats, catcher's mit and mask. Was I glad! Yes, but not as happy as the children themselves. So many classes, churches, friends, find so many ways of being good to us here. Every day I am inspired with the kindness of someone.

In this report you will see an item of $41.98 from Colgate-Palm Olive Company. That represents coupons which friends have sent in to us. We also get checks from General Mills Company. They do not amount to so much, but every bit helps, and we do greatly appreciate all the effort that goes into collecting them for us. If they are coupons, send them to us. If they turn out to be of no value to us, they would likely be of less value to you. Bundle them up and send them in.

Have you been keeping up with the monthly reports from our fine church in Reidsville, the Rev. Tucker G. Humphries, pastor? The Reidsville Church carries on a big missionary program and other outside benevolences, and yet their contributions to the orphanage are good: January $73.00, February $64.00, March $96.00, April $66.00, and May $63.00. When there are so many that do so well, why bring up Reidsville? Because I am clearing the kitchen of cooking and children next Saturday so they can come over and lay a tile floor over the kitchen floor, hall and dishwashing and refrigerator room. They have been doing so many good things for us and for individual children whom they sponsor. They enjoy their work, and no other work is neglected because they look out for the homeless children taken in by the church.

And while you are reading this report, look at that offering from the Durham Sunday School. They are faithful monthly contributors. And you may not be as cognizant as I am of it, but Asheville is one of our good monthly givers. In fact there are about 75 churches out of the 200 that give us something practically every month. By the way, is your Sunday school numbered in that list? We need every Sunday school on the monthly giving list. Said one:

*"Little drops of water,
Little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean
And the pleasant land."*

If every member of every church in our Convention gave one thin dime each month, it would bring us in $42,000.00, not counting the Thanksgiving offering. One dime a month! Well, maybe the orphanage is not to be blamed for our "always needing so much money for everything in the Southern Convention." One dime a month! No one of us can do very much about our college, or orphanage, or missions, or Christian education. But one dime a month for each of these—not a dime a day, nor a dime a week, but a dime a month! Say, until we give more, let us holler less.

Anyway, what I know is: If more people gave just as much as some do now give, we would all have plenty to do our share of the Kingdom work. We need to reach more people. And thank you for listening!

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

NOTE.—Help John G. reach more people by getting a subscription to THE SUN. If each one will get one, it will double his prospect list.—Ed.

REPORT FOR JUNE 3, 1954.

Commodities for the Week.

Woman's Missionary Society, South Norfolk Christian Church, Coupons.

J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., 50 copies of "The Upper Room."

Rowland Bible Class, First Cong. Christian Ch., Greensboro, N. C., Softball equipment and fishing tackle.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 6,023.49
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Ebenezer	$ 18.95
Mt. Auburn S. S.	5.00
Niagara	10.00
	33.95
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Springs S. S. ...	$ 20.00
Mt. Carmel S. S.	14.11
	34.11
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Durham S. S.	$ 69.26
Mt. Zion S. S.	6.87
Reidsville S. S.	63.00
Union, (Va.) S. S.	5.00
	144.13
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Union	$ 14.21
	14.21
Virginia Valley Conference:
Newport S. S.	$ 28.64
	28.64
Total	$ 255.04
Grand total	$ 6,278.53

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$17,029.95
Colgate-Palmolive Co.—
for coupons	$ 41.98
Chester H. Roth Co., Inc.
(interest)	30.00
New Lebanon, Kellam
Grove and Mt. Bethel
Churches, Special	71.44
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas
Brown, Elon College, N.
C.	12.75
In Memory of William O.
Truitt	7.50
In Memory of Mrs. Geo.
T. Dickie	10.00
Special Gifts	228.02
	401.69
Grand total	$17,431.64
Total for the week	$ 656.73
Total for the year	$23,710.17

Don't forget your Cent-a-Meal boxes during the month of June. It will soon be time to turn them in.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $_____ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name

Address

In Memoriam

BOWDEN.

Whereas, on May 6, 1954, Mr. Raleigh T. Bowden, a member of Mt. Carmel Congregational Christian Church, a faithful deacon, and a friend to all who knew him, passed away. We, as a church wish to record our appreciation for all he has meant to the church and our sorrow in our loss.

Thefore, be it resolved:

1. That the congregation has suffered a loss in its membership and the loss of a sincere friend and neighbor who was willing to lend a helping hand to all who needed.

2. That we realize that God doeth all things well and that our loss is his eternal gain.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy be placed on our church records.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS JOYNER,
Committee.

BRADSHAW.

God, in his infinite wisdom, has called to his eternal reward our beloved member, Mr. Lloyd Bradshaw, whose death occurred on March 2, 1954. The Mt. Carmel Christian Church, in which he was a member, desires to record our sorrow in his passing.

Thefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will.

2. That we extend to his loved ones our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and pray God's blessings may rest upon them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy be placed on our church records.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS JOYNER,
Committee.

CARR.

Whereas, God, in his infinite power and wisdom, has seen fit to call from our midst our friend and neighbor, Joseph A. Carr.

Be it resolved:

1. That we submit to God's will and way, for he knows what is best.

2. That we extend anew our sympathy to his family, praying that in their sorrow they may find the peace of God that passeth all understanding.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy be placed on our church records.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS JOYNER,
Committee.

COPELAND.

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst, our beloved friend, Mr. Joseph S. Copeland, we wish to pay tribute to his memory.

Thefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to his Master's will.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to his loved ones.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy be placed on our church records.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS JOYNER,
Committee.

CROP Appeals for More Clothing

"The need for clothing in some areas of the world is at present even greater than that for food." This statement by B. Tarrt Bell, chairman of the Overseas Relief Committee of the N. C. Council of Churches, was made in announcing plans for a state-wide appeal for clothing to be collected during the month of June for shipment overseas. He went on to say that 5,000,000 pounds of clothing and bedding is the estimate of relief leaders to cover current needs in Europe and Asia.

Meeting with Mr. Bell recently to map details of the drive was Rev. Morton R. Kurtz, executive director of the N. C. Council of Churches, and Rev. Carl R. Key, N. C. CROP director. The Council of Churches together with Church World Service and CROP, is co-sponsoring the new clothing project.

On the local level, ministerial associations, councils of church women, and service groups such as the Jaycees, are working in close cooperation with the sponsoring agencies.

The North Carolina goal for this year is 100,000 pounds of clothing. Any article of usable men's, women's and children's apparel, cloth, cotton and shoes, are acceptable. Clothes collected will be gathered at the seven area centers maintained by the project in Asheville, Charlotte, Durham, Fayetteville, Greenville, Raleigh and Winston-Salem. From these points, trucks from the nearest of the Church World Service shipping centers, at New Windsor, Maryland, will come as needed to pick up the garments. Collections in other cities can be arranged if a sufficient amount of clothing to warrant a special truck can be gathered.

June is only the initial phase of this year-around project, and clothing may be sent at any time during the year to the area collecting centers, as well as to other communities in the state.

Further information on the project can be obtained by writing to Rev. Cary R. Key, Box 6637, College Station, Durham, N. C.

WORKDAY AT MOONELON.

(Continued from page 3.)

that the footings for the Central building will be poured under the leadership of Bill Mahan of Union Ridge, Carl Monroe of Greensboro, "First", and other leaders.

Funds are being raised by the Laymen for the Central Building. The cost will be approximately $15,000. If your Laymen's group has not sent a contribution, or if your church has not, won't you please send your contribution to the Convention Office at once? It is needed. You can help, and we believe you will.

W. T. S.

* * * * *

Laymen's Banquet Photos Available

Superintendent Scott has a dozen photographs of the Laymen's Banquet held at Suffolk Christian Church, April 27, in connection with the Southern Convention session. These photographs are available at $1.00 each. You may receive yours by sending $1.00, name and address to Supt. Scott, Elon College, N. C.

STUDENTS' CONFERENCE.

(Continued from page 6.)

World's Student Christian Federation, the world-wide student organization which unites Christian young people in 56 nations of the world. Delegates will be graduate and theological students, plus faculty, student workers and other students from overseas.

Highlighting the undergraduate conference will be a series of discussions on the witness of the church in different parts of the world. Leaders will include Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, and Rajah Manikam, "roving ambassador" in East Asia for the World Council and the International Missionary Council, whose topic will be the work of the church in Asia. It is hoped also to have a representative from Czechoslovakia to speak on the church in a Communist country, and a representative from South Africa.

Leaders for the World Federation Conference will include Bishop Hans Lilje of Germany, president of the Lutheran World Federation; Dr. Dennis Mumby, member of the faculty of Aberdeen University, Scotland, and Professor Henrik Kraemer, director of the Ecumenical Institute, Bossey, Switzerland. The opening address will be presented by Phillips Maury, general secretary of the Federation.

"TWO DAYS"

By ROBERT J. BURDETTE

THERE are two days of the week about which I never worry; two care-free days, kept sacredly free from fear and apprehension.

One of these days is "yestrday." Yesterday, with all its cares and frets, with all its pains and aches, all its faults and blunders, has passed forever beyond the reach of my recall. I cannot undo an act that I wrought. I cannot unsay a word that I said on yesterday. All that it holds of my life, of wrongs, regret and sorrow, is in the hands of the Mighty Love that can bring the honey out of the rock and sweet waters out of the bitterest desert—that love which can make the wrong things right; that can turn weeping into laughing, that can give beauty for ashes, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, the joy of the morning for the woe of the night.

Save for the beautiful memories, sweet and tender, that linger like the perfume of roses in the heart of the day that is gone, I have nothing to do with yesterday. It was mine; it is God's.

The other day, about which I do not worry, is "to-morrow." To-morrow, with all its possibilities, adversities, burdens, perils, its large promise and poor performances, its failures and mistakes, is as far beyond the reach of my mastery as is its dead sister, yesterday. It is a day of God's. Its sun will rise in roseate splendor, or behind a mask of weeping or threatening clouds. But it will rise. Until then, the same love and patience that hold yesterday, also hold to-morrow, and I have no possession in that unborn day of grace.

There is left for myself, then, but one day of the week—today. Any man can fight the battles of today. Any woman can carry the burdens of just one day. Any man can resist the temptations of today. He, who has carefully measured out for us the cares and burdens of today, gives with them the promise: "As the day, so shall thy strength be." But when we wilfully add the burdens of those two awful eternities—yesterday and to-morrow—such burdens as only the mighty God can sustain—we break down. It is not the experience of today that drives men mad. It is the remorse for something which happened yesterday; the dread of what to-morrow may disclose.

These are God's days. Leave them to him.

Therefore, I think, and I do, and I journey but one day at a time. That is the easy day. That is man's day. Nay, rather that is our day—God's and mine. And while faithfully and dutifully I run my course, and work my appointed task on that day of ours, God, the Almighty and All-loving, takes care of yesterday and to-morrow.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CVI

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1954

NUMBER 24

"Will We Barter Our Souls?"

By W. MILLARD STEVENS

AM NO Pious Puritan. It has always been my desire to be patient and understanding of our human frailties and weaknesses. However, the time must always come when all of us must stand up and say "No" to these human weaknesses. That time has come with reference to our abandonment of sacred ideals and the acceptance of material motivations. The increased commercialism of Sunday is one demonstration and example of this. Little by little we are allowing our souls to be bartered by commercial interest for a "mess of pottage." How long are we as Christian people going to give in to this? Are we going to live our lives by a Christian theology or by a cultural theology? We cannot escape these questions. I for one refuse to place Christian sanction on custom. Unless we begin to practice our faith in our social and economic relationships, that faith will soon disappear. In my humble judgment, too many of us are reserving for ourselves a place in whatever hell eternity will offer by our refusal to stand against materialism in our own lives and community and our failure to worship God and stand for the forces of Christ in his church.

News Flashes

Rev. Carl R. Key of Durham, N. C., state CROP director, is supplying the pulpits at Union Church, Virgilina, and Hebron Church, Nelson, Virginia, during June and July.

There will be no CHRISTIAN SUN next week. Under the policy of issuing only fifty issues a year, the Board of Publications has specified that the last weeks in June and December be omitted.

Congratulations to Rev. Raymond A. Dudley, secretary for India and Ceylon of the American Board, and always welcome visitor to the Southern Convention area, who received an LL. D. degree from Olivet College, Michigan, where he preached the Baccalaureate sermon this year.

We are presenting in this issue another of Dr. Aaron N. Meckel's fine sermons. Dr. Meckel is the pastor of the First Congregational Church of St. Petersburg, Florida and an outstanding minister of our denomination. He preached the baccalaureate sermon at the recent commencement at Elon College.

A Singing Convention was held on Sunday, June 13, at our Seagrove Church. The program consisted of members by the various visiting choirs, youth groups, etc. All the churches of the Western North Carolina Conference were invited to attend this convention and to take part on the program, as well as the churches of other denominations in the Seagrove community.

The Elon College Sustaining Fund

The Elon College Sustaining Fund was voted by the Southern Convention in its 1950 session. At that time there was a sharp reduction in the number of veterans who were enrolling under their Educational Benefits, with a consequent falling off in the total enrollment of Elon College.

The 1950 vote was as follows: "We recommend that in addition to the regular apportionment for the college the Convention approve, and through its conferences and churches engage in an effort to raise a minimum of $1.00 per member annually for a sustaining fund for Elon College." The 1952 session of the Convention voted to approve and continue the sustaining fund for the biennium ending with the conference year 1953-54.

The recent session of the Convention voted to increase the amount of the regular apportionment for Elon College, but did not continue the sustaining fund beyond the present conference year. This is to make it perfectly clear that the sustaining fund is a regularly Convention approved call upon the churches for this conference year.

STANLEY C. HARRELL,
Chairman, Convention
Finance Committee.

Center Church of South Boston Organizes Church School

The recently organized Center Congregational Christian Church, South Boston, Virginia, with its building site at Centerville, enrolled 47 members at its first session of its church school on Sunday, June 13, 10:00 a. m., at the elementary school in Halifax.

The report of Center Church's Committee on Christian Education was given to the opening session of the church school by the pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andes. The following officers and teachers of the church school were nominated by the committee and elected by the school in session:

Charlie T. Guthrie, superintendent; E. M. Walton, assistant superintendent; L. T. Ferrell, secretary; Mrs. Carlton Powell, assistant secretary; H. L. Martin and Joe Powell, greeters.

Nursery Department—Mrs. L. T. Ferrell, superintendent; Mrs. H. C. Landrum, Mrs. H. L. Martin.

Kindergarten Department—Mrs. T. S. Earp, superintendent; Mrs. Joe Powell.

Primary Department—Miss Patti Adams, superintendent; Mrs. J. J. Franklin, Miss Willie Adams.

Junior Department—Mrs. E. M. Walton, superintendent; Mrs. Charlie Guthrie.

Intermediate Department—Mrs. M. W. Andes, superintendent; Mrs. Howard Burton.

Young Adult Department—T. S. Earp, superintendent.

Adult Department—Irvine Anderson, superintendent; Herbert C. Landrum.

The church school will be held every Sunday morning at ten o'clock, with morning worship to follow at the eleven o'clock hour.

Convention Home Mission Funds Badly Needed Now!

If your church has not paid its apportionment for Convention Home Missions for the 1953-54 Conference Year, won't you send what you can on this apportionment to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., at once?

Three new churches have been recently started:

Center Congregational Christian Church, South Boston, Va., was organized in January with 58 charter members. Rev. Mark Andes moved his residence there May 1, and a full time program has started. The first Sunday school session, on June 13, was attended by approximately 50 persons, and services are being held in the Halifax elementary school. Spacious lots have been purchased on U. S. Route 501 at Centerville, between South Boston and Halifax, and bids on construction of the church's first building are now being received. This work is of great promise, but the Mission Board is supporting the work heavily. Funds are badly needed by the board at this time.

Bayside, near Norfolk, is another new work being undertaken under the sponsorship of the Christian Temple, Dr. W. Millard Stevens, minister. A survey has been made, and Dr. Stevens has been working with an interested group. Rev. Ernest Brickhouse is at work full time in this new work, with the cooperation of Christian Temple. A Sunday school has been organized, and as of June 13, regular services are being held at Bayside. The Mission Board is supporting this promising new church. Your Convention Home Mission gifts will help greatly now.

Deer Park, near Newport News, is the third new work just begun. Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., minister of our Newport News Church, together with members of the church and interested persons in Deer Park community, made a survey of this growing community. At the first service, 75 persons were in attendance. Mr. Granger, with the assistance of a Summer Student Service worker provided by the Board of Christian Education and the Mission Board, is carrying on this work of great promise. The Mission Board is also sponsoring this work. Your financial support at this time will greatly assist in this important work.

WM. T. SCOTT, Ex. Sec'y,
The Mission Board.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Measmer President of Men at Shallow Well

The men of the Shallow Well Congregational Christian Church of Sanford, N. C., met on Wednesday, June 9 for the purpose of organizing a Laymen's Fellowship. The men brought picnic baskets and spread a bountiful feast on tables in the basement of the church building. Rev. Julius Rice gave the prayer of thanks and invocation. The coffee was prepared and served by the men, who also did the chores of dishwashing and general KP.

Dean J. Earl Danieley of Elon College, vice-president of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention, spoke to the group concerning the Laymen's Fellowship, its importance, purpose and program. He stressed the fact that if the work of the church is to be done, the church membership, including the men, must rise up and do it. He pointed out that one of the purposes of the fellowship is to promote evangelism. He described an evangelist as anyone who knows the good news of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and who believes in it enough to share it with his neighbors. Emphasis was placed on the motto of the Laymen's Fellowship, which calls for every man to be a builder—for his community, his church and his Christ.

Percy Measmer was elected president; Charlie Watson, vice-president, and Harold Mansfield, secretary-treasurer. The group decided to hold monthly meetings on Tuesday after the third Sunday in each month.

* * * * *

Security and Responsibilities

PROGRAM FOR JULY.

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "Are Ye Able?"
"Trust and Obey."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE: St. Matthew 7: 21-27.

PRAYER: "We lift up our community to Thee, O Lord, and ask that we may be empowered to employ our talents in making it and the church truly Christian. Amen."

MEDITATION: Security and Responsibilities.

Today the people of the world are searching desperately for some thing that they can trust or have a belief in, that will offer them security and comfort. Some are trying for things of monetary value, thinking that it will bring to them a position in life that will surely be secure and comfortable, while others are looking for political power to offer very much the same. Neither of these is so very detrimental to an individual if properly handled. We need to have things of monetary value for earthly security and comfort and we also need to have a government to govern the people. The truth, however, is there is no real security or comfort in these things. The real security and comfort comes from within, that of spiritual nature. To gain this we need to have a belief in Christ.

The belief that I have in Christ offers me a real way of life, the Christian way, in it one can find all that he is looking for, if he is looking for the good. In this way of life we find peace of mind, comfort, security and many special blessings.

The Christian way offers responsibilities. I believe that we should not hesitate to accept these, for in so doing we enter into the work that God intended to be our part in extending the Kingdom into the hearts of men everywhere. These responsibilities begin in the home. We have a definite obligation of being a Christian example before our children that they may know the way and believe.

To all Christians there come re-
(Continued on page 14.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interest of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL STAFF

Editor (In interim) J. T. Kernodle
Managing Editor J. T. Kernodle

Contributing Editors—Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stauley C. Harrell, Richard W. Morton, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr.

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Laymen's Fellowship, J. E. Danieley; Woman's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Thomas W. Madren; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Harcastle.

Board of Publications—R. C. Helfenstein, Chairman; S. T. Holland, Secretary; Clyde W. Fields, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, Jas. H. Lightbourne, Jr., G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Subscriptions should be sent to The Christian Sun, c/o Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications should be sent to Office of Publications, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date....., 1954

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $....., for which please send The Christian Sun

() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal:

To Church

Address

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription, () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name Church

Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Reminiscences

When this issue of The Christian Sun has left the press been stamped and wrapped, and gone into the mail, the writer will have rounded out thirty-two years of service with our church paper. During these years he has acted as publisher, as managing editor, and in times of emergency as interim editor, as well as manager of the plant in which it has been printed.

During this period four editors have served The Christian Sun. Dr. J. Pressley Barrett served twice previously as its editor, becoming editor on February 10, 1879 and serving for two years; and after an intermission of about eighteen months, again becoming editor and serving until November, 1891, Dr. Barrett was again elected editor of The Christian Sun at the biennial session of the Southern Convention held in Suffolk, Virginia, on May 5, 1922. He edited the first issue of The Sun published in Richmond on July 6 of that year, and served until his death on May 1, 1924.

The Convention, which was in session at that time, elected Dr. J. O. Atkinson, also a former editor, as editor. Dr. Atkinson served until 1936, with the exception of six or more months, when because of his ill health, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, then president of the Convention, called upon the managing editor to serve as interim editor as well. After Dr. Atkinson retired, Rev. F. C. Lester became the editor for four years. He was, in turn, succeeded by the late Dr. Robert Lee House, who served until his untimely death early in 1953. Dr. House was the only resident editor to serve during this writer's tenure of office, he being pastor of our Richmond, Virginia Church for ten years of his editorship. All of these editors served on a part-time basis, with the exception of Dr. Barrett's last year of service.

For the past seventeen months, the editorship of The Sun has been on a "spare-time" basis. In addition to the work devolving upon the managing editor, as such, there has been the necessity of carrying on a regular business. Many of the hours given to The Sun were those that might normally have belonged to recreation or rest, for there were not enough working hours in the day to divide. The time has not been regretted, but its lack is mentioned to explain, not to excuse, some of the "boners" that may have crept into The Sun's columns from time to time. The writer has served without financial remuneration, but there has been a satisfaction in believing that his efforts have been appreciated, at least by some, which far outweighs any payment that might have been made.

When we took over the job, we asked six men to assist us so far as the writing of editorials and special articles. They were: Roy C. Helfenstein, Henry E. Robinson, W. Millard Stevens, Stanley C. Harrell, James H. Lightbourne, Jr., of the Convention, and Richard W. Morton of the Southeast Convention and pastor of First Church in Jacksonville, Florida. All of these have responded in a way which has made The Christian Sun a much better and more readable paper than it otherwise could have been. Roy Helfenstein, being close at hand, had much of the brunt to bear, and it would be hard to put into words my gratitude to Richard Morton for the help that he has given.

All that has been written is about the day that is spent. But tomorrow is a new day. With it comes a new editor—yet one whose service to the Convention and the Kingdom is not new.

Shortly after assuming our interim job, we picked the man we wanted for editor if it were still to be our lot to work with The Sun. We approached him several times, asking him to take the interim job, but to no avail. But finally Stanley Harrell could no longer refuse the combined voices of those in the Southern Convention who thought that he should take upon himself another burden for the church that he has ever served so well. He was unanimously elected at the last session of the Convention, and will take over with the Issue of July 1.

It would be sheer waste of time to try and tell our constituents about our incoming editor. Many of them know him as well, perhaps better than the writer. Here, however, are some coincidences: Both of us came from Eastern Virginia; both went to school at Elon College, being in school there at the same time, though the writer finished one year earlier; both came to Richmond, our new editor to study at Union Theological Seminary where he received his B. D. degree, and the writer to go in business; both served in the first World War, he as a chaplain, the writer as a soldier; both married Elon College graduates, and are glad they did; both have endeavored, each in his own way to serve the church we love, he as a minister, the writer as a layman.

In the task that lies before Stanley Harrell as editor of The Sun, I pledge him hearty support, and it is my sincere wish that we both working together may, with the cooperation of our entire constituency, see The Sun rise to even greater heights of service to the cause of the Kingdom than it has in the past.

J. T. K.

We Need Pentecost in '54

By DR. RICHARD K. MORTON
Jacksonville, Florida

Some Methodist friends invited me to give a Thanksgiving message in their church. I arrived early, and was having a pleasant chat with the organist about the service planned, when the sexton rang the church bell. I noticed at once that the vigor with which this heavy bell was rung set up a vibration which could be felt on the pulpit platform. It fairly shook. This thrilled me, for I thought: How completely right that the pulpit should be shaken and stirred by a great call and action from above! How much this is needed! Pentecost may be past as a part of the church calendar—but it, like Easter, should be celebrated every Sunday, every day in the year!

We have not been shaken and stirred enough! Our services, of course, are carefully arranged, and they are usually carried through according to plan. But so often we get the impression that nothing—or at least not enough—happened.

In our Congregational Christian tradition, we are not primarily concerned with fulfilling a schedule of church-year ceremonies and conducting so many appropriate rituals. We are concerned about people—about getting them closer to Christ, about guiding them toward fullness of life. We are not seeking simply to build churches—we want to build lives! We do not simply want to honor some pious traditions—we want to inspire some practical action!

We want and we need the influence of Pentecost throughout the year—to stir us and enlist us, to remind us that religion is power and religion is light upon our way. Particularly do we want it to remind us of what our Christian fellowship can do as a group. The church acting collectively can be very impressive and important.

What happens so often is that our formal church life is set in deep ruts and routines. Things are simply done that way, that's all, and change is suspect. Morning worship at 11 o'clock, Wednesday meeting, women's auxiliary Tuesday at 2 p. m.—and so on. It is all planned—and all good—and goes on month after month in the same way. That is regarded as church life and as functioning Christianity? Is it? Is that all that the times frequently require?

The minister happens to make a practical suggestion or point to a blessing that could be brought to someone? Does anyone remember?

A new family comes one Sunday morning. They are greeted, of course, in a friendly way—one must make them feel welcome, naturally. Then what?

Among the membership and the attending friends of the church talk among the people shows that one family may be having it financially a bit hard, and another needs counselling on a problem which cannot very well simply be dumped in the minister's lap. Is there any likelihood that anything would be done about this? If someone needed a little money, would the means of getting it from a church group be so rusty and complicated and slow that it would not be worth the trouble?

Some chairs need fixing, some people need to be interviewed about helping to set up outdoor services or for permission to leave leaflets for summer visitors. Is there any way of getting such work done, or does it remain just talk?

In almost every church there is sure to be a list of more or less inactive people—those who attend very rarely, and about whom little is known. Who is going to find out—and when? Do we stir ourselves to make ordinary efforts to re-interest our people and to bring our lists up to date?

Does anything startling ever happen in our group? If not, why not? If our brand of faith is moribund and vague and unchallenging, what chance has it to appeal to others who look from the outside?

None of us has to be told that some of our churches have limited means, and they have not the money to do what they ought to do. But none is so poor, so small, so beset, that it cannot do something. Are there not those among us who have let go a weak stair or burned-out lights or battered chairs or a number of battered hymnals or a ragged Bible or alter or Communion-table cloth? We just have not bothered about them. But they make their impression upon our visitors. Where there is no air conditioning, that occasionally means that no effort whatever is made to make the church sanctuary and other rooms tolerable in hot, muggy weather. When people are made comfortable elsewhere, it is not hard to see why many do not care to suffer when in church.

Other folks could sometimes be brought to church by automobile if some members were interested enough to offer this service. Helpfulness could also be extended in many ways to those handicapped in some way.

We need many in whom the word of the Lord is in the heart as a burning fire, many in whom some great eagerness or enthusiasm has come forward and taken possession of them. We need many, in other words, who have had a visitation of the Holy Spirit, who feel as if they have been given a message or a task or a great blessing. We need those who have thrown off the spirit and symbols of all bondage, and who are new creatures in Christ and who will never tire to proclaim his word and do his will.

Our churches, our individual lives, must be more stirred, and they must take the field more to witness for their faith.

A man once pointed out a minor stairway in his church. He told me that that, to him, was a memorial stairway, for the reason that he remembered when, at a much younger age, he had bounded up the stairway to get going on a thrilling project, and had bumped his head. I wish more would bump their heads!

In another community they had been having a great deal of trouble trying to hold a small church together. Workers drifted off to their suburban homes and interests, and others wanted to go to larger and more flourishing churches. New projects, however, were started. One of them involved a picnic for a large busload of children. When nearly back home, the bus had an accident, and several children were injured. While this was distressing in many ways, it brought action from many families hitherto uninterested. All the community rose to do what could be done to help the children and their families and to insure that the church met its obligations involved in this misfortune.

In an area well known to me, a church group was going along at a quiet, dignified, but rather ineffective (Continued on page 15.)

The General Council . . .

The Biennial Session of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches

The democratic church and the democratic state have grown up together in the American tradition; and among those churches whose history blends uniquely with our early American history are the Congregational Christian Churches.

While Congregational Christian churches are established in practically every state in the union, with some of the largest in the Mid West and on the Pacific coast, New England is still the ancestral home of the Pilgrim churches, and in New England alone are 1584 such churches.

It is in the heart of these 1584 churches that the twelfth biennial session of the General Council will meet, at Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, June 23 to 30, 1954.

It is estimated that attendance at these sessions will be around 2300 delegates and associate delegates from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as well as from Hawaii and Puerto Rico, plus a thousand or more other Congregational Christians from all over the United States, nationals and missionaries from many parts of the world, and "fraternal delegates" from other denominations.

Reports which will be made to the council show a net gain of over 42,000 in church membership during the biennium since the council last met; $8,780,004 given to the Christian World Mission of these churches, and $76,370,495 raised and spent for local church expenses—all three totals are the highest in the history of the denomination.

With the General Council sessions will be meetings of the national societies of the denomination, namely, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, holding its 145th annual meeting; the Board of Home Missions; the Council for Social Action; the National Laymen's Fellowship; the National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women, etc.

The business sessions of the General Council, with Dr. Robert Cushman, moderator, of Chicago, Ill., presiding, will include reports of commissions, committees and executives; the election of officers, including the moderator for the next biennium; discussions and resolutions on matters relative to the good of the whole fellowship, ranging from constitutional rights and liberties to recommendations concerning the "take home pay" of the average minister.

Considerable discussion is anticipated following the report of the Board of Review on the Council for Social Action, which will be made on Saturday afternoon, June 26, and which will contain not only findings, but nine recommendations.

Speakers of national and international repute will be heard during the council, among them Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of New York City, and Dr. David Elton Trueblood, new Chief of Religious Policy for the United States Information Agency; Honorable Chester Bowles of Essex, Conn., former United States Ambassador to India, and Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft of Geneva, Switzerland, the general secretary of the World Council of Churches.

The chaplain of the entire council meeting will be Dr. Stuart Leroy Anderson, president of the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif. The theme of the council will be the historic words of the first minister of the New Haven colony, the Rev. John Davenport, spoken 300 years ago: "When I have done my duty, I can quietly leave issues and events with God, in whose hands alone they are."

The council sermon, on Sunday morning, June 27, will be preached by Dr. Fred Hoskins of Oak Park, Illinois.

The General Council will open at 2:00 p. m., on Wednesday afternoon, June 23, with the constituting prayer being made by Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, dean emeritus of Hartford Theological Seminary and for fifteen years the president of the American Board.

Addresses of welcome will be made by the minister of the First Church of New Haven, Rev. D. N. Beach, and by Dr. James F. English, superintendent of the Connecticut Conference of Congregational Christian Churches. Dr. Alfred Whiting Griswold, president of Yale University, will give the welcome to Yale University.

The council will divide itself into fourteen study groups on three afternoons, with carefully selected leaders and informed resource persons. The subjects, which will cover a wide range, including "The Christian in His Vocation," "Christian Education in the Church," "The Impact of Our Citizenship at Home and Abroad," "The World Mission of the Church," and "The Church and Social Action," have been arranged by Dr. Harry T. Stoek, general secretary of the Division of Christian Education. It is expected that some direct recommendations will come from certain of these group meetings to the council for action.

There will be several pre-session meetings taking place in New Haven prior to the official opening of the General Council. These will include a Spiritual Life Mission under the auspices of the Commission on Evangelism; a plenary session of the American Board of Foreign Missions, a meeting of the directors of the Home Mission Board, and one of the directors of the Council for Social Action, and a session of the Congregational Christian Historical Society.

The National Council of Pilgrim Fellowship.

While their elders are meeting in the General Council sessions at Yale University, over two hundred representative young members of the Pilgrim Fellowship will meet for study, spiritual refreshment and fun in Yale Divinity School close by.

The Pilgrim Fellowship across the United States and in Hawaii, Mexico and Puerto Rico, has over 180,000 members in the 12 to 26 age group. In addition to 262 duly elected delegates, there will be present adult leaders and guests from other lands.

There will be "workshops" each morning, following chapel under the chaplain, Rev. Oliver Powell of Worcester, Mass, in which the young people will discuss Christian Faith, Christian Action and Christian Fellowship. The afternoons will include "buzz sessions" with smaller groups talking seriously about entering the ministry, the mission field, Christian education work, college and military service.

Rev. Henry R. Rust, national secretary of Young People's Work, says

(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH. Elon College, N. C.

A Second Beginning

In 1889 when workmen were clearing what is now Elon College Campus for the erection of college buildings, many trees were destroyed that were not marked to be taken out. A small sapling was bent and otherwise damaged. Through the appeals of one interested, this sapling was permitted to stand. It has lived through the years and grown to considerable size. It is not a straight tree; it is a crooked tree. It is the most famous tree on the campus today. It is affectionately known as Senior Oak. Even though it is a full grown tree, it still bears the marks of an injury that it suffered more than a half-century ago.

Since 1946, with the exception of a year's interruption, Elon College has been conducting a campaign to secure $2,500,000 as a development and stabilization fund. In the spring of 1953, in compliance with an official request from the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, the campaign for the college was discontinued until the Building Fund Campaign could be launched and completed, or until January 1, 1954. At the time of this interruption, the college had secured in pledges and cash, $1,324,000, or a little more than half way the goal.

By action of the Convention in biennial session and direction of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, the college administration was authorized to renew this campaign and to take whatever steps may seem advisable and profitable to complete the campaign. The officials of the Convention were directed by the Convention and requested by the Board of Trustees to join with the college officials in forming a new organization to reactivate the campaign. To renew this campaign will be a difficult undertaking. Disrupted organizations do not resuscitate themselves as easily or as perfectly as nature does. The interruption of the white oak sapling on Elon College Campus perhaps made it more attractive and more serviceable than it would have been had it not been injured. The matter of reactivating and of completing the Elon College Campaign, after its interruption, will be difficult, but let us hope and trust that its conduct and final completion may be more successful than if it had never been interrupted. The final outcome of this united effort in behalf of our college will depend upon each and all of us who are interested in the college. If everyone does his duty, bears his part of the responsibility and does not fail in the least, success is assured, and the college is again on the march.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The seasons of the year have much to do with conditions in general and with crops in particular. For the past two years and more, Elon College and the surrounding communities have suffered severely from the heat and lack of rains. The early part of this week, the weather became extremely hot and the skies were not cloudy. Everybody was wondering if we were in for another hot, dry summer and barren harvest. Last evening, Wednesday, at nightfall, there came a thunderstorm that with it brought refreshing showers in abundance. This morning the grass and the trees and the crops are green and refreshed. The birds are singing their happy songs from the tree tops; an inspiring and invigorating summer morning.

Would you like to refresh the college in its efforts to serve humanity in general and the church in particular and cheer the hearts of those who by official appointment must bear the heat and the burdens of the day? A liberal contribution (payment on conference apportionment) from your church or Sunday school, and from all other churches and Sunday schools in the Convention would transform the atmosphere of the college from a depressed feeling to an enthusiastic outlook and aggressive efforts for the future of our college. A contribution in advance would serve greatly to push the college on forward another step toward success and its established goal. The goal of the college is of necessity the goal of the church. Together we will go forward and together we stand still. We are one and the same, engaged in united efferts for the one cause, the coming of the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men.

Previously reported	$ 3,473.96
Eastern Va. Conference:
Newport News S. S.	$ 25.00
Liberty Spring	147.00
Rosemont	50.00
Oakland S. S.	35.26
Windsor S. S.	24.20
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Greensboro, First	$ 48.45
Western N. C. Conference:
Ramseur S. S.	$ 60.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 28.73
Mt. Olivet (G) S. S.	8.25
	426.89
Total to date	$ 3,900.85

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 6.)

"This means that there will be basic consideration of Christian faith for young people and how youth can know about and participate in the Christian World Mission of the Congregational Christian Churches and also in interfaith, international and intergroup fellowship."

The president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, Nicholas Piediscalzi of Chicago, Ill. and Yale Divinity School, will preach the council sermon on Sunday morning, June 27, in the Church of the Redeemer.

The Present officers of the fellowship are: Nicholas Piediscalzi, Chicago, Ill., president; James Price, Los Angeles, Calif., vice-president; Norman Noe Greeley, Col., secretary; Sara Lee Babcock, Cleveland, Ohio, assistant secretary; Curtis Young, Durham, N. C., Faith Commission chairman; Anne Moseley, Pasadena, Calif., Action Commission chairman, and Rick Mawson, Greeley, Col., Fellowship Commission chairman.

During the business sessions, the young people will elect new national officers.

Among the highlights of the program will be a pageant play, "They Made a Path," presented on Sunday evening by the Pilgrim Fellowship of the First Congregational Church of Holyoke, Mass., and directed by Broadway and TV star, Peter Harris; a "Town Meeting of the World" on Thursday evening, June 24; and an international banquet on Friday evening, June 25.

You can put it down for a fact that the mind stops growing when the head starts swelling.

—Exchange.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Elon News from Pennsylvania

Mrs. W. W. Sloan, president of the Elon College Women's Society during the past years, pauses between planes in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to write the following report for this page:

"Our World Day of Prayer program this year was scheduled in co-operation with the Elon College High School. Our speakers, Mrs. Joe Hess of India, and Violet Zaron and Laila Khoury of Jordan, were well received. They shared their message also before an enthusiastic audience of Negro high school and grade children.

"Our May Fellowship was a supper program to which the women of the Shallow Well Church were invited. As a get-acquainted feature, the women, who were seated companionably at card tables, competed in telling interesting incidents of their childhood or youthful days. Some of them kept us on the edge of our chair! A 'Mother of the Year' was elected. Each of the guests and each of the mothers nominated by the circles received and wore a red rose. Group singing of familiar songs and hymns rounded out the fellowship."

We hope we shall be having other messages from the Sloans as they wing their way to Australia, New Zealand, and the countries for study this coming year.

* * * * *

Rev. William J. Andes to Teach at School of Missions

The Reverend William J. Andes, who is to teach a course on "The City Church" (our home mission study for next year) at the School of Missions, July 13-16, is a native of Harrisonburg, Virginia, and attended Rockingham County schools. He attended Bridgewater College for two years, transferring to Elon College for the last two years of college work. While at Elon, he was elected president of the student body. He graduated in 1935. He received his Bachelor of Divinity degree from the School of Religion of Duke University in 1941. His graduate thesis was written in the field of home missions.

"Bill," as he is familiarly known, has served churches in the Valley Conference, a number of churches as student pastor, Hank's Chapel, Happy Home, and at the present time is the pastor of United Church in Winston-Salem, and Pfafftown.

He has served as secretary of the Valley Conference, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, and Forsyth County CROP chairman, which county outstripped all others in North Carolina in contributions under his leadership. At present, he is chairman of the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention, the secretary of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, and president of the Winston-Salem Ministerial Association.

REV. WM. J. ANDES

Mr. Andes married the former Carey Atkins of High Point, N. C., in 1940, and they have one son, David, ten years of age.

Mrs. MARK W. ANDES

* * * * *

We Need Women Leaders

A speech by Rev. Morton Kurtz, executive secretary of the North Carolina Council of Churches on May Fellowship Day, reminded us that women were the members of a "minority group" in many denominations, without the right to hold office, become ministers, or perform many jobs permitted the men.

A speech on "The Legal Status of Women in North Carolina" (which included comparisons from Virginia) heard recently, reminded us that women have come a long way in the last fifty years in the matter of legal rights.

How about us in the Southern Convention?

So far as I can discover, no officer of the Southern Convention has ever been a woman, nor has the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. In the history of that august organization, since back in the 1860's, so far as I know, with the exception of the Mission Board, which had for the previous biennium Mrs. John G. Truitt serving in that capacity.

Why not?

Is it because our churches are predominantly male in membership? The totals will show that we have more women members in the Southern Convention than men.

Is it because our denomination does not permit such, as some denominations do not? No. The moderator of our General Council has been a woman in recent years, the chairman of our Missions Council has been a woman. There are women ministers in our denomination, one of whom was featured in write-ups concerning outstanding ministers in a national magazine last winter, and another of whom has won recent recognition for a sermon in a contest for women ministers of all denominations.

Is it because the women in our churches are "dumber" than the men? That is a moot question, but one would be willing to bet that on the average the women had made just as good, if not better, grades in school than the men.

Is it because the women have their own organization, and thus do not need to be officials of the Southern Convention? Well, the Laymen have their own organization, their own page in THE SUN, too.

Maybe someone can tell us the answer. If so, we should be interested to have it for publication on this page—it must come to us with a name signed, but could be published anonymously if a husband's wrath was feared!

Of course, the Southern Convention has just met and elected officers, so this may seem a poor time to raise the question. However, a minority group always has to work a long time to get recognition, so perhaps starting two years ahead of the next election is not such a bad idea after all!

"What About Spiritual Healing?"

A Sermon

By REV. AARON N. MECKEL, D. D.
St. Petersburg, Florida.

"And he could do there no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them. And he marvelled because of their unbelief."
—Mark 6: 5-6.

An article entitled, "Master, Heal Him," appeared in one of our popular magazines not long ago. It concerned a man named Bob Stout, who had been seriously injured in a train accident, but was almost miraculously healed by prayer. In fact, when his life was despaired of by the physicians, yet Bob's wife never lost faith. She trusted that God would restore her husband. While he lay almost at death's door, Bob's wife and pastor and fellow-church members prayed for the Master to heal him. And the Master did.

When the story of this healing got out, there was skepticism in some quarters. It seemed that even some of the clergy doubted the methods Bob's pastor had employed. Were these good people just fooling themselves, and was the recovery of their friend just a stroke of sheer luck? In fact, let us query even deeper: when we pray for God to heal our sick and ailing, do we really believe that he can do it? Is it not true that, altogether too much, we of the orthodox churches have surrendered this ministry of healing over to the sects and cults on the periphery of religion? How about it?

When recently a large healing tent was erected on the edge of our city, someone called me up to say,—"You believe in spiritual healing, don't you?" "Why yes," I replied,—"that is I believe in the power of Jesus Christ to heal." "Then," said the voice on the other end of the line,—"then you should attend these tent meetings. You would see things that would warm the cockles of your heart!"

Well, I am not prepared to stand in this pulpit and endorse, wholesale, the methods of tent-healers. You would hardly expect me to do that. However, I am willing to say this: that we of the regular churches can hardly afford to look "down our noses" at these simple Pentecostal folk who pray for the healing of their sick and claim to work miracles of faith. I believe they have something to teach us more sophisticated folk, in terms of simple, childlike, availing faith. We too need to "turn our faith loose."

Long ago Jesus himself returned to his home town of Nazareth in the power of the Spirit. He was prepared to do great things for God there. But a look at the sixth chapter of Mark's gospel will reveal how the home-folk cold-shouldered him! "Why, who does he think he is anyway? We know all about him! He had a carpenter's shop down one of our side streets before he got fool notions into his head. And what is more, his mother and sisters and brothers are members of our synagogue." As he said, "a prophet is without honor among his own kin-folk." And the net result of his visit to Nazareth was that he could do no mighty work there. He managed somehow to lay his hands on a few sick people and heal them. But "no mighty works!" And then this added touch: "And he marveled at their unbelief!" To Jesus, not skepticism, but faith is the normal, healthy attitude in life. He just couldn't understand their tragic lack of faith.

By and large, here in America, we are badly confused in our thought on this whole subject. This fact was rather humorously brought home to me recently. I had driven my car into a garage for some repair work. The mechanic had overheard the foreman address me as "Doctor Meckel." When he had finished repairing my car, this mechanic came to me and said: "You're a doctor, aren't you?" I hastened to make clear that I was not at all the kind of doctor he had in mind. "Not an M.D.," I tried to make plain, "but a D.D." But he went right on telling me how he had sustained some cuts on his finger. Again I intercepted him, saying—"But you see, I'm a pastor, not a physician." Bless his simple heart! That mechanic didn't know a pastor from a poster! He insisted on asking me for medical advice. I finally suggested to him that he might try dipping his finger in some boric acid solution. As I left he called after me saying: "Good bye, Doc. Thanks ever so much for the help!"

In view of all the confusion there is on the subject, what can we believe about spiritual healing? In this message I want to stress a few convictions which I believe to be pertinent, and which I hope will be helpful to my readers.

To begin with, there can be no reasonable doubt but that healing is an integral part of the Christian Gospel. You just can't leave it out and retain the Good News of Jesus Christ. It looks at us from the joyous pages of the New Testament. Here are two rather obvious facts: Jesus Christ himself healed the sick. And he gave to his disciples power over disease.

The Great Physician himself had compassion on the multitude. As William Newton Clark has said, his healing miracles are the outgrowth of that compassion. We read that, when he spoke, the power of God was present to heal. On more than one occasion they bring the sick and lame, the halt and blind to him, from all directions. And we read that he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

Dr. Raymond Calkins related how he heard Dr. Richard C. Cabot, renowned physician and scholar, read a paper on psychotherapy. At the close of the paper, Dr. Cabot was asked by one present: "That kind of thing would not be possible, would it, in a case of organic disease like cancer?" The reply of the famous research physician is worth noting: "I have never heard of a case of cancer being cured in that way. But I would like to say this—I have never yet found myself in the presence of any disease which I myself feel unable to cure, or which I have never heard of anyone else curing in that way, without saying to myself—'If there were some one here who had one hundred times the personality that we have, that disease might be cured in that way.'" Raymond Calkins rightly adds that it was the magnitude of Jesus' personality that healed others. It was the impact of that profound personality on other lives that worked miracles of cure.

And that power and strength and purity of his overflowed in the lives of the disciples he sent out to heal. They had no power apart from him, as neither do we. He told them to go out and heal the sick. And they did.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

The Party and Gretchen

By INA E. LINDSLEY.

It was while in a summer cottage near a lake that Marian first saw Gretchen, only then she didn't find out her name or anything, for she couldn't understand a word that Gretchen said.

"She talked fast," Marian explained to her mother later, "and the words sounded funny. I couldn't tell what she was talking about at all. She has two long braids of yellow hair, and she lives in that farmhouse where you got the eggs."

"Oh!" answered Marian's mother, beginning to understand. "She must be the little German girl then. It was only a few months ago that her parents came from Germany. I think she is lonesome here, where there are no little German girls to play with her."

"Couldn't Margery and Louise and I ask her to come to the party tomorrow afternoon?" asked Marian quickly. "Still," she added, "how could we ask her when she can't understand what we say?"

The little girls thought and thought. Finally they concluded she would be apt to understand if they went after her the next afternoon before the party began.

"We can make motions to show her what we want her to do," said Margery.

Marian's mother came out and said, "The little German girl's name is Gretchen. I have talked to her father, who understands a little English."

The next afternoon, while Louise stayed at the cottage to greet the other little girls who were to come to the party, Marian and Margery hurried down the path that led to the house where Gretchen lived.

The little German girl smiled and pointed to some chairs on the porch. But when Marian and Margery had smiled, too, they had made many motions to explain what they wanted her to do, the little girl went into the house. Very soon she came out again, wearing a different dress, and with her yellow hair smoothly brushed and braided,

At the party it was fun to show Gretchen how to play games. All the girls tried to think of games that were easy to explain with motions.

Marian had hardly started to explain hide-and-seek by pointing to the goal, covering up her eyes, and pointing out hiding places, when Gretchen smiled and nodded her head in a way that showed she understood all about that game. She was quick to understand the way to play other games, too.

Finally Gretchen smiled and made motions to show the others how to play a game that she knew. And when she had made many, many motions, the other girls understood what she meant. Then they smiled and nodded, just as Gretchen had when she understood about the other games.

When the party was over the little German girl didn't say she had had a good time. She couldn't, you see, in words that the others could understand. Still all the girls could tell by the way she smiled that that was what Gretchen wanted to say.

"We all had so much fun today," Marian said to her mother that night. "I know Gretchen had a good time, too, by the way she smiled when she went home."

"I am glad you thought to ask her," Marian's mother answered. "Little girls of different countries enjoy the same games, even though they can't understand the words of those from another country."

"And I guess," concluded Marian, "that smiling must mean the same in all the countries."—The Story Hour.

* * * * *

"Anxious Mother"

By ELSIE F. KARTACK.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

I met a newcomer in our town. My first impression was, "What an attractive young woman!" but I soon found that when not talking she always seemed to have a worried look. After a number of meetings, she confided to me that she was a failure as a mother. Her children, she said, were unruly and disobedient, especially when there was company. I decided to call on her to see what the situation was.

I had just seated myself when a lovely two-year-old toddled into the room. She walked over to me, looked me over seriously and then climbed into my lap, nestled comfortably in my arms and in a few minutes was peacefully asleep. A little later a five-year-old boy came in. He, too, looked me over and then said seriously, "I'd like to kiss you." Though surprised, I offered my cheek for his voluntary expression of friendliness, saying, "Thank you, I would like to have you kiss me." These two incidents of the afternoon's call were not commented on by the mother, for she knew that this would not be a wise thing to do in the presence of the children.

A few days later I saw her alone and said, "I see nothing wrong in the behavior of your children; I think they are very loving and well-behaved."

To this she replied, "Oh, no, they aren't. Their usual greeting to my friends is something rude or sauey. Occasionally it is even a kick or a slap. You must have had some special charm for them. I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw the way they behaved toward you. What did you do? My anxiety over their actions has grown so that I dread to see anyone come in."

Right then and there I saw the cause of the children's misbehavior. It was the mother's anxiety and fear that they would do some thing wrong. I remembered what Prof. O'Shay, a one-time teacher of psychology at the University of Wisconsin, had to say about a mother's anxiety concerning her children's behavior when company is present. The children sense the mother's thought and recognize that something out of the ordinary is expected of them. Not knowing just what it is, their actions break out in disorder, to the mother's embarrassment and chagrin. I pointed out to this mother where she might be at fault and suggested she release the children from her own fears and expect them to do what is right.

My understanding of the child nature, through many years of experience with young children as a kindergarten director and a close observation of their reaction to a calm, poised thought and expectancy of orderly action from them, had brought an entirely different reaction from these children than that which had been produced by their mother's thought. The little girl had felt

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Tips from Tom

The summer camps at Crabtree, Bay Side, Powell's Fort Camp and Elon seem to be doing fine. Let us hear from your youth group, if any of your young people attended.

* * *

It was the privilege of this writer to participate as an usher in the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben S. Askew, Jr. A very beautiful and impressive ceremony was conducted in the bride's church, Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, by her pastor, Dr. W. Millard Stevens.

* * *

On two separate days, I attended the camping sessions at the Crabtree, Junior High Camp. In a later issue I will give some of my impressions of the camp.

* * *

As many of you already know, our capable leader and friend, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, has resigned her position as educational secretary. I would like for several of the youth of our group to write a note for publication on this page concerning their experiences with Pattie Lee, in camp or in Bible school. I believe we owe her a word of personal appreciation for her work with the youth in our church.

* * *

Is your youth group, dead, alive, or just "getting by"? Let us hear from you today. Write and make use of our page in THE SUN before we lose it.

* * * * *

Youth Enjoy Outing

The young people's class of the Plymouth Congregational Christian Church Sunday School spent the day recently on a picnic outing at White Lake, N. C.

About 30 young people from this church in the Eastern Carolina Conference went on the trip. A full day of hiking, swimming and recreation was in store for all of them. The trip was most enjoyable, though several cases of sunburn followed.

The adult advisers for this group are Mr. Johnny Russell and Mrs. Lucy Bowling.

Rumors

Someone said the Central Virginia Valley Conference young people were to have a Youth Rally. Did they? I never heard.

The youth of a church in the Western Carolina Conference had a project to build a church hut. What has happened to this?

A group of young people in the Eastern Virginia Conference had a Lord's Acre project. That's excellent. Let's hear about it.

The youth of a North Carolina and Virginia Conference church were to hold a raical worship program. Did they?

These are only rumors. Let's make them news. Write about the activities of your youth group today. It's important for all.

* * * * *

"Cupid's Column"

Cupid does not have all the facts on several cases. All possible information was not received. But Cupid has heard rumors concerning the engagement and wedding of Miss Virginia Jernigan to Mr. Warren Matthews. Both were students at Elon College. Warren is now doing graduate work at Hartford Seminary in Connecticut. He is reported as doing summer pastoral work in Nebraska.

* * *

Cupid has also heard of the proposed wedding of Miss Jean Brown, daughter of Rev. Avery Brown. She was a student at Elon College. We would like further information for Cupid.

* * * * *

United Student Council Executive Committee Makes Plans

The executive committee of the United Student Christian Council met in New York City the middle of last month to make plans for the months ahead. This council is the coordinating body for the nation's major Protestant student organizations; and through the programs of its 13 member movements, it reaches students on 800 campuses in the United States.

One of the items of business was arranged for two delegated conferences to be held at the same time as the sessions of the World Council in Evanston, Illinois in August. Full particulars of these conferences were given in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN.

In addition to this, the USCC executive committee also:

1. Announced plans for its annual Assembly, September 5-10, to be held on the campus of Western College for Women, Oxford, Ohio, and set up four pre-assembly study committees dealing with the whole of Christian student movements in relation to their responsibilities in areas of political concern, the university, the church and the student community on the campus.

2. Registered concern for closer integration of foreign students in this country into the life of student Christian work.

3. Listed plans for a consultation late this year dealing with the relationship of the student Christian community to the graduate student and to develop a program of work in this area.

4. Voted to refer to its Assembly a recommendation that the Student Volunteer Movement serve the Council as its Commission on World Mission.

Dr. Bryant Drake, who is director of College Work of the Congregational Christian Church, presided at the meeting. The student chairman is William Metcalf, a member of the Presbyterian Church, USA. Dr. Ruth Wick of Stamford, Conn., is the executive director of the council.

"ANXIOUS MOTHER."

(Continued from page 10.)

calmness and security, with the result that she had quietly fallen asleep. The little boy had felt love and understanding and had instinctively drawn near to respond in affection.

This mother readily saw that it was she and not the children who was at fault, and she quickly set about to correct her own thinking, and within a short time another call at the house revealed there was now order, not only by the children but also in the appearance of the house, for the children were doing their part in producing this order and harmony. Quietness and serenity prevailed, though nothing of the children's normal, active life had been taken away.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Judgment Comes to Israel"

LESSON XIII—JUNE 27, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "The ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them; but transgressors shall fall therein."—Hosea 14: 9.

BACKGROUND SCRIPTURE: II Kings 17: 5-18.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 85:1-17.

The Catastrophe.

At long last the sins of Israel found her out. They had been like a cancer, at first unrecognized, but gradually, increasingly, eating at the vitals of her life, until at long last, they brought about her death.

The judgment which the prophets had announced was executed. The king of Assyria, Sargon, came up to Samaria with a large army, laid siege to the city for three years, and finally captured it. He carried the people away into captivity. And thus came to an end forever the Kingdom of Israel. The date is well worth remembering, 722 B. C.

The immediate cause of Sargon's foray against Israel was the ill-advised effort of King Hoshea to join Egypt in a war against this powerful emperor, and his refusal longer to pay tribute to this ruler. But that was but an incident in the long chain of events which brought about Israel's downfall, and which characterized her policy and practice of idolatry and disobedience.

It is aptly illustrated in a story which the writer read years ago. According to that story, an Indian living in the Great Lakes section wanted to trap an eagle which made its home near his home. Accordingly he put some attractive bait on a large rock on which the eagle was accustomed to stand, and from which it caught fish from the lake. Later he placed a trap on the rock, but made no effort to spring the trap at first. Then, after the eagle had become accustomed to the whole set up, and familiarity had bred contempt, he baited the trap with an especially attractive piece of bait, and when the eagle went into the trap to get the bait, the old Indian hid in the bushes nearby pulled a string which sprang the trap, and he had the eagle,

"When," asked the teller of this story, "was the eagle trapped? When the Indian pulled the string and sprang the trap? Yes, in a way. But actually, he was caught the first time he dallied with the temptation, and took the proffered bait." Thus it was with Israel. She was caught when Sargon took Samaria and carried the people away into captivity, but she was really caught when she began long before to worship idols, to look with interest upon the idols of Canaan, to forget God, and to neglect to worship him.

The Cause.

"And it was so, because the children of Israel had sinned against Jehovah, their God, who brought them out of the land of Egypt from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods, and walked in the statutes of the nations . . . and did secretly things that were not right against Jehovah, their God; and they built them high places in their cities . . . and they set them up pillars and Asherim upon every high hill . . . and there they burnt incense in the high places . . . and they wrought wicked things to provoke Jehovah to anger . . . and they served idols."

Why did this catastrophe happen, and happen to the Chosen People? What was the cause of this catastrophe? It was sin. And when sin, like a cancer has run its course, it brings death. The Israelites were doomed the moment they began to worship the gods of heathen nations, when they bowed down to idols, when they built high places and burnt incense on those altars, when they did publicly and privately, the things that were an offense to Jehovah. What happened to them was because they had sinned against Jehovah. There is irony in the word Jehovah. Jehovah is the name of the "Covenant God," the One who had chosen Israel for himself, the One who had brought them out of bondage, cared for them in the wilderness, and brought them into a land flowing with milk and honey. To all their sins they added the worst sin, the sin of ingratitude.

Nor had God failed to warn his people. "Yet Jehovah testified unto Israel, and unto Judah, by every prophet and every seer, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and statutes . . ." "Notwithstanding, they would not hear, but hardened their necks, like to the necks of their fathers, who believed not in their God." They had been duly and abundantly warned. Elijah, Amos, Hosea, and the other prophets had constantly warned the nation against the doom that was inevitable unless the nation repented and changed its ways. But they had been warned in vain. Behold now their house was left desolate. God will not leave himself without witness. He warns those who are bent on evil. He seeks to restrain those who do wrong. He seeks to save those who are bent on self-destruction.

The Consequence.

"Therefore, Jehovah was very angry with Israel and removed them out of his sight; there was none left but the tribe of Judah." It is as exact as a mathematical formula. Disobedience brings punishment. Sin brings forth death. It may be a long drawn out process, but it is inevitable.

Thus did Northern Israel, the Ten Tribes, go into captivity. Thus did Israel perish as a nation. There have been various conjectures as to what became of them. As conjectures, they are interesting, but the fact is that nobody knows. Like the "Lost Colony" on Roanoke Island, nobody knows what became of them. As to where they went nobody knows. As to why they went, anybody can plainly see. "It was so because the children of Israel had sinned against Jehovah, their God."

The Contemporary Implication.

"Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our instruction . . ." Here is written in letters that anybody can read the working out of the divine processes of history, and the certainty of divine judgment and punishment on the sins of a nation, as well as of an individual. It seems a far cry from comparatively little Israel with her limited resources, to America and the other nations of our modern world, with their might and material resources and power. It seems as if it just could not happen here. But it could happen here! That needs to be said again and again. Recall the lessons of recent weeks and refresh your memories on the sins which the prophets denounced, and the underlying causes of the impending breakdown

(Continued on page 15.)

"WHAT ABOUT SPIRITUAL HEALING?"

(Continued from page 9.)

All in all, it was an Apostolic Ministry, with signs following.

But now we must qualify that first statement of ours somewhat when we say that, although Jesus did heal the sick, he did not make bodily healing the center of his ministry. Over there at Nazareth he laid his hands on a few sick folk and healed them—that was all. We find him imploring those whom he heals not to make a big noise about it. Why? Because he knew himself to be the Son of God who came as the Great Physician of the soul. The body would in time decompose into its native elements. But the soul, that was destined for immortality. In fact, it seems that the body cures flow from healing at a much deeper level, that of the heart. "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." (I Tim. 1:15). He came that men might be spiritually reborn from above. He was concerned that the prodigal who had lost his way, might return again to the Father's house. Again and again his words ring out—"Thy sins be forgiven thee. Rise, take up thy bed and walk!"

Almost twenty centuries before we moderns made mention of psychosomatic medicine, the Great Physician knew all about it! How well he knew that our bodies cannot be healthy if our minds and hearts are sick!

Dr. C. H. Dodd, who has studied the original Gospel sources as have few scholars, says: "It appears that the authority of Jesus penetrated to the subconscience depths of personality, where so many mysterious disorders of mind and body have their source." Yes, he understood men fully and spoke to the inner springs of the soul. And the soul heard and responded. He gave men the desire to be well. He gave them the will to live.

When recently I asked a leading psychiatrist what he made of the statement in the Apostles' Creed—"I believe in the forgiveness of sins"—he made an amazing reply. "Apart from the knowledge of that," he said—"none of my patients ever really get well. The forgiveness of sins is the basic therapy."

According to the Mayo Clinic, about seventy-five percent of illnesses are emotionally induced. Dr. Alfred Adler insists that most of the ills of human personality are due to our stubborn resistance to the truth Jesus taught, namely, that it is more blessed to give than receive. That is, we need to get out of ourselves out of morbid self-preoccupation. We need quite literally to give ourselves away to Christ and for his fellow men.

"I have found out," said a physician to a man who consulted him, "what is the matter with you. You are allergic to yourself!"

Again, let those who desire to be well (and to remain well), realize the tremendous power of suggestion, both in its negative and positive aspects. Believe it or not, we can actually think and talk ourselves into invalidism. Our Lord goes to Nazareth to do mighty works for God. The lame, and halt, and blind stretch out arms of entreaty to him. The Kingdom of God wishes to come in power in Nazareth. But unbelief and stupid cynicism stay the mighty hand of God. The very atmosphere is poisoned with suspicion. Talk about the power of negative suggestion! You surely have it there. Not long ago I read this statement by an American statesman: "There will be no depression in America unless we talk ourselves into one!"

A doctor, seeing the streets of Rochester, Minnesota, filled, and clinics packed with people asked a physician if it was a festival day. "I'll tell you what happens. John goes down the street and remarks to a friend that he has a heart ailment. His friend begins to feel that the same thing is wrong with him. Fear of heart trouble grows and spreads like an epidemic. And we get the wreckage here."

Now, turn from the power of negative suggestion to the power of positive, spiritual suggestion, as it is felt in the worship of God in just such a church as this today. See what we do: We dare to turn our faith loose! To affirm that God is present in the power of his holy, life-giving, Spirit. That Jesus Christ is the "same yesterday, today, and forever," that he is a living Christ present where his friends gather in his name. Here are people healed of fear, guilt, anxiety and depression of spirit. Here they are released to serve and witness. In our balcony there sat a visitor beside one of our workers. Presently these words were spoken: "I worshipped in this church some years ago. Things haven't gone well with me since I've been away. I said to myself—if I can just get inside that church again, and sit, and listen, and worship, I will be well.'" And then this, "I feel better already."

There you have the exercise of simple child-like faith: "If I can touch but the hem of his garment, I shall be healed!" It is not we who heal, but the Great Physician who releases healing, whole-making power, through us.

"We touch him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again."

It happens—it should happen—in the Christian churches of America every Sunday.

One more question: there remains the mystery of the unhealed. We all know of sincere and earnest Christians who have prayed for bodily healing, but seemingly in vain. Not all were healed in Jesus' day. Let's be honest and frank about it. What shall we say?

I have purposely used the word "mystery" in speaking of the unhealed. There are so many factors involved in the subtle relationship of the human mind and body that we, as yet, know nothing about. It is here, I believe, that God uses dedicated physicians and nurses as part of his great healing ministry. If the pain cannot be removed, then it can be made more bearable. All honor to the gallant physician and nurses who give themselves to the alleviation of human pain and misery.

But even more to the point, we have all known persons with ailing bodies but radiant spirits. They come "Smiling Through." Even on an invalid's couch, the "Soul can split the sky in two and let the face of God shine through." Such gallant souls make us healthier ones ashamed of our futile complainings. They witness for Christ with their very sufferings.

Then there is the healing of the Resurrection, when God has promised to give his faithful sufferers a spiritual and immortal body. "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." The radiant Paul knew what it meant to go about with a severe bodily handicap. And so he spoke of the body as an old "tent" that must soon come down. "For we know that if the mere tent, which is our earthly house, is taken down, we have in heaven a building from God, a house not made by human hands, but eternal!" (II Cor. 5:1, Weymouth). No wonder he could shout, "Thanks be to God who gives us the
(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

