In 1922, the Congregational Educational Society started a Young People's Department with the late Harry Thomas Stock as secretary. In 1924, Lucy M. Eldredge became Director of Young People's Work for the Board of Christian Education of the Christian Churches. Other parallel happenings occurred so that when the Congregational and Christian Churches came together in 1931 to form the new fellowship of the Congregational Christian Churches, the young people of the two groups discovered that they had so much in common that a united youth program developed naturally and quickly.

"The Pilgrim Fellowship" Becomes a Reality

State leaders gathered at Evanston, Illinois in January, 1934 and unanimously endorsed the name "Pilgrim Fellowship" to designate Congregational Christian young people. Used first by Missouri, it was welcomed by all because it seemed to express the spirit desired for the movement: A Fellowship rather than merely an organization; a Pilgrim enterprise having its roots in the past and suggesting the pioneer spirit needed for the future. In December, 1934, Dr. Stock wrote to the delegates of a holiday conference: "This year, for the first time, we meet consciously as part of the Pilgrim Fellowship with the opportunity to help chart its future, which must be determined by youth."

The Purpose is Stated

In 1935, local church groups were asked to help put into words the purpose of this newly named fellowship. Fifty groups submitted statements and five were selected and circulated for study by young people in summer conferences. The one finally approved had been written by the young people of Yankton, South Dakota, and reads:

THE PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP unites all the young people of the Congregational Christian Churches in the purpose:

To achieve Christian personality after the pattern of Jesus,

To seek a fuller understanding, one of another, in the interest of happy relations in home and community,

To work for a united church, practicing Christian freedom, and definitely promoting the program of Jesus,

To secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God,

To practice a Christian patriotism which recognizes the authority of God in conscience as supreme,

To strive for justice in the social order which will afford an abundant life for all,

To work for such international organization of the nations as will preserve peace and security.

The Significance of Lakeside 1936

Nearly one thousand young people and adult leaders came from many states and denominations to Lakeside, Ohio, in June, 1936 to attend the Christian Youth Conference of North America. There were one hundred and twenty-five Congregational Christian delegates from thirty-one states. This was the first opportunity for Pilgrim Fellowship youth from all sections of the country to work together on program plans.

They voted to organize a National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship. They prepared helpful suggestions for states and associations. They elected Lanson Granger of Virginia as the first president. Much of the growth of the Pilgrim Fellowship during the next two years can be traced to the influential work during and immediately after the Lakeside Conference.

Two Decades of Growth

In 1939 designs were submitted for a national emblem, and the one designed by Willard Purchase for the Michigan Pilgrim Fellowship was adapted for national use and approved. The emblem symbolized a Fellowship of Church Youth building a world in which the church, school, factory, and home are all integral parts. A circle of light represents the eternal love of God. The outer circle of blue surrounding the cross bears the name "The Pilgrim Fellowship" and the gold background has twelve projections indicating the first Christian Fellowship, the twelve disciples.

The two hundred and twenty-five young people and adults from forty states, the District of Columbia and Hawaii, with guests from Japan, China and India, composed the second National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship, held at Mills College, Oakland, California, August 13-20, 1940.

From Mills came the idea to have Congregational Christian Work Camps. In a world at war, it seemed the ideal opportunity to do a part in off-setting destructive forces with constructive work.

Under the direction of Rev. Oliver Powell, the newly elected Secretary for Young People's Work, the fourth National Council met on historic ground, Lakeside, Ohio. It was, however, an abbreviated meeting occasioned by the calling of the second Christian Youth Conference of North America.

A major new development was the setting up of four working commissions, located in four geographic centers, making it possible to have a continuing, working group in each of the areas of Pilgrim Fellowship action: Personal, Social, Missionary, and Interdenominational.

In 1946 and 1948, Council meetings were held at Grinnell College in Iowa and Doane College in Nebraska respectively. The Pilgrim Fellowship adopted the Missionary Action post-war theme, "One World-One Fellowship." Special emphasis was placed on intercultural and race relations.

Meeting With the Youth Fellowship

In 1947, the National Central Committee of Pilgrim Fellowship and the members of the Youth Fellowship, Evangelical and Reformed Youth Cabinet met together in Cleveland to discuss groundwork for a Basis of Union for the merger of the two fellowships. They anticipated a joint National Council in 1950, which did not materialize because of an injunction in the Cadman court case, terminating merger conversations for the time being.

Other Steps

In 1948 the United Student Fellowship came into being (its origin in the C. C. side were in P. F.) In 1949 the Youth Fellowship Kit and Junior High Kit, joint products of the United Church and the Presbyterians, came into being. In January, 1950, the first edition of the National Pilgrim Fellowship Newsletter, United Church Youth, came out.

The Workday for Christ which began in Iowa was introduced across the nation as a way which might work to earn money for special missions projects.

A strong effort was made to hold special leadership training conferences. Beginning with the Ohio Planning and Training Conference in 1946 and spreading throughout almost all the conferences, such workshops have continued to be held annually not only for the purpose of leadership training but for state planning.

State conferences increasingly employed full-time Directors of Christian Education and thus P. F. continued on all levels to grow and expand in size and influence.

Our Present Statement of Purpose

In 1950 at the National Council meeting in Milwaukee our present Statement of Purpose was accepted by the 7th National Council.

WE ARE UNITED IN THE PURPOSE:

TO KNOW God in our lives as revealed by Jesus Christ, to worship him only, to study his truth, and to dedicate ourselves to do his will.

TO WITNESS to the message and the mission of the Church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace.

TO COOPERATE with all who seek to extend the Christian fellowship.

The 1952 Council

The Three Commission plan — Christian Faith, Christian Action, and Christian Fellowship — was adopted and set into motion with working commissions in geographic areas centered around the chairman's location.

1954-1958 — Working Towards The Merger

In June of 1955, the PF-YF cabinets met together at Pottstown, Pennsylvania. Separate National Councils were held in 1956 (P. F. at Doane in Nebraska, Y. F. at Catawba in N. C.) The two Councils exchanged fraternal delegates, and each Council took action authorizing merger negotiations leading up to a council at the same time and place in 1958.

The tasks of the two cabinets 1956-58 came to be primarily that of bringing two varied traditions into a singly functioning council out of which a common program could emerge. The success of this realization was seen in the New York Council in June of 1958 which made significant history by adopting a common program.

Elmhurst — 1960

The Second Joint National Council was held at Elmhurst (Ill.) College in June, 1960; and, in addition to developing common program emphases for the 1960-62 biennium, gave careful consideration to "a proposed Plan of Organization for the Youth Ministry of the United Church of Christ" and recommended a timetable of adoption for the new form of organization.

A Covenant for youth was also presented at the Elmhurst Council as a means of helping youth in the United Church of Christ focus on a basic purpose for their lives and carry out their vocation as Christians. The Covenant is as follows:

The Covenant

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise of his kingdom of love.

Meet Shirley Sineath

One of our Southern Convention to whom we can point with pride is First Lt. Shirley Sineath, a member of Turner's Chapel church, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sineath of that church. Miss Sineath, who as a high school student was a Sunday school teacher at Turner's Chapel, is now an Air Force nurse. Stationed at Cape Canaveral, Miss Sineath was featured recently in an Associated Press news story which described her duties in preparation for the flight of the first U. S. astronaut. She was one of the 55 medical personnel on duty at the time of the flight in order that the astronaut might be aided in case of an unexpected emergency.

It costs less to train one hundred children in Christian living than it costs to deal with one average criminal. (From the Sunday bulletin, First, Burlington.)

Cubans Continue To Stream Into Miami

What was expected to be a short-term emergency program to aid refugees from Cuba is developing into a "long, hard job," says a report this week from Miami, Florida. "New" refugees are thronging into the Cuban Refugee Center, where the Protestant Latin American Emergency Committee is at work, as each plane from Havana arrives "loaded to the wings."

For the thousands who fled to Florida last winter, says the report from the Rev. Dr. Russell Stevenson, resident director of the Protestant Committee, all hope of returning to a "free" Cuba, which bolstered them so long, has now disappeared. "The abortive invasion attempt and Castro's show of strength have taken care of that."

The "alarming" rate of new arrivals, says his report, has resulted in mushrooming requests for food, clothing and medical supplies from the 11 Protestant operating centers in the city. In one month, 6,000 people received some counsel and material assistance. A new project noted in the report is a series of cooking classes at the YWCA, initiated by the Miami Council of United Church Women. Unused to our foods, Cuban women are now learning to make tasty dishes from U. S. surplus dried milk and eggs, beans, peanut butter and lard.

Stating that new cases are being registered at the center at the rate of 115 to 125 a day, the report notes that the emphasis now is on resettlement in other U. S. areas. Close to 300 have now been resettled by Church World Service and cooperating denominations. Represented on the committee, in addition to CWS, are the Board of Home Missions of the National Council of Churches and the Greater Miami Council of Churches.

"As more refugees are now indicating an interest in resettlement than before," says Dr. Stevenson, who represents the United Presbyterian Church, USA, "the churches will have to continue their vital work of securing sponsors for them. Whatever happens, they are going to be with us for a long time to come."

Mary, The Mother Of Jesus

Background Scripture: Matthew 1:18-25; 12:46-50; Luke 1:26-31; 2:41-49; John 2:1-10; 19:25-27; Acts 1:14.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 118:21-29.

Memory Selection: My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit rejoices in God my Saviour, for he has regarded the low estate of his handmaiden. For behold, henceforth all generations shall call me blessed. Luke 1:46-48.

We begin today a series of lessons on PERSONALITIES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. The poet wrote "The lives of great men (and great women) all remind us,

We can make our lives sublime;
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

We shall be considering great men and women in whose lives we see qualities and actions which can be an example and inspiration to us. And we begin today with the most famous woman who ever lived, Mary, the mother of our Lord Jesus Christ. Think what an honor it was that this humble Galilean peasant woman should be chosen to be the mother of the Saviour of the world, the Son of God. We need not resort to Mariolatry, the worship of Mary, to exalt her and honor her above all women. Let us look at her as she is pictured in the New Testament in what we will call "Candid Camera Shots." There are six of them.

The Infancy Story

The sequence of events is familiar — the Annunciation by the angel Gabriel, the visit with her cousin Elizabeth, the birth of Jesus, and the presentation in the Temple. Certain characteristics or traits of disposition are revealed: marked purity of life; devout spirit, born of a belief in the word of God and submission to God; a poetic temperament; and religious loyalty as expressed in the rites and ceremonies of the Jewish faith, circumcision and presentation of her Son, and attendance at the religious feasts. In many of these things she is an example for modern mothers.

Boyhood Days Of Jesus

The Temple scene in connection with Jesus' first visit to Jerusalem speaks eloquently of the home life of Mary and her influence. Jesus was surprised that after her teaching about the love of God's house and the delight in God's law, his parents were amazed to find him in the Temple. Furthermore it should be understood that the life of Jesus was no miracle apart from the training and influence of the home and especially of his mother. Jesus Christ would never have been what He was apart from his mother.

The Silent Years Of Jesus' Life

There are no pictures of Mary or Jesus for eighteen years. But we can imagine at least a little of what took place in that humble home in Nazareth during those "hidden years." Here was the unpublicized and unrecognized work of a mother wielding her influence over a growing young man, and preparing him for a life of service in the years to come. Unconsciously, as well as consciously, Mary was shaping the life of our Lord, and helping him to become what He became under God and through her.

During The Public Career Of Jesus

There are two candid camera shots of Mary during the public career of Jesus. The first was taken at the wedding feast in Cana of Galilee. Here we see a mother's faith in her son. "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it," she told the servants when Jesus gave his strange order to fill the firkins with water when the wine gave out. She felt that somehow He would meet the emergency — she believed in her "boy." Ah, the faith that mothers have in their sons.

We get another candid camera shot of Mary, and a very human one of her, in connection with the occasion when Jesus was speaking in a home one day. There was nothing half-hearted about Jesus, and he spoke with such power, and served and ministered with such enthusiasm and abandon, that people thought he was a "little off." Mary felt that He was doing too much, more than was good for him. She was concerned about him, and sought to protect him against not only his enemies, but against himself. All unwittingly Mary was revealing something of the difficulty which mothers have in giving up their children, in "cutting the apron strings," in giving them freedom, in being too zealous over them. This characteristic of Mary and of mothers in general was seen in the incident in the Temple, already referred to. Here was a boy growing up, beginning to feel his independence, launching out on his own. His mother still thought of him as a little boy, or as her private possession. One of the most difficult problems which mothers and fathers have is in knowing how to "give up" their children. This does not mean to give up loving them and being interested in them, but realizing that they must go out on their own. Ann Lander's column, which I read regularly (Do you know why? Because it interests me how great fools some people can make of themselves and some of the dumb things human beings can do, and because Ann gives such sensible answers as a rule.), again and again deals with the problem of "Mamma's little boy, or little girl." Mamma just cannot give up her "little boy" and let his wife have him.

At The Cross Of Jesus

That is where we would expect her to be if it were at all possible. Like every mother, Mary wanted to be near her son when He needed her most. Even though there was nothing she could do, she could at least be near him. In this she was a universal mother. Said Jesus unto John, "Behold thy mother!" No matter if her Son was being crucified as a criminal, Mary was there to stand by his Cross. Kipling states it thus:

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
Mother O' Mine, Mother O' Mine!

I know whose love would follow me still,

Mother O Mine, Mother O Mine.

If I were damned of body and soul,
Mother O Mine, Mother O Mine!

I know whose prayers would make me whole,

Mother O Mine, Mother O Mine.

New Cottages Dedicated

Walstein W. Snyder, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Rev. Lawrence M. Upton, Secretary of Health and Welfare for the Congregational Christian denomination was the featured speaker at the Consecration Service Sunday afternoon, June 11, for two cottages at the Children's Home at Elon College. The Clyde Rudd Cottage for boys and the Montgomery Cottage for girls were the two cottages consecrated. This is the first of four cottages the Home hopes to build. Also included in the program is the remodeling of Johnston Hall.

The invocation was given by Dr. John G. Truitt, former superintendent of the Home. The Holy Scripture was given by Dr. William J. Andes, minister of the Elon College Community Church, while the prayer of consecration was given by Rev. Kenneth D. Register, pastor of the Beverly Hills Christian Church in Burlington.

Greetings were heard from Supt. Charles F. Beidler of the Nazareth Home of the Evangelical and Reformed denomination; Dr. J. Earl Danieley, president of Elon College; and from Rev. Clyde L. Fields, Supt. of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The cottages were presented by Mrs. James H. McEwen, Chairman of the Building Committee, and the Act of Consecration was given by Rev. Walstein W. Snyder, superintendent of the Home. The benediction for this service was given by Rev. John D. Biggerstaff, assistant superintendent of the Home.

Also present for the service were: N. Carl Monroe, Greensboro, N. C., the contractor for the cottages; James C. Hemphill, Greenwood, S. C., the architect; and William Kulp, Greensboro, N. C., who assisted with the decorating of the interiors of the cottages.

In an 11:30 morning session on Sunday the alumni of the Home met for their annual meeting. The rising seniors of the Home presented a worship service, after which the alumni group heard the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent give brief reports on activities at the Home. The group then went into a business session presided over by Mrs. Allen

E. Gant, Burlington, N. C., president of the Alumni Association. The group decided to accept unanimously the erection of a swimming pool on the campus as their project for next year. This group in the past has been responsible for a number of worthy projects. The most outstanding projects were the hard surfacing of the road on the campus and the walk-in deep freeze and cooler that helps us save vegetables and meats the year round.

New officers elected for the coming year are Paul Williams of Raleigh, president; Dan Walker of Burlington, vice president; and Joe Cox of Burlington, secretary. These officers were installed by Dr. John G. Truitt.

At 12:30 p.m. the alumni, their families and friends enjoyed a country ham lunch served in our dining room.

The meats and most of the other foods for dinners such as this come from our lands. A few weeks ago we reported the most welcomed gifts of peas, beans and strawberries. Today we are happy to say that we are beginning to have fresh vegetables from our own gardens. Due to a late spring and most unseasonable weather we have been a little later than usual in beginning to have our own vegetables. This week we are having fresh squash and snap beans and we will be looking forward to a wide variety of fresh vegetables as the weeks go by. The vegetables will supply our tables during the summer months and a quantity will be placed in the freezer for winter use.

We are so thankful for the many blessings which are bestowed upon our children and this Home.

The morning service at Beverly Hills, Burlington, Sunday, June 11, was also the commencement program for Bible school. Enrollment for the school was 97, with an average attendance of 93. 63 teachers and pupils had perfect attendance for the week.

Dalton Harper, layman from First Greensboro, was the guest speaker for the morning service at St. Peter's, Greensboro, Sunday, June 11.

LOY GRADUATES FROM DUKE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Rev. J. C. Loy, pastor of New Hope and Beulah churches, received his B. D. degree from Duke Divinity School this month. Mr. Loy, the son of Rev. W. M. Loy, who is the pastor of Long's Chapel Christian Church, is a graduate of Elon College. He is married to the former Alice Greeson, and has one child.

It Can Be Done

By Emily Lester

When a minister is away on "sick leave" and the little group cannot easily secure a guest speaker for an important Sunday like Pentecost, what can be done in order to have a good morning service?

This was the situation at High Point recently. And this was what was done: the young people were responsible for the worship service and three laymen agreed to give talks concerning the church.

A young person presided. The primaries and juniors gave a Psalm as the call to worship. A young person told of the meaning of Pentecost, concluding with reading part of the message from the presidents of the World Council of Churches as found in The Christian Sun. Two young people read Acts 2, with one taking the part of the narrator and the other reading when Peter spoke. The prayer by Dr. Guptill on the back page of the denominational bulletin was read in unison by the congregation. Hymns and poems which had to do with the holy spirit and the church were used.

Dewey J. Cates gave the first of the three talks, telling what the church had meant to him down through the years. The central theme of his interesting reminiscences about life on the farm, as a railroad man, and as a hosiery mill man was the important place his church had held in his life. Bruce Woodell told of the place of the church in the world of today, emphasizing the value of young people's, women's and laymen's organizations, and urging the importance of churches advancing God's Kingdom on earth rather than becoming social clubs. "Our Church of the Future" was the subject used by Clayton Smith, who stressed the importance of every person in the church sharing in its work and worship and drawing others into its fellowship, so that before long there can be a new church building of our denomination in High Point.

The meaning of the first Pentecost was shared and the presence of the Holy Spirit felt as young people and laymen demonstrated that the "body of Christ" is a "fellowship of believers" ready to do their share for the good of the whole group.

CHURCH AND LAY LEADERS CALL FOR END TO STRIFE IN ANGOLA

More than 80 prominent Protestant and Roman Catholic clergy and laymen in the U. S. and Canada have appealed to the President of Portugal to bring a halt to the bloodshed in Angola, West Africa.

In an open letter to President (Rear Admiral) Americo Tomaz, they expressed their concern over a situation in the Portuguese territory which "threatens to explode into a war of extermination between Portuguese and Africans."

Reports received by the Africa Committee of the National Council of Churches indicate that at least 1,000 whites and 8,000 Angolans have been killed and that acts of terror have led more than 60,000 refugees to flee into the troubled Coongo.

Stating that it is the obligation of any state to control rioting, the signers of the appeal deplored the violent actions in Angola "which have carried suppression to excessive lengths." The re-establishment of government controls, they said, will be "an empty victory" without redress of the people's grievances.

Efforts to put an end to the indiscriminate killings can be achieved only through consultations with representatives of the Angolan people, they said, concluding their message: "We appeal to you, Mr. President, and to the people of Portugal, to initiate this process of discussion."

SAY IT RIGHT . . . WRITE IT RIGHT

Loan is incorrectly used as a verb except in financial language, in which case its use is permissible but not preferred. Examples: He will lend you his book. The bank will lend (or loan) you money.

The word farther denotes actual distance or extension in space. Further implies a greater degree or additional. Examples: He sailed farther than necessary. He probed further into the matter.

Exact numerical data, such as dimensions, distances, measurements, and weights, should be stated in figures. Approximate numerical data should be written out. Examples: 3½ x 6 feet; about ten feet high.

The word awful should be applied only to something that is full of awe. Hence, such expressions as "I had an awful good time" and "It was awfully nice" are incorrect.

they are taking, Dr. Smith stated, do not square with the Christian ethic.

Lastly, Dr. Smith challenged the churches of North Carolina to face doors opening in the new frontier of racial relations. He urged the Churches to take their moral and spiritual responsibility to change such things as "token integration" in schools.

In conclusion, Dr. Smith stated that no one denomination can open these doors to progress in North Carolina, but that all the groups, working together, can bring about a new day in the Old North State.

The Christian Church And Community

The last picture of Mary was taken in the Upper Room where the disciples were gathered in prayer. And she was undoubtedly present when the Holy Spirit came on Pentecost. Thus she kept within the range of experiences which led at last to a full-orbed Christian faith.

There are some things which Mary did not understand, and could not explain. But her heart was true, and her faith was strong. She stands for all that is best in womanhood and motherhood. Blessed was she among women.

In Memoriam

It was in 1960, dear Mother,
You were called to your reward;
To be with our Father in Heaven,
In the Kingdom of our Lord.

This world with all its heartaches
Will trouble you no more;
For you have found eternal peace,
And rest on Heaven's shore.

Though our hearts are heavy laden
With the loss of one so dear,
We shall not forget, and always keep
The memory of you near.

Your presence here is sadly missed,
Your place no one can fill;
But who are we to question
The fulfillment of God's will?

We know that God will keep you
In his peace and love, dear Mother,
Until He calls us home at last,
To rest with you forever.

departed this life August 26, 1960.)

DAYS OF TURMOIL... A DAY OF PROMISE

We dwell in anguished and turbulent days--

Men walk the streets anxious and confused, afraid and alone.

Fists tighten,
Tempers erupt,
And guns bristle
in Laos and Leopoldville, on the East River and in New Orleans.

Races rise, nations are born,
Old tyrannies take new names,
Ancient religions come to life,
Populations explode.

And winding through
This vast neighborhood of ours Stretches the endless line of the hungry,
the diseased,
the oppressed;
of the silent,
the homeless,
the destitute.

But God is at work in these days--

God's Day promises
To redeem our days.
Change and turmoil
In God's hand are hope.
God's Day breaks into man's days to give light, to bind up,
to transform.

God's Day brings to our days healing for the sick, food for the hungry,
shelter for the homeless.

God's Day is
The promise of New Life.
Through Christ He gives the Church-- new men in a New Community.

God is at work,
Let the earth rejoice.

And God calls us to work, too.

He calls us
to be His eyes and ears, to be His hands and feet.

In the midst of these days
Of turmoil and suffering
He calls us to a costlier obedience and new ventures
in witness and service.

PRINCIPLES of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only head of the Church.
2. Christian is sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

“Rejoice And Be Glad”

Time for rejoicing has come to Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed church people. Since 1942 when conversations began relative to merging the two denominations there has been steady progress towards July 4, 1961, when the third session of the General Synod of the United Church of Christ can declare the Constitution in effect.

The idea of merging two denominations with different history and organization was a daring concept that was slow in coming to birth. Protestantism has continually protested, and for many reasons — good and bad — new denominations have come into being through the years. To reunite is a strange notion in the midst of constantly dividing Protestantism. Its birth has been long delayed, and may well be accepted with rejoicing.

The process of merger has been long, tedious, discouraging, and fraught with many difficulties. Acquaintance was necessary. Careful study of history and organization to find the real essentials in each group was necessary in order to plan a new denomination that would save the best of the past and open doors to the future. Democratic processes meant votes by groups large and small across the United States. Then there were opponents who sought to prohibit the merger by lawsuits.

Now that 32 of the 33 Synods and 3547 of the 3889 Congregational Christian churches voting have approved the Constitution, and the courts have dismissed the suits against the merger, those who will meet in Philadelphia in the General Synod can vote with joy to declare the United Church has passed the hurdles and is ready to take its place in the Christian world. Rejoice and be glad.

Here And There Among The Churches

Vacation Bible school is being held at Lee's Chapel June 26-30.

Twenty-two young people from the Christian Temple will attend camps at Moonelon this summer.

Congratulations are in order for Rev. and Mrs. Reuben Askew in the birth of a daughter, Cheryl Denise, at Alamance County Hospital on June 9.

The Rev. J. C. Loy, Jr., pastor of New Hope and Beulah Churches in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, has resigned his work effective July 1.

The parsonage of Beverly Hills, Burlington, is now graced with an awning, a recent gift of the Laymen's Fellowship of that church. Rev. Kenneth Register is the minister.

Lafayette Wilkins, a student at Duke Divinity School, began his work as pastor at Zion, near Burlington, N. C., June 4, when he preached the Sunday evening sermon.

A service of dedication for the 34 members on the staff and faculty of the vacation Bible school was held during the morning worship service at South Norfolk June 18.

Rev. Henry Harmon, pastor of Memorial, York, Pa., and former pastor of Haw River, was among those attending the North American Conference on Church and Family, at Green Lakes, Wisconsin, in May. This conference was sponsored jointly by the Canadian Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

Topic of Rev. Carl Wallace's morning sermon at The Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, June 18 was "A Seasonal Indifference."

An evening vacation Bible school — beginning at 6:30 p.m. — was held at Spoon's Chapel June 19-23. The closing program was Sunday evening, June 25.

A PRAYER FOR DRIVERS OF CARS

Almighty God, who dost sanctify the common ways of life, we pray that all who use the roads may ever have the spirit of courtesy and goodwill, of carefulness and self-control; that by our thought for others, we may all be preserved from needless danger and sudden death, and may live to glorify thee in our going out and our coming in.
Amen.

Supt. Fields will be speaking at First Church, Norfolk, at 10:00 a.m. and at South Norfolk at 4:00 p.m. for the installation of the Rev. William Cousins as pastor of the South Norfolk church, Sunday, June 25.

Since their minister, Dr. F. C. Lester, will be away attending the General Council in Philadelphia, members of the High Point church will be in charge of the morning service Sunday, June 25. The service will be held at the parsonage. During the rest of the summer, Sunday services will be held 9:30-11 a.m., with a half hour being devoted to Bible study, a half hour for worship and a half hour for the sermon.

Special service of dedication will be held for the new church building for our Winston-Salem church Sunday afternoon, July 9, at four o'clock.

Sunday, June 11, the Laymen's Fellowship of Holy Neck, Holland, Virginia, met for an evening dinner meeting in the fellowship hall. Hugh West, one of the men of the church, addressed the group. Title of morning sermon delivered at Holy Neck June 11 by the pastor, Rev. Raymond T. Grissom, was "Who Are You?"

DR. GILLETT DIES IN JAPAN

Rev. Dr. Clarence S. Gillett, a Congregational Christian missionary to Japan for 40 years, died June 17, at Sendai, Japan. He was active in relief, evangelistic, and young people's work before joining the faculty of Dosisha University in 1935. Since that time Dr. Gillett had served as an educator; for the last 12 years he had been principal of Shinome Junior and Senior High Schools at Matsuyama.

Dr. Gillett is survived by his wife, also an American Board missionary in Japan.

W. N. C. LAYMEN TO MEET

Clyde Pell, president of the Western North Carolina Laymen's Fellowship, has announced that a conference-wide laymen's rally will be held at Pleasant Ridge, Saturday evening, July 29. This will be "Ladies' Night." Entertainment for the evening will be provided by the well-known quartet, the Carolinians. Western North Carolina laymen and their wives should plan now to attend this meeting.

UNION RIDGE AND PROVIDENCE LAYMEN MEET

By J. C. "Chick" Welch
President, Providence
Laymen's Fellowship

Thirty-six laymen of Union Ridge United Church north of Burlington and twenty-five laymen of Providence United Church of Graham gathered at the Union Ridge Church on Saturday, June 17, 1961. Highlight of the afternoon was a double-header softball game. Providence had a cheering section of thirty-two women and children, but even this did not help enough to keep Union Ridge from swamping Providence in both games. First game score was 7 to 4, with the second 21 to 12. Star of the second game was Dockery Smith, age 72, pinch hitting in the fourth with a single over second and bringing in two runs to tie the score at this time.

Following the softball game Union Ridge charcoaled and served, at the site of their beautiful new picnic area behind the church, wieners with all the trimmings. In this event Providence won the wiener eating contest by far. The Rev. Winfred H. Bray, minister of Union Ridge, won the hotdog eating contest over the Rev. John Littiken, minister of Providence. But Mr. Littiken came back and outdistanced Mr. Bray in the Pepsi drinking event. It was a wonderful fellowship meeting and was enjoyed by all present.

Following the supper a Fellowship service was held in the Fellowship Hall at Union Ridge. President Marvin Bowland conducted the meeting. Highlighting this meeting was group singing of old familiar hymns. It was a treat to hear so many male voices blended. Miss Jane Blalock was pianist. Also featured was a male quartet from Union Ridge singing "How Great Thou Art."

The devotional service was conducted by Mr. Algie Blalock of Union Ridge. It was an inspiration to all present and we are looking forward to many more such Fellowship meetings throughout the Burlington Area in the near future.

The Beulah Church, near Wake Forest, has voted to be a part of the United Church of Christ after voting negative on the Constitution of the United Church of Christ. Churches having voted negative on the Constitution are reminded that they can vote affirmatively on being a part of the United Church of Christ.

HOME FOR THE AGED TO BE BUILT IN KANSAS

For more than two years, leaders in the four Congregational Christian churches in Topeka, Kansas, have been developing plans for the erection of a two and one-half million dollar Congregational Home in Topeka. Now plans have been completed which call for three buildings on a five-acre site. One building will be the home for the director and his family. A second — the main residential building — will be a five-story apartment building containing 141 apartments, a lounge, area for dining and recreation, and a small chapel. The third building will be for residents who need more complete medical care; it will provide infirmary beds and nursing service.

Life-time leases on the apartments vary according to size. Monthly fees vary depending on the units chosen and the services desired.

BIBLE SCHOOL AT LEBANON

By Mrs. Carlton Scott, Reporter

The Semora Community vacation Bible school began Monday, June 12, at Lebanon Christian Church, with our new director, Rev. L. T. Wilkins, assisted by the executive secretary and treasurer, Mrs. S. D. Garrett, and the following teachers and craft leaders: beginners — Misses Carolyn Lockhart, Judy Painter, and Barbara Blaylock; primaries — Mrs. Edwin Barker, Miss Ophelia Barker; juniors — Mrs. Hurley Barker, Mrs. Henry Earp, and Miss Jacqueline Blaylock; teenagers — Mrs. Ezra Stowe, Rev. Lafayette Wilkins, and Mrs. Foster Painter. Pianist was Miss Virginia Barker.

We were most fortunate to have Miss Doris Anne Morris, from Elon College and Charlottesville, Virginia, as director of singing for the week. Under her leadership we had the best group singing we have ever had. We were most grateful for her help.

The school closed Friday, June 16, with each group presenting a part of the final program. Following the program, a picnic lunch was served. A large group of parents and interested friends attended.

The expenses of the Bible school were paid for by Mary Harrison and John B. Taylor in memory of their mother.

This was one of our most successful Bible schools. We are most grateful for the help of the director, Rev. Lafayette Wilkins, and for the help of the other workers in making it a success.

Does your church raise up ministers as fast as it uses them up?

Forward, Together

He is a dumb person indeed who cannot find something in other people, in the community, the nation, the church, with which he does not agree. But he is still worse off if he can find nothing better to do than to "gripe" about what he does not like.

A century ago our grandparents went to war to settle differences of opinion in America. Churches divided. The Christian Church was one which severed national relationships, and the Southern Convention has never quite healed the wound that was caused by that division. We still like to have our own Manual for the conduct of business, our own terminology for Conferences and Convention, our own method of financing, and our freedom to accept or not the leadership of the denomination. Yes, that freedom was sealed in the blood of those who severed ties with England for reasons stated in the Declaration of Independence in 1776; and it is a God-given right.

However, it must be remembered that there are other values to be maintained. "In unity there is strength," and without unity freedom soon fades.

These tragic days challenge Americans to unite behind the idea of freedom and justice for all people everywhere.

But let us think of our Church. Two million members should be able to render real service to humanity. They can if they work together. It is equally possible to fritter away money, time, and opportunity by quibbling over insignificant matters. How the flowers should be arranged in church calls for thought and skill, but that really doesn't matter much. It is not worth hurt feelings and broken friendships. Neither is the parentage of the worshippers. It is the business of Christians to aid all people in the worship of Almighty God, and his Son, our Savior.

"As it was in the beginning, is now, and evermore shall be" may well be applied to the character, purpose, and plans of God, but the idea has little relevance to the progress of the Church. James O'Kelly and his many friends gave the world a new Church with a good name, important principles, and plans for work that were acceptable at that time. He and they were pioneers blazing a new path through young America and denominationalism of their day. Were they living now, they would doubtless be leaders in the union of denominations, and in the social upheaval through which we are passing — willingly or otherwise. Conservatism is needed to prevent radicalism from going too far, but conservatism that will tolerate no change is dangerous. It can be likened to the car driver who insists on going 30 miles in a 60 mile zone. It may cause destruction.

We are now at the starting line of a new adventure in Christian union. It is a thrilling place to be. Racing horses can hardly wait to run from the starting gate — they are so eager to get into the race. Occasionally a senseless one muffs his chance by objecting to the discipline needed to get off to a good start. That could happen in our churches. Nationally the organization will be set in motion at the Philadelphia meeting, goals are before us, plans that call for cooperation — discipline — are clearly defined, elected leaders are ready to call for the start of the race that is to be run before the eyes of an eager world.

But what of those churches that are opposed, or abstain? Will they be in the forefront of the progressive program of Christianity that is so desperately needed in our world? Or will they still be arguing about something that delighted them in the days of childhood, while the Church of Christ moves away and leaves them, like broken limbs on a tree, to fade and die?

Theoretically we agree to progress. But when it means changing something that is precious to us, that is so different that we hesitate, or even oppose the progress. To illustrate: The Southern Convention all five of its conferences, and nearly all of the 205 churches have voted to approve the Constitution of the United Church of Christ, which plainly states that to effect the operation of the General Synod the churches should be regrouped on an area basis. That means, if it means anything, that the Southern Synod, the Convention of the South, and the Southern Convention should soon organize as new Conferences and Associations with the people in the same area working together as part of the United Church of Christ. Each of the three organizations have history of which they are proud. Would it be right for either group to maintain its organization and let the others join them? Will the Southern Convention be willing to merge its organization and program into something new and different in order for the United Church of Christ to function properly in this area. Will The Christian Sun be willing to serve the Christ through the United Church even if its format, dates of issue, cost, and editor must all be changed? That test faces us, and we must face it with Christian humility and courage.

Isn't it wonderful that God has let us be the people to share in this transition period of history, that we can help to unite a divided Church, that we can meet the challenges of social and religious change, that we can share in tuning the minds of the people of the world to the Christ who, if exalted, will draw all men unto him? Christians and communists, ignorant and learned, white and colored — all the people of the world turn their eyes toward us hopefully as we struggle to rise above the history in which we delight, the prejudices that have clung close to us and our forebears, and chart a new course of Christian cooperation and discipline that will move the world a bit closer to the Kingdom of God.

A GREAT WOMAN OF THE CENTURY

June 27, 1961 marks the 81st anniversary of one of the truly great women now alive, who has neither seen nor heard since she was two years old. It is unnecessary, except for history, to state that Helen Keller, world known and world loved, is that woman.

With the avenues of sight and hearing completely blocked, Miss Keller's enriched and enriching life is an achievement which rightly belongs in the category of human miracles.

Shut out from beauty and form and color and shape, the common things millions enjoy, nevertheless in the riches of mind and heart this blind-deaf woman is one of the great humans now inhabiting the earth.

Graduating in 1904 from Radcliffe College, a part of Harvard University, Miss Keller's life has been filled with gracious deeds for others. She still answers many letters and writes books and articles. In addition, she devotes much time to the Foundation For The Blind of which she is counselor.

The case of Helen Keller brings to mind the story of the seventeenth century Italian violinist, Niccolo Paganini, who on one occasion thrilled and inspired his audience with one string of his instrument when other strings broke. The full orbited life of Helen Keller has thrilled and inspired multitudes and will continue to thrill and inspire them for decades, if not centuries, after her passing.

With what others would call crippling handicaps, Helen Keller has climbed the high peaks of knowledge and experience. Out of the dark caverns which shut her out from sound and sight in early childhood, she developed into a useful, magnificent, beautiful and colorful life.

Without self-pity, Miss Keller does not know the uplifting spirit of a child's smile, or the pleasant patter of little feet.

She never experienced the heartfelt glory of seeing a sunrise to awaken a sleeping world, or the crimson glory of a dying day.

She has never seen an indescribable waterfall, the majestic sweep of a river, or the placid waters of a lake.

She has never seen the beauties of spring with its myriad flowers and other plants, or a golden autumn with its bountiful harvest,

She has never seen fields and hills blanketed with snow, or streams stilled by the miracle of ice.

She has never seen the entrancing sight of a million stars that intrigue the mystics and help light the world, or the moon in its ever-changing form.

But this sightless woman urges those who have the boon of physical ability to see never to lose sight of the great joy each day and each night brings. "Cherish your eyes", she often says.

IF WE FIND FAITH DULL

By Thomas H. Britton

Many modern church people have somehow accomplished the most amazing and most tragic miracle of all time. They have taken Christianity, which is the most vital, the most exciting, the most effervescent, the most passionate faith possible, and transformed it into an experience which is tame and boring and dull and insipid and stifling...

If we find faith dull and the church a bore, may it not be because we do not have in our arsenal enough of the ultimate weapon, because we are lacking in the passion and verve of love?

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

ETERNAL LIFE

"These things I have written... that ye may know that ye have eternal life." I John 5:13.

In this epistle the writer has been saying over and over love God, believe on Jesus, love one another. He has been assuring us that he who believes on Jesus has the Spirit of God. Now he makes the point that he has written these things that you may look on the end of life on earth with the assurance of eternal life — "you that believe on the name of the Son of God."

Remember how Jesus, standing under the shadow of the cross, knowingly facing death, said: "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." In the fourth verse of this chapter we read: "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God."

There is something clear and sweet, beautiful sunrise, about Jesus' assurances of eternal life.

"This day thou shalt be with me in paradise!" This very day, going from here, surrounded by all these painful circumstances, ye shall be with me there! For one who had endured as Jesus had endured, lived as Jesus had lived, served as Jesus had served, prayed as Jesus had prayed, taught as Jesus had taught, and stood all the shame and agony he had stood, these words ring like the words of one "able on earth to forgive sins" to a penitent sinner dying by his side.

Remember how when Jesus came to that final major talk before his death he said, among other things, In yon world, in my Father's house, there is room sufficient, "many mansions"; I go to make ready; "let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." "I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also."

He was right; just as he said, he was resurrected; and the Church is the answer. Let us get busy and honor him while we live, and help make the world beautiful as it should be.

Church Delegates

By Clyde L. Fields

Many, if not all, of the churches in the Southern Convention will be having church quarterly conferences during the summer and fall. This would be a good time for the nomination and election of delegates to the fall Conferences and to the Southern Convention, to be held in Eastern Virginia, May 1, 2, 3, 1962. The place of the Southern Convention will be determined by the Executive Board in its fall session.

CONFERENCE—Delegates: (Principles and Government, Chap. V, Sec. 1) "2. Every church shall have lay representation, and each Conference shall fix its own ratio. However, it is recommended that each church shall be entitled to two delegates. Churches having more than 200 members shall have an additional delegate for each 100 members, or major fraction thereof, provided that no church has more than four delegates."

CONVENTION—Delegates: (Principles and Government, Chap. VI, Art. V, Membership) "Churches within the Convention are requested to nominate lay delegates to the Convention. These delegates shall be elected by the Conferences. Each church is entitled to one delegate. Churches which have more than two hundred members are entitled to one additional delegate for each additional two hundred members, or major fraction thereof, provided that no church shall have more than four delegates."

The Superintendent of the Convention would call to the attention of our churches the growing practice of many local churches electing the most able delegates to the Southern Convention and providing for the cost of travel, board, and lodging.

AUDIO VISUAL CONFERENCE

In order that church people may "learn the process of communication, develop skills in communicating the Christian Faith, and learn to help others use Christian audio visual communication" the United Church of Christ, in cooperation with the Disciples of Christ, is sponsoring a Southeastern Regional Audio Visual Conference at Christmont Assembly Grounds, Black Mountain, N. C., July 24-28. Cost: $10.00 for registration fee; $14.50 for room and board. For further information write Rev. Porter Bower, 1501 Race Street, Philadelphia 2, Pennsylvania.

CEA: What's That?

By Ruth H. Dunn

The Christian Education Associates Program is a new program of Christian Education in the United Church of Christ. Several years ago some of our leaders in the Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed fellowships felt that with the merger of the two bodies this would be a wonderful time to initiate a new program of depth study. Thus the idea of the CEA Program was born. Each Christian Education Associate has been asked to give of himself (or herself) for a three-year period of study and service to the churches of his area in the field of Christian Education.

The leaders felt that a person can not know how to teach others until he first studies and knows his own Christian faith and the claims of the Christian gospel upon his own life. For this purpose, eighteen area workshops were set up over the country; the one for this area was held at Camp Hanover, near Richmond, Virginia, May 21-26, 1961. Fifty-two persons were present from North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Four national leaders from the United Church served as leaders for the week. They were: Miss Leila Anderson, Mrs. Robert Semmel, Miss Mildred Widber and the Rev. William Wimer. The purpose of this week-long study was to provide a setting in which persons might experience growth and development in their relationship to God, their fellowmen and the Christian community. Each of the discussion groups throughout the week kept this purpose in mind as we discussed such subjects as: "In What Kind Of A World Do We Live?", "What Does It Mean To Be A Person?" and "What Do We As A Christian Community Have To Communicate?" Bible study each day set the tone of the day and also gave each person a basis of evaluation for the discussion groups which followed.

Emphasis was also given to the new United Church Curriculum, which is in the process of being edited and will be completed for use in 1963. The Nursery curriculum being used in some of our churches, and the Kindergarten materials will be available this fall. We had the opportunity to look at some of the materials in the stage of production and to evaluate it for use in our churches. New strides in communicating the gospel to boys and girls and men and women are anticipated with this new approach to Christian education.

The CEA's divided into groups for further study during the next year.

They hope to be better qualified as leaders in our churches. CEA's in the Southern Convention include: Mrs. Mark Andes, Winchester, Va.; Mrs. Emerson Rohart, Harrisonburg, Va.; Mrs. Tucker Humphries, Franklin, Va.; Mrs. D. B. Smith, Jr., Bay-side, Va.; Mrs. Charles Thomson, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Robert Bew, Wake Forest, N. C.; Rev. Gale Brady, Henderson, N. C.; Mrs. William Joyner, Durham, N. C.; Miss Dorothy Ballinger, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. Winfred Bray, Burlington, N. C.; Rev. Robert Knowles, Elon College, N. C.; Rev. Harold Myers, Burlington, N. C.; and Miss Ruth Dunn, Elon College, N. C.

The greatest value of the CEA Program is that thirteen people in our own Southern Convention churches have had this experience of study, work and worship, and through further study and fellowship hope to be able to help our churches in their programs of Christian education in the years to come. You will be hearing more about this fellowship from time to time as these people work in their own churches and surrounding churches of our area.

Dr. and Mrs. Jack Brown

Write From Turkey

While Jack was ill last fall he was able to get onto paper a plan for re-organizing our surgical service. We have felt that with our new emphasis on training young physicians that we needed a larger, more varied surgical service. We feel that the main thing we have to give to young doctors we train is what we hope is an added sense of caring about their patients, but at the same time we want to and can instill a sense of professional competence and alertness. Just last week the first doctors were invited and the agreement was signed with them. Both of them accepted our offer to join our staff readily, and have been in on decisions made about the surgical service and consultations about patients already. We are seeking actively for a surgical resident, and expect it won't be long before one turns up. Jack has two young men he is working with in internal medicine at the moment, one a regular resident, the other a young man who wants to learn all he can before he goes to America to begin a residency there. Afternoons (after the clinic) are full for Jack with conferences with these fellows and with the internal medicine man on our staff who is one of the grand old men of medicine in Gaziantep.

The work-camp is now definitely coming off for this summer from the first week in August to early September. The camp will be jointly sponsored by the Turkish Work Camps Promotion Association and the American Friends Service Committee. We've been working here locally with our new Governor — new since the revolution. Jack and the Turkish Department of Agriculture men interested in the work-camp and two other interested local citizens met with the Governor one afternoon for an hour after a brief previous meeting where he had promised financial backing for the board and room of the campers. The City Engineer had been called in to the second meeting and they discussed projects needed both in villages near here and in the city. The next day they all hopped into cars and went to the villages involved and made their decision as to which project the local people prefer.

There is a village about 15 kilometers from Gaziantep which has one of the few local youth 4-H clubs. In Turkey it is called 4-K. For some time the agriculturalists have been planning on building a small room as a community room in this village so that the 4-H group and other groups could meet. When they begin to meet more actively the agriculturalists are certain that they can help the village raise its standards of breeding chickens, livestock, etc. The campers will build this room and do all they can to work with the youth and other organizations in the village toward improving standards of all sorts — agricultural, health, etc. It hasn't been decided yet exactly where the campers will live, but the most likely spot is a tent grouping near the village. We want

- 2—Miss Elizabeth Tuers was secretary to the mayor of Nutley, New Jersey, when she went to Near East for 3 years in 1954. She is now in her second term and is secretary to the president of Aleppo College and head of the commercial department. This is the only American-sponsored school in Syria.

TURKEY
Ankara

Capital of Turkey since 1923, when the ancient Hittite city of Ancyras was renamed and modernized overnight. Population of 453,000 with 5,000 Americans connected with various government programs.

- 3—Dr. and Mrs. William L. Nute, Jr. (1948) are now in Ankara where he works in new Children's Hospital; he was director of American Clinic in Adana 1951-54 and then medical consultant in American Board office in Boston one year. He was born in Turkey where his father was a medical missionary.

Gaziantep

City of 110,000 in south central Turkey, not far from Syria. Market center for many surrounding villages.

- 4—Miss Hilaria Alaan grew up on Mindanao Island in the Philippines, where she went to Mindanao Institute and was active in local church work. After college and nurses' training she worked 3 years in Brokenshire Hospital (American Board). Now she is studying language and then will be nurse for 5-year term on staff of Azariah Smith Memorial Hospital. She is not only missionary of American Board but also of United Church of Christ in the Philippines.
- 5—Dr. and Mrs. Jack Brown are at Azariah Smith Hospital, where he works with several Turkish doctors, making daily rounds in 49-bed hospital before going to out-patient clinic. Some patients come from 400 miles away. They have started a group of Turkish couples who meet for religious discussions.
- 6—Miss May Bryant worked at Duke University Hospital and Yale School of Nursing and was U. S. Army nurse. She is serving 5 years as nurse at Smith Hospital, where she is in charge of operating room. She also has classes of cooking and sewing for the nurses.
- 7—Miss Clara Anna Engle served at Smith Hospital, Gaziantep, 1947-54; 1954-57 at American University Hospital, Beirut; then taught at School of Nursing at Michigan State 1958-60; now she is back in Gaziantep as a nurse.
- 8—Miss Isabel Hemingway, who has visited the Southern Convention, teaches students in the school of nursing at Smith Memorial Hospital. She was born in China, where her parents were missionaries, and where she was a missionary nurse. She transferred to Near East in 1952, and was first at Talas Clinic. She is a fourth-generation missionary.

Elon College Receives $100,000 Gift For Dormitory

Following receipt of an anonymous gift of $100,000 to Elon College, construction work is moving ahead rapidly on the second and third floors of a new dormitory for women at the college.

In announcing the gift, Dr. J. E. Danieley, president of Elon, stated that "it comes to us from friends who are deeply interested in Christian higher education in general and in Elon College in particular."

Although Dr. Danieley stated that he is unable to reveal the names of the donors, he declared that they have meant much to Elon College through the years.

"All of us are deeply grateful for their devoted Christian lives and for this significant example of Christian stewardship," he said, and he continued, "It is deeply satisfying that their generosity will make possible this new addition to our physical plant. I know that I speak for alumni and friends of the college everywhere when I express our sincere appreciation for this benefaction."

Construction on the new dormitory was begun last summer when the first floor was constructed and given a temporary roof to make possible the use of that floor for women students during the past college year. The structure is located on the northwest corner of the Elon campus and replaces the old Ladies' Hall.

As a result of the anonymous gift, the second and third floors are scheduled for completion this summer in time for occupancy when the fall term begins in September. Applications have already been accepted for the additional dormitory space.

The new dormitory will furnish accommodations for 80 women students and an apartment for a dormitory hostess, giving Elon College rooms for 228 women during the coming year. The college also has accommodations for 318 men students, giving a total of 546 dormitory students expected for the fall term.

Graduates Receive Awards

Seven Elon College seniors have been awarded graduate fellowships, scholarships or teaching assignments to be used in advanced study next year.

Hugh Gravitt, III, of Virgilina, Virginia, a chemistry major, has been selected to participate in the Master of Arts in Teaching program at Duke University, a program sponsored by the Ford Foundation.

William W. Parham, of Henderson, North Carolina, another chemistry major, has accepted a post as graduate teaching assistant in the department of chemistry at Clemson College, Clemson, South Carolina.

Charles G. Hall, of Stoneville, North Carolina, has been selected for an assistantship at North Carolina State College in the department of experimental-statistics. He will continue his studies in statistics and math at the institution.

Herbert Hawkes, a physical education major from Louisville, Kentucky, will serve as a graduate teaching assistant in the department of physical education at the University of North Carolina for the coming year.

Kenneth Price, also a chemistry major, from Danville, Va., is the recipient of a graduate fellowship in the department of biochemistry at Western Reserve University at Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. Helen Misenheimer, of Burlington, a French and English major, has been appointed to an assistantship in the Duke University Graduate School, where she plans to continue her studies.

Robert James Troy, of Burlington, history major, has received the Pi Gamma Mu Scholarship Award presented by the North Carolina Alpha Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, National Social Science Honor Society.

Prof. Roy Epperson, member of the Elon chemistry faculty, has been chosen for advanced study in an institute for college chemistry teachers, which will be held this summer at the University of North Carolina under auspices of the National Science Foundation.

Youth Faces The Future

David Andes

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Youth Serves Through Work

The largest work camp program ever conducted by the World Council of Churches is now underway. The first camp opened April 6 in Thailand and the last will close November 7 in West Pakistan.

In all some 1200 Christian young people from all over the world will participate in the 53 work camps sponsored by the youth department of the World Council of Churches in 36 countries. Two hundred and fifty of the young people are from the United States, recruited under the Ecumenical Voluntary Service of the National Student Christian Federation, an affiliate of the National Council of Churches.

The Rev. Ralph Weltge, an Evangelical and Reformed Church minister from St. Louis, Missouri and work camp secretary for the World Council of Churches headquarters in Geneva, said that the 1961 program is the largest yet conducted under the Council's sponsorship. Six camps were held in 1948 when the Congregational Christian Service Committee pioneered the idea of teams of Christian young people engaged in post-war reconstruction work in Europe.

The Protestant, Orthodox and Anglican youth, who will serve without pay for an average of four weeks, will dig foundations or lay bricks for schools, houses, chapels and refugee centers. They will also build roads, plant trees, help in shipping relief commodities to distressed areas, and serve in hospitals and homes for the mentally ill and aged.

Among the work camps to be held this summer will be one on the island of Lan Tao in Hong Kong, where the volunteers will engage in construction work for a dope addiction rehabilitation center of the Hong Kong Christian Welfare and Relief Council.

Another group will work in Hildesheim, Germany, where the Inner Mission of the Evangelical Church in Germany maintains a ministry to gypsies and the homeless. The volunteers will provide recreational facilities and will clear the land on which a school will later be built for gypsy children.

Still another group will work under the direction of the local Catholic priest in Noisy-le-Grand near Paris, where the well-known Abbe Pierre established temporary housing facilities for the aged and unemployed. The camp will engage in construction work at the site, where some 250 families and more than 1,000 children presently are living.

For the fifth year, a camp will be conducted at the Wilgespruit Fellowship Center, an interracial youth conference area in South Africa. A leadership training course will be taught there this year in light of the need for an ecumenical encounter between races, and the volunteers will also engage in the construction of an extension to the chapel and grounds development.

Seven work camps will be conducted in the United States. One group will assist in the repair of tenements in New York's Harlem slum area. Another, restricted to medical students, will be held in Oakland, California. Participants will hold full-time jobs within the medical profession, and will seek to relate Christian faith to the profession.

In all, 26 camps will be held in 14 countries in Europe and the Middle East; 11 will be conducted in as many Asian nations; four are scheduled in Africa, and the remaining 12 will be held in North and South America.

This year's work camp program will run from April 6 through November 7, the last two being conducted in Ceylon and West Pakistan.

Among the volunteers for both of these projects will be youth delegates to the third assembly of the World Council of Churches, which will be held in New Delhi, India, November 18 — December 6.

The campers range in age between 19 and 30, Mr. Weltge said. Each camp numbers between 20 to 30 persons and is, as far as possible, international, interracial and interdenominational in character.

"An ecumenical work camp aims to bring together a group of young Christians of many different backgrounds to live together as a Christian community and to work on a project where their help is needed," he said. "In so doing, the young people learn to know and understand better the ideas, customs, beliefs and national and church backgrounds of other youth."

A typical camp program includes an average of 36 hours manual work each week, daily worship, discussions on topics of current interest, Bible study, recreation, excursions, and meetings with members of the local community.

UNION RIDGE P. F. HONORS FATHERS

By Helen Keck, Secretary

Fathers were honored at Union Ridge, Burlington, N. C., on Sunday, June 18, by the Senior Pilgrim Fellowship. Each member of the P. F. group sat with his father in a special reserved section during the worship service. The oldest father present in the congregation, Mr. John Clark, and the youngest father, Mr. Glenn Walker, were recognized. Eloise McCauley, president of the Senior P. F., presented to each of them a year's subscription to The Christian Sun.

On Mother's Day, this group held a special program in which the mothers were honored in a similar way.

Salaries For Church Workers

Discounts embarrass the minister and lower the dignity of the church in the sight of the community, a group of church consultants recently agreed. Clergy salaries, financial practices by churches, and employee conditions were among subjects of intensive study at a three-day Consultation on the Economic Practices of the Churches.

Believed to be the first meeting of its kind, it was convened by the Department of the Church and Economic Life of the National Council of Churches at Warwick, N. Y.

The minister's compensation, those discussing this problem agreed, is not a question of "paying him what he's worth." The crucial question, they said is: How much income must he have to do his work most effectively? His salary should not be computed at a level which anticipates his accepting clerical discounts for goods and services, nor should he find it necessary to keep fees for weddings, baptisms and funerals. These, they said, should go into the church treasury. In their view, a local church budget should also include separate items for the minister's transportation costs, professional literature, entertaining on behalf of the church, and expenses for in-service training at study seminars and church conferences.

Salaries paid to lay employees of local churches are often below standard, the consultants found, particularly for sextons. "Going rates" of pay in the community were urged for all employees, except retired workers, and should include regular fringe benefits. Discussing wages and personnel practices, they also found that continued study is necessary of church employment practices in relation to Christian vocation and the ministry of the laity.

In discussions of the ethics of fund-raising, the consultants agreed that "the primary basis should be gratitude and obedience," and to ask people to give on the basis of tax deduction is a legitimate but secondary appeal. "In general," they agreed, "giving because it will make you do as well as your neighbor, or to fight communism and the like, should all be classified as secondary motivations and, in most cases, unworthy."

The Pilgrim Fellowship at Lee's Chapel is planning to grow sweet potatoes as a group money-raising project. In order to raise money to pay for the potato plants and fertilizer, the group is making and selling cakes and pies.

Benjamin Franklin's Advice

The pages of the June issue of The Upper Room were written by laymen. The page for June 29 was written by a Mr. M. A. Childers, a Texas lawyer. He takes an incident from the early days of American history and shows how our fathers turned to God and found guidance and help for a trying situation. The conditions of life about us today are not what they were then, but in our perplexity, in our baffling tangle, and in our threatening outlook we may be facing a situation that is even more serious than that which confronted those early fathers. I am going to take the liberty of quoting from Mr. Childers' comment in the hope that Benjamin Franklin's counsel will be hearkened to in our day as it was in the early days. Here is the quotation:

After the Constitutional Convention, meeting in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, had debated for five long weeks to no avail, Benjamin Franklin arose and addressed the assembly in May, 1787. He said:

"In this situation of this assembly, groping, as it were, in the dark to find political truth, and scarce able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened, Sir, that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding? . . ."

Thereupon Franklin offered this motion:

"That hereafter prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessings on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business; and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service." I wonder whether the feeling of the need of divine guidance in those early days has not slipped from us, and if we should not renew this call for God's guidance and help in the present hour?

SUMMER STORM

Silence lays her mantle gently.

Trembling leaves hang limp and still.

Darkened clouds ominously gather
Merging sky and distant hill.

Burning sun no longer brazen,
Slinks beneath a heavy veil
Of racing blackness in the heavens,
Reluctant to see earth's travail.

Gusts of wind now shake the forest.
Silver slashes cut the sky.
Thunder, like great organ music,
Crashes with an anguished cry.

Nature joins in one great chorus.
All in majesty conform
In the triumph of the splendor
Of her symphony of storm.

South Norfolk Women

The Women's Fellowship of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church held its regular bi-monthly meeting Thursday evening June 15, 1961, in the social hall of the church. Mrs. Carlton Chappell, Spiritual Life Chairman, conducted the devotions with the theme "Love One Another" taken from I John 4:1-11. In the building of houses, roofs are to protect and are vital to any building. Therefore, we need a roof over our spiritual houses. God's love is the roof over the Christian. God sent his Son because of his love. We should love in deed and in truth.

Mrs. Harris, vice president, spoke on the "Abiding of God's Love Which Is Over All." She read the hymn "O Love that Wilt Not Let Me Go" written by Dr. George Matheson, emphasizing that love came down from heaven because God was gracious. After a prayer, she told the narrative of Ruth's love for Naomi. The closing hymn was "More Love to Thee." Mrs. W. B. Evans is the president.

The Fellowship will sponsor the reception immediately following the installation service of the minister, Rev. William A. Cousins on Sunday afternoon June 25, of which Mrs. Clarence N. Harris is the chairman.

In the Solomon Islands off the South Pacific it is taboo for unmarried native women to eat anything in the presence of unmarried men.

Prayers For 4th of July

God of our fathers, who didst kindle in them the love of liberty and did grant them such faith in thee and courage, that wide seas and strange shores were overpassed and eagerly embraced; bestow upon us, their children, in our day, a love of liberty like to theirs; and prevent us by thy hand, that we neither grow faint in faith nor fail in courage.

O Thou who speakest to every age and land and hast never left thy children without witness to thy will; grant to us, in this land, amid the clangors and confusions of this time, to hear thy still small voice speaking through blessed memories, awakened conscience, and the hope of thy kingdom's coming. So order our hearts and minds before thee, O God, that hearing we shall obey and not be slothful in well-doing; and then, in thy great goodness, fulfill thine ancient promise made to such as obey thy command: that thou wouldst send peace like a river and wouldst make righteousness to be as the waves of the sea.

Andrew, Fisher Of Men

Background Scripture: Matthew 4:18-20; Mark 3: 14-19; John 1:35-44; 6:8-9; 12:20-22.

Devotional Reading: II Corinthians 5:11-20.

Memory Selection: Follow me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.
Mark 1:17

We talk about the shortage of ministers, and there is a shortage of ministers. But what we need most desperately is not more ministers but more Andrews. If there were more Andrews, the shortage of ministers would not be so critical. Christian ministers are needed to proclaim the good news from the pulpit, but Christian laymen are needed to witness to the pew. This lesson presents in a simple way the secret of a growing church and the supreme method of enlisting people in the Kingdom of God. Let us look at the story in its simplicity.

A Fisher — A Fisher of Men

There are two accounts of how Andrew became a disciple of Jesus. Matthew tells us that Jesus was walking by the Sea of Galilee and saw Simon and Andrew, who were brothers, casting their nets into the sea, FOR THEY WERE FISHERS. He said unto them "Follow me, and I will make you FISHERS OF MEN." Mark puts it "I will make you TO BECOME FISHERS OF MEN" and there is significance in the words "to become." John, on the other hand indicates that two men saw Jesus as He walked along, and heard John the Baptist say "Behold the Lamb of God." These two men, one of whom was Andrew, followed Jesus, and spent a memorable afternoon and perhaps evening with him. We do not know what was said or what went on between the men that afternoon, but we do know that Andrew was won to Christ and became one of his most faithful and fruitful disciples and apostles. He gave up his work as a fisher and became a fisher of men. He became the PATRON SAINT OF PERSONAL WORKERS. There are several references to him in today's lesson, but we will do well to consider only a couple of them. We will discuss the first under the topic "A Formula For Personal Workers."

A Formula For Personal Workers

First, Andrew had an experience of Christ which he wanted to share. As has been said, we do not know what the Master talked about that afternoon the two disciples spent with him. But He said something, or did something, that won Andrew's allegiance. Andrew had an experience with Christ that was real and vivid and vital. And he wanted to share it with others. Because Christ meant so much to him, he wanted to share Christ with others. Now there are many reasons why people, why Christians, do not do personal work, but one of the main reasons is that they do not have anything to share. Christ does not mean enough to them to impel them to share him with others. They do not care enough to do anything about it. Let every man examine himself on this point. How many readers of these NOTES have made an honest and earnest effort to win someone to Christ during the past six months? How much does Christ mean to you? How much do you care whether others become followers of Christ too? The plain and pathetic truth is that we just do not care enough to do anything about it, that is personally. Someone has said 'If a person is a Socialist or a Communist, I will know it in twenty four hours; if he is a member of a labor union I will know it in a few days. But if he is a member of a church it may be years before I will ever learn about it.' A sobering and stinging question arises — WHY? Andrew found in Christ something that he wanted to share with others.

In the second place, Andrew began where he was. He first found his brother Simon Peter. This was an acid test. There are those who would gladly tell the heathen about Christ — or they think they would — but they will not tell the person next to them about him. They will speak to others about him, but they would not think of speaking to members of their own family about him. But Andrew began where he was. He won his brother first to Jesus. That is sound strategy for evangelism. Win the man next to you. Begin at home. Begin where you are. The fact is that if we will not speak to the one next to us, we are not likely to speak to the one far away.

In the third place, these disciples allowed Christ to make his own appeal. Their reply to those who raised questions or began to argue was "Come and see." The fact is that not many people are "argued into religion." Often when we win an argument we lose a man. Our main task is not to argue but to introduce men to Jesus Christ. He can stand on his own merit. If only men see him, they will be drawn to him. When we begin to talk to men about Christ and discipleship, and men are inclined to argue, it is enough to say, "Take him at his word, Come and see, commit yourself to him, let him make his own appeal.

Here is a formula for sure and steady growth. A dozen consecrated laymen, fishers of men, could do more in a community in a year than the highest powered evangelist. And with more lasting results! The next great revival of religion will come through lay evangelism, and not through mass evangelism, believe it or not. Mass evangelism has a value, but it is not the formula of successful evangelism for the future.

Thou Art — Thou Shalt Be

When Jesus beheld him (Peter) he said, "Thou art Simon the son of John; thou shalt be called Peter, which is by interpretation a stone. "Thou art — thou shalt be. It was the Master's way with men. He saw not, as men saw, only the outward appearance; He saw the finer possibilities, He saw what men by his grace might become. And by helping men to see these finer possibilities and helping them to believe in them. He has transformed countless lives and redeemed thousands of seemingly hopeless people. To help a person to believe in himself, to awaken him to his higher possibilities, to stimulate him by a sincere confidence and faith in him — this is one of the greatest gifts one can give to another. It was Christ's way.

AT OUR CHURCH HOME FOR CHILDREN

Summer Activities

Walstein W. Snyder, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

This week, June 18-24, Superintendent Snyder is serving as Dean of the Junior High Camp at Moonelon. This camp opens the season at Moonelon and we are sure that all the boys and girls are enjoying the experience. Five of our children are attending this camp. They are: Patsy Beaman, Virginia Rogers, Marie Turner, Herbert Parker and Tommy West. Some of these children are being sent to camp by their sponsors and others are attending through the courtesy of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship. Five of our girls are registered for a Junior Camp in July and we hope that several others may attend a camp before the summer is over. We are most grateful to the Southern Convention P. F. and to class sponsors who are making it possible for a number of our boys and girls to have the experience of attending summer camp.

Last week our younger children, through the sixth grade, attended Vacation Bible School at the Elon College Community Church. This past Sunday Dr. William J. Andes reported that the church had a well planned, efficiently directed and capably taught Bible School and for the first time it was conducted entirely on the premises of the church property. In years past the Bible School for our church has been scattered over the campus of the college and in our parish house and for a year or two was held as a sort of day-camp Bible School at Moonelon. It is a joy to have the proper facilities to hold the Bible School on our own grounds.

It is generally quiet around our office on these fine summer days. The boys at Johnston Hall who are not on vacation spend several hours a day working with Mr. Perkins in the gardens. This week they have been setting out strawberry plants given to us by Mr. W. C. Way of Liberty, N. C. At other times they are occupied with cultivating the garden crops, or putting in crops for later use. Soon green beans will be coming in in quantities for placing in the freezer. This will be a busy time for the boys in getting them picked and then the girls will have the work of preparing them for the freezer.

The School of Missions is being held at Elon College this week and some of our older boys and girls help in various ways. The boys assist the ladies with their luggage as they arrive on Tuesday and depart on Friday. Four or five of our older girls will help to serve the meals to the ladies at the Elon College dining hall. We hope that all of the ladies attending the School of Missions will find the time to visit our Home, especially to see the new cottages.

We want to invite all of our friends to visit us and see the improvements being made on our campus. Sunday afternoon is the usual visiting time on our campus. However, if you happen to be passing through Elon at any other time during the week we will be happy to have you stop by and pay us a call.

Final Court Decision On Merger

New York, June 16 — Leaders of the United Church of Christ today hailed the decision of Federal Judge Edward J. Dimock, rendered Thursday, June 15, as removing the last legal effort to frustrate the union of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Judge Dimock's decision, unless appealed, ends 12 years of litigation. The judge dismissed the suit on the grounds that all the issues had been decided previously in litigation in the New York State Courts.

Opponents of the union sought an injunction in a law suit brought in 1949 in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. Ultimately, the New York Court of Appeals, in 1955, ruled that the suit was without merit and dismissed the action. Another suit was then brought in the Federal Court in 1957 and this was dismissed by Judge Dimock yesterday.

"Opponents of the union have now had their two 'days in court,'" said Rev. Dr. Fred Hoskins, New York, and Rev. Dr. James E. Wagner, Philadelphia, co-presidents of the United Church of Christ. "The first, after six years of litigation, was a decision on the merits. The second, after five more years, effectively decides that the time for litigation is over and that the way is open for all the proper new activities of the United Church of Christ."

Apportionments Approved

The following letter from Rex Powell, Chairman of Apportionment for the Eastern North Carolina Conference, is an expression of his feeling toward the apportionment, and might be of interest to others.

Superintendent Clyde L. Fields

Dear Clyde:

As Chairman of the Apportionment Committee for Eastern North Carolina, I would like to add a word in behalf of its support. I would like to say that we are still using the same formula in arriving at the apportionment that has been used for a number of years, and it is the fairest method of allocating the expenses of our denomination to the various churches. With the rising cost in the last few years I am gratified that we have kept the apportionment down as low as we have.

The apportionment to the various churches is very fair and equitable and I encourage each church to raise as a minimum the apportionment that has been assigned to it.

I look forward to the day when we as a conference will be giving as much for others as for ourselves.

With kind regards and best wishes, I am

Sincerely

to make sure we have a fairly convenient yet fairly healthy place for the campers to live. We feel that this sort of project has all kinds of possibilities — in stimulating the village, in stimulating the Gaziantep citizens by the addition of a group half Turks, half foreigners to their environs, and in presenting an opportunity for those campers who come to get a good picture of one of the more conservative areas of Turkey.

Last night was another meeting of our religious discussion group. This year each couple is doing a study of one of the world's great religions and then at our meetings we're discussing them. For the last two sessions it has been our turn to present Christianity. We found one of the hardest things we had to do was to present basic Protestant beliefs while at the same time admitting that Roman Catholics and Eastern Orthodox doctrine parted company with Protestants at many points. We have been amazed to find that in this part of the world when one says "I'm a Christian" the average person takes that to mean you are either Eastern Orthodox or Roman Catholic. This group, of course, was more enlightened from the beginning — they expected the Protestant point of view from us, and they obviously feel that the Protestant point of view is the only one that makes any sense to them, but at the same time they are always showing their amazement at such things as the fact that Protestants have subjected the Bible to historical criticism. In the group there are four Christians, counting our new hospital manager, George Privratsky, and his wife, who have just begun to come, one Jew, and seven Muslims.

Watch For TV Series

Check your local television listings for the time of the new series, "Press vs. Clergy," on the program Frontiers of Faith (Sundays, 1:30-2:00 p.m., E.D.T.). Some of the questions which will be discussed during the coming weeks are: "What's happening to morals? Does science threaten belief in God? Dare we disarm? Are the press, television, and radio fostering juvenile delinquency? Is Christianity standing up to Communism? Can Protestants accomplish anything by talking to Catholics?"

Among the speakers for the clergy will be James E. Wagner, co-president of the United Church of Christ; Robert W. Spike, of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches; W. Sterling Cary, minister of Grace Congregational Church, New York City; Carl Henry, editor of Christianity Today; and Eugene Carson Blake, Stated Clerk, United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Speakers for the press will include Harold Milks, Associated Press correspondent to Cuba and Russia; Victor Riesel, labor columnist; and Emmet Dedmon, managing editor of the Chicago Sun-Times.

Food For Babies

"I will sacrifice my feet and my hands for you."

This was the Turkish mother's way of expressing her gratitude to those who had come from the mission clinic to teach her how to feed her baby solid food. Her baby was fourteen months old and had never had anything to eat but mother's milk, because she did not know how to prepare anything he could eat.

Malnutrition among babies is one of the worst problems facing Dr. Jack Brown, our American Board missionary doctor in Gaziantep, Turkey. At his clinic, they tell the mothers how they can cook certain grains for their little ones. But they decided the mothers would learn better if they could see the food prepared. So the clinic nurse and the doctor's wife started going to the little mud brick homes to show the mothers how to cook grain for their babies.

The results were gratifying. As all the relatives crowded around to watch the experiment, they boiled a cup of milk and added a big spoonful of grain. While the mother held him they fed the emaciated child his first solid food. He gobbled it up — and the mother was so thrilled she was willing to sacrifice her feet and her hands.

Such health education is part of Our Christian World Mission to "the least of these."

The Lad In The Midst

When the problem of how to feed the multitude arose, it was Andrew who said "There is a lad here with five barley loaves and two small fishes." Andrew, the Patron Saint of the Individual, saw the possibilities of that boy and his little lunch. How we need Andrews to help us to discover the possibilities of the boys and girls in our home, the potentialities of our young people. Here they are, all around us. Within their lives, all unsuspected and unrealized, are tremendous possibilities and potentialities. To discover them, to inspire them, to direct them, to train them, to guide them, to enlist them is one of life's highest privileges and greatest achievements.

Your Summer Vacation

June marks the beginning of our summer season. Schools have closed, summer activities have begun and we adjust ourselves to new routines and a change of pace.

This is an invitation to include the church in your summer vacation. In Nature, the summer is a season of productivity and fruitfulness. In the life of the spirit, this summer can be quite as productive for every one of us. Recreation is designed to be creative. Here are some suggestions to help make it so.

Summer is a good time to read. New books are on display in the local libraries. May I recommend Dr. Fosdick's latest, "Dear Mr. Brown," a book designed to help people in periods of religious perplexity develop a more mature faith. The new translation of "The English Bible" or one of J. B. Phillips' translations gives us new insights into the Book which most of us revere, but seldom read.

Summer is a time to pray. How else can we draw upon Divine resources for guidance and strength?

Summer is a time to worship — in our church each Sunday when possible. If you are planning a visit to friends out of town, come to the early service. When you are out of town, visit another church and bring the bulletin back with you. Share with us things about the church or the service which impressed you.

Summer is a time for the family. Worship together, play together, work together — really do all the things you've been planning to do for a long time.

Summer is a time for friendship. Now, if ever, we have the time to become better acquainted with one another. Picnics, cook-outs, camping, trips to interesting places can be shared with our friends — and our lives will be richer and happier.

There is nothing seasonal about our need for God. There should be nothing seasonal about our Christian commitment. The "business as usual" sign stands over the church door. Join with us in work and worship for a summer of creative and satisfying endeavor.

Not in vain the distance beacons; forward, forward let us range,
Let the great world spin forever down the ringing grooves of change.
Thro' the shadow of the globe we sweep ahead to heights sublime,
We, the heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time.

Yea, we dip into the future, far as human eye can see,
See the vision of the world, and the wonder that shall be,
Hear the war drum throb no longer, see the battle flags all furl'd,
In the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World.

—Alfred Tennyson, 1842

Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.

—Psalm 33:12

Trust in him at all times; ye people, pour out your heart before him; God is a refuge for us.

—Psalm 62:8

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

—From the Declaration of Independence

God of the nations, near and far, ruler of all mankind,
Bless thou thy people as they strive the paths of peace to find.

O Father! from the curse of war we pray thee give release,
And speed, oh, speed the blessed day of justice, love, and peace.

Here And There Among The Churches

Rev. Mack Welch, pastor at Reidsville, was the guest speaker for a revival at our church in Lanett, Alabama, the week of June 18.

Sermon topic used by Rev. Bland Leebrick at Apple's Chapel Sunday morning, June 25, was "The Man Who Is the Talk of the Town."

Rev. Robert Happel of the Office of Evangelism of the United Church of Christ will return to the Southern Convention and Southern Synod for "Tune Up" meetings in preparation for the forthcoming TRPM. The meetings will be held for the Burlington Area on July 16th, for Asheboro Area on July 17, 7:30 p.m. and for the Eastern Virginia Area on July 20, Suffolk Christian Church, 8 p.m. E. & R. and C. C. Churches will be joining together for this evangelistic effort.

Mr. Roger Gibbs of Greensboro was the guest speaker for the morning worship service Sunday, July 2, at our Southern Pines church. Mr. Gibbs was formerly director of music and supply pastor of that church.

A service of meditation and prayer held in Whitley Auditorium, Elon College, at 7:30 a.m., June 27, marked the beginning of J. Earl Danieley's fifth year as president of the college. This service was under the direction of Rev. John Graves; students, faculty, trustees and friends were invited. A similar service has been held each year of Dr. Danieley's presidency on July 1, the date on which he took office; this year it was held on an earlier date, because Dr. Danieley was attending the General Council in Philadelphia July 1.

Sermon topics used Sunday morning, June 25: Dr. Frank Hamilton, The Christian Temple, "Disturbing Visions"; Rev. Kenneth D. Register, Beverly Hills, "The Set of Mind."

Rev. Julius Rice, pastor of Bayside, will attend the Summer Pastor's School, Deering, New Hampshire, July 10 - August 4. During his absence the guest speakers for the morning worship services will be Supt. Clyde Fields, Rev. Winfred Bray, and Mrs. LeRoy Ober.

A LONG TIME BETWEEN

It will be a long time between this paper and the next issue. Because the printers do not work the week of July 4 this issue was mailed four days early. Because we always omit one issue in the summer and another in the winter, there will be no paper dated July 11. The next issue will be July 18.

Until then, be careful, be good, and God bless you every one.

First, Winchester, is joining with Centenary Evangelical and Reformed Church of that city in sponsoring a United Church of Christ vacation church school June 26 - July 7. Teachers from both churches are being used, and where it is possible teachers from both churches are being placed in each class.

TWO CORRECTIONS:

Lafayette Wilkins is the new pastor at Lakeview, not at Zion, as was previously stated.

The cost of the new sanctuary at Bethlehem (Nans.) is $140,000, not $40,000.

WOMEN CONDUCT CHURCH SERVICE AT MT. ZION

By Myrtle Shepherd

The women of Mt. Zion, Mebane, N. C. conducted the morning worship service on Father's Day, June 18. Mrs. Odis Johnson served as pianist and Kay Hargis and Melba Newlin were the acolytes.

The call to worship was given by Miss Elizabeth Strayhorn and the invocation by Mrs. Hugh Blalock. Mrs. Frances Tate read the "Dedication to Rev. Glenn Garrett" as the entire Father's Day program was dedicated to him. Another surprise was in store for Mr. Garrett when the Sunday school stood and sang "Happy Birthday" to him, for it was not only Father's Day but his birthday.

Mrs. Billy Tate led the responsive "Statement of Faith." The senior choir sang "This is My Father's" and Miss Judy Crutchfield sang for the offertory "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

The scripture, Deuteronomy 6:1-7, Proverbs 6:20-23 and Luke 11:9-13, was read by Miss Lillian Sharpe. Mrs. Jean Tate led the morning prayer and Mrs. Tate Smith gave the offertory prayer. Mrs. Wade Tate gave the announcements, and Mrs. Ruth Wilson read a poem entitled "A Christian Father." Flowers were placed in the church by the Wilkerson family in honor of Mr. Gorman Wilkerson.

The morning message, centering around the idea of the Fatherhood of God, was given by Mrs. Kathleen Parker and Mrs. Betty Garrett. Prayers were led by Mrs. Mary Claire Tate and Mrs. Lillian Oakley. Mrs. Clarence Atkins, Mrs. Frank Tate, Mrs. Percy Terry and Mrs. Wilbur Poole were the ushers.

Church Name Change

NEW NAME — The Rev. Carl Wallace, pastor, points out the new name of his church in Southern Pines.

Seldom does a church change its name, but that's what has happened to the former Church of Wide Fellowship (Congregational Christian) of Southern Pines.

Officially, it's now The United Church of Christ (Church of Wide Fellowship).

A new sign has been painted outside the church, and new stationery has been printed.

Here is the background and the story of the change, as explained by the pastor, the Rev. Carl Wallace:

The Church of Wide Fellowship was organized in 1895 by Congregationalists and until 1927 was known as the First Congregational Church. The building of a new sanctuary at that time and the fact that the church was largely assuming a community responsibility, before the advent of several other denominations in Southern Pines, led to the title, "The Church of Wide Fellowship."

In 1931, the Congregational denomination merged with the Christian Church and the local denominational affiliation was changed to Congregational Christian. However, this did not change the local "Wide Fellowship" title.

Now, after several years of planning, the Congregational Christian denomination has merged with the Evangelical and Reformed Church to form The United Church of Christ.

The Church of Wide Fellowship voted at the Annual Meeting in January, 1961, to become a part of this new merged denomination and on May 17, 1961, voted to change the local title.

Ministry To Migrants In Virginia

The Virginia Council of Churches' varied ministry to agricultural migrants is now in full operation on the Eastern Shore where a staff of twenty persons is at work. A new development in the Eastern Shore ministry is a program for children of Mexican-American parents in Northampton County. Activities include lessons in English, health, creative activities, music, stories and recreation.

Additional Programs

The two child care centers at Mappsville and Cheriton operated by the Council are providing care for little children from early morning until late evening while parents work in the fields. The day school at the Mappsville Camp and the educational center at Melfa are changing days from dullness to creative learning experiences for those above nursery age. A kindergarten in the Catawba Camp near Roanoke will be in operation in the late summer and fall.

Chaplains

Four chaplains, assisted by the teaching staff and a number of volunteers, are providing religious services. Sunday schools, counseling and a variety of services in approximately thirty-five Eastern Shore camps. Late in the season chaplains will be provided for camps in Princess Anne, Albemarle, Roanoke and Frederick counties.

Contributions Needed

Because of the heavy summer expense of the Migrant Ministry and the urgent need for more services the Council is soliciting additional migrant gifts from interested friends, local churches, Sunday school classes and other groups. Vacation church schools are encouraged to adopt the Migrant Ministry as a special project. Gifts should be sent to the Virginia Council of Churches, 109 West Grace Street, Richmond 20, Virginia.

My Country -- May She Always Be Right

Since this paper is dated July 4, and since that is the date kept in memory of the signing of the Declaration of Independence that separated the thirteen colonies from England and set in motion the processes that have made a great nation of fifty states, it seems fitting to say a few things about our country. It is not the primary business of a religious newspaper to foster patriotism, but it is a well-known fact that the Church is influenced by the political system under which it lives and that church members are also citizens of the nation.

To say that these are difficult days for our nation is certainly no news to anyone who reads papers, or listens to radio or television. They are so dangerous and difficult that some would-be jokester suggests that President Kennedy thinks there should be a recount of the voting, that he thinks his opponent should have been elected. But really this is no time for jesting about our world situation, and the spot in which America now stands. Neither is it a time to be critical of the leadership of our nation. Partisan politics is a useful device with which to select leadership, but it is not something to use when the life of the nation is threatened.

And the nation is threatened now. A certain man who gets far too much publicity says publicly again and again that his country is to be master of nations, that our nation will become subservient to his, that he will bury us, that our children will be communists. To mention beautiful Berlin is to get shivers crawling along the spinal column. Emperor Wilhelm and one self-promoted Hitler both proclaimed this as the capital of the world, the latter saying that his program would last for a thousand years. Now another man with visions of the world at his feet tells to all who will listen that this free city must come under his domination. To allow that would be for the free world to say, "It is all yours. We quit." There are too many American boys buried on European soil — men who gave their lives for freedom — for the American government to give up now, even if missiles are pointed at the heart of our nation.

It must be remembered that when any little country in any part of the world disappears behind the iron or bamboo curtain, darkness creeps a bit closer to our own shores. That darkness — still with rays of light shining through — has crept within 90 miles of our nation. When injustice is practiced within our own borders, or in any other country, a revolution is in the making. Feudalism, colonialism, and servitude of all kinds are rapidly disappearing from the earth. They have no place in modern civilization. People everywhere know and believe the American Declaration of Independence that all men are "born equal" and that they have "unalienable rights." Wherever equality is denied and rights are not shared, there is a danger spot. Such places are to be found at home and abroad.

The patriotism most needed now is not the kind that makes fiery speeches on the Fourth of July, that struts and boasts like little boys who say, "My dad is bigger and better than yours." Neither is it the cowardly kind that slinks from duty or danger. We need running through the currents of American life a determination to find the right and then to do it at all costs. It is time to forget about buying friends, winning political victories, rising or lowering prestige, and a dozen other things that may be important in their place. Now is the time for Americans to search their own hearts to see if their way of life is worth keeping, if they are really in love with the nation of their birth or choice, if they are creating revolutions by their injustice, if they are willing to sacrifice so the world can be clothed and fed and live in peace, if they really believe that God still determines human destiny by aiding those who seek his will. National leaders should themselves seek for the right rather than the expedient, and should lead the citizenship in doing likewise. Unless the national purpose and program reach that high level, we can have little hope of success. If our trust is really in God, we need have no fear, for he is able and willing to sustain us.

Hence, on this anniversary of our nation's birth it is fitting for us to say with pride, humility, and courage: "My Country — may she always be right."

After Thirty Years

From 1931 to 1961 there has been a denomination in America known as Congregational Christian. Both Congregationalists and Christians have found satisfaction in working as a single unit. The experience has given depth to character, a broadening view of life, a comradeship based on fellowship with Christ, and a new determination to make the unity of the Church something more than a topic of conversation.

When the General Council met in Philadelphia last week it completed its last important meeting. Thirty years of devoted history have been recorded, and the book closed — save for some addenda that must be added later. It was a joy to be in the first Council, a delight to work through the thirty years in this wonderful Church, and a solemn privilege to share in the closing sessions when the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches laid down its life so there could be a resurrection of a new body to be known as the United Church of Christ. The old party names are gone and followers of Christ are to be in one united Church.

July 4 was the date set to declare the Constitution of the United Church in effect. A new denomination takes its place in American life. It is different from all others because it brings together divergent branches of a divided Church. It is an experiment in Christian union that challenges the courage, intelligence and devotion of its leaders. If it is successful, as indeed it must be, the world may yet believe that in Christ there is no East or West, no South nor North, but one great brotherhood of love throughout the wide, wide world.

A MISTAKEN DATE

Orators and many others proclaim July 4 as the anniversary of the initial declaration by Congress of independence from Great Britain. But this is not correct history, and neither was July 4, 1776, the date, as so many assume, of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

July 4 is only the holiday observance of the official ratification of the full Declaration of Independence. It was some days after that date that the document was inscribed on a piece of parchment which now is in the Archives Building in Washington, D. C.

The birth of American independence might well have been set July 2, 1776, for on that date Congress ratified at Independence Hall a simple resolution by which Richard Henry Lee, a farmer of Stratford, Virginia, proposed separation from the British, stating that the united colonies had a right to do so; and that all political connections between the colonies and Great Britain should be dissolved. The Lee resolution is also in the National Archives. Lee signed the Declaration of Independence for his native Old Dominion.

The Lee resolution was agreed to — as shown by the resolution itself — on July 2, 1776. The resolution carries the formal record of congressional roll call with 12 votes for and none against. The New York delegation did not vote because it had not received instructions from its home State advisers.

After the Lee resolution was adopted, Congress began consideration of the formal independence drafted by Thomas Jefferson with the aid of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston. In the late afternoon of July 4, Philadelphia church bells sounded the adoption news. That night Jefferson's handwritten text went to the printer and the next day copies were distributed bearing only the names of John Hancock, the president, and Charles Thomson, secretary of what was termed the "General Congress".

Fifteen days later Congress ordered an engrossed copy, and it was on August 2 that a still unidentified

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

SMALL AND GREAT BEFORE GOD

"And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life." Rev. 20:12.

How much of the revelation in the book written by John is to be taken literally I do not know. I know how it begins: "The revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him to show unto his servants, things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John: who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all the things that he saw." (Rev. 1:1, 2.) I know how it closes; it closes with a warning not to add, or take away from, "the prophecy of this book."

Here is a vision of God; standing before him are the dead, small and great, and the opened books. And we read here: "The dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

It would seem that if one is alive, living and working, it would be good for him to live and work well. Perhaps a book is being written of his deeds, his works, his words, his thoughts. Anyhow it is here written: "They were judged according to their works." And in the next verse we read a re-emphasis of this statement.

In the gospel of John we read these interesting verses: "They said unto him, What shall we do, that we may work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that you believe on him who he hath sent." (John 6:28,29). I take it that that means to know him, to hear his commands, to heed them, and to be his follower.

But you say, suppose I make a mistake. You may, but God will not. He knows your attitude, your work, your words, your ways; whether you want pardon and forgiveness for your sins; whether you are humble and repentant, seeking to be a true follower of Jesus. You do your part, and God will meet you more, much more, than half-way. Jesus died for you — remember that, and appreciate it. Amen.

pensman returned the now historic document. Two weeks later the last of 56 signatures was affixed. Some members of Congress did not sign the document and some who did sign were not accredited members on July 4, 1776.

Time has a way of making hearsay and legend into accepted history, but the Declaration of Independence and its supporting documents leave no room for orators and others to say that July 4 is the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

A FOURTH OF JULY PRAYER

Almighty God, our heavenly Father, bless our nation that it may be a blessing to the world; grant that our ideals and aspirations may be in accordance with thy will. Keep us from hypocrisy in feeling or action. Grant us sound government and just laws, good education and a clean press, simplicity and justice in our relations with one another, and, above all, a spirit of service which will abolish pride of place and inequality of opportunity; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Amen.

History Of United Church

1940 — Informal conversations on the possibility of union began.

1942 — Informal conversations were made official by the Evangelical and Reformed General Synod and the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches.

1944 — Both national bodies voted to carry on a process of mutual acquaintance looking toward possible merger. A Basis of Union was drafted.

1947 — The Basis of Union was approved by the General Synod and by the regional synods.

1948 — The Basis of Union with Interpretations was approved by the General Council and was submitted to local Congregational Christian churches.

1949 — The Interpretations of the Basis of Union were approved by the General Synod and regional synods. The Basis of Union with Interpretations was approved by 3,114 to 4,279 Coongregational Christian churches voting.

1949-1956 — Lawsuits prevented further progress.

1956 — The General Council and the General Synod, meeting separately, voted to proceed with the union and to call a Uniting General Synod.

1957 — The United Church of Christ was formed at the Uniting General Synod in Cleveland, Ohio. Rev. Dr. James E. Wagner and Rev. Dr. Fred Hoskins were elected co-presidents.

1959 — The Second General Synod, meeting in Oberlin, Ohio, voted to refer a proposed constitution to the churches and synods for study. A Statement of Faith was adopted, and referred to churches and conferences for any use they might wish to make of it.

1960 — A revised draft of the constitution was adopted by an adjourned meeting of the Second General Synod, meeting in Cleveland, and was submitted to the 5,458 Congregational Christian churches and the 33 Evangelical and Reformed synods for ratification.

July 4, 1961 — The Constitution of the United Church of Christ was declared in force at the meeting of the Third General Synod in Philadelphia.

Preparing For A Church History

The history of a church is a recital of how a group of people have over the years united to worship God, to train their families in Christian teaching and action, to enrich the life of the community, and to further the kingdom among people near and far.

That the history may be a worthy record requires that attention be given to the people who through the years have contributed thought, activity, and resources for the development and maintenance of the church. To this end a careful gathering of material is necessary. From our experience we find churches seeking their lost records in these and other categories:

1. When, where and by whom was the church founded? Where is the record preserved?

2. What buildings have been erected, where, when, pictures, story.

3. What ministers have served the church? Name, education, other pastorates, photo, notes as to service, results of the pastorate, standing in the community, in the fellowship.

4. Persons who have gone from the church into life-long religious, educational or social welfare work, with brief biographical notes.

5. Participation of the church or its members in denominational life, delegates to church meetings, members of boards and agencies, entertainment of Association, Conference and other denominational agencies, with record of missionary and benevolent contributions year by year.

6. Participation of the church or its members in community enterprises, local benevolent and educational institutions, inter-church affairs, public office held by members, and participation in political and economic life.

7. (a) Action taken by the church relating to questions of public welfare or social issues, local, state, national.

(b) Relationship to local schools, teachers, School Board members, P.T.A.

8. Records of previous celebrations or anniversaries, dedication, re-dedication, and of hospitality given to Association, Conference and other organizations.

United Church Nominees

Nominees for national officers of the United Church of Christ were announced by the Rev. Dr. Arthur D. Gray, president of Talladega College, Alabama, and chairman of the denomination's nominating committee.

The slate, to be presented July 5 in Philadelphia to the Third General Synod of the church includes:

For President: the Rev. Dr. Ben M. Herbster, pastor of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church, Norwood, Ohio, and presently co-chairman of the Executive Council of the United Church. Dr. Herbster is also a member of the commission which drafted the Constitution.

For Secretary: the Rev. Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, Washington, D. C., assistant general secretary of the National Council of Churches. Dr. Buschmeyer was formerly associate minister and secretary of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches.

For Treasurer: Charles H. Lockyear, St. Louis, Missouri, treasurer of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

OPEN HOUSE AT VIRGINIA MIGRANT CENTERS

July 12, 1961

PROGRAM: Migrant Ministry centers in the Mappsville, Melfa, and Cheriton Camps will observe Open House from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (EST). A visit to our kindergarten for Mexican children will be arranged from Cheriton.

TIME SCHEDULE: The only activity scheduled for all visitors at the same time is the 12:00 (EST) luncheon program at Wayside Park, located 4½ miles north of Accomac on U. S. 13, near Parksley cross roads.

TRANSPORTATION: We are requesting all drivers to take their cars on the entire tour, letting passengers share ferry toll and total transportation costs. Transportation for only a very limited number will be available from Kiptopeke (ferry landing) for persons taking the 9:00 a.m. ferry from Little Creek. Such requests should be sent to Mrs. T. S. Gaskill, Cape Charles, Virginia.

LUNCH: Each person is asked to bring sandwiches. A drink and dessert will be furnished at the Accomac Health Center, located just south of the town of Accomac on U.S. 13. —Virginia Council News

Dr. Iseley Writes From Turkey

Since the arrival of Mr. George Privratsky, as the new hospital manager, I have had more time for extra activities. Right now, I am busy showing to the public school pupils (some 20,000) of all the city schools my colored slides on Traffic Accidents, Work for the Blind, Reforestation, their own Arbor Days, and the National Shrine of Ataturk's Monument in Ankara. This gives opportunity to say "Goodbye" after our forty years in this city which has grown from 25,000 to 125,000.

Soon after the May 27, 1960, change in government, a very capable fine governor by the name of Niyazi Araz was appointed here. He and his family have been most friendly. The most unusual development has been his support, as mayor, of the work for the adult blind of our Six Point Club. The city has erected four nicely painted green sales booths and rented them at the symbolic figure of one lira a month. The public has supported this work by the purchasing of pencils, paper, notebooks, candies, bread, and post-cards. It is a real education as the crowd watches blind salespeople find the desired item and make the correct change. The blind men with some members of our Six Point Club called on the mayor and expressed our thanks, and then went to his home to express the same to his wife, the honorary president. It is a real step forward not only for this work in this city, but for all Turkey.

As both governor and mayor, he has aided the reforestation effort, which is now receiving national support from all the country. People are realizing the need for soil and water conservation. Duluk Baba, 7 miles north of the city, is proving a "Pilot Project," with the tallest pine being 10 feet. There are some four million seedlings from two inches up. Nice pines, mulberries and sycamores are being planted on the main streets and in the parks. Another area, some five miles west of the city, is being opened up as the Governor's Forest, and some 20,000 seedlings were planted this spring, with plans for half a million next fall. The Tree Club has finally secured its own nursery and so can have the needed

Capital of Turkey since 1923, when the ancient Hittite city of Ancyras was renamed and modernized overnight. Population of 453,000 with 5,000 Americans connected with various government programs.

July

- 9—Rev. and Mrs. Merrill Isely have been at Gaziantep since 1920. He is business manager of Smith Hospital and she is dietitian. He is interested in reforestation and has persuaded Turkish government to start a tree-growing project in Gaziantep.
- 10—Miss Sandra Kamper graduated from the University of Wisconsin and became interested in missionary work on a trip to Europe. She became a nurse and went in 1960 to work at Smith Hospital for 3 years.
- 11—Miss Ethel Lovatt was a missionary nurse in China 1940-43 and 1946-51 and then transferred to Near East Mission where she supervises nurses at Smith Hospital.
- 12—Miss Beth Miller prepared for a career as a missionary nurse by taking special course in Nursing Education at Boston University and studying Turkish at Harvard. She went to Smith Hospital in 1958.
- 13—Mrs. Luella Monsen went to Turkey in 1959 to serve a special short term as a nurse at Smith Hospital. Her daughter teaches at American Collegiate Institute in Izmir.
- 14—Mr. and Mrs. George Privratsky were active in their local church in Dickinson, North Dakota, where he owned laundry and dry cleaning establishment and she was commercial artist, when they decided to be missionaries. Following language study, he is to be business manager of Smith Hospital, succeeding Mr. Isely.

Istanbul

Formerly known as Constantinople, it is a city of 1,500,000 on both sides of Bosphorus.

- 15—Miss Marylin Avery went in 1958 to teach English at American Academy for Girls following her graduation from the University of Oregon.
- 16—Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Avery, Jr. have been in the Near East since 1949. He taught English at American College in Tarsus before becoming head of the Publication Department of the Near East Mission in Istanbul. This organization publishes books in Turkish for adults and children. There is a great need for books, since millions of Turkish people have learned to read in the last decade.
- 17—Mrs. J. Kingsley Birge taught in India before coming to Turkey in 1927. She assisted her husband with his work in the Publication Department until his death, and has also taught and done counseling and community work. Mrs. Birge is now dean of the junior high division of American Academy for Girls in Uskudar.
- 18—Miss Jacklyn Blake, daughter and granddaughter of American Board missionaries to Turkey, was appointed to a 3-year term as a teacher of English at Uskudar after her graduation from Oberlin College in 1960.
- 19—Miss Dorothy Blatter is assistant head of the Publication Department, teaches at Uskudar, and writes books for children in Turkey and the U. S. A.
- 20—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eaton were appointed in 1959 to a 5-year term at American Academy in Uskudar, where he is business manager and she teaches physical education. Mr. Eaton was a poultry farmer in California before coming to Turkey.
- 21—Miss Clare Dunlap came to the Near East after graduation from college in 1960. She teaches English at Uskudar.
- 22—Mr. and Mrs. William A. Edmonds both went to Turkey as short-term teachers in 1949. They were married in 1953 and returned to teach at Talas in 1954. In 1960 they became career missionaries, working with the Publication Department.

Elon Students Given Awards

Special recognition was received by several Elon College students at the annual Awards Day Program held recently at the college.

Eleanor Smith, of Winston-Salem, is the recipient of the John W. Barney Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship is given from the earnings of an endowment fund established by faculty colleagues, former students, and friends of the late Professor Barney, a member of the Elon College faculty for 33 years. Miss Smith is a granddaughter of the late Mr. Barney.

The Shein H. Basnight Awards for the Outstanding Biblical Student and the Outstanding Athlete were received by Thomas G. Brady, Jr., of Raleigh, and Howard Edwin Burke, of Burlington, respectively.

Kenneth Price, of Danville, Va., was awarded the Ned F. Brannock Scholarship, established by faculty colleagues, former students, and friends of the late Dr. Brannock, a member of the Elon College faculty for 50 years. This award is made annually to a senior majoring in chemistry.

Robert J. Troy, of Burlington, received the Pi Gamma Mu Scholarship Award presented by the North Carolina Alpha Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, National Social Science Honor Society, as the outstanding student in the division of the social sciences.

The Shackley Awards, given by the late Dr. George Shackley of St. Petersburg, Fla., were received by Douglas Scott, of Durham, chosen for showing the most improvement in piano during the year, and Susan Sandefur, of Danville, Va., who was chosen as the student showing the most improvement in organ during the year.

The Jerry Dalton Strader Awards, presented to students whose concern is for the total campus life, who share their abilities, and who conceive their field to be a call to the services of God and their fellowmen, were received by Beverly Ward, of Rockville, Conn., in Christian Education and William Troutman, of Lewisburg, Pa., in Dramatic Arts.

The hospital work continues as usual — busy with most beds full. Fortunately we have our full quota of American nurses, and local nurses trained by them. The new class of six nurse-aids were capped at a most delightful service this past week. Our responsible director made the opening address, Miss Isabel Hemingway explained the beginning and meaning of nursing, Miss Clara Engle told of the historic nurses and their candles, and Miss Miller lighted the candles of the new nurse-aids, after which they were capped and repeated the Florence Nightingale pledge. Our guests included doctors from other hospitals and the governor and his wife, in a group of some sixty. The most satisfactory part of it all is that five of the six new nurse-aids are from Gaziantep itself. People are beginning to permit their daughters to enter nursing. Also three new Turkish doctor specialists have been appointed to service in the operating room and laboratory.

School Of Missions Is Good

By Mrs. W. J. Andes

The sixteenth School of Missions, held June 20-23 at Elon College, was successfully attended by women from the Southern Convention. The report of the Registrar, Mrs. W. J. Andes, indicates attendance as follows:

Guests	3
Valley of Virginia Conf.	9
Eastern Virginia Conf.	62
North Carolina Conf.	59

Total number in dormitory	133
Day registrations (aggregate number)	135

Total attendance	268
Ministers' wives (in dormitory) ..	23

The foreign mission study on Latin America was most interestingly presented by Mrs. John Sargent, using maps, games, quizzes, plays, and many other accoutrements to lend interest and variety. Mrs. Sargent and her husband served in a Brooklyn parish ministering to Puerto Ricans; thus she gained first hand knowledge of some of the problems of Latin Americans.

The Rev. Sally Edwards most ably presented the Bible study on "Creating and Renewing the Church," basing her presentations on Paul's letter to the church at Corinth. Mrs. Edwards helped the women to know better and appreciate this part of the Bible, making suggestions on how to use this study in fellowships.

Dr. Purd E. Deitz, of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, presented in a practical and down to earth manner the Home Mission study on "Churches for New Times." Dr. Deitz, as a member of the Board of National Missions, was well acquainted with his subject. He presented the challenge to the church in our times, and how we as church members must meet this challenge if the church is to survive. Dr. Deitz suggested plays, filmstrips, books, and other supplements to enrich this study.

Very profitable workshops were held on Wednesday afternoon for the six department chairmen, local presidents, and district chairmen. On Thursday afternoon, Dr. J. Earl Danieleley was very helpful on "Parliamentary Procedure." On Wednesday and Thursday afternoons Mrs. Robert Kimball and Mrs. Robert Knowles conducted practical and helpful sessions on program planning.

The evening sessions included a sermon by Mrs. Edwards on Tuesday, an address by Dr. Deitz on Wednesday, and a drama-meditation service on Thursday led by Mrs. Kimball.

The banquet on Wednesday at 6 p.m. had "Latin America" as its theme, with decorations and program in keeping with Latin American customs. Mrs. Robert Smith and Mrs. John Sargent presented an interesting program, with questions and answers participated in by the guests.

The keynote address, given by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, set the tone for the conference as she spoke on Tuesday afternoon on "Creating and Renewing the Church."

The closing feature of the School was a combination of the Bible study given by Mrs. Edwards and a Communion Service conducted by Dr. William J. Andes and Rev. Clyde L. Fields. Six women served as deaconesses, and the service brought to a fitting close a week filled with study, fellowship, renewing acquaintances, making new friends and obtaining new insights and inspiration.

For many women of the Southern Convention, these four days at Elon during the third week in June serve to bolster them and their Women's Fellowships for the year to come. Would that many more would feel the urge to go!

Rural Gospel School

"I have never been in a church before but I feel I would like to come again."

The farmer had come to a Rural Gospel School in northern Japan to learn better agricultural methods from experts. He was one of 125 farmers who had come from fifteen small villages for a three day school concerned with farm problems — the need to diversify their agriculture, to introduce livestock, to be aware of government policies at a time of great emphasis on industrialization. In addition to lectures on chickens, hogs and beef cattle, he had heard Christian prayers and scripture and joined in the singing of Christian hymns.

The truly distinctive Christian character of the Rural Gospel School is in the fact that Japanese Christian farmers are sharing their knowledge and skills for the good of all men — whereas traditionally, Japanese experts have jealously guarded their professional and trade secrets.

This Rural Gospel School is part of the work of the Interboard Committee for Christian Work in Japan — the cooperative agency of eight American denominations including our own — our way of seeking to fulfill Our Christian World Mission in Japan.

America — "The Greatest"

By R. C. Helfenstein, D.D.

We Americans boast that America is the greatest and the best country in the world. Such belief is not based on fulsome pride or lack of reason.

America is far from being an ideal nation. We recognize that it is not even an ideal democracy. The weaknesses and faults of America are many, but, nevertheless, America is the greatest country in all the world. This is true, not because she is my country and your country, not because of her vast territory, her unparalleled wealth and her unlimited resources, but because, at the bar of reason, she proves herself to be the greatest.

She is the greatest because she does the most for her people. She is the greatest because she practices democracy more consistently than most other countries. She is the greatest because she believes the most in justice rather than force. She is the greatest nation in the world because she seeks to be the greatest servant to the world. Twice she has laid her life-blood and her material wealth upon the altar of war to protect the rights of other nations.

There is no privilege this world affords greater than the privilege of being an American citizen, whether by right of birth or by adoption. For such a privilege, every person of us should not only be willing, but should be passionately anxious, to pay "the last full measure of devotion" in loyal service to our country on whatever front that duty may call. For millions it will be The Battle Front, but for still more millions it will be The Home Front. No one who serves his nation on the home front should forget that the church of God "In Whom We Trust" is the most important factor on that front.

A Layman Speaks

An Address by Elgin Hychew, New Orleans, Louisiana, President of the Laymen's Fellowship, before the General Assembly of the Convention of the South, June 15, 1961.

Our first and deepest feeling this day is one of joy and inspiration as well as gratitude — joy in greeting one another as fellow members of a great convention, and gratitude to God who has brought us to this hour.

We look at one another today through new eyes as we face a new frontier; but in this service of worship we do not look primarily at one another; we look at God. We look above all to Him who promised that being lifted up from the earth He would draw all men unto Himself, and who has fulfilled a part of that promise by drawing us together here today.

As Congregationalists there is a tremendous mission which awaits us on America's new frontier. We are confronted by fast moving situations which call for unusual faith and daring. Our mission is with the souls of people — people caught up in the swift currents of modern life — people desperately in need of God. Our mission as laymen is to proclaim our Christian faith bodily and effectively, to make it relevant to mid-twentieth century Americans. Like a mighty groundswell we move toward a new dimension of fellowship — as we enter into the new United Church of Christ; toward unity, not uniformity; toward unity of spirit, of purpose, of work and of witness, toward cooperation without compromise.

As Christian laymen, the eyes of the Christian world are turned on us as we venture together in this new dimension, responding to the call of our fathers to attempt great things for God, in our time, as they were accomplished for him in their time. And always with the Lord walking ahead, bidding us to follow him.

As the lay members of the Convention, we must be concerned about such things as the family, the community, our economy, race relations, world affairs, man's freedom.

The passing of the old frontier is the purpose of a new frontier — a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. It is not achieved by crowding apartment upon apartment, or joining house to house, but by man crowding man upon man crying, "God help us to live together, lest we all die together." As man conquered and subdued the wide open spaces, so now he must subdue his group relationship.

Never have we faced so great an opportunity to witness and to affect Congregationalism as through the laymen. A great responsibility is placed upon the men who make up the Convention and its counterparts in other geographical areas of the Southland and throughout the nation as we enter this new United Church of Christ, which we must face unitedly with God's help. As we are called upon to join our forces, let us consider racial relations — America's chafing of conscience.

The old frontier sought separate but equal facilities. The Supreme Court declared such effort was futile. The new frontier of which we are a part seeks to achieve equal opportunity within the framework of an inclusive, non-segregated society.

As laymen we have known it for generations, but in our worshipping congregations, we have not found the forgiveness and love to include equal opportunity for members of other races than our own.

Man cannot long exclude those whom God welcomes to his altar. Especially in the places where we make our homes, we must approve patterns of Open Occupancy. Invitation, not rejection, is the new frontier.

It is the church and the church alone which can accept its challenge. It has the only gospel worth hearing. God intends that mass man become Christ man. Let us face it honestly. We laymen have a mountainous job to do. It is not handing out good advice. It is not just urging people to try harder to live as Jesus lived, it's not just promising them a happy serene life if they will follow a few simple rules. It's not any of these things. It is bringing boys and girls, young people, men and women, face to face with the saving, redeeming love of God made plain in Jesus Christ.

My friends, I am calling your attention to the fact that since man's appearance into the world and up to this present age, there have been social, political and economic conflicts and problems which many times have confronted the wise.

Today we view the scenes of peoples in the world crying for freedom and respectability. The brotherhood of man is again being echoed from the mountain tops, and juvenile delinquency is a problem.

It is the great task of religion to show us the goals for which we should strive. We must learn the practice of doing unto others as we would have them do unto us. In all cases we must remember that God our Creator was democratic in that he gave to all men the bread of life and created him in his own likeness. He gave the world his only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, that we might have life and have it more abundantly. He made of all mankind brothers, and it is our task as members of the laity to press toward living a more Christ-like life; and the real democratic and Christian life will hasten the realization of all the fine principles of brotherly love for which we strive continuously in this democracy.

But let us as laymen stand up and be counted in intelligence, in fearlessness and in thought. If every member in every church which belongs to this Convention would stand up and be counted for the betterment of the church, the community, the state and the nation as well as the world, we would be able to turn the world upside down.

I have been deeply disturbed by charges that we as the laity are too soft on the current issues of the day, made possible by the international situation. On segregation, we as members of the minority are segregated in public conveyances and public assembly. Even in the church the color of one's skin precludes participation in worship in some sections of the country. The treatment of the Negro leaves much to be desired. He is forced to live in slums, in shanties. He is exploited and has no rights that must be respected. No one chooses his color. The accident of color should not occasion the perpetration of brutality of the Negro.

People often ask me: "What does the Negro want?" I tell them that the Negro wants no special privileges, merely the rights of first-class American citizenship in all aspects; to be respected as a person, not as a race; to live in a truly free society; services rendered to him like other citizens; and the right to live and find free expressions of his native endowment as an individual. Christianity and democracy teach us this.

Mary And Martha, Friends Of Jesus

Background Scripture: Luke 10:38-42; John 11:44; 12:1-8.

Devotional Reading: John 15:1-11.

Memory Selection: Martha said unto him, Yea Lord: I believe that thou art the Son of God, which should come into the world. John 11:27.

Here are three "candid camera shots" of Mary and Martha. They were taken when the sisters were not conscious of being "snapped" and they are all in character — they show the sisters in characteristic attitudes and activities.

Mary and Martha When Jesus Was A Guest in the Home

The story is familiar to all. Jesus was on his way to Jerusalem and He was stopping at the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus as guest. They were special friends of his, and their home was as much of a home to him during his public ministry as He had. There He found hospitality, friendship, and love which warmed and strengthened his heart.

Martha thought that the presence of such a distinguished guest in the home demanded the best preparation. In a sense she "wanted to put on the dog." She had spent much time in baking and cooking and cleaning up and getting everything in order. She really had overdone it, for as one commentator has it, she "was worried about much serving." She was hurried and harried and hot. And all the while her sister Mary was sitting in the front room, listening to Jesus, and not raising a finger to help her. The more she thought about it, the hotter she got, and finally she could stand it no longer. She appealed to Jesus, suggesting that He might have Mary lend a hand. Jesus gently rebuked her, if his words were a rebuke. He gently told her that what Mary was doing was important even as what she was doing was important. He also suggested that Martha was overdoing it a little. A simpler meal, with less bother, and more time with him, would have been better. There was no lack of appreciation on his part of what Martha was doing. But her sense of values was a little awry.

Here we see the clash of temperaments so universally prevalent in the world today. There is the busy type, the folks who are always doing something, the activists. And there is the quiet, contemplative, quiescent, meditative type. And each has a hard time getting the other's viewpoint. It is hard for the active person to understand the person who sits and thinks and contemplates. And the person who is devoted to quiet times and to meditation is very apt to look down on the person who would rather be doing something. Some people are naturally dynamos of activity; others are naturally quiet. There is no right or wrong in this. God did not make everybody alike.

Lord of all pots and pans and things,
Since I've no time to be
A saint by doing lovely things,
Or watching late with Thee,
Or dreaming in the dawnlight,
Or storming heaven's gates,
Make me a saint by getting meals
And washing up the plates.

There need be no warfare between the School of Martha and the School of Mary. We need the Cult of the Stove as well as the Cult of the Study. A writer came into the kitchen and said to his wife "I've finished my piece." She replied "I've finished my pie." The pieces in the study and the pies in the kitchen go together. There is a danger, however, that the Marthas will spend too much time in activities, and the Marys will spend too much time in inactivity. There is a proper balance. The world moves forward by the efforts of dreamers and doers.

Mary and Martha When Lazarus Died

Here we see the sisters running true to form. When in response to the S.O.S. of the sisters when Lazarus was critically ill and after Lazarus had died, Jesus came to Bethany and the sisters learned of his coming, Mary sat still in the house, but Martha went to meet Jesus. Summoned by Martha, Mary fell at the feet of Jesus, and expressed her faith in the Master by saying that if He had been there, her brother would not have died. Martha also had faith in the Master — she expressed her conviction that He was indeed "the Christ, the Son of God, who should come into the world." And yet she was somewhat skeptical about the outcome of the matter. The fact that her brother had been dead four days seemed to her to be an insuperable barrier. Even so, she believed that whatsoever He asked of God, God would give it unto him.

Mary and Martha At the Anointing of Jesus

During the last week of the Master's earthly life He stopped again at the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus in Bethany. And again they made him a supper. And again Martha served. Among those present was Lazarus, who had recently been raised from the dead. Martha served, Lazarus sat, and Mary sacrificed. Taking a pound of very precious and expensive ointment, Mary anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with the hairs of her head. Here we see again the characters of the two sisters. Martha served; she was a practical woman; she showed her love by her practical works, the work of her hands. Here again she showed that it is possible to serve Jesus in the kitchen as on the public platform or in a career that is lived in the eyes of men.

And here we see the devotion and love of Mary finding expression in another way. We see love's extravagance. She took the most precious thing she possessed and spent it on Jesus. Love is not love if it calculates the cost. We see love's humility. It was a sign of honor to anoint one's head, but Mary was content to anoint his feet — she did not feel good enough to anoint his head. We see here love's unselfconsciousness. No respectable woman would ever appear in public in Palestine with her hair unbound. It was the sign of a loose woman so to do. But Mary never thought of that. Mary loved Jesus so much that it was nothing to her what others thought of her. So many of us are so self-conscious. We are always wondering and worrying what others are thinking about us. We should not be so self-conscious in the things concerning our love and devotion to Jesus Christ.

Matthew, The Converted Publican

Background Scripture: Matthew 9:9-13; 10:1-4; Luke 5:27-32.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 116:12-19.

Memory Selection: And he left all, rose up, and followed him. Luke 5:28.

Instead of making a routine exposition of the lesson for today, I am going to approach it from another angle, based on the opening words of the lesson as recorded in Matthew 9:9: "And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom (at the Internal Revenue Collector's Office); and He said unto him, 'Follow me.' And he arose and followed him." Those words suggested to me the theme THE MAN WITHIN THE MAN. And we might ask ourselves the question, "Which man did Jesus see?" For as a matter of fact, there were four or five men sitting at the receipts of custom that day.

The Man Everybody Knew

Matthew was a publican. A publican was a man who had bought the right to collect internal revenue taxes, paying a certain price to Rome, and then charging the people all that "the traffic would bear." Publicans were regarded as dishonest, and disreputable, traitors to their nation, and renegades to their religion. They were outcasts, socially unpopular, quislings. In many cases they were rich, waxing fat on their ill-gained profits, conscienceless rascals who "laughed all the way to the bank" as we sometimes say concerning a modern racketeer or profiteer. And that was the man whom everybody in the village or city of Capernaum knew. Ask the average citizen about Matthew, and he would tell you in no uncertain terms what a grasping, grand rascal he was. And that is all that many people know about men and women who have a bad reputation in a community. They know only the bad side of the person's character. And as someone once said "You might as well kill a dog as to give him a bad name." Men too often judge by the outward appearance. They see only what is outside the man.

The Man His Family And Friends Knew

Renegade to religion and a traitor to his country as Matthew may have been in the eyes of the general public, Matthew was another man to his family and friends. He was probably a devoted family man, generous in spirit, faithful to his friends, circumspect in his relations with his fellowmen. I knew a man once — in fact we lived on the same street with him and his family — who had a bad reputation in the community, whose name was linked with the underworld. And yet he was one of the most devoted family men I have ever known, a fine neighbor, and generous in his gifts to needy people, and a true friend to his group. We often misjudge the so-called bad people in a community. Just as there is honor among thieves, so there are good and fine qualities in people who to the general public seem like stinkers and socially unacceptable people.

The Man Whom Matthew Knew

Matthew knew himself better than anybody else living in Capernaum knew him. He knew himself for what he was. Perhaps greedy, grasping, unscrupulous, covetous, even crooked according to some standards. Nobody had to tell him about his faults. And he knew some things that other people, perhaps even his family and most intimate friends, did not know — he knew his lack of self-respect, his sense of loneliness, his heart-hunger, his dissatisfaction with material things, his sense of need, his disgust with himself and his desire for something better in life. He knew that within him there was a strange mixture of men, a bad man and a good man, striving for the mastery. The fact is that in spite of his material wealth, he probably had a feeling of insecurity, of fear, of frustration. To be sure, we can often judge men by their fruits. But making all due allowance for that fact, we usually know ourselves better than outsiders know us. And there is a man within the man that others do not always know.

The Man Whom Jesus Knew

There was another man sitting at the receipt of custom that day. And Jesus saw that man whom others, and even Matthew himself, did not see. To be sure, He saw Matthew as he was. It is quite unlikely that that was the first time that Jesus and Matthew had met. Both lived in Capernaum, and many of Jesus' miracles were performed there. Matthew had certainly heard about them, and may have seen some of them performed, and may have talked with some of the people who had been healed and helped. He undoubtedly had heard Jesus speak. And it may well be that on more than one occasion the searching eyes of Jesus had looked deep into the soul of Matthew. Certainly Jesus knew about Matthew, knew all about him. One of Jesus' disciples wrote that Jesus "knew what was in man." Nobody had to tell Jesus about Matthew. He "knew him like a book." He saw Matthew just as he was.

But He also saw Matthew as he might become. Bad there was in the man. But good there was too. This man Matthew had splendid possibilities and potentialities. Here was a man who had all the qualifications of one of the inner group of disciples, a man, who, if he brought all his good qualities and good judgment and native ability and practical training into the service of Jesus, would become one of the world's immortals! And if scholars are correct in thinking that the Gospel of Matthew, at least in general outline and content, was written by Matthew, Jesus saw in the man sitting there one of the world's greatest writers. Not many men have written a piece of literature that compares with it in beauty and content, and which has endured and will endure. It is quite likely that Matthew himself did not know about this man within the man. Indeed it is quite likely that he never dreamed there was within him the man whom Jesus saw. Here was the spiritual genius of Jesus. He was always seeing men not simply as they were, but as they might become. No man knows his possibilities until he surrenders himself to Jesus Christ. If we give ourselves to him, He will "make us to become."

Something had "softened up" Matthew. There was a chink in his armor. Something was stirring within him. And God's clock had Biggerstaff Becomes Assistant Supt.

John Biggerstaff

Mr. John D. Biggerstaff of Elon College is the newly employed assistant superintendent of the Congregational Christian Home for Children at Elon College. In this position his major responsibility will be in the area of social work. This announcement was made public today by the superintendent of the Children's Home, Rev. W. W. Snyder. In making the announcement, Mr. Snyder pointed out that Mr. Biggerstaff is the first full-time professional child care worker employed by the Home. He stated that the Home felt most fortunate in having Mr. Biggerstaff on the Children's Home staff.

Mr. Biggerstaff was educated in the public schools of Alamance County and the City of Burlington. While in high school he was very active in school and church activities. Among other things he was president of the Methodist Youth Fellowship, he received the God and Country Scout Award, Eagle Scout Award, Order of the De Moley and Scholarship Award. After graduation from Walter M. Williams High School he became a student at Elon College, where he received a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1958, with a major in philosophy. While at Elon he was editor of the Maroon and Gold (school newspaper), president of the graduating class, member of the Student Council, member of Sigma Mu Sigma Honorary Fraternity, member of Board of Elections, vice-president of Philosophy Club, varsity cheerleader, Legislature chaplain, and was elected to Who's Who in Colleges and Universities in his senior year.

From August, 1954 to September, 1958, Mr. Biggerstaff was employed by the Alamance County Hospital on the orderly staff and for the last year and a half of that time served as head orderly.

In November of 1958 he began part-time employment with the Children's Home at Elon as assistant to the superintendent. He continued in this capacity until he was employed full-time just recently by the Home.

For the past two years Mr. Biggerstaff has been a student at the University of North Carolina School of Social Work. During this period he did three months in-service training at Connie Maxwell Children's Home at Greenwood, S. C., and six months in-service training at Veterans' Administration Hospital, Salisbury, N. C. On June 5, 1961, he received a Master of Social Work degree from the University of North Carolina.

At present Mr. Biggerstaff is a member of the Davis Street Methodist Church. He is also a licentiate of the North Carolina Methodist Conference.

Elon Professor To Conduct Research Project

Elon College, June 27 — Dr. H. H. Cunningham, dean of Elon College and chairman of the college's history department, has been chosen by the United States Department of the Interior to conduct a research project on the organization and operation of the Union and Confederate medical departments in care of the wounded during the Battle of Shiloh in the spring of 1862.

This new project on the bloody and decisive battle in southern Tennessee will be a continuation of a similar work done by Dr. Cunningham in regard to the two battles fought at Manassas.

The Elon man is recognized as one of the outstanding figures in the field of Civil War medicine since the publication three years ago of his "Doctors In Gray," a history of Confederate medical services. That the book has gone into a second edition is a testimony to its wide popularity.

Hi P. F.'ers!

It's that wonderful time of the year again — summertime. We seek new jobs, plan our vacations, or sometimes just idly pass the hours, wishing for something to do.

Unfortunately, too many of us forgot to include the summer program of our own camp in our schedule. I was quite disturbed to learn of the appalling lack of registrations for senior high camps this year, and I'm afraid that this reflects the all too prevalent attitude of our senior high young people in general. I realize that summer jobs have increasingly gained popularity in the past few years, but I also cannot fail to realize that our young people are sacrificing an opportunity to discover themselves in God's world at a time in their lives when Christian guidance is, to say the least, essential.

The first senior high camp at Moonelon is scheduled for July 16-22, at a cost of twenty dollars. Reuben Askew is the director for this camp, which, as usual, will be one of the best of the summer. Also at Moonelon will be P. F. Officer's Camp from July 30 - August 8. The overwhelming popularity of this camp last year became an impetus to make this year's camp even better; and it will be. This nine-day adventure is bursting with new ideas and excitement which will make it unprecedented in Moonelon's history. It is open to all P. F.'ers 14 years and older, especially the officers of your local group, and it costs twenty-five American dollars. Bob Knowles will be directing, and, in my humble opinion, this will be the best camp of the summer.

Another camp, which provides the only opportunity for inter-racial and interdenominational fellowship this summer, is the U.C.Y.M. Training Conference. It is to be held this year at Palmer Memorial Institute in Sedalia, North Carolina, July 9-15. Any high school youth with open minds and venturesome spirits will find this the highlight of their summer.

Applications for all these camps may be mailed to the Southern Convention Office in Elon College, and the sooner the better. Remember, summer is part of your life too; use it wisely.

Sincerely,

David Andes, President
Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship

AT MT. BETHEL

N. C. And Va. Sunday School Convention

Mt. Bethel is not one of our largest churches, but it did an excellent job of entertaining the North Carolina and Virginia Conference Sunday School Convention June 27. Perhaps the editor and Dr. John G. Truitt were among those who enjoyed the sessions most, for they were back in the church of childhood and youth. Sacred memories surrounded the happenings of the day.

President Thompson interestingly guided the program through worship, discussion, addresses, singing, and business sessions. Rev. John Graves of Elon College was the featured speaker. Workshops were led by Mrs. Robert Knowles, Martin T. Garren, Robert Knowles, and Miss Ruth Dunn.

Treasurer W. E. Kallam reported that 28 schools made report this year, ten of which had made gain in membership over last year; that the offering for the day amounted to $42.36; and that he had received from the Sunday schools $495.50. He was hopeful that still other schools would respond with dues.

Officers for the coming year, elected by the convention and installed by Rev. K. D. Register, are Leonard Powell, president; W. E. Walker, vice president; Mrs. R. W. Isley (re-elected), secretary; and W. E. Kallam (re-elected), treasurer.

Next year's session is to convene at Union, Virgilina, Virginia.

AFRICAN "MISSIONARIES" TO MASSACHUSETTS

Gideon Mhlanga, pioneer African educator, and Mrs. Mhlanga, arrived in Boston June 25 to begin several months' service as "missionaries" to the almost 600 Congregational Christian churches in Massachusetts.

Mr. Mhlanga is headmaster of the Mhizha Government Primary School in Highfield, Southern Rhodesia. He heads a teaching staff of 27; the present enrollment of the school is over 1,000.

In 1931 he was the only African in all Rhodesia to hold a Junior Teaching Certificate, and he was one of the first of his race in Rhodesia to receive a Bachelor of Arts degree.

They will meet with, and speak to, church groups throughout the state, beginning with a series of visits to seven summer camps.

Mr. Mhlanga was born in Mt. Silinda, Gazaland. "The date of my birth," he says, "is unknown. From contemporary events it was conjectured that it might have been about 1908."

His boyhood memories are largely of goat herding, hunting small game with bow and arrows in the African bush and learning from older boys the use of the spear. But his first taste of education in a mission school of the American Board at Mt. Silinda gave him an insatiable hunger for more.

Mrs. Mhlanga, who is also a teacher, completed a three-year course in advanced domestic science at the American Board's Inanda Seminary in South Africa in two years. She has been a leader in the Girl Guide movement and a tireless church worker.

struck the zero hour. When, therefore, the Master passed by and called Matthew to follow him, Matthew arose and followed him. He left his business of making money to begin a career in making men. One may be sure he never regretted his action.

One of the first things he did, indeed the first thing he did, was to "put on a big party" for publicans and sinners, so that he might introduce them to Jesus. Those who have found Christ should feel the impulse to share him with others, beginning with their families and friends.

God Bless Our Native Land

(Tune: America)

By Siegfried A. Mahlmann

God bless our native land;
Firm may she ever stand
 Through storm and night:
When the wild tempests rave,
Ruler of wind and wave,
Thou who are strong to save,
 Be thou her might!

May all her pathways be Highways of Liberty,
 From shore to shore;
Justice sit throned in her,
Truth rise new-crowned in her,
Good will abound in her,
 Forevermore!

For her our prayer shall be,
Our fathers' God, to thee,
 On whom we wait:
Be her walls, holiness,
Her rulers, righteousness,
In all her homes be peace,
 God save the State!

Not for this land alone,
But be God's mercies shown
 From shore to shore;
And may the nations see
That men should brothers be,
And form one family
 The wide world o'er.

O Lord Our God, Thy Mighty Hand

(Tune: Materna)

By Henry van Dyke

O Lord our God, thy mighty hand
Hath made our country free;
From all her broad and happy land
May worship rise to thee;
Fulfill the promise of her youth,
Her liberty defend;
By law and order, love and truth,
America befriend!

The strength of every state increase
In Union's golden chain;
Her thousand cities fill with peace,
Her million fields with grain.
The virtues of her mingled blood
In one new people blend;
By unity and brotherhood,
America befriend!

O, suffer not her feet to stray;
But guide her untaught might,
That she may walk in peaceful day,
And lead the world in light.
Bring down the proud, lift up to poor,
Unequal ways amend;
By justice, nation-wide and sure,
America befriend!

Through all the waiting land proclaim
Thy gospel of good will;
And may the joy of Jesus' name
In every bosom thrill.
O'er hill and vale, from sea to sea,
Thy holy reign extend;
By faith and hope and charity,
America befriend!

Building A New Church

Rev. Abraham Akaka, Synod Chaplain

COVENANT

Call to Worship: Sing unto the Lord a new song... sing unto the Lord all the earth. (Everyone join in saying by heart the 100th Psalm.)

Hymn: Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee.

Our Lord's Prayer.

The Scripture Lesson: Genesis 1:1-3; Jeremiah 31:31-35.

The Meditation: "Covenant"

Aloha! Aloha! And thank you, brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus our Lord of this Third General Synod of our United Church of Christ. Not only Mrs. Akaka and I, but more so the churches of Hawaii and the people of Hawaii deeply appreciate the honor you bestow upon us by this invitation to serve as one of your chaplains. And may Mrs. Akaka and I have the joy of bringing to our distinguished Co-Presidents, Dr. Fred Hoskins and Dr. James Wagner, these symbols of our Aloha. (Presentation of leis by Mrs. Akaka.)

"In the beginning, God..." As we observe the events of the past half century, and half decade, the spirit of our Lord is moving again over the dividedness, confusion, and chaos of mankind. He is putting his great arms around us all. By his vast Love, he is bringing new life and form into being. Across the darkness of our days, our Lord is saying, "Let there be Light," and amid the lostness of our time he is saying, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

God is reconciling the world to himself today by making a new church. He is building a new church by calling into being a new people, a people who hear his voice, a people whose one desire is to obey his call to be his people, a people moving in response to his leading, a people with one pure concern — that they witness to his redemptive purpose for all mankind.

This is a new covenant people, a people of dynamic faith and righteous conviction. They are being raised up in every church both old and new. In obedience to the call of God, they are joining hands and asking him at every turn: "Lord, show us what to do in our individual lives, in our church, in our community, in our nation, in our world." By these people, the primary concern of the church will pass from perpetuation of institutional prosperity and power to the sharing of common tasks — to the transformation of the world into the kingdom of God. By these people of a new covenant, the church will no longer be the victim of the circumstances in which it is set, but the victor over and transformer of the world. In the name and by the power of Christ, these are the ones who will continually seek and be given new ways of bringing the good news of the Gospel by word and deed to the total life of mankind.

God is not turning his back upon the individuality of each denomination and communion, rather he is calling all of them to the saving work of Christ that must be shared, and harnessing the separated denominations into a common mission in Christ — until all go into the world together — teaching and preaching together — glorifying our Lord and seeking the well-being of mankind together.

For you and for me, building a new church today has become a matter not of proud erecting of material structures, but of developing a new covenant people — a people open and sensitive to the voice of our Lord speaking to us. Our task is to listen and find again the meaning and function of the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ for our time.

We remember with joy how our Lord made covenants with his children in ages past — from Abraham and his descendants, to the New Covenant in Christ Jesus our Lord. There is an unbroken line in history that ties Covenant people together as God's saving remnant in the world. And it is with deepest thanksgiving that we observe what our Lord is doing in our time — how he is forming without our congregations and among the denominations new nuclei through which a new Church is coming into being.

You and I have been part of that which is old and dying — of a Church that had lost the Holy Spirit, lost its confidence and joy, lost its first love and inner dynamic. You and I have known the feeling of something being fundamentally wrong with the Church — that its membership were not God's people and he was not their God. But all this is changing.

This Interested Me

By Emily C. Lester

I asked several people who attended the General Council and General Synod meetings in Philadelphia what one thing interested them most during the 10-day period. Everyone I asked gave the same answer, "Rev. Abraham Akaka's worship services."

You will be reading some of the services in The Sun (and, hopefully, using them in your churches), but you cannot get the real "flavor" of them without seeing the leader in action.

Picture Mr. Akaka, a stalwart Hawaiian, going to the pulpit in a white cassock, carrying his ukelele. He removes his shoes before going into the pulpit, for that is "holy ground." He thanks the Synod for the honor it has done Hawaii by inviting him to be the chaplain. He lovingly includes Mrs. Akaka (whose home was originally in Colorado) in the greeting and smilingly watches as she places leis of beautiful flowers around the necks of Co-Presidents Hoskins and Wagner — Hawaiian style, with a kiss on the cheek.

As the service begins Mr. Akaka "involves the congregation" by asking them to join him in saying a familiar Bible passage as the call to worship — the 23rd Psalm, the 100th Psalm, or John 3:16. Reverently he asks the group to pray "Our Lord's Prayer."

Then, in simple yet beautiful language, Mr. Akaka proceeds to give some facet of "A New Church," such as "covenant."

Calling attention to the four strings of his ukelele, he reminds us that they might represent "Congregational," "Christian," "Evangelical," and "Reformed." When strummed together, in tune, they represent the United Church of Christ.

At the close he sings a familiar hymn, or an unfamiliar (to the audience) Hawaiian melody, playing his own accompaniment on his ukelele. His sweet, rich, melodious voice moves the group to a new sense of worship.

Yes, the worship services at the General Synod were unique, and inspiring!

and now chooses to speak cannot but hear truly and respond faithfully. The cause to which our Lord calls us — to be his servants in the service of men, to proclaim the Gospel to all the world and resist the powers of evil — means that ours is a no-nonsense Christianity. It means that we will see his providence not in terms of our own personal preservation and salvation, but in terms of his love again being expressed through us. There can be no redemption of mankind without new crosses and new Calvaries, and we must be able to pray the prayer of our Lord when new Gethsemanes and gibbets cross our pathways: "Not my will, but thine be done."

Yet there is no joy as deep as the eternal enterprise, and no happiness as profound as the discovery of one's God-chosen place of service in each moment of our days. Our Lord bids us now to "Go and tell all my children by word and example — you are many nations, but I call you to one kingdom; you are many races, but I call you to one brotherhood; you are many cultures, but I call you to one life; you are many religions, but I call you to the Lord and Light of Life — even Jesus Christ." He calls us to tune up the world that the wilderness might break forth into singing.

Our Lord never meant everyone to be alike. There are four strings on this instrument (holds up ukelele). Instead of "My dog has fleas," we might call these four strings "white, black, yellow, brown," or "Evangelical, Reformed, Congregational, and Christian." But each is under the demand to tune itself to Christ, until his law is written in its heart — to what it ought to be as white or black, or yellow, or brown... or as Evangelical, Reformed, Congregational, Christian. Only then will the wilderness break forth into singing. The heavenly instrument is the harp — in which every one of many strings is in tune with Christ. But for now, and on this altar that our Lord has caused us to erect on this pilgrimage from Chaldea to Canaan, the ukelele must suffice.

When, through covenant people, Hawaii began to know of Christ, there bubbled up in the soul of a Hawaiian a song called "He Kulanakauhale Omao" or the City of God. The words describe a green city — through which the healing streams of water flow — in which all people know the Lord and dwell together in peace. And no matter how much this story is told and sung, it will never grow old. (Plays ukelele and sings.)

Hymn: Praise to the Lord, the Almighty.

Benediction: "Let the whole world in every corner sing, "My God and King." Amen.

Welcome To The General Council

By Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Sr.

Acting Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Congregational Christian Conference, former pastor at Holland, Virginia, and Burlington, N. C.

I welcome you in the name of the Pennsylvania Conference of Congregational Christian Churches. If my sources of information are accurate this is the first time this Conference has been host to such a gathering. The National Council assembled five times in neighboring states, the General Council four times and the General Convention twenty-three times and twice in Canada, but for Pennsylvania this is a first. Every General Council is historic, but this may well be made more historic than its predecessors. Who knows but what we Congregational Christians from these days on will divide time by before and after the Philadelphia Council.

It is an honor and a pleasure to extend to you this welcome, but mingled with these emotions is the quality of sadness, for I well know how the recently deceased Superintendent of this Conference, the Reverend Cleon Swarts, anticipated participating in this Council and of bringing to it words of welcome from this Conference.

Our Pennsylvania Conference has an interesting history in matters of origins, consolidation and survival. There have been frequent experiences of frustration; there has been a continuing courage and faith and the will to witness. At an early annual meeting one of the brethren in an address entitled "The Outlook for Congregationalism in Pennsylvania" said, "Congregationalism must be broad, long, high, deep and have bulk." In a state approximately 300 miles long and 150 miles wide our 16,320 Congregational Christians do not constitute bulk, but we are broad-minded, long-sighted, high in aspirations and deep in our affection for freedom of spirit and liberty of conscience.

Pennsylvania is a very religious state. It was founded so to be. From the beginning it has welcomed with open arms the faiths of the world and the sects of Christianity. They are all here. So we welcome you in the name of diversity.

Our own Congregational Christian heritage is one of variety. We have

The General Council

June 29 to July 2, 1961, was the first time Congregational Christian churches had held their national meetings in Pennsylvania, and it was the last time there is to be any such meeting of consequence. The 1,997 delegates and visitors who registered were there for obsequies that would lay the fifty million dollar denominational organization to rest. Only once before — in Boston — had so many people attended a General Council of Congregational Christian Churches in the thirty years of its history since the two former denominations united at a meeting in Seattle, Washington, in 1931. As separate denominations the history goes back to 1794 for the Christian Church and to the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock in 1620 for Congregationalists in America.

The General Council appeared to be a lively corpse — if such a word can be used to describe such a body. The program was well planned to give a view of what the world-wide activities of Christian service of a million four hundred thousand church people are, and should be in a time like this. Accurate accounting of the past biennium was made, and plans for a bright future were indicated. In this regard there was no funeral. It was rather like a wedding when the bride "adorns herself for her husband." The goal in money is $11,500,000 for 1962, which is much more than our people have ever given for Our Christian World Mission, but which is far too little to meet the needs of our time.

The theme, "Jesus Christ: The Lord and Light of Life," constantly lifted vision from the mundane things like law suits, financing and organization to a high level of devotion to the one and only Lord of Life. Two lectures by Dr. Leslie Cook of England, a representative of the World Council of Churches, thrilled the audience and lifted it into a fervent, worshipping congregation.

For more than a decade there has been bitter opposition to the formation of the United Church of Christ by a group of people who are eager to maintain what they call "The Congregational Way." This opposition group dwindled to four at this meeting, and one of them acted as chaplain for the Council. What a change! As the report of voting given elsewhere in this paper indicates, there are several churches that have chosen not to enter the merger, but leaders of the General Council showed great eagerness to maintain contacts that may eventually bring into the United Church all those who are fearful at this time. Both state and federal courts have decided that the merger is legitimate, that no rights of Congregationalists will be denied in the United Church of Christ. The names of no minister or church will be listed in the United Church without the specific request of minister or church, and service will continue to be rendered to ministers and churches that desire it. What more could be asked?

To one who attended the first General Council and most of those since, it appeared that this was the best of all. Harmony and hope were evident. Enthusiasm centered in the Lordship of Jesus prevailed. Humility rather than hauteur dominated discussions as the group approached the merger that would, it was devoutly hoped, in some sense fulfill the desire of the One who prayed for the unity of the Church. There were no tears of regret, though a bit of sadness, as delegates voted to transfer to the General Synod most of the business formerly carried by the Council. Some legal matters make it necessary to maintain the General Council, but delegates will be those to the General Synod and meetings will be held (generally) in connection with the Synod. The work and worth of the General Synod must increase while the General Council will decrease through the challenging years that lie ahead. In that spirit the Council closed.

The General Synod

The United Church of Christ, as all readers of this paper well know, is the first attempt in the United States to merge denominations of widely different historic background, and is composed of Evangelical and Reformed churches that go back to the Reformation and Congregational and Christian churches that are noted for their emphasis on the local church. Four years ago in Cleveland, Ohio, the two national bodies united, and have operated since with co-presidents. In Philadelphia July 4, 1961, a Constitution was declared in effect, and the United Church of Christ was christened, organized, and started on its mission in a divided world.

Most boards and agencies had planned together for this thrilling moment in history. For instance, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions had everything ready so that when the proper vote was passed in Philadelphia a call to Boston authorized signature of the Massachusetts Legislature to change the ancient and honored name to "The Board for World Ministries of the United Church of Christ." This was all done in minutes. Remarkably fine work has been done in bringing the two groups together and it appears that they will be able to move forward with ease, grace and speed — like a fine car when properly fitted gears are meshed. It may be that delays caused by suits in courts have been a blessing in disguise, for in this way leaders have had occasion to become acquainted and careful planning was a necessity.

Two ideas were impressive. In the first place, the life of the Church centers in Jesus Christ, the Lord and Light of Life. The chaplain from Hawaii did much to impress this both by what he said and by his own humble devotion. It could be heard in most addresses and seen in actions of the Synod.

The second impression one received was that the assembly was eager to get on with the main business of the Church. Years have been spent in planning organization. The time has come for the organization to function, and those in charge of the machinery appear to be eager to move forward. So may it be!

This month marks the anniversary of the birth of a North Carolina native whose name is little known, especially to younger generations.

That person was John Charles McNeill, born July 26, 1874, near the town of Laurinburg in Richmond County. McNeill was a rare and gifted soul about whom Gray's "full many a flower is born to blush unseen" could well apply.

The genius is the most difficult person to understand and equally difficult to describe. The soul of a genius is a mystery, while his birth and growth cannot be adequately explained.

Such a man was John Charles McNeill, studious from his early years on a farm. His yearning for an education led him to Wake Forest College in 1893 where he proved himself to be an unusual student. He became a tutor in English in his freshman year, was awarded a medal for the best essay produced by a Wake Forest student that year, became editor-in-chief of the then "Wake Forest Student", and graduated valedictorian in 1898.

For a short period after McNeill's graduation he lived a life of uncertainty trying to find himself. This mood was probably revealed later when he wrote "To prison me within a space of walls, when far-off grottoes hold my love enshrined..."

McNeill returned to Wake Forest and took his master's degree, became an instructor in English and also completed a course in law. After these accomplishments, he filled the chair of English in Mercer University, Macon, Georgia, for two years, and then returned to North Carolina to practice law. And it was in his small office in Lumberton, often with doors closed while friends and clients knocked in vain, that the real genius of the man began to reveal itself. Never seeming to be contented with legal work, McNeill began writing for various magazines, making a specialty of poetry.

At this juncture in McNeill's life, Joe Caldwell was editor of the Charlotte Observer. McNeill sent the Observer some of his writings and Caldwell was so impressed that he invited the young writer to visit him. Editor Caldwell saw what McNeill needed and wanted — a place to write, no special assignments, and no interference with his dreaming. Caldwell met that desire by giving McNeill a private office with permission to lock his door.

When McNeill found his desired place in life, and coveted place to work under his direction, he contributed verse and other writings to Caldwell's Observer, and other publications, published several volumes of verse, the best known being "Songs Merry And Sad". This volume won for McNeill the Patterson Memorial Cup, a magnificent trophy given annually as an incentive to the development of literary talent in North Carolina. McNeill was the first winner of the cup. Among other winners were Dr. Edwin Mims, Dr. K. P. Battle, Dr. R. D. W. Connor and Clarence Poe.

A malady baffling to physicians and never fully diagnosed struck McNeill in the summer of 1907, and on October 17 of that year the poet laureate of the Old North State died. His body lies in Spring Hill Cemetery in the village of Wagram. On the modest granite shaft marking his grave are these words from his poem "Sundown":

"We know, O Lord, so little what is best;

Wingless, we move so slowly;
But in thy calm all-knowledge let us rest.

Oh, holy, holy, holy!"

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

JUDE'S BENEDICTION

"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

Jude 14 and 15

This is a benediction on the Church by Jude, brother of Jesus. It is one of the most beautiful in the Bible. It says so much, and is so well expressed.

In the epistle of Jude there are several expressions which have found their way in the language of the Church, besides this beautiful benediction. For instance there is that expression "the faith once delivered unto the saints." Jude set forth some of the pictures of hell, and external punishment, which are not as much used today as they once were. There is also that expression, "Clouds there are without water, carried about of winds." Also, "Plucked up by the roots," and "Wandering stars," and "There shall be mockers in the last times."

So short an epistle has so much to say.

But, it seems to me, that because of the poetry and beauty and worth of this closing prayer, it is the best of all. Like so many of us we hesitate and stumble in our words until we bow our heads to pray, then there come words right and beautiful. So often in the years from early childhood until now I have heard men and women who lacked training in the language, but whose friendship with God gave divine beauty and rightness to what they said when they talked to their heavenly Father in prayer.

Too often, I fear, my own prayers have not been simple enough. I hope they have been sincere. But do we not sometimes hear prayers that, reaching beyond the stars, seek to cover everything beneath them! One wise-cracker remarked that "They asked God for things we poor folks did not know he had!"

It seems to me even Jude gets down to business when he lifts his heart and hands the people to bless. Read his benediction again, and as Jude says, "and (may he) present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy." Amen.

Constitution Presented To The General Synod

Report by Rev. Dr. Gerhard W. Grauer, Chicago, chairman of the Commission to Prepare a Constitution, before the United Church of Christ General Synod, Tuesday morning, July 4, 1961, Bellevue Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia.

Mr. Moderator, Honored presidents of the Church, Reverend Clergy, Members of General Synod, Ladies and Gentlemen:

This is a happy accident that we meet in the City of Brotherly Love on this historic date, July 4th, and remember that it was here, that the declaration of Independence was signed. Of course, we are aware of the fact that this historic document was signed not only to declare independence, but to seal the growing desire of separate and independent colonies to unite to further free government and a common purpose. We remember the concluding words... "we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." That was an historic event for free government and democracy.

But this also is a day that the Lord hath made and we rejoice and are glad in it and we reiterate the pledge of our forefathers. It is the Power of the Holy Spirit that brought us to this day, not merely our own decisions. We members of the Commission to Prepare a Constitution for the United Church of Christ feel that it was His Spirit that led us to prepare this instrument which has been carefully studied, reviewed, corrected and approved by a vast majority of the fellowship which makes up the United Church of Christ.

After twenty years of conversations, discussions, preparing the Basis of Union and the Interpretations, it was the decision of the General Synod meeting in 1957 that a Commission charged with the task of preparing a proposed constitution and By-Laws be selected. The Commission almost at once began to face this colossal task. It presented a proposed constitution and By-Laws to the General Synod meeting in the summer of 1959. The Oberlin General Synod, very wisely we believe, referred the draft of the constitution and By-Laws to the congregations and synods for their study and reaction. The altered and amended draft which so many individuals and congregations actually helped to correct and improve was then presented to the General Synod in its adjourned meeting at Cleveland last summer.

At that meeting of General Synod, a number of amendments were adopted and the Constitution was approved subject to some literary editing and was submitted to the local churches of the Congregational Christian Church and the synods of the Evangelical and Reformed Church for their approval. The official vote of the congregations and the synods will be given by others.

Suffice it to say that the constitution and By-Laws as prepared are not infallible documents. We can imagine that they will be amended as the life of the Church and the experiences of the future suggest changes that will be in order and necessary and yet, we believe they shall be offered remembering the basic principles and traditions which we held in common. Legally, we are the United Church of Christ and yet in a sense when the constitution has been declared in force, we become the United Church of Christ with the instrument of a constitution as our guide.

Many students of the constitution have had difficulty understanding what we sought to accomplish and what we believe this document will help to achieve. Namely, an orderly Freedom... a self imposed discipline... Liberty and local autonomy and yet responsible freedom under certain suggestive procedures. Surely the free reign of the spirit will continue to lead our successors.

Some will allude to statistics and will inform us of the larger membership, the larger budgets, the larger challenges which we now hope to face in our missionary enterprises, but may we remind ourselves that the greatness of the Church is not in its membership, but in its Lord!

Two denominations, from differing backgrounds, with different polities, are here declaring a constitution in affect. Is it not because the great Universals and the Eternal verities have been dominant, that we now adopt a constitution? Above all, our peculiarities, our provincial customs and even our differing heritage... the Profundities, the Spirit of the Living Christ, will make us a United Church, not merely in name, not merely legally and constitutionally, but in Spirit and in Truth.

I am no theologian, but do we not feel deeply that what is being done is really only bringing into being what already is? Ecumenical scholars rightly remind us that our Unity is in Christ! That we are one in Him! We confess our belief in the catholicity of the Christian Church! In Christ we are one! In a sense, this document is a statement of our awareness that we are a United Church of Christ. We are really restoring that which Christ established.

Naturally, we as a commission are grateful to you for the treatment you have afforded this document. None of us would have written it in every detail as is before us, and yet we are thankful to you and your fine spirit and to Almighty God for the decisions that have been reached in regard to it becoming an instrument under which the United Church can work.

It has been a blessed privilege to serve as a Commission charged with such an important task. We believe that this instrument can help us as a Church to glorify God continually and serve Him in all the world.

It is with humbleness and yet with deep and reverent emotion, that we present to you this document, Accepted and amended by the General Synod and ratified and approved by the churches and synods.

May God richly bless what is to be done... in His Name and to His Honor and Glory!

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT SOUTH NORFOLK

"Living for Jesus" was the theme of the daily vacation Bible school held at South Norfolk this year. The school was conducted for eight days. It closed Wednesday, June 28, with an "Open House" at 7 p.m. when parents and friends viewed the hand-crafts; heard the children sing their favorite choruses led by Mrs. Earl J. King, with Mrs. Herbert Maxwell at the piano; and enjoyed refreshments in the social hall of the church.

The average attendance was about 100 each day. Mrs. Hugh Rawls was director. The school was reported to have been well-organized, with 100% cooperation of the workers.

Constitution Is Approved

By Synods

The 33 Synods of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in legislative session cast their votes on the Constitution of the United Church of Christ. The result of this voting is as follows:

Approved

California Synod, 39-0.
 Central Pennsylvania Synod, 103-1.
 Dakota Synod, 20-14.
 East Pennsylvania Synod, 84-2.
 Kansas City Synod, 130-4.
 Lancaster Synod, 101-6.
 Lehigh Synod, 142-0.
 Mercersburg Synod, 129-10.
 Michigan-Indiana Synod, Unanimous
 (Number of votes not recorded).
 Midwest Synod, 165-7.
 Missouri Valley Synod, 156-20.
 New York Synod, 51-1.
 Northeast Ohio Synod, 111-7; Abstaining, 1.
 Northern Synod, 104-3.
 North Illinois Synod, 212-39.
 Northwest Ohio Synod, 108-10.
 North Wisconsin Synod, 105-3.
 Pacific Northwest Synod, 32-4.
 Philadelphia Synod, 145-6.
 Pittsburgh Synod, 148-0.
 Potomac Synod, 147-2.
 Reading Synod, 115-5.
 Rocky Mountain Synod, 43-0. Abstaining, 3.
 Southeast Ohio Synod, 101-5.
 Southern Synod, 99-26; Abstaining, 2.
 South Illinois Synod, 85-60.
 South Indiana Synod, 156-38.
 Southwest Ohio Synod, 142-22.
 South Wisconsin Synod, 110-14.
 Susquehanna Synod, 68-0.
 Texas Synod, 113-0.
 West New York Synod, 79-0.

Magyar Synod, 10-56.

Since 32 of the 33 Synods of the Evangelical and Reformed Church voted to approve the Constitution of the United Church of Christ, and since this number of affirmative votes is more than the two-thirds required according to the polity of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, it is here reported that all of the Synods of the Evangelical and Reformed Church are now part of the United Church of Christ. As such the 33 Synods will, when the Constitution is put in force, continue their life as acting Conferences of the United Church of Christ until such time as Synods and Conferences are organized

By Churches

Report of the co-secretaries of the United Church of Christ on the voting of Congregational Christian Churches on the two issues placed before them by the Adjourned Meeting of the Second General Synod (see action number 60-AGS-51).

Affirmative votes: Approving the Constitution, 3,551; Other votes to be part of the United Church of Christ, 118; Total affirmative votes, 3,669.

Negative votes: Disapproving the Constitution, 342; Other votes not to be part of the United Church of Christ, 25; Total negative votes, 367.

Votes to abstain from voting, 121.

The Constitution states (Article X) that it shall be declared in force by the General Synod "when it shall have been ratified or approved by not less than two-thirds of the Synods of the Evangelical and Reformed Church and by not less than two-thirds of the Congregational Christian Churches voting..."

3,547 churches voted approval against 342 for disapproval. Thus 91.2% of the "churches voting" are in favor; so this portion of the mandate to declare the Constitution in force is established.

There are many significant things which could be said about this vote. Some of which are: It compares with the final vote on the Basis of Union (3,114 yes; 1,164 no) quite favorably. It is larger than previous estimates expected it would be. It places the solid bulk of the Congregational Christian denomination in the United Church right at the start.

Some significant statistics follow:

	Denomination as a whole ('60 Yearbook)	Affirmative Voting Churches	Negative Voting Churches
Number of churches	5,458	3,665	367

ACTIVITIES AT MT. PLEASANT

By Beulah Cameron

Two members of our Mount Pleasant Pilgrim Fellowship went to Moonelon for the week of June 19. Also two members of our Women's Fellowship attended the School of Missions.

Our members have organized a Junior Pilgrim Fellowship, and at our first meeting we had eighteen members.

We are having our Vacation Bible School this week (June 28) with an average of about 65 children.

The members of our Women's Fellowship met with the members of the Northview Women's Fellowship June 22 at the Northview church. The members of Mt. Pleasant church enjoyed the meeting very much.

Tangible Results of Formation of United Church of Christ

In the Local Church

1. Change of name. The change itself will remind the individual member of a new relationship, wider than that enjoyed before. In larger communities, such as the major cities,

The Rev. Dr. Ben Herbster, pastor of Zion Reformed Church in Norwood, Ohio, for the last 30 years and member of the Commission to write a Constitution, was elected first President of the United Church of Christ at Philadelphia.

the United Church designation can be used in advertising — church pages of newspapers, for example — to make a larger public display than either of the denominations could have done before.

2. Services. Combination of the national staffs, CC and E&R, and their reshuffling on a regional basis will give better service to the churches than they now have in such things as leadership training for the church school, finance advisory services, evangelism, etc. Missionaries, church executives, etc. who are sought after by local churches for personal visits can be allocated better and can cover more territory than before.

3. Materials. The outstanding achievement of the United Church to date is the new church school curriculum, now being issued. Neither CC nor E&R alone had the resources to develop and publish either the basic curriculum or the host of supplementary material that will help bring it up to public school standards (viz: movies as an integral part of the curriculum). The new United Church Press is already launched on a publishing enterprise to bring out general circulation books that could not have been published by either Pilgrim Press or the E&R Press. It is expected to become a major religious publishing house.

Churches will have better prepared and printed missionary study and missionary promotional materials, aids for worship, devotional tracts, pastors' plan books, reports, etc. Resources are now available for making motion pictures on program topics, badly needed in both churches but never before available. The new United Church Herald is an example of what can be done with double resources.

4. Beliefs and practices. The willingness of the United Church to give major attention to Christian beliefs through such things as the Statement of Faith and the theological commission. The Council on Church and Ministry has already sparked discussion and study of basic Christian doctrine and the basis of faith held by local congregations. This theological emphasis will also be noticeable to the church member in the orientation of ministers in their preaching and teaching.

There has always been interest in ecumenical affairs. It will be heightened for the local church member as the rest of Protestantism watches the development of the United Church and reaches out to work with it.

It is expected, also, that a widespread program of adult education will be introduced in the UCC churches.

Persons living in communities that have no churches or who are members of UCC churches which need special programs (the inner city, town and country, for example) or churches without resources for rehabilitation and repair will have the combined facilities of both churches (CC and E&R) available through the Board for Homeland Ministries.

Regional Effects

There will be more efficient regional organization than either church had before as the non-segregated visioning conferences and associations come into being. Costs of regional administration should be cut. It is expected that a strict interpretation on the area membership rule for churches in conferences will wipe out racially and nationality segregated regional instrumentalities.

The General Synod chose as its first treasurer Mr. Charles H. Lockyear of St. Louis, Missouri, who is the treasurer of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Work on college campuses — the campus ministry — will be facilitated and widened as duplicate ministries are abolished. A strong integrated college youth organization is already in existence.

Church extension work will be made more efficient and duplication in placing of new churches will be avoided. The UCC voice for comity assignments rather than competitive placement of new churches will strengthen the comity movement; and UCC support will strengthen councils of churches.

National and International Effects

Missionary administration will be made more efficient through the establishment (already carried out) of a single administrator for each area (Africa). Duplication of missionaries and of installations will be eliminated. New work will be made possible by pooling of resources, such as the expanded program visualized for South America. The UCC will, of course, be a major voice and influence for the development of United Churches on mission fields and for the support of those already in existence.

In the National Council of Churches (as in local councils) the size of the UCC will be influential. The voice of the CC and E&R churches has always been respected. (Note the number of executives of the Council and of the World Council who are members of the two fellowships.)

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST ARE INTERESTED

Further Unions Are Possible

The International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) today (July 6) responded to union overtures from the United Church of Christ by calling for conversation to begin in September, 1961. Following passage of a resolution by the Third General Synod of the United Church of Christ calling for opening of talks "at the earliest mutually convenient time," Rev. Dr. William Jackson Jarman, president of the Disciples body, responded that a representative committee is ready to begin talking in September, 1961 "to report back" and "to stimulate discussion of possible union on the part of our local churches."

On the United Church side the General Synod directed its Commission on Christian Unity and Ecumenical Study and Service to meet with the Disciples representatives and to "report regularly to the Executive Council of the General Synod on the status of these conversations."

As soon as the United Church of Christ was formed in June, 1957, the Christian Churches suggested the opening of conversations looking toward possible union of their denomination with the United Church.

In a joint message to the General Synod Dr. Jarman and Rev. George G. Beazley, Jr., executive secretary of the International Convention of Christian Churches said, "It is our profound hope that these conversations will enable these two portions of the Body of Christ to understand and to make one the historical streams which lie behind them and in which they partake, to the mutual enrichment of all of those who are members of either heritage. It is our fervent prayer that our future actions may give concrete expression to the unity which God has given us in Jesus Christ and may enable us better to proclaim the message of reconciliation which we have in him. It is our deepest desire that, in the Word spoken into history by God through the event of Jesus Christ and passed on to us through the Holy Bible, we may find a union that may bring blessing to us and make us a church that shall be instrumental in helping other portions of Christ's fragmented body to seek that unity for which our Lord prayed and which we can find only in him."

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT DANVILLE

By Mrs. H. N. Moorefield

Third Avenue Christian Church, Danville, Virginia, is indeed happy to be able to report that we again had a very successful vacation Bible school. Our school was held June 12-21, with a closing program in the form of an "Open House" June 21, 7:30 - 8:30 p.m.

The theme "Living for Jesus" was enjoyed by all. We had a total enrollment of 188 students and 40 workers, with an average attendance of 168 students per day. Our offering of $90.00 was given to our church building fund.

Our school was directed by Mrs. Harold Moorefield and Mrs. R. E. Tally. Superintendents for the departments were: Nursery — Mrs. John Newman; Beginners — Mrs. Clyde Young; Primary — Mrs. Ramah Lumpkin; Juniors and Seniors, Mrs. Fred Holley. The Rev. R. Eugene Tally is pastor.

The Junior Pilgrim Fellowship of Pleasant Ridge sponsored an ice cream supper in the fellowship hall of their church Saturday, June 15.

Miss Betsy Carden is working with the Pilgrim Fellowship groups at Wake Chapel during the summer months.

Youth Faces The Future

Hubie Young

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Johns River Camp

By Hubie Young, Vice-President
Southern Convention P. F.

Many of the young people throughout the Southern Convention have expressed interest in and concern with both the merger of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Churches to form the United Church of Christ and the proposed Plan of Organization for young people in the United Church of Christ. Because we as Pilgrim Fellowships know so little about our sister Youth Fellowships in the Evangelical and Reformed Churches, I was glad that I could represent the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship at the recent Senior High Camp which was held at Johns River Camp for the young people of the Southern Synod of Evangelical and Reformed Churches.

Johns River Camp, located in the mountains of Western North Carolina, corresponds in many physical aspects to our own Camp Moonelon. The main environmental difference, however, is the enhancing and tree-covered mountains which completely surround Johns River Camp. In addition, Johns River Camp is further decorated by an almost icy stream which flows completely across the campus. Each summer the youth of the Evangelical and Reformed Churches go to Johns River Camp to worship and study God in a truly beautiful surrounding.

The camp schedule at Johns River was strikingly comparable to that at Moonelon. Each morning was begun by Morning Watch. Also, each morning a key-note speaker stimulated the minds of the campers who later split into discussion groups in order to more personally implement the speaker's address. In the afternoon there were all-camp assemblies and also smaller workshops. There was also a period for recreation. Following vespers, evening programs usually consisted of recreational activities. Exceptions, however, were a moonlight hike back to the camp from a picnic spot on a mountain and a "square dance" which was presented by a professional "square dance" band. (As the only Virginian at camp, several of the campers and I constantly debated and kidded each other about the outstanding attributes of both Virginia and North Carolina. I received most teasing, however, when I was the only camper who had never danced the Virginia Reel.)

While at Johns River Camp, I was constantly confronted by one thought: Whether Youth Fellowship or Pilgrim Fellowship, Congregational Christian or Evangelical and Reformed, everyone at camp seemed to form one big happy family. The Y. F.'ers at Johns River were just like those P.F.'ers who come to Moonelon.

It is my sincere hope that during the next year there will be many opportunities for joint projects and meetings with our friends in the Youth Fellowship. I hope that many P. F.'ers can experience, just as I have, the thrilling spirit of being in a true Christian fellowship with our friends in the Youth Fellowship.

Oakland P. F.

By Betty Sue Knight, Reporter

The Senior Pilgrim Fellowship met at Oakland Christian Church Sunday night, June 18. Danny Chapman, president, presided over the business meeting. Bradley Simpson conducted the devotional.

A slate of new officers was elected for the coming year as follows: President — Marvin Underwood, Jr. Vice. Pres. — Bradley Simpson Secretary — Mary Anne Howell

Asst. Secretary — Barbara White

Counselors — Miss Mary Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Webster Chapman.

Danny Chapman, Bradley Simpson and Marvin Underwood, Jr., will attend Moonelon Camp at Elon College this summer.

The group will have their annual picnic in July.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT BIG OAK

By Mrs. John F. McLean

The children of Big Oak community enjoyed a week of vacation Bible school June 5-11. On Monday 58 pupils were present, and by Thursday 71 pupils were enrolled. The average attendance was 65. There were 56 children with perfect attendance. Also attending were 14 teachers and helpers. It was an enjoyable week of work and sacrifice which they were glad to devote to the children.

The theme for the week was "Living for Jesus." The study began with the birth of Jesus. Throughout the week we learned of Jesus in the temple, Jesus' baptism and temptation, the calling of the disciples, and five parables. The week ended with the study of Jesus' death and resurrection.

We were pleased to see so many attend the Sunday night service given by the children under the direction of the teachers and helpers. This closing program carried out the theme of the week.

Daily vacation Bible school was held at Shelton Memorial, Portsmouth, the week of June 19. Average attendance was 28. The church is planning to hold its annual picnic Saturday, July 22.

Board Of World Ministries

RESOLUTIONS

1. General Synod, recognizing the Board for World Ministries to be an arm of the Church, commends those who are contributing to its challenging program.

2. General Synod expresses its approval of the organizational structure which the Board for World Ministries has adopted, which insures direct and responsible communication among its various divisions.

3. General Synod reiterates its belief in the ecumenical movement and instructs the Board for World Ministries to work through the World Council of Churches and National Councils of Churches wherever their instruments are available, because we believe such cooperation to be the most effective method of accomplishing the mission of the Church.

4. General Synod recognizes the mission of the Church to be one and is committed to the principle of Apportionment; however, it believes that the concerns of World Service should not be limited by the Apportionment.

5. As the churches are increasingly becoming aware of the totality of the mission of the Church, General Synod recognizes the importance of reaching the local church where the missionary spirit must live and grow, and encourages the Board for World Ministries to continue to make furloughed missionaries available to the churches as time and energy permit. In the same interest General Synod heartily supports exchanges of leadership personnel throughout the world.

6. General Synod of the United Church of Christ recalls with thanksgiving that the Church has long labored for peace and expresses its affirmative interest in the formation of the Peace Corps as an agency of our government. In principle we believe this to be a proper service organization of our nation. We offer to the Peace Corps the fruits of experience and judgment which our Board for World Ministries has gathered through its many years of Christian service.

7. General Synod makes urgent petition to all our churches to study and act upon the following recommendations:

(1) That the Church build its inner life so that every member may have the conscious sense of inner strength, belief in the Mission of the Church to men everywhere, and the readiness to sacrifice to bear witness to that faith.

(2) That the Church recognize more fully the inter-dependence of all Christians everywhere, and be as prepared to receive as to give both material and spiritual aid across all lines of nation, creed and culture.

(3) That the Church provide the means for the cultivation of sound principles of stewardship, and at the same time, for the spontaneous expressions of human compassion and Christian love in response to specific situations.

(4) That the Church cultivate among all, and particularly its younger members, a sense of vocation that will lead to the service of man and of God not only through Church channels but also through the deeper permeation of "worldly" channels with the spirit of our Master.

(5) That the Church prepare to sacrifice much more for others in its mission to all the world. This sacrifice may be of money, time, prejudice, comfort, familiar ways of doing things, or the sacrifice of life itself through stubborn witness and by patient years of service of one's fellow men.

(6) That the Church assume its leadership in the world, with all the risks involved, in recognition that the Gospel is a revolutionary matter expected to change men's lives and to turn the world upside-down or right side up again when others have turned it upside-down.

Guest speaker at Beverly Hills, Burlington, July 2, was Mr. Sam Riley, a member of that church. Mr. Riley spoke on "Dual Role Christians." The pastor, Rev. Kenneth Register, was attending the General Council in Philadelphia.

Sermon topics for July 9: Rev. William R. Stevenson, Tryon, "Life's Basic Ingredient"; Rev. Robert Kimball, Burlington, "Life's Most Important Moment."

Thomas, The Realist

Background Scripture: John 11:5-16; 14:3-6; 20:24-29; Acts 1:13.

Devotional Reading: I John 1:1-7.

Memory Selection: Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet believe.
John 20:29.

As has been the method in dealing with the other individuals in this series of lessons of Personalities of the New Testament, we will consider Thomas as shown by three "Candid Camera Shots" which give us about all the knowledge we have of him in the New Testament.

Thomas The Daring

We do Thomas an injustice when we call him "a doubter." To be sure, as we shall see later, Thomas did ask questions, and Thomas had some doubts. But that was not the distinguishing mark of the man. Thomas was really a daring, courageous man. Take, for instance, the first picture of him in today's lesson. Jesus has just received word that Lazarus is sick and the request from the sisters, Mary and Martha, that he come right away. When the Master states that he is going back to Judea again, the disciples are amazed. "Going to Judea, Master? Did not the Jews threaten to stone you the last time you were there, indeed tried to stone you? And you are thinking of going back there again, and so soon?" But they were not speaking for Thomas. Somebody in Judea needed Jesus, and Jesus ought to go. And if he went, he ought not to go alone. To be sure, it meant danger and perhaps even death. But Thomas said "Let's go — even if it does mean death!" That was not grim fatalism; that was great heroism and loyalty. We need more people who have this spirit. There are all too many of us who see things to be done, wrongs to be righted, causes to be espoused, who are content to play it safe and to save our necks. We need people who say "Let's go!" Too many Christians are on the defensive. They say "let be" instead of "let's go!" What a different world this would be if more people had the spirit of Thomas, and would say, "Let us go!" "The Son of God goes forth to war; who follows in his train?"

Thomas The Realist, Or Doubter

We could use the caption, "Thomas the Doubter" without being unfair to Thomas if we used the term in its best sense. Thomas had some questions which deserved an answer. Jesus said that he was going away, and he told the disciples they knew the way. But alas, they were slow of understanding, and Thomas frankly said that if they did not know where he was going, how could they know the way! Thomas did not feel that it was a sin to ask questions. He was not ashamed to confess his doubts. And the reply and attitude of Jesus indicated that Jesus did not think it was wrong. Alas for the man who never has any doubts, who does not ask any questions, who does not use his mind in religion! Doubt has a place in a growing life. One of the characteristics of adolescence and later youth is a spirit of doubt. Everybody who deals with young people knows this, or ought to know it. And that is not a sin; it may be a virtue. To be sure it must be honest doubt. There is, of course, a doubt of sheer skepticism or cynicism. One must not be content to live with his doubts or by his doubts. But doubt in the sense of honest inquiry, of a desire to know the truth, to get answers to life's questions is a wholesome and helpful thing. And as the poet wrote, "There is often more faith in honest doubt, than in man-made creeds."

Perhaps Thomas got his reputation as the "Doubter" because of the post-resurrection appearance of Jesus. For some reason, Thomas was not with the disciples when Jesus first appeared to them. Full of amazement and joy, they told Thomas about it all. Now Thomas was an intensely practical man, with no poetry in his blood, and he just could not understand how this could be. He frankly told the disciples that unless he could see the print of the nails in Christ's hands and put his finger into the print of the nails, and thrust his hand into Christ's wounded side, he would not believe. He asks for proof. It is to be noted that although he wonders, his mind is not closed. He is willing to accept the truth when he sees the truth. The fact is that it is not so much a matter of doubt, as the agony of struggling faith. Call it doubt if you will; it was honest doubt. He was not simply putting up an argument; he was asking for an honest answer. There were some questions for which he did not have the answers and this was one of them. There are many people today, and especially young people, who have questions about religion. Let us give them honest answers. They want to be led; lead them.

Thomas The Devoted Disciple

Jesus met Thomas' incredulity with factual evidence. When he appeared a week later, Thomas was with the disciples. Jesus said unto him "Reach thither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." Here was evidence beyond question. Strangely enough, Thomas did not do as Jesus suggested — he did not reach forth his hand and touch Jesus. Instead he cried out "My Lord and my God!" And he probably fell on his knees as he said it. Doubts were gone, questions were answered. His Lord was alive again. There was no doubt about that. Convinced that it was his beloved Master, he acknowledged him as Lord and God, and followed him, so tradition has it, to martyrdom. This is the logical result of doubt issuing in faith — love and loyalty to Christ, the Son of God.

Doubt has a place in the religious life. But it is a way station, not a destination. One cannot very well live by his doubts; he should live by his faith. "He that doeth the truth, cometh to the light," said Jesus. Honest doubt can be and should be a stepping stone to faith.

Rev. Rosser L. Clapp, pastor of Garner Community Church, will be among those attending the Eastern Summer School, Deering, New Hampshire, July 12 - August 2. This summer the school is designed for ministers working with newly organized churches.

Two circles of the Women's Fellowship of Pleasant Ridge met Friday, July 14, to hear a book review given by Mrs. Dolan Talbert.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON JULY 30, 1961

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, D. D.
Pastor of Berea Congregational
Christian Church,
Driver, Virginia

Thanks For Many Friends

Walstein W. Snyder, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

We are most happy to have this good report for the week. The total of $1,682.33 is almost enough to meet the average cost of operation of our Home for one week. The Sunday schools and churches were most generous in remembering us this week. We hope they will continue the fine work and that other friends will join them in remembering our Home during these "lean" summer months.

June 28 - July 2 Superintendent Snyder attended the General Council of our Congregational Christian Churches, which met in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He returned to Elon College Sunday, July 2, and Monday, July 3, left for a week's vacation with his family in Eastern Virginia. During the second week of July he had a visitation program among churches, ministers and lay friends in the Eastern Virginia Conference, as a means of preparation for our fall Thanksgiving campaign. Mr. Charles E. Perkins, our farm manager, was also on vacation for part of this week of July 4. During the absence of Supt. Snyder and Mr. Perkins, Assistant Superintendent John D. Biggerstaff took charge of the administrative affairs of the Home as well as the farm operation.

A number of children have had their vacations, several are away at this time and others are yet to go. We have some few boys and girls who have not been spoken for as yet, but before the summer is over all will have enjoyed their vacation.

On Wednesday, July 5, the Service League of Burlington, N. C., took all of our older boys and girls for a picnic supper. The ladies in this civic organization have been most helpful to our boys and girls. One group of the ladies works with our younger children one day each week. Another committee from the Service League plans a program for the older boys and girls twice a month. They may take the children to visit some interesting place in Burlington or Alamance County. They take them bowling, swimming, roller skating and picnicking. They also have instructional courses on various subjects for the older boys and girls. The assistance of the Service League is most helpful to our program and beneficial and enjoyable for the boys and girls.

We are most grateful to the Service League and to many other friends like them for the help they give us in working with our children.

W. N. C. Sunday School Convention

By Mrs. H. S. Clark

The Sunday School Convention of the Western N. C. Conference of Congregational Christian Churches met at Liberty church June 28. The Convention theme was "Doorways and Directions in Christian Education."

The Convention opened at 10 o'clock with Rev. F. C. Lester presiding. The opening worship service was given by members of the Shiloh Sunday school.

Reports from the different Sunday schools were given. Count of churches represented, number of superintendents present, and count of teachers and ministers present was taken.

The Rev. Robert Knowles, Minister of Christian Education for the Southern Convention, was the morning speaker. He spoke on "The Educational Mission of the Church."

At the noon hour the meeting was adjourned and everyone was invited by the Rev. Thomas Liverman, host pastor, to enjoy a delicious lunch prepared by the ladies of the church.

At one o'clock the afternoon session was called to order and members of the High Point Sunday school conducted the worship service. The afternoon speaker was Lacy Presnell, Jr., assistant superintendent of Randolph County schools. He spoke on "The Good Teacher." This was followed by a panel discussion, with a panel composed of Rev. Robert Knowles, Rev. F. C. Lester, Miss Ruth Dunn, and Mrs. Grant Burns. New and better ways of teaching were discussed.

A short business session was held. The following slate of officers was installed by Rev. Robert Knowles:
 President: Lacy M. Presnell, Jr.
 Vice President: Clay Yates
 Secretary: Mrs. Grant Burns
 The 1962 Convention will be held at the Northview Community Church, three miles north of Sanford, N. C.

Welcome

a few churches which probably occasionally look back to Plymouth Rock and say, "From it we came." But we have other and strong traditions, a Congregationalism which stems from Wales and Sweden; an Association wholly composed of churches of the Christian branch deep-rooted in an autonomy as free as the winds; a Western Pennsylvania group of Evangelical Protestants coming into our Fellowship from sources very close to the Reformation; and churches of a free order but of Nationalistic background seeking fellowship, belonging and community: Slovak, Armenian, Hungarian. We all welcome you.

Another will welcome you in the name of Philadelphia, City of Brotherly Love. But most of Pennsylvania lies outside Philadelphia. There are other and great cities known far and wide for their production of steel and the by-products of steel — and pickles. There are areas where coal, hard and soft, is mined. There are broad valleys whose soil is fertile and where contented herds graze and abundant crops grow. And our ridges are long and towering and our rivers are as beautiful in their flow as they are melodious in name. We are well called the Keystone State. In the name of all this strength of industry and scenic beauty we welcome you.

Some of you come from conferences and states in which our Evangelical and Reformed brethren are few in number. Evidently they swarmed in Pennsylvania. You find them almost everywhere. And wherever you find them you like them, and from them you receive a fellowship that is warm, generous and forthright. How patient they have been. And how understanding. In their attitude toward us they have been courtesy personified and Christian grace exemplified. We will get along well together. We welcome you as a Conference which has gone on record to become an acting Conference in the United Church of Christ.

We welcome you as fellow Congregational Christians. I am confident never before have there been so many Congregational Christians in Pennsylvania as there are at this moment. This in itself must be something in history. It is wonderful indeed to have this General Council, destined to be a memorable Council, meeting within the bounds of our Conference. We thank you for coming. We invite you to come again. We hope you will want to do so. The circumstances and environment are different from those of most of our Council meetings but we trust you will enjoy the change and find that God indeed is nearer than ecclesiastical windows, steeples and pews, and that his Spirit can guide and lead and govern wherever we gather with open minds and questing spirits.

Mr. Moderator, we are not anticipating parliamentary involvements which you could not resolve without the assistance of any other instrument than your raised hand or voice, but by reason of precedent and in order that you might have something to hold in your hand while you preside over these sessions, we Pennsylvanians wish to present you with this gavel, a gavel made from walnut wood grown and hewn at Harman Center, the capital, as it were, of our Conference.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT HOLLAND

By Mrs. James R. Jones

Vacation Bible School at our church was June 26 through June 30. We had an enrollment of 55 children and an almost perfect attendance. The students ranged from 4 to 18 years of age. Mrs. C. Carl Dollar taught the Beginners. Mrs. Clyde Johnson was the teacher of the Primaries. Mrs. J. R. Darden taught the Juniors and Mrs. Hendricks Jones was the teacher of the senior group. Mrs. John Henry Powell and Mrs. Thomas Jones were the music instructors and Mrs. George D. Underwood, Jr. and Mrs. Horace Mackey were the art instructors. Mrs. E. T. Batten directed the games for each class and Mrs. Ayler Holland told a story each day to the individual groups. Mrs. Sumner Rawles was chairman of refreshments. The directors were Mrs. Wilkerson Holland and Mrs. Kenneth Garren. The children were served drinks and cookies each day and on Friday they had a picnic lunch at noon.

The parents were invited to come at 12:30 Friday afternoon and see the work the children had done during the week. At 1:00 the children, parents, and teachers had a brief worship service in the church led by Mrs. Wilkerson Holland. Bookmarks were given to all children with a perfect attendance during the week. Each class had a part in the service and the children presented an offering of $26.25 to be sent to provide food for orphan children in Korea.

We want to thank the directors, teachers, and helpers for a wonderful Bible school week of learning for the children.

Churches Aid Angola

Terrorist actions in Angola, which have already resulted in thousands of deaths, have caused 77,000 Angolans, to date, to flee across the border into the Congo. Reports received by Church World Service from the Congo Protestant Relief Agency in Leopoldville, and the World Council of Churches in Geneva, confirm a growing state of emergency which the churches — Protestant and Roman Catholic — the United Nations and the Red Cross are trying to cope with.

Telephone calls early last month from missionaries near the border brought the first assistance to some 6,000 Angolans concentrated near Kimpangu, who were in urgent need of food. Six and a half tons of CWS food stuffs, Norwegian fish and meat provided by the Mennonites, were on their way next day. An African Protestant deacon, several Roman Catholic sisters and a government official in the town made up the distribution committee.

The reports from the Rev. Ernest Lehman, administrative secretary of the CPRA in Leopoldville, also noted that the UN had made food, transport and some funds immediately available and has promised trucks and jeeps to transport the food supplies and clothing sent by the church agencies. Another report from CPRA included a plea for blankets. "The cold season has begun," it said, "and on the highlands along the border there is little shelter from the wind for the refugees who have only the clothes in which they escaped."

Reporting for Church World Service of the National Council of Churches, the Rev. Frank L. Hutchison, associate director of Overseas Program, said that several more tons of beans from the Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP), milk and rice have been shipped to the Congo for Angolan refugees and that warm clothing is on the way.

God, Eternal Spirit, Father

The Statement Of Faith

We believe in God, the Eternal Spirit, Father to our Lord Jesus Christ and our Father, and to his deeds we testify.

He calls the worlds into being, creates man in his own image and sets before him the ways of life and death.

He seeks in holy love to save all people from aimlessness and sin.

He judges men and nations by his righteous will declared through prophets and apostles.

In Jesus Christ, the man of Nazareth, our crucified and risen Lord, he has come to us and shared our common lot, conquering sin and death, and reconciling the world to himself.

He bestows upon us his Holy Spirit, creating and renewing the Church of Jesus Christ, binding in covenant faithful people of all ages, tongues and races.

He calls us into his Church to accept the cost and joy of discipleship, to be his servants in the service of men, to proclaim the gospel to all the world and resist the powers of evil, to share in Christ's baptism and eat at his table, to join him in his passion and victory.

He promises to all who trust him forgiveness of sins and fullness of grace, courage in the struggle for justice and peace, his presence in trial and rejoicing, and eternal life in his kingdom which has no end.

Blessing and honor, glory and power be unto him.

A Hymn Arrangement

(To be sung to tune of "Austrian Hymn" or "Erie")

God, Eternal Spirit, Father
Of our Lord, and of mankind!
Now to Him we come believing,
His Creation bring to mind.
Worlds He makes, and in His image
Man, to ponder life and death;
Seeks in love to save all people,
Judges by His Holy Breath.

Jesus Christ, the Man of Nazareth,
Crucified and risen Lord,
Comes to share our common nature
And fulfill Thy Holy Word.
He who conquered sin and dying
Victor evermore shall be,
Reconciling men and nations
To each other and to Thee.

Now created by Thy Spirit
Stands the Church in full array,
Binding in one holy concord
All who worship Thee today;
Men of every land and nation,
Every age and tongue and race,
Witnessing as Christian brothers
To the oneness of Thy grace.

Hear the call to be disciples,
Cost to render, joy to claim;
Eager to declare the Gospel,
Stemming evil in His Name;
Sharing Christ's own baptized nature,
And His table made our own,
Joining, at His gracious bidding
In His passion and His crown.

Take His promise, you who trust Him,
Find forgiveness by His grace,
Join the search for peace and justice,
And eternal life embrace;
For His kingdom knows no ending,
Nor His purpose time or tide;
Blessing, honor, power and glory
Evermore in Him abide. Amen.

Here And There Among The Churches

The topic of the sermon preached by Rev. Frank Hamilton at our Norfolk church Sunday morning, July 16, was "The Church In An Age of Peril."

Five young people from our Tryon church attended a junior high camp sponsored by the Southern Synod of the E. and R. Church at John's River Camp last week. Rev. William R. Stevenson, pastor of the church, was one of the adult leaders at the camp.

Guest speakers at Community Church, Garner, during the absence of the pastor: July 16 — Mr. John Biggerstaff, assistant superintendent, Home for Children, Elon College; July 23 — Mr. T. N. Daughtry, Clayton, N. C.; July 30 — Rev. Thomas Madren, pastor, Hines Chapel.

Men of the Western North Carolina Conference should be planning to attend the Laymen's Fellowship Rally which is to be held Saturday evening, July 29, at Pleasant Ridge. Clyde Pell, president of the Western North Carolina Laymen's Fellowship, reminds the men of the Conference that this will be "Ladies Night." Entertainment will be provided by the well-known quartet, "The Carolinians."

Rev. William A. Cousins was installed as pastor of our South Norfolk church Sunday afternoon, June 25. Rev. Clyde L. Fields, superintendent of the Southern Convention, preached the sermon. Others who participated in the service were Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. Frank Hamilton, Rev. Lanson Granger, Rev. J. H. Dollar, and Dr. George Alley. After being installed, the new pastor led the congregation in a service of Communion.

Members of the Laymen's Fellowship of Union Ridge, Burlington, met for their annual ice cream supper Saturday, July 15. Each layman was to bring his family and a freezer of ice cream.

"What If You Were God?" was the topic of the sermon preached by Rev. Kenneth Register at Beverly Hills, Burlington, N. C., July 9. The church has recently installed new memorial windows.

HARDCASTLE TO RETIRE

The Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, D.D., a minister in the Southern Convention for the past 46 years, has resigned the pastorate of Berea Christian Church, Driver, Virginia. He and his wife Mary have bought a house near the edge of Portsmouth, Virginia, in a wooded area overlooking Hare Creek and the Elizabeth River. There they plan to live after December 31, 1961, when his resignation becomes effective.

DEDICATION OF GIFTS AT MT. ZION

A service of dedication was held during the morning service May 14 at Mt. Zion, Eclipse, Virginia. Gifts which were dedicated included communion table, pulpit, lectern, cross, vases, candlesticks, Bible, offering plates, chimes, rug, Sunday school rooms, and vestibule. The congregation joined the minister, Rev. James Madren, in a litany of dedication.

After the morning sermon a picnic dinner was held in the community hall.

During the absence of their pastor, Rev. Winfred Bray, members of Union Ridge, Burlington, N. C., are taking charge of the Sunday services. July 23 Franklin Chandler was the speaker and Tommy Thompson was the liturgist. July 30 Odell Gilliam will be the speaker and Felix Simmons will serve as the liturgist.

ROSEMONT JUNIOR HIGH P. F.

By Doris Ann Blake

The Junior High Pilgrim Fellowship of Rosemont went to a beach party at the Y beach June 22. We had lots of fun swimming and no one got hurt. Since the salt water made us hungry we roasted hot dogs and marshmallows. We invited our pastor, Mr. Lewis, and his family to the party, and he grilled most of our hot dogs. Then it started raining and we had to go home.

Babies Honored

July 2, 1961, United Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, honored babies born to members of the church since January 1, 1961. Mrs. Hubert J. Martin, superintendent of the cradle roll department, presented rosebuds to Mr. and Mrs. Crutcher, parents of Jennette Devon Crutcher, born April 26, 1961; and to Mr. and Mrs. Gaspire Nagy II, parents of Gaspire Nagy III, born June 2, 1961.

Ingram Women's Fellowship

By Charlotte Davis

The Women's Fellowship of the Ingram Church has been very busy this year. We meet each month in the home of a member. A well planned program is presented in every meeting.

A lot of credit is due our faithful president and our secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Howard Whitlow and Mrs. J. K. Landrum, for keeping the meetings interesting and seeing that the projects are carried out.

The World Day of Prayer was observed with churches in the surrounding communities.

Our Bible study for the year was taught by our faithful and beloved pastor, the Rev. W. A. Rich. He is a wonderful teacher and made the study interesting and very helpful.

The ladies of the Pleasant Grove Fellowship were invited to hear Mrs. F. C. Whitlow review the home study book entitled, "Safe In Bondage." Mrs. Whitlow also reviewed the foreign book, "Into All The World Together." We also had the privilege of seeing the film by the same name at an earlier date when we had our Mission Meal.

A public service was held at the church for the giving and dedication of "The Woman's Gift."

We had six members to attend the Spring Rally at Liberty Church.

We have met the Friendly Service quota. Through the year we have been able to reach out a helping hand to others who are less fortunate in surrounding communities.

We are ever mindful of our church and its needs. We do all we can to make it more inviting to its members, friends and neighbors.

Four Friendly Service turnover charts are available from the office of the National Women's Fellowship. The only charge is for return postage.

REVIVAL AT APPLE'S CHAPEL

By Mrs. E. H. Thompson

The annual summer revival was held at Apple's Chapel July 9 through July 14. Rev. J. L. Neese did the preaching. Mr. Neese was pastor here several years ago and his preaching was well received. The attendance was good throughout the week with 317 in Sunday School on Sunday following the revival. There were several decisions for Christ and many rededications to Christ.

On Sunday our hearts were thrilled when Pastor Leebrick opened the doors of the church and thirteen came forward to unite with the church, three by transfer of letter and 10 on profession of faith.

The subjects and texts of Mr. Neese's sermons for the week were as follows: HOW TO HAVE A REVIVAL, II Chr. 7:14; PRAYER FOR A REVIVAL, Hab. 3:2, Ps. 85:6; MAN'S EXCUSES AND GOD'S ANSWERS, Luke 14:18; GOD'S REMEDY FOR SIN, Isa. 1:12; A NEW CREATURE, II Cor. 5:17; and SECOND COMING OF CHRIST, James 5:8.

Rev. William T. Scott, Jr., attended a Preaching Clinic at Duke during the second and third weeks of July. He is the pastor of our Durham church.

In Appreciation Of Mildred Walker's Mother

By Miss Lillian Gregory

And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them. (Rev. 14:13.)

On May 16 Ada Holland (Mrs. Robert W.) Walker, mother, friend, spiritual guide and wise counselor to many, received the inheritance prepared for all true and faithful servants of God the Father. Having kept the faith, she finished her earthly course, leaving to all who knew her the legacy of the richness insured by the sincere and joyful practice of a Christian life.

A member of Fellowship Congregational Church of Tulsa, Oklahoma, she was an active participant to her very last hours. Our loving concern and sympathy go out to her family and many friends.

She was a church leader and mother of a family of church leaders, one of

Fair Warning

The New York Court of Appeals has ruled that a grocer is liable for injuries to the family of a shopper to whom he sells harmful food. We hope this decision will apply to the liquor dealer. If he were to be held responsible for the harm done to his customers and their families it would, indeed, be a brave and hardy man who would continue to sell liquor.

Under the pure food laws manufacturers are compelled to state plainly on the packages containing food-stuffs, the ingredients thereof. It is our opinion that bottles of liquor and packages of tobacco should state clearly the kinds and amounts of poisons therein contained. Boys and girls ought to be warned of the dangers of alcoholic drinks and of the many kinds of poisons contained in tobacco smoke, as a basis for deciding whether or not they wish to incur habits that are likely to enslave them for life.

whom serves on the staff of the National Women's Fellowship and is editor of GUIDE POSTS. Her firm faith finds expression in Harriet Beecher Stowe's words:

When sinks the soul, subdued by toil, to slumber,
Its closing eye looks up to thee in prayer;
Sweet the repose beneath thy wings o'er-shading,
But sweeter still to wake and find thee there.
So shall it be at last, in that bright morning
When the soul waketh, and life's shadows flee;
Oh, in that hour, fairer than daylight dawning,
Shall rise the glorious tho't, I am with thee.

Pastors -- Lucky Fellows

Pastors are those people who, having decided to give their lives in service to Christ through his Church, are the leaders of congregations of people who also seek to serve. Pastors learn to know people by visiting with them at home, in hospitals, in places of business, in play places, and on social occasions — and in church meetings of a variety of kinds. Pastors undertake to translate the story of Jesus and his redeeming love so everyone can understand, accept, and use the blessings of God with joy. Pastors enter into human experience of joy and sorrow with the people of their parish, and bring light to dark places, courage in times of difficulty, and humility when success crowns human endeavor. Pastors undertake to help God lead people in paths of righteousness.

This is the season when pastors take vacations. Some people wonder why. They say the Devil takes no vacation. Neither does God. But pastors are neither. They are human, and the human machine needs rest. Pastors are constantly giving — at church and in the parish. Sermons become very stale unless there is time for refreshing the mind. Counsel to the sick, the young, the socialite, the person eager to earn money, the sinful, can not be its best unless the giver shares experience with others who are in the same business of counseling and unless there is time for refilling the soul by taking time to think, to feel, to study, and to pray. Vacations for ministers is not lost time; it is time spent in refurbishing the storehouse of knowledge and spiritual power.

Not everyone can be a pastor. This high privilege is for only a few — called to be pastors, called by the Infinite, and called by a congregation. Not all ministers of churches are real pastors. They may be business men and preachers without ever sensing that divine gift of being able to enter into the deep and difficult experiences with people. Some know the joy.

Lucky fellows! They have the confidence of God and a congregation.

Sometimes laymen — on vacation — remember their pastors back home, lift them in prayer, and hasten home to be there for the Sunday service when the pastor calls his sheep by name as he ministers for his Lord.

Membership In The Church Of Christ

On page 16 is a list of churches of the Southern Convention which have voted to enter the United Church of Christ, those which voted against, and those which had not reported a vote by June 1, 1961. (This may not be an exact list. Corrections will be made gladly.) These lists show clearly the churches that are now in the United Church of Christ and those that are not. What of the future?

The United Church of Christ is composed of all the Evangelical and Reformed congregations, and those Congregational Christian churches that have voted to enter. These will all be listed on the rolls of the United Church, and will work together through conferences, the Convention, and the General Synod with its instrumentalities — or what we have known as boards and committees. They will have no difficulty because the Constitution and By-Laws are now operative and the church machinery is at work.

For some time to come the Conferences and Convention will continue somewhat as heretofore, and certainly in the sense that churches which have not yet voted to share in the United Church of Christ can continue to be members of conference and convention as heretofore. It is hoped, devoutly so, that all the churches of the Convention will soon elect to be members of the United Church, the main stream of our denomination. There appears to be no real reason for any church or minister to miss the fellowship of the larger group.

As rapidly as can reasonably be done the United Church should become a reality in our midst. This will mean a re-grouping of churches so those near together can work together, and so all the work of the former groups can be done more effectively.

This larger fellowship can enrich the lives of all, and will be helpful to all who accept it quickly and happily. Hesitation and fear are harmful in this as in all other matters.

Many of our ministers are filling out the blanks which have been sent them and forwarding them to the Conference secretaries or the Convention Office so they will be enrolled in the United Church of Christ. Please remember that no church name and no minister's name will go on the list without it being requested by the person involved. No one else can do it. Be sure that your name is recorded in the United Church of Christ as well as in the Lamb's Book of Life. There may be some connection between the two.

“Ladies Of The Parsonage”

That lovely title was given to the recent advertisement of the Retreat to be held at Moonelon August 9-11. It is so much better than “The Gabbing Girls” or “The Parsonage Power,” or “Serving Saints,” — but who would think of using such phrases concerning the charming people who keep ministers fed, clothed, and inspired?

Well, here's hoping that ALL wives who supervise parsonages in the Southern Convention will be given freedom three days in August so they can share their secrets, talents, hopes and fears with others of like mind in the serene surroundings of Moonelon Camp, Elon College, North Carolina. “Ladies of the Parsonage,” we salute you, and wish you happiness.

Until comparatively few years ago the United States Weather Bureau issued weather predictions on a day-by-day basis. As knowledge of the atmospheric conditions advanced, forecasting, in addition to daily predictions, changed to a five-day basis, and in very recent years a 30-day forecast has been made on the first and fifteenth of the month.

Now an 88-year-old physicist who studied the weather and sun for nearly 50 years, and made numerous experiments and tests, has advanced a prediction of the weather to span 273 months.

This elderly weather and sun expert is Dr. Charles Greeley Abbot, a member of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C. He was secretary of the Smithsonian Institution for 26 years, retiring July 1, 1945, but has continued his studies of the weather.

An annual feature of Dr. Abbot's church is his lay sermon on the wonders of science. In these sermons Dr. Abbot does not explain away man's future existence but clarifies many of the mysteries of life.

Basically, Dr. Abbot's theory of the weather is that it repeats itself at regular intervals. Almanac makers have for more than 150 years based their calculations on certain cycles, but Dr. Abbot discarded all the generally accepted cycle theories and worked out one of his own. He says that the sun and the moon go through master cycles of 273 months each. These master cycles, he says, are broken into 27 periods of varying durations. Theoretically, the weather one day will be the same as it was 273 months previous. But variables, like smoke in the atmosphere keep the weather from repeating itself exactly.

Dr. Abbot can forecast the amount of rain or snow in any given area for any specific time within the 273-month period. In his recently published report he listed 32 cities and indicated how much snow and rain they will have month by month.

Some years ago when Dr. Abbot began to test his long-range weather theory the press gave him publicity and mentioned that he could forecast what the weather would be a year in advance in many areas. An Iowa farmer read about Dr. Abbot's theory and wrote asking what the precipitation would be in the farmer's area the next year. On the basis of Dr. Abbot's reply, the farmer planted more corn than usual and greatly profited by it. He sent Dr. Abbot's church a check for $100.00 after the scientist refused to accept the money himself.

Dr. Abbot says that some meteorologists say his weather theory is "old stuff", but that does not bother him. His 78-page report sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and the Association for Applied Energy, Phoenix, Arizona, is being used by hundreds of enterprises that are affected by the weather, especially farmers, oil men, bathing suit manufacturers, and transportation lines handling perishable fruits, vegetables, and livestock.

There is an old saying, improperly credited to Mark Twain (Samuel Clemens), that "everybody talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it." Dr. Abbot apparently has done something about it, but the old saying will likely persist, for Mark Twain issued repeated statements to newspapers of his day that it was his literary associate, Charles Dudley Warner, who made the statement.

C. B. Riddle

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

WORDS OF THE LORD

"The words of the Lord are pure words; as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times." Psalms 12:6.

The words of the Lord—how beautiful! "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you (John 15:3)." Or take this one: "And Jesus said unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only and my servant shall be healed." And when the centurion by his words of true logic and faith explained what he meant, "Jesus said to them that followed him, Verily I say unto you I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour!"

The words of the Lord! By them the spirit of man is made clean and active for good; by them the body of man is made whole and strong, and the width of the power and beauty of his love is magnified.

The words of the Lord, tried silver in a furnace of clay! Purified seven times, and thus perfectly pure! Above the demons that may control a strong man, the waves that may wreck the disciples' boat, or the fish that may disappoint expert, night-long fishermen! Words that may give faith, courage, and hope to countless saints across the centuries!

"And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all and followed him (Luke 5:11)." And how they followed him! Doing his will, preaching his word, turning the world upside down for his sake, and hazarding their very lives unto the death! His words were the words of the Lord; and they loved him, obeyed him, and showed that "greater love" which they had had from him, and gave their lives to the church and to the world and right back to him.

Has he spoken his words to you? Yes, indeed he has; and perhaps you have, like so many of us, taken them all too lightly. Said Jesus: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Let us trust them, do them!

Riggs Family Return To India

3843 Madeleine Drive
San Jose 27, California
May 25, 1961

Dear Friends of the Christian Sun:

When we last wrote, our baby had just arrived. It was such a thrill for the children to have a new baby sister — much better than any Christmas present we could have produced. It was a thrill not only in January, but continues to be so as our little Mary grows and develops. The older children are always testing her to see what she can learn today. They even try to teach her how to walk and talk at four and a half months. Little Mary amazes me by looking for all the world as if she might really succeed in doing one or both — but not quite!

The first of April Ed began his tour of the churches. It gave him a chance to meet and talk with many of you. Because of his long absence from home we decided to leave Kentucky and settle here in California, so as to be near my parents. It meant that I could be close enough to be near Mother, and also go with her on her visits to Daddy, who is in the hospital most of the time. He has been somewhat better since I was home, and is able to be at home for short visits, so it has made our move well worth while. I have been able to be of some companionship to Mother, and also transport her here and there in our car.

It was very difficult for Louis, Joy, and Martha to leave school in Kentucky. They had liked their classes and thoroughly enjoyed American school life. It was hard to explain to them that I had a mother who needed me. Now that the move is over, though, they have found new friends and are able to handle their school work here also. They have put on a lot of weight this furlough . . . I think it must be the fault of the good milk, ice cream, eggs and meats. They are eager to get back to India, though — and especially to our village.

Cordially,
Fran

Dear Friends,

It is much too long since we wrote last. We seem to react to American life like everybody else — too busy to find time to write, and yet nothing special to write about! However, in our case, if a lot of traveling about the country is news, we have plenty of that to report this time.

The decision to move the family out here was made rather suddenly the last minute. I quit the hospital job in Kentucky a week early and drove the family straight across the country the last week in March. We chose the southern route, through Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Arizona, in order to minimize the possibility of snow and cold weather. We did run into snow in Arizona anyway. However, I guess if we had waited till April we could have had our pick of all varieties of bad weather just about anywhere in the country.

After seeing Fran set up in an apartment here and the children started in school, I flew back east to start the six-week tour of churches. I am just back again, having had unforgettable visits with friends, new and old, in Massachusetts, Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Illinois, and Ohio. Everywhere I went I had experiences I would have like to share with the family. But taking the children out of school, and having a tiny baby continually on the move, for six weeks, would have been out of the question.

At any rate, it is definitely nice to be reunited with the family, and able to relax for awhile, except for a few local appointments. Since we sail from the West Coast, there will be no more traveling, or chance to see those of you whom we have missed. Our boat will definitely be the Canberra, leaving San Francisco July 20th, via Hawaii and Australia to Ceylon, arriving in Columbo August 18th. From there it is only twenty-four hours by train and ferry boat to home territory in South India. (But our first job will

Formerly known as Constantinople, it is a city of 1,500,000 on both sides of Bosphorus.

July

30—Miss Helen L. Morgan, on furlough in the U. S. 1960-61, is principal of American Academy for Girls in Uskudar, where she also teaches English. Miss Morgan went to Turkey for a 3-year term and accepted appointment as a career missionary in 1955.

31—Miss Mary Olmstead was appointed to a short term as teacher of English at American Academy for Girls after her graduation from the University of North Carolina in 1959.

August

1—Mr. and Mrs. Felix L. Powell began 5-year terms at American Academy in 1958. He teaches music, choral work, and beginning English; she teaches chemistry and psychology.

2—Miss Alice Reed was made a missionary emerita of the American Board in 1960, after 44 years of service in China and Turkey. She went to China in 1916 as a member of the Grinnell-in-China group. Following Japanese invasion in 1937 her presence as a neutral American helped to make possible a continued Christian witness in Shantung. She was repatriated on the Gripsholm in 1942, but returned to China in 1943, staying until Communist occupation made it necessary for her to leave. In 1951 she transferred to Near East, where she was assistant principal of Uskudar School. In both the Far East and the Near East, the name of Alice Reed is cherished by students, co-workers, and fellow-administrators.

3—Miss Anne Stewart, who served a two year term at Pierce College in Greece 1954-56, has retired from Phillips University in the U. S. and has gone for 3-year term as administrative secretary and English teacher at American Academy for Girls, Uskudar.

4—Miss Keitha VanEngen graduated from Oberlin College in 1960 and is teaching high school English at American Academy for Girls, Istanbul, for three years.

be to get Louis and Joy settled back in school in Kodai, so there will be a further delay before we are actually back in Kilanjunai.)

What do we look forward to then? It is hard to tell, because we have not heard whether the Indian Government will proceed with its plan to make Kilanjunai a model rural leprosy control center or not. If so, we will have to spend even more time on leprosy work and let other things slide until we get more personnel. If we are disappointed in the leprosy scheme, there are plenty of other programs begging to be done which will keep us busy and afford new opportunities for experimentation in the general field of rural medical and health services.

In any case, there is no doubt that we have been refreshed by the fur- lough year, and strengthened for whatever opportunities lie ahead by the medical refresher work and all the new contacts with friends and partners here at home. We are very grateful for both.

As far as we know, our address after the end of August will be the same as before:

I Wonder Why

When a single rose would have meant so much

Why do we wait till a person's gone
Before we tell of his worth?

Why do we wait, why not tell him now
He's the finest man on earth?

Why do we wait till a person's gone
To send him flowers galore,

When a single rose would have meant
so much

If we'd taken it to his door?

Why do we wait till he cannot hear
The good things that we might say.

Why put it off, why not tell him now
And share in his joy today?

Of course we're busy — that's our excuse,

But why, O why do we wait
To tell a person our love for him
Until it becomes too late?

Rev. A. M. Campbell was installed as minister of Eutaw, Fayetteville, Sunday, June 26. Rev. D. W. Shepherd, Rev. Carl Wallace, and Rev. Max Vestal participated in the service. Superintendent Clyde Fields preached the sermon. A reception for members and guests followed the service.

Oakland Vacation Church School

A highly successful Vacation Church School was conducted at Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia, June 26-30. Enrollment totaled 110 pupils, with 90 having perfect attendance. Thirty adults served on the faculty, staff, and committees. The theme for the week was "Living for Jesus," and on Friday night, June 30th, closing exercises were held before a large and appreciative audience of parents and friends. A liberal offering was received for the benefit of SHARE OUR SURPLUS. The members of the faculty and staff included the following:

Ever since I heard Dr. Charles H. Malik speak years ago at a Midwinter Meeting in Cleveland I have been an admirer of his and have followed his career with interest. Not to be confused with a Russian by a similar last name, this Dr. Malik has represented his country (Lebanon) in the United Nations, and at one time served as president of the U.N.

A product of Robert College in Beirut (one of "our" mission institutions, where one of his teachers was the father of Rev. Arthur Mason Brown), Dr. Malik is at present professor of philosophy and international relations at American University, Washington, D. C.

The Missions Council evening at the General Council consisted of a service of dedication and thanksgiving, a presentation of our program of advance, and an address by Dr. Malik on "The Gospel and the Light of the Spirit."

Showing how our trust in many things — democracy, free enterprise, science, existing religious order — was dissolving in this present time in which we live, Dr. Malik declared we must enter the "deepest depth" of the Spirit, in order to meet the needs of this age.

This will not be easy, for it will mean, continued Dr. Malik, a life of suffering, struggle, and hardship. We must struggle against "the world;" our old memories of the way "things have always been;" laziness and covetousness; raising ourselves above God in these days of great scientific discoveries; worship of ourselves, our country, our culture; the devil — security, magic, power, failure to believe in the power of God, Christ, the Holy Spirit.

Some apt quotations from his address remain with me:

"The Gospel is the only road to the depths of the spirit."

"A moment with Paul or one of the other saints is worth a life of stupid, human gossip."

"The besetting temptation of the life of the Spirit is to QUIT."

"More depends on American Christianity today than upon any other Christianity in history except the Christianity of the Apostles."

"May it be God's will that while everything is in a state of flux, you will help in redeeming what is still redeemable in this dissolving world to the end that the name of God the Father shall be lifted above every name."

New Moderator For General Council

Mrs. George E. Kahlenberg, of Two Rivers, Wisconsin, was elected moderator of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches during its meeting in Philadelphia. She will hold this office for two years.

Mrs. Kahlenberg has previously served as the moderator of the Wisconsin State Conference and as president of the Wisconsin Women's Fellowship. She is a member of the Nominating Committee and the Budget Committee of the United Church of Christ. She has been a delegate to the International Congregational Council, and has been an accredited visitor from that group to a meeting of the World Council of Churches.

At the same time Mrs. Kahlenberg has continued to serve her local church, both as choir director and as superintendent of the church school. She has three grown daughters. Her husband is a manufacturer of marine engines.

On Being Of Service

Of course we believe in service and the one safeguard we need is to be sure that the service grows out of genuine concern for the welfare of the person served, with no ulterior motive and with intelligent awareness of how the person can be best served.

Christians know that God loved the world, not just our section of it. They know that by being Father to all mankind, God made all men brothers and endowed each individual with inherent and inalienable dignity. As members of the same human family, Christians share concern for each other and do good not in order to prove that they are themselves good but because they actively and positively want to help the person being served.

The friendliest service of all is the spontaneous reaction of people who keep themselves close enough to God to share his will for the well-being of all his children.

World Community Day

"Freedom to Know" is the 1961 theme for World Community Day, which will be observed on November 3, under sponsorship of United Church Women.

The book for study and discussion is "Education, Women and the Church in the Americas."

Summer is a good time to begin preparations for the material aid projects which have been selected in keeping with the theme: children's clothing, piece goods, school bags, and school supplies, for distribution in Latin America.

Instructions are: follow any simple pattern for a child's dress or suit, size 5 to 8 years. Do not hem dress or suit, so each mother, in partnership, may finish the garment for her own child. There is a special need in the Caribbean area for boys' cotton top shirts and shorts.

School bag — Size and material used may vary. A big 8 x 12 inches with flap and fastener is the most useful. Shoulder strap attached at each side should be about three feet long. Each bag should contain: 6 pencils, 2 erasers, 1 box crayons, 2 pads paper, and 1 blunt pointed scissors.

Order the Basic WCD Packet (one or two, 50 cents each; three or more to one address, 40 cents each) from: P & D Dept., National Council of Churches, P. O. Box 340, Manhattanville Station, New York 27, N. Y.

Aid For Migrant Work Needed

Our Migrant Ministry is now in full swing and our needs this year are more than ever — hence our askings dare not be less than previous years unless we are to go down hill rather than up. This ministry challenged us in the wake of the TV program, "Harvest of Shame," and it continues to challenge all of us in North Carolina to a greater concern for these unfortunate thousands — 14,000 in North Carolina. Our increased work with the migrants in the form of salaried staff, day care centers, etc., creates a drastic strain on our bank balance during the summer months. Because of this, we would be most grateful for any contribution from a church, organization or individual who wishes to assist us in this worthwhile work. Mail any contributions to N. C. Council of Churches, Box 6637, College Station, Durham.

'Aunt Mollie' Observes Birthday

By W. C. Burton

Mrs. Mollie Sharpe of 818 Crescent Drive is known as "Aunt Mollie" by virtually every man, woman and child in her "old neighborhood," the New Lebanon Community of Rockingham County.

In that pleasant farming community she was born, grew up, got married and reared her own children. She has lived in Reidsville since 1947 and has added many new friends in her new neighborhood.

90th Birthday

Mrs. Sharpe recently celebrated her 90th birthday in gay spirits and excellent health. She is quite a remarkable lady in other ways, too, and that is why she is the lead story subject on the Reidsville scene today.

Born Mollie McCollum, daughter of David and Isabelle Massey McCollum, she was married to John Lanson Sharpe on February 2, 1892. It became a family jest that Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe shared their anniversary with the Ground Hog.

Mr. Sharpe was of the same community and he was one of the county's most ardently civic-minded citizens as well as a prosperous farmer and merchant. His store was on the Madison Road near Bethany. He regarded failure to vote on election day as an unthinkable omission for any rightminded citizen.

He was also a successful candidate to elective office. He was once coroner of Rockingham County and in 1907 and 1908 he went to Raleigh to represent the county in the North Carolina House of Representatives. He died in 1922.

Oldest Church Member

Though Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe were communicants of the same church they were on separate membership rosters. Mr. Sharpe remained a member of near-by Mount Bethel Congregational Christian Church. Mrs. Sharpe was a charter member of New Lebanon Congregational Christian Church and a teacher in its Sunday school. She is now its oldest member.

Of their seven children — five daughters and two sons — only the daughters are still living. They are Mrs. G. C. Moore and Mrs. T. L. Webb, both of Route 4, Reidsville, Mrs. Allen Trent and Misses Carrie and Jessie Sharpe, who live with their mother in Reidsville. Miss Carrie is a retired school teacher. Miss Jessie has taught school in the county for many years, has been a fourth grade teacher at Wentworth for the past 16 years.

Mrs. Sharpe also has five grandchildren, a round dozen great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. All her daughters and many of her "grands," "great-grands," etc. were on hand to help her celebrate her 90th birthday.

Every summer Mrs. Sharpe and the three daughters who live with her enjoy vacation trips together. Her 90 years have only sharpened (no pun intended) Mrs. Sharpe's taste for travel. They love to motor in the Western North Carolina mountains and through the Valley of Virginia. They have been twice to Cherokee, where they took in "Unto These Hills." They also enjoy the fare offered by the summer theaters in this section of the South.

Mrs. Sharpe loves to read, too, chiefly devotional and inspirational books. She enjoys TV and carries on a voluminous correspondence with friends. And she is an industrious knitter, specializing in afghans. Her exact afghan score during the past year is not known but it was certainly impressive.

"Aunt Mollie" enjoys living.

Progress At Apple's Chapel

By Mrs. R. E. Apple

The first records of Apples' Chapel United Church of Christ date back to December, 1834. During its 127 years the church has had two full-time pastors. Rev. John Lackey accepted the work in 1949, while a student at Elon College. He was the first minister who lived in the community. During his stay an educational building was built, a church budget was adopted, and the first every-member canvass was held. Mr. Lackey received a call to go to Winston-Salem and left Apples' Chapel December 30, 1954.

Rev. Bland Leebrick and his wife and children came to the community January 1, 1955. Since that time the church has built and paid for a new parsonage. The Sunday school has outgrown the educational building, and plans are underway for new classrooms, as well as a new sanctuary. The Women's Fellowship now has four active circles, each of which now has as a project the raising of funds for the new sanctuary, in addition to their missionary giving.

Rev. and Mrs. Leebrick have sponsored the work of the young people in the Pilgrim Fellowship. This year more of our young people went to camp at Moonelon than ever before. Mr. Leebrick has instructed young people contemplating marriage in the proper way to set up a Christian home. He has performed more weddings than any other minister in the history of the church.

Boards have been organized to take care of the different departments of church work. The rotation system for all officials has been established.

Mr. Leebrick has accepted a call to serve in the Valley of Virginia, and he and his family will be leaving us August 1. The church does not have words to express our appreciation for the wonderful service rendered during their six and a half years with us. The nights have never been too dark or too cold for Mr. Leebrick to go to the hospital or to a home the moment he was called. In times of tragedy or death he has gone to homes to comfort and serve. He has known no church bounds; his service has been community-wide. Our prayers and best wishes go with the Leebrick family to their new field. We are sure the same faithful service will be given there that we have received. Our loss is another's gain.

PALM STREET NEWS

By Mrs. J. T. Winslow

Curtis Brady was ordained as deacon of Palm Street Church, Greensboro, N. C., on Sunday morning July 9. Mr. Brady is also superintendent of the Sunday School. The Sunday School had a picnic at Camp Herman the last Saturday in June. Promotion day was observed recently.

There has been a contest between the ladies and men in our Wednesday evening prayer services. The men lost and are now planning a supper for the ladies. Our attendance keeps improving. We had 57 last week.

Rev. Odell Powell and his wife are doing a great work at Palm Street. We are proud to have them with us.

Building A New Church

Rev. Abraham Akaka, Synod Chaplain
United Church of Christ, July 4, 1961
MOTTO

Call to Worship: All join in saying John 3:16...also "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance."

Hymn: Faith of Our Fathers.

Our Lord's Prayer.

The Scripture Lesson: St. Mark 12:28-34.

The Prayer (adapted and revised by permission from "Litany" by Harry Emerson Fosdick into the form of prayer.)

Almighty God our Father, Creator of the Universe, Father of all mankind, before whose face the empires of the past have risen and fallen away, we thank thee for the deep faith on which the foundations of our land were laid. We thank thee for the sacrifices of its pioneers, for the remembrance of great leaders of our nation whose wisdom has saved us, whose devotion has chastened us, and whose characters have inspired us. And we thank thee for the great wealth and power thou hast committed to our care — by which we are challenged to do thy will on the earth. Establish this our nation in righteousness. In the personal character and public integrity of our President and congressmen, our governors and legislators, our mayors and city councils, in the men and women and children of America, make her foundations sure. . . .

Deliver us from the disgrace of political, economic, and domestic corruption, from malicious designs of lawless men; save us from prejudice of race and creed, from loss of liberty bequeathed to us by our forefathers, from careless acceptance of our heritage and neglect of its responsibilities, from failure of moral fibre in our citizenship, from vulgarity of life, from loss of social conscience and collapse of national character.

Keep us from pride of mind and boasting tongue. Save our national loyalty from narrowness and our flag from selfish shame. By our love for thee and our land, may we measure the love of others for their lands, honoring their devotion as we honor our own, and acknowledging thee one

God. Thus may we be instruments of thy peace in all the earth. In the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Meditation:

Today is the 185th birthday of our American Independence. Our nation's fathers chose as the motto of their new land: "In God We Trust." It was here in this historic city of Philadelphia that Independence Day was first observed. John Adams voiced the sentiment of our founding fathers when he said: "I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore."

It is our privilege to be here in Philadelphia on this July the Fourth. Here the great listener for the voice of our Lord, Quaker William Penn, dreamed of a place of complete religious and racial freedom, in which people of goodwill would live, in which fine and thrifty citizenship would be practiced. So he named this place after two ancient cities of Asia Minor — and this Greek word means "Brotherly Love."

Our nation's most precious shrines are here: Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell, Carpenter Hall, Christ's Church, the Betsy Ross House. How humble, and yet how great was the birth of our nation. Here walked George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, John Jay, Benjamin Franklin, John Paul Jones. Here met the first Continental Congress. Here was the first capitol of our nation.

Philadelphia was the first to raise its voice in opposition to slavery, the first abolition movement beginning here in 1784. In 1833 the American Anti-Slavery Society was organized here. I thank God that Philadelphia was the heart of our nation when it was born, for the commitment of this heart was to God — called by William Penn "Holy Experiment." Today throughout our nation "solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty" in whom our Founding Fathers trusted are taking place.

It was trust in God, faith in God, that made our forefathers strong, that made it possible for them to win not just a war — but a peace as well. Theirs was a "manifest destiny" — to open us this tremendous land to the oppressed and tired and poor of the world, to establish here a new nation under God. Our founding fathers pursued their duties in the consciousness of their covenant with God. They were his people, and he was their God. In him they trusted, and by him were they led. Our nation's best days of greatness and strength, of security and freedom, were days in which her motto was a description of her people, and when the heart and mind of Christians in America turned with the love of God in Christian missions to Hawaii and other parts of the world. And her worst days have been those in which she forgot God, lost faith and trust in him, began to pull away from others, began to want to be left alone. And as in a family of persons, so in a family of nations — this loss of trust and faith in God brought a sense of hopelessness. Faith and trust which had been vital, living words because of a covenant relationship with God now became more and more meaningless. Even churches began to speak of faith and trust with difficulty — as if it were something entirely man made. God was left out. Faith was man captaining his soul and mastering his destiny. Having lost our faith and trust in God, we had nothing vital to offer the peoples of the world, except our money — in handout fashion. Bill Lederer today is saying in his books, "Have we not become as nothing because we speak falsely?" We are being weighed in the balance and found wanting. All we like sheep have gone astray, everyone to his own way.

Oh, how well we remember our nation's devotion in its youth, and how plain is the sight of our nation and the nations going after things that are worthless — forgetting our heritage of faith, changing our glory for things that do not profit, hewing out cisterns for ourselves that are broken and that can hold no water, forsaking the Lord our God. Drug-store bookracks have become our nation's libraries, feeding degeneration to the mind and spirit of our youth, until America is becoming a wild vine. We gad about lightly, even while we are being put to shame by a modern Assyria. Once the throne of the Lord, once respected and beautiful because the Lord was her God, now a nation afraid for her very life, afraid that her lovers to whom she has been handing out millions for the slightest favors actually seek her life.

We cannot cry "peace, peace" when there is no peace. We cannot steal, lie, murder, commit adultery, burn incense to Baal and go after other gods — and then come and stand before our Lord in our churches and pray for deliverance. The voice of our Lord was never so clear to our nation as it is now, for he is saying again: "Obey my voice. But if you will not listen, then I will utterly pluck you up and destroy you."

On this July the Fourth — can we say again — "In God We Trust"? Other faiths have risen to fill the emptiness caused by a waning and weakening covenant people in the west. Marxism has made its militant march around the world. And we in the west, armed only with material things and no dynamic faith, can only stand befuddled by how Russia can accomplish so much with so little.

Here is one of the great challenges you and I and the members of the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ have — the challenge being given to us today by our Lord to save our nation and all mankind, to unite our nation and the nations under God. It was for such a time as this that God sent his Son into the world. And his simple direction was "Follow Me."

The international and social problems of our day are not more serious, for size, than the problems our Lord and his disciples faced in the world of militant Caesar. The mind and spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ is the eternal answer to all of man's pilikias. Our nation's recovery will come according as we let his mind and spirit be in us — as we resist that which is evil, as we love those who are weak and heavy-laden, as we trust in God.

No man-exalting way of life can succeed, no system of trust in man can long endure. No nation can succeed by going against God. There are back streets with stables in every nation, potential Bethlehems in which Shepherds and Wise Men still find Christ and speed the day when their nations must serve the needs of their own people.

There is a road that leads to nowhere, and many there are who travel

Leaders Of Laymen

Dr. J. Earl Danieley, president of Elon College, was named president of the National Laymen's Fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches during the General Council meeting in Philadelphia.

A member of the Fellowship's board for the past five years, Dr. Danieley will be leading the national body of his denomination until August of 1962, when it will meet with the Churchmen's Brotherhood of the Evangelical and Reformed Church to form the Churchmen's Fellowship of the new United Church of Christ.

Other officers who will serve with Dr. Danieley include Dale Peak, of Holiday, Utah, vice-president; and Walter Wood, Cincinnati, Ohio, secretary. William Peterson of St. Louis was named National Director. Retiring officers of the Congregational Christian fellowship are William Bradford Smith of Madison, Wisconsin, president, and Lloyd Morton of Royalston, Massachusetts, vice president. Wood was re-elected secretary.

The Board of Directors of the Fellowship include: J. Earl Danieley, North Carolina; Dale Peak, Utah; Walter Wood, Ohio; Bernard Roberts, Maryland; William Richardson, Rhode Island; Arthur Button, California; Elgin Hychew, Louisiana; W. P. Ingram, Alabama; Don Burr, New York; Ernest Hildner, Illinois; Charles Gunn, Kansas; Myraum Burket, Michigan.

The uniting meeting in August of next year will be held at Purdue University. Dr. Danieley and others will be working toward unification measures in the meantime.

Dr. Danieley has been serving with the fellowship as chairman of the committee to revise and rewrite the Churchmen's Fellowship constitution.

While attending the General Synod meeting of the new United Church of Christ in Philadelphia, Dr. Danieley served as scribe on the Credentials Committee and as a member of the Budget Committee.

He was in Philadelphia the previous week attending the General Council meeting of the Congregational Christian denomination.

At Elon College

The Skinner organ in Whitley Auditorium at Elon College is undergoing a complete renovation.

When the present work is completed, the organ will have 37 ranks, or a total of 2,535 pipes. The present organ has 24 ranks, or 1,670 pipes.

In addition to the adding of the pipes, a new console will be built, a new blower will be installed, and the existing components will be cleaned, re-leathered, and remodeled.

The renovation is being made possible by contributions to the Elon College Organ Fund.

President J. Earl Danieley announced recently the appointment of two new acting department chairmen for the 1961-62 academic year at Elon College.

Professor Tully Reed has been named Acting Chairman of the Department of English. Serving as acting head of the Department of Mathematics will be Professor Wesley Alexander.

W. E. Butler, treasurer and business manager of Elon College, is attending the College Business Management Institute held July 23-29 at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

Mr. Butler was awarded a scholarship for the week of study by the Southern Association of College and University Business Officers.

A Dollar I Gave

Four thousand for my brand new car,
Five thousand for a piece of sod,
Ten thousand I paid to begin a house.
A dollar I gave to God.
A tidy sum to entertain
My friends in pointless chatter,
And when the world goes crazy mad,
I ask: "Lord, what's the matter?"
Yet there is one big question.
For the Answer I will search;
With things so bad in this old world,
"What's holding back my church?"

Elon Graduates Serve Denomination

A number of Elon College folk are taking active roles not only in the former Congregational Christian denomination but also with the newly organized United Church of Christ.

Dr. J. Earl Danieley, college president, will serve as new president of the National Laymen's Fellowship.

Eight new superintendents were recognized by the Congregational Christian denomination prior to the official formation of the United Church of Christ. Two of those recognized were Elon graduates, Rev. Clyde L. Fields, of Southern Convention, and Rev. Duane N. Vore, of Michigan.

There are 37 superintendents in the entire Congregational Christian unit of the United Church of Christ, and five are Elon graduates. Other than Mr. Fields and Mr. Vore, they include Rev. Fred P. Register of the Nebraska State Conference, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., of the Southeast Convention, and Rev. Archie H. Hook of the Washington State Conference.

Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Sr., is an honorary alumnus of Elon and is now serving as interim superintendent in Pennsylvania.

In the Communion service that was a part of the recognition service in Philadelphia, Dr. William J. Andes, Minister of the Elon Community Church, and an alumnus of the college, was one of the 10 ministers from the denomination to participate.

Godwin Nominated

By W. T. Scott, Sr.

State Senator Mills E. Godwin, Jr., of Chuckatuck, Virginia, was nominated as the Democratic candidate for Lt. Governor in the Virginia primary July 11. He has served as a member of the Virginia House of Delegates and Senate since 1947.

Mr. Godwin is a member of the Oakland Christian Church in Chuckatuck, and makes his home in that village. He is an attorney in Suffolk. He is a member of the Oakland church's board of deacons, and is the teacher of the 75-member Men's Bible Class. He is a member of the board of trustees of Elon College, and is a devoted churchman.

Dorcas, A Woman Of Good Works

Background Scripture: Acts 9:36-43.

Devotional Reading: Romans 12:3-8.

Memory Selection: Do not neglect to do good works and share what you have, for such sacrifices are pleasing to God. Hebrews 13:16. (RSV)

In the biographical sketches of the personalities in the New Testament which we have been considering thus far, we have had a series of "candid camera shots," several passages of Scripture which give insight into their character and works. In the case of Dorcas, our subject for today, we have only one "flashlight," six brief verses. Indeed one verse, Acts 9:36, gives us about all we know of her life. In it is summarized her life story. It tells us where she lived — in Joppa, a town or city on the seacoast. It tells us her name — Tabitha, which means "gazelle," or Dorcas as she is more familiarly known. It tells us of her character — she was full of good works and alms deeds, or acts of charity. Verse 39 tells us more in detail about her good works. The widows who came to mourn her, broken-hearted, showed Peter "the coats and garments which Dorcas had made, while she was with them." There it is, that is all the Bible tells us about her life and works.

Of course there is a sequel to that story. That sequel tells how Dorcas died, and was brought back alive from the dead by Simon Peter, who had been hastily summoned by her neighbors. But it tells us nothing about her life after this amazing and miraculous incident. She passes from our sight, with the words that Peter "gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, presented her alive."

She passes from sight, but not from history. Her name and memory have been perpetuated in hundreds and perhaps thousands of "Sewing Circles" and "Societies" and Bible Classes. I was pastor of a church, The Christian Temple, which had as one of its organized classes "The Dorcas Bible Class," and perhaps still does. And hundreds of other groups honor the memory of this good woman, and honor themselves, by using her name for their organization. It is an amazing thing in a way. But in another way it is simply one of many illustrations of how God memorializes ordinary folks by giving them an illustrious and immortal name.

Dorcas must have been a well-to-do woman. It was her custom to make garments and give them to the poor and needy in the city. Many a person, both young and old, received from her hands a well-made garment of good material, a work of art, and a gift of love. She evidently had dedicated her needle to the glory of God and to the service of her fellowmen. It is not likely that she talked much about the thing. Her deeds were of the humble, hidden variety. There

To Build A Better World

Our task . . . I know . . . to build a better world.
But how?
The world is very big and complicated now.
And we are weak and helpless, God.
What can we do?
Do I hear the answer? Yes! It's "Build a better you."
We start with God,
He has the plan
He understands
He sent his son
Who bade us go and teach.
We have the Church
Whose mission guides us on
To heal and feed.
Perhaps the world is no so big
And we are not as helpless as we think.
We cannot be
With God, our help!
Our task—it's ours—our destiny—
To build a better world.
Marguerite E. Clendenen

were perhaps many things that she could not do in the local church, but there was one thing she could do — she could sew. And when she looked out and around and saw people who needed clothes, her love for God moved her to do something for his children. And what she did, she did with all her heart.

What an epitaph for anybody — a person "full of good works and almsdeeds" or "charity." As has been said, you will find Dorcas' descendants in the Dorcas Societies of the Christian Churches, needles in hand, or in some other way, giving of their time and talent and money to the relief of the poor. And there are many more of her descendants you'll never meet or know about, because they work alone and hidden at some obscure task that nobody knows or notices except the poor. Blessed are they among women! And thank God for them.

We are confronted in the story of Dorcas with a miracle. The story pointedly states that Dorcas died, and was laid out for burial. It just as pointedly states that as a result of Peter's prayer, and his command to arise, that she opened her eyes, and sat up, and assisted by him to stand, she was presented to the group alive. This would indicate that in the Early Church at least, God gave his servants the power to heal and to make alive. The Early Church believed that wherever and whenever the Risen Christ was present, there was miraculous power. Jesus gave this power to his disciples and it was often used by them. The modern Church is beginning to explore, and with heartening results, the power of divine healing. Perhaps it has been an all-too-long-neglected aspect of the work of the Church.

There is one interesting word in this passage about Dorcas. Twice are the Christians called "saints" at Lydia. This is the word the Paul always uses to describe the church member, for he always writes his letters to the "saints" that are in such and such a place. The word has far-reaching associations. It comes from the Greek work "hagios" which is sometimes translated "holy." But the root meaning is really "different." Originally it was applied to Israel — they were a different people, a holy people in that sense. But Israel failed in her destiny. She was disobedient and failed God and rebelled against him. By her actions she lost her privileges and "the Church became the Israel of God." That is why this word is used to describe a member of the Church. A Christian is basically a man who is different from the people who are merely people of the world. And this difference lies in the fact that he is called for the special purposes of God. Christians are different because they are chosen for a greater task and for a greater service. We are saved to serve.

Sponsors Really Help

Walstein W. Snyder, Superintendent

There are many ways by which a child can be greatly helped through sponsorship. For instance, each summer a number of sponsors make it possible for their boys and girls to attend camp, either at Moonelon or perhaps some other camp in North Carolina or Virginia. Other sponsors elect to have their child visit them and the boys and girls eagerly await the time to go to see their "class." Children who do visit with their sponsors usually do so at four times during the year: Easter, Thanksgiving, Christmas and for a part or all of the summer vacation.

Sunday School Classes, Women's Fellowships, Laymen's Fellowships, other church groups, and individuals who sponsor children have various ways of remembering their children. Some of the sponsors take care of all the clothing needs of the child they sponsor, plus remembering that child on special occasions with a card and perhaps a little spending money and also sending a regular monthly allowance of a dollar or so to the child. Others who sponsor children request that we advise them when their boy or girl needs clothing and they furnish the child's needs, either by sending the articles directly to the child or by sending the money to the office and letting the house mother or the seamstress make the purchases for the child. Groups which are nearby often have their child for a week-end visit at which time they purchase the necessary clothing or perhaps have the child for a shopping trip on a Saturday to Burlington or Greensboro.

The sponsors are very kind to the children. It is a great help to each child to have a sponsor, not only from the material side of it, but from the standpoint of having friends who really care for the boys and girls and are concerned for their needs and welfare. The sponsorship is, of course, also of great benefit to us in providing the clothing and other needs of our children.

We have several children who do not have sponsors and we would be happy to have inquiries from any groups or individuals who might be interested in helping one of our boys or girls. We will be hoping that in the near future all of our children will have sponsors who are interested in them and kind enough to help them meet their needs.

One more word about sponsorship: in planning for the four major vacation times during the year (Easter, summer vacation, Thanksgiving and Christmas), it is most helpful to the administrative staff if sponsors will write directly to the office regarding the vacation time for the child, telling when they will come for the child, how long the child will visit with them and when they will return him to our campus. It is quite a large task to arrange the vacation schedule for 75 to 80 children and it is very helpful to us in the office if the sponsors will write directly to us instead of writing the child.

If you or any group in your church are interested in sponsoring a boy or girl we will be most happy to hear from you.

Every two or three weeks Melville Dairy gives us some ice cream and this is a most welcomed treat to our boys and girls at any time, and especially so during these hot summer days. They give us half gallons and pints of assorted flavors of ice cream, Dixie cups, popsicles, push-ups and varieties of sherbet. We are most grateful to the dairy for sharing with our boys and girls in this generous way.

Many friends help to make it possible for us to care for our children and also remember them with special treats. It is most gratifying to us to have their interest and assistance in making our endeavor possible.

Building A New Church

it. But there is a road that leads to life abundant and life eternal, and it is found by those who trust in God and who are then able to pray even as the world crumbles around them, "Father, into thy hands I commit my heart and mind and soul and strength. Do with me as thou wilt." With such children of God, the future of mankind is secure. Their backs are no longer bone-less, neither are their legs filled with water. They become as shepherds who rise up to feed the lambs and sheep in every nation with the love of the Lord.

It is written: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Our Lord calls us, then, to be more than definers of doctrines, and connoisseurs of creeds. He calls us to be followers of Christ, practitioners of the motto "In God We Trust," doers of the truth we already know. At Kawaiacao Church, the congregation found a new beginning for the work of our Lord when it chose for itself a motto derived from the Great Commandment. It was in October of 1957 that the members of Kawaiacao voted that the motto of the church would be, (holding up three fingers) "God First, Others Second, Self Last." From that motto has been derived an entirely new church structure and life.

Let our beloved America be beautiful again. Let her return unto the Lord who gives beauty for ashes, and the oil of joy for mourning... Let us help her remember who and what she really is under God that she may be not only one nation under God, but may lead in the power of Christ to the building of one world under God with liberty and justice for all.

Hymn: America.

Benediction: The peace of God that passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son, our Lord, Jesus Christ.

DAILY DUTIES

We pray, O God, that this day we may do whatever duty lies before us with cheerfulness and sincerity of heart and in all things fearlessly do what we know to be right. Thou alone can save us from hypocrisy and pretense, and keep us truthful, unselfish and strong. And so we shall be brought to the ending of the day unashamed and with a quiet mind. Amen.

Here And There Among The Churches

Thirteen new members joined Apple's Chapel during the morning service, Sunday, July 16. Rev. Bland Leebrick is the pastor.

Summer services at our High Point church begin at 9:30 with Bible study, continue with worship and sermon and end at eleven o'clock. You are invited to attend at Tomlinson School.

During the absence of the pastor, Rev. Carl Wallace, the morning service at Southern Pines Sunday, July 30, was led by Mr. Walter Daeke. Guest speaker was Mr. John Chappell.

Sermon topics used Sunday, July 23: Rev. Bland Leebrick, Apple's Chapel, "God Always Does Things On Time"; Rev. Carl Wallace, Southern Pines, "Strange Paradoxes of the Kingdom."

Dr. James M. Hess, former professor at Elon College, is visiting friends in the Elon College community for several days. He recently returned from Virginia, where he was a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Leon E. Smith, and where he preached a Sunday morning sermon in our Bayside church. His home address is Route 2, Box 822-A, Oregon City, Oregon.

Louis Wilkins, a 1958 graduate of Elon College and for the past three years a teacher of English at American College, Tarsus, Turkey, spoke at the 11 a.m. service at Elon Community Church, July 30. Mr. Wilkins, an associate member of that church and a member of the Liberty church, Nathalie, Virginia, will return to Turkey in September to continue teaching.

Mr. John Biggerstaff, assistant superintendent of our Home for Children, will conduct the morning service at Mt. Zion Sunday, August 6.

If your church has not voted to become part of the United Church of Christ, please consider doing so before the fall Conference session.

Ministers in the Western N. C. Conference who wish to be enrolled in the United Church of Christ should send their request to the Conference Secretary, F. C. Lester. In other Conferences the blanks should be sent to the Convention Office at Elon College.

Ministers are in short supply. Churches that once were satisfied with services monthly now want services every Sunday with a minister living in their midst. Wonderful! Question: What are our churches doing to secure recruits for the ministry?

Guest speakers at Elon Community Church: August 6—Rev. Clyde Fields, superintendent of the Southern Convention; August 13 — John Biggerstaff, assistant superintendent of the Home for Children; August 20 (Baccalaureate Service for Elon College) — Rev. Cecil Robbins, president of Louisville College.

Camps are continuing at Moonelon. Children and young people are learning the Bible, missionary personalities, and how to live as Christians. They share worship experiences, and they dream of a good world in which they will be of value. Question: Are the youth of your church among those present, learning, dreaming, worshipping?

Dr. W. J. Andes served as the vesper leader for the Southeastern Audio-Visual Conference held last week at Christmount Christian Assembly, Black Mountain, N. C.

The mother of Mrs. Tudor (W. B.) Williams of Newport News entered the hospital July 25, and is very sick. Monday morning she appeared to be a little better. Tudor's many friends will share her anxiety, and will join her in prayers.

PRESERVE YOUR CHURCH HISTORY

Church history is made week by week, not just when some big event happens. This history is usually recorded in Sunday bulletins, letters to members, and other printed matter. We become accustomed to seeing these things and may forget their value. Try writing the history of the church 100 years ago and you will quickly discover how important little recorded items become.

Don't throw away your history. Preserve it for those who will live after you are gone.

An excellent way to do this is to send copies of all printed or mimeographed material to the Church History Room at Elon College, North Carolina. Mrs. Oma U. Johnson, Curator, will gladly place all historical material on file so it will be ready for future generations to learn what your church did in your day. Sending this material should be the specific responsibility of some person. Materials can be sent weekly, monthly, or as you like. The point is that if you send it your history will be preserved; if you do not the chances are that there will be no record left for future historians.

New Pastor At St. Andrew's, Richmond

Rev. Victor C. Hayes of Sydney, Australia, and recently a teacher at Hood College, Frederick, Maryland, has become the new minister at St. Andrew's United Church of Christ, Richmond, Virginia, succeeding Rev. Carl Marks.

Mr. Hayes, born in Sydney, Australia, arrived in the United States in June, 1954, and has been on permanent immigrant status since 1957. He was ordained in March, 1952, by the Methodist Church of Australia. His educational achievements include the following degrees: L. Th. from Melbourne College of Divinity (1950); B.A. from the University of Sydney (1951); B.D. (Magna Cum laude) from Union Theological Seminary, New York City (1955); and S.T.M. from Union Seminary in 1956. He has completed his residence requirements for Ph.D. (Union-Columbia) and is currently completing his Dissertation on the "Philosophy of Schelling."

Mr. Hayes has had experience as a pastor, having served four years as Minister of Methodist Circuits in Australia; one year as pastor of St. John's Methodist Church, Jersey City, New Jersey; one year as Associate minister at Fort Schuyler Presbyterian Church, in the Bronx, New York; and four years of part-time, interim, and summer appointments within the Potomac Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, as follows: St. John's, Baltimore, Md.: May-Sept., 1958 (full time); Huber Memorial, Baltimore, Md.: Sept. 1958-Feb. 1960 (16 months, including summer visiting program); Boonsboro-Keedysville-Sharpsburg: Feb. - July, 1960; and Brunswick, Md.-Lovettsville, Va.: from August '60 until his arrival in Richmond.

As a college teacher, Mr. Hayes has had experience as Asst. Professor of Religion and Philosophy at Hood College, and Instructor for Extension Division of the University of Virginia.

Mr. Hayes also served as Laboratory Assistant, then Assistant Chemist in Industrial Chemistry 1942-46, was a Dodge Missionary Fellow at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, 1955-56, was an Accredited Visitor (with wife) to Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches, Evanston, Ill., and a member of the World Methodist Conference, at Lake Junaluska, N. C., in 1956. He is the author of We Came Together, a popular report on Evanston, published by the Australian Council for W.C.C., 1954. He is a member of the National Association of Biblical Instructors and has had articles in Australian denominational journals, as well as book reviews.

The Hayes family have three children: Vicki, nine; Helen, three; and Christine, one year old.

Mr. Hayes came alone ahead of his family, but now they are all living in the parsonage on Cherokee Road, Richmond, Virginia.

EASTERN VIRGINIA SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

By Mrs. W. E. Smalling

Tuesday, July 18, a very hot day, the Bayview church was the setting for the 92nd annual session of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention.

Judging by the size of the congregation, one would conclude that old age was creeping up on us fast.

It was a quite interesting and harmonious, if somewhat perspiring session. One had to be sympathetic toward the president, Mr. Donald L. Taylor. There had been so many changes because of vacations, previous commitments, etc., that he was quite unsure as to who was who.

The highlight of the morning was an address by Miss Martha Brittle of Suffolk on Christian education. It was a most instructive message. Then there were some quite important ministers and laymen from the Southern Convention. The special music of this session was a joy to all listeners. Mrs. Jo Ann Hyatt, whose beautiful voice is a joy to all who hear her, sang "If Christ Came Back." Mrs. Hyatt is a granddaughter of Mrs. B. G. Harrell, who was a charter member of the Bayview church.

A bounteous, tasty, well-prepared meal is always a highlight, and lunch left nothing to be desired.

The six work shops were very good, full of good information, splendidly prepared, and much help to those participating.

Altogether it was a lively occasion and the Bayview church members enjoyed and appreciated all the compliments of the visitors on their new sanctuary, which will be dedicated September 10, 1961.

INFORMATION ABOUT EARLY NORTH CAROLINIANS NEEDED

If the records of your church date back as far as 1810, perhaps you can be of help to Mabel Sheppard of San Jose, California.

She is working on her "family tree," and needs information about some of her ancestors who lived in North Carolina. She would like to know who the parents of the following people were, and where they lived:

Dr. Jesse Marshall, born in 1810.

Mrs. Nancy Lewis Marshall, born in 1810.

Isaac Graves, born in 1810.

If you have information about these people, write to Mabel A. Sheppard, 1450 Walnut Grove Avenue, San Jose 26, California.

Medical Service In South India

The rough going in China forced medical doctor Edward Riggs and his wife Frances, a nurse, to leave that unfortunate country for service somewhere else. Needed in a hundred places, they requested assignment to the small mission hospital at Kilanjunai in South India.

Thanks to a jeep, Dr. Riggs is not limited to Kilanjunai itself but is able to visit the sick four days a week at various roadside clinics set up under the best shade trees available.

Most of the clinics are for the treatment of leprosy, and Dr. Riggs and his four assistants work with patients in all stages of the disease, using among other services the miraculous drugs that arrest a case of leprosy and give hope where there used to be none.

Preventive medicine is beginning to bear fruit. But there is still an endless road ahead, in both education and care, with leprosy, scabies, tuberculosis, eye diseases, and all the ills that follow from chronic malnutrition and poverty. We could use a dozen Christian hospitals like the one at Kilanjunai, and many more Christian medical teams like Ed and Frances Riggs. This is of Our Christian World Mission, your mission and mine.

The Visitor From Outer Space

Earth's people are greatly concerned these days about the race to outer space, the unexplored regions beyond earth's atmosphere. The first man to circle the globe is justly recognized as a pioneer of this modern age, and the two Americans who went briefly into outer space and returned safely have written their names on the pages of history. We gaze at the moon these days not with the sentimentalism of lovers a generation ago, but with eagerness to know who will be first to land on its surface and bring back information about that far-away reflector of sunlight. Some seem to think that people live on the planet Mars, and there is a growing eagerness for some of earth's people to investigate by making the long trip there and back. Those of us who remember speed, science, and religion at the dawn of this century have difficulty in thinking of such things as being possible, but the younger set have no such difficulty. They are not sure but what Martians have already visited the earth.

All of us need to be reminded again and again that ours is the planet which has really been visited from outer space.

The Great God who made the Milky Way, who set the planets circling about our sun, the One to whom time and space have little significance, whose home is beyond all our imaginings — He sent a messenger all the way from heaven to earth, a Visitor from outer space to the planet called Earth. He had a message for the people here, a message best revealed in the Divine Son of the Living God. They called his name Jesus, because he was to save his people from their sins.

Our purpose in the international race to reach the moon or one of the planets may not be clearly defined — it may be national pride, eagerness to experiment, or the challenge of the unknown. No one has yet suggested, so far as this writer knows, that the purpose for going would be to bring spiritual help to whatever creatures may be there. But that was the reason for earth's Visitation.

So many exciting discoveries coming so rapidly tend to absorb our thinking until we may forget some things that are of most vital importance. Actually the people of earth cannot be too proud of what they have done here. Eroding soil, disappearing forests that have been growing since the time of Moses, two-thirds of the people hungry all the time, wars that destroy millions of people, ignorance that threatens to become universal, hatreds that divide families, nations and races, and now the brilliant prospect that civilization can and may be destroyed in our time — all these should give us concern, and make us ashamed. Until we learn how to live on earth, why become excited about dashing out into outer space? Why not feed the hungry, make it possible for people to live in houses, stop this constant increase of refugees by permitting freedom to all people, and fill the churches with worshippers?

The fact that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" to be his representative on this planet gets far too little consideration today, but is of tremendous importance. Humble acceptance of that Divine Gift can change the world of human relations, and that is exactly what the Giver expected. In him we can have peace as individuals, nations, the world. Without him, without the humble acceptance of his Way, there can be no happiness or hope.

Because earth is the Visited Planet it is reasonable to assume that God is continually interested in what people do, and it can be hoped that he will not fail in his venture of redemption. Many of us may be lost from all that is good, but squarely across the Broadway to Destruction stands the glowing message "God Visited This Planet."

"Your Sins And Mine"

For stimulating and exciting reading try "Your Sins and Mine." It is one of the Golden Medal Books printed in 1955 by Faucett Publications at 35 cents. Taylor Caldwell is the author of this unusual religious novel.

Description of conditions and people make one feel right at home. That is, until the earth refuses its blessings to the human family, the rain fails, the earth is covered with poisonous weeds and scorpions, food practically disappears, and people and animals die like flies.

Government can do nothing. Science can do nothing. Hope flees from the world. Death to all living creatures seems assured.

And then — somebody prays. Oh, yes, there were Sunday schools, churches and ministers all the while. But prayer of the right kind was not practiced until tragedy had covered the earth. Then in distress someone prayed "God be merciful to me, a sinner!" Then the earth restored its blessings, and, as the multitudes learned to make the same prayer, destructive forces disappeared and beautiful life returned.

The book is brief, different, exciting, challenging, convincing, and worthy of serious thought. Try it. Your sins and mine may be just what is wrong with our world.

Summer Suns

These hot, sultry days make one become conscious of the sun that gives light and heat to our earth. Shade is inviting — unless one is a seeker after sun-tan at popular beaches. What fun to sit with a book in the shadow of a tree when the sun is pouring its heat about one and gentle breezes whisper around!

On such occasions The Christian Sun may sometimes be substituted for a book. Because there may be more time for reading in summer, and because church news filters in to the editor less often, we give some longer articles than usual. It is our hope that you will find time to read even the longest. They are selected for their worth, and a little time in reading and meditation will pay good dividends.

Incidentally, it may be a wonderfully good thing to pass your paper to someone else with your recommendation of certain items that may interest them. New subscribers are always welcome, and while "summer suns are glowing" may be just the time to secure some new readers for this little church paper.

In the same spirit that the people in the United States honor the father of their country, the Azorians honor, by annual celebration, not the father of their isles, but the finder of them, and somewhat in the same manner as many parts of this country annually honor Christopher Columbus.

Azorians are the inhabitants of the Portuguese archipelago of "sea-grown mountains" which constitute Europe's westernmost outpost, and appears on the map as a cluster of nine small dots. These are the Azores which have an area of 922 square miles and a population of approximately 360,000.

This means that the Azores are 13 times the size of the District of Columbia and have a population of approximately one-third the number of inhabitants of the Federal city.

The celebration in the Azores always takes place on August 15, the 529th anniversary to be observed this month. In 1432 a Portuguese mariner, Goncal Velho Cabral, not to be confused with the Cabral who planted Portugal's colors in Brazil, was sent out into the western unknown by Prince Henry the Navigator, a Portuguese, father of modern exploration, who had gleaned from an old Arabic map that there were islands somewhere in the Atlantic.

Cabral, carrying out instructions, finally found a small isle which he named Santa Maria. It took nearly two years, however, to discover the full nine, as they are widely scattered. One in particular, Pico, must have been quite a surprise to Cabral, for it consists of a cone rising sensationally out of the bosom of the Atlantic to a height of 7,612 feet. It is one of the many natural wonders of the world.

The group of islands was given the name Azores, which is the Portuguese word for hawks. But Cabral, being a better navigator than an ornithologist, made a mistake in identification, for what he actually saw and mistook for hawks were hundreds of buzzards hovering over the crags. Nevertheless, the name has persisted for 529 years.

Colonization of the Azores began soon after their discovery, Prince Henry offering free transportation and free land to settlers. Later the islands were no longer considered colonies but a part of Portugal. Angra is the capital.

Like many others in tropical sections of the world, Azorians engage in fruit-growing, gathering tea, production of sugar, fishing and basket making. There is no extensive farming as is found in many other countries.

Until American immigration restrictions came into force, thousands of Azorians came to the United States every year. The emigrant's dollars sent to poverty-stricken families left behind brought much prosperity to the archipelago. A large proportion of the old farms and plantations on the islands were built with United States and Brazilian money.

Making Goodness Attractive

The year that William Lyon Phelps graduated from Yale, Professor Henry Drummond came to America. Commenting some time later on the preaching ability of Dr. Drummond, Professor Phelps said that although he had heard Beecher, Phillips, Spurgeon, and the most famous preachers of the world, Drummond was the most persuasive speaker on the Christian religion he ever knew. He made goodness attractive by making it fruitful. This was the burden of his preaching: "I ask you to become Christians not because you might die tonight, but because you are going to live tomorrow. When Jesus condemned people, He condemned them not because they had done wrong, but because they had not done right. Sins of the body are not the only sins; there are sins of the disposition, which are worse and are often found in church members. Jesus came on earth to found a society; everyone who wishes to follow Him and lead a better life is a Christian — he belongs to His society. The entire Christian theology and Christian ethics are summed up in the two words — Follow Me."

Dr. Phelps said that he heard Drummond say those things forty-four years before, and he still believed them. And so do I!

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

THE HOLY HILL FOLKS

"Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" Psalms 15:1.

I should like to live in that restricted residential section — God's holy hill. It is not that I feel worthy, but I hope that wishing I were worthy helps; and striving in my heart to measure up — I hope that helps, too. How about you?

For one thing, it must be lovely, the people good and kind, and neighborly. And, for another thing, no one can put you out of it, nor are the folks there transient, and therefore perhaps a bit less interested in its beauty and corporate success, as a place of homes that are appreciated and loved, "these shall never be moved." How about that?

There must be trees, and lawns, lovely gardens, fragrant farmlands, fresh running streams, good roads, sweet lanes, and lovely resting places!

It is not too expensive to get in. The door is open, Jesus saw to that! It cost enough originally, and those who get in must not be afraid of sacrifice, nor brave doings.

In which of the eight qualifications would I fail, if I should fail? Or you, if you should fail?

(1) Walketh uprightly. (2) Worketh righteousness. (3) Backbiteth not. (4) Taketh up no reproach against his neighbor. (Even if it is true, he has no part in repeating it!) (5) Gives little place if any to the evil doers. (6) Honors those who love the Lord. (7) Contract-keeping even if it hurts. (8) Business dealings above reproach.

It is a good land, and a busy land; a brave land whose people are unafraid of undertaking arduous tasks for the one who gave his life on a cross for all who would choose to live consecrated lives of loving service.

Building A New Church

DISCIPLINE

Rev. Abraham Akaka, Synod Chaplain
United Church of Christ

Call to Worship: The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear; the Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid? One thing have I asked of the Lord. That will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple.

Hymn: All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name.

Our Lord's Prayer.

Scripture Lesson — Psalm I (in unison).

Prayer: Almighty God, our loving Heavenly Father, Creator of the Universe, Father of all mankind, thou who art the initiator of every new beginning, we thank thee for thy love which has led us to this hour and which now binds us to thee and to one another in a common work. Now that the mechanics and machinery of this new church-model have been accomplished, fill its fuel tanks with the power of thy Holy Spirit — that it may serve thee long and well. Help us to be disciples who lead toward an authentic spiritual recovery in our homes and churches, in our communities and countries — so that the ground upon which we stand in our local, national, and world parish becomes not just an ordinary church in a town or country, but an altar for new journeying, a starting point for a new mission to all the nations. Send us forth into the life of thy children everywhere in the power of thy love, until identifying ourselves with others, learning their true needs and helping to bear their burdens, thy word in the hands of thy people is no longer stone but bread of life and cup of cold water. So bind us in this pilgrimage in a living fellowship with thee and our neighbor until men know thy truth and have the power to be free, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Meditation:

We have been meditating upon the New Church our Lord is creating for a New Age. We have seen it in our Lord's call to his children around the world to be his people, and we have compared God's call and man's response, God's challenge and man's opportunity, to the tuning and playing of an ukelele. Our first word was "Covenant," the appearing of a people who hear our Lord's voice and who reply by their lives: "Thou art our God and we are thy people."

Our second word was "Motto," the New Church focused in the uplifted hand with three fingers raised — saying that for us, "Christ is Lord," for us, it is "God first, others second, self last," and that by this sign upon the lives of God's people, the grip of Satan, which is "Self First, Others Second, God Forgotten," is broken.

The third word I would like to lift up is "Discipleship." Given a Covenant People, a people who call themselves Christ Ones; given a motto of God First, Others Second, Self Last — what specifically does the individual Christian do?

Because too many Christians have been wishy-washy about their Faith, a people without any real seriousness about who they are and what they

AT GENERAL SYNOD

Report Of Budget Committee

1. Resolved that General Synod approves the following budget for each of the years 1962 and 1963 of $14,300,000. This amount to be allocated as follows, it being understood that these are basic goals and the divisional breakdowns within the major boards are approximations, subject to internal adjustments:

	Annual Budget for the Biennium 1962 & 1963	%
Executive Council	$ 655,000	4.6
(Includes $151,000 for contributions to Ecumenical Bodies, and $75,000 for subsidies to E&R Synods.)
Board for World Ministries	5,389,000	37.7
Mission Division
Field Expense	$3,635,765
Administrative & Home Expense	464,784
Service Division
Field Expense	1,141,244
Administrative & Home Expense	147,207
Total	$5,389,000
Board for Homeland Ministries	4,356,300	30.4
Higher Education and the American Missionary Association
Church Extension	$1,090,000
Christian Education	1,996,000
Health and Welfare	875,000
Evangelism and Research	60,000
Publication and Division	160,300
(United Church Herald)	175,000
Total	4,356,300
Pension Boards	1,396,000	9.8
CC Pension subsidies
Ministerial Relief	$ 485,188
	10,000
	495,188
ER Pension Subsidies
Administration, etc.	879,312
Pastors' Homes	119,000
	1,008,312
Less investment income	160,500
	847,812
Miscellaneous (UCC)	53,000

are, the Church that bears the name of our Lord in many places is misnamed. Dr. Samuel Miller can describe a Church that is losing its life in words like these and not find too much rebuttal:

"Our Lord Jesus was careless about himself. We are careful. He was courageous, we are cautious. He trusted the untrustworthy, we trust those who have good collateral. He forgave the unforgivable, we forgive those who do not really hurt us. He was righteous and laughed at respectability. We are respectable and smile at righteousness. He was meek, we are ambitious. He saved others, we save ourselves as much as we can. He had no place to lay his head, and did not worry about it, while we fret because we do not have the last convenience manufactured by clever science. He did what he believed to be right, regardless of the consequences, while we determine what is right by how it will affect us. He feared God but not the world. We fear public opinion more than we fear the judgement of God. He risked everything for God. We make religion a refuge from every risk."

We have talked of a covenant people in general; of a nation and a congregation under a motto. Now we talk about individual you and me under Discipline, you and me delighting in the law of the Lord and actualizing it day and night. May I share with you a five-point discipline that I and my congregation are using: This is visualized by the lifted right hand and five fingers. Will you commit them to memory? The five disciplines are: Daily Devotions, Worship, Tithing, Serving, Winning Souls for Christ. These five can be gathered into a clenched hand and placed against the heart — signifying a discipline, a Protestant with power — who can deliver a blow against the forces of evil in the world; these five can also be extended as a loving, open hand upward to God, our Father, and outward to our neighbor here and around the world, signifying the Christian as Missionary, the Church as Mission.

This five-point discipline was adopted by my congregation after these questions were asked by them: What is a Christian who never prays, never takes time each day to be still and know who he is and who God is? What is a Christian who never worships our Lord with fellow Christians every Sunday, whose idea of religion is strictly impersonal — whose relationship with God is as impersonal as his relationship with his neighbor? What is a Christian who never tithes his tenth, who thinks that everything he has comes from his own efforts and that nobody else — not even God — should get any of it? What is a Christian who never serves — who has never asked "Lord, what would thou have me do — with my own life, with my family, with my church, in my community?" What is a Christian who never seeks to save souls for Christ?

The individual Christian needs a discipline the way a carpenter needs a level. For it is by the word becoming flesh, by God's love becoming visible, by the light of deep conviction and commitment to Christ shining from our lives to the world that we may be called disciples. And it is such disciples who are the New Church and who bring new life to dying churches.

So let this be our discipline: Ohana or Daily Devotions, Worship, Tithing, Serving, Winning Souls for Christ, living an exemplary Christian life. "Blessed is the man who walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful: But his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night."

Hymn: Rise Up O Men of God.

Benediction: Go forth into the world in peace. Be of good courage. Hold fast to that which is good. Render no man evil for evil. Strengthen the fainthearted. Support the weak. Help the afflicted. Honor all men. Love and serve the Lord, rejoicing in the power of the Holy Spirit. And the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, Son and the Holy Spirit be upon you and remain with you forever. Amen.

Council for Christian Social Action	270,300	1.9
Council for Lay Life and Work	304,700	2.1
Council for Church and Ministry	280,000	2.0
Stewardship Council	1,103,600	7.7
Office of Communication	245,100	1.7
Contingencies	300,000	2.1
Total	$14,300,000	100.0

Note: The amount received in 1960 by the former National bodies for the above purposes was about $10,825,000; and it now looks as though about $11,800,000 might be received in 1961. The increase in 1961 may be about 9% and the budget for 1962 is about 21% above the estimated 1961 amount.

This budget does not represent the amounts requested by the two major boards. Their askings were far in excess of the amounts allowed by the budget committee.

Questions from the floor will be answered by members of the committee, to the best of their ability. By December 31, 1961, a more detailed budgetary statement will be available from all the boards and agencies.

2. Resolved that General Synod hereby authorizes the Budget Committee to determine the formula by which payments are to be made from the Central Receiving Treasury to the instrumentalities, in each of the years 1962 and 1963, up to the amounts set forth in the budget approved by General Synod.

3. Resolved that in the event that apportionment payments to the Central Receiving Treasury are in excess of $14,300,000 in either 1962 or 1963, this excess shall be distributed as follows:

Board for World Ministries	54%
Board for Homeland Ministries	44%
Contingent	2%
Total	100%

This budget has been thoughtfully and prayerfully prepared, and it is offered with confidence in the Christian stewardship of the individual Church member.

Respectfully submitted,

Nurses Write From Turkey

Religious Situation

I would like to tell you a little bit about the general religious teaching here in Turkey. All of you are aware of Turkey as a Muslim country, but highly secularized. Seven years ago, there was no religious training of any kind allowed in the schools. Mosques were much less in number, but the Turkish people started to realize and feel that there was an important thing missing in their lives, and that was religion. Islam and its practices are difficult to follow in this more modern period, when a man forgets to close his shop and fails to go to pray five times a day. The people felt that there should be a religious reform or Islam would lose its value, and meaning. Only the devoted Muslims pray in their usual manner, five times a day and during the religious service on Friday evenings. Their "holy day" is Friday. A devout Muslim goes to the service on Friday, just as a Christian goes to church on Sunday. Not very long ago, the government had passed a law that Islam must be taught in all schools, two years in the primary department and two years in the high school. Our mission schools have to decide whether to close or to adapt the law. It was unanimously decided that the witness should be to keep them open and allow religious teachings which mostly are moral teachings.

Newcomer To Turkey

I was lucky enough to be able to study the Turkish language for five months in Izmir, a seaport and third largest city in Turkey. There were two couples and myself trying to master the language. The couples had been in Turkey before and spoke the language (in my estimation) quite well, while I was just a beginner. Consequently, I was alone in my classes. My teachers were wonderful and I enjoyed them greatly and now find myself missing them and all the others I met during my stay there.

While in Izmir, I worked with the high school girls of the Koleji Social Service Club who assisted in local hospitals. However, I found that the girls were told there was no work for them to do and they did not have the ability to locate some for themselves. Neither the hospitals nor the girls could understand the desirability of just talking to the patients, reading to them, writing letters, rubbing backs, or combing hair. I did manage to get one group to pass the lunch trays and feed a few patients. Both groups were amazed and happy at the end.

In January, I left Izmir for the East and Gaziantep. Here I found a climate much like the one back home. We have had snow, rain, sun, and haze. The difference comes in the land itself. It is hilly, dry, and not as fertile. Goats and sheep herds are a usual sight on hillsides.

The hospital in Gaziantep has the capacity for forty-nine patients (twenty-six men and twenty-three women) on two floors. During my orientation to the hospital I worked on both floors and in surgery so that I would become acquainted all over and be able to step in to any assignment during vacations or illnesses of the other nurses.

Here in Turkey band aids don't come in boxes. We make them or find a substitute. We also make all the compresses we use. It really hurts when I think of how carelessly we use compresses at our hospitals back home. We had a compress party the other night so our operating room staff could get a bit caught up on this process. Two of us got a large roll of gauze (4' by about 30'), measured, pulled strings, cut and folded to size. This process took us approximately two hours and we

Nurses' Aides

The nurses' aide class of six which started out last fall is still with us. They have been through the rigors of Anatomy, Drugs and Solutions, Bacteriology. They have made beds with patients and without patients. They have each had a turn at evening duty and are now ready to start in with night duty (working under the supervision of a nurse, of course). Each is having a week's turn giving medicines by mouth and they will soon learn to give injections. In another few weeks they will receive their caps and be really important in our little hospital circle. Besides this much on the working side of the page, they have had an active part in hospital social life. At Christmas there was a worship service with all students (Moslem and Christian) taking part in the nativity scene, then the next night a party with exchange of gifts and games. We hope that this summer will bring more applicants so that next year we will have as good a group of students — or even better — to add nurses' aides to help in Turkey's hospitals.

This has been a year bringing fulfillment of hopes expressed last January when I wrote an urgent request for nursing help. It has also brought tangible results in the form of the class of nurses' aides. The last few years with many girls starting and very few sticking long enough to learn much was such a depressing background that this year is quite a change and gives ground for hope for the future. Having been out of the training work for several years, I am relieved to find that I can still work with students, and especially glad that my Turkish is adequate (though far from perfect) so that we have developed quite a considerable esprit de corps. In this job I feel my own lacks more definitely as its demands are greater. However, so far there is no one else to take over this job so I am glad to be of service where I am needed.

Being Established In Africa

Radio "Voice Of The Gospel"

Construction of two 100,000 watt transmitters with especially built antenna systems which will beam programs from Ethiopia to most of Africa, the Middle East and Southern India began in June. Dr. Sigurd Aske is director of the new radio station, VOICE OF THE GOSPEL.

More than a billion people, many of whom have never heard the Christian message, but are wooed daily by the propaganda of world governments and the persuasive messages of other religions, will now be within range of the "Voice of the Gospel." A hope expressed more than ten years ago by missionaries in the area will become a reality by 1963.

Several USA denominations are participating in Radio Voice of the Gospel through the National Council of Churches and the Near East Christian Council, which will share in programming by agreement with the

EDUCATING OUR CHILDREN AT HOME

A friend came in to see me today (July 4) and brought his good wife and their fine children — two sons and a daughter. It was easy to see that these parents are giving to their children the most important education that will ever come to them. Their business, for example, in this part of the state was that of showing their children the Art Museums in Chapel Hill, in Raleigh, and I don't know how many other places. The way I learned this was that as they had reached their car for their return trip, I called them back to show them a few of the world's great paintings that I have picked up through the years and their appreciation of these pictures was something beautiful to see.

It is all right to see a good ball game, a circus, a State fair, and many such things, but why not cultivate in those in our homes a taste and an appreciation for the higher, richer and better things, too? When my friend and his charming family left, I sat in my room and thought of the bright future for those sons and the daughter! May parents everywhere take a lesson from these good friends of mine who visited me today!

Lutheran World Federation, owner and operator of the station.

Transmitters for Radio Voice of the Gospel are located some 30 kilometers outside Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and occupy 300 acres leased from the Ethiopian government for thirty years with an additional twenty year option.

Studios, the administration buildings, and housing related to the project are to be located inside the city limits. Construction on the first of these buildings has begun also.

Since the project was initiated, in November 1958, support for the Radio Voice of the Gospel has grown in churches around the world. German, Scandinavian and American Lutheran churches are deeply committed to the project. The denominations participating through the radio division of Foreign Missions of the National Council have pledged their support and the Christian churches of the Near East countries are solidly behind the Radio Voice of the Gospel. The churches of Iran held a Radio Sunday recently to raise funds for the project. A woman's prayer group in Kuwait and an Armenian Sunday school class in Beirut have sent gifts. Thus far, a total of about one million dollars has been pledged. However, an additional $100,000 is needed to complete installations.

The purpose of this powerful, African-based Christian station is just what its name implies, "to proclaim to the widest possible audience, the Gospel of Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures." In addition, the station intends to promote education and culture through its broadcasts, nurture believers in their Christian faith, and assist the churches in follow-up work.

To Hope And Quietly Wait

A CHAPEL MEDITATION IN DUKE UNIVERSITY

By William A. Lane*

[*William A. Lane, pastor of Monticello, with a Bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and a Master's degree from Princeton, was teaching English at the Woman's College in Greensboro when he felt called to the ministry. With an outstanding academic record at Duke University Divinity School, he was serving as president of the Student Council when a near-fatal auto accident led through critical surgery, profound loss of memory, and prolonged withdrawal from study, to the spiritual insights described.]

I am the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.
He hath led me and brought me into darkness, but not into light.
Surely against me is he turned; he turneth his hand against me all the day.

Also when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.
And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the Lord:
Remembering mine affliction and my misery, the wormwood and the gall.
My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is humbled in me.
This I recall to mind, therefore have I hope.

It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not.

They are new every morning: great is thy faithfulness.
The Lord is my portion, saith my soul: therefore will I hope in him.
The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him.

It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord.

(Lamentations 3: 1-3, 8, 18-26.)

Let us turn our thoughts today to a subject that is very elementary and should be obvious to anyone who holds the Christian faith. That is worth doing. The obvious truths are the very ones that I am most likely to overlook, while pursuing theological subtleties, and this is one that I have overlooked to my cost. Perhaps the same thing has happened or will happen to you. The Lord grant that it won't.

Here is the subject: the duty of the Christian minister, no matter how deep his dedication and willingness to serve, to be ready and waiting to receive the grace of God in Christ. That is as plain as the nose on your face, isn't it — that we as ministers need to be receivers of divine grace. Few things in Christian doctrine are more elementary, but I have only recently been given an understanding of its importance, and that understanding has come only after a hard struggle. Let me tell you about it.

My own call to the ministry came as a call to service. The main thing it meant to me was a duty and an opportunity to give. I thought of myself as one of those servants in the parable whom the Master blessed with talents. The Master had given me rich talents, in respect of money, of education, of travel, of experience. I had studied and taught at five universities, and had accumulated a good store of learning. The call to the ministry came as a challenge to use these gifts, to invest them, to spend them in that service to others which is service to the Master. I thought I had received all that I needed and that from now on my job was to give.

Then came bankruptcy: an accident, a brain injury, surgery, and loss of memory. The store of talents was gone. I had nothing left to give. In order to remain faithful to the Lord's ministry, I must open myself up to receive — to receive His healing grace, to apply to myself the gift we all received in Christ. But to reach that basic, elementary insight took me eighteen months, and they were months spent largely in despair. The only kind of ministry I knew was a giving ministry. I must find something to give. But for all my rummaging, the treasury was empty. And so, there followed despair. How could the Lord have any use for me when I had nothing left to give? How could I expect Him to give me any more when I had squandered what He had given me? Why should He waste any grace on me when I had been of so little use to Him? Such was the attitude in which I spent those eighteen months.

As I say these words, you are probably thinking of a dozen promises in Scripture which have given me assurance to the contrary in Christ's own words. But there I fell into an error which has, I suspect, beset other ministers in time of need. A busy, active ministry had put me in the habit of not applying the promises of Scripture to myself. I thought the minister's job was to be a sort of neutral channel or vehicle for conveying these promises to others who stood in need. A minister should have no needs. God has given him all he needs. This was not a doctrine I had worked out, but an assumption into which I had unconsciously fallen. Have you fallen into it too, or are you sliding that way?

You have probably recognized that behind this assumption lies sinful pride, a feeling of self-sufficiency. Surely we ministers, of all people, stand in perpetual need of divine grace, daily need of it, if we are to be of any real service to the Lord and to other people. But a busy life of study and preparation here at school, and crowded church-work on the weekends, can lead us to the mistaken assumption that we are the ones who must do all the giving and who should not need to do any taking.

Well, for you, as for me, the time either has come or is going to come when you stand in urgent need to receive. And when that happens, I pray you won't make my mistake of feeling yourself so unworthy that you withdraw from receiving God's grace freely offered in Christ, and fall into despair. To do that is to overlook so much that is openly and patently offered to us in God's Word. It is to lack faith and to close ourselves off from God's fellowship in Christ. We cannot do that and be true ministers of His Gospel.

What woke me up to these truths? If Scripture didn't do it, who did? Well, I name him to you with deep gratitude. He was John Milton.

Milton was a man who from early childhood had felt an intense calling to the Christian ministry. He knew with zealous assurance that God had blessed him with a particular talent and that the purpose of his life was to invest that talent and produce a special gift to God and man — a great Christian poem. His childhood and young manhood were spent in arduous and unbroken study, as he strained to perfect his talent to answer his vocation. From time to time he would take stock of himself and exclaim with angry impatience that he was not yet ready to give what his Master required of him. He must keep striving if he was to be a worthy servant. With the same untiring zeal, he went into public work during the Puritan Commonwealth, becoming Oliver Cromwell's Secretary of State. And in this work he labored so unceasingly that he lost his eyesight.

Then came despair. Blindness — his labors frustrated, his talent unrealized, his gift not produced. He was the unworthy servant of the parable:

When I consider how my light is spent,
 Ere half my days, in this dark world and wide,
 And that one Talent which is death to hide,
 Lodg'd with me useless, though my Soul more bent
 To serve therewith my Maker, and present
 My true account, lest he returning chide;
 'Doth God exact day-labour, light denied?'
 I fondly ask. . .

He is the servant blessed with talent and with vocation to use it. But the very zeal to serve has frustrated his Master's purpose and buried his talent. His self-sufficient striving has made him an unworthy servant. Yet in the midst of despair comes, by grace, an answer:

But patience, to prevent
 That murmur, soon replies God doth not need
 Either man's work or his own gifts; who best
 Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best; his State
 Is kingly. Thousands at his bidding speed
 And post o'er Land and Ocean without rest;
 They also serve who only stand and wait.

To stand and wait, open to receive God's grace: this is the way for His ministers best to serve Him in their times of need.

And when John Milton was given this knowledge and the grace to stand and wait, then came the miracle of his life. Out of his blindness he began to dictate Paradise Lost. The very task which he had been unable to fulfill in all his striving now came to glorious flower with the help of God. The darkness which had driven him to despair made him reach out and take the hand of God, Who led him into eternal light.

Let his life be a witness to us. Before we can produce or give anything good or useful in the Lord's service, we must be receivers of His grace. And that means to stand and wait, to open ourselves to His fellowship offered in Christ — not to spend all our time in busy work under the illusion of self-sufficiency.

"It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for salvation of the Lord."

This experience, Brothers, has led me to a resolution: to try, with the Lord's help, to get over this foolish notion that I must do all of the giving and none of the receiving; to "hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord," which He has offered in Christ.

And I hope that when the time comes for you, as it must come for all men, when your own gifts are not sufficient to meet the demands with which life faces you, you will not be tempted to despair, but will humbly and confidently stand and wait to receive the grace of God which is freely offered in Christ to all who have open, receptive hearts.

Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. AMEN.

John Mark, A Young Missionary

Background Scripture: Acts 12:12, 25; 13: 4-5, 13; 15:36-39. Colossians 4:10-11; II Timothy 4:11; I Peter 5:13.

Devotional Reading: II Timothy 2:1-13.

Memory Selection: Take your share of suffering as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. II Timothy 2:3.

When John Mark came upon the scene in the New Testament he was a young man. He was living in Jerusalem. His father evidently was dead. His mother was a woman of means — she had a large home and kept servants. The family probably had lived earlier in Antioch in Syria, and like many other Jewish families of wealth, had come to Jerusalem to spend their latter days. John Mark's mother, Mary, was a disciple, and opened her home to the members of the Early Church. She was a sister of Barnabas, "the great hearted," and of course John was a nephew of Barnabas, one of the finest characters in the New Testament. Tradition has it that Mark later became the "secretary" or "reporter" of Simon Peter, accompanying the Big Fisherman on his preaching tours, and writing "accurately what he remembered of the things done and said by Christ, but not in order." Mark "neither heard the Lord nor followed him, but afterward attached himself to Peter, and committed no error in this writing down some things as he remembered them." The quotations are from Papias. There are other quotations from the Early Church Fathers which indicate that John Mark was the author of the Gospel of Mark, and that he wrote the substance of what Peter taught and preached. There are other traditions about his later life and about his death.

The Young Man Who Failed

Paul and Barnabas were setting out on their First Missionary Journey. They took John Mark, then a young man, with them. He was to serve as their "helper" and in all probability his main task was to teach or catechize the new converts. The fact that his home had been a kind of headquarters for the apostles had made him familiar with the Christian movement. Simon Peter's reference to him as "my son" indicates that he was a convert of Peter. The fact that Barnabas was his uncle also entered into the situation. In addition to all these factors, Mark must have been a young man of ability and promise, or he would not have been chosen for such an important mission.

The little missionary band first went to Cyprus, which was Barnabas' native land. After a brief evangelistic tour there, the three went to the mainland, and when, at Perga in Pamphylia, it was suggested that they go into the interior on a preaching tour, Mark "departing from them returned to Jerusalem." Many reasons have been given for his defection or desertion. Homesickness (the only remedy for that is home)? Anxiety for his mother's safety? Home duties? The desire to rejoin Peter, his spiritual father? Fear of the perils of the journey inland in strange country and among hostile people? Illness? It may have been for one or several of these reasons that John Mark turned back. Two other interesting reasons have been suggested. Some writers think it was because Mark did not like the idea of his uncle Barnabas playing "second fiddle" to Paul. (When they started it was Barnabas and Paul, but soon it became Paul and Barnabas.) Others think it was still another reason. They think that Mark "just could not take it" when Paul and Barnabas began to preach the gospel to the Gentiles! It seemed unthinkable to him as a devout Jewish Christian that salvation should be offered to the Gentiles on faith alone. Call it conscience or prejudice or what you will. But all of these things are guesses or conjectures. The central and critical fact is that John Mark quit. He became the symbol of the man who turns back when the going gets hard.

Well, he is one of a great company in every walk of life. And not the least is the realm of religion. A great many people who become Christians do not have staying or sticking power. Sometimes one thinks that there are as many people who wear out the seats of their trousers from backsliding, as there are people who wear out the knees of their trousers from praying. Damas forsook Paul, having loved this present world. One area in which there is this lack of ability to "see it through" is in education. Think of how many young people drop out of school, because they can't take it! Of course the fact is that every one of us faces failure, and sometimes again and again. It is up to every one of us to decide whether he is going to quit, or to go on. It is no disgrace to fail or to fall. It is a disgrace to accept failure as final.

The Young Man Who Made Good

We have thought about the young man who failed; now we will think about the young man who made good. And they are the same man — John Mark. Yes, this young fellow who "quit" later showed remarkable staying powers and made good in a fine way. Perhaps the secret of it was his Uncle Barnabas' faith in him, and companionship with him. When Paul and Barnabas started out on their Second Missionary Journey, Barnabas wanted to take Mark along with them again. But Paul said "Nothing doing. That guy quit on us the last time. I'm not taking him." "O. K." said Barnabas. "No hard feelings. You get a partner, and I'll take Mark. I believe he has what it takes. I'll string along with him." Imagine what a lift that must have given this young man who had failed so miserably a short while before.

We do not know where Barnabas and Mark went eventually, but they sailed to Cyprus where they started their work on the first missionary crusade. We do know this. Mark was with Paul when the apostle was in prison later in life. Paul wrote that "he is profitable to me for the ministry." And at the time he urged Timothy to bring Mark with him, so much did he want him, and so valuable he was to him. Later it seems that when Peter went to Rome to preach, Mark was with him. In short, this young man who failed so dismally redeemed himself signally. And because somebody believed in him, and because he refused to allow his failure to defeat him, he became a faithful and fruitful Christian evangelist, and the author of one of the world's im-

A Bachelor's Joyous Lament

ED KOTERBA'S LAST COLUMN

This is Ed Koterba's last column. He wrote it here last week—out of loneliness for his family, away at the beach, and excitement at the prospect of an impending trip to the Pacific Northwest where, in the crash of a small plane Tuesday, he lost his life at the age of 42.

Potomac, Md. — I'm leaning back on the kitchen bench, relaxing after a second cup of coffee. The full-course meal was hot and tasty. Today I'm a modern bachelor. And I'm feeling sad about the bachelor of old — that pioneer of lonely living.

For a week, my wife and my son and Grandma have been sunning on the Atlantic beaches. When they departed these premises, they gravely instructed me to take care of the house.

Ha! The house has been taking care of me! The un-automated bachelor never had it this good, poor soul.

Dawn, as it has six other mornings in a row, awakened me to the tinkle of soft radio tunes from the automatic radio-alarm clock.

I felt my way to the kitchen and plugged in the automatic coffee pot. I made a full pot the first day, and I just keep re-heating and pouring from it. Say, six-day old coffee doesn't taste bad at all!

Breakfast comes the modern way for this temporary bachelor. Orange juice? A tablespoon scoop from the little can of concentrate in the freezer, add a little spigot water, and that's it.

The automatic timer cooks the soft-boiled egg, the pop-up toaster rockets a brown slice into my fingers.

Come home from work and supper's a cinch. The meals are stacked high in sectional disposable tins in the freezer—frozen ham, chicken, veal steak... Take your pick. (There was, I must admit, a feminine hand in the pre-planning.)

Dirty dishes? Ho, ho! They're in the dishwasher. I keep piling them in, and tonight there will finally be a full load. A dash of soap and down with the lid. No sweat.

After dinner, read the papers. Throw them on the floor, scatter them over the sofa. Who cares? Pick 'em up at the end of the week. You save a lot of stooping this way.

Dirty clothes? Throw them in the automatic washer-dryer. They come out dry, and nobody cares if your undershirts aren't ironed.

Garbage doesn't get a chance to pile up in a modern bachelor's home. Just stuff it down the disposer.

The life of a temporary bachelor couldn't be grander. Kick off your shoes where you feel like kicking them off, and simply step into them, wherever they are, the next morning. Play that stereo to your ears' content. Bang it out! Let it roar! No one's telling you to shush it down.

Say, this is the life!

All right, let's be frank about it. This whole place is so empty and hollow I could scream. I can't stand another day of it.

Now there looms a four-day stint in the Pacific Northwest—lots of scenery, plenty of new people, some good copy.

Do I want to go? Where's my hat! Puget Sound, Multnomah Falls, Sun Valley—here I come!

Will Negroes Win?

By S. L. Morgan, Sr., Wake Forest, N. C.

Not in years, I think, have I been more impressed by any article than by the leading editorial in Christian Century of June 28, "All, Here and Now." It begins by declaring that Gandhi's "grim and frightening" battle by use of "soul force" (satyagraha) "has come to America."

Gandhi's peaceful use of "soul force" instead of guns conquered the British Empire and won India's independence; what we see now in America, declares the editorial, is our millions of Negroes rising in a battle "grim and frightening," precisely because it is nonviolent, "against an oppressive culture dominated by whites."

Gandhi's nonviolent battle won Indian independence in 28 years at a cost merely of beatings and imprisonment. The highly influential Christian Century frankly believes American Negroes, in true Gandhian fashion thus far, "grim and frightening," have set out to "fill the jails," submit peacefully to beatings, sure of winning out in the end. Besides the example of Gandhi, they know they have also that of the early Christians: beaten, imprisoned, thrown to the lions, yet dying with a smile and a prayer for their tormentors — and finally conquering the Roman Empire.

This startling editorial groups the Negro's demands around three little words: (1) "All." Hitherto the Negro has won "a little here and a little there"; now he demands the liberty to enjoy all that rightly belongs to every first-class citizen.

(2) "Here." Hitherto he has gone north and west by thousands to gain his rights. Now he demands the liberty to stay in his beloved Southland and enjoy his full rights here.

(3) "Now." He has waited 100 years to enjoy the fruits of his so-called "emancipation," but as yet grudgingly receives but a pittance, he feels; has waited 7 years to see only 6 percent implementation of the Supreme Court's order for school integration — a mere "token" beginning. At last with a desperation "grim and frightening" he proposes to "fill the jails" and suffer beatings, refusing longer to wait to be treated as a full citizen in fact.

And with a resolve "grim and frightening" he has committed himself to the nonviolent technique that won over brute force for the early Christians and won for Gandhi in South Africa and India — the technique of suffering instead of fighting.

If they hold to this method, history is with them.

Helpful Visitors

Dear Friends:

The first of last week the basement area of Montgomery Cottage became a beautician's shop. Eleven of our girls received permanents and a number of the others had their hair styled and set. The person responsible for all this was Mrs. Marie Hayman of our Rosemont church in South Norfolk, Virginia.

Mrs. Snyder and I were very happy to have Mrs. Hayman and her son Danny to visit in our home while she was doing this work on the campus for our children. Mrs. Hayman and her husband are both very active members at Rosemont.

Not only did Mrs. Hayman give some of our girls a "new look," but she also took a personal interest in each of them. Though she was on the campus only three days they all came to love her and regretted very much seeing her leave.

Before leaving the campus Mrs. Hayman learned that one of our little boys had not had his vacation yet. So when she left, her son Danny had an "adopted" brother for two weeks. He is eight-year-old Grover Beckley.

For this kind of interest and concern we are so very grateful. We are very thankful to Mrs. Hayman and others who from time to time show their interest in our children in such fine ways.

Also visiting our campus at the same time was Mrs. Hayman's sister, Miss Faye White. Since three of our housemothers were attending a workshop for houseparents at the University of North Carolina, she decided to live on the campus and help fill in wherever she could while they were away. She also endeared herself to the children. They, along with the housemothers on the campus, were all very sorry when the time arrived for her to return home.

Both of these sisters will be gladly welcomed back to our campus any time they can come.

mortal books, The Gospel of Mark or The Gospel According to Mark.

Here is the lesson written in large and living letters. No man ever fails until he fails inside. The fact is that most of the world's success has come as a result of failures. The man who tries to do anything hard must face the possibility of failure. But out of yesterday's mistakes and failures he learns wisdom. And it is far better to have tried and failed than never to have tried at all. And the greatest help in failure is the gospel of Christ which gives a man "a second chance" and a hundredth chance.

"GRASS ROOTS" OPINION ON SCHOOL AID BILL NEEDED

Concern was expressed last week by two units of the National Council of Churches over the fate of the Federal aid to education bill. In a letter to denominational leaders across the nation, the signers urged that messages indicating the "Protestant concern and watchfulness" in permitting Federal aid only to the public schools should be made known to Congress.

Enclosed with the letter was a copy of the resolution stating the stand taken by the General Board of the National Council which was adopted at its meeting in Syracuse, N. Y. in June.

"If loans cannot be properly made to churches from public funds for the construction of houses of worship," the resolution declared in part, "neither can they properly be made to churches for the construction of schools which are an integral and organic agency of such churches."

The letter was signed by the Rev. Dr. Gerald E. Knoff, secretary of the Division of Christian Education, who recently testified on the bill before a Congressional Committee, and the Rev. Dean M. Kelley, director of the Department of Religious Liberty.

And feel the promise is not vain
That morn shall tearless be.

The members of the Women's Fellowship extend to the families of these dear women their love and deep sympathy. They shall be greatly missed.

I dare not ask to fly from thee.
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms red
Life that shall endless be."

In Memoriam

NELLIE ALLEN HALL

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Our heavenly Father in his all-wise providence took from our midst our beloved Nellie Allen Hall, July 10, 1961.

Her passing represents a genuine loss to our church, as she worked untiringly and faithfully in all its activities as long as her health permitted.

The Philathea Class feels deeply the loss, as she had served as president of the class for many years. Due to her interest and planning, our fellowship hall was built several years ago. We shall miss her presence.

We extend to her family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray God's comfort and blessings upon them.

"Miss Nellie's" favorite hymn was "Under His Wings," and surely she is "resting in Jesus and safe evermore."

GOD CALLS HOME

Mrs. B. J. Vestal
Mrs. A. P. Cole
Mrs. J. M. Coble

The month of July brought to the Women's Fellowship of the First Congregational Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., the loss of three of its most devoted and faithful members. Our loss is great.

On July 1 God touched the heart of Mrs. B. J. Vestal and took her unto Himself. She had wanted to go Home, knowing that the end of this earthly life was but the beginning of an eternity with her Maker. She knew in whom she believed. Not without thoughts for the loved ones left behind did she go. Her plans were made to the detail. They were to know that all was well with her. This was the fulfillment of her desire and hope. Mrs. Vestal was a member of this local church for 52 years, a true and loyal servant.

"O Love that wilt not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee.
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in Thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

On July 11 Mrs. A. P. Cole entered through the portals into the presence of God. At last she beheld the face of Him for whom she had poured out her life. What shall we say about this dear woman? After becoming too frail to teach the children she loved, she turned her thoughts to the "shut-ins," the sick, the lonely and bereaved. Hers was a love that was deep and overflowing.

Mrs. Cole was a member of our church for 13 years, having come here from Durham. Hers was a radiant spirit. We shall miss Mrs. Cole, but we know that Heaven is a happier place because she is there.

"O Light that followest all my way
I yield my flick'ring torch to Thee.
My heart restores its borrowed ray,
That in Thy sunshine's blaze its day
May brighter, fairer be."

July 17 saw again the passing from this life of another member from our midst, Mrs. J. M. Coble. Again we have one who, knowing that she had only a few years at the most, turned her thoughts to others. Seeing that the steps of our church were becoming more and more difficult for our elderly members to climb, she gave, to the Glory of God, an elevator. Had it not been for this act of kindness, numbers of our members would be unable to attend the services of our church. Each Sunday hearts will remember in gratitude this generous and faithful member.

Mrs. Coble was a member of our church for 68 years, a good and faithful servant.

"O Joy that seekest me through pain,
I cannot close my heart to Thee.
I trace the rainbow through the rain,

This Interested Me

By Emily C. Lester

Funny, the ideas you get about churches when you are small. I thought the main difference between Congregational and Methodist churches was that the former always said "debts" in the Lord's Prayer and the latter said "trespasses" because that was true about those churches in my town. And when, in Sunday school, we sang about "The Little Brown Church in the Wildwood," I thought we were singing about our own little Congregational church in Whitehall, Michigan, which was painted tan.

Now, however, I have seen the "Little Brown Church" which is connected with the song of that name. It is located in the edge of Nashua, Iowa, and is a Congregational Christian church. Situated in a beautiful grove of trees and painted dark brown, it looks exactly as it should look.

The history is interesting. In 1857 a young man named William Pitts was going by stage from his home in Wisconsin to see his fiancée in Iowa. Stopping in Bradford (the town is no longer in existence) for a change of horses, the young man took a walk. He saw a wooded spot of rare beauty — as he wrote later, "There was no church there but the spot was waiting for it." When he got home he wrote "The Little Brown Church in the Vale."

A Congregational Church had been organized in Bradford in 1855. In 1859 a young minister, Rev. John Nutting, became its pastor and encouraged the members to build. Times were hard, but the church was finished in 1864 — thanks to help from Dr. John Todd and his church in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, which included the gift of a bell, the first in the county. The church was painted brown "for want of money to buy better paint."

That spring William Pitts returned to Bradford to teach a singing class in the academy. One evening the class went to the church and he brought out his manuscript of "The Little Brown Church in the Vale." Later it was published.

And so the song and the church finally got together—the dream fulfilled without the pastor and people knowing of the song!

An interesting sequel is that in 1916 Dr. Nutting, then living in Crystal Springs, Florida, and Dr. Pitts, who had become a medical doctor, were brought back to Bradford for a happy reunion. Dr. Pitts, at age 85, sang the song which had made the church famous.

Today the little church contains many mementoes of by-gone days, but it is an active church with services every Sunday. It has become a favorite place for marriages, and we were told that more than 1,100 were solemnized there last year. We were also told that the pastor is guaranteed a certain salary by the church — but the church pays only the amount he lacks after wedding fees! Although we did not verify this, we understood that the church usually does not have to pay anything.

If you are ever in the vicinity of Nashua, Iowa, you will enjoy a visit to "The Little Brown Church," as I did.

The Church In The Wildwood

There's a church in the valley by the wildwood,
No lovelier spot in the dale;
No place is so dear to my childhood
As the little brown church in the vale.

Oh, come to the church in the wildwood,
To the trees where the wild flowers bloom;
Where the parting hymn will be chanted,
We will weep by the side of the tomb.

How sweet on a clear Sabbath morning
To list to the clear ringing bell;
Its tones so sweetly are calling,
Oh, come to the church in the vale.

From the church in the valley by the wildwood,
When day fades away into night,
I would fain from this spot of my childhood
Wing my way to the mansions of light.

Chorus

Come to the church in the wildwood,
Oh, come to the church in the vale;
No spot is so dear to my childhood
As the little brown church in the vale.

Long Delayed Dream Fulfilled

When the Rev. Wm. T. Scott, fresh out of seminary, arrived in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, some thirty years ago, a group of people gathered about him and planned for a Congregational Christian church in that growing city. Land was bought, a house erected that would serve as a temporary church and a parsonage later, and plans were drawn for a beautiful church building on a corner lot in a community where new homes were being established rapidly. But before the church was solidly established the young minister answered a call to serve in a capacity that finally led to his being superintendent of the Southern Convention.

Dr. William Jay, Dr. W. J. Andes, and others, can testify that in this little church were loyal people who really wanted a church and who were willing to sacrifice for it. Thirty years is a long time to wait and work, but the picture above indicates that dreams are fulfilled.

The first location was on the growing edge of the city, and the new building is now on the growing edge, though a mile from where the church began.

July 9, 1961, the Reverend John Lackey and his fine people invited former pastors and friends to return for the consecration of their new church building. Dr. Scott preached; Dr. Andes and the editor (who supplied when the church had no minister) shared in a delightful service.

Mr. E. J. Austin, member of our church in Southern Pines, was the architect who designed this unusual building. He planned it to fit the contour of the ground, and to express religious truth in modern terms. The tree of life in the western window, the communion table close to the congregation, and many other things that are different from the usual are made that way for religious reasons. The building is the fulfillment of a long-delayed dream.

Here And There Among The Churches

Rev. O. D. Poythress will preach at Great Bridge August 6 and 13, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. Bill Simmons.

Title of the sermon preached by Rev. Kenneth Register at Beverly Hills, Burlington, N. C., July 16: "Window Sitters!"

Mr. W. B. Terrell, Alumni Secretary of Elon College, will conduct the morning service at Mt. Zion August 13.

Families of St. Peter's, Greensboro, enjoyed an ice cream and cake social at the home of one of the members, Thursday, August 3. The Churchmen's Fellowship sponsored a car wash Saturday, August 4.

Rev. Charles Pegram, pastor of Bay View Church, was in charge of the morning devotions on TV station WTAR, Norfolk, during the week of July 23.

Rev. Collie Seymour, now pastor at Albemarle, has accepted a call to Apple's Chapel. Rev. Bland Leebrick recently resigned from Apple's Chapel to serve Bethlehem, Wood's Chapel, and Wissler's Chapel, in the Virginia Valley Conference.

Three ministers of the Southern Convention are attending the Eastern Summer School for Pastors at Deering, New Hampshire, July 12 - August 2. They are Rev. Rosser L. Clapp of the United Community Church, Garner, N. C.; Rev. Julius Rice of Bayside church, Bayside, Va.; and Rev. Lowell Smoot of United, Portsmouth, Va.

The speaker at the Sunday morning service July 30 at Northview, Sanford, was Jerry Cameron, a rising high school senior and a member of that church. Jerry is planning to enter the ministry.

REVIVAL AT BROWN'S CHAPEL

By Beatrice Sheffield

Revival services will begin at Brown's Chapel, near Robbins, North Carolina, Sunday, August 13. Sunday school will begin at 9:45 a.m. and the morning worship service at 11 a.m. The pastor, Rev. J. U. Fogleman, will be the speaker. There will be a picnic lunch on the tables, and the afternoon service will begin at 2:00 p.m.

Services will be held during the following week each evening at 7:30. Rev. Fogleman cordially invites and encourages everyone to attend the services and enjoy the good gospel message each evening.

HESS SPEAKS AT BAY VIEW

By Mrs. W. E. Smallings

Sunday, July 23 was a big day at Bay View church. One of the highlights of the morning service was the sermon preached by Rev. James M. Hess, D.D., who spoke on "Christianizing India's Devotion." Dr. L. E. Smith introduced the speaker, who gave a marvelous description of India's devotion to her gods. Dr. Smith, president emeritus of Elon College, also led the congregation in the opening prayer. During the service the Scout charter was presented and Scout leaders were recognized. The Senior Youth Choir sang "My Task."

"The Danger of Commitment" was the topic of the sermon preached at First, Portsmouth, Va., by the interim pastor, Rev. Calvin J. Felton, July 30.

Rev. W. W. Snyder, superintendent of our Home for Children, was the guest speaker at Beverly Hills, Burlington, Sunday, July 23. Mr. Snyder was previously the pastor at Beverly Hills. The present pastor is Rev. Kenneth Register.

Mr. James Lee Peeler, a student at Catawba College and a future minister, spoke at St. Peter's, Greensboro, July 16 and 23, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. Carl T. Daye. On one of these Sundays Mr. Daye was at John's River Camp, where he was serving as a teacher at an E. and R. junior high camp.

Rev. S. K. Emurian, a minister who was born and reared in Armenia, preached the morning sermon at Bay View, Sunday, July 2, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. Charles F. Pegram, who was attending the General Council in Philadelphia. Mr. Emurian also spoke to the youth groups of the church and preached at the Sunday evening service.

Mr. Louis Wilkins, who has been teaching in American Board schools in Turkey for the past three years, is home for a short furlough. He will be available to speak in churches on the following Sundays: August 13, August 20, August 27. He will also be available to speak at midweek services. He would be glad to speak on "Experiences as a Missionary in Turkey." His address is Lennig, Virginia.

Spring Hill Women's Fellowship

The members of the Spring Hill Women's Fellowship have been busy this past year and as we look back at the year's work, we think perhaps one of the most outstanding highlights has been the number of opportunities we have had for fellowship with our neighbors.

October 12 a group of ladies from our fellowship led by Mrs. Franklin White conducted the program "Into All The World Together" for the Dendron Women's Fellowship at their regular meeting.

The World Day of Prayer program was held at the Waverly Christian Church February 17. We participated in the program with the other churches in the town.

We had the privilege of attending the review of our foreign mission study book, "Into All the World Together" on February 15 at Dendron. Mrs. W. T. Scott reviewed the book for the ladies from the Dendron Christian, Dendron Methodist, Surry Methodist and Spring Hill Churches. At the half-way point a fellowship supper was served and enjoyed by all.

The Home Mission book review was held Thursday afternoon, June 1 at the Wakefield Christian Church for the members of the Wakefield, Waverly and Spring Hill Women's Fellowships. The book "Safe In Bondage" was reviewed by Mrs. G. C. White. At the half-way point the ladies were invited to a lovely tea table and served delicious refreshments. Mrs. G. C. White was presented a Life Membership from the Spring Hill Women's Fellowship by Mrs. Howard Drewry, Jr.

We have been grateful for the privilege and opportunity to work and have fellowship with our neighbors. We have enjoyed the year's work.

We regret to report the loss of one member this year. Mrs. E. B. Richardson was a charter member of our fellowship, which was organized in 1913, and was the only charter member who lived in the community and was still active in the work. "Miss Nellie" will indeed be missed.

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. Lowell Smoot on the birth of a son Lowell Allen Smoot, II, July 26. Mr. Smoot is the pastor of United, Portsmouth.

New Minister & Family

The Rev. William A. Cousins of Levittown, Pennsylvania, assumed his duties as the new minister at South Norfolk May 1, 1961.

Mr. Cousins, a native of Sharpsville, Pennsylvania, received his B.A. Degree from Allegheny College, Meadville, Pennsylvania, and his B.D. Degree from Drew University, Madison, New Jersey.

The war interrupted his college work. A veteran of World War II, he served with the Eighth Air Force in Europe.

Mr. Cousins entered the ministry in 1946 and worked his way through college preaching at student parishes. His former pastorates were: Baiting Hollow Congregational Church and Wading River Congregational Church at Calverton, New York; and Bethany Congregational Church at East Rockaway, New York.

He married the former Margaret Sheakley of Meadville, Pennsylvania. They have two sons: William Alan, 14; and Joseph Albert, 10.

Mr. Cousins comes from a family of ministers. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Cousins of Slippery Rock, Pennsylvania. Dr. Cousins is a retired Methodist minister.

Mrs. F. C. Lester has just returned from a month in Iowa and Nebraska, where she was the speaker for Women's Fellowship rallies and workshops.

TO MEET AT NIGHT

E. Va. S. S. Convention

This report was adopted at the 92nd annual session of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention at Bay View Church, Norfolk, Virginia, July 18, 1961.

POLICY RESOLUTIONS

We acknowledge and reaffirm our belief in the now almost ancient custom of meeting in annual session to emphasize the work of teaching religion in our churches through the Sunday schools.

This Convention now meeting in its 92nd annual session has been a source of strength for nearly a century. It grew up as a significant part of the great Sunday School movement in the United States of America. For many years the Sunday School Convention served as the primary instrument of Christian education and youth work in our churches. Many of these functions have been taken over by the Pilgrim Fellowship and boards and committees on Christian education, leaving as the principal emphasis of the Convention the work of the Sunday School.

Times have likewise changed so that our economy and our daily work habits have so changed that representation in the Convention by the Sunday School Superintendents and teachers is not possible. Likewise, vacations have become a factor in our lives, so that a day meeting in mid-July does not fit very well into our scheme. These changes raise questions in the minds of many of our people whether the time of year and nature of our program of the Convention ought not be reconsidered.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED

That the 1962 session of the Convention be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesday after the 3rd Sunday in July at a central place to be determined by the officers of the Convention, and the program include as far as possible the following:

Supper served by the host church, 6:30 to 7:00 p.m.; Hymns and prayers, 7:00 to 7:15 p.m.; Inspirational address, 7:15 to 7:45 p.m.; Discussion groups, 7:45 to 8:30 p.m.; Reassemble for business and reports, 8:30 to 9:00 p.m.; Closing address, 9:00 to 9:20 p.m.; Benediction and adjournment, 9:30 p.m.

Envy Of Laymen

Sometimes it is a bit difficult for a minister to refrain from being envious of laymen. Of course he knows that envy is a sin, and that he cannot afford that, but there is something less vile than envy, but somewhat related to it, in which even ministers sometimes indulge. Let's be more specific.

First, we need to rule out the desire to live in a big house with servants, cars, and airplanes. These desirable things can be spared. Usually ministers can have reasonably good homes and transportation that will get them to wherever they need to go.

Laymen who have money can do things that ministers cannot do. In the city of High Point, North Carolina, there is a small group of loyal members of the United Church of Christ (Congregational Christian) who are struggling to build a beautiful church in a new community where lovely homes are being built. They and their minister (who can give only part time to the church because he also edits this paper) have secured ten acres of wooded land where they hope to erect a church, prepare a beauty spot for neighborhood enjoyment, and start a program of religious activities and community development that will make this a good place for people to live and for children to grow.

But the church cannot be built because there is not enough money. It is in this sort of situation that a minister envies those laymen who have invested their lives in money-making, and who could furnish the money to build a church. Such a gift would hearten those who have struggled for years to do what seems to need to be done, but, better still, it would give Christian leadership to generations yet unborn. What better monument could anyone want than a good church serving humanity? Stone will crumble to dust, houses will pass with time, but a church, an organized body of Christian people, will live on through the ages. It is the Church in which one can invest. The money may be used to erect a building and do landscaping, but really the investment is in something much more permanent, something that is alive, something that has been breathed upon by the great God of the universe. The investment is in the Church, the world's best hope for permanence, prosperity, peace.

Believe it or not, it is sometimes difficult for a minister to refrain from wishing he had spent more time in earning money so churches can be established wherever they are needed in this world of ours. The Southern Convention is supposed to serve North Carolina and Virginia, but in reality we touch only small sectors of the two states. Vast areas of the two states are not touched by our churches. Reason? Well, one big reason is that laymen have not furnished the money with which to start new churches. Will it always be so? If the young people who are not now entering the ministry give themselves to jobs that will earn money, will they have the vision and the desire to make our country Christian? To make the world Christian? Who knows?

We need both laymen and ministers. Working together they can transform our world, something neither group can do alone. So, let's refrain from envy and join hands and hearts in building the Church.

Those August Revivals

News of August revivals is not coming our way as often as we would like, but customs of a century are not being lost, one can be sure. It is expected that on a certain Sunday in August the revival will begin in many of our churches. That is the time it was held years ago when wheat was harvested in June, corn was "laid-by" in July, and tobacco was not so important as it is now. So, we still have the revival in August.

Far be it from us to criticize the time a church holds its revival. In fact we favor consideration for age. Change is good (and unavoidable), but so is custom that is well founded. It may be that August is really the best time for that week of services in many churches, especially the rural churches.

Something that really concerns us is "the revival." Memory has recorded scenes of revivals that are buried in the past. There were altar scenes where people prayed and wept, and sometimes shouted. The preacher seemed to measure his success by the number of people who cried; and of course it was important to count the number who professed religion or came back from back-sliding. Once-a-month services did not lend themselves to a steady diet of Christian education, and it was expected that once each year there would be a renewal (revival) of religious fervor.

Now that church services are much more frequent, Sunday schools are all "evergreen," young people have a wide variety of activities under church sponsorship, and ministers live among their people, the revival is something quite different from its forebears. Sunday school teachers know which youngsters are ready for church membership, and a decision day may be at some other time than at the revival — perhaps at the end of the Pastor's Class, Christmas, or Easter. Those people in the community who are untouched by the church the other 51 weeks of the year are not likely to be present at this time.

Another factor causing change centers in the belief of ministers and laymen. A benevolent God who sent his Son to visit our planet is hard to present as the Angry One holding sinners over a bottomless pit of fire and brimstone. People who have brought coal and oil out of the depths of the earth, searched the bottom of the sea, and eagerly await a dash into outer space are not easily frightened. Teachers of religion have had to shift their basis of belief from fear to something very different.

As we go through this period of rapid transition it is very important for churches to maintain the real values of the old revival. It is easy for the occasion to become a social function when friends return from a distance, the community takes a "breather" and social fellowship, and a visiting minister enjoys a few days in a new community away from his daily duties. It is still a fact that people need to know God in the depths of their souls, that they need to be challenged to follow his precepts, that the church needs to feel a unity that comes from constant association, and that organized effort should be given to reaching those whose trust is not in God.

Remember the August revival. It can help greatly.

A MEXICAN IRRIGATION PROJECT

One of the largest irrigation projects in the Western Hemisphere was recently completed by Mexico. Thousands of Mexican farmers, until the project was undertaken, had about given up hope of continuing on the soil. Three million acres of land and 120,000 families are affected. These millions of acres, long the very emblem of thirst, are now green with crops.

Although irrigation in Mexico is not new, having been practiced there since the days of the Aztecs and Mayas, no country-wide undertaking was inaugurated until the present project was started about five years ago.

Not only did Mexico's irrigation program include the reclaiming and irrigation of vast stretches of land, but the fostering of agricultural communities. The hope is to keep these farm-town communities as service centers for the large farms nearby by not encouraging them to develop into large industrial centers.

Every civilized nation has given attention to irrigation. Even before the writing of history became an established practice, the science and benefit of irrigation had been discovered. Queen Semiramis, an ancient Assyrian ruler, who is supposed to have lived 4,000 years ago, has been given credit for directing her government to divert the waters of the Nile to irrigate arid lands.

The fall of ancient civilizations is blamed in part because irrigation was abandoned for various reasons, leaving the land unproductive and unable to meet the test of time. In some instances hostile armies destroyed much that had been done over long periods of time, but where the damage was repaired the countries continued to survive. Examples of this are found in Syria, old Persia, India, Java and some parts of Italy.

Based on facts, past and present, Mexican officials say that irrigation will not only bring gradual modernization to the country's agriculture and improvement to rural life, but it will provide the foundation for new industries in regions of potential wealth. Cost of the project, heavy as it was, is destined to pay high dividends.

Mexico's irrigation undertaking is typical of workers and officials interested in agriculture throughout the Western Hemisphere who are striving to build in the Americas a higher standard of living, provide greater security for all, and make a contribution to the welfare of future generations.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

I have recently (July 11-22) visited Iowa, speaking at "Fellowship Days" in each of the nine associations. These are similar to the "Spring Rallies" of our Southern Convention women.

Many things about Iowa interested me. I learned that it is the greatest food-producing center in the world; that more than 25% of the Grade A land in our nation is in Iowa; that it produces 10% of all the food produced in our country; and that it ranks first in value of farms, livestock, hogs, and first in eggs, poultry, corn, popcorn and oats. Too bad I was there just before the "roasting ears" got ripe!

As might be expected, most of the 185 Congregational Christian churches are in small towns and open country. However, one of them has more than a thousand members (Waterloo) and another more than two thousand (Plymouth, Des Moines). The superintendent and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Judson Fiebiger, were both originally from the Christian Church. Many in the Southern Convention remember her, for she was the former Mary Denison, whose father once served as pastor of Memorial Temple, Norfolk. Another former Christian Church person I met was Mrs. J. W. Dowty, minister's wife, who once was Lucy Eldredge's secretary. Russell Shafer and Jack Sunburn, both of whom served churches in the Southern Convention (the latter is a graduate of Elon) are now both serving churches in Dubuque... they were on vacation so I did not get to see them when I attended a meeting in the third Congregational church in that city.

The history of the Congregational churches in Iowa is interesting. Rev. Asa Turner, Jr., a graduate of Yale University, became pastor of the first church in the state in 1838. Two years before that Congregationalists had settled in southeast Iowa. At first the community was known as "Yankee Haystack" because of the common haystack in the center. The settlers desired a more dignified name and one evening at choir practice they decided upon "Denmark," their favorite hymn tune. This became the name for the community, the church, and, later, the Association.

At first Mr. Turner was paid $300 per year for half-time service, devoting the other half to missionary work in Iowa. He wrote at the beginning of what was to be a thirty-year pastorate in Denmark: "My field of labor is as boundless as the eye can see — a territory greater than that promised to Abraham, more abundant in its production, and I fear, almost as destitute of the knowledge of the true God."

In 1943 the "Iowa Band," nine graduates of Andover Seminary, were ordained and commissioned in the Denmark church. They established many churches and what was to become Grinnell College. Before they left home they heard from Rev. Mr. Turner thus: "Don't come here expecting a paradise. Our climate will permit men to live long enough, if they do their duty. If they do not, no matter how soon they die... Come prepared to expect small things and rough things. Lay aside all your dandy whims boys learn in college, and take a few lessons from your grandmothers before you come. Get clothes firm and durable, something that will go through the hazelbrush without tearing. Don't be afraid of a good hard hand or a tanned face. If you keep free from a hard heart you will do well. Get wives of the Puritan stamp, such as honor the distaff and the loom, those who can pail a cow and churn the butter and be proud of a jean dress or a checked apron." (And I thought "jeans" a modern word!)

Today this Denmark church stands "as the one rural Protestant church in north Lee County with an adequate and full-time program of Christian service to all."

The Highest Motive For Right Living

By Roy C. Helfenstein
Ormond Beach, Florida

In the Gospel of John, King James Translation, we find the words spoken by Jesus—

"For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth."

Weymouth puts it — "On their behalf, I consecrate myself in order that they may become perfectly consecrated in truth."

Moffatt puts it — "For their sake I consecrate myself that they may be consecrated by the truth."

Free Translation might put it — "For the sake of others I give myself in service to God and his Kingdom that they may also be inspired by the truth to give their lives in service to God and his World."

"For their sake" was Jesus' major and master motive of his masterful life! — his personal satisfaction and his highest ambition was to please God, his Heavenly Father and our Heavenly Father. "For the sake of others," homes are built, parents sacrifice, fathers go to their work through the long hours of the day, and mothers give their lives in loving service. "For the sake of others" young men give their lives on the fields of battle. "For the sake of others" men and women line up with the church and give their support to every good cause that makes for a better society. Jesus in our text revealed the secret of his marvelous life — his objective, his purpose, his power and his passion. "For their sake" — who were they? His disciples, his other friends and relatives — the world of his day, the millions yet unborn. For your sake, and for my sake, and for the sake of all the sons and daughters of men, Jesus gave his life in opposing everything that was wrong, and in championing everything that was right.

And he calls to all who would be his disciples today to follow him in giving their lives in the service of his church, in the service of his heavenly Father's world for which while fellowshiping with his friends and kin-folk, he gave his best in service and "for their sake" gave the last full measure of devotion in "the laying down of his life for their sake."

Some people embrace the Christian faith because of their gratitude for being privileged to live in God's world.

For some people it has been the motive of patriotic interest that has caused them to want to stand up to be counted on the Lord's side — their answer to their country's call and to the Call of God go hand in hand.

Interest in others, love for others, or "for the sake of others" embodies the highest motive a person can have for accepting the Christian way of life and uniting with the Church.

There are many men who have not cared enough about their own soul's welfare to bother themselves about

IT IS NOT FINISHED LORD

It is not finished, Lord.
There is not one thing done.
There is no battle of my life
That I have really won.
And now I come to tell Thee
How I fought to fail.
I cannot read the writing of the years;

My eyes are full of tears.
It gets all blurred and won't make sense.

It's full of contradictions
Like the scribblings of a child.
I can but hand it in, and hope
That Thy great mind, which reads
The writings of so many lives,
Will understand this scrawl
And what it strives
To say — but leaves unsaid.
I cannot write it over.
The stars are coming out.
My body needs its bed.
I have no strength for more,
So it must stand or fall, dear Lord!—
That's all.

religion, but the thought of their obligation to their children, or their life companion, has prompted them to set their lives in order before God and man.

From hundreds of men have come this confession, "I was getting careless about my habits, my associates, my attitude toward the church, my regard for the Sabbath. And one day the memory of my mother's life with all its goodness and beauty made me think of how I had kept her prayers for me from being answered — and for her sake, I resolved to quit the wrong life and the wrong crowd and to begin to live the right life and line up with the church of her God.

Thousands of men for the sake of Christian parents have accepted the Christian way of life for themselves.

A group of University students became increasingly reckless in their manner of life, habits and all the rest. Two of the group talking one day about one of the group who was losing out in his class work — and falling in the esteem of the faculty and the student body in general because of his wild dissipations. One of the two chaps who were talking about the situation said to the other — "Dutch is going to hell mighty fast and every fellow in this frat house is partly to blame. If we fellows had been different, Dutch would be different. Let us get Dutch back on the right track." For the sake of a fraternity brother the one young fellow announced that he was going to take the right way — and it is stated that from that one young man's decision a wave of moral and religious concern swept over the entire fraternity group of which he was a member and through the other fraternities of that great university and the entire university experienced a moral awakening.

Social concern, an impulse, an interest in someone else's moral and religious welfare, the desire to be of help to others — is the truest mark of character.

That is the Christian motive of life — concern for the spiritual welfare of others. That was our Lord's motive — "for the sake of others."

The men and women today whose lives count for the most to society and to God — those who are getting the most out of life, those who are putting the most into life, the happiest people, are those who want to live right not only as a matter of self-respect and for their own personal welfare which to them is secondary, but in appreciation of God's goodness to them and to those they love. For the sake of their family name, for the sake of their sons or daughters, their companion, their friends — "for the sake of others" they have declared their allegiance to the Man of Galilee and to the building of a better world. That is the way it will have to be done; each one, "for the sake of others," to dedicate himself or herself to the proposition of doing what one person can do to make this a better world. The person who fails to think of others cannot help thinking less of himself.

The Church flings out the challenge to people who have a sense of social responsibility and who want their

Many Members Don't Want Christian Unity

By Louis Cassels

The biggest obstacle to Christian unity is the fact that a great many church members don't really want it.

They are perfectly happy with the present denominational set-up, and reluctant to consider any merger which might lead to changes in religious customs for which they have a strong sentimental attachment.

Their attitude was succinctly expressed the other day by a woman here to her pastor:

"I like being an Episcopalian. I can't see why we should change our way of doing things in order to merge with the Presbyterians and the Methodists and all those other people."

No Change

This contentment with the status quo is distressing to leaders of the ecumenical movement, which seeks to heal Christian divisions.

They know that reunion of the fragmented Christian family will be hard enough to achieve with everyone working and praying for it. Real progress will be virtually impossible as long as so many church members are satisfied to continue living in separate denominational compartments.

But they also know that you can't change anyone's attitude merely by deploring it.

If the ecumenical movement is to receive the strong popular support it requires, its leaders must somehow communicate to rank-and-file church members their own understanding of the compelling motives behind it. Efforts to do this are now being undertaken.

At least four different reasons are given by ecumenical leaders for their belief that the most urgent necessity confronting Christians in this era is the achievement of visible, effective unity.

1. Denominationalism is wasteful of money and manpower. This is perhaps the least important of the arguments for unity, but it is worthy of note at a time when no church has enough resources to do half the things it ought to be doing.

influence to count for the highest and the best — the Church flings out the challenge to all to line up with the only organization that is dedicated to the proposition of making it easier for people to do right, and "for the sake of others" to help build a better world.

2. Division weakens Christian influence in all areas of national life. When churches speak in a babble of different voices, contradicting and disputing one another on public issues and even on basic moral questions, they can hardly expect anyone to pay them much attention.

3. Disunity hampers the Christian mission abroad. This is the anguished testimony of many missionaries, who say that non-Christians are scandalized by the spectacle of rival Christian sects competing for converts while professing to serve the same Lord.

4. Underlying all of these practical arguments is the primary motive for Christian unity:

As long as the church is divided, it is violating the clearly expressed will of its Founder, whose prayer for His Disciples, on the last evening He spent with them before His crucifixion, was "that they may be one."

Can a divided church say anything convincing to a world which sees in it only another example of the strife and alienation that poison all human relations?

That is the basic question which the ecumenical movement is asking of church members.

Mothers And Their Babies

By W. R. Cullom, Wake Forest, N. C.

For some years the conviction has grown upon me that one of the weakest points in Western civilization is to be found in the way the baby is left in the hands of others by its mother. The home demands on these mothers are so many, so expensive, and so urgent that the mother feels that she must get a job in some office, in some store, or in some factory and supplement the family income in order for the family to approximate living on any sort of level with their neighbors.

Besides this, the demand is greatly reinforced by the fact that this young mother worked in some business house before she was married, and so finds it easy to place her baby in a nursery, with some caretaker, or into other hands than her own; and this goes on in disregard for the fact that absolutely no one can do for a baby what its mother can do. Nor can this something be done on half-time attention — it is a 24-hour-a-day

The Unity We Seek

Where is this unity which we seek? It is found through the World Council, surely, through the National Council of Churches, through state and community councils of churches. But what about the local church itself? The interests of men and women in these days are approaching each other. Many women are employed and their hours of work and leisure do not differ from those of men. Reasons for segregation of men and women in their worship, work and study within the church are decreasing rapidly. When we are concerned with uniting churches, as we should indeed be, let us be sure that the churches themselves are united within. A united laity makes for the dynamic church, a "Church for New Times." From our theme hymn for 1961-62 we quote these familiar words:

"New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of truth."

job and demands every second of it.

A family from Holland settled in our community a year or so ago. In talking with this family on Independence Day, something was said about the mother doing some reading for me. The father at once said he thought his wife had her time pretty well occupied with her three children. I said to myself at once, "There is the difference between Holland and America on this most important issue."

And so there we are! What can be done about it? It probably cannot be changed very abruptly, but we should begin at once to beget and develop a changed attitude, a changed conviction, and a changed habit in the whole field of our home life, keeping in mind all the while that the home is the most important, the most elemental, the most essential of all our institutions. Without it, there can be no school, no church, nor anything that is worth while. Let western civilization bestir itself before it is too late!

Doctors Needed

MEDICAL MISSIONARIES
DESCRIBE NEED FOR DOCTORS

In Indonesia alone 20 doctors are needed this very week, a group of 150 Protestant medical missionaries was told at their their recent annual meeting.

Obstetricians top the "most needed" list, followed by lung specialists, surgeons, pediatricians and specialists in internal diseases. They are all needed by church-supported hospitals, although one appealed simply for a good G. P. "We have been two years without any doctor," said the message, "and the work has to be built up again."

In a report on the situation in tropical Africa, it was estimated that the area south of the Sahara will need 24,070 doctors within the next ten years.

This means, said Dr. Henry R. O'Brien, formerly a medical missionary to Thailand, that at least 40,000 medical students should be in training right now, as about 40 per cent of them will drop out for financial and other reasons. The unlucky ones are valuable, however, as technicians, assistants and male nurses.

He also urged that something be done by the churches and their medical agencies to train more African medical students in the U. S. At present, he said, a large proportion of them are studying in the Soviet Union.

Reports on the constant battle against leprosy, tuberculosis, malnutrition and trachoma were delivered with customary scientific dispassion. All witnessed to a superior Christian devotion to healing the sick, often under rigorous conditions.

The missionary doctors and nurses on furlough were the guests of the National Council of Churches' Christian Medical Council for Overseas Work, headed by Frederick G. Scovel, M. D.

Blessed is the man who loves his church enough to let others know it.

Americans Hinder Missionary Work

FROM GHANA

We know that Russia gives free education to many Ghanaian students each year. They are treated royally and by the time they return to Ghana they are thoroughly indoctrinated in love for Communism and Russia, and in hatred for America, England, and other democratic countries. On the other hand, America educates even more Ghanaian students each year, but tends to ignore them while they are in America. They are not indoctrinated with love for democracy or the USA, nor with suspicion for Communism. In many cases they are subjected to embarrassments and indignities because of their color. Communists here make a big issue of every incident of race prejudice in America — and what can we say? Won't you do all you can to help free all Americans from this unchristian attitude?

—Waldo and Betty Bickham

FROM HONG KONG

Reports of growing opposition in the USA to textile imports from Hong Kong raise concern here. Obscured in the calls for "protection" is the fact that Hong Kong imports nearly 50% more from the USA than it exports. Hong Kong shirts and other clothing are providing work for thousands who otherwise would be on our relief roles. This is ever the dilemma — do we really want to help people help themselves, especially if we find it takes some sacrifice? Or do we just want to salve our consciences by merely "Sharing Our Surplus?"

IZMIR

Ancient Smyra, the seat of one of the seven churches in the Book of Revelation. Now a city of 300,000. Institutions: American Collegiate Institute.

August

- 13—Rev. and Mrs. C. Raymond Fowler were appointed in 1959 for a five-year term as teachers at American Collegiate Institute, Izmir. Before coming to Turkey he was assistant pastor of Community Church, Claremont, California.
- 14—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Glass, Jr., are teachers at American Collegiate Institute. They have a two-year-old son.
- 15—Miss Kathleen Hadden was appointed to a short term as a teacher of home economics at American Collegiate Institute after her graduation from college in 1959.
- 16—Miss Maurla Haehlen became interested in the Near East during a trip there with her family and through church camps and conferences. After graduation from the University of Wisconsin she came to Izmir as a physical education teacher.
- 17—Miss Margaret Hanson taught physical education in Minnesota public schools for three years before being appointed to a short term at American Collegiate Institute, Izmir.
- 18—Miss Virginia Dorothy Hermann had taught chemistry at Sweet Briar College for two years before going to Turkey. Now as well as teaching at American Collegiate Institute she assists in the social service program of the school, through which students visit two children's homes and assist in hospitals.
- 19—Miss Mary Kutz became an English teacher at American Collegiate Institute in 1959. She had previously taught one year in Turkey and two years in Southern Rhodesia, and had been a social worker in Seattle and New Orleans.

Missionaries Appointed

Boston, Mass., July 26—Miss Helen Morgan and Miss Naomi Foster, educational missionaries serving in the Near East under the United Church Board for World Ministries, sail from New York today to resume their teaching posts in Turkey. They have just completed a furlough in the United States.

Miss Morgan is principal of the American Academy for Girls in Uskudar. A native of Chicago, she was educated at the University of Chicago (B.A., 1934; M.A., 1936); and has also studied at the University of Mexico and several other American colleges. During her furlough year just ended she took graduate studies at the American University, Washington, D. C. Before going overseas in 1952, she taught Spanish at Arthur Hill High School, Saginaw, Michigan; and at Macalester College, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Miss Foster, associate director of the American Collegiate Institute at Izmir, was born in Manchester, Connecticut. She was educated at Mount Holyoke College (B.A., 1932); Hartford School of Religious Education (M.A., 1941); and Hartford Theological Seminary (B.D., 1943). The Hartford Seminary also awarded her the degree of Master of Sacred Theology in 1944.

She taught school in North Carolina for several years before going overseas.

Miss Foster spent her furlough year studying at Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri, on a National Science Foundation Fellowship.

The American Collegiate Institute at Izmir enrolls more than 400 girls annually from all parts of Turkey. The American Academy for Girls at Uskudar has a student body of almost 500 girls, 170 of whom are boarding students from many areas of the country.

(The United Church Board for World Ministries in the overseas agency of the United Church of Christ which was formed by union of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church. The Board, in its present form, embraces all the overseas agencies of the united communions.)

Ruth E. Jones of Storrs, Connecticut, has been appointed to a three-year teaching term at Pierce College, Athens, Greece, by the United Church of Christ.

Miss Jones, a supervising teacher at Central Connecticut State College since 1953, will sail from New York August 15. She will travel in a group of about 25 men and women from all over the United States leaving at that time to serve under the American Board in schools and hospitals in Turkey and Greece.

A native of Willimantic, Connecticut, Miss Jones was educated at Northfield School for Girls in Massachusetts, Willimantic Teachers College, and Boston University.

She has taught in Connecticut public schools in Willimantic, Southbury, Middletown, and Woodbury.

Pierce College, a high school and junior college for girls, was founded by the American Board in 1875. Originally located in Izmir, Turkey, it was relocated near Athens in 1922. Today it has an enrollment of more than 600 girls and a faculty of 60. College level courses in social welfare and commercial subjects are offered. Classes are conducted in Greek and English.

Because of the recent extension of jet runways of Athens Airport encroaching on college property in Elleniko, the college is now preparing to rebuild on a site given to the school in Aghia Paraskevi, another suburb of Athens.

Pierce College's alumnae association is the largest women's organization in Greece.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Webster of Claremont, California, have been appointed associate missionaries of the United Church of Christ, to serve for five years at the American Academy for Girls near Istanbul in Turkey.

They will sail August 15 from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster bring extensive experience in the Near East to their new assignment. He began his service in Turkey in 1931, teaching for several years at International College, then located at Izmir. He later served as cultural attache in Ankara with the U. S. State Department and as consul in Meshed and has held a number of government posts in Washington on Near East affairs.

In the United States he has taught sociology at Beloit College, Ohio State University, and the University of Wisconsin.

Most recently, prior to his retirement from government service in 1959, he served for three years as first secretary of the Embassy in Taipei, Formosa, and for two years in the Historical Division of the State Department in Washington.

A native of Bennington, Vermont, he was educated at Oberlin College, Oberlin Graduate School of Theology, and the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Webster, the former Mabel Ruth Whaley, is a native of Flemingsburg, Kentucky, and also was graduated from Oberlin College. She has done graduate work at the University of Wisconsin and at Gallaudet College, Washington, D. C. She has taught school in this country and in Turkey and Formosa.

REFRESHMENT

Our spirits need refreshment as our bodies must have food; the unseen part of us must be sustained, re-charged, renewed... Fed on that which gives it strength; the things that fortify; courage, hope and faith... or it will weaken and will die.

Meditation on the good, the true the beautiful; thoughts of peace, of love and wisdom; fare invisible... Thus the soul is nourished when with Life's hard struggle spent Bread of Truth and Wine of Joy; the secret sacrament.

Though your cupboard may be packed with rich good things to eat; and your table groan beneath the weight of drink and meat... You must feed the self that is concealed from human view; the part God sees... the hidden spirit... the eternal YOU.

Laymen Help Prisoners

Almost since the opening of the Massachusetts Correctional Institution in Walpole some men from the United Church have devoted the second and fourth Tuesday evenings of each month to a visit there. They gather in the lobby, enter the "trap" and cross the yard to the cell-block. These men, carrying Bibles, are admitted by three more locked doors, each one of which closes behind them before the next one opens. They pass along the brilliantly lighted corridor to the Chapel where they find a number of men in denim shirts and slacks awaiting them. There are greetings and handshakes all around. New men are introduced to each other. All are on a first name basis. Those who come regularly seem like old friends. This is a regular gathering of the Bible Discussion Group. The number of inmates ranges from five to twenty, depending on the other activities of the evening. The number of men from the Church has varied from two to twenty and there has never been a meeting night when none kept the engagement.

The pews are moved to form a square and after greetings the men sit down together, while Murdock McDonald, a lifer, and Secretary to the Prison Chaplain, calls on someone to lead in prayer. A portion of scripture follows — just now from the Gospel of Matthew — till someone interrupts with a question or a comment and the discussion is on.

"What does that phrase mean? Do you believe that? How could this be?" — There are all shades of opinion. Some never have anything to say while others talk a good deal. The interchange of ideas goes on until nine o'clock when it is brought to a close with a prayer. The men have to be in their rooms by 9:30 but there is time for a little informal visiting. Perhaps we talk about the next play that will be given, to which we will be invited; or we want to hear about some of the things these men are doing for the world outside — from behind prison bars. There are some who give blood to save a life at the cancer hospital next door. Some are guinea pigs for some medical research. One man who can is sending money regularly to support a family in Greece. Several are devoting most of their free time to reading for blind students via tape-recorder.

The men seem to appreciate our coming, and we hope that we contribute something to help break the monotony of prison life and to catch a vision of a larger life; but we all come away humbled — wondering if we could face up to life "inside" as they do; wondering why it is they instead of us; wondering if we would want to help others outside as they seem to do. And we go home grateful for the chance we have had and realizing that we have received far more than we have given.

PRAYER FOR THE CHURCH

O God, we pray for Thy church, which is set today amid the perplexities of a changing order and face to face with a great new task. We remember with love the nurture she gave to our spiritual life in its infancy, the tasks she set for our growing strength, the influence of the devoted hearts she gathers, the steadfast power for good she has exerted. When we compare her with all human institutions, we rejoice for there is none like her. But when we judge her by the mind of her Master, we bow in contrition. O God, baptize her afresh in the life-giving spirit of Jesus! Put upon her lips the ancient gospel of her Lord! Fill her with the prophet's scorn of tyranny, and with a Christ-like tenderness for the heavy-laden and down-trodden. Bid her cease from seeking her own life, lest she lose it. Make her valiant to give up her life to humanity, that like her crucified Lord she may mount by the path of the cross to a higher glory.
Amen.

INCREASE IN BIBLE DISTRIBUTION

Olivier Beguin, general secretary of the United Bible Society, will be interviewed by NBC reporter Ben Grauer on "The Rising Tide in Scripture Distribution" during the NBC Radio Network's "Faith in Action" Sunday, Aug. 13 (8:15 a.m. EDT).

Mr. Beguin, who recently completed a round-the-world trip, will comment on the "unusual increase" in Bible distribution during the past year after a 10-year period of stability. "Faith in Action" is an NBC Public Affairs presentation.

LAYMEN AND THE WORLD

The Laity has a ministry to perform but what is it? In view of the activity of most laymen in the church and in society, it is definitely focused on raising money, works of charity and management of property.

We like to think of Christianity as a laymen's movement and that Jesus was not ordained by any earthly hierarchy or institution and that he was a layman in the strictest sense of the word.

We recall that many of the significant happenings in the early life of the church occurred in lay meetings and there is need for happenings today quite as significant occurring in our homes, our industries and our communities.

If the layman would think of his ministry following through or being expressed in all his daily activity at his club, his lodge, his office or his home it would mean a new day for the church.

This is the challenge, because many, if not most lay people, feel ill-prepared for this ministry and it is at this point in our life in the church that we must find reinforcement and help.

The Retreats, the study groups, the summer conferences have a new task to perform and it will be realized as the work of the church is found in the work of the world.

A NOTE FROM APPLE'S CHAPEL

By Mrs. E. H. Thompson, Reporter

Rev. Bland Leebrick closed his pastorate at Apple's Chapel Sunday by baptizing eighteen members who had recently joined the church. He took in three by transfer of letter in addition to the same number who came by letter last Sunday. This makes a total of twenty-four members who came into the church during the last few weeks of his ministry.

The church had a picnic lunch after the morning service in honor of the Leebrick family. They were presented a silver serving set and a nice love offering. The Ladies' Fellowship presented to Mrs. Leebrick an electric blanket and an all-weather coat. The Leebricks moved July 31 to the Virginia Valley Conference where Mr. Leebrick will be pastor of the Bethlehem, Wood's Chapel, and Wissler's Chapel churches.

RISING BEAR

"Last year I gave one of my names away." The 90 year-old former superintendent of the Fort Berthold Reservation had followed an old Indian custom of giving one of his cherished names to a younger man.

The name he could no longer use was Rising Bear. He had been given that name by his pupils because, they said, "When the bear fights he stands up; you are like him."

The name was well chosen, for Rising Bear did stand up for his people to protect them against unfair leases and agreements, and politicians who wanted to take more Indian lands for white settlement.

He had stood up to the opposition of some of the Indians themselves, when as a young man, he and his wife had started a school at Shell Creek Village in 1896. They taught the children to read, to figure money, to care for livestock, and to walk proudly as Americans.

This great American, Rising Bear, had received his education through the efforts of a pioneer Congregational missionary, Charles Hall. He is a fine product of Our Christian World Mission.

From story by Evan Webb Hall, son of Charles Hall.

REFUGEES IN SARDINIA

Twenty-five refugee families are being given the opportunity to build and to farm or work in industry in Sardinia, Italy. Our Congregational Christian Service Committee is co-operating with other agencies in helping to prove that such people can be helped to help themselves.

Two men in California decided they could make a contribution, namely, themselves and their skills. Paul H. Moore, teacher of industrial art, whose sideline of growing oranges and olives developed into a full-fledged business, went to Sardinia as an agricultural consultant.

Paul Moore's friend, Clifton Clemens, took a leave from his construction business to serve as technical adviser, to help build a nucleus of small businesses and industry, as well as homes. Their wives used their skills as homemakers.

These two families gave a year as representatives of our Service Committee to help this community of

COUPLE TO TEACH AT SCHOOL IN INDIA

Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Rauth of Marshall, Michigan, left June 14 to teach for three years at the Kodaikanal School for Missionary Children in South India.

Mr. Rauth has been teaching industrial arts at Marshall High School since 1956.

The Kodaikanal School, located high in the mountains of South India, has an enrollment of about 300 children whose parents are missionaries in the Far East. It includes kindergarten through the twelfth grade. The school is supported by 14 Protestant denominations in North America.

In India Mr. Rauth will serve as industrial arts instructor and recreational supervisor while Mrs. Rauth will spend the first year as a house mother and the second two years as an eighth grade teacher.

There are 30 European, Indian, Burmese and American teachers on the school's faculty.

Mrs. Rauth formerly taught general science at Marshall High School. She attended the University of Wisconsin and in 1952 transferred to West Michigan University in Kalamazoo, from which she received her Bachelor of Science degree in 1954.

SUMMER PARABLE

Now it came to pass that, as the time of vacation drew near, a certain member of the church bethought him of cool streams where fish were found, and his children thought of the mountains. And this church member spoke and said: "Lo, the hot days come and my work lieth heavy upon me. Come, let us depart and go where fishes do bite, and where the cool winds bring refreshment and the land is beautiful about us."

"Thou speakest words of wisdom," said his wife. "Yet three, nay, even four, things must we do ere we go."

"Three things think I of, but not a fourth," said her husband — "that we ask our neighbor to minister unto our flowers, that we arrange for our grass to be moved and watered, that we have our mail forwarded; but no other thing cometh to my mind."

"The fourth is like unto the other three, but greater than all," said his spouse, "even this, that thou dig into thy purse and pay the church pledge, in order that the good name of the church may be preserved, that the heart of the treasurer be made glad, and that it may be well with thee. For, verily I say unto thee, thou hast more money now than thou wilt have when thou dost return."

And the husband replied, "Verily, thou art noble and wise among women." And he did pay his pledge for the summer, and the treasurer rejoiced greatly, saying, "Of a truth, there are those who care for the good of the church." And it was so.

Change Needed In Church Work

The "winds of change" sweeping across the world's under-developed countries have brought pressing demands for revolutionary changes in the traditional patterns of church work in these areas.

What form these new patterns should take has been the subject of an intensive six-year study by the World Council of Churches.

Its answer is a new program — SASP or Specialized Assistance for Social Projects. Its object is to help the churches in these countries act more effectively in meeting the demands of their new situations. Its effect could result in radical shifts in program in the churches' ministry to human need.

Plans for the program, which has been authorized by the WCC's Executive Committee, were reported here with the announcement that the world body is seeking a total of $100,000 each year for the next three years to get it underway.

Purpose of the Project is to make available the resources of technically skilled personnel to churches in these areas to help them "think freshly about ways of using their existing resources more effectively."

One of these existing resources, as yet untapped in a majority of the newly emerging nations, is its youth. It is expected that major emphasis will be on leadership training and development.

At the same time there will be pioneer "demonstration projects," new projects in agriculture, small industries and similar programs.

The work in each country will be undertaken only at the request of the indigenous churches. The goal will be to provide the necessary training for local leaders as quickly as possible so that they can take over and the "outside" personnel can be released for service elsewhere.

Because the needs of each country vary greatly, it is expected that the projects will be very different. However work in each country will be preceded by consultation and careful study with local church leaders to work out the basic program.

The SASP proposal grows out of six-year study on "Our Common Christian Responsibility toward Areas of Rapid Social Change." Under this program local studies have already been conducted in India, Japan, Liberia, Kenya, the Copper Belt region of Northern Rhodesia, the Cameroons and Nigeria. There has also been a series of regional and international conferences.

The study on rapid social change was initiated by the World Council in 1955 under the direction of the Rev. Paul Abrecht, executive secretary of the Department of Church and Society. He is an American Baptist minister. The study received an initial grant of $100,000 from the late John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The Rev. Diasuke Kitagawa, a priest of the Protestant Episcopal Church, from the United States, has also been closely associated with the conduct of the study. Dr. John Karefa Smart, now a cabinet minister of the government of Sierra Leone, worked on the study in its earlier stages.

Two books planned for publication late this year will report the results of the intensive study. They are written by Mr. Abrecht and Dr. Egbert de Vries, director of the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague, Netherlands.

The new program will be operated by the WCC's Division of Inter-Church Aid and Service to Refugees. The plans for SASP were prepared in consultation by this Division and the Division of Studies, the Division of Ecumenical Action, the International Missionary Council, and the Commission of the Churches on International Affairs.

SASP will be managed by a Committee appointed by the Inter-Church Aid Division in consultation with these units.

Are Ye Able?

A MEDITATION FOR LEADERS

By Mrs. Harry E. Drobish*

All sing: "Are ye able," said the Master,
"To be crucified with me?"
"Yea," the sturdy dreamers answered,
"To the death we follow Thee."
"Lord, we are able." Our spirits are Thine.
Remold them, make us like Thee, divine.
Thy guiding radiance above us shall be
A beacon to God, to love and loyalty.

Are ye able? Here is a series of questions to prompt meditation:

1. Are you likable? Even lovable?
2. Are you approachable? Are you reachable?
3. Are you laughable? Able to be laughed at?
4. Are you expendable? Able to be expended? Spent for a purpose?
Let's use our strength and we will gain more strength as long as God wants us to labor here for him. "He that saveth his life shall lose it."
5. Are you expandable? Can you grow bigger? Increase your potentialities?
6. Are you teachable? Never too old to learn?
7. Are you adaptable?
8. Are you changeable when it is time to change?
9. Are you criticizable?
10. Are you improvable? Powers, of the Model Agency, suggests ways any woman can improve herself:
Take rudeness and return it with perfect courtesy.
Ignore a slur and return it with a compliment.
Take hostility and return it with the most dazzling friendliness you can muster (turn the other cheek).
11. Are you commendable?
12. Are you dependable? Can you be depended upon at all times?
13. Are you defendable?
14. Are you durable? Can you work hard? Are you easily worn out?
One secret of being a good leader is in bringing out the best in others.

ARE YOU ABLE?

"A Trustworthy Leader"

Background Scripture: Acts 15:22-41; 16:19-40; 17:1-14; 18:5. I Thessalonians 1:1; I Peter 5:12.

Devotional Reading: Philippians 1:3-11.

Memory Selection: Even if you suffer for righteousness sake, you will be blessed. I Peter 3:14 RSV.

The first picture we get of Silas (who is perhaps the same man as Silvanus) shows him in a good light and in a good office. A discussion had arisen in the early Church in regard to the status of Gentile Christians in the Christian Church. And dissension was manifesting itself. The leaders of the Antioch church decided to consult or confer with the "Mother Church" at Jerusalem, and they sent Paul and Barnabas as their emissaries for a "ruling." This is what is known as the Jerusalem Council, and was the First Church Council. Paul and Barnabas presented the matter, it was thoroughly discussed, and a decision was reached. A letter was written by the Jerusalem church to be sent back by Paul and Barnabas. But the leaders of the Jerusalem Church knew the limitations of a mere letter, so they sent two of their own number, Silas and Judas Barsabas, as their emissaries to present the matter in a more personal way. We may be sure of this — Silas was a level-headed, sensible, sound man, trustworthy, tolerant, and dedicated. The Church would not have dared to send him if he had not been a worthy representative, and if he had not had the confidence of the Jerusalem church. He was a Roman citizen, although a Jew. He was one of "the chief men among the brethren," and he was "a prophet," a layman to be sure, but a man able to speak in a simple, convincing way the message of Christianity. Silas, by his presence and by his message, "confirmed the brethren." Thank God for the men who can step into a difficult situation in a church, and by their integrity of character and common-sense and spiritual insight, bring factions together. Silas was such a man.

Our next picture of Silas is in connection with the second missionary journey which Paul made. It may be recalled that John Mark, who accompanied Paul and Barnabas on the first missionary journey, turned back at Perga, and returned to Jerusalem. When Paul and Barnabas started out to revisit the churches they had established on the first missionary journey, Barnabas suggested that they take Mark with them. But Paul said "Nothing doing. We are not going to take that fellow; he quit on us before. He's not going with me, and that's that." Paul and Barnabas were equally insistent, with the result that Barnabas took Mark with him and sailed to Cyprus, his native land. Paul thereupon chose Silas as his companion for the long, arduous missonary tour. There is only one explanation of that — Silas was a strong character. Paul was serious about this business of taking the gospel to the people of other lands. He wanted somebody he could depend on, somebody who would stand by him, and see it through. The fact that he chose Silas is a tribute to Silas' character and ability and dedication. And the few references in the New Testament to Silas show that Paul's faith in Silas was justified. Paul mentions him more than any other companion he had during the rest of his life. And always Silas is mentioned in connection with some important event, or in some praiseworthy effort. He was a man of faith, of courage, of loyalty, of Christian character. He always bore a good witness to his faith in Christ and his love for Christ.

Peter also bears witness to the trustworthiness of Silas. In his letter he writes "By Silvanus, a faithful brother, as I regard him..."

To sum up, Silas was as the theme of the lesson puts it "A Trustworthy Leader." And a study of his life reveals that the emphasis should be put upon his trustworthiness, rather than his leadership. Certainly he was not a dynamic leader like Paul. Nor was he eloquent like Paul. But he was faithful, dependable, trustworthy.

BE STILL

"Be still and know that I am God"...

This is my favorite text — Sweet words that soothe the aching heart when troubled and perplexed. Be still, be still, the good Book says — cease rushing to and fro — in all the fret and stress of life — Be still, be still — and know... Know that His strong protecting arm upholds us when we fall — Know that He hears our feeble prayers and answers when we call — Safe in the secret sanctuary — in silence set apart — He pours the riches of His Love into a quiet heart.

—Patience Strong (Used by Plymouth,
Des Moines,
Women's Fellowship)

Well, trustworthiness is not the only virtue. And trustworthiness in itself is no guarantee of success in life. But come to think of it, there are not many more desirable qualities in a man's character than that of trustworthiness, dependability, faithfulness. Jesus puts a great deal of emphasis upon it. The accolade he gives to the stewards who had made good use of their lord's substance was "Well done, thou good and faithful servant..." Jesus does not emphasize success, but faithfulness. Suppose that men should develop the spirit of faithfulness, trustworthiness, dependability in modern life, in greater degree. Think what a difference it would make. Mr. Employer, would it not make your heart glad if every one of the men working for you were trustworthy! Think what a difference it would make in domestic relationships if husbands and wives could trust each other, if each knew the other was trustworthy! ! Think what a difference it would make if officers and officials of the church were trustworthy, if every one of them could be depended on in the discharge of their duties! Silas was not a brilliant leader, a dynamic leader, but he was a trustworthy leader. And his claim to greatness is within the reach of every one of us. We are not all brilliant, and we may not all be successful in the worldly sense of the word. But we can be faithful, trustworthy, dependable.

Superintendent Attends Workshop

Dear Friends:

Last week I had the privilege of attending the seventeenth annual workshops for executives and other administrative personnel working in or with children's institutions. The Workshops are held each year at the University of North Carolina and are sponsored by the University's School of Social Work. Sixteen states and one foreign country were represented.

I attended the workshop on "What the Executive Delegates and to Whom." This was conducted by Mr. Hansel H. Hollingsworth, Associate Director of Group Child Care Project. Lectures were given by Dr. Alan Keith-Lucas of the University of North Carolina on "How Successful Are We In Handling Problems of Sexual Growth?" and by Miss Mary E. Stevens, Director of Casework Service, Florida Baptist Children's Home, Lakeland, Fla., on "Children Work Out Their Family Problems." Two panel discussions were held on "How We Use or Do Not Use Sponsors" and "We Take Another Look at our Use of Community Schools."

This was my first such institute. It proved to be very helpful. The School of Social Work has been a great help to child-caring institutions throughout the Southeast in helping them to put forth a better program for the children they serve. The School, along with the institutions in the Southeastern section of our country, sponsors the Group Child Care Project. This project brings to each institution's campus a week of in-service training for its personnel each year. This in-service training is under the guidance of Mr. Hansel H. Hollingsworth, Associate Director. This service has proven to be very beneficial to our Children's Home.

August 1 we began our second year with the Children's Home. As we look back on the past year there are many things with which we are very satisfied. We are very happy and proud of the progress we are making as a child-caring institution. This is coming about because of effort that was put forth in this direction years before under my predecessor, Dr. John G. Truitt. It was he and his staff who did the planting. We thank God now that we have a share in the cultivation. We have only begun to have the kind of program a child-caring institution should have. Much remains to be done. We only hope and pray that you, the people of our churches, will continue to support us to the extent that such a program can be carried out.

MRS. ELIJAH MOFFITT, 84, SUCCUMBS

Mrs. Blanche Baird Moffitt, 84, of Greensboro, N. C., formerly of Wakefield, Va., died in her sleep on Friday, June 30.

She was the widow of Elijah Moffitt, attorney of Asheboro. She was born at Walnut Hill, Sussex County, Va., and was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Hartwell Baird. She was a member of the First Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro. Mrs. Moffitt was educated at Elon College and taught school six years at Wakefield, Va., prior to her marriage.

Surviving are a son, Elijah Baird Moffitt of Richmond, Va.; a daughter, Mrs. Chalmers S. Walters of Greensboro; and one granddaughter, Deane Moffitt of New York City.

The funeral service was held in Greensboro at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 2, in Hanes-Lineberry Chapel. Dr. William E. Wisseman, pastor of her church, officiated. Burial was in the Old City Cemetery in Asheboro.

My Highest Honor

By S. L. Morgan, Sr.,
Wake Forest, N. C.

I have just received the highest honor of my 89 years. It was to be invited back to preach on a great occasion by a church I left as pastor 38 years ago, the First Baptist Church of Henderson, N. C. It was called in my honor "S. L. Morgan Day." I had served the church in the troubled years 1912-22, marked by World War I and the worst of all Influenza epidemics. I had been retired nearly 30 years. The honor was almost unique. For churches don't look out old ministers, long retired, to do them honor. Usually the retired minister sinks into oblivion in less time than that.

Stunning Invitation

The invitation of Pastor W. W. Leathers, Jr., stunned me. "Could you possibly preach?" he asked. Reply, "Nothing else could please me as much." The more because in my town, with a seminary and 800 preachers, an invitation to preach comes to me hardly oftener than once or twice a year. And to preach is the burning desire of the old minister, and not to preach his worst affliction. His pulpit had long been more than a throne to him. To invite him back is to give him the feel of being "a real person." If only people knew the "feel" of it.

The Great Event

In 38 years the church had grown into one of the great churches of the state, with a plant worth maybe $\frac{3}{4}$ of a million. It had many members of the highest caliber. And they came on a raw rainy day almost to pack the sanctuary, even the balcony. And the long-retired minister the preacher! Of course I had prayed much, a minor reason being my fear lest I discredit the gracious pastor who dared to put me in his pulpit on a great occasion.

I regard the pastor as likely the ablest preacher the church has ever had, and I was sure his people regularly heard good sermons, and so I chose to talk as a specialist on the great things I had learned in my nearly 90 years, especially how to conquer man's four greatest fears: (1) Fear of Retirement and Old Age — by wise preparation for it; (2) Fear of Death — by coming to realize it is but a natural step upward in the career of an immortal being, and is actually peaceful and painless; (3) Fear of the Dread Power of Evil — by faith that God and the Power of Eternal Goodness are at the heart of the Universe; and, finally, how we may conquer the torture of a bad conscience and its dread of merited retribution by repentance and restitution. I talked out of my experience, declaring I had conquered those fears.

The Pleasing Response

A good number stood at the pastor's invitation to say I had baptized them or married them many years before. Seldom had any congregation expressed heartier appreciation of my preaching. God gave me a message and liberty in getting it over to the people.

I dare to say the service was highly enjoyable and profitable to the church as well as to the visitor. I commend such a service as a model to other churches, partly indeed as a reward and a boost to many a noble servant of God, long overlooked in retirement and pining from neglect. A final boost is sheer kindness and mercy!

Long known as a crusader for the aging, I do not apologize for parading how one old minister's heart leaped for joy at being called out of long retirement to have part in a day set apart in his honor, and being made to feel that he was counted "a real person," even in his ninetieth year! I write this indeed as an appeal in

In Memoriam

We, the members of Spring Hill Christian Church of Waverly, Virginia, wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of G. Chapman White, who passed from this life March 21, 1961, at the age of 56.

Mr. White was a devoted member of our church. He was a good superintendent, a faithful teacher and a loyal deacon. We shall miss his presence among us.

Because of our appreciation for his faithfulness, we resolve;

First: To extend to his loved ones our sympathy.

Second: That we keep a memory of his devotion in our hearts.

Third: That a copy of this Memoriam be sent to the family, to The Christian Sun and to the local paper for publication, and a copy be entered upon the church records.

behalf of many aging ministers, some far more worthy than I.

Moreover, such a service provides a grateful outlet to some who have long wished to thank their former pastors for happy homes they helped to launch in marriage, or home redeemed through their loving ministry. In my case this seemed a foretaste of heaven.

Change Needed

The necessity for new types of work was explained by Dr. Robert S. Bilheimer, Geneva, Switzerland, WCC associate general secretary and director of the Division of Studies which conducted the ground-work research for SASP.

During the first half of this century, he explained, the millions of dollars poured into mission work in these areas went into what church leaders now think of as "traditional" types of assistance — especially in medicine, education and agriculture.

While immense contributions to social development in mission work areas were made by these traditional services, the Presbyterian minister from the U. S. A. said, new forms are now needed.

Major factors contributing to the new situation, he said, are the disappearance of the colonial system, the new nationalism and the importance of governmental planning for economic development and education in new nations, the growth of big cities and industrial centers and the great changes in village life.

That the churches must find ways to meet these changed conditions was phrased by one SASP study as the necessity for the Church to find "new expressions of its great functions."

The same report noted that "the spirit of nationalism and independence in which we rejoice, and the problems of nation building, call upon the Church to rethink its prophetic role, and to consider new and relevant ways of service."

Another of the study papers commented: "All of our experience to date indicates that while the churches themselves (in areas of rapid social change) cannot provide the means for the solution of the great social and economic and political problems, true obedience demands that their witness should provide signs which point to the fulfillment of God's purpose in the new situation."

NOW
TIME

The mission of the Church must be carried on in the contemplation of two possibilities. First, there is the possibility that we have time. Second, there is the possibility that we have no time at all.

It may be that we have time – time for the slow process of education, time for the building and strengthening of institutions that do their work over decades and centuries, time for the deliberately-paced operations of witness and persuasion. Maybe there is time.

But it may be that there is no time at all – that the human adventure on this planet will be concluded tomorrow, that whether or not a person will find meaning and purpose in his existence will be decided in the next hour. It may be that today is Judgment Day, as it well may be for any of us as individuals. Indeed, it is Judgment Day; for every man stands under the permanent crisis of the Gospel, called to say ‘Yes’ or ‘No’ to the seeking, saving love of God made incarnate in Jesus Christ.

Whether we have much time, or no time at all, the mission of the Church is the same. Our task is to confront the men and women of our nation and generation with the truth of the judgment and mercy of God, and to do this with such clarity that they will be able to decide whether they shall accept or reject the Good News.

The altar arrangement is of special interest. The tall windows were made of varicolored glass held together with plastic. The cross centers in a circle. The altar and pulpit stand are different from the usual, but the modern trend helped to transform a stage into a beautiful center for worship.

The Women's Fellowship of First, Portsmouth, Virginia, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave White the evening of August 9 for its annual "watermelon feast."

Since Apple's Chapel was "between ministers" (Rev. Bland Leebrick had left for the Valley of Virginia and Rev. Collie Seymour had not yet come from Albemarle), Mr. E. H. Thompson, a layman of that church, was the speaker Sunday, August 6. His topic was "My Church." The speaker August 13 was Rev. Robert Knowles, minister of Christian Education for the Southern Convention.

Our Great Bridge church plans to begin a mid-week prayer and Bible study service in September. According to the minister this service is not designed to draw large crowds, but rather to be for "people who are really concerned in concentrated Bible study and who believe in the power of prayer."

Friends of Rev. William A. Lane, pastor of our Monticello church, will be interested and concerned to know that he has entered the Hartford Institute of Living, Hartford, Connecticut, for further treatment as a result of his nearly fatal automobile accident of March, 1959. Mr. Lane has experienced continuing pain and occasional spells of depression, following the severe head and brain injury he received in the collision. (You may remember that a meditation by Mr. Lane, which dealt with his experiences since the accident, was in a recent issue of The Christian Sun.) Your cards and prayers would be of comfort and help to him.

Dr. F. C. Lester will speak at the morning service Sunday, August 20, at First, Norfolk.

The Men's Fellowship and the Men's Bible Class of our Rosemont church recently met together for a watermelon party. Wives of both groups were also invited.

"The fundamental principles of a well-ordered life" is the theme of a series of sermons being preached at The Christian Temple, Norfolk, during August. Each Sunday morning the guest speaker, Chaplain Herbert Dumstreya, U.S.N. (ret.), concerns himself with a question about one of the following subjects: God, man, faith, salvation.

LAST CALL OF CHURCH BUILDERS CLUB FOR ST. PETER'S

All Builders Club members who have not sent in their $10.00 membership contribution to the St. Peter's United Church project are urged to do so not later than August 31. On August 31 this project will be closed out. Any contribution which comes in after that date will go toward the next Builders Club "call."

To date something over $3,000 has come in on the St. Peter's project. By all means, we should go over the $4,000 mark. We feel sure that every Club member wants to do his or her share on the "call." If you would respond to this "call" with a check before the last of this month, it would be greatly appreciated. LOOKING UPWARD

Mrs. C. M. Wicker

Two weeks ago on Sunday morning the members of Northview church gathered together as is their custom and entered the church to worship. However, upon entering the sanctuary everyone's eye was easily caught and held by the beautiful stained glass window recently installed at the front of the church.

This beautiful window was installed by Mrs. Annie Ruth Millikin to honor her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Clark. It is an original stone-cutter design done by Mr. Wysocki, Stained Glass Associates, Raleigh. There is to be a service of dedication for the window at the church this coming Sunday.

Everyone who knows Mrs. H. S. Clark knows that it has been a heartfelt desire of hers to see a stained-glass window in our church. One cannot help but rejoice that this dream of hers has become a reality for her and Mr. Clark to enjoy as well as ourselves and not a memorial as so many stained glass windows are.

As the scene of Jesus at prayer provides inspiration for all who see it, and the pieces of the window radiate light back at all around — it reminds us that the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Clark also shine out before us as examples of living Christianity. A wonderful tribute to a wonderful family!

Vacation church school was held at First, Norfolk, July 24-August 4. Miss Doris Ann Morris, a Student Summer Service worker from Elon College, helped the church with this vacation school. The theme was "Love One Another."

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT VIRGININA

By Mrs. W. S. Daniel

Union Christian Church, Virgilina, conducted one of its most successful vacation church schools, June 19-23. The enrollment was 101 pupils and 19 workers, with an average daily attendance of 110. We were glad to have as guests for the week boys and girls from Hebron Church.

"Living for Jesus" was the theme of the week, and the sessions closed at noon, Friday 23, with a picnic lunch. Closing exercises, held in the sanctuary the following Sunday night, were well presented and most impressive.

Following the program, the large audience of parents and interested friends was invited into the fellowship hall for refreshments, and to view the display of projects in the Educational Building.

The offering received was distributed as follows: Foreign Missions $5.00, Home Missions $5.00, Congregational Christian Service Committee $5.00, Southern Convention Children's Home $18.25.

Members of the staff and faculty included the following: Rev. Harry R. Mathis, Director; Mrs. Margaret Cifers, Secretary; Mrs. F. M. Bailey and Mrs. Roland Frazier, Music.

Nursery: Mrs. Roy Glascock, Mrs. Leon Murray, Mrs. Hazel Morris. Beginners: Mrs. J. L. Stagle, Mrs. Eugene Cifers, Mrs. Wm. Tuck. Primary: Mrs. R. O. Murray, Miss Geraldine Nelson, Miss Betty Layton Bohannon, Miss Mary Helen Wilkins, Mrs. Clifton Thames, Miss Joyce Fletcher.

Junior: Mrs. Edward Murray, Mrs. Harry Mathis, Mrs. J. B. Shotwell, Miss Iris Murray. Teen-age: Miss Elizabeth Morris, Miss Gladys Elliotte.

Refreshments were furnished throughout the week by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Slagle, Mr. and Mrs. William Tuck, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. S. Reams Long, the Circles 1 and 2 of the Women's Fellowship.

The Women's Fellowship of our High Point church sponsored an ice cream supper at the parsonage Saturday evening, July 29. Several kinds of homemade ice cream and cake were sold. The proceeds went to the church's building fund.

A LIFE DEVOTED TO GOD

Mr. Emory H. Buchanan of Route 5, Sanford, N. C. is 87 years old, but his age has not prevented him from enjoying life and making a useful contribution to his community and his church. Mr. Buchanan is a charter member of the Lee's Chapel Congregational Christian Church, having united with that church at its organization in 1914. Since that time he has been a faithful and active worker in the church, giving generously of himself for the cause of Christ.

At the present time, Mr. Buchanan spends a great deal of his time raising flowers, and on almost any Sunday the altar table of the Lee's Chapel church is graced with one of his beautiful arrangements. These flowers are an appropriate symbol of Mr. Buchanan's life. Both the flowers and his life are dedicated to the glory of God.

Submitted with sincere appreciation by William Joyner, Minister of the Lee's Chapel Congregational Christian Church.

The young people at Pleasant Hill have presented their church with a 16 MM sound projector. The junior high choir of the church will meet for an ice cream social August 19. Rev. Reuben Askew is the pastor.

A series of prayer meetings is planned by Pleasant Hill church for the week before its revival, which will be held September 3-9. Each evening one of these meetings, led by the laymen, will be held in the home of one of the members of the church.

WELCOME TO NORTHVIEW

It is with sincerity and pleasure that we extend a few words of welcome to our pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Joyner, and children, Bryant and Clista. Having recently moved from Durham, the Joyner family now resides in the the Northview Community. We wish for them much Christian fellowship and happiness.

It is also hoped that within the near future the Northview Church parsonage will be ready for occupancy. Plans and preparations for this event are already under way, having been recently presented and approved by the membership of the church.

MINISTERS' WIVES MEET AT MOONELON

Wives of ministers of the Southern Synod and the Southern Convention met at Moonelon August 9-11 for worship and study, fellowship and recreation. A fine program had been prepared under the direction of Jo Bray and Wanda Daye, Pat Palmer and Jean Traylor. The theme was "Be Still and Know."

Mrs. Guy Benchhoff, formerly president of The Women's Guild and vice president of the National Council of Churches, led the group in the study of Dr. Everett Babcock's "The Church Is the Lord's." Morning worship led by Bertie Fields and evening vespers by Pat Palmer were high moments on the program. The more ambitious participated in crocheting, copper craft, and such, while some of the "lazy folks" (like the writer) took advantage of the opportunity to go swimming.

A reception at the home of Supt. and Mrs. Clyde Fields, a "question box period" directed by Mary Leonard, a discussion on Women's Guild and Women's Fellowship, times of fellowship, fun, and "snacks," and the closing session led by Dr. John Truitt on "What it's like, being married to a ministers wife," all helped the session to be successful.

But there was one thing the matter . . . only 25 of the 165 ministers' wives were present for any part of the program, and only 12 stayed at Moonelon the entire time! As Bessie Sloan reminded the group, however, those who came found it very worthwhile, and thus it was successful.

Tragedy In Local Churches

One of the rewards of living a long time is to be able to look back across the years and see how ideas work out in experience.

Not all local churches move forward in constant success. Some develop ideas not conducive to growth. At times things happen that are nothing less than tragic. Here are some examples.

The young people from four or five local churches found that they could have a better Christian Endeavor Society by meeting at a central location and joining their small groups in a single organization. This plan gave promise of strengthening that central church and adding to the Christian growth of the young people in a large area. It was Christian unity at work on the local level. However, some of the people who attended were not full-fledged Christians, and all were young, enthusiastic, and interested in love. Hence there was some talking towards the back of the church during the services. That was too much for one of the older members of the church. He asked them to leave. That ended Christian Endeavor in that church, and for half a century it has been difficult to get young people to go there.

A certain church (no name, please) developed a reputation for having fights in the Official Board. There was never a meeting without an argument. A unified budget, a good thing when properly worked, had left Sunday school literature unpaid for years. The women's organization put its money in the common treasury and then was denied money with which to send cards to the sick and flowers to funerals.

Joy In The Churches

If you have read the foregoing item you probably need an antidote. There is enough unhappiness in our world without editors contributing to it. Perhaps all the editor does is to call attention to the difficulties, and, if he is a good editor, he will endeavor to point the way to something better. So, here goes.

In a little Carolina church half a century ago, when revival meetings were really evangelistic efforts of the church, there was a woman who knelt at the altar, prayed loud and long for "the young-uns," went to where they were in the church and brought them to the altar where they professed faith in God. There was a man whose shouting could be heard long distances. There was a woman with tuberculosis who went to the altar for prayer, arose and shouted all over the house, and lived for many years without any recurrence of tuberculosis. In that church about that time there was a family of six children, three of whom became teachers and the other three ministers. In that church about that time there were nine ministers, seven of whom grew up in the community. The church is still small — the community has not grown much — but its service has reached far and wide.

From a little church in Virginia came a member of the Supreme Court of the state, a Lieutenant Governor, members of a daughter church that started still another church, and a leading citizen of Newport News and a stalwart worker in our church there for a long, long time. Somebody planted ideas in the minds of boys that made them grow to be good and

And so it went. Everybody was unhappy. Workers were few. Attendance was low. Income was inadequate. New members were almost impossible to secure. After a real explosion the atmosphere cleared, and the church began to grow. Since then there has been progress. The tragedy was that for so long there was no progress. It was said of church people just after the time of Christ: "Behold, how they love each other."

Other illustrations could be recited of churches that have missed their calling — "called to be saints," they became destroyers of the peace.

Would that the story could end in the past. Unfortunately the tragedy can be found in our time. Currently one of the most divisive questions before some of our churches has to do with who is welcome in church, and who can be served Holy Communion in remembrance of the broken body of our Lord. Pharisees today as in Jesus' time believe in keeping the old customs without giving an inch. Ministers can be humiliated, young people disgusted with the church, attendants made unhappy, giving decreased, missions retarded — let anything happen except change customs.

This sort of thing is the tragedy of our time. Unless we can learn to do better, how can we hope for the blessings of the divine Father of the human race on our churches? Let no one be led astray. God is not mocked, for whatsoever we sow, that shall we also reap. If the whirlwind comes, it will not make us happy to remember that we sowed the wind.

useful men. The little church still stands hard-by the cemetery where people of long ago were buried, and week after week the Bible is read, hymns are sung, and people learn to love and serve.

For ten years another little group met in a school house before their dream church could become a reality. One night as they faced the need for another $10,000 which no one knew where to find, one family reported in this fashion: "We have saved $500 for our little boy's education, and we own our little home. We are willing to mortgage our home and take the educational fund so we can give $1,000, if nine other family groups will give as much." It is little wonder that the church was built, that additional members have been added, and that the church is a liberal contributor to Our Christian World Mission. Incidentally, the boy is in college.

The burdens of life can weigh heavily on a person, and among the winding paths of life it is easy to lose the way. But the Church with its Bible, music, art, religious services, and divine presence gives the needed wisdom and grace to live triumphantly in this world and the next. Little churches and large churches contribute their share to the happiness of the world. It is in the church that toddlers learn the right, young people choose purposes, adults find refreshment of soul, and the aged dream of the golden ages that lie ahead. It is in the church that we find our greatest joy — joy unspeakable and full of glory.

By EMILY C. LESTER

Ten days in Nebraska were very interesting ones to me, as I traveled about the state by car attending Women's Fellowship workshops and the Western Women's Assembly. Mrs. Harold Rice, state Women's Fellowship president, made a point of seeing that the visitor from "the east" had opportunity to see our churches as we drove through many small towns in which they are located (the meetings were not near Omaha or Lincoln, the two big cities where we have several churches), and to see places of historic interest as well. A one-day "vacation" between meetings made possible a side-trip to Estes Park, Colorado, where I had never been and which I enjoyed.

The superintendent, Rev. Fred Register, and his family were on vacation, so I did not see them, but reports from throughout the state indicate that he is doing a good job and that the Nebraskans "could sit and listen to him talk for hours!"

Nebraska certainly has varied topography and agriculture. I saw the "largest hay market in the world," and the surrounding "sand hills" where hay is raised; the big ranches, stopping at one of 20,000 acres where Mrs. Rice's friend told us that all but 22 of his 1500 cows had had calves so far this year; the irrigated corn lands — one hostess had 700 acres of irrigated corn, in addition to cattle land; the "feeders," who buy young cattle and fatten them for market; the oil wells among the buttes of the northwest; and the area of the greatest fossil beds in our nation. I was in a cloudburst, when we had to sit for thirty minutes on a sand road because we could not see to drive, while 4 inches of rain descended. I found out what "eating dust" is like when following another car closely on a gravel road in an area which had had no recent rain. I was in heat of 105 degrees. I went to the top of "Scott's Bluff," on the trail of the early settlers of the west, and I stayed three days at Ft. Robinson, which is noted because it was the greatest cavalry remount center for our army, because Dr. Walter Reed was there before he knew about mosquitoes, because Arthur MacArthur (father of Douglas) served there, and because it is the place where the United States Army killed in a rather treacherous manner Chief Crazy Horse, who had surrendered.

One of the joys of the trip was a telephone conversation with Mrs. George Hastings from a little town about 20 miles from Grant where the Hastings live. His many friends in the Southern Convention will be glad to know that Mr. Hastings is recovering from four serious operations (all at one time) at the Mayo Clinic last spring. He is able to be up and around but not back to work, and would be cheered by greetings from people herabouts who remember him as the gracious Moderator of the General Council who visited in our area several times. (Incidentally, he is a reader of this paper.)

"The Story of the Nebraska Congregational Conference" is an attractively illustrated leaflet which pictures the work of our 112 churches and locates the Evangelical and Reformed churches in the area. Superintendent Fred Register, 1710 B Street, Lincoln 2, would be glad to send a copy, if requested. Only five churches voted against the constitution of the United Church of Christ. Four of them are small and not served by Congregational Christian ministers. Minister of the other, Leland Mann, was pastor of our college church at Grinnell, Iowa, for 22 years before going to Chadron where the church voted against the Constitution after his acceptance and before he arrived.

Although there are "wide open spaces" between churches, distances mean much less to people in that area than they do to us. Women attended the workshops (which were new) with eagerness, and shared with enthusiasm the assembly. Yes, I had an interesting and delightful visit to Nebraska!

A WAR THAT MADE HUMAN INTERESTS WORLD-WIDE

Celebrating a heart-breaking, home-breaking, unfortunate and otherwise disastrous war seems to a host of people wholly inappropriate in a year when another conflict of a different nature looms that could be far more devastating than the one being re-enacted.

But since a civil conflict has been, and is being, reviewed mostly by persons born since 1918, and who have a fair knowledge of World War II, there is an older generation which has an intimate recall of World War I, its horrors, cost in lives, money and property, and further world conflicts.

So it seems not inappropriate to summarize from the record for the younger readers of this paper a few grim facts that shocked the world in the more youthful days of The Sun's editor, the contributor of this feature, and their contemporaries.

One man shot another in an obscure Herzogovian village early in the summer of 1914. The man slain was a Prince of the House of Hapsburg and heir to the Dual Crown of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

The reverberations of that murderous shot brought a storm of protests. The active effects were the movements of armies, and crash of thunderous war, and the sweeping of many lands with the broom of flame and flying steel.

Eleven years later the now defunct League of Nations tabulated the cost of that emotional disturbance which had vengeance as a springboard. From that record these grim and ghastly figures now warn against the foolishness of another day:

Ponder these appalling and scarcely to be comprehended figures: 9,998,711 known dead. Presumed dead, 2,991,800. Seriously wounded, 6,295,512. More or less slightly wounded, 14,002,039.

Direct cost of the war, $186,333,-637,097. Capitalized value of the loss of life (a questionable estimate), $33,551,276,280.

Grim political bookkeeping. Part of the tragic story of a war that should have been avoided. The full meaning is too much for the human mind to understand or the human heart to measure.

The United States was drawn into this terrible conflict. It sent 4,734,991 men into service. Battle deaths of its soldiers were 53,402. Died from other causes, 63,114, while 204,002 were wounded but not mortally.

No nation has lived to itself since that tragic era of 44 years ago. Human interests became world-wide, and no country which enjoys the fruits of civilization can live to itself or reasonably ever again live to itself.

Have the records of wars any meaning? The answer must be NO, in view of what has happened since November 11, 1918.

Building A New Church

Rev. Abraham Akaka, Synod Chaplain
United Church of Christ

(This is the last of the worship services conducted by the chaplain at the Philadelphia General Synod of the United Church of Christ. Ed.)

OHANA (Ministry)

Call to Worship: Lift up your heads, O members of the United Church of Christ, and the King of Glory shall come in. Who is this Lord and Light of Life, this Lord of Creation, the Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in the battle to save mankind? Lift up your heads, O people of God — and the King of Glory shall come in. Who is this King of Glory? Jesus Christ, our Lord. He is the King of Glory.

Hymn: Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus.

Our Lord's Prayer.

Scripture Lesson (St. Luke 4:17-21)

"...The spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ is upon us, because he hath anointed us to preach the gospel to the poor. He hath sent us to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

Is this scripture truly fulfilled this day in the United Church of Christ? In you and me?

The Prayer: O Lord Jesus Christ, thou Son of God our Saviour, blessed is thy name in heaven and in earth. We thank thee that thou hast bound us together by thy spirit that enables us to accept and understand each other, to find together those intelligent and practical agreements that promote the good of all thy children, to analyze the problems and challenges that face us, and to resourcefully find ways to solve them. O Thou through whom man has an eternal purpose to live by and to live for, we thank thee for the spiritual values of our past by which our present has meaningful content and our future has authentic hope. Like our spiritual ancestors of the past, we would not speak clairvoyantly of the externals of our modern civilization, but would focus in our acts what thy spirit dost call us to do — preaching deliverance to captives, recovery of sight to the blind, healing the brokenhearted, setting at liberty them that are bruised — until there is established that structure of right relationships — that tuning of the ukelele — in our local, state, and national community by which our personal and social responsibility extends not just to our neighbor next door but to all thy children everywhere. Hear our prayer, O Lord, incline thy ear to us, and grant us thy peace. Amen.

Meditation: "Ministry."

As the spirit of our Lord moves and he calls into being a new Church, certain words clear. The word is "covenant." We are his people and he is our God. The word is "motto." (Holds up three fingers) "Christ is Lord." God First, Others Second, Self Last. The word is "discipline" (holds up five fingers): Daily Devotions, Worship, Tithing, Serving, Evangelizing.

The Fourth Word is "Ministry," that ministry as "God made visible in you." The sign of that ministry for me is the lei — the lei that we place around the heads of the ones we love and serve as a halo.

The mistaken idea that the world has of the ministry is that ministers are clergymen. And the mistaken idea that too many members of churches have is that the church exists primarily to serve those within its membership. Truly our Lord holds the clergyman in no place of special favor over the layman. All are ministers. All are sent into the world as servants.

The first company of Christian missionaries to Hawaii were not all clergymen. They were doctors, farmers, printers, teachers, and preachers — a covenant people with time, talents, and treasure interlocked in a common ministry — making God real, making God live, making God visible to our Hawaiian people. And they were sent by a church membership who knew that the church exists primarily to serve those outside its membership.

I will never cease to be grateful for this great experience of our Synod meeting — our Lord shaking my soul with the hearing of reports of our Boards for World Ministries, Homeland Ministries, our Councils for Christian Social Action, Lay Life and Work, Stewardship, our Office of Communication. How I pray that these break-through words — world ministries, homeland ministries, social action, lay life and work, communication — can turn all churches from exclusive, self-centered societies into witnesses for our Lord Jesus Christ to all mankind, that they will become like the first words babies learn to all our local congregations.

No church has any excuse to play dead with the rest of the world in these days. Your church and mine has the answer of life our Lord has given for a dying world.

Last Sunday morning, immediately after the great joy and inspiration of our morning service of worship, while going by taxi with Mrs. Akaka to the Penn Station here, a man strayed into the intersection as if he lived in a world of all people and no cars. Our taxi driver had to slow down in obedience to the pedestrian's air of having been raised in a gentler generation. This slowing down for the pedestrian was annoying to our driver, so I said to him: "That man acts like he came from Hawaii." With that his frown flew away. Then in a reflective mood he said, "Yes, I was in Hawaii... it was wonderful." He was silent for a moment, then he added in a tone of voice that had the heaviness of death in it, "But now we live in a crazy, mixed-up world. Nobody wants you to live any more." The tone of his voice and the choice of his words seemed to gather into that one moment and sentence the deep hurt and anxiety that is in the heart and soul of man everywhere today: "Nobody wants you to live any more."

For such a crazy mixed-up world as our cab driver described — of nervous, cynical, jaw-jutting men and nations, or as gentle people see as in their slow walking they watch the world rushing down upon them to crush them — gentle people whose faces show their silent suffering — for a world of privileged, under-privileged, and in-between, growing more and more certain that "Nobody wants you to live any more," what is your ministry and mine?

The ministry is you and me and our church members back home making God live in the world, making Christ visible, in the power of the Holy Spirit promoting the true good of others in a friendly spirit, out of a sense of kinship, doing good with no conditions attached, doing good not only to those who do good to us, loving even when the love is not returned. Such is the love of Christ, our God. By this ministry is Christ made visible, and all men know that our Lord and we want them to live!

Such a ministry is also the meaning of "Aloha." It is a joyful ministry. It is God made visible in fond embrace, in the lei that binds heart to heart, life to life, race to race, nation to nation. For Aloha is God.

I was asked if I would sing "Aloha Oe." As I sing it in Hawaiian, will you hum with me?

Hymn: Take My Life and Let It Be.

Benediction: And now may the Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make his face to shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up his countenance upon you, and give you peace, both now, and in the life everlasting. Ma ka inoa O ka Makua A O ke Keiki ame ka uhane hemolele. Amene.

SAY IT RIGHT... WRITE IT RIGHT

"His past experience has taught him to be careful." Correct: Experience has taught him to be careful. (Experience is always in the past.)

"Listen carefully; I can't repeat this all over again." Correct: Listen carefully; I can't repeat this.

"What time of day is it?" What time is it? "One cancels out the other". Omit "out".

Titles such as doctor, professor and lieutenant should not be abbreviated when used alone.

"He could not reply in any manner, shape or form". Better, much better: He could not reply.

Lovers of art adore Millet's Angelus — meaning To the Angels. This masterpiece depicts a custom prevalent at the time of calling the country folk to evening worship by means of a bell.

The first telephone was installed in the White House in 1878, during President Hayes' administration Mr. Taft used the first automobile there, and Harding was the first President to speak over the radio.

Twenty New Missionaries Sail

A group of 20 new missionary teachers, ranging from June brides to grandmothers, attended an intensive orientation conference in Boston last week.

They will serve three and five-year appointments in Greece and Turkey.

Peter Davies, 23, of Urbana, Illinois, and his wife, the former Rosalie May Johnson, 22, of Melrose Park, Illinois, who were married in June; and James I. Jorgensen, 22, of Elkhorn, Nebraska, and his wife, the former Lynn Wray Williams, 22, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, also married in June, will teach for three years at the American Collegiate Institute in Izmir, Turkey, as will nine others in the group including a grandmother-rancher from California, Mrs. Faith Drobish of Marysville.

Others in the group, who come from many parts of the United States, will teach at the Talas School for Boys in Talas, Turkey, the American Academy for Girls near Istanbul, and Pierce College, Athens, Greece.

The conference is conducted by Margaret R. Blemker of Cambridge, the mission board's secretary for Europe and the Near East.

On Thursday, August 10, a picnic supper was held at the Walker Missionary Home, where the group will be staying while in Boston.

A recognition service for them was held Sunday, August 13, at the Congregational Church in Needham, a suburb of Boston. Rev. Dr. David M. Stowe of Newton Centre, educational secretary of the Board for World Ministries, preached the sermon; Rev. Dr. Alford E. Carleton, Cambridge, executive vice president of the board, gave the prayer of consecration, and the Rev. John Westerhoff III of the Needham church conducted the service.

The group sails from New York Tuesday, August 15, on the SS Independence of the American Export Lines.

The United Church Board for World Ministries is the overseas agency of the United Church of Christ which was formed by union of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

The overseas staff of the Board for World Ministries includes 500 missionaries — teachers, doctors, nurses, social service workers, and evangelists. They are working with some 16,000 nationals in 1200 schools and colleges, 80 hospitals and clinics, 35 social service centers and 3,000 churches with approximately 450,000 members.

Northview Women Meet

Mrs. H. S. Clark

The Women's Fellowship held their July meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Wicker. At 6:30 p.m. Mrs. Wicker served a most delicious supper to the group. A picnic table was set up on the lawn and was loaded with good things to eat. The supper and fellowship were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

After the supper the group went into the living room for the program. The meeting was called to order by the president Mrs. L. C. Wicker, who welcomed two visitors, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Porter from Turner's Chapel Church. Mrs. W. M. Cooper gave the devotional, reading from Luke 24. Mrs. Wicker then introduced Mrs. Ross as the guest speaker of the evening. She gave a very inspiring talk on "The Creation" reading selections of scripture from the Bible.

Mrs. H. S. Clark gave the last chapter in the study book "Portrait of Christ" by Luke. A short business meeting was held. Officers for the coming year are as follows:

- Ailene Rogers President
- Annie Ruth Millikin Vice President
- Betty High Secretary & Treasurer

These officers will be installed at the August meeting. The fellowship accepted an invitation to meet with the women of Mount Pleasant Church on August 4. Our regular August meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Johnson. It will be family night. Every member is urged to come and bring a picnic supper and her family.

The meeting was closed with prayer.

William Cousins Installed At South Norfolk

A service of installation was held at the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church, June 25, 1961, at four o'clock in the afternoon for Rev. William A. Cousins.

After the call to worship, "The Lord is in His Holy Temple," by the choir, the congregation sang "The Church's One Foundation." The invocation and Lord's Prayer was offered by Dr. Leon E. Smith, President Emeritus of Elon College.

The scripture was read by Dr. Frank Hamilton, minister of The Christian Temple.

The choir sang an anthem, "Open Our Eyes," with Mr. Joseph Balderon, minister of music, at the organ.

Rev. Clyde L. Fields, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, preached the sermon, a challenge to both minister and congregation.

Rev. Lanson Granger presented a statement and charge to the congregation. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, minister of Newport News church presented Rev. William A. Cousins for examination. Dr. George D. Alley, minister of Suffolk Christian Church and president of the Southern Convention offered the prayer. Rev. Lanson Granger administered the Act of Installation. The singing of the hymn "A Charge To Keep I Have" seemed to impressively and significantly tie together the threads between the members of the church and minister, as well as the brother ministers in the Conference and Southern Convention.

A service of Holy Communion followed, with the Rev. Mr. Cousins officiating, assisted by the deacons of the church.

Mr. Cousins succeeded Rev. John G. Truitt, Jr., now serving as chaplain at the United States Air Force base at Greenville, Mississippi, who served South Norfolk Church for one year and eight months. Mr. Truitt was preceded by Rev. O. D. Poythress, who served the church for forty-three years.

Immediately following the benediction there was a reception in the social hall sponsored by the Women's Fellowship of the church. Mrs. W. B. Evans, president, presided at the punch bowl. Mr. Cousins and his family were greeted and congratulated by members and friends of the church and by ministers and lay members of many churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference.

Religion flowers in personal piety, in the vision and consecration of the individual. But the roots of religion are always in a group. Religion is not merely a personal philosophy; it is also an accepted way of living.

One of the first projects for national benefit discussed by President Washington for the new capital of the nation was the now famous Botanic Gardens, which cover an area of 25 acres.

TO FIND THE GOOD IN PEOPLE

Help me, Dear Father, to look always for the good in people. Make this, I pray, so ingrained a habit that first impressions will seem unimportant. As forbidding hillsides may carry veins of gold, so may some personalities conceal treasure not at first apparent.

It is easy to like attractive, friendly people, but help me, God, to make it a lifelong adventure to understand those not so gifted in their relations with others. As Christ touched hidden depths of feeling in people of many types, so may I seek to know the true nature of those I meet. Grant me, I pray, the divine gift of caring. Amen.

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

MY WEEK AT CAMP MOONELON

Last week I went to Camp Moonelon. I would like to tell you about some of the things we did.

When I got there last Sunday afternoon and registered the girls were making name tags so I made one, too. Then we went to my cabin. I was in Cabin Number 2.

We had four family groups. Leslie Wicker and Jane Rush were my counselors. Our family group was named the "Happy Wanderers."

We went on trips to different places in Elon. One day we went to visit the Children's Home. We had camp fires, and cook-outs. We made home made ice-cream and roasted marsh-mellows.

We had vesper services every night. Vesper is evening worship. One night our family group had charge of the vesper service.

We went swimming every day. All of us enjoyed that very much. We had fun playing together.

My favorite thing was vesper time, but I enjoyed all of my week at camp very much. I hope that next year many more girls and boys will go from our church and I am sure they will enjoy it as much as I did.

Rev. Garland Bennett, formerly pastor of Ramseur, Antioch, Needham's Grove, and Shiloh churches, has resigned the last three in order to give full-time service to Ramseur. Mr. Bennett has been serving the Ramseur church since 1957.

Rev. Max Vestal, pastor of Shallow Well, will conduct a revival September 3-9 at Pleasant Hill, near Liberty, N. C. The choir of the Shallow Well church sang at revivals at Zion and Moore Union churches August 8 and 15, respectively.

MY EXPERIENCE AS A MEMBER OF THE MOONELON EFFICIENCY CREW

When I was first asked to tell what working on the efficiency crew at Moonelon meant to me, I thought it would be a very difficult thing to do. But now, after thinking about it, I realize that it gave me an unusual feeling of accomplishment. When I look back on the things we did I realize these things were not done just because they had to be done, but because they improved the surroundings of the camp. This experience gave me the feeling one has after accomplishing something really worthwhile.

Also, one of the main things, in fact, the really important thing, I learned was to get along and work with others better. I sincerely believe this is important, for we will all find it necessary to work with other people the rest of our lives. It wasn't very easy to work with eight other girls and boys but we all worked together and did our duty.

I would say working to the best of my ability and learning to work with others were the two main things I learned this past week.

I would also say that working on the staff was one of the few things I have done lately worth the time and energy.

PEACE WITHIN

By Emily Jackson

This little church is a friendly, simple church,
With its gleaming silver cross on a red velvet blanket.
The snowy white table with its two glowing candles
Is made beautiful with bunches of new spring flowers.

The people all around are happy as can be,
And it is no wonder, for with their hands this little church they have built.
They will come every Sunday for ever and ever,
For this is God's house where fear will never be known.

(Note: Miss Jackson of Tryon, N. C., wrote "Peace Within" as a result of having attended the dedication service for the Clanton Park United Church of Christ, Charlotte, N. C., one of the newest churches in the Southern Convention. She is the niece of Rev. James Jackson, pastor of the Clanton Park church.)

Executive Committee Chairman Elected

Rev. Dr. Oliver K. Black, Holyoke, Mass., is the new chairman of the executive committee of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches.

Dr. Black, who is pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Holyoke, succeeded Ashby E. Bladen, Glen Ridge, New Jersey, who has served as chairman for five years. Dr. Black, who has been a member of the Executive Committee for a three-year term, will serve until 1963.

Dr. Black was formerly Moderator of the Congregational and Christian Conference of Illinois. He has served as pastor of the First Congregational Church, Moline, Illinois; First Congregational Church, Port Huron, Michigan; and Mount Hope Congregational Church, Detroit, Michigan.

A graduate of De Pauw University, Greencastle, Indiana, and Garret Theological Seminary, Chicago, Illinois, Dr. Black received an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree in 1950 from Chicago Theological Seminary.

Dr. Black and his wife, the former Bonita Humphrey of West Union, Iowa, have two daughters, Mrs. Keith Allen Schmidt, Chicago, Illinois, and Miss Deborah Black, Holyoke, Massachusetts, a senior at Wellesley College.

Dr. James Wagner, and Dr. Fred Hoskins, Co-Presidents of the United Church of Christ during the past four years. Back of them is the beautiful altar arrangement with alternating velvet and glass windows in front of which hangs a cross.

Ten Little Christians

By Layland G. Smith

Ten little Christians standing in a line,
One disliked the preacher; then there were nine.
Nine little Christians stayed up very late,
One slept on Sunday morning; then there were eight.
Eight little Christians on the way to Heaven,
One took the lower road; then there were seven.
Seven little Christians got into a fix.
One disliked the music; then there were six.
Six little Christians very much alive,
But one lost her interest; then there were five.
Five little Christians wishing there were more,
But they quarreled; then there were four.
Four little Christians cheerful as could be,
But one lost his temper; then there were three.
Three little Christians knew not what to do.
One joined a sporty crowd; then there were two.
Two little Christians — our rhyme is nearly done.
Differed with each other; then there was one.
One lone Christian won his neighbor true.
Brought him to the church; then there were two.
Two earnest Christians, each won one more,
That doubled their number; then there were four.
Four sincere Christians worked very late,
But each won another; then there were eight.
Eight splendid Christians, but nothing rhymes with sixteen,
So we simply note that in four more rhymes there would be 1,042,
Which would be quite a churchful.

authority the Scriptures possess for all Christians. To make explicit the trinitarian character of the basis is in line with the beliefs of member churches. At the same time, it appears fitting by the addition of the phrase "and therefore seek to fulfill together their common calling to the glory of the one God," to acknowledge the end and object of the fellowship together,

The Basis Of The World Council Of Churches

"The World Council of Churches is a fellowship of churches which accept our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior" — so runs the statement adopted in 1948 by the first assembly of the World Council of Churches.

Now, thirteen years later, the third assembly meeting in New Delhi in November will consider a proposal to expand the statement in order to make more explicit what has always been regarded as implied in it.

The changes proposed are four in number:

1. The substitution of the word "confess" for "accept";
2. The use of "the" instead of "our" before "Lord Jesus Christ";
3. The addition of the phrase "according to the Scriptures";
4. The making explicit the trinitarian character of the Basis in an important final phrase.

At New Delhi, therefore, the following revised formula will be submitted to the Assembly:

"The World Council of Churches is a fellowship of churches which confess the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior according to the Scriptures and therefore seek to fulfill together their common calling to the glory of the one God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit."

"Confess" is a more decisive word than "accept" and is generally employed by all our member churches in declarations regarding the Lord Jesus Christ. To speak of Him as "the" Lord avoids the more subjective reference of "our" Lord, and emphasizes the Lordship of Christ over the whole world. The phrase, "according to the Scriptures," used by the Apostle Paul on a number of occasions, has found a place in the ancient creeds and in later confessions, and directs attention to the

Dr. Cecil Robbins Baccalaureate Speaker

President Cecil Robbins of Louisburg College will be speaker for the Elon College Baccalaureate Service Sunday, August 20, in the Elon College Community Church.

Following the 11 a.m. sermon, graduates, their husbands or wives, and their parents will be guests of the college at a picnic luncheon on the campus. Graduation exercises will follow at 2:30 p.m. in Whitley Auditorium.

Dr. Robbins, a native of Shannon, Miss., received an A.B. degree from Birmingham-Southern College, a B.D. from Duke University Divinity School, a Lit. D. degree from High Point College and a D.D. degree from Birmingham-Southern College. He joined the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church and served pastorates in Marners, Raleigh, Fremont, Mount Olive and Warrenton. He is a member of the North Carolina Conference World Peace Committee, North Carolina Conference Survey Committee, North Carolina Conference European Caravan Committee, North Carolina Conference Board of Missions, and North Carolina Conference Commission on Higher Education.

Dr. Robbins served as editor and manager of the North Carolina Christian Advocate from 1949 until 1955, when he became president of Louisburg College. He has served as a delegate to the General and Jurisdictional Conferences of the Methodist Church and to the World Methodist Conference. He is a member of the quadrennial Commission on Higher Education of the Methodist Church, and is a past president of the North Carolina Council of Churches. Dr. Robbins is a member of Rotary International, Omricon Delta Kappa, Sigma Upsilon and Pi Gamma Mu honorary organizations and Sigma Chi social fraternity. Elon Officials Attend Conference

President J. Earl Danieley, Prof. W. Jennings Berry, Registrar; A. S. Hassell, Director of Student Personnel Services and Dean C. Fletcher Moore are representing Elon College August 14-18 at the Swannanoa Conference on Institutional Research on College Students at Warren Wilson College, Swannanoa, N. C.

The Swannanoa Conference is designed to provide an opportunity for intensive consideration of selected problems, issues, and developments in research relating to college students.

The conference is being sponsored jointly by the Southern College Personnel Association and the Southern Regional Education Board. The program will include lectures, papers, panel, group discussion, case committee work and individual consultation with conference personnel. Emphasis in all aspects of the program will be on the potential value of developing realistic programs of research on students within each institution.

Stewardship & Missions Retreat

A Retreat on Stewardship and Missions is being planned for the Southern Convention, to be held at Moonelon on September 22 and 23. Laymen and ministers are invited to come to Moonelon on Friday, September 22, at 5:00 p.m. and remain through Saturday, September 23, until 2:00 p.m. The Rev. Theodore Horvath of the Missions Council will be our guest leader. He will help to make Our Christian World Mission meaningful to all who are in attendance. Rev. Carl Wallace and Rev. Joe A. French are acting as co-chairmen of a Committee on Stewardship and Missions for this retreat.

THE DAY OF DELIVERANCE

To meet Christ is to be transformed. Life cannot be the same again. Of course, sometimes we do not meet him. We try to ignore him, to escape his gaze, to evade his demands. Or we may oppose him. This was tried once by powerful men who sought to destroy him. We still would destroy him and have life on our own terms.

But he rises ever again to summon new generations. To face him is to be called to costly decision. To meet him is to risk a choice. To answer him is to participate in the drama of redemptive love. The stakes are high. He asks nothing less than surrender. In that surrender there is hope again for us and for our world.

An act of simple faith preceded the feeding of the five thousand on the shores of Galilee. A boy made available to the Master all that he had — five loaves and two fish. The miracle awaited that "foolish" gesture. That miracle awaits now our act of surrender. Under constraint of love we must say again, "Here, take all that I have."

Ominous clouds and dangerous threats appear. Ignorance, poverty, disease, bondage and decay lie all about. Our Christian world Mission is a sign of our participation in the joy and hazard of Christ's mission. That mission will not have full power except as it has the full surrender of ourselves and our resources for the redemptive purposes of God.

Christ meets us and we must decide. The hour calls for utterly new standards of giving. The old will not do. "Sharing," then, "in God's work, we urge this appeal upon you: you have received the grace of God; do not let it go for nothing. The hour of favour has now come; now, I say, has the day of deliverance dawned." (II Corinthians 6:1-2, The New English Bible.)

Lydia, A Christian Business Woman

Background Scripture: Acts 16:11-40.

Devotional Reading: Romans 10:1-13.

Memory Selection: Do not neglect to do good and to share what you have.
Hebrews 13:16 RSV.

Just one snap-shot of Lydia — that is all. But it tells a volume about her. As the first convert in Europe, she was representative of that great host of women which no man can number whose lives have been touched and transformed by the gospel of Christ, and who have rendered service in his name. The story of her conversion makes interesting reading.

A Woman of Culture

Lydia was no ordinary woman. First of all, she was a business woman, perhaps a well-to-do business woman, engaged in "selling purple," either a very fine and valuable dye or goods made from this dye. She was a cultured woman from the upper classes. Furthermore, although she was a Gentile, she was a proselyte to the Jewish religion, and worshipped God. Devout, she was looking for more light. And she joined a group of Jewish women who were having a prayer meeting at a riverside when Paul and Silas dropped in to join the group. Here was a woman of education and culture and wealth and social standing, who felt that man or woman could not live by bread alone. She was unlike so many successful men and women who leave God out of their lives, who try to satisfy their souls with things, who care more for gold than for God.

A Converted Woman

As Paul spoke, Lydia "attended unto the things" that he spoke. She was a good listener. What an inspiration and a challenge a good listener is to a minister as he preaches. And particularly as he reads the Scripture. There are so many people who give little or no heed to the reading of God's word, which is worse than not giving heed to the preaching of God's word. In spite of my efforts over a long period, there are people in my congregation who read the bulletin when I am reading the Scripture. Think of that! That is the one time, even if not the only time in a service of worship, in which God is directly speaking to us, and we are not giving the least heed to what he is saying. And of course there are people who sit in the pews looking at the minister, who are not listening to what he says. Lydia "attended to the things spoken of Paul." And God opened her heart. There is an intimate connection between the two things. Again and again Jesus warned men about hearing. An open mind is often the doorway to an open heart.

Lydia was converted — the Lord opened her heart. She had almost everything else, but she did not have Christ. It is significant that this cultured woman, successful business woman, socially prominent woman, was the first woman converted in Europe. It was an indication of Christ's ability to meet the needs of the best, as the conversion of the slave girl in the same city was an indication of his ability to meet the needs of the worst. Both are representatives of a redeemed womanhood by the touch of Christ.

Not only was Lydia baptized; so was her household. The details are not given. Could it be that this woman, rejoicing in Christ, wanted to share her joy with others, and by her personal word and influence won them to Christ? And the word "household" may mean that she also brought her servants into the Christian faith. Come to think about it, that is the natural impulse of a Christian who has found Christ.

A Woman of Compassion

Immediately Lydia "constrained" Paul and Silas to be her guests in her home. Perhaps she wanted to know more about the Christian faith. At any event she extended hospitality to those itinerant preachers, strangers in a strange city. Here was true, Christian hospitality. This warm spirit of hospitality is often lacking in many homes in our modern world. Thank God for the homes with the open door — homes which are open to foreign students in our country, homes which are open to lonely young men and women in a big city, homes which are open to people of other cultures and classes and creeds.

A Woman of Courage

Lydia showed the spirit of compassion or hospitality in taking Paul and Silas into her home as guests while in Philippi. But she showed more — she showed courage of the highest order. How did she know that her gracious act would not cause her to lose business? But more: she took them into her home after they had been scourged and cast into prison! Here were "culprits," convicts, former prisoners, finding a home in her house. She thus defied the authorities and the mob, and she thus showed the reality and the sincerity of her conversion. I suspect that if Lydia were living in America today she would be one of the first to open her home to refugees. Compassion and courage were hallmarks of her character.

In a recent National Radio Pulpit sermon, Dr. McCracken told this story: A member of a church, who, when a man was about to be readmitted to membership after having resigned on being convicted of a charge of theft, declared: "The rest of you can do what you like, but I will have no truck with a man who has been a thief." And Sunday after Sunday that church member probably joined in the prayer, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Not Lydia. She was not ashamed to entertain "prisoners" in her home or afraid of what might happen to her business if she did. Would that more of her spirit were found in more members of the church. How many there are who are afraid to stand up for what they know is right, to espouse the cause of the discriminated-against, to speak out their convictions on great social and moral issues. Lydia was a woman of great courage as well as of compassion. May God give us grace to follow in her train.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

AUGUST 27, 1961

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, D.D.

Christian Church,
Driver, Virginia

While the pastor, Rev. R. A. Mendick, is on a vacation trip to the west coast, guest speakers at First E. and R. Church, High Point, include Mrs. F. C. Lester and R. L. Pope, civic leader of Thomasville whose son is Dean Liston Pope of Yale Divinity School.

Things Needed For School

Dear Friends:

The first part of this week (August 7-8), Supt. and Mrs. Snyder are visiting with the Women's Fellowship and the Elon Sewing Group of our church at Hendersonville. These groups have been interested in our Home for a number of years and have been most helpful in many ways. We hope at a later date to have an entire article, with picture, devoted to the work which the Elon Sewing Group does for our Home for Children.

About two weeks from the time you read this letter, our boys and girls will be starting back to school. The summer months have quickly passed, as usual; the children and staff have enjoyed pleasant vacations and the beginning of September will mark the time for us to settle down to the often strenuous fall and winter work. Many things are required to prepare our boys and girls for the opening of school: school supplies — paper, notebooks, pencils, composition books and the various other items necessary for the carrying on of the school activities; clothing for fall and winter — shirts, dungarees, underwear, socks, sweaters, jackets and caps for the boys, dresses, skirts, blouses, sweaters, underwear, socks, jackets, coats and scarves for the girls, (some of our new children will be needing rainwear — boots and raincoats); shoes — summer shoes may be worn for a few weeks, but the cold and bad weather will soon demand that we provide oxfords, loafers, etc. for the children. All of these items are expensive when you think in terms of providing them for 71-75 children. During the school year we receive through Friendly Service some school supplies. The sponsors for some of the children send money to take care of their clothing and shoes and other sponsors have their boy or girl for a week-end of shopping to purchase the clothing needed to begin school. All of this help is appreciated so very much and means a great deal to us. If your group sponsors a child here and you would like to help prepare him or her for school we will be most happy to hear from you. Or, if you would be interested in helping a child or the group as a whole, even though you don't sponsor a particular child, we will be most grateful for your assistance.

In addition to the school supplies, clothing and shoes which we must purchase, during the course of the school year we pay from $150.00 to $200.00 in instructional and special school fees.

Last Friday, August 4, Mr. Perkins and some of the older boys went to West End, North Carolina, where Mr. T. C. Auman gave us 47 bushels of peaches. These have been processed for our freezer and will be ample to supply our needs for the winter months. We certainly appreciate Mr. Auman's kindness in making this gift to our Home.

Our staff members and the older children have been busy for the past several weeks preparing beans, corn and other vegetables for the freezer and canning tomatoes and tomato juice. These frozen and canned vegetables and fruits, plus the meat from our own sources, will provide the major portion of the food supply needed for our children and staff. We are thankful for good crops which enable us to store up these supplies against the winter months.

We appreciate the good report this week. We hope that individuals, Sunday schools and churches will continue to remember our Home for Children with their gifts.

Why A Person Should Make A Will

There are many reasons for making a will. None are more important than the fact that YOU can best decide who should be YOUR beneficiaries, and in what amounts and proportions, to say nothing as to the time when a beneficiary should receive something from your estate.

Your state legislature has provided that if you do not make a will, at your death your property will pass to certain persons (not to the church or to a charity) in a fixed and definite way according to the rules known as "the law of succession." This law is based upon average conditions. Your question is: "Am I just an average person? Does not my estate need my personal attention?"

No distinctions are made in the law as to youth or age, illness or health, wealth or poverty, or any of the circumstances that vitally effect human relationships. No provisions are made in the law for continuing one's business, conserving one's property, maintaining reserves, or taking care of the needs of a favorite charity.

The administration of an estate may be intrusted, according to law, to the nearest blood relative or relatives, without consideration as to aptitude or harmony. If you fail to do so, the legislature, in effect, makes your will for you. It is in the nature of a skeleton arrangement. The Christian steward should not be satisfied with such an arrangement. He makes his will, prayerfully, with the help of a competent attorney, for he knows that he is answerable to God.

The brain of the drone bee is smaller than that of both worker and queen. This leaves no doubt about the inferiority of the male bee.

A LAYMAN WRITES

Churches Should Be Supported

By W. H. Bradshaw

Rosemont Congregational Christian Church, South Norfolk, Virginia

I don't think tithing can be stressed too often or too much. I know our ministers hesitate to mention money in the pulpit, for people don't like to be reminded of their financial attitudes toward the church. Yet if neither ministers nor laymen take the initiative, the financial condition of our churches may really become pitiful. I think we laymen who are interested enough in our churches to be aware of the financial situations they get into from time to time should voice our sentiments.

In talking with people about tithing it is common to hear them say "I just can't afford it," but, being a long-time tither myself, I say they can't afford not to tithe. I have found that when we return to the Lord that which is rightfully His, it comes back to us in blessings, and even in financial refunds. When a crisis comes and our holdings are about exhausted, something always pops up. I am retired man, living on Social Security. My wife and I tithe from our monthly check and whatever else I can make from odd jobs. Although I have had three operations in the last 10 years, our heads are still above water, and we owe no one anything. We don't put the whole tenth in the church plate — I feel that charity has its

GOING TO JAPAN

Marliss L. Camp, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Camp of Seattle, Washington, has been appointed to a three-year teaching term in Japan by the United Church of Christ.

She left June 30 to teach at Baika High School in Osaka, second largest city in Japan.

Miss Camp, a native of Oakland Calif., graduated in June from the University of Washington. She graduated in 1956 from Roosevelt High School in Seattle.

She has been active for many years in the University Congregational Church in Seattle.

Attending the North American Ecumenical Youth Assembly in Ann Arbor, Michigan, this week are: Rev. Robert Knowles and Rev. James Cress, Rosemary Hoffman, Mary Helen Stasavich, and Hubie Young. Mr. Knowles and Mr. Cress are two of the ten adult advisers from the United Church.

place and that part of my tithe should go in that direction.

If we put church giving in second or third place in our financial lives or even omit it entirely, then we are poor church members indeed. Why should we expect our names to be carried on the roll of a church and be known as a member when we willfully take just a token part or no part at all in its financial status? Let's share in the giving of tithes to support our churches — anything short of that is shirking our duty.

If tithing were merely a gimmick to raise money, it might deserve to die. Instead it is deeply religious. According to the scriptures, it is required. If we recognize that all we have comes from God, we will want to be tithers. We need souls dedicated to the point that tithing will become a major part of their Christian lives.

Tithing changes our relationships with our individual churches. When I gave of the remnants, church didn't mean nearly so much to me as it does now. We learn to love that which we give to and work for.

If all of us would become tithers, all money-making schemes could be forgotten; no begging would be necessary. In returning to God what He has given, we will be doing what was right, what is required, and what is badly needed to make our church's power for good felt in the world.

WCC BOOKLET IS BEST SELLER

A best seller in the religious publishing field this year is the preparatory study booklet "Jesus Christ — the Light of the World" published by the World Council of Churches for its third assembly, November 18 - December 6, in New Delhi, India.

More than half a million copies of the 76-page illustrated booklet have been sold to date in a total of 33 languages.

Study groups throughout the world, now believed to number in the thousands, have been asked to communicate their recommendations based on study and discussion of the booklet to their official church delegates to the assembly.

The book, which takes its title from the theme of the Assembly, includes a treatment of the theme and its three sub-themes, Witness, Unity and Service, along with eight Bible studies and a section on the World Council called "The Local Task in the Total Vision."

The largest number of copies have been sold in the World Council of Churches' three official languages — English, French, and German.

Copies have been sold in more than fifty countries under auspices of member churches, including Eastern Europe. Five thousand have been sold in East Germany and a similar number in Poland. Copies are also on sale in Czechoslovakia. Largest number of sales in the English language edition has been in the United States — 200,000.

In Memoriam

We, the Senior Board of Deacons of the Rosemont Christian Church, South Norfolk, Virginia, wish to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. C. L. Gibson, who passed away after a prolonged illness June 30, 1961, at the age of 76.

He was a lifelong member of Rosemont and for many years he served his church as a member of the board of Deacons. He also served in many of the various organizations of the church.

This community in which he lived the better part of his life has lost a faithful and loyal citizen. His passing has left a feeling of sadness among his many friends and loved ones that only time and God's grace can lessen.

The church extends to his family love and sympathy and commends them to the love of our heavenly Father.

The Board requests a copy of this memoriam be sent to his family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be filed in the church records.

God's Unprized Gift

Until it's gone we oft' don't prize
The blessing of good health;
But when we're ill and suffer pain,
For it, we'd give all wealth.

When we are well, from illness free,
And health within us glows,
We oft' don't know how blessed we are Until from us it goes.

The poorest man who has good health
Is better off by far
Than millionaires whose health is poor,
Around our land now are.

And they would gladly give their all,
If they could have once more
The health and strength they once enjoyed
In years long gone before.

For what is wealth, compared to health,
What value is it, pray,
When all the joys that good health brought,
From them has passed way?

What I state here, I know is true,
Because, my friends, you see,
Good health I had in former years
Right now is gone from me.

But still I pray and hope each day
While I alive remain,
The Fates once more will smile on me
And bring it back again.

Quotable Quotes From Iowa Fellowship

How lovely this fellowship of those who meet together. —Psalm 133:1.

"A man is himself plus the books he reads."

Theme song for a Christian Social Action Committee might be "Christian, Rise and Act Thy Creed."

"People who cannot sing usually do not try, especially solo parts. But anyone who can read, no matter how poorly, may be given a part to stumble through in a church program.
Be sure, especially, that readers for Christmas and Easter programs are those who read well."

A FELLOWSHIP PRAYER

Grant us, we beseech Thee, Lord,
So to speak, so to hear, and so to learn,
That our fears may be banished,
Our minds enlightened,
Our faith confirmed,
And our steps directed unto Thee.
Amen.

"What I can do, I will do. What I will do, with God's help, I can do."

"It is a privilege to be able to read.
It is a privilege to be allowed to read.
Let us choose our reading material wisely."

Some people say, "I'm not able to do anything for my church any more."
Remind them that no one is ever too old to pray!

"Each member of the church is also a member of the public relations committee. As we meet people on the streets, as we talk on the telephone, we are advertisements — good or bad — for our church."

One Women's Fellowship at each meeting has a member impersonate the missionary listed that day in the Calendar of Prayer, giving what information she can about her or him.
Another group remembers the particular missionary for the day in the Calendar of Prayer as the offering is dedicated.

This material was collected by Mrs. F. C. Lester while in Iowa recently.

The Voice Unto Pharaoh Or Any Tyrant

Pharaoh, Pharaoh, let my people go!

My fettered children toil with aching limbs
And wearied fingers, brain and spirit bound.
Their puny forms are bent; the shadow dims
Their straining eyes; their ears are choked with sound
And thick with reek is every breath they draw.
I gave them light to see and song to hear;
I gave them Truth for guide and Love for law;
And thou hast given darkness, blight and fear.

Pharaoh, Pharaoh, let my people go!

In chains, unseen but strong, my children slave,
Too dull for hopes or dreams, too dumb for prayers;
Thou hast robbed them of the youth I gave,
The world I made, the joy that should be theirs;
These lives are coined to swell thy glittering store;
Then darest thou plead, "Nay, Lord, I did not know!" —
Still heaping up their burdens more and more?
The sand is running. Let my people go.

Pharaoh, Pharaoh, let my people go!

Thy heart is hard. Be warned: The Plagues shall come.
This wrong thou dost shall breed yet fouler wrong.
Those lips shall speak in flame that now are dumb;
Those feeble hands, through wrath and hatred strong,
Shall rend where they have wrought. Yea, once again
Disease, Rebellion, Crime shall overthrow
The selfishness that bred them. Sons of men,
For dread of vengeance, let my people go!

Here And There Among The Churches

Mrs. Ann Joyce Vickers is now providing The Christian Sun with material concerning Elon College. She has been serving in this capacity since June.

Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Harcastle are enjoying a week on an island in Penobscot Bay, Maine, with their daughter and her husband. The young couple and their children soon sail for Europe to study in Zurich, Switzerland, for a year.

Mrs. Guy Benchoff, speaking to ministers' wives at Moonelon recently, strongly recommended inviting ministers to the program planning session for the Women's Guild or Women's Fellowship. She reminded those present that the women's group is not a separate organization but shares in the total program of the church.

Rev. Thomas Hamilton, pastor of St. Matthew's, Charlotte, has resigned to organize a new congregation in the suburbs of Dayton, Ohio. Rev. James Rumley, Jr., has resigned the Lincoln Charge of the Southern Synod to go to St. John's, Lebanon, Pennsylvania.

Rev. G. H. Veazey of Elon College is serving as supply pastor at Elk Spur and Rocky Ford churches the second and fourth Sundays of each month. Rev. Lester Stanley is preaching each evening this week at Rocky Ford, and Mr. Veazey will be preaching each evening next week at Elk Spur. The latter church has not had services all year. The church people met at the parsonage last Saturday for a "clean-up" day to get it ready for occupancy. Mr. Veazey preached last Sunday at Shallow Ford, so keeps busy in "retirement."

Dr. John G. Truitt is serving as supply pastor at Monticello church, Brown Summit, while the pastor, Rev. William Lane, is hospitalized in Hartford, Connecticut.

Last Sunday the Men's Bible Class of First Reformed, Winston-Salem, sponsored a fellowship and "get-better-acquainted" period following the 10:00 morning worship service. Honor guests were members of the senior choir and members joining the church during the past year.

Mrs. C. B. Duke of Suffolk has recently renewed her subscription to The Christian Sun for two years. Mrs. Duke will be 85 years old September 3. She is the daughter of the late Rev. H. H. Butler and Mrs. Butler, who is now 105 years old. Mrs. Duke writes, "I have been taking the Sun through the years and have enjoyed it."

75th ANNIVERSARY AT BURTON'S GROVE

The members of Burton's Grove Congregational Christian Church are planning a "Homecoming" for September 3. The church was organized July 4, 1886, so this will be the 75th anniversary observance.

We are taking this means of contacting as many of our former ministers and members as possible, since we do not know the address of many of them.

The service will begin at eleven o'clock and everyone is asked to bring a picnic lunch. The church will provide tea. We hope all who have had connections with Burton's Grove in the past will come.

Mrs. P. N. Gay, Clerk

A fellowship hour is enjoyed the second Sunday of each month at our Tryon church when coffee and punch are served immediately following the worship service.

The Rev. Conrad F. Cornelius, pastor of Piney Plain Christian Church in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, has resigned his work effective October 12, 1961.

The ministers of the Eastern North Carolina Conference are reminded of their meeting in the Dogwood Room of the S. and W. Cafeteria in Raleigh September 5, 1961, at 4:45. This notice comes from Ronald Nichols, secretary.

BURLINGTON DISTRICT LAYMEN MEET

The Burlington District of the Laymen's Fellowship held its regular quarterly meeting at Long's Chapel church July 27 with 69 members present. The ladies of Long's Chapel really outdid themselves serving us a picnic supper.

After our business meeting was opened by Chairman Royal Councilman, Mr. M. Z. Rhodes led the group in singing.

Rev. Lafayette Wilkins, pastor of the Lakeview church, gave one of our best programs of the year. He used for a subject "Hands and Tools of Christ," referring to the laymen of the church as the hands and tools of Christ. His concluding point was that we must be open to receive and to give our gifts back to Him.

We are looking forward to our next quarterly meeting on Oct. 26 at the Bethlehem church.

The Singing Of Hymns

Ruth E. Graham

Minister of Music, Tryon Church

"What am I to do? I will pray with the spirit and I will pray with the mind also; I will sing with the spirit and I will sing with the mind also."

I Corinthians 14:15

Recently a Charlotte minister said he could tell if a church was dead or alive when they sang the first hymn. He probably said this because, when we sing with spirit and the mind, our singing has a vitality which is not confined to our music.

I have often wondered what a person outside the church who has never experienced God's love and power would think of our faith if he happened to pass a church where a small group was singing in a half-hearted way. It has always seemed strange to me that leaders seem to feel that hymns must be sung at certain meetings where there are not enough people to make singing more effective than just reading the hymns. Unless hymns can be well sung, it would seem better to read them in unison, for the text is surely as important as the music, even more important in some instances. One does not have to miss the beauty, grandeur and deep meaning of noble hymns because one does not sing. There are even silent hymn singers who have memorized hymns which then come to them in times of need to comfort, strengthen and challenge, or just as an outlet for a thankful and joyous heart. One woman who could not "carry a tune" would listen intently as the congregation sang the hymns, following the words from memory.

Technically, what does it mean to sing with the spirit and the mind? These two words cover a lot, yet they mean simply: have your mind on what you sing and sing it as if you meant it. Sing Alleluias as if they were "an ecclesiastical hurrah!" But we do not sing with the mind when we sing a hymn of penitence in a bold manner as if we were commanding God. Singing with the mind means more than concentration. It means watching the punctuation, for that often indicates a break in the thought and the music, where a breath can be taken. This also prevents singing on until caught without breath in the middle of a phrase or, worse yet, in the middle of a word! In breathing we have to be careful not to separate ideas that are meant to be joined (for example, a preposition or a verb and its object). Singing has been described as sustained speech, so naturally we have to breathe more deeply in singing than in speaking, in order to have enough breath to hold those long notes at the end of the line. This does not mean, however, that we are to hold those notes their exact value, for we have to have time to breathe for the next phrase. Therefore, we "rob" the last note or the end of the phrase for a breath, so that we can come in on time for the following phrase without disturbing the rhythmic flow of the music.

Singing with the mind and with the spirit means singing intelligently, and as well as we can, with a humble and grateful heart for the gifts of God in song.

Three Dendron Members Honored

By Mrs. Garland Spratley

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Atkinson

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Atkinson were both honored on their birthdays this summer by members of their Sunday school at Dendron, Virginia.

June 26, Mr. Atkinson was honored with a covered dish supper at the church. Mrs. W. H. Savedge was mistress of ceremonies and Mrs. Garland Spratley presented Mr. Atkinson a gift from the Sunday school. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield gave the prayer and thanks for the evening meal.

Mrs. Atkinson was honored August 2 by the 1910 Bible Class. Mrs. Harry Spratley poured punch and Mrs. W. H. Savedge presented Mrs. Atkinson with a basket of gifts. The honoree is a charter member of the Dendron Christian Church, the Women's Fellowship and the Ladies Aid Society.

Mrs. W. D. Harward

Mrs. W. D. Harward returned home to Dendron, Virginia, to celebrate her ninetieth birthday. She is the much-beloved widow of Dr. W. D. Harward, who served for many years as pastor of Congregational Christian churches in the Dendron community.

Entertaining in her honor was Mrs. William Eugene Harward of Washington, D. C. Guests were received Friday afternoon, August 11, from 3:30-5:00. The table was laid with an imported lace cloth, centered with a floral arrangement of pink lilies and fern and pink candles. Mrs. Virginia H. Teller of Washington presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Garland Spratley assisted in receiving the guests.

Mrs. Harward was happy to see her many friends. Her grandson and wife, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Harward, Jr., of Arlington and great-grandsons, Billy, Kenny, and Bobby Harward and Ricky Teller were among the guests.

To Live By The Inner Light

I pray, dear Father, that my life may be guided by that of thee which is in my heart. May I find in the midst of busy days a time for stillness, a time to be aware of things intangible. As a trained musician is aware of the voices of many instruments in a symphony, so may I be aware of a greater richness in life than its simple melody. Believing that there is something divine in every human heart, help me to look for it in every person, with faith that it cannot be destroyed.

May the inner light, which is the spirit of love, illumine my mind, my heart, and my ways. Amen.

You Can't Keep Up By Sitting Still

Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, member of the Executive Committee of the General Council for the past several years, reminds the editor that reports from the recent Philadelphia meetings may have left the wrong impression in the minds of some. And he is right.

It is true that both ministers and churches can maintain their standing with our conferences and convention without becoming members of the United Church of Christ. It is true that no minister will lose his present standing because of the merger. It is true that ministers can maintain their relationships to the Annuity Fund without joining the United Church of Christ. It is true that churches that have borrowed money from the Building Society will return the money according to contract, and that grant loans will remain as heretofore. It is true that any Congregational Christian church in good standing July 7 will be considered for a loan when requested without reference to its relationship with the United Church. So long as ministers and churches maintain their standing with their local Conference, they will be in good standing with the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches and its affiliated organizations.

Then why join the United Church? It might seem that there is no urgency for membership in the new and united denomination. But there is.

The General Council of Congregational Christian Churches has turned over almost all its functions to the General Synod of the United Church of Christ. Conferences and Convention are honor bound by their own votes to function in connection with the General Synod. More and more the Synod will increase and the Council will decrease. Progress will be made with the United Church of Christ while the Congregational Christian activities will decrease. We have seen this sort of thing happen with the old Christian Church. No ministers or churches were dropped from the rolls because they objected to that merger in 1931, but some have been lost to the fellowship because they did not themselves move forward into the Congregational Christian Churches.

When an army moves toward the front, a soldier cannot keep up by sitting still. The United Church of Christ is moving in the main stream of church life in our time. Those of us who sit idly by will soon find that we are left behind, that the Church did not wait for us, that our inaction has separated us from the army of the Lord. That neither a minister nor a church can afford.

Next year there will be a Yearbook for the United Church of Christ, the first such Yearbook. In it will be the names of those Congregational Christian churches and ministers who request membership in the United Church. Many of us are pleased that our names have appeared in the Congregational Christian Yearbook for the thirty years of the denomination's life, and multitudes will be thrilled that their names are in the first Yearbook of the United Church of Christ — the first merger of denominations with widely differing history and polity. BUT, no name will appear unless it is requested. Standing still will not enable one to keep up with progress. All Evangelical and Reformed churches and ministers will be listed. Why should we be less cooperative?

Back To The Books

Much is being said these days about our school system, and the talk is not too complimentary. Suddenly we seem to have discovered that quality education has eluded us. Perhaps the truth is that we deserted it years ago. Gadgets may do the house work, computers may take work out of the office, but the fact still remains that work is necessary for a person to learn. Knowledge of history, politics or religion, of literature, art or music, of mathematics, chemistry or any other science — knowledge just does not sneak into the brains of sluggards, or those busy hurrahing for the athletic team. One must still SEARCH for knowledge.

Books are full of information, at least some of them are. Teachers and pupils can both be students working together to discover what the wise people have written, and to find ways to make truth applicable to present conditions. That is the joy of the classroom.

It is important to learn to read — to read rapidly and to understand what the writer contributed to the store of knowledge. To search out what was in another person's mind and to make his thought your own is a delight. Books are the gift of ideas to those who read, and no one should refuse such gifts by failing to read.

Open the books. Let them give you wisdom, culture, refinement, knowledge, skill, hope. Books and schools are costly gifts to the children and youth. Back to the books is an exciting adventure to be accepted joyously by everyone who has the chance.

A Soliloquy

WHEN THE CAR WOULDN'T START

There you are, Old Buggy. Sorry you had to stay out on the street all night and couldn't get home. Those people who tried to get you going didn't know how sensitive you are. You just waited for the master's touch.

Good Old Buggy! You have rendered real service during your twelve years. You must be tired from running that 150,000 miles. I get tired just from walking.

All right, let's go. Your new battery of yesterday should put fire just where it is needed. No! What do you mean? Of course you can start. Try it again. Here comes the gas — and the spark. You don't want to go any place? Well, I do, so let's be off.

You aren't going? I'll push the throttle down to the floor, and that new battery will surely give you plenty of fire. No. You won't go!

Well, I'll let you roll down this hill. That should get you "unchoked." Not much speed, but you ought to start breathing. Let's GO.

Now what shall I do? An old, worn car, undependable, no good. You better start. You know I can't call you bad names, nor tear you to pieces. But you do not know that I may trade you in on a new model — or sell you to the junk man. Have it your way. Stay right there while I call the garage man. He will make you go. And then you will have to make up for all this lost time. Sorry, sorry, Old Buggy. You are no good — no good anymore!

COLONIZATION

To judge by what one hears and reads nowadays, colonialism has become a disrespectful word. Changing times have had something to do with this attitude, but one suspects that the rantings and shoe-poundings of the world's greatest colonizer whose methods are the use of guns, tanks, and firing squads to subjugate countries have added to the widespread declarations against colonization.

It is true that civilized nations have exploited natural resources in areas they have colonized. But natives have also benefitted by being taught how to use their natural resources for their own benefit, and they have also benefitted by the establishment of schools, hospitals and other institutions not previously enjoyed by them.

This space holds no brief for colonization in the present era, but lest younger generations think that the establishing of colonies by one country was a disservice to natives who were unable to advance themselves, one illustration is offered among many in history to show that every pancake has two sides. The case of Algeria is cited because the near seven-year-old conflict there has focused attention of the whole world on that North African land.

Algeria is the name given by the French prior to 1830 to the then ill-defined North African countries, only one-sixth of which had submitted to the Turkish rule of the Algiers regency. The latter's existence depended upon piracy of the Barbary corsairs and on the extortion of taxes from the tribes of the interior. Weakness of the government, such as it was, allowed independent groups of the Berber and Arab populations to wage constant war against each other and often to rebel against the authority of the Beys or rulers of Algiers. Any conception of national sentiment was unknown in these lands subjugated from time immemorial by foreign or local powers which had never succeeded in welding the many tribes into a conscious unity.

This condition of internal affairs reached a point where communities fearful of their future enclosed themselves within walls. Traffic became confined to the vicinity of local markets, and even then the peasant farmer was not always sure that his load of foodstuffs on the way to market would not be stolen from him. Fertile plains were deserted by the inhabitants who took refuge in villages where they could be better protected.

At this point, in 1830, France took possession of Algiers. This was followed by penetration into the Sahara regions and the building of reciprocal friendship between conquerors and the conquered. Finally came peace and security among the nomads as well as the settled tribes. This penetration of civilized influences from the outside world through a general evolution brought this French possession to near modern status.

Within the past century the French have succeeded in creating or enlarging more than 1,000 villages, in making more than 50,000 grants of land, settling more than 250,000 people, building schools and introducing improved farming methods.

What the future holds for Algeria is the guessing game of the century. Most of its territory was involved in a series of Carthaginian wars that began 200 years before the time of Christ and lasted a thousand years. Some of the same elements in the present struggle are still involved. History often repeats.

C. B. Riddle

Open Letter To Grandson

Dear Bruce:

How thrilled we were to receive the phone call from your daddy saying you arrived safely at 2 a.m. You must have come into the world under the cover of darkness because you were afraid to enter during daylight. And I am not surprised to learn the first thing you did on opening your eyes was to cry. These are fearful times when even strong men tremble.

You are not responsible for the unhappy conditions in the world, but I trust and pray you may be able to make some contribution toward making this a better and safer place to live.

Humanity's greatest need is for peacemakers; indeed our survival depends on peace and good will among men. Jesus pronounced a blessing upon peacemakers. And if there is peace in the world, it will not just happen. It will be made by men and women of good will. My fondest dream is that you may be one of them.

The peacemaker must begin by finding peace for his own heart and soul. This can be done by making peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

There is no true happiness without peace in the home. It is here that you must live and love and give yourself to your family.

A community divided by race or religious prejudice, torn by political or class strife, or rent by friction between capital and labor suffers for the need of peacemakers. In such an atmosphere those who do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God are often misunderstood and hated.

The way of victory may be the way of apparent defeat. It is not easy to turn the other cheek, go a second mile and give your cloak also but this is the way of the Prince of Peace.

It may seem there is little or nothing one person can do to support peace among the floundering nations of the world. To aid the Christian missionary program is a big step in the right direction. Friendly person to person contact with people of other lands is helpful. One lesson I have learned is that people in distant countries always respond with good will when met face to face with a kind and pleasant spirit.

The time may come when you will cry for peace, but there will be no peace. It may be necessary for you to use force to protect our country just as it may be necessary for you to use force to protect your home from prowlers and robbers. Peace which is purchased at the price of liberty and freedom is not peace but slavery.

So, my dear boy, you will live a rewarding and worthwhile life if you work and pray for peace. For this cause I trust you have come into the world.

Love,

Your devoted grandfather
Bruce H. Price, Pastor

PEACE

With peace that comes of purity,
And strength to simple justice due,
So runs our loyal dream of thee,
God of our fathers! make it true.

Two Constitutions Compared

By Leland W. Mann

Minister, First Congregational Church
Chadron, Nebraska

This Union between the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church deals with religious concepts, with legal safeguards and ethical implications which have historic counterparts that take us back to the controversy surrounding the Constitution of the United States. The Constitution of the United States did not spring full-grown from the minds of dedicated men. It was devised by men who were convinced that man's free spirit could protect itself only by accepting creatively the risks of greater governmental responsibility. The simple democracy of the New England Town Meeting was no longer adequate in directing the affairs of state. Individual states were no longer able to stand against the forces that threatened to destroy man's freedom. In those days the union was not something to be defended; it was something still to be created in the name of that freedom they wanted to preserve.

The Union of the States

In Volume One of "The Growth of the American Republic" by Morison and Commager, one finds all the emotional extravagances surrounding the proposed union of the states which plague us today in our attempts to create a United Church. The setting in time is different, the facts dealt with are governmental rather than ecclesiastical, but the emotion generated was just as heated and imagined fears just as real.

Permit some voices from the opposition to the union of the states speak for a moment. William Pierce, delegate from Georgia said of the proposed union: "Some will oppose it from pride, some from self-interest, some from ignorance, but a greater number will be of that class who will oppose it from a dread of its swallowing up the individuality of the states." (page 181). Another delegate, Amos Singletary said: "These lawyers, and men of learning and moneyed men, that talk so finely, and gloss over matters so smoothly, to make us poor illiterate people swallow down the pill, expect to get into Congress themselves; they expect to be the managers of this Constitution, and get all the power and all the money into their own hands, and then they will swallow up all us little folks like the great Leviathan; yes, just as the whale swallowed up Jonah" (page 182).

In 1776 the Declaration of Independence had been signed unanimously by all the delegates. But eleven years later when sixty-five delegates had been appointed by the states to assemble for the writing of the constitution, ten of the sixty-five would not even attend. After one hundred hectic days of deliberation, when the document was ready for signatures, sixteen of the delegates who had helped to produce it refused to sign it. When the Constitution went to the states for ratification it bore the names of only thirty-nine of the original sixty-five men delegated to prepare it. The creative work which a crisis produces always demands its casualties! In only eight of the thirteen states was ratification unanimous or by heavy majority. "In Massachusetts the vote carried by a slim margin of 19 votes out of a total of 355. In Virginia by 10 votes out of a total of 168. In New York . . . by 3 in a total of 57 (page 182)." North Carolina and Rhode Island declared they would never sign. "Rhode Island, if you please, was the United States; the rest were 'illegal seceders'" (page 209).

Patrick Henry, who had once shouted defiantly "Give me liberty or give me death," when he recognized his defeat in the Virginia legislature, said in modulate voice: "I will be a peaceable citizen. My head, my heart, and my hand shall be at liberty to retrieve the loss of liberty, and remove the defects of that system in a constitutional way" (page 210).

It is no wonder men great and good were confused. Here was something new in governmental affairs. The proponents of the Union moved forward in faith neither knowing nor seeing clearly whither they were going. Nothing like it had ever happened before; there were no rules to go by. New rules had to be formulated and agreed upon.

The Union of the Churches

I believe that something like that is happening today in our attempts at a United Church. Never before in Church history has there been an attempt at union bringing together groups of Continental and English origin. And in this union each group is determined to maintain its freedom and autonomy and at the same time accept the discipline of the Spirit of Christ, in a greater corporate responsibility for establishing the Kingdom of God on earth. This is a new venture — another pioneering movement. We have no signs, no guideposts to go by. We move ahead as did our forefathers who laid the foundations of these United States by faith. We know now that they were right; but they did not know it then. They did not pretend to have all the answers. Man is not omniscient! Answers to questions real and imagined would have to be formed from the crucible of human experience. The Constitution of the United States was not a perfect document. Twenty-one amendments added through the years emphasize its original limitations. But the historic period itself makes it quite clear how men, great and good, may differ in their interpretations and understanding of what is high and what is holy. There are moments in time when men are led by necessity to make decisions which later generations will interpret as "great faith." Men creative and responsible will always make such decisions and leave the results in the hands of God.

Will of the Majority

It was good, that our forefathers lived for a time under the Articles of Confederation or, a kind of Basis of Union. But the time came when the Articles of Confederation could no longer cope with existing circumstances. The majority of citizens saw it and, though they knew not precisely what to do, they nevertheless accepted the responsibility of doing something. Many theoretical questions raised about the proposed union of the states, simply could not be answered until the states were united. Answers to all questions have to be found in the arena of human and divine relationships. But time was running out; men less honorable, under the leadership of Daniel Shay of Massachusetts, were refusing to pay taxes, rebellion was in the land and, faced with potential anarchy, a responsible majority acted, and the United States of America is the historic result.

Of course, the point is that, a responsible majority will always act in a democracy. We cannot submit to government by boycott, either in matters federal or ecclesiastical. In the Manual for Congregational Christian Churches prepared by Dr. Oscar E. Maurer (1947), there appears on page 52 this statement: "When there is a difference of opinion and after there has been due discussion and consideration of the views of the minority, the majority in a democracy has a responsibility it cannot evade of carrying forward the plans and procedures which it deems appropriate. It is essential that all the rights of the minority shall be duly safeguarded, but a situation should never be permitted to obtain wherein the minority is able to veto or unduly prolong the carrying into effect of what the majority, after due consideration, deems best in the interests of the Church and Kingdom."

What "Historic Congregationalism"

Much has been written in recent years about the necessity of preserving historic Congregationalism. I want it preserved, too; but in all sincerity I must ask, which Congregationalism? That at Plymouth which humbly resolved "to follow the ways of the Lord made known or yet to be made known unto us?" Or that of Boston and Salem where a determined minority hung Quakers and burned witches? The truth is, during the last fifty years we have allowed our concept of autonomy to develop in such a manner as to shackle both our mind and our responsibility. We scorn denominations of a creedal origin but, our concept of local autonomy has become far more rigid and devastating to the future of the Church than any creedal dogma of the 20th Century. Some of our churches have become so isolationist they no longer understand the corporate nature of the Christian community. In New Testament times, according to Latourette, there was a vivid sense of belonging to a chosen fellowship, overriding all distinctions of neighborhood, nationalities and cultures. A man did not think of himself as belonging to this or that particular church; he was a member of the Body of Christ. There is more to the church than can be contained in any one isolated group, be it large or small. If our concept of the church is not universal, then we are isolationists. It is time for us to learn that in the Christian sense, we do not make the church, rather, the church makes us.

The Church and International Relations

In this 20th Century, we are learning that we cannot maintain our political freedom in isolation. As a nation, we are at the moment both confused and humbled by this discovery. Here again, we are not sure of the limit of our responsibility. But the world does not rest in peace while we make up our mind. In Europe and South Asia today, the great question mark in international affairs is not

My Parson

I like my parson's preaching,
And I like my parson's prayers;
And I thank him for his visits
And the burden that he bears.

I like his friendly handclasp,
And I like the way he takes
An interest in my family
And the progress that it makes.

It is good to have him with us
When our boat is coming in,
And if there's pain or sorrow
It is good to have him then.

For his questions and his answers,
And his understanding nod,
Help to open up the pathway
To a kind and loving God.

—John G. Truitt

Russia; it is the United States. Everyone knows what Russian policy is. Now these people are asking, "What is the United States going to do? Will she pull out and leave us to Russia?" We were isolationists so long in our foreign policy the whole world is confused and so are we.

In South Asia are the Younger Churches; they are not interested today in our denominationalism, as they stand on the borderline of communism. The Younger Churches are insisting upon an actual New Testament fellowship of believers instead of dogmatic and ecclesiastical correctness. The overwhelming non-Christian majorities of Asia constantly confront the Christian communities with awkward decisions on social, ethical, philosophical and religious issues which must be answered in our lifetime. There is a new sense of the Church as a God-given society and fellowship; and, denominationalism as we understand it, is considered a most inadequate expression of that Church.

Freedom Founded In Christ

Today, we Congregational Christians seem to be interpreting our liberty and autonomy as the right to do as we please. No man, no isolated group will want that right who has found salvation in Christ. Let us not make the mistake of setting our concept of freedom and autonomy beside vanity and anarchy as an equivalent or substitute for Christianity. The day of Cotton Mather and his New England theocracy is done; let us not revive it!

But this theocracy is being revived by the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches. In a prepared pamphlet containing their Articles of Association and By-Laws is also a statement of "The Nature of the National Association." On pages 6 and 7 you will find these words: "It is commonly but erroneously supposed that Congregational Christian Churches are democratic, or majority ruled, in their government. But the true Congregational Christian Church is a theocracy; it is ruled and guided by God." Will some loyal member of the opposition please explain to us what this statement means? This concept of the church and society died with Cotton Mather centuries ago and now again in our time it is being revived as "true Congregationalism."

Brethren, ours is a "founded freedom"; a freedom founded in Christ. For us as Christians there can be no other foundation. A "founded freedom" is a responsible freedom. Too long we have sought freedom in the church at the expense of the Spirit of Christ and I am ashamed. Our actions and our deeds must correspond to the faith we profess. It is not our concept of Christ as the Head of the Church that divides us; rather, it is our concept of freedom within the church that makes His Will inoperative, when an organized minority takes the heart out of creative and responsible endeavor. Only a responsible freedom, a "founded freedom" in Christ can bring us together again.

Meeting The Communist Challenge

Dr. Charles Malik, Lebanese diplomat who was president of the General Assembly of the United Nations in 1959, spoke at George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tennessee, July 20. Following is a report of his address by Edna Bresko, social action chairman for the Eastern Virginia Women's Fellowship.

To fail to realize a Great Danger is one of our great dangers.

During a workshop on Educational Leadership, I have had the rare privilege of hearing Dr. Charles Malik deliver a public lecture on the outdoor stage at Peabody College. Dr. Malik quoted de Gaulle as stating that the two camps that are set up face to face is the worst evil of our time. Lord Home, British foreign minister, stated recently that Nero fiddled while Rome burned. What are we doing while Communists are overtaking us?

Dr. Malik listed several steps that are necessary to arrest great dangers, including:

1. Preserving the western coalition.
2. Rediscovering the fundamental values.
3. Maintaining the strongest possible defenses.
4. Establishing a new national order of priority.
5. Developing economy and technology to the greatest extent.
6. Offering the deepest national prayer.

He added that all of this needs leadership and the mantle of leadership has fallen upon the United States.

The question, as he views it, is: Will this nation soon produce leadership that will redeem past mistakes by making freedom secure and by strengthening tested values? He further added that the question is whether the leadership to be produced will usher in a new dawn of trust, liberty, cooperation and human dignity and worth for all people, by driving back the forces of darkness which are seeking to overtake us.

Dr. Malik, now a professor at the American University in Washington, made these remarks on national and international steps that must be taken to realize the free world's hopes. On an individual basis, he urged that we become better informed, seek facts, form groups to discuss world issues, take a stand and stand fast by one's convictions and return in child-like humility to Jesus Christ and the Church.

In his 75-minute address, Dr. Malik warned of various dangers, such as — Marxism will reduce everything down to materialism; the western soul will be infiltrated and softened up by subversive forces; people will weaken and compromise without taking a firm stand for truth, justice and freedom; western world would be paralyzed into inaction through fear and break up; and those who know God and believe in Jesus Christ would forsake God for other gods — gods of science, progress, culture, enlightenment, education, human brotherhood, and other false gods, even the so-called god of peace.

He offered the following elements of hope: the awakening to the Communist menace, the fact the continuous pressure from Communist and other forces will keep men alert, fresh American leadership, the United Nations, the terrifying destructiveness of nuclear weapons, which causes all to think, and the fact that God still rules on the throne.

ARTICLES ON LATIN AMERICA

Protestant church people will be studying Latin America in 1961-62 as their world mission theme. Many excellent articles on Latin America are being printed in secular magazines and should be read and saved to use in connection with this study.

Especially recommended is the series in LOOK magazine beginning with the July 18 issue (one country an issue) and the series which ran in LIFE magazine in June and July. Pictures from these articles would make excellent posters or scrapbook material to use in connection with the study.

INSTALLATION SERVICE AT ROSEMONT

By Mrs. Dewey Jones

The Women's Fellowship of Rosemont Christian Church, South Norfolk, Virginia, elected and installed new officers for the ensuing year August 7, 1961.

Mrs. John Swink, a former president of the Fellowship, installed the newly elected president, Mrs. B. M. Herbert, Jr. She charged the president-elect with the duties and responsibilities of the office, also lighted a candle and presented Mrs. Herbert with a white ribbon bearing a cross. Then the president-elect installed the vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Cherry, Jr. She charged Mrs. Cherry with the duties of her office, also lighted a white candle and presented a white ribbon bearing a cross to Mrs. Cherry.

Next the president-elect installed the remaining officers: recording secretary, Mrs. W. M. Sparkman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. P. Small; treasurer, Mrs. Mack Miller; and assistant treasurer, Mrs. O. G. Fleming. She charged each of them with their duties and responsibilities, also lighted a green candle for each and presented each a green ribbon bearing a cross.

The president also installed the chairmen of the different departments of the Fellowship which are: Friendly Service, Mrs. W. C. Adams; Missionary Education and Cradle Roll, Mrs. D. L. Liverman; Spiritual Life, Mrs. Howard Gilbert; Social Action, Mrs. H. C. Copeland; Stewardship, Mrs. William Funderburk; and Christian Education, Mrs. Carroll Lewis. She gave to each of them their duties and responsibilities. Elected for reporter was Mrs. H. R. Morrison, Jr., and for historian, Mrs. C. L. Cantrell.

New members elected to the nominating committee were Mrs. J. B. Gibson, Sr., and Mrs. W. D. Hayman.

The service closed with a prayer.

The newly-organized Men's Fellowship of Piney Plain church, Route 4, Raleigh, invited their wives and families to their August 14 meeting. Nearly 70 came to enjoy the barbecued chicken supper, which the men had prepared. A good evening of Christian fellowship was enjoyed, according to the pastor, Rev. Conrad Cornelius.

LOUIS WILKINS AT ELON

Louis Wilkins, a graduate of Elon College and associate member of our Community Church there, spoke in the Elon church July 30. He is home on a brief furlough before returning to his teaching job in Tarsus, Turkey.

He wrote to the Elon Church following his visit:

"For your hospitality and for the gift of $75.00 I am indeed grateful. The money will be used for buying a few necessary clothes, to pay the shipping charges for my trunk (since I shall be going by plane) and to help buy music materials for our music classes, and for our newly formed Lise Chorus at Tarsus.

"I shall return to Tarsus rejoicing, knowing that friends at Elon are with us in our task of witnessing to God's love made known through His Son."

TRANSLATING GOD'S WORD INTO MAN'S LANGUAGE

Blaise Levai, American Bible Society

Late one night a Hindu came to the bungalow of a missionary in Vellore, South India. "My son is very ill," he said, obviously upset. "Long miles from the next village we have carried him here." The missionary immediately started to get the lad to the nearby hospital.

"But wait," gestured the Hindu. "First, I want you to read from your sacred Book and pray."

Puzzled, the missionary replied, "But you are a Hindu. You have over 3,000 gods. Why do you ask me to read from the Bible and pray?" "Because," came the quick reply, "your Christ understands better, and the words from that Book sound like words from the heart of God."

Indeed, the Bible's message goes straight from the heart of God to the heart of man, telling what God did and does in the living Christ who understands. Such communication of the Word to the world is the unending mission obligation of Bible translators: "That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations" (Ps. 67:2).

More translators are engaged in Bible translation today than in any other period in history. This Word exists for the sake of the world — never just for its own. Translating this Word understandably for communication in all the tongues of the earth has been and is the consuming task of the Bible translator.

Rumanian Church Asks To Join World Council

(Geneva) — The Rumanian Orthodox Church will apply for membership in the World Council of Churches, it has been announced in Geneva by Metropolitan Justin.

The Rumanian leader said that the application is being made because his church is eager to take a more active role in the ecumenical movement.

The application will be acted upon by the World Council's third assembly in New Delhi, India, November 18-December 6, along with the applications for membership of the Russian Orthodox Church and approximately eight churches in other parts of the world. A two-thirds vote of member churches present is required to approve the application.

The Orthodox Church in Rumania represents an estimated 72 per cent of the country's 16,000,000 population. If the application is approved, the church will be the fourth Rumanian church in the WCC. Now members are the Hungarian Lutheran Church in Rumania, the Protestant Evangelical Church of the Augsburgian Confession, and the Transylvania Reformed Church.

BUSINESS EXECUTIVE BECOMES MISSIONARY

When Mr. and Mrs. Howard Trumbull and their four children, aged five through thirteen, sailed August 16 for South Africa, it was not a vacation trip for the top-flight industrial accounting executive and his family, but the beginning of a new life for them.

Mr. Trumbull, who was chief accountant with a firm whose annual sales are in excess of $100,000,000, and Mrs. Trumbull, who is a registered nurse, are recent appointees of our Board for World Ministries. He will be the business manager and treasurer of our South African Mission and she will be a missionary wife and nurse.

The Trumbulls are members of the First Congregational Church, St. Joseph, Michigan, where they were given a recognition service in January. They were commissioned as missionaries in June in Connecticut.

They represent an ever-increasing group of lay people who are giving term or full-time service to missionary careers in a variety of fields.

Youth Faces The Future

Hubie Young

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Last Letter From Editor

Dear Southern Convention P.F.ers,

At the recent 1961 Moonelon Officers' Camp, the new 1961-62 Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship officers were elected and installed. Because of this election of new officers, this Youth Page will be the last which I shall write as Youth Page editor and vice-president of the Southern Convention P.F.

During my tenure of office for the past fifteen months, I have received constant support and best wishes from you and your P.F. groups. These greatly aided me as I endeavored to produce an adequate Youth Page. Thank you for all your help.

One consolation in turning over the Youth Page editing is that I'm turning it over to such a capable young person. Cathie Sandstrom of Southern Pines was recently elected the new vice-president and editor of the Youth Page. Cathie is a very talented and efficient person, and to her I extend my best wishes for a successful year in working on the Youth Page. It will be necessary, however, for all of you to continue to support the Youth Page with your articles. Please begin sending your articles to Cathie Sandstrom, 425 Orchard Road, Southern Pines, North Carolina.

On August 7 the new Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship officers were installed after having been elected on the previous day. It was my extreme privilege to assume new responsibilities as your president. Other newly-installed officers are Cathie Sandstrom of Southern Pines, vice-president; Mary Ann Barnes of Holland, secretary; John Kernodle of Burlington, treasurer; Connie Trueblood of Norfolk, faith chairman; Louise Harrell and Jessie Weaver of Suffolk, action co-chairmen; and Judy Stone of Raleigh, fellowship chairman.

All of your new officers are willing to work for the Pilgrim Fellowship, and with everyone helping, we hope to make the coming year one of the most successful in the history of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship.

Very sincerely yours,
Hubie Young

It has been a joy to work with Hubie Young as editor of the Pilgrim Fellowship page. His faithfulness in providing material is appreciated.

MOONELON WORKERS VISIT LEBANON

By Mrs. Carlton Scott, Reporter

The Youth Fellowship of the Lebanon Christian Church held its regular meeting Sunday evening, Aug. 6, with seven visiting workers from Moonelon Camp.

The meeting began with a picnic supper and was followed by group singing on the church lawn. Miss Rosemary Hoffman of Raleigh led the singing; new songs and rounds were learned.

The group was led by Miss Hoffman. She introduced Miss Linda Tyndell of Fayetteville, who made a talk about the Faith Chairman; Miss Jane Rush of Asheboro, about the Action Chairman; and Mr. Alex Oliver of Suffolk, about the Fellowship Chairman. Miss Harriet Cook of Burlington gave some interesting ideas for good programs. All four of these young people had excellent ideas which will be a help to our young people.

A worship service followed. It was led by Miss Kathy Kopelan. She made an interesting talk on "Listen to the Voice of America." Mr. David Hadden of Hendersonville read the scripture. After this Miss Hoffman gave us a most inspiring talk on "What Are You Going to Do With Your Life?"

The meeting closed with more group singing and a prayer led by our pastor, Rev. L. T. Wilkins.

We are most grateful to these young people for coming down and sharing their ideas with our young people and also to our pastor for arranging for them to come.

YOUTH ACTIVITIES AT VIRGININA

The Rev. Harry Mathis, pastor of Union Church, Virgilina, Virginia, has recently organized junior and youth choirs. The former is being directed by Mrs. Roland Frazier and the latter by Mrs. F. M. Bailey, Jr.

Another activity our pastor has organized is for the children each Thursday night on the playground. Playground equipment has been purchased and a youth group organized with appointed officers. Mr. Mathis taught swimming lessons to the church children for a week during July.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathis entertained the children and young people of the church during June. Those in the grades had a buffet dinner, the high school young people a picnic, and the high school graduates and college students were honored at a dinner in the parsonage. This fellowship in the minister's home was greatly enjoyed.

Summer youth activities at First Reformed, Winston-Salem, included being host to an area youth rally July 30 with the program subject "Alcohol." August 3 they took a "bag lunch" to Tanglewood Park and then saw the religious drama "J.B." Saturday afternoons the younger boys have enjoyed softball on the church lawn.

The Angel Of The Lord

John G. Truitt

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them."

Psa. 34:7

God's messenger, God's servant, God's helper is there, where God wants him to be. Encamped there, if necessary; quickly there, when emergency requires it, and always at the ready as the need may be.

There seems to be a hesitancy in our speech, and words, and thoughts about angels. No need for it. If you believe in the Lord Jesus, or the Holy Bible, you needs must believe also in God's angels.

In the garden of Gethsemane — let us read, "And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him" (Luke 22:43). Zachariah ministering in the priest's office in the temple, "And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord" (Luke 1:11). The angel of the Lord "found her (Hagar) by a fountain of water in the wilderness" (Gen. 16:7). Or read Revelation 22:16, "I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches."

And so it goes from Genesis to Revelation. Let us not limit God's operations and works. Let us love him, and be glad that there are his angels, "more than twelve legions of angels" (Mt. 26:53), if necessary, to do his biddings.

Perhaps you yourself may serve as God's messenger, and do for him some special service, in the moment of need by some word you speak, or write, or some help you may give.

It seems to me, and I say this most humbly, there have been angels at the ready for me; as I look at incidents, which might have been accidents; or left turns on the road of right, rather than straight ahead; at places where I could have made wrong choices, I have been given guidance by God's helpers.

Well, here it is: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them;" something in my faith, something in my experience, something in my heart says "Amen" to that. And I am so thankful. Not for one moment am I ready to do away with God's angels! Amen.

Thanksgiving In August

There are so many things to complain about these days — the high prices, the hot weather, the Berlin crisis, etc. Perhaps the suggestion, therefore, is in order that we take time out from our grumbling to renew our gratitude to God for his many benefits. Of course, these are hot, expensive, and troubled days, but they are not very different from all other days. In every day there are more than enough things to worry and grumble about if we so choose. On the other hand, there are always enough things to be truly thankful for if we try to find them. In the first place, we are alive. That is obvious, but it is by no means to be taken for granted. We have not earned the right to live on this planet even for five short minutes. Every breath of air we inhale, every ounce of energy we exert, and every moment of time we use is a priceless gift from the merciful hand of a loving Heavenly Father. Beyond this, we all have had possibilities and opportunities in our lives which we have the privilege of exploring and developing. And most important of all, we have access to the source of life — the Spirit of God. Complaining is a very harmful pastime. It destroys true happiness, true Christian witnessing, and true peace of soul. Instead of looking for things to complain about, let's look for things to rejoice about.

My First Sermon

As this good month of August comes in and goes on it brings interesting memories of August 1886—seventy-five years ago. I was teaching a little public school at Brown's Baptist Church in Warren County and rooming in Mr. J. L. Rodwell's store, where I had served as a clerk for a year or two. It was in that room that I had definitely made my surrender to preach. When the pastor of the Brown's Baptist Church heard of my decision, he invited me to come over to Warrenton and preach for him on his prayer meeting evening which was Thursday evening. I accepted, went to Warrenton that evening, took my text from Matthew 11:29 — "Learn of Me." I insisted in this first sermon that the great lessons of life are to be learned from Jesus, the Great Teacher. We must learn of God from him; we must learn from him the deeper meaning of life, etc. I have said often since that evening that I have been trying through these 75 years to obey the exhortation of this text and even now that when I enter the Spirit world, I shall have to enter the kindergarten. I am glad, however, that I have long since come to believe that we are going on learning through eternity, or at least in eternity.

I don't think there is any such terminal as to bring us through eternity. My understanding is that the word "eternal" means that which has no beginning and no end. If that be true we are just as much in eternity now as we shall be a thousand years from now. Nor is there any such thing as through eternity. Let us then, adjust ourselves to the task of living as those who are already in eternity.

WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?

Jesus challenges the world by his many-sidedness. He meets the needs of all classes and conditions of men. Call the roll of the world's workers and ask, "What think ye of Christ?" The answers amaze us! To the architect He is the chief cornerstone; to the astronomer, the sun of righteousness; to the baker, the living bread; to the biologist, the life; to the doctor, the great physician; to the geologist, the rock of ages; to the philanthropist, the unspeakable gift; to the servant, a good master. WHAT IS HE TO YOU?

Peace Unit Seeking Guidance

By George W. Cornell

The amateur is sidling up to the "old pro," with the idea that they can work together.

It's a ticklish prospect.

But that's the situation today as the government's eager, fledgling Peace Corps seeks to find its way into world humanitarian service, a field in which the churches already are practiced veterans on a huge scale.

They blazed the trail long ago, and have the know-how.

"Long before the government began to talk about the Peace Corps," says Methodist Bishop Gerald Kennedy of Los Angeles, "the church was doing just such work."

Raises Problem

Both government and church officials see the logic of novices in the business looking to the old hands for guidance. But such teamwork also raises the problem of keeping church and state functions independent.

Some church agencies are welcoming the new government partner, with a promise not to use him for preaching. Others are staying aloof.

The Rev. Dr. Earl S. Erb, head of the United Lutheran Church's Foreign Mission Board, termed it "utterly wrong" for the church to contract to do Peace Corps projects, since Christian evangelizing will be barred in connection with them.

One-Sided Deal

The government, he said, "wants to make use of the existing religious channels to help the corps without allowing the church to proclaim the Gospel, which, after all, is the church's primary mission."

However, the churches already perform much of this mission by plain good works, rather than direct proselytizing.

They've developed elaborate and far-flung machinery for carrying on just the sort of things the Peace Corps wants to do — spreading health, education, technical skills and better living conditions.

Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver wants to draw on this wealth of experience and operational framework to get his recruits trained and working on a sound basis.

Big Reservoir

It's a big, skilled reservoir to draw on, 150 years in the making and involving a vast, bustling network of offices, training centers, warehouses, shipping units, hospitals, schools and other facilities around the globe.

SPEAKER AT ELON COLLEGE

The Rev. Dr. Cecil Robbins, president of Louisburg College, preached the baccalaureate sermon for the summer graduating class at Elon College Sunday, August 20.

Too Hot For Church?

Man, was July HOT! The heat broke all records. Everywhere we went we heard the remark, "It was too hot to go to church Sunday." Was it, really?

Any doctor will tell you that one of the best ways to beat the heat is to RELAX, get your mind on something else. Now, to many folks that means sitting in the most comfortable chair and reading the funnies or a good book. But there are better ways than that to relax on Sunday. Our church is air-conditioned and very comfortable, much cooler than at home or on the beach.

Our summer attendance has been most gratifying, but we could always do better. For the first four Sundays in July we had an average of 203 persons for each worship service. Last year during the same period we had an average of 178.

As we enter into August, help us to keep our attendance up. Why not invite your summer guests to church with you? Why not ask a friend or neighbor, who is unchurched, to come along with you?

Remember, it never gets too hot to go to church! Come to church — you'll receive a lift that will make you forget all about the heat!

Bill Simmons

ONE AGAINST FOUR HUNDRED

The story of Micaiah is the story of one man against four hundred prophets plus two kings. This is a familiar pattern, repeated many times in the history books. Not always, of course, has the solitary person standing against the majority been right. This story is not a justification for mere eccentricity, for mere stubbornness. Not always has the majority been wrong.

Nevertheless, there is a pattern: mankind has gone forward, has found new truth and better ways because here and there solitary individuals have been willing to stand with God and conscience against the "four hundred," against kings and emperors, against the power of the state, against the tyranny of social pressures. Why? Because what God stood for, they had to stand for; because what God told them to say, they had to say; because what God wanted them to do, they had to do.

WHAT IS THE TRPM?

For some time now the letters TRPM have been appearing on our church bulletins, newsletters, etc. What do they mean? Are they really important?

The TRPM is an abbreviation for Teaching, Reaching, Preaching, Mission. This year the TRPM will take the place of our revival meeting. The Mission is a revival, but more than just the old fashioned revival. It is a concentrated program with a three-fold emphasis:

Teaching The Churched — That we who belong to Christ's Fellowship may be more aware of our spiritual potential. This is the "inreach", the awakening of our own people.

Reaching The Unchurched — That we who are members of the church may have a growing concern for those outside the church. This is the "outreach", reaching the lost.

Preaching The Living Word — That we may deepen our commitment to the Lord Jesus Christ and His Church. This is the "upreach."

Great Bridge Messenger

Timothy, Guardian Of The Truth (Temperance)

Background Scripture: Acts 16:1-5; 17:14-15; Philippians 2:19-23; I Timothy 1:1-5; II Timothy 1:1-8; 2:1-5, 22.

Devotional Reading: II Timothy 2:15-26.

Timothy, with the possible exception of the "beloved physician," Luke, was Paul's dearest and closest companion and co-worker. References to Timothy in Acts and Paul's letters make an interesting character study.

A Young Man With A Good Background

Timothy had a good background. We know nothing about his father except that he was a Greek. There is only one reference to his mother, but that tells enough. She was a devout woman, a Jewess, who became a Christian. Paul wrote that he remembered the "unfeigned faith . . . that dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice." A fellow can make out after a fashion if he does not have a good father, but men seldom make out very well if they do not have a good mother. I think it was Emerson who said that if you want to make a good man you must start with his grandparents! He was, of course, emphasizing the importance of heredity. Timothy had a good background. He came from a home in which there was a rich heritage of faith. From a youth he had been trained in the Scriptures. He had been nurtured on faith. He had been conditioned by prayer. Instead of merely one good woman in his life, there had been two good women. What a fortunate young man!

This lesson is being written too late to do much for some readers. They have already trained their children, and they have gone out into the world, with or without a sustaining and steady faith. But for those whose children are young this lesson has point. See to it that your children have something to live for as well as something to live with. Nurture them on faith, and condition them by prayer. Give them a good background and thus give them a good start.

A Young Man With A Good Experience

Timothy lived either in Derbe or Lystra, perhaps in Lystra. When Paul and Barnabas visited that city on their first missionary journey and preached the gospel, Timothy was converted. Perhaps he and his mother became Christians at the same time.

In any event, this young man committed himself to Jesus Christ and became a life-long follower of Christ. How important that is — that young people should face Christ's claim on their lives, respond to his call, and commit themselves to his service. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," wrote the wise man of old. The Sunday school and the church ought to evangelize the young people of the community. All too many young people pass through the strategic age of decision without ever having made the most important decision they will ever have to make. Statistics show that an overwhelming majority of people who become Christians do so before the age of twenty-one, indeed most of them before the age of eighteen. In every community the fields are white unto harvest among youth.

A Young Man With A Good Reputation

Timothy was probably a good sort of fellow before he was converted. In any event, he had an excellent reputation, when Paul revisited Lystra on his second missionary journey. "Behold a certain disciple was there, named Timothy . . . which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium." (Acts 16:1,3.) This may have a double meaning: it may mean simply that Timothy had a good reputation; or it may mean that the folks in his home town recognized his ability and recommended him to Paul as a young fellow who would make a good minister or missionary. In either case there is a lesson here. A young man with a good reputation! There is, of course, a difference between reputation and character. But after all reputation counts. Every young man ought to be very careful of the kind of reputation he bears in the community. He ought to covet for himself "to be well reported of" by the brethren, by the people of his community.

There is another lesson here. Perhaps one reason why we do not have more young men entering the ministry is because the "brethren" who know fine young men do not "report" them to Christian leaders. It might be that a word of encouragement would go a long way toward getting some fine young people interested in Christian service.

A Young Man With Excellent Preparation

There is no evidence that Timothy went to a seminary to prepare himself for his ministry. Paul simply circumcised him — a concession to the Jews — and took him along with him forthwith. But few young men ever had better preparation for the ministry than did Timothy. What better preparation could a young man have than to be intimately associated with Paul for many years! To hear him preach with prophetic passion and power, to transcribe his letters, to share intimately his fellowship, to hear him pray, to hear him argue with the Judaizer, to live under his influence, to enjoy the contagion of his personality, and to do this over a long period of time — well, if that were not excellent preparation for the ministry, one wonders what is. All this is not to discount the value or place of college and seminary training in training young men for the ministry in our modern world. It is simply to emphasize the importance of personality on personality. Let me say again that my association with Dr. Staley for ten years, an intimate association, was by far the most important factor in my preparation for the ministry. How much I owe to that good and great man, nobody, not even myself, knows!

A Young Man With A Successful Career

Timothy was a good minister of Jesus Christ. He was Paul's "right hand man," his "trouble shooter." He stuck with Paul through thick and thin. He held responsible positions in the Church. Paul pays a great tribute

Furnish A Room As A Memorial

Dear Friends:

Among the friends of our Home for Children, there may be those who would like to establish a memorial for a loved one or to honor someone they admire.

We believe there could be no better way to do this than through providing furnishings for rooms in the new cottages. Each contribution received for this purpose will be greatly appreciated and appropriately recognized.

The cost of furnishing each cottage is $3,670.45. It consists of: Bedrooms 1 and 2 — two beds each — $282.05 each; Bedroom 3 — four beds — $658.55; Bedrooms 4 and 5 — one bed each — $213.00 each; Bedrooms 6 and 7 — two beds each — $282.05 each; Cottage Mother's Room — $260.00; Living Room — $687.80; Dining Room — $454.00.

We invite those who are interested in this wonderful way of honoring someone to write us for further information. We will be happy to cooperate in every way possible.

Other friends remember our Home for Children with bequests in their wills. When the will of Mr. Jule Pace, a life-long member of Mt. Zion Congregational Christian Church (N. C.-Va. Conference), was probated, it was found that he had left one-fourth of his estate to the Home for Children.

Mr. Pace passed away in September, 1960.

We received the bequest, which amounted to $2,938.22, in April of this year and placed it in the Bequest Fund for use in a special way to improve the Home's facilities.

We wonder if you have made your will and have remembered our Convention work in some way. It includes many worthy causes, such as missions, Moonelon, the Convention office, our College, and our Children's Home. We hope you will give them your consideration.

Rev. Walstein Snyder of our Home for Children preached at Apple's Chapel last Sunday.

With Annuity One Can Give and Still Have Income

A gift annuity, sometimes called a "conditional gift," makes it possible for one to help his mission board and, at the same time, receive a steady income as long as he — and possibly some others — shall live.

Associated with the General Synod of the United Church of Christ are many agencies, boards, institutions and instrumentalities which are prepared to accept a gift of cash, stocks, bonds or property and with such receipt enter into an agreement with the donor to provide him with a lifetime income at a set amount year after year depending on his age and that of any others who may be the recipients of such income after his demise.

In this way one gets a steady income without the problems of management and supervision, while the board or institution ultimately receives a gift when the agreement is finally ended. And that gift spells health, education, relief, church extension, evangelism and service according to your desires.

Children Singing "America the Beautiful" Stir Moving Vision in an Old Newsman

By Constantine Brown

A few days ago this reporter sat at lunch with another reporter and three little children ranging in age from four to nine. The little ones in unison recited a simple little blessing when their food arrived, a non-denominational, fervent prayer that could as properly be offered by a Moslem or a Jew, as by any Christian.

They did this in a public restaurant, quietly enough so that few seated at tables nearby would know. They began together, without suggestion by any adult, and without self-consciousness. Then, like healthy kids anywhere at any time they tackled their meal with enthusiasm, albeit with politeness.

But that was only the beginning of what seemed to a well-seasoned old writer to be a memorable occasion. A little while later, when the small ones had completed their dessert and milk, they offered another contribution to spirituality and to the soul, if you will, that moved our companion, himself an "old hand" at reporting the news and certainly no sentimentalist, to tears.

Real tears. Not perhaps, entirely unashamed tears, in a sense, because no grown man is fond of such a public display of emotion. So deep was his feeling that he clasped his hands to his head and bowed it low for a moment, perhaps the better to mask his open yielding to his inner self and its loves.

Almost no one nearby, however, noted the little tableau at our table. They did not, many of them, hear what caused this reaction from a veteran newsman with years of experience in a world of cynicism, double-talk, dubious loyalties, self-seeking, and intrigues.

The children, in bewilderment, wondered why he should weep. He reassured them that they were not the reason; it was only, he said, that the song they had sung had brought back to him, in a few lines, all the wonderful things he felt about his homeland.

The small ones had sung one verse of "America the Beautiful."

When the childish harmony (suitably low-pitched, as befits public singing in grown-ups' restaurants) smoothed out along "How beautiful for spacious skies, for amber waves of grain; For purple mountains' majesty above thy fruited plain..." I saw my friend melt. When the chorus came, he was unable for another instant to repress his response. He wept.

After a few moments he straightened, smiled at the youngsters, thanked them for their singing and praised them for their skill. They gravely acknowledged, explaining that this song was one they learned to sing in school along with others, and that the two older ones explained its words to the little one, who was not yet enrolled at a seat of learning.

Then, when the children were occupied with another ice-cream pie, he apologized to me for the incident. Not in years, he said, had he felt so suddenly and so overpoweringly swept with love of his country, its sweep, its beauty, its nobility. Yes, he added, probably every man loves his motherland like that, and there is no reason to weep with the emotion.

"But I'm too close to it all. Every day in my field of interest, covering international affairs and the business of politics, seeing the dangers, the threats, the contrived enmity, the blunders. All of a sudden the sound of these little voices overwhelmed me with the magnitude of our heritage..."

"In a rush I saw the mountains and the prairies and the rivers; I saw the pioneers and the mountain men, the Jeffersons and the Lincolns, the vast spaces of the deserts, the resounding phrases of the Declaration of Independence and the Gettysburg Address — all these and much more in one blinding vision... All this because three little children, the future of our country, put their voices together in song as though to tell the world that all this I saw was not to be swept away..."

This reporter understood. There was no reason to explain. Probably both of us spent the next few minutes reflecting on the majesty of a simple chorus: "America, America, God shed His grace on thee, and crown thy good with brotherhood, from sea to shining sea."

In Washington Evening Star

FREELAND

"There is no death! The stars go down To rise upon some fairer shore, And bright, in heaven's jeweled crown They shine for evermore."

And so it is with Mrs. Joseph Freeland. She was one of God's "stars" set in earthly places. She was on the "shut-in" list of the Women's Fellowship of the First Congregational Christian Church, Burlington. It had not always been so. She served many active years in this missionary arm of the church, and was a member of this local church for 40 years. Time had closed the doors of her ears and age dimmed the vision of her eyes, but neither time nor age took from her face the beauty of the light within her soul. That reached out to others beyond all her limited environment.

For eighty-eight years she walked this earth, until July 31, when she stepped over the threshold into her Father's house. At last she was "Home." From the silence of earthly sounds her ears now heard angel voices, from the dimness of earthly sight she beheld Him whom she had served. We shall miss this dear "shut-in."

The Women's Fellowship extends its deepest sympathy to the loved ones and friends of Mrs. Joseph H. Freeland.

"And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life — there is no dead!"

to him when he writes that he had no man likeminded who will naturally care for your state. For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's. Timothy was not looking out for "Number One." He was not looking out for prestige or power, but for a place of service. In Paul's letters there is abundant evidence that this young man lived in such a way that the ministry was not blamed. Timothy probably never made much money, but he was rich in faith and character and good works.

Except Buchanan, all Presidents of the United States were married. Those married twice were Tyler, Fillmore, Benjamin Harrison, Theodore Roosevelt, and Wilson. Washington, Madison, Jackson, Buchanan and Harding had no children. John Adams was the father of a president, and William Henry Harrison was the grandfather of one.

CALL TO WORSHIP

LITANY OF PRAYER (Seated)

Leader: O thou great Shepherd of our souls, we need thee to guide us into the paths of peace and unto the places of deep quietness.

Group: Lead us beside the still waters.

Leader: O Lord, thou knowest how sorely we are beset on every side by the pressures of modern life. "The world is too much with us, getting and spending we lay waste our powers."

Group: O thou great Shepherd of our souls, lead us beside the still waters.

Leader: O Lord, we confess unto thee our lack of peace within: the disturbing conflict between our ideals and our actions, the haunting sense of guilt for our sins and failures, the discords and dissonances that agitate and disturb the harmony of our lives.

Group: O thou who art our Shepherd and our Guide, lead us beside the still waters.

Leader: O Lord, by thy grace forgive us our tenseness and nervousness, our quick irritability and our explosive angers.

Group: O Shepherd, who knowest all our needs, lead us beside the still waters.

Leader: O Lord, fill us just now with a strange inner quietness, hush our spirits into the calm of tranquil waters, and let the miracle of the peace of God which passeth all understanding quietly enter every heart.

Group: O loving Shepherd, lead us beside the still waters and now in thy presence help us to be still and know that thou art God.

*MEDITATION:

GOD CREATES AND RENEWS THE CHURCH THROUGH US

In the "Statement of Faith" of the United Church of Christ, we have this great phrase: "He bestows upon us His Holy Spirit, creating and renewing the Church of Jesus Christ."

As spiritual leaders in our churches, we have the crucial responsibility of receiving this Holy Spirit that God bestows upon us. Unless we are willing to receive it and pass it on, the chances are that our church will miss this great power that creates and renews. I'm sure that everyone of us sees the need in our churches for a deeper commitment and a more vital faith. We all realize that too often our church slips back into patterns of thought and action that stress the importance of such things as money raising projects for its own needs and perhaps securing new members for its own satisfaction. Fred D. Wentzel said in his book, Once There Were Two Churches, "There are always two churches, that is, two kinds of churches. One kind turns its eyes inward, is primarily concerned about itself as an organization, tests its success mainly by increases in membership and money raised for its own use. The other kind turns its eyes outward, is primarily concerned about the life of the community, tests its success mainly by the contribution it can make to the growth of brotherhood."

We know in our hearts that the main business of our churches is religion. But religion is never just a technique for self-improvement. We do not say as we pray to God, "O God, make me better so I will keep out of trouble." The real purpose of religion is to tie us to God — to connect us to God so that we can work for him. And real religion ties God to us so he can work through us. Frank Laubach tells of a picture of Christ by Forrest Musser. One hand is lifted up toward the sky, the other hand is reaching down toward needy people at his feet. Dr. Laubach goes on to say: "That is perfect; just as Christ becomes God's bridge to lost humanity, we at our best become God's bridge to achieve his purposes."

Children's poetry so often reveals the profoundest truth. Here, for example, is a poem that the children know, but the older people have usually forgotten:

"He has no hands but my hands
To do His work today.
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men on His way.
He has no tongue but our tongue
To tell men how He died,
He has no help but our help
To bring them to His side."

In another place, Dr. Laubach says that we as leaders must become pipe-lines so that the power of the Holy Spirit will flow through us and recreate and renew our church.

One of the most startling things Jesus ever said was said to Peter; "I give you the keys to the kingdom. Whatever you loose on earth will be loosed in heaven. Whatever you bind on earth will be bound in heaven." This is a terrifying responsibility when you understand it. It applies to us just as it did to Peter. Everyone who is exposed to the truth of Christ holds the key for other people. The more you think about it, the more alarming it becomes. We have to bring the truth to them or they will never get it.

It may be that we feel lost ourselves so that we are incapable of helping other people. In India there is an ancient parable which might easily have been in the Bible. A man in hell held up his hands to God and implored Him to lift him out. So God let down a huge carrot out of heaven to hell. The man grasped the leaves, but as he was being pulled out of hell people grabbed his feet and held on. A great pyramid of people was building up below him. The man looked down and was terrified. He said, "This carrot will break if these people hang on to me." He gave a vicious kick, and the carrot broke. He and all the other people fell back into hell."

If you feel as I do as you face this uncomfortable thought, you will want to say with me, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner. I have failed to open the door for others. I have lack zeal for others. I have been concerned mostly about not getting lost myself." This points to the fact that the gravest sins we have ever committed are sins of omission — of what we did not do, of what we left undone for others.

In this life we are all very inefficient apprentices. But we are being trained to become master workmen and fellow workers with Christ in his vast enterprise. Our obligation in our church is to do every task before us as well as we can. Dr. Laubach tells of a settlement house called "Do Ye the Next Thing." If we do the next thing well and unselfishly, that is all God expects of us. In fact, our work with God is extremely simple. It is hard, but it is simple. It is keeping open toward God and keeping open toward people and doing the next thing that comes to be done the very best we know how. We need to keep asking God, "Who needs me next, Father?"

Isaiah 6 records a wonderful vision in which he saw the Lord, "High and lifted up on a throne." And he heard a voice saying, "Whom shall I send? Who will go for us?" And Isaiah answered, "Here am I; send me." That is what God is looking for. People who will pray until God speaks and then will say, "Here am I, send me."

Let us turn to the inspiring and soul searching "Statement of Faith" of the United Church and read it with the spirit of these words. "Here am I, send me."

Here And There Among The Churches

Seventeen young people from Rosemont, South Norfolk, will be attending college this fall.

Offering of $14.26 from the vacation church school sharing program at First, Norfolk, went to the John Milton Society for the blind.

Chaplain James Little was the guest minister at First, Norfolk, August 13 and 20. The editor appreciates the willingness of Mr. Little to take the service August 20, when hospitalization for tests prevented Mr. Lester's preaching there as planned.

A church library project is underway at Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur. A number of books have been donated as memorial gifts. Printed labels will designate the donor. A wise reminder, "If you would like to give books to the library, please see the library committee."

Bethlehem church in the Virginia Valley Conference is sharing in the United Clothing Appeal, with good used clothing being brought to the church for preparation for shipment overseas. The bulletins at Bethlehem for August are provided by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rhodes.

Rev. Dolan Talbert of Pleasant Grove church in the Western North Carolina Conference is preaching each evening this week at 7:45 in the Smithwood Church, near Liberty, where Rev. Thomas Liverman is pastor. Last week half-hour "cottage prayer meetings" were held in ten homes in the community in preparation for the week of special services.

John Halstead of Rosemont church, South Norfolk, is the new president of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention.

Rev. Winfred Bray began his fall pastor's class at Union Ridge August 20. For five Sundays during the church school hour he is meeting with those interested in church membership.

This week Rev. Reuben S. Askew, Jr., of Pleasant Hill, Liberty, is preaching each evening at Pleasant Ridge, near Ramseur, where Rev. Lynwood Hubbard is the pastor.

A planning session for the church school of First, Portsmouth, was held August 22 at the home of T. C. Mountcastle, with members of the Christian Education committee and Sunday school officers and teachers present.

"And the Wind Blew Softly" was the sermon topic for Rev. Walstein Snyder at Apple's Chapel August 20. Speaker for last Sunday there was Dalton Harper, lay member of First, Greensboro.

Giving credit for increased attendance to the planning for the teaching-reaching-preaching mission, the Union Ridge Bulletin for August 20 states that the attendance for the preceding Sunday was the highest ever recorded during the summer months: Church School — 246 and 16 visitors as against 188 and 6 visitors a year ago; Church Worship — 249 instead of 231 in 1960. Six cottage prayer services are being held in preparation for the TRPM on August 20, 27, and September 3.

Goals of First, Portsmouth, are: 100 in attendance on Worldwide Communion Sunday; 10% increase in Sunday school by the end of the year; 10 new members of the church by January 1.

The Pan-American Union, Washington 6, D. C., will provide a free packet of materials on Latin American countries. This will be helpful in the current world mission study on Latin America.

For three Wednesday evenings (September 20, 27 and October 4) the Rosemont church will have "A School of Prayer." This will precede the Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission October 6-12 at which Superintendent Clyde Fields will be the guest speaker.

Louis Wilkins, Southern Convention representative under the United Church Board for World Ministries in Turkey, left his home in Lennig, Virginia, August 25, for a meeting in Boston. He flies from Boston to Zurich, Switzerland, today and continues on to Turkey August 31.

By vote of the membership, beginning next Sunday First United Church of Christ, Liberty, North Carolina, will have church school at 9:45 a.m. on first, third and fifth Sundays, while on the second and fourth Sundays the worship service will begin at 9:45 and will be followed by church school.

"The Valley of the Dry Bones" was the sermon topic for Rev. Glenn Garrett at Mt. Zion August 20. Last Sunday evening a special service was held at this church for the installation of officers of the Women's Fellowship.

OPEN HOUSE AT SHENROCK PARSONAGE

"Open House" was held last Sunday afternoon at the new parsonage of the Shenrock Parish of the United Church of Christ in the Valley of Virginia, where Rev. Bland Leebrick and his family are newly located.

The parsonage was recently purchased by Bethlehem church. It is an eight-room brick house, with a full basement, an attic and carport, located on highway 260 West, four blocks from Main Street in New Market.

Churches composing the Shenrock Parish are Bethlehem, Wissler's Chapel and Wood's Chapel.

An ice cream and cake supper was sponsored by the Young Adult Class of the Albemarle church August 19. It was unique in that no charge was made, but "donations will be accepted and appreciated."

Special services were held August 14-18 at Northview church, near Sanford, where Rev. William Joyner is pastor. Guest ministers were Rev. Grant Burns of Randleman on Monday and Tuesday and Rev. James Jackson of Clanton Park, Charlotte, Thursday and Friday, with the pastor doing the preaching on Wednesday.

"KICK OFF" BANQUET FOR TRPM AT ASHEBORO E. AND R.

Thomas F. Liverman

The "kick off" banquet for the Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission in the Western North Carolina Conference was held August 4 in the First Evangelical and Reformed Church in Asheboro. A delicious meal was served to 50 key laymen from seven churches. Meeting in the only E. and R. church in the area created a feeling of unity for this our first United Church effort.

Superintendent Clyde Fields brought greetings from the Convention Office and wished us Godspeed in our program. Dr. William T. Scott gave an inspiring address, which was a challenge to each one to make evangelism a vital part of his life. We feel that as a result of this meeting the TRPM program for the Western N. C. Conference has been launched most successfully.

Regional officers for the program are: Rev. T. F. Liverman, Liberty, chairman; Rev. Garland Bennett, Ramseur, vice chairman; and Rev. Don Leonard, Asheboro, secretary. They form the executive committee to make further plans.

THINGS WE KNOW

For one period of Bible study at the Ministers' Wives Retreat, Mrs. Guy Benchoff used the following Bible references, each of which contains the phrase "I Know." Divided into small groups, each group read one verse aloud, then everyone acknowledged his belief in that by saying "I know."

The references are: Job 23:3a; Daniel 11: 32b; Romans 8:28; II Corinthians 8:9; Ephesians 3:17-19; II Timothy 1:12; I John 3:14; and Job 19:25.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT BIG OAK

Maurine Morrison

Revival services were held at Big Oak church, near Eagle Springs, N. C., August 6-12. Rev. Lacy Presnell, pastor-at-large for the Western North Carolina Conference, was the visiting minister. A picnic lunch was served Sunday, and on Friday evening a picnic supper was served on the tables in the grove.

The messages each evening, the souls who were saved, and the fellowship together make us feel that we are really "revived" again.

We were happy to have Mrs. Presnell and our pastor's wife Mrs. Fogleman, to attend each evening.

FROM FORMER PASTORS

Greetings To Winston-Salem Church

Dr. W. M. Jay

Among the notes of congratulations received in connection with the new Winston-Salem church building was one from Virginia Jay Pizer, daughter of Dr. William M. Jay, a former pastor of this church. Since those days Mrs. Jay has died, and we are saddened to learn that Dr. Jay has suffered five light and one severe strokes. He is a guest at Pope's Convalescent Home, Rt. 3, Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Pitzer writes, "He is still a wonderful person, and his good life follows him yet. Even strangers notice a radiance about him that is rare. . . He knows people on sight and enjoys the conversation of others, but can't join in, for words simply won't come to him. . . It is very pitiful, but he is the darling of all who know him."

Mrs. Pitzer adds: "Because I know so well how proud both Mother and Dad would be of the wonderful progress made by the people of your church, please let me express for them

LAY PREACHERS IN VERMONT

The Vermont Congregational Conference is sponsoring a training program for lay-ministers. It consists of eight week-end meetings over a two-year period, including 40 sessions. Courses include Bible study, preaching and sermon evaluation, parish organization, pastoral calling, youth work and the church school, theology, Congregational history, lay-ministerial ethics.

Plans for this have been developed by a sub-committee of the Conference committee on the ministry. (From Churchmen's Fellowship)

Last Saturday the young people's class of Carolina church raised money by washing cars and serving a barbecue lunch. Proceeds are to go to Laura Jane Murray, 16-year-old member of their church who is to have a spinal operation. She has been a patient at the Children's Orthopedic Hospital at Gastonia for several years and now is to undergo an operation in Texas. According to Doris Pender, reporter, the church and the family request prayers in her behalf as she tries to regain normal health.

and in their memory my sincerest and kindest congratulations. May God continue to bless you all and your work in His Kingdom. Please remember us, the Jays, to any who know us with our very best wishes . . . I'm sure Dad would add his blessing and more to all I've tried to say."

The Rev. and Mrs. Richards

The Rev. and Mrs. Will Richards, a former interim pastor of this church, send their hearty congratulations from Cambridge, Nebraska. Mr. Richards says it would have been one of the high moments of his life if he could have been here for the Consecration Service. Mr. Richards, now in his eighties, has been hindered of late in his preaching ministry with an eye ailment. We can't think of any one we would like more to have had with us than these two great persons!

Dr. "Chuck" Richards, their son, has now moved to Chieng Mai, Thailand, where the new medical school is located. He seems to be making progress in his mission.

Responsible Laborers

Labor Day next Monday may not be a holiday for all workers, but there should be time found by each of us to consider our responsibility as workers.

When labor organizations began there was real need for employers to give consideration to those who worked for them. Wages were frightfully low. Much housing was not fit for human habitation. Jobs were at the mercy of employers. Health hazards were terrible in many instances. Sick benefits were almost unknown. Payments after retirement were not considered. Workers were machines to be used for profit and discarded when no profit could be secured.

Those days are gone from the American scene, for which we all are exceedingly grateful.

Today's problems are quite the contrary. It is generally reported, and difficult to doubt, that young people seeking jobs these days inquire in this fashion: How much does it pay? What are the retirement allowances? How much vacation? What are the sick benefits? How many hours per week? There is no question as to what is to be accomplished, what the purpose of the operation is, how much the worker can contribute to the industry, or whatever the work may be.

Out of such thinking grows a continuing demand for higher wages and increasing fringe benefits, and strikes that may cripple the entire life of a nation. Strikes at Cape Canaveral, where there is supposed to be a rush to reach into outer space before our nation is destroyed "from above" by those who now outdistance us in this phase of military preparation, is a blistering illustration of this lack of responsibility on the part of laborers. Another illustration is found along the wharves where ships that need to be busy in commerce to keep the nation alive are sometimes stranded by striking laborers — or perhaps it is more accurate to say "labor unions." To an outsider who does not know all the details of the inner workings of the unions or the places of construction and business, there seems to be an utter disregard for what may happen to the nation or the world. This, it seems to us, is exceedingly dangerous.

Laws may be passed, and "cooling off" periods may be enforced, but all such is secondary to the importance of right thinking on the part of people who work. If the daily wage is the only reason for labor, then the welfare of the nation may be forgotten. This, however, may destroy the possibility of the daily wage. There is a type of selfishness that kills itself. If laborers feel that they are contributing something of great value to the people of the world, then they have reason for being responsible in their jobs, for doing honest work, for keeping the wheels of industry moving. Without this desire to serve, this knowledge that their work is important, that doing a job is important in itself, and even that sacrifice is sometimes necessary, workers fail in their responsibility to the world in which they live.

Would it be shocking to say that teaching in this field is the business of the Church? Much has been said in recent centuries about the needs of poor working people. Food, clothes and shelter have been provided where needed — or at least an attempt has been made to do it. A benevolent government and an enlightened industrial leadership have gone far to change the conditions and to fulfill these needs. Now something needs to be said to those who work, and to the coming generation of workers. "Man does not live by bread alone." The take home pay is still important, but if the worker has not earned it by responsible labor, it is not rightfully his. Furthermore, in an interrelated world like ours, careless workmanship may cause dangerous difficulties not only in the manufacture of automobiles or the building of houses but also in the realm of politics and statesmanship as well. Religion could be added. Ministers, teachers, and members who do shoddy work will find the results quite unsatisfactory, and possibly destructive of human life and spirits. It is to the faithful, the good laborers, that commendation will be given by the Good Master at the end of the age. They are the builders with a foundation on rock.

Schools

School is a word being used often these days. Public schools vs. private schools; community schools, state schools, church schools; community, state and national support of schools; white, colored, integrated schools; grade schools, colleges, universities; poor schools, quality schools; tax for schools, loans for schools, scholarships for students; where are you going to school? When?

All such discussion is going on in American homes and wherever people meet. Little wonder, for within a few days more than 37 million American children will spent part of each day in schoolrooms. Colleges will be flooded with young people seeking enrollment.

Everybody who eats in North Carolina now pays school tax. Citizens are being bombarded with the idea of quality education. Records seem to indicate that in the area of the Southern Convention there is real room for improvement in education. The Christian Sun would like to be numbered among those who gladly give support to all those things that enlighten the mind and temper the soul. We would like to suggest that parents encourage their children to learn, that pupils seek delight in the search for knowledge rather than in play, and that teachers try a little harder this year to be worthy of their profession. With such team work there is no doubt but what this school year will bring happiness and success to all — parents, pupils, teachers, tax-payers, government agencies, everyone.

Be A Church Builder

The North Carolina Church Builders Club is closing at the end of August its call for St. Mark's United Church of Christ in Greensboro. The fine people of that church are worthy of recognition and help. They are a new church group; they are working hard to establish a church of our united denomination; they need the help that ten dollars from many people will give. If you have not sent your membership dues for this church, please do so immediately. There must be at least 5,000 members of our more than 100 churches that could give ten dollars each. Please do. Be a church builder. You will like the feeling.

SWEDEN AND THE UNITED STATES

While a few political opportunists at home and a host of political enemies abroad greatly exaggerate what they call the low prestige of the United States in other lands, Sweden is never brought into this unfortunate international gossip. There are many reasons for this.

Sweden was the first of the neutral European countries to recognize the independence of the United States, also the first nation to conclude a treaty with this country. In 1783, Benjamin Franklin, printer, inventor, weather prophet, negotiator and diplomat, negotiated a treaty of "peace, amity and commerce" with Sweden, and this treaty became the model for subsequent commercial accords. That historic document contains the original phrase, "the most favored nation," as it refers to the United States.

But although Franklin was a genius in making mutually beneficial treaties with countries, in the case of Sweden it was not a difficult task because of the well-laid foundation of goodwill between the two countries. During the American Revolution, Sweden, although technically neutral, was friendly to the American cause, even to the extent that a number of brilliant Swedish officers took part in the memorable struggle.

Another evidence of this mutual relation between the United States and Sweden is the number of Swedes living in the United States. In 1638 when New Sweden was set up as a colony on the banks of the Christina River, a tributary of the Delaware, and a small fort was built on land where Wilmington, Delaware, is now located, the primary purpose was to obtain for Sweden a share in the West Indian trade and not to gain an official foothold in the new land.

Although the colony set up by the Swedes maintained its independence for only 17 years, the influence of Sweden in the United States has been increasingly important for more than 300 years. There are more than 1,500,000 Swedes in this country, and Chicago has so many that it is rated as the third largest Swedish city in the world.

The Swedish government, a limited monarchy, actually is one of the most democratic in Europe and its political, social and economic program has so paralleled that of the United States that the two countries have always enjoyed most cordial relations.

A high-light of this friendly relationship was the issuing in May 1938 by the United States Post Office Department of a commemorative stamp honoring the third centenary of the landing of the Swedes in this country. On that occasion, too, Sweden's Crown Prince and Crown Princess and other Swedish dignitaries were given a most cordial welcome by the many American cities which they visited.

Aside from mutual understanding and cooperation, through the years there has also been a mutual exchange of talent between the United States and Sweden. Among the outstanding Swedish personalities to exhibit talent a century ago in this country was Jenny Lind, called "the Swedish nightingale," who toured the United States in 1850-52, under the management of P. T. Barnum of show fame, charming vast audiences with her golden voice. She became so well known and so famous as a singer that she is often referred to as an American.

Sweden is a good example of what a people can do when permitted to work out their destinies with other peaceful nations. It is also an example of a nation that believes more in international goodness than international gossip.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

Silence — Golden?

"I held my peace, even from good; and my sorrow was stirred."
Psa. 39:2.

From that verse I take it that there are times when one should speak up. Silence was not so golden.

It would seem that the writer was especially cautious with what he might say: "I said I will take heed to my ways that I sin not with my tongue. I will keep my mouth with a bridle." Oftentime that is a most excellent resolution.

It is one often made after one has spoken hastily. "Peter not knowing what to say said . . . !" Sometime knowing not what to say we speak in anger or fear.

In this text the man was leaning over backward, he was going too far. The word of God is replete with commands to speak out. God's messengers are sent with his message. God's messengers are told to voice his praise. With our hearts we are to repent and believe, with our lips we are to say so.

Everywhere we are to witness for him. "Ye are my witnesses to the ends of the earth."

Some good deed needs recognition, some good work is suffering for lack of commendation, some person is wrongly accused and needs a reliable witness to stand by him, some ugly rumor needs spiking — there are right ways of speaking out, and at the right time and place. Holding your peace, even from good, is going to give you a troubled conscience, if you should have spoken out.

The word of thanksgiving to God is always in place, the word of commendation to some courageous person for some exceptional act of good is well spoken, some bit of sympathy or understanding or counsel may "save the day," or make a new day, and a better destination for some young or weary traveler. "I held my peace . . . my sorrow was stirred."

Sometimes one of the most courageous things you can do is to speak up. May the Holy Spirit teach us as God's servants what to say, and when, and where.

Franklin Women Report Good Year

Mrs. B. V. Hargrove

The close of 1960-'61 Franklin Women's Fellowship proceedings is at hand. Reviewing the year's work we entertain both a sense of satisfaction in our achievements and a desire to improve our status as an arm of the Convention Women's work in the future.

The Fellowship's slate of officers, with Mrs. J. A. Nicholas as president, was newly installed at the year's outset. All officers have served efficiently in their various positions on the Executive Board. The four circles, newly regrouped at the same time, followed readily the outline laid out for them at the monthly circle and quarterly Fellowship meetings.

On the Spiritual Life agendum were: Bible study, "Luke's Portrait of Christ" which was taught to circle groups; special emphasis on an every member Family Altar campaign; participation in interdenominational World Day of Prayer in the Franklin community; devotional exercises at all meetings and most interesting characterizations of Convention planned Fellowship programs.

We should like especially to highlight the World Day of Prayer as observed in our town on a different plan from the usual one, since by unanimous approval it was much more effective and inspirational than formerly. The host church was open to worshipers from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. with a continuous service during the day, each participating women's church group conducting, in turn, parts of the program. Groups or worshipers in single file entered and departed at will. One could not fail to feel a spiritual togetherness nor leave without an impression of peace within for having joined, without ceremony and formality, in this great world-wide movement. There was by far a better attendance and larger offering on this day than ever before on similar occasions.

The home mission study book, "Heritage and Horizons in Home Missions" was presented by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman. Due to her broad contacts in and knowledge of the field, however, Mrs. Wisseman enlarged upon and clarified the subject matter as laid down in the book. With invited groups from neighboring churches there were about 200 who heard and enjoyed the review. Guest speaker at our Thank Offering Service was Dr. Sheldon Mackey. We were indeed privileged to have this outstanding man on this occasion; such was the response and interest of his audience that the offering received was the largest in the Fellowship's history. To the C. M. A. which met in the Franklin church in December, we donated the sum of $50.00. Too, we made a liberal gift to aid in the rehabilitation of an Italian family along with other Friendly Services.

Our Christmas projects, besides the usual efforts to spread seasonal peace and good will in the church at large, were in the form of gifts to all church shut-ins and the donation of several nice boxes to the county's unfortunate folk through the welfare agency.

Good representations were in attendance at the District Rally, Women's Conference, School of Missions and the Southern Convention. Some were also present at the May Fellowship meeting in Holland. Splendid reports were brought back to us from these sessions.

Special care and attention was also given to local church needs such as cleaning, altar flowers for worship services, suppers for the young people, nursery supervision and the purchase of new kitchen equipment. The last completed project was the repairing and redecoration of the parsonage bath-room.

Even while we have shared in these and other tasks and pleasures we have worked on plans for next year's program which will be directed under the same leadership as was this year's. Under such excellent guidance and with continued cooperation of our women, we believe that another successful year lies just ahead for the Franklin Women's Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Church.

Small town in southeastern part of Turkey. Half of the dozen Protestant churches in Turkey are in the Mardin area. Institutions: Reading Room.

- 3—Charles A. Farrand is a teacher of English at the American School for Boys, Talas. He was appointed to a three-year term after his graduation from college in 1959.
- 4—Walter B. Gulick was appointed in 1960 to teach mathematics to junior high boys in the Talas school. He is a descendent of American Board missionaries to Hawaii and Turkey.
- 5—Mr. and Mrs. James A. Johnson are stationed at American School for Boys, Talas. He teaches mathematics and English and she teaches music. For the last two summers they have directed ecumenical work-camps in Turkey.
- 6—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keller came to Turkey on three-year terms in 1955, and have since become career missionaries. Mr. Keller is interested in counseling and guidance, and hopes to begin a counseling program for the students of the Talas school, where he and his wife both teach.
- 7—William C. Ludwig teaches English in the Talas school. Mr. Ludwig's extracurricular activities include teaching English to adults in Kayseri, and advising school clubs.
- 8—Miss Yukio Nakajima, of Kyoto, Japan, is serving three years as a nurse in the Talas Clinic. Although her family is Japanese, Miss Nakajima was born in the Philippines, where her father, a minister, was serving a Japanese Christian church.
- 9—Dr. and Mrs. William L. Nute were made missionaries emeriti of the American Board in 1960, after 52 years of service in Turkey. Mrs. Nute, daughter of missionaries to Turkey, began teaching at the Tarsus school in 1911, while Mr. Nute came to Tarsus as a short-term teacher in 1914. After their marriage Mr. Nute studied medicine in the U. S. From 1933 until their retirement in 1959, the Nutes were at the Talas Clinic, where Mrs. Nute aided her husband in medical work and worked with church groups.

Women's Fellowship Dinner At Greensboro

Mrs. O. H. Paris

The First Church, Greensboro, Women's Fellowship closed the year with its annual stewardship supper meeting on August 7, 1961.

Mrs. W. H. Duncan, Christian Stewardship Chairman, had charge of the program, which had for its theme "Servants in the Service of Men," or "The What, the Why and the How of Christian Service." Mrs. Donovan Darnell spoke briefly, but beautifully, on that subject, pointing out what Christian service is, why we should serve, and how we must give ourselves in this service.

Mrs. Duncan explained that during the past biennium our Life Membership and Memorial Fund had been allocated for Christian Higher Education, using a wall chart to show the proportionate part that goes to the Southern Convention, to the Board of Home Missions and to the American Board. With appropriate remarks she then presented Life Memberships to ten of the faithful members of the Fellowship and Memorials to the families of two of our number who had passed away during the year.

New circles were announced, and Mrs. T. W. Madren of Hines Chapel church, Chairman of the Greensboro District, closed the meeting with a lovely service of dedication for the new officers. Mrs. W. M. Alexander was installed as the new President and Mrs. John Taylor as Vice President. The Vice President will also serve as program chairman for the next two years.

During the service Mrs. W. M. Blakey, the retiring President, was recognized for the faithful, loyal service rendered during her six years as President. Mrs. O. H. Paris, speaking for the women of the Fellowship, pointed out that not only had Margaret Blakey made a valuable contribution to her local Fellowship and church, but she had also served well at the District and Conference level. Her talents and ability have been recognized there, where she has filled places of leadership and trust. Truly she had known and demonstrated the What, the Why and the How of Christian service.

As a token of the esteem in which Mrs. Blakey is held and in appreciation for these years of service, a beautiful silver bowl was presented to her on which were appropriate words of engraving.

Asheboro District Women Meet

By Mrs. S. H. Pell

Representatives of the Women's Fellowship, Asheboro District, met at the Pleasant Ridge fellowship hall, Thursday, August 10, at 7:30 p.m., when the district chairman, Mrs. S. H. Pell, conducted a workshop on the materials to be studied during the coming year.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Pell. Mrs. Lynwood Hubbard presided over the register, and, in keeping with the Latin American foreign study theme, Susan Pell and Lola Wright presented each guest with a flower for her hair. Guests were directed to the refreshment tables, where they were served punch and cookies.

Display tables of literature and information concerning the foreign and home study courses brought much interest and discussion.

Materials for six areas of work were presented as follows: Social Action, Mrs. Street Morgan; Stewardship, Mrs. Lynwood Hubbard; Friendly Service, Mrs. Pell; Spiritual Life, Nora Ellen Teague; Christian Education, Mrs. Garland Bennett; Missionary Education, Emma and Velma Allen, who also presented a short drama, introducing to the audience characters they will meet in their foreign mission study books. Emphasis on the Woman's Gift was presented by Mrs. Pell through a series of flower arrangements with the Woman's Gift box as a focal point as a reminder to everyone to give. The home mission study books, Edge of the Edge and Creating New Churches, were also presented by Mrs. Pell.

Mrs. Walter Hall closed the meeting by presenting the Bible study theme as the closing worship service.

Eleven churches were represented, with a total of 53 present.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

Recently I had occasion to talk informally with four boys from four different churches in the Southern Convention. Their remarks about their home churches, and their concern for them, were illuminating and surprising.

One of them said, "My church is having a lot of trouble. What's wrong with it? You name it, and we have it! People are jealous of one another — pianists, teachers, and other leaders. The minister has done an excellent job in the church and community, but some of the biggest talkers think we should get rid of him. They say, 'If we just get a new minister, everything will be fine.' But I don't think so. The people in our church have to have a new spirit within themselves. Changing preachers won't do any good."

Another boy, listening, said "It's a shame to see a church defeating its own purpose, and that is just what that church is doing. It is really contradicting everything it is supposed to stand for."

A third told me, "Just a little group of people run our church, or that's the way it looks to me. We have grown in membership a lot in the last few years, but the new members are not encouraged to take positions of leadership. If anything is suggested which a little clique doesn't like, it is not tried."

The second boy chimed in again, saying "There was a time when my church had poor attendance. The minister was leaving and in the meantime people just didn't attend. I don't think that's any way to do. Anyhow, now we are all working together and things are going well."

As these and many other comments about their churches were made, a fourth boy who had been listening with amazement on his face, said, "Our church is a fine church. We have a good minister, and have had good ones. We don't have these fears of people of other races coming to our church that some of you have mentioned, because for a long time everyone — no matter what race — has been welcome in our church. I feel sorry for people who have troubles like you have in your churches."

These "kids," as we adults would call them, are really interested in their churches. They want them to be better than they now are. They also have a keen insight into what is happening in them, which would surprise many of us. And although the boy who feels his minister is being unfairly treated by some in the congregation is still planning to enter religious work when he grows up, this adult listener wondered just what effect bickering in our churches, hanging on to old customs while the world about us changes, and using "unfair" methods in "getting rid of" the minister, do to our recruitment for church-related vocations. Let's face it!

AT BAYVIEW Bible School Graduation

By Emili Smalling

I'm late with this, but will let the folks know we are still flowing along with the current of God's work. After a wonderful week of vacation Bible school we had graduation night, August 7, 1961.

The graduation exercise was perfect with perfect attendance. The children loved it, the grown folks enjoyed it and I'm sure Our Father looked down and smiled his approval. Mrs. Pegram, the lady with her ten talents, was mistress of ceremonies.

At the conclusion of the exercises, diplomas were handed to each graduate and then — then everyone filed into our new social hall and further enjoyed the "eats" and inspected the handiwork of the children.

Much credit is due the dedicated ladies who put this school on. Space forbids the mention of the names, but individually and collectively they are the church's finest. I suggested to one of the teachers that it was quite a task to teach all these squirming, wiggling youngsters and she agreed it was. But when I said "Bet you had a good time too!" her face lit up like a light turned on and she came back with "O, we had a ball, it was so much fun. We were sorry it could not last longer." Well, it was ever thus. Good Christians always "have a ball" when they are dedicated to God's work.

Audio-Visual Aids Available At Convention Office

A new annotated list of audio-visual aids is being mailed to the pastors and Sunday school superintendents of the Southern Convention. They should receive it by the first week in September. This list includes films, filmstrips and slides on the general subjects of Stewardship, Home Missions, World Missions, Leadership Training, Aids in Teaching, Youth Work, Family Life, United Church and Miscellaneous. Anyone who would like to have this complete list or a list on a particular subject may receive one by dropping a card to Miss Ruth Dunn, Box 336, Elon College, North Carolina.

Several audio-visuals have been added to the library this year and you will want to study the list as you plan your fall program. If there are questions as to the best use of audio-visuals, where to buy or rent equipment, or any phase of their use, we

For the Unemployed

O Lord our Father, we commend to Thy protecting care and compassion the men and women suffering distress and anxiety through lack of work. Support and strengthen them, we beseech Thee, and so prosper the counsels of those engaged in the ordering of industrial life that Thy people may be set free from want and fear, and may be enabled to labor in security for the relief of their necessities and for the well-being of our Nation and its people, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

New Professors At Southern Union

Rev. Melvin Reid Fenner, Minister of the Congregational Christian Church of Toppenish, Washington, has been appointed Professor of Religion and Chaplain at Southern Union College in Wadley according to an announcement by President Walter A. Graham.

Mr. Fenner received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Monmouth College, and his Bachelor of Divinity degree from the Chicago Theological Seminary.

shall be glad to help you. We hope you will realize that Audio-Visuals are not ends in themselves but are tools to be used as means to an end. They should not be used simply as "the program," but the program should be well planned and then the audio-visual would be an integral part of the program.

Audio-visuals should be returned to the Convention Office immediately after use. Other people would like to use them and it is very difficult to schedule films or filmstrips when they are not returned promptly. The Convention Office does not own a film projector but has several filmstrip projectors which can be borrowed but can not be shipped by mail. All reservations should be made through Miss Dunn. If there are suggestions for the distribution or better use of audio-visuals at any time, please contact Miss Dunn.

Mr. Fenner has served churches in Montana, Michigan, Oregon, and Washington. While in Walla Walla, Washington, he was on the faculty as a lecturer in Religion at Whitman College.

Mrs. Fenner will join the Southern Union faculty as Professor of Speech and Drama.

Rev. Fenner will replace the Rev. Carl Landes who has resigned and is now studying in California.

The Ripening Seed

The jubilation of summer begins to fade, the high ecstasy passing. Autumn's splendor is still to come, but it is not the same. Autumn is the falling leaf, the withering stalk; this is the season of the ripening seed, the triumph of the blossom. The great host of goldenrod and asters is still to come, but they are only the grand finale that will fade into short days, long nights and the sleep that lasts till April.

Milkweed pods have fattened. Daisy petals have fallen. Hips redden where roses flushed only a few weeks ago. Thistles begin to show age, silvering at the temples. Wild geranium tautens the tensions that will fling its seeds to the mercy of new root-beds. Fat fruit heads like clustered embers wait only the right breeze to set fire to all the sumac leaves.

The seeds, hostages to tomorrow, toughen their armor for trial by winter. In them, compact with potent possibility, is the germ of next year, and the next, for each seed has within it the root, the stem, the leaf, the blossom that will come to seed again. Green immortality rides the wind on a strand of milkweed silk, is planted by an acorn-hiding squirrel, sown by a catbird eating an elderberry, strewn by a chipmunk harvesting grass seed.

Summer comes to maturity, preparing for all the summers to come. The seeds ripen, life compact, life implicit and enduring.

A Project for Children and Youth Scholarships For Indian Americans

More and more young people are going to college every year. Most boys and girls in the United States can go to college if they want to badly enough and most children talk about "when I go to college . . ." and often at a very early age even know which college they want to attend.

However, many young Americans of Indian background do not look forward to college days. They grow up on reservations with little contact with the rest of their country. Even if they know about college, they hardly dare hope they could go. Lack of money is an important part of their problem. But perhaps even more of an obstacle is the feeling that they would not make the grade or that they would not be acceptable.

To our shame, the dominant culture in the United States has pushed the Indian Americans aside. Our government has often taken Indian land without consultation or full compensation. Indian Americans are caught between a desire to preserve their distinctive heritage and culture and a desire to find their place in the larger society. Rapid changes are affecting them. They need to develop leaderships that can help them to face the changes that they must accept and decide about other things where they have a choice.

In the midst of these conditions young Indian Americans need much understanding, encouragement, and financial assistance to help them get an education.

Our Board of Home Missions has had a scholarship program for Indian Americans for several years. In 1960 the Board, in co-operation with the Association on American Indian Affairs and the Protestant Episcopal Church, employed a full time person to administer this program and to seek out and counsel with young people and their families about educational plans. We can have a part in providing scholarships and in helping the recipients face some of their problems through an "Authorized Special" of the Board of Home Missions. (Apportionment credit may be given if you request it.) With the emphasis on education in our society, this project should have considerable appeal. With children the story leaflet Moving Day for the White Hawks by Alice Watson, can be used in conjunction with the project. (5c a single copy; 50c a dozen. Order from Missions Council, 287 Park Avenue South, New York 10, New York.)

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Carrie Virginia Combs, 37, of Newport News, Virginia, passed away Saturday morning, following a serious illness of six weeks. Funeral services were conducted Monday at First Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, where she was a long-time member, by Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr. Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. G. C. Hopkins and Mrs. W. B. Williams, with whom she made her home.

Recipe For Women's Fellowship

Select carefully a cheerful and understanding Leader. Choose a goodly number of women with genuine love in their hearts. Avoid imitations. Add a pinch of the Salt of the Earth.

Season generously with Stewardship and moisten thoroughly with Missionary Education and the milk of Human Kindness. Mix in a heaping cup of Friendly Service and add a cake of Christian Social Action that has been dissolved in loving concern. Be sure, very sure, no sour grapes are allowed to seep in or they will curdle the whole mixture.

Stir altogether with Good Programs, well sifted for variety and using nothing but church-related. Then bring to the boiling point of enthusiasm and timely publicity (be sure it is the finest Public Relations brand).

Cover the mixture with a warm blanket of association, state and national guidance and set to rise in a concerned church. Drench with sweetening, namely Spiritual Life.

Lastly, add a touch of common sense and a keen sense of humor. Bake at once in a hot oven preheated by Christian Education.

If this recipe is mixed by the friendly hand of a wise leader who measures her ingredients by the Golden Rule, there can be no failure and your Fellowship will leave a pleasant taste and give a kindly flavor to the entire community with whom it is shared.

SISAL FIBRE PARCELS

The sisal fibre industry in India is helping needy women in our Marathi Mission to help themselves. About 100 women make beautiful products of the native sisal fibre.

They not only are able to earn their living, but they have an opportunity for an opening worship service, care for their pre-school children, and milk and multi-purpose food from Church World Service supplies. Old women who are almost blind can spin the waste fibre into warp and woof for rugs. The younger women make bags, purses, belts and mats of the brightly dyed fibre. This industry is now under the direction of Mrs. Frank Tishkins, widow of a Congregational Christian minister from Nebraska.

Many of our women's church groups buy a parcel and then sell the individual items. The cost is $25 and includes bags, purses, belts, etc. Send a registered personal check (not money order) to The Sisal Fibre Industry, Ahmednagar, India. Allow three months for the parcel to reach you. There will be a duty charge of about $3.00. If the duty is higher, it is suggested you pay it and then apply for a refund at the post office.

CHURCH NEEDS MINISTER

Dr. Harcastle writes that Berea Christian Church, Driver, Virginia, will need a pastor to begin service January 1, 1962. Berea is located in a fine, friendly community and has several new housing developments nearby. The church has a well-arranged educational building, an attractive sanctuary, and a modern parsonage. Driver is near Suffolk, Norfolk, and Portsmouth. Mr. George M. Cornell, Bennets Pasture Road, Suffolk, is pulpit committee chairman.

Parkway United Church, Winston-Salem, is suggesting to its members that as they dig up iris, jonquil, daffodil, tulip, etc. bulbs and find they have extra ones, to bring them to the new church grounds. They hope to have flowers scattered through the woods as well as around the building.

SLIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT

When the first half of this paper was printed, it was discovered that the editor had "goofed" — the last editorial refers to "St. Mark's" when it should say "St. Peter's." It's bad when a preacher-editor gets his "saints" mixed up! Sorry!

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Greetings From The New Editor

Dear P.F.'ers,

I am sincerely grateful to all of you for this opportunity to serve. I only hope that during the year I will be able to justify the great trust you have placed in me.

We are looking toward the coming year with great expectations. I feel a certain restlessness, an anxiousness to get back to work after a grand summer. There is a great deal to be done and so much we can do. But no one person or group of people can do it alone. In order to use this year to the fullest extent, we must have the cooperation and spirit, the willingness and zeal of every person across the entire Southern Convention. It seems there should be no need to say this. Perhaps there isn't. For what are we but a fellowship? And what is a fellowship if not a union, a vast partnership, a team working together, striving for common goals as express-the Youth Covenant?

We, the officers of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship, will need the support of every P. F. member to enable us to serve you as well as we possibly can. We have a great deal to live up to our outgoing officers, and only with your assistance can we begin to continue their excellent record. As editor of the Youth Page, I need not only your support, but also your help. I hope you will use the Youth Page often to share your ideas and plans, and to keep in close touch with other groups over the Southern Convention.

Together let's work to build a better, stronger P. F. this year. With firm faith in God and sincere faith in each other, we are capable of great things — let's do them!

I'll be looking forward to hearing from you soon.

How To Make An Intelligent Decision

From an article by R. L. Heilbroner

There is nothing in the world so common and ordinary and yet so agonizingly difficult as a tough decision. Most of us have marched up to some crossroad in our lives — and experienced the awful feeling of not knowing which route to choose. Worse yet, many of us have known what it is like, after a paralyzing wait, to start down one road with the sinking sensation that we've picked the wrong one.

Halfcocked decisions lie behind much of the unhappiness of life. More pathetic yet is the misery caused by the no-decision. What makes us decide things badly, when we "know better"? What is it that sometimes stalls our decision-making machinery entirely? There is no single or simple reason why decisions are the pit-ed in the Statement of Purpose and fall of our lives.

Whatever their causes, the agonies of decision-making are often magnified because we go about making up our minds so ineffectively. There is no ABC for decision-making. But, there are a few guidelines that have helped others, and we can use them to help ourselves. These include marshalling the facts, timing, consulting your feelings, following through, and flexibility.

A lot of the mental anguish of decision-making comes because we often worry in a factual vacuum. An endless amount of stewing can be avoided if we gather information. But just gathering facts won't solve hard problems. "The problem in coming to a firm and clear-sighted decision," says Lt. General Thomas L. Harrold, "is not only to corral the facts, but to marshal them in good order. First, you must know your objective. Unless you know what you want, you can't possibly decide how to get it. Second, consider alternative means of attaining that objective. Next line up the pros and cons of each alternative, as far as you can see them. Then choose the course that appears most likely to achieve the results wanted. That doesn't guarantee success. But at least it allows us to decide as intelligently as the situation permits." Some people, however, misuse the idea of fact-collecting. They go on and on getting advice, gathering data, and never seem to be able to clinch the case. Frequently we are merely waiting for the "right" fact which will rationalize a decision we have already made.

When making a decision of minor importance it is advantageous to consider all the pros and cons. In vital matters, however, such as the choice of a mate or a profession, the decision should come from the unconscious, from somewhere within ourselves. In the important decisions of our personal life, we should be governed by the deep inner needs of our nature. Usually when a decision accords with our inner nature it brings an enormous sense of relief. Good decisions are the best tranquilizers ever invented; bad ones often increase our mental tension.

Our behavior is affected by our passing moods. When we are blue, low, our actions tend to be aggressive and destructive; when we are in good spirits, all fired up, our behavior swings toward tolerance and balance. We do well to take account of our emotional temperatures before we consider important decisions. A sense of timing also requires that we know when not to make a decision. Time itself is an essential component of many decisions. It brings uncertain situations to a head. Premature decisions are the most dangerous a person can make. Many of the most involved and difficult decisions are best not "made," but allowed to ripen. Facts accumulate, feelings gradually jell, and other people take a hand in the situation. Give complicated situations a chance to work themselves out, and you may save yourself a great deal of exhausting and useless brain-cudgeling.

Part of the worrisomeness of decision-making comes from a natural tendency to overstress the finality, the once-for-allness of our choices. There is much more "give" in most decisions than we are aware. Too many of us find decisions painful because we regard them as final and irrevocable.

Finally, there is one last consideration to bear in mind. In making genuinely big decisions we have to be prepared to stand a sense of loss, as well as gain. Big decisions, in contrast to little ones, do not leave us exhilarated and charged with confidence, but humble and prayerful. It helps to talk big decisions over with others — not only because another's opinion may illumine aspects of the dilemma that we may have missed, but because in the process of talking we sort out and clarify our own thoughts and feelings. After this, meditation can also help. But in the end after talk and thought, one ingredient is still essential. It is courage. Decisions plague us all. But the same basic steps lead to good decisions in both business and personal life. One piece of good advice: Sometimes the best decision is no decision.

The Case Of The Intoxicated Cat

Several weeks ago an unhappy woman wrote a letter to the newspaper, complaining about her husband who thought it funny to make their pet cat drunk by pouring gin in its milk. The cat would dance like mad, stagger around in circles, and finally fall in a heap in the corner and go to sleep. Besides, the cat was now losing all of its hair as a result of the gin diet, and what did a cat look like without any hair?

Immediately letters poured into the newspaper from aroused readers all over the country denouncing the husband and suggesting various degrees of punishment, for a man who would be so cruel to animals.

As one thinks about this reaction of the public there is an obvious irony. Give an animal liquor and you are considered cruel. Give a man liquor and you are considered sophisticated. Let an animal reel, act foolish, fall in a drunken stupor, and immediately it is an occasion for readers from coast to coast to howl protest. Let a man do the same thing and we simply ignore it.

We wouldn't give liquor to a dog. It is inhumane. Yet we give it to our sons and daughters, and with all of the advertising media at our command, we continually encourage them to drink it. It's not fit for a dog or a cat but it is fit for our children? How crazy can we get????

Good Advice from 95-Year-Old Reading Club For Young People

A friend from another part of the state has recently showed me a half dozen books that she had just purchased here in the Wake Forest book store. She teaches music in her home community and intends to take these books home for the young people of her church to read. In my judgment this woman is doing one of the finest things that an older person can do for the young ones about him or her.

As I was looking over these great books, the thought came to me that it would be one of the greatest of blessings for groups of young people everywhere to form reading circles and cultivate the reading of good books among themselves. Suppose a dozen boys and girls form a circle, each one purchasing a book to be kept for one month, when the circle would meet for a social evening together and the exchange of books. At the end of the year each one would come to be permanent owner of the book that he or she had purchased, and at the same meeting there would be a distribution of books for the year that was just beginning. I can think of nothing that would bring more or greater blessings to the individual boys and girls or to the community of which they were a part. And there are experienced and cultured men and women in every community that would feel honored and blessed in helping such groups in the selection of the books to be read.

How much better this would be than allowing athletics, dancing and other such amusements to monopolize the time! Not that I think there is anything wrong in athletics or social dancing, but my point is that such amusements should not be allowed to monopolize one's spare time from his daily business.

I'll soon be 95 years of age, but if I can help any such group as I have described while I am able to go, they have only to command me. I insist, and insist strongly, that time is too precious to be wasted!

A Minister To His Wife

I know what I would thank Him for,
I know, indeed I do;

Next to His mercy and His love,
I thank the Lord for you.

His providence and loving care
To me in you is shown;

A bit of heaven here on earth
Through you, my dear, is known.

Your tender love and sound advice,
Your beauty and your grace,
Make every spot we choose to share
A bright and shining place.

So many gifts I've had from Him
Along my way all through;
But next to mercy and His love
I thank the Lord for you!

MINISTERS FROM ROSEMONT

We were glad to have Rev. and Mrs. Tom Liverman, Jr., and family from Liberty, N. C., and Rev. and Mrs. Glenn Garrett from Mebane, N. C., with us in the services this month. They are both from our church and are students at Duke Divinity School. Also we were glad to have Richard Milteer back from Elon College. He is looking forward to receiving his standing as a "Licentiate" this Fall. We pray God's best for these three.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingle Cook will leave us the last of August for Lancaster, Pa., where Ingle will be a student in the Lancaster Theological Seminary. They came to us from High Point, N. C., and we hate to lose them, but we are glad to see them go into the work of the ministry. Our good wishes and prayers go with them.

Summer Commencement At Elon

The Graduates

Using "How Much Is a Man Worth?" as his topic in addressing the summer graduating class at Elon College Sunday, August 20, Dr. Cecil W. Robbins, president of Louisburg College, declared that a man's worth is determined largely by his submission to God's will.

Delivering a combined baccalaureate sermon and address to the 46 graduating seniors at the Elon College Community Church at 11 o'clock, Dr. Robbins pointed out that all too often the world measures a man's worth by his possessions, but he declared that real worth is measured in spiritual treasures of a man's faith, hope, love and righteousness.

He declared that man, left to his own ambition and self-will, may become a scoundrel and monster, and he told the graduates that only under the guidance and will of their Maker can they hope to scale the heights in life.

In addition to the speaker, others participating in the morning exercises were Dr. J. Earl Danieleley, president of Elon College; and Dr. William J. Andes, pastor of the Elon College Community Church. Prof. Charles Lynam, baritone, was featured soloist in the musical program, with Prof. Fletcher Moore at the organ.

The summer commencement program concluded at 2:30 o'clock, when diplomas and degrees were presented in Whitley Memorial Auditorium. Two of the class, who graduated with honors, were Annie Cochran Edwards, of Gibsonville, and Charles McKinley Hall, Jr., of Burlington.

Other graduates included Mona Scott Atkinson, Elon College; Glenda Squires Baumgardner, Burlington; Hampton Rob Bell, Elon College; Helen Sockwell Bell, Elon College; Edwin Reddeman Boelte, Vernon Hill, Va.; Sally Higgins Boland, Lake City, Fla.;

Robert Otis Boyette, Elon College; Deanna Hall Braxton, Elon College; Martha Ellerbe Broadaway, Liberty; Howard Edwin Burke, Burlington; Mark Edward Campbell, Burlington; Stanley Otis Carey, Burlington; Ralph Thomas Carmines, Portsmouth, Va.;

TO THE GRADUATING CLASS:

The President's Farewell

Henry Ward Beecher said, "How hateful is that religion which says 'Business is business, and politics are politics, and religion is religion!' Religion is using everything for God; but many men dedicate business to the devil, and politics to the devil, and shove religion into the cracks and crevices of time, and make it the hypocritical outcrawling of their leisure and laziness."

You are completing your college career at a time when the nation is very much aware of crooked business dealings, when much has been written and is being said about a lack of integrity in political circles, and when, it seems, a majority of the church-going public has been able to place its religion into very neat little compartments where it will not interfere with their daily lives.

An inscription written twenty-eight hundred years before Christ stated that "Our earth is degenerate in these latter days; there are signs that the world is speedily coming to an end; bribery and corruption are common . . ." This led George Buttrick to say, "There were no 'good old days.' But there are always 'good days to come'—if we pray, and then try to live the prayers." Our faith in God and our dedication to Christ and his Church should show forth in the fruits of our everyday living. The claims of the Gospel are not optional—they cannot be alternately worn or shed as one does a winter coat—if a man is a Christian, he is a Christian wherever and whenever you find him.

Winfred Rhoades said, "Religion . . . is the daily living of life as a partner with God in working for the things that universal goodwill points to—the things which therefore ought to be. If life comes from God, if life is lived and must be lived in God, then daily life can be a religious act—and should be, in reality, the highest and truest religious act."

College; Bobby Darrow Maness, Gibsonville; Suzanne Ramsey Myers, Ivor, Va.; Michaux Raines, Chuckatuck, Va.; Melville Lawless Ratliff, Burlington; Sara Shelton Richards, Elon College;

Many of us believe that the new world toward which we are striving can be built only upon Christian principles. These foundations cannot be laid unless each one of us imparts by our works and by our lives a truer and deeper understanding of Christ and his truth.

I charge you, therefore, as you graduate from Elon College to remember that your greatest opportunities will lie in this area of witnessing to others the faith that is within you. Regardless of your vocational choice it will be your high privilege to live and serve as a Christian. To paraphrase E. Stanley Jones, You have no obligation to succeed. You have only the obligation to be true to the highest and best you know. In the immortal words of our Master, "Let your light so shine that others may see your good works and glorify your Father . . ."

Sincerely yours,

Aquila And Priscilla -- Able Teachers

Background Scripture: Acts 18:1-3, 18-21, 24-28; Romans 16:3-5.

Devotional Reading: II Corinthians 4:7-18.

Memory Selection: Having gifts that differ according to the grace given to us, let us use them . . . he who teaches, in his teaching. Romans 12:6-7 (RSV)

A Common Craft and a Common Cause

Paul and Aquila and Priscilla had much in common. First of all they had a common craft. They were tent-makers, or "leather-workers" by trade. In that section of the country there was a special species of goats, the wool of which made excellent material for tents. As a Rabbi, Paul had had to learn a trade, and he became a tent-maker or leather-worker by trade. Except when one of his churches sent him a special offering, he had to earn his own living by working at his trade. When he came to Corinth he found two Jews, "refugees" who had been driven out of Rome by an imperial edict, Aquila and Priscilla, who were also tentmakers. As is so often the case, men of the same craft traveling from place to place often found hospitality among fellow craftsmen—silversmiths among silversmiths, weavers among weavers, etc. So Paul "boarded with" this Jewish couple or perhaps as their guest, and they "wrought" at their common craft.

But they also had a common cause. They had between them a bond of common minds, of hearts warmed by the same faith and hope, a common cause. As they worked together and as they talked together their hearts were strangely warmed, and sparks must have passed from one heart to another. Under the influence of Paul they became devoted disciples of Christ. Here is an example of the place and power of Christian testimony in the lives of those who work together. How few of us speak of Christ to the man who works next to us at the same bench or in the same shop or in the same office. Yet this kind of witness is just as effective, and sometimes more effective, than mere preaching.

Incidentally it might be remarked that Aquila and Priscilla were "refugees." They were only examples of the enrichment of life which has come to communities and countries which have received "refugees" driven from their homes by persecution.

Courageous Companions

Christianity was not very popular in those days and in that area. And when an uproar had been made in Corinth, Paul moved on. He had it in mind to go to Jerusalem for the Feast of the Passover. On his way to Jerusalem he stopped at Ephesus. Aquila and Priscilla had accompanied him thus far, but Paul left them at Ephesus. The account simply says "he left them there." But in one of Paul's later letters he writes, "Greet Priscilla and Aquila" — note the order this time — "my helpers in Christ Jesus who have for my life laid down their own necks." Christianity was not any more popular in Ephesus than it was in Corinth. Was Paul referring to the events in Ephesus when he said that this loyal couple had "laid down their necks" for his life? In any event it is quite likely that this couple became teachers of the new faith, and thus were of great help to Paul in instructing his converts in the faith. Or again he may have been referring to some occasion, about which we have no record, when Aquila and Priscilla actually risked their lives in order to save Paul's life. In any event this couple were tried and trusted companions, courageous in speaking the truth, contemptuous of the consequences. The highest form of heroism is not always manifested on the battlefields. The fact of the matter is that it takes a lot of courage for one to announce and to stand by his Christian convictions.

Two Tried Teachers and a Young Preacher

While Aquila and Priscilla were in Ephesus, a young preacher named Apollos came to the city and began to preach. He came from Alexandria, a city of scholars. These scholars used a great deal of allegory in interpreting the Scriptures, and they believed that not only were the events of the Old Testament events in history, but that each of them had a hidden and inner meaning. Apollos was trained in this school of thought. He could be an exceedingly valuable man in convincing the Jews because he would be able to find Christ all over the Old Testament and to prove to them that the Old Testament looked forward all the time to the coming of Jesus. He was an eloquent man, "mighty in the Scriptures." He was "instructed in the way of the Lord" and he was "fervent in the spirit" and he "spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord." He began to "speak boldly in the synagogue." But he knew only the baptism of John. He saw the need for repentance; he even recognized Jesus as the Messiah. But he did not know as yet the good news of Jesus as the Saviour of men, and of the coming of the Holy Spirit in power. He knew the task Jesus had set before men, but he did not know the help that Jesus gave men to do it. He knew the great need to break with the past; he did not yet know of the great power to live in the days to come. He knew Jesus as a figure in history, but not as a living presence and personal Saviour. And this humble couple saw the fatal flaw in his preaching. Taking this fine young fellow under their care and tutelage, they "expounded unto him," or more accurately explained to him, the way of God more perfectly. It must have increased the power of his preaching an hundred fold. How often humble-minded and simple-hearted people know the secrets of the Lord which are hidden from the highly educated. And what a great contribution comparatively unknown teachers make to the lives of young preachers who have a lot to learn. Only a knowledge of Christ can give an authoritative note to Christian preaching.

"The way of the Lord or the way of God!" Here we find Christianity described. The title shows that Christianity is not only believing certain things; it means putting them into practice. It is not only a system of beliefs; it is a way of life. It is a faith, but a faith that issues in deeds.

A Preacher's Helpers

"My help is in Christ" — this is how Paul describes Aquila and Priscilla. The preacher thanks God for his helpers, not only those who like this couple teach, but those who sing in the choir, visit, serve on committees, support the church, and help in a hundred ways, some of them simple ways, in the work of Christ.

I am sure you who read this page regularly have noticed each week the total amount we receive for the operation of the Home. In order to meet our budget we need to receive a minimum of $1,700.00 a week. We have been in excess of this figure only once during these summer months. This means we have been running a deficit during this period. Our fiscal year runs from October 1 to September 30. This means we have only six weeks left in this year. We hope our churches and interested individuals will do all they can in these next six weeks to help us overcome this deficit that we face.

Summer vacation from school is about over. Here at Elon our children will return to school on August 30. This has been a summer of both work and play for our children. We have had our truck patches and campus work to do. This has kept our older boys and girls busy much of the time. Vacation time, visits to Moonelon for swimming, and other interesting trips to places in and around Burlington have taken up the rest of the time of both the younger and older children.

Plans are now under way for the remodeling of Johnston Hall. In June we completed our two new cottages. Since that time we have been making preparations for the up-grading of Johnston Hall to bring it up to date as living quarters for our older children. We hope to begin this work by the first of September. This work should be completed in a period of 6 to 8 weeks. On November 4 we are planning to have open house for our two new cottages. It is our plan to also have the work on Johnston Hall completed and have it open for inspection as well.

This work on Johnston Hall and the erection of our new cottages has all been made possible by CHIP. We hope very much that all our churches will continue to give their full support to this program until all the pledges are paid in full. Some of our churches have already paid their pledges in full. In fact, one of our leading churches is giving consideration to going the second mile by making an additional contribution to the erection of what we hope will be our third cottage next spring. Are there other churches that would like to go the second mile on "Our Children's Home Improvement Plan"?

A Cape Cod Minister Writes About

The Importance Of Loyalty To The Church

Rev. C. H. Monbleau

As we grow older we are able to look back and appraise life's experiences. Important things stand out and the lesser things fade into the background.

For one thing — reflection provokes a deep sense of gratitude that Sundays are a part of life and that church association is a part of them. They are like guide-posts on a hill where we stop to rest for a few moments to take stock of our progress and plan for the next effort. It is wise to stop once in seven days and sit quietly among friends in lovely surroundings, listen to good music, sense the Presence of God, and consider with the minister those spiritual values which make life worth while.

How easy it is to be swamped by the details of daily living! Apparently the people of this parish as well as our summer guests realize this. How gratifying to see the "crowded church" on Sunday — often both services. It is not only a testimony of a strong Protestant witness in this place — but it indicates that our guests must come from strong churches — churches were the Christian fellowship has become a vital part of their lives — expressing itself even when on vacation.

I do hope and pray that each of you are blessed for your loyalty to the church in this hour when, as our President says: "it is a time for greatness." As another has put it— "unless there is a renewal, revival, awakening in the local congregations of the church of Jesus Christ, the mission and witness of the church will be smothered in its own introverted life and will wither and die."

Let each one do his best, give his best, be his best — not only because our Lord demands it, but because nothing short of this can satisfy the deep longings of the human spirit.

May God bless you and keep you in His love and care.

PAGANISM IN CHRISTIAN FUNERALS

S. L. Morgan, Sr., Wake Forest, N. C.

For 60 years as a minister I've protested inwardly, and often openly by voice and pen, against the paganism in so-called "Christian" funerals and burials. I have just talked to a seminary president about my settled purpose to make the impending funeral of my wife and my own funeral truly Christian as I conceive it. My minister son, pastor in Washington, D. C., has just returned from S. Rhodesia, where he preached the sermon at the dedication of a memorial chapel in memory of his admirable wife. Five years ago I was deeply moved by the triumphant tone of her funeral in Petworth Baptist church, and by the absence of flowers. Her whole life had been dedicated to the spread of the gospel worldwide. It seemed just fitting that, instead of flowers, she and her husband had invited gifts to build a memorial chapel at a S. Rhodesia hospital. In time the fund reached several thousand dollars. At the recent dedication grateful natives overran the chapel seating 200 and heard his sermon.

I have just told the seminary president of my wish to head off flowers at the funerals of my wife and me, she past 80 and I in my 90th year, and instead of flowers to invite gifts to a memorial fund either to help needy students or to furnish a bookshelf in the library. I shall die happier for knowing my funeral cost is not to exceed $150, and with no waste for a monument.

Many years ago a tenant farmer owning no property except two mules mortgaged his mules to give his wife a sumptuous burial — did it over my protest. I urged him to have the money for his 3 motherless little children. But he put $750 in a pretty casket and a vault. I have grieved to this day over the waste. Funeral fashions drove him to it. "She was a good wife, and it is the last thing I can do for her." My simple funeral will register my lifelong protest, and maybe make it a trifle easier for the poor to bury their dead.

The way to begin the ideal life is to begin.

The gospel of Christ has to be given or given up. — Supt. Everett Babcock, Ohio.

LOST—ONE STAINED GLASS WINDOW

Please return to Mrs. Robert Knowles, Elon College, North Carolina. Seriously, Mrs. Knowles loaned the cardboard "stained glass window" which depicts the departments of work of the Women's Fellowship and someone else wants to borrow it. She has forgotten which church has it, but if it can be returned soon she will appreciate it.

Dr. John R. Scotford, church building consultant, was in Chuckatuck, Virginia, August 17 to talk with members of Oakland church.

A MARRIAGE MAY NOT BE LEGAL IF CIVIL

If you want to get married in a civil ceremony, you'll find that Maryland is one of two states where you can't do it.

Maryland and West Virginia require marriage ceremonies to be performed by a "minister of the Gospel" or an "official of a religious order."

The Maryland law goes back to the "Acts of 1777." A landmark marriage case of the early 1800s, Denison vs. Denison, says, "No marriage in this state is valid without some sort of religious ceremony."

In Delaware, the Mayor of Wilmington is the only person except a religious official who may perform a wedding ceremony. In every other state except Maryland weddings may be performed by judges, justices of the peace, other court officials, mayors or persons appointed by them.

Georgine Ogden of the Population Reference Bureau here said that contrary to the widely held opinion, marriages in the United States began as strictly civil ceremonies.

Referring to "American Marriage and Divorce" by Paul Jacobson, Miss Ogden said marriage was a civil contract in early colonial days. State laws were later amended to "allow" clergymen to perform the ceremony.

"Clergymen in our country have always performed the marriage ceremony not in their capacity as ministers but as civil officers constituted for the purpose by the state," Jacobson writes.

In five states — Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona, South Carolina and Arkansas — civil ceremonies still outnumber religious weddings.

LOVE MAKES BURDENS LIGHT

In the closing part of Matthew 11 our Lord says, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." For a good many years this great assurance of Jesus was an empty word to me; but when I came to see that love is the key to its solution, it became as clear as sunlight.

A concrete case came under my observation recently which made this whole matter not only yet clearer, but thrilled me greatly to note what love can do to change burdens into joys unspeakable. Circumstances brought me into the home of a grandmother who was keeping her two granddaughters, 6 and 7 years of age respectively. Such a care would ordinarily be a burden of no light weight. The smile that came over that woman's face when these children came in each day was of such a character as to be felt all over the house.

This grandmother is herself one of North Carolina's most earnest and successful teachers and the care of these children for a part of each day is to go on up to within two days of her own school's beginning, but that fact does not dampen or weaken that smile in the least. And why? Because love fills her soul for those precious children. Love makes burdens light. What would the world be if people everywhere loved each other as Jesus loves them?

STEWART

We, the members of the Women's Fellowship of the Rosemont Christian Church of South Norfolk, Virginia, wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Emily Stewart, who passed from this life June 18, 1961, at the age of 69 years.

Mrs. Stewart was a devoted member of our church. She was a faithful and loyal member of the class known as the Maude Hedley class. We shall miss her presence among us. Her community has lost a faithful friend.

Because of our appreciation for her faithfulness we resolve:

First: To extend to her loved ones our sympathy.

Second: That we keep a memory of her devotion in our hearts.

Third: That a copy of this Memoriam be sent to the family, and be published in the paper she loved so well, The Christian Sun.

Labor Sunday Message

September 3, 1961

In this Labor Day season the National Council of Churches extends its greetings to all people who work or want to work, to those now entering our national work force, to those in the prime of their work life, and to those nearing retirement. Especially does this Message go to those who are unemployed or under the threat of unemployment. The National Council has long held that large-scale unemployment or long continued unemployment for persons able and willing to work is intolerable.

"Automation—Of Critical Concern to the Churches"

Automation—the invention and use of machines that reduce drudgery and multiply production—has not only increased opportunities but created problems that concern us all. In the long run automation may not reduce the total number of jobs, but its immediate effects are frequently felt in the dislocation of workers and for some of these the result may be permanent idleness.

We recognize the genius of those who have contrived the new machines and methods. We also recognize the foresight, ability, and patience of those who have financed and managed the required research and experimentation, as well as the skills of workers who build the machines and operate the processes.

More Goods With Less Work—the Problem

However, goods are increasingly produced with less work, and these production methods displace many workers. In numerous instances government projects employing many people are halted as national programs are changed. Thus, in our vastly complex industrial order the capacity of consumers to buy the goods of our industry is of critical importance. Attempts to maintain the purchasing power of workers are seen in the efforts of unions, companies, and community agencies to keep people employed, sometimes whether needed or not.

But maintenance of an adequate level of demand for goods and services to keep our entire work force employed is not a problem which either employers or unions can solve alone. This task involves fiscal and monetary policies and other economic measures. Only in a context of full employment can the problems created by automation be adequately met.

Demands Upon Christians In This Situation

Our Christian faith makes powerful demands upon us in this situation. In the increased capacity of our factories and our farms we have the opportunity to bring the comforts of health and decent living standards to untold millions of people both at home and abroad. As long as people anywhere are in need, our responsibility as Christians is to seek effective means of making resources available to meet that need.

The distribution of our potential abundance to those in need within and beyond our borders will require both new thought and action. Christian compassion and conviction have often shown the way to turn walls into doors. Christians can work in their private capacities, in their organizations, and through their governments to see that the needy are no longer in privation and want.

Full employment within our new technology is an ethical imperative. To achieve it will require the best creative thinking and action on the part of everyone, including labor, management, agriculture, government, and the Christian churches. Immediately there must be retraining and relocation of workers, better provisions for retirement and transfer of benefits, assistance in difficult psychological adjustments. All segments of the community must be willing to assume responsibility for such programs, even as labor must be willing to accept new techniques.

Council Calls to Determined Effort

But the total problem cannot be solved by stop-gap measures. Only a positive and determined effort for efficient, full production and full employment aimed at providing decent living conditions the world over can do that. To such an effort the National Council of Churches calls all men and women on this Labor Day.

Area Leaders Of The United Church Of Christ

Rev. Harvey L. Fesperman (left) is president of the Southern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. His office is in Salisbury, North Carolina.

Rev. J. Taylor Stanley is superintendent of the Convention of the South of Congregational Christian Churches, and his office is in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Rev. Clyde L. Fields is superintendent of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches with office at Elon College, North Carolina.

Statistics for the three groups in North Carolina and Virginia are found on page three. Further information concerning the Convention of the South will be found on pages six and seven in an address given by its president at a recent session. Editorial comment may be helpful, also.

Here And There Among The Churches

"Things to Come," found on page 7, was sent to The Sun from the Convention Office. Additions to this list of coming events may be sent to the Convention Office or directly to the editor.

A series of Bible study sessions for women of First, Burlington, will begin September 7. Meetings are to be held in the homes of members of the study group. A similar program of meetings for intensive study and discussion was held last winter.

Mr. E. W. Neville, long-time member of our United Church in Chapel Hill, wonders if he has subscribed to The Christian Sun longer than anyone else. He believes he first subscribed in 1899. Would anyone challenge this record? If so, write the editor at 840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Senior High Pilgrim Fellowship officers of First, Burlington, met August 28 at the home of their counselor, Mrs. W. F. Randolph, for a hamburger supper and a planning session for the coming year's program. Sunday evening programs, social activities, and service projects were planned. Regular meetings of the P. F. will resume Sunday, September 10.

Mrs. Kieth Wright, wife of the minister at Pfafftown, who has her degree in Christian education, will introduce the new kindergarten materials to teachers and parents in Parkway United Church, Winston-Salem, September 19 at 7:30 p.m. Visitors will be welcome from other churches in the area.

Rev. P. William Benton, Jr., member at Berea church, was the guest preacher at Suffolk during August while Dr. George Alley and his family were on vacation in Wisconsin.

"American Psychosis vs. Christian Reality" was the topic used by Dr. John Grier, a physician, when he was guest speaker at our Southern Pines church Sunday, August 20.

Bible school at St. Peter's Greensboro, was held August 7-11 with 75 pupils and 23 teachers enrolled. There were classes for those from nursery to junior high ages. Rev. Carl T. Daye is the pastor.

The church school of the Southern Pines church held its annual picnic at Pinebluff Lake August 23. The pastor, Rev. Carl Wallace, led a vesper service at Leonard Training School, McCain, N. C., August 27.

Rev. William R. Stevenson, minister of the Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, and his wife will hold "open house" in the parsonage September 8 for members of their congregation.

The Youth Fellowship of Union Grove held its regular meeting on Sunday night, August 27. During this program, new officers were elected to serve for the coming year. They were as follows: President, Larry Trotter; Vice President, Martha Tedder; Secretary-Treasurer, Carolyn Johnson; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Ellen Trotter; and Recreation Committee, Zandra Ingram, Perry Coble and C. L. Tedder.

The Helping Hands Class of Apple's Chapel went to the Home for Children at Elon College for a cook-out supper August 27. That evening officers of the Women's Fellowship were installed.

Rev. Daniel W. Jones, pastor of Haw River, and a former deacon and choir director at South Norfolk, was the guest speaker at South Norfolk August 27. He graduated from Elon College August 20, 1961, and will enter Duke Divinity School.

The John Graves Class at First, Burlington, sponsored a special service for college students September 3. A breakfast for the students was served in the fellowship hall at 9:30 a.m., and the group sat together for the 11 a.m. service.

At the Southern Convention Women's Fellowship meeting last spring it was reported that Shallow Well women send The Sun and The Herald to their college students. Now is the time for other churches to do likewise. United Church Herald has special rates for students.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Asheboro church met Sunday evening August 27 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hughes for recreation, a picnic supper of hot dogs and watermelon, and a business session to plan its work for the coming year. Approximately 15 members and friends were present, as were Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Bowers, counselors.

We do the difficult immediately; the impossible takes a little longer.

UNION GROVE WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP

The Ladies Fellowship of Union Grove began the 1960-61 year as guests at a fish fry given by the Laymen. Officers for the year were: President, Mrs. Paul Tedder; Secretary, Mrs. Paul Johnson; Treasurer, Mrs. Virgil Brown. We had 23 on roll with an average attendance of 13.

We collected used clothing for Friendly Service and sent new towels and mattress pads.

We honored our pastor's wife with a shower in September.

In October we were pretty busy. Five members attended Fall Conference at Union Ridge. At our annual Fall Festival we sold hot dogs, cakes and pies. We sent a medical kit overseas.

World Community Day was observed on November 4. The Women's Gift was dedicated at the Thanksgiving Service. The money from our garden project was donated to the Building Fund. We sold Christmas cards, flavoring and plates.

In December, we mixed pleasure with business and revealed Secret Pals at our Christmas party and drew names again.

Mrs. Sybrant Pell was a visitor at our January meeting and discussed plans with us.

We joined with Spoon's Chapel Fellowship at their church for World Day of Prayer.

We were hosts for the Women's Fellowship Spring Rally in April. Mrs. L. T. Schoen, National Stewardship Chairman, was the speaker.

Everyone joined with us in observing May Fellowship at the church, with supper at 6:00 followed by an educational film strip.

We closed the year in August by sending money to Migrant Workers and donating money to be used for a floor covering in the nursery.

REVIVAL

Revival Services begin at Spoon's Chapel Christian Church, one mile off Highway 902, Sunday, September 10 through Friday, September 15. Services beginning each evening at 7:30.

The Rev. Bill J. Traylor of Burlington, pastor of Bethel and Concord Congregational Christian Churches, will be the visiting minister.

The pastor, Rev. Lynwood Hubbard, cordially invites the public to attend.

BURLINGTON CHURCHES HOLD WORKSHOP

Sunday, September 17, officers and teachers of the church schools of the First Evangelical and Reformed Church, the First Christian Church, and Edgewood United Church of Christ, all located in Burlington, will meet at 2:30 p.m. for a workshop. After a discussion of general objectives and purposes, departmental meetings will be held with the following leaders: pre-school — Rev. John S. Graves, professor of religious education at Elon College; primary and junior — Miss Pat Floyd, director of religious education at West Market Street Methodist Church, Greensboro; youth — Rev. Harold Myers, pastor of the Edgewood church; adults — Rev. Robert Rouchy, pastor of the First E. and R. Church.

TURNER'S CHAPEL NEWS

By Mrs. John A. Redding

Revival services were held recently at Turner's Chapel, Route 5, Sanford, N. C. Rev. James E. Porter, Pastor of the church brought an inspiring message at each service.

The choir from Shallow Well Church was present on Tuesday evening and brought inspiring messages in song. On Thursday evening the choir from Zion was present and very beautifully sang several songs.

A number were added to the church membership as a result of the services.

The Young People's Class and its teachers, Mrs. Thurman Cole and Mrs. Billy Thomas, have presented to the church a beautiful picture which hangs in the sanctuary. It is a painting of "Jesus at Prayer." This energetic group of young people have also given a gift of money to the church.

Farewell To A Gentleman

By C. B. Riddle

Men are born into the world now and again to personify the kindlier virtues. Their destiny is not to win fame nor to accomplish mighty deeds. The circle of their lives may be limited and their influence upon the larger aspect of their world may be scant and brief. But within the natural orbit of their careers they have the power of their quiet yet persuasive example. Their modesty and reticence are inspiring, their honorable and courteous demeanor refreshing and remedial. They are doctors for their discouraged brothers and mentors for the puzzled or disillusioned young. Plain people trust and respect them, perhaps without understanding why, and little children unhesitatingly admire and enjoy them. They are rarely conscious of their endowment.

But their knightliness enriches mankind. And that explains the sorrow inherent in their passing. Especially in the present age of struggle and strife, they are needed and ill can be spared. The elemental goodness and charity of them is so sorely wanted that the loss of even one is to be deplored. Yet it is a part of their genius to triumph over death, to have active immortality — they are never forgotten, the eternal ticking of the clock robs them of none of the warm affection they have earned. They bear the "grand old name" which Tennyson applied to his comrade, Arthur Hallam, and it does not fade with passing days.

These thoughts are inspired by the passing of J. Howard Smith, student, teacher, minister, friend to all, greatly beloved by his associates, highly respected for his rare qualities by all who knew him.

Farewell to a gentleman!

Rev. J. Howard Smith

The Rev. J. Howard Smith will be remembered as a graduate of Elon College, and as pastor of our church in Lynchburg, Virginia, for more than ten years. From Lynchburg he went to Connecticut, where, in recent years, he served Grand Avenue Congregational Church in New Haven.

Last November he suffered a heart attack with paralysis. Since then his speech and writing ability were greatly impaired. In July he was able to visit relatives in North Carolina and Virginia. He returned to New Haven, resigned his pastorate as of September 1, and was expecting to return to his old home in Newport News. Friday evening, August 25, his body was found in his room by members of the church. The fatal attack may have come the day before.

The Christian Sun is indebted to Mr. Riddle, a former editor, for the above editorial comment.

Study The Merger

Next steps in the merger of Evangelical and Reformed and Congregational Christian churches in our area properly belong to the people who live here. Nationally the merger is assured, and in the main is completed. Initiative for cooperation on lower levels depends upon the people who lead in the various areas.

Pictures of the three group leaders share the front page. Statistics are found on page three. History of the Convention of the South as given by President Enwright of Charleston, South Carolina, is interesting. This information is presented to our readers so further thought can be given to what needs to be done next.

Laziness and prejudice sometimes prevent both thought and action. Neither is a desirable characteristic as listed in our Good Book. Surely we can find ways in which to build a stronger Church in our midst. The opportunity for cooperative endeavor may be God's test of our character. If we can prove our worth, our witness can go across our world, and in the effort we may save our souls — and our country.

When Conferences meet this fall will be a good time to think together about what may be wise to do. The committee on cooperation, representing all three groups, has made some suggestions. Members of churches will have ideas. By comparing the best thinking of all groups, we may be able to find the right road to progress for the United Church of Christ in our area.

FREEDOM AND SACRED HONOR

"To the survival and future of this city we Americans pledge: 'Our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor'." So said the Vice President of the United States, in a recent address before an assembly of people of West Berlin, Germany.

Long ago other men risked their fortunes and their lives that the United States might be free, and its Vice President was emphasizing what others have been sounding down the corridors of time for more than 175 years.

If any man in Russia's East Germany, or in any of its other satellites, dared say today what every man in the United States may say without fear, he would be lucky to escape a prison sentence.

For the German people to be told that their freedom would be protected was a far cry from what Hitler said to his countrymen 24 years ago when he shouted in a May Day speech that he would take away their children, train and educate them, including military service, and make them new Germans.

The ancients thought of many cruelties to inflict upon their helpless people, but nothing more cruel or sinister than Hitler's declaration to take the children from their parents. Yet that very cruelty, that monstrous and cowardly act, is being carried out to some degree in the communist world, especially in communist China. There children live in communes apart from their parents and are made slaves and brought up to know no other form of living.

But modern-day dictators fancy they can save the children of what they consider misguided people from the consequences of their own thoughts. Tolerance to such a mind is the proof not of strength but of weakness in a government. Accordingly, all who do not agree with the head of the government must be made to conform. Such is the communist system which the Kremlin is working so furiously to extend over the whole world.

It is impossible for the American people to comprehend such a system. But they are not the only ones who have retained their liberties and their principles throughout all troubled years. The Dutch are free and so are the Swiss as well as the Scandinavian countries. The British and the French are also free. But all free countries have had to defend their liberties, for liberties cannot be had unless they can be maintained.

Dictators often buy the liberties of their people by dangling some pie-in-sky promise to be fulfilled in future years. Mussolini promised the Italian people restoration of public order. Both Hitler and Mussolini promised vast increases in prosperity. So Nikita Khrushchev's recent extravagant promises that the Soviet Union would be a "paradise" in 20 years are the Hitler and Mussolini twists all over again. Such are the spawnings of false statements of all dictators.

Peoples who have managed to keep their liberties have managed to eat, and eat very well without promises of Utopia. And they have kept freedom because they have the habit of freedom. The United States has been especially fortunate because of the wisdom of the men who established its government.

The ways of freedom in a democracy seem at times to be slow and a government of divided powers appears on occasion to be ineffectual because of the necessity to reconcile opposing opinions. In the long run, however, freedom is the way of happiness... and that freedom and happiness in the United States have been purchased with the coin of "Our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor". Vice President Johnson has polished that coin.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

As I near the end of a year of part-time work for the National Women's Fellowship I am grateful for the opportunity it has given me to become acquainted with many fine people — both those who are on the staff of the Missions Council, and people in local churches from Florida to Nebraska. It has been thrilling to join with others in the Statement of Faith of the United Church of Christ in little country churches and in big city churches, in conference groups and in association rallies.

Along with the many things we do alike — use of the same themes, program materials and methods — some differences have been noted. For instance, many associations and conferences regularly alternate lay and ministerial leadership, while in this area the presidents and secretaries and other officials are almost always ministers. Occasionally the lay moderator in other states is a woman, but we seem to assume "it can never happen here."

In many conferences and associations (which correspond to our convention and conferences) the committees are one-third ministers, one-third laymen and one-third women. In many the corresponding chairmen from laymen's and women's organizations are automatically on a similar state committee — for instance, social action, or missions.

Outstanding laymen and women, too, are on the realignment committees which, in some states, have been at work for years. Just recently such were added to our realignment committee membership, which up to that time had been composed of officials and ministers.

Many areas seem to expect that their delegates to association, conference, General Council and Synod will report to the bodies they represent. In the Southern Convention we seldom seem to ask delegates to report, either to local churches or to the conference or convention.

Of course, we would hope that those visiting our area would find ideas which they think are good ones to use in their home churches or conferences.

All in all I have discovered, as have many before me, that this is a wonderful fellowship we have in the Congregational Christian churches, and that it is being enriched as we become a part of the United Church of Christ. So mote it be, forever and ever, amen!

Since April a "cell" group has been meeting at the parsonage of Parkway United Church, Winston-Salem, each Wednesday evening. Bible study, discussion and prayer are the "order of the evening." "The concern is not to cover the Bible rapidly, but to let God say what he will to us as we read and discuss. In four months we have covered less than five chapters!" says the pastor, Rev. J. R. Lackey. Intercessory prayer for members of the church is a regular part of the daily life of those who attend.

We Are Summoned As A People

By REV. J. T. ENWRIGHT, President
Talladega, Alabama, June 15, 1961

It is both the prerogative and the boon of the aging to be able to indulge in reflections on those events which have touched his life, or in which there has been serious involvement on his part. You will forgive me if I remember a few things about the history of our Convention.

History of Convention of the South

It was early in the year 1946 that I wrote a letter to Mr. Stanley U. North, who was at that time Secretary of our Urban Work, with special assignment to supervise what was then known as the Southeast District. This comprised all of the Negro work of the denomination that was in the South. I wondered what the possibilities were for organizing the Southeast District into an independent conference. His reply was one of encouragement. He sent copies of the constitutions of some of the independent conferences, and made certain suggestions, while pledging the full support of his department.

As a result, a meeting was called at the First Church of Atlanta, Georgia, for September 10-11, 1946. Nineteen conference leaders and staff members were invited. Twelve responded. These were: Reverends A. C. Curtright, H. H. Dunn, J. T. Enwright, W. J. Faulkner, E. M. Halliday, N. A. Holmes, W. M. Lake, F. A. Hargett, T. S. Ledbetter, S. U. North, J. T. Stanley and Miss O. A. Turrentine. Two full and rich days were devoted to discussing our proposal, and examining the original draft of a constitution that had been developed by Reverend Holmes and myself. At the suggestion of Mr. Halliday we concluded that we should try to merge our proposed conference with the old Afro-Christian Convention that was at that time still functioning.

The days of the Kings Mountain Summer Conference of 1947 were utilized in deliberations and ironing out the kinks in our proposed constitution. A special delegation was authorized to go to the meeting of the Afro Convention that would meet in Berkley, Virginia, the week following our June meeting at Kings Mountain. The days there were devoted to further refining the constitution, and to bringing into being what was to be the Convention of the South. In that meeting the constitution was approved and a president, the Reverend J. P. Mangrum, was elected. The next four years were utilized in securing the adoption of the constitution by the twelve conferences that were the constituents of the Convention. During that time the second biennial session was held.

The next session was held at St. Stephen's church in Greensboro. Here the problem was to bring the divergent elements together into a working organism, and to make the constitution the true instrument of the Convention. In that meeting also the speaker was elected president, and given the responsibility of trying to make the Convention a reality.

THE SPIRIT OF LIBERTY

The spirit of liberty is the spirit which is not too sure that it is right. The spirit of liberty is the spirit which seeks to understand the minds of other men and women. The spirit of liberty is the spirit which weighs their interest alongside its own, without bias. The spirit of liberty remembers that not even a sparrow falls to earth unheeded. The spirit of liberty is the spirit of Him, who, nearly 2,000 years ago, taught mankind that lesson it has never learned, but has never quite forgotten; that there may be a kingdom where the least shall be heard and considered side by side with the greatest.

—Judge Learned Hand

The fourth session was held in the First Congregational Church of Savannah, Georgia. We called that one our Constitutional Convention. In it we charted our course, and set to work in earnest.

In the Midwinter Meeting of the denomination held in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1954 we petitioned the Board of Home Missions to grant us independent status. A plan had been worked out under the direction of the Secretary of Urban Work whereby we would operate on a program of semi-independence for ten years. According to this plan we were to assume an additional tenth of our total budget, with the expectation that at the expiration of that period we would be on our own, having become a contributing member of the family of conferences of the denomination. We are presently in the seventh year of this program. We have done well. We are to be commended. Credit is to be given to departments of our operation, the staff, the conferences, and above all the individual churches which have moved forward in the whole area of O C W M. We have increased our services, broadened the base of our aid to churches, produced a good record in the Church Building Loan Fund, strengthened our churches and improved the ministry of our churches. Our giving has improved tremendously, as has the magnitude of our budget.

However, herein lies our problem. In approximately four years we should be able to assume our full budgetary responsibility. This should not be difficult. The reason we have not done so ahead of time is that we have not had the wholehearted support of a tremendously large block of our churches and their conferences. In these four years we must seek to find ways and means to win them into the O C W M column. I believe we can. I hope we will. Each time we have met in Convention we have been able to discern progress: In Raleigh, Atlanta, again in Greensboro and now here. Each of these occasions has been a source of renewal and inspiration to us. This meeting should be our best.

"Any Man's Death Diminishes Me"

The second study session of the program book for missions, to be used by our mission study groups, begins with this poem from the pen of John Donne:

"No man is an island, entire of itself; Every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the mainland; . . . Any man's death diminishes me, Because I am involved in mankind. Therefore, never send to know for whom the bell tolls, It tolls for thee."

Because a good part of mankind seems to be thinking about the sentiment of this poem, I would like to think with you of it too. And strangely enough I should like to draw your attention to what seems the tragic latter part of the quotation: ANY MAN'S DEATH DIMINISHES ME, Because I am involved in mankind. Therefore send not to know for whom the bell tolls, IT TOLLS FOR THEE.

Any church, church group, or individual church member must carry around deep within his consciousness an awareness of the awesome truthfulness of this. Our involvement with the fate of the man next door, or the child on the other side of the planet, is the germ of truth upon which we as Christians stand or fall.

It occurred to me that if the Israelites had clearly understood the true nature of the covenant between God and Abraham, they would not have tended to withdraw within themselves, but would have shared freely with the world about them that precious something that was their special legacy. Their mission to the world would have been even richer, and their suffering far less. The arrogance of Hitler and his Facism carried within it the seed of his destruction — and thus voided the tremendous mission of the Germanic peoples — at a time like this. The great hope that we can have in our own nation is that it is thinking globally — not in terms of conquering, but in terms of sharing. We are called upon to think globally, in terms of the great sharing mission that is ours.

The study course that is set up for those who will be present in person or in spirit in the Third Assembly of the World Council of Churches, meeting this year in New Delhi, India, has as its heart, as it were, the Christian's response to his involvement in man's affairs. These are WITNESS, SERVICE and UNITY. The church is to remind itself anew of its responsibility to bear witness to the illuminating Presence of Jesus Christ as the Redeeming Force in the life of man. We must be his witnesses. We then are to remind ourselves that witness involves both word and deed — so the church must be a serving church. And, then we must realize that a unified church can best serve the interests of a world-saving God.

We Are Summoned as a People

I would now draw your attention to the Stewardship Theme which is ours for this year: WE ARE SUMMONED, AS A PEOPLE. What a Statement of Purpose this is for us here assembled. We have been summoned — as a people. I watched the May Day gathering of the people in Cuba. It is said that one hundred thousand of them stood and listened to Castro for hours. Without concerning ourselves with their politics, we must be impressed with the awesome fact that these thousands had been summoned to Havana, as a people. The symbolism, the fervor, the hope, and the purpose were there. These people were being molded into a unified force that is to bear witness both in word and deed to this new revolutionary idea that has come to them, from abroad.

We are not so many, but we are several hundred, who do represent many thousands. We have been summoned, and we have been sent. The question before us is whether we can discover the kind of unity we need, in order to bear a far more effective witness, and through our churches to serve the present age far more effectively than we have in the past.

AS A PEOPLE we must concern ourselves more vitally with the worldwide outreach of our Christian World Mission. The new awakening of peoples over the world offers us a new and awesome challenge. Our dimes and our dollars can mean a great deal in providing these peoples with their multiple needs, in education, in medicine and in all of the tools for living a new and better life. I hear that our population here in this country is exploding. This calls for new churches, new educational buildings, new tools for learning, and many new consecrated preachers, teachers and religious leaders. As a People we can meet our share of the challenge.

I read of a friendly battle that was waged between President Briggs and President Lee, up there in Virginia — for CHEF. But in that kind of a war, everybody wins. Nobody can lose. Those who pledged are the richer. Those who contribute are much richer and the beneficiaries of their bounty will be far richer. AS A PEOPLE we can unite in this common enterprise of finding and nurturing new religious leaders for our expanding population.

Ecumenicity is part of the profile of our Church. We not only believe that God's church should be one, but we are working for it. The successive mergers in which we engage are geared to the prayer of our Lord, that his people should be one. AS A PEOPLE WE MUST THROW OUR STRENGTH BEHIND THIS ENTERPRISE. If God's people must be one, this is our means of doing what we can to make this prayer real.

Now, we as a Convention may be affected by this last imperative. Alignments may be changed, associations may change somewhat in geography or in color. Being human, I confess that we might feel a pang of regret that such meetings as we have here may soon be passe, but we may take comfort in the thought that a higher good is being attained, that a spiritual, moral and ethical blot is being erased by this process, and that the time will come when we shall all be perfectly at home together, regardless of skin texture.

McKays In Turkey

Dear Friends:

So far I have mentioned little about what we actually do during our day by day toil to earn our daily kurus. (Kurus, being a unit of money equal to about one tenth of an American cent). I might add that here our daily jobs hardly seem like something apart from us. Our home is right on campus and to say where our official duties ended and our private life began would be to draw a very thin line. The two overlap continually.

Each of us here in the station seem to have taken certain pet projects that we, in our own way, like to consider our "outreach" either within the campus walls or without, or a little of each. We are a small group of Christians, mostly Americans, in a town of 40,000 Turkish people. As you can imagine, our actions are quickly noticed. Sometimes we stand out because of different customs, often because we are known and have many friends in the community and not infrequently because of something we have done for the community.

An example of what I mean is our English Evening Course for adults. I am teaching thirty people who know no English, their first words of a new tongue. They love it. It is a new experience in a fast changing culture for them. Perhaps for some it is the first time that they have studied together with women. For others it is perhaps a new adventure in "classlessness." That is, there are several bankers, land owners, and doctors studying along with the local policemen and craftsmen in one apparently harmonious group. I enjoy the thrills of the group and later am entertained and in turn entertain various individuals whom I meet through this class.

Another one of my official functions through choice is coaching the school soccer team. Every other day we go and practice till the sun sets. We await the Saturday afternoon when our team with their bright red and white uniforms will flex their muscles in a stadium filled to capacity to see us play. As happened last year one of the opposing players was accidentally kicked by his own team-mate and split open his brow. Showing our immediate concern for the opponent and forgetting sides is our "outreach." It doesn't have the letters "Christian" labeled across it but, it's a different type of action... and it's noticed.

The Immanuel Church women last year sent ten dollars. In Turkey that is ninety liras. (A laundry worker earns 190 liras a month.) Eighty-five of these lira bought wire which I used this summer to make a tool crib for a crafts program. It all began last year making model airplanes in the basement of one of our dormitories. Now, instead of just airplanes we are making ping pong paddles, benches, marionettes, wallets, etc. We have really come into our own, but still of course lack many of the tools beyond the screwdriver, hammer, and saws. Hammering and banging away with these boys in between days of soccer practice just about takes up the time after school.

We often go as chaperones to the beach. If you want a real experience you should sit in the front seat of an old Turkish bus as it rattles its way to the beach some thirty miles away. In between rattles the melodious notes, equivalent to our party songs, but in Turkish, can be heard from the mouths of thirty or forty budding choristers who are happily looking forward to the coming splashes of the ocean.

Most of these things are a part of the daily schedule that regulates our time and I sometimes think even our eating, breathing and sleeping. Our integration into the school, when we take time to think about it, is really remarkable. I am sure that a very small percentage of people have the difficulty of distinguishing their private and working lives the way many of us do, and of course many wouldn't want to. That's the way it seems here especially for those of us who are working in the school institutions.

Final Meeting By South Norfolk Women

The Women's Fellowship of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church held its final meeting for the year 1960-61 with all six circles represented. Following the hymn "Love Lifted Me," prayer was offered by the president, Mrs. Esther Evans.

The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Carol Chappell, Spiritual Life chairman, who read the 15th Psalm. Her theme was "Getting Along With Each Other" in thoughts and conversation. She read two poems: "The Fine Art of Forgetting," and "Old Clothes." An increase in membership for the year was reported by the president.

Mrs. Mildred Bunch, chairman for cancer bandage work, gave a good report. A cancer station has been established in South Norfolk. Volunteer services of the church women of the community will aid in its operation in conjunction with the Tidewater Cancer Society.

Mrs. Evans, the president, appointed the circle leaders for the next two years and names were drawn for the re-grouping of the circles.

The program for the evening was presented by Mrs. Annette Harris, first vice president, who read the scripture from Ephesians 4:22-23. She spoke briefly on "Unity in Personal Relationship," a topic which she thought timely as we look forward to the work of another year with new groupings in our Fellowship and two aims:

1. Prayer — The living relationship with others and with God.

2. Practice — To seek communication with others, to listen and appreciate others as persons; and to share with others for Christian living.

The closing prayer was given by Mrs. Harris and the benediction by Mrs. Evans.

BANDAGES FOR DR. RIGGS

When Dr. Ed Riggs was in this area last spring, he said that one way to help him in his work with lepers was to send old sheets which could be used for bandages. There seems to be some misunderstanding about how they should be prepared for sending.

A recent letter from Miss Marjory Martin, Friendly Service secretary, quotes Dr. Riggs as follows:

"In general, I have been proposing as a guiding principle making the packages as unattractive to the eyes of the officials as possible. The whole sheets are the most commercially valuable in their eyes, no matter how old and torn. Neatly rolled bandages might also be something which would seem desirable to them. Therefore, unrolled strips, or sheets haphazardly torn up, rather than into regular measured strips, might be safer than the neatly rolled bandages I advocated in 1957."

Here is an easy and much-needed Friendly Service "extra" which any of our women's groups could do: Collect and tear into strips old sheets and pillow cases, bundle them up and send them off to Dr. Ed Riggs, Kilanjunai P. O., via Salaigraman, Ramnad District, South India.

The youth group at Turner's Chapel, Sanford, N. C., under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. James E. Porter, and counselors, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Wicker and Mr. and Mrs. Jake Gunter, has recently completed a project. Through the efforts of the group the interior of the sanctuary and the classrooms have been painted light green. The pews have been done over, with the ends of each pew finished in white. A new choir curtain of light beige has been added.

Also the woodwork on the outside of the church has been re-painted in white.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

The God Of Mercy

"Unto Thee, O my Strength, will I sing: for God is my defense, and the God of my mercy."

—Psa. 59:17

The prayers and songs of David are good, and interesting; and they reveal the worst and best in David. Somehow they reveal the good and bad in us, too. In one line he prays for the destruction of his enemies, in the next he loves and worships God for his mercy.

David hunts his arch enemy, Saul, and finding him sound asleep he fastens his garments to the ground with his dagger and mercifully, silently steals away. He asks God to visit destruction upon him, and yet he himself holds his dagger above his breast, and plays a boyish prank of driving it, not into his heart, but into a fold of Saul's garment by his side!

"Consume them in wrath, consume them, that they may not be," he is saying in this psalm, but in its last line he is in fellowship with the "God of my mercy"! How about that! And so it goes in so many of David's psalms.

The people who walk with God may show their anger at times, but God in his mercy, and love, and care for those who trust him, keeps them from doing as their angry words would imply. Angry, or afraid, their hearts are better than their speech. Simon Peter, afraid, denied Jesus — and went out and wept bitterly. It marred his record, but Peter was under the dominion of Jesus' mercy and love, and that made all the difference in the world.

Friends sometimes "lay one another low," more is the pity. I have seen it happen (in fact I have been a part of it, even as you have); but at the same time I have known that they were friends that value each other well, and love each other as friends. It ought not so to be — we should never allow our angry passions to rise; but most of a Christian's anger is never more "than skin deep." My uncle is now nearly ninety-four, and I have known and loved him well. I have seen him fume and fuss about many things, but none ever had a more generous heart and a finer appreciation of his family and friends. He lived in the hands of the "God of mercy." Let us aspire so to do! Amen.

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Planning The Year's Program

At this time of the year, we are thinking about planning the year's program for the fellowship groups of our churches. We find that there are some basic questions to ask before we begin. Among them may be questions such as these: What do we want to achieve? Why are we doing this? How will we get there? Just why are we thinking about program-planning? Perhaps something like this might be a start:

"The end-result of the programs and activities is to have a series of worthwhile, meaningful experiences in which senior high young people are intensely involved. These experiences must help teen-agers prepare for responsible adulthood, confront them with the urgent demands of the Christian gospel, and provide opportunities to respond to the love of God."

To get even close to this hope it is necessary to discover what you have at hand. Check off this list before you get started. You will need first a group of interested senior highs with probably five active persons. Secondly, you'll need a desire to make the group life and experiences worthwhile, and a willingness to put in the necessary time for planning and preparation, as well as for the meetings and activities. A set of resource materials is important for basic reference and guidance. You must also have a good adult advisor to counsel and coordinate.

Your planning will take time. The best setting is a week-end retreat. If this is impossible, why not get the whole group together for most of a whole day at your own church? Let it be known that this is a program-planning session, but there will be fun and fellowship as well as moments for worship and inspiration.

To begin your session, a wise move is to reflect on last year's activities. Recall the major events of the year, and determine whether each was good, fair, or poor. Think also of the structure of the meetings: the hours, setting, frequency, type, and organization. What was the high point of the year, and the low? Were you reaching your full potential membership? What were the special accomplishments of the year? Finally, from this past experience, what would your group want to include in the programs and structures for the year ahead?

Turn now to the purpose of the youth fellowship and its programs. The question can be asked: Why do you come to P. F.? Encourage frank comments and observations. Recognize that on the one hand many young people do come for the social times, while on the other hand there are some who look for religious depth in the fellowship activities. Call attention to the threefold Statement of Purpose and the Covenant. See if these "say" anything to your young people.

Move into a "dream session," to determine some challenging but realistic goals or aims for the group in the months ahead. Be wild and imaginative in your dreams. Permit no negative remarks, assume that everything is possible. Build on each other's dreams, and make a long, long list. A twenty-minute concentrated period should produce thirty to forty ideas. Then pick out five of the ideas which might be most worth pursuing in the year ahead.

Review again the main function and task of the three commissions. One way of defining the chief differences between the three commissions is to point out that each commission is concerned with certain program areas of the total youth program. The Faith Commission is concerned with the program areas of the "I-God" relationships (strengthening the Christian life and its response). The Action Commission is the "They" relationships (concern for others through missions, etc.). Christian Fellowship deals with the "We" relationships (within-family, in-group concerns and activities). The job of each commission is to become specialists within its program areas, to assemble the necessary resources, and to present programs and activities which grow out of these program areas.

It might be strategic to adopt some system of division into small groups which can be assigned to prepare and present a meeting program, to plan for a special social occasion, or to undertake an important assignment. The most likely plan is to divide the total membership into small groups of about six to eight persons each. The division may be made by age and school grades; by geography, bringing together those who live in the same general area; by "spreading the strength" so that no one group appears to be stronger than another; or by dividing the group into three parts, one-third for each commission. Thus the burden of preparation and presentation of a program or activity rests with the small group instead of one or two individuals.

You will probably want to divide the year into seasons. This not only gives you several workable chunks of the year, but it also helps you to have a more balanced program over the months. At the same time, see if you are satisfied with the present pattern of meeting dates, the hours, the room, the procedure, and other such details.

Unity And Youth: Ann Arbor 1961

By Betty Thompson

Christian unity on the North American continent may be strongly influenced in the years ahead by encounters which took place on a mid-western campus in August 1961.

The two thousand young Christians at the first North American Ecumenical Youth Assembly which met at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, August 16-23, issued no message to the world nor the churches to which they belong. The assembly made few headlines but it may make history.

"Entrusted with the Message of Reconciliation" was the theme for the gathering. Never before had so many Protestant, Anglican, and Orthodox young people from Canada and the United States been specially delegated to an ecumenical assembly. Among those attending were Rev. Robert Knowles, Rosemary Hoffman, and Hubie Young of the Southern Convention, and Rev. James Cress and Mary Helen Stasavitch of the Southern Synod.

enter those events and activities which are traditional in your church. Then enter the major school activities and dates of beyond-church rallies and conferences you may wish to attend. Refer now to the ideas brought up in the dream session and enter as many of these as possible. Finally, on the open dates, have the small groups volunteer to have programs.

In closing, here are some principles for planning from "The Fellowship Idea" in the High Fellowship Set:

(1) Discover the emphases which the whole church and other youth organizations are planning.

(2) Plan a flexible program, one that will allow for last minute changes.

(3) Plan a well-balanced program including worship, recreation, and study.

(4) Plan a theme for the meeting and use a variety of methods to carry it out.

(5) Discover the resources available for your programming.

(6) Invite everyone to share in the planning either at the planning session or by sharing in committees and commissions.

(7) Youth and adults should plan together.

by the assembly to raise provocative questions more than succeeded in that aim. The first was "Break Them in Pieces," a drama of four troubled and rootless people in the contemporary world, written by 26-year-old Rhodes scholar Fred Myers.

The assembly delegates rose in wildly applauding acclamation at the end of "For Heaven's Sake" a satirical musical review. The next morning they backed up their enthusiasm with orders for 1000 copies of an original cast record of the musical so they could listen again to such lyrics as "Use me, O Lord... But NOT just now..."

As soon as I've reached retirement
As soon as they're getting ahead
As soon as I draw my pensions
As soon as I am dead!

Delegates had opportunity to listen and learn as much as they could absorb from such speakers as the World Council of Churches' president,

The assembly, held for the purpose of study and encounter, was sponsored by the youth departments of the World Council of Churches and by the World Council of Christian Education, the Committee of Young People's work of the Canadian Council of Churches, and the United Christian Youth Movement, affiliated with the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

For seven days the high school and college students from widely varying geographical and theological backgrounds gave and sustained a number of shocks. They were from 40 different religious groups.

Delegates were shocked as often by their lack of knowledge of their own traditions as they were by the strange liturgical practices and theological convictions of others. Greater confessional awareness grew along with more restlessness at the divided state of Christ's church.

The heart of the assembly was the Bible study and the large group was divided into 125 small ones each morning after the main theme presentation. Here delegates grappled with the meaning of the Bible for themselves and their world.

Two plays specially commissioned Archbishop Iakovos of the Greek Archdiocese of North and South America. He led a worship service in the Orthodox tradition one morning. That afternoon he spoke to a general session for those not attending the twelve denominational youth meetings which had their national planning sessions each afternoon.

A startling outdoor exhibition by one of America's most talented younger photographers Ed Wallowitch caused wide comment from the assembly and Ann Arbor citizens.

The denominational youth sessions were considered by some a threat to the real concern for unity of the conference. But others welcomed such opportunities as that afforded Methodists, Presbyterians, United Church of Christ members, and Episcopalians who met together to hear Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, U. S. Presbyterian leader, discuss his proposal for the merger of those four churches.

The most painful moment in the assembly came at worship time on Sunday morning when it was brought home to delegates that they were not united at the table of the Lord. There was no common service of worship and Holy Communion on that morning because of the differing doctrines regarding the sacrament.

U Kyaw Than, a Burmese Christian, said "We cannot break the bread together, we cannot drink the cup of fellowship. We renew the scars on His Body and tear asunder His image."

As they returned to their homes young delegates left with the challenge of the final speaker William Stringfellow, a New York attorney who has done most of his practice in East Harlem.

Charging that the assembly was not truly ecumenical Stringfellow said "if it cares for the wholeness of the Body of Christ it must first confront and confess the fact that the disunity of the churches today has almost utterly immobilized both the service of the churches to Christ and the mission of the Church in the world."

The seriousness with which the young Christian leaders from Canada and the United States respond to this will determine the future of Christian unity on this continent in the years ahead.

Titus, A Competent Pastor

Background Scripture: III Corinthians 2:12, 13; 7:6, 13, 14; 8:6, 16-20; 12:18;

Galatians 2:1-3; II Timothy 4:10.

Devotional Reading: Titus 2:1-14.

Titus was one of Paul's intimate friends, his companion in missionary travels, and one of his assistants and most valuable assistants in Christian work. Strangely enough his name does not occur in Acts. But Paul refers to him as "my true child after a common faith" and it is quite probable that he was one of Paul's converts. He was a good man, and also a most capable man, tactful, resourceful and skillful in the handling of men and solving difficult situations.

Titus a Test Case

Titus first appears in connection with a test case and an important test case in Acts 15:2 — he is not named here, but a fuller reference is made to him in this connection in Galatians 2:3-5. As stated above, Titus was converted and became a Christian. The Jews insisted that he become circumcised. Titus was a Greek, and Paul refused to have him circumcised. There was a great issue here. Did a man have to become a Jew before he could become a Christian? Did he have to submit to a Jewish rite and observe the Jewish law before he became a Christian? Was Christianity simply a higher form of Judaism? Was a man saved by works or by grace? If Paul had agreed to have Titus circumcised he would have compromised at a most vital point. To the Judaizers Paul "gave place by subjection, no not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you." (Galatians 2:5) Paul won here once and for all a decision in favor of the free promulgation of the gospel as preached by him, and unrestricted by Jewish ordinances.

If it be mentioned that Paul did have Timothy circumcised and therefore seemed inconsistent, it would be noted that Timothy was a Jew, and Paul made a concession at that point, but without any compromise of his basic position. All of this has meaning for us today. A man comes into a saving relation to Jesus Christ, not by rites and ceremonies or works, but by a simple and sincere act of faith.

Titus a Trouble-Shooter

Industries and organizations have men who are called "trouble shooters," men who spot trouble in machinery, power lines, and who remedy the trouble. Titus was one of Paul's most dependable "trouble shooters." Did

Paul need a man to go to Corinth to deal with a case of immorality in the church there? He sent Titus who was highly successful in his mission. Did he need a man who could give guidance and inspiration to the effort to raise money for the church at Jerusalem? He sent Titus. Did trouble arise again in the Corinthian church calling for a man with tact and firmness and grace? Whom should he send but Titus? And what about the Church in Crete, made up of cantankerous, crude, common folks — "vain talkers, liars, evil beasts, slow bellies"? Paul describes them thus. He sent Titus there to serve as pastor of this unlikely and unlovely people, "to set in order the things that are wanting." Again and again Titus was given a difficult assignment and again and again he performed it with wisdom and tact and grace and success. Titus was a strong, silent man, the type of minister who is badly needed in every modern church.

Making the Best of a Bad Situation

As the writer of these Notes thought about this lesson, he was reminded of a sermon preached by Dr. Fosdick many years ago on the theme "Making the Best of a Bad Situation." His text for this memorable sermon was "For this cause left I thee in Crete." Titus 1:5. It was a challenging and comforting message to all who live in hard places or have hard jobs. It is just because of that fact that God has placed us there. We are to make the best of bad situations, taking what life brings us, and making not only the best but the most of them. After all real men and women want hard jobs. Maltie Babcock summed it all up in a short poem as follows:

"Be strong! We are not here to play,
to dream, to drift;

We have hard work to do and loads to lift.

Shun not the struggle, face it, 'tis
God's gift. Be strong, be strong.

Be strong; Say not the days are evil—who's to blame?

And fold the hands and acquiesce —
O shame!

Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name. Be strong! Be strong!

The Minister's Life, The Life of His Preaching

In his letter to his beloved Titus, Paul gives some of the characteristics of the good minister of Jesus Christ. He has something to say about the man's preparation — "he should hold fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine, both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers." But his emphasis is upon the minister's life and character. Both in private and domestic life, as well as in public life, he must be a man of unquestioned integrity of character, above suspicion, sober, just, holy, temperate. Paul was simply saying that the life of the minister is the life of the minister's preaching. There may be professions where the character of the man is not so vital — although character is always important. But in the ministry, character is the first essential. A man may have all the gifts and training he could desire, but if he is not a good man, if he does not have good character, he can never be a good minister in the best sense of the word. A minister has many difficult assignments in a modern church, but the most difficult thing he has to do is to live like a minister ought to live. There is not much excuse for slovenly and dull preaching, but people can put up with poor preaching after a fashion if they believe the minister is a good man. And even the people who do not agree with a minister and may not have much use for religion and the church, will take knowledge of a good man. "He that is of the counterpart may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you," writes Paul.

Rev. John Kittenger, professor of English and Bible at Elon College was the guest speaker at First, Burlington, August 27.

For its August meeting the Women's Fellowship of Northview had a family night picnic. All members of the church and their families were invited. At this meeting officers for the coming year were installed.

All churches in the Western N. C. Conference, whether they are participating in the Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission or not, are invited to share in the rally to be held at the Ramseur church next Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Speaker will be Rev. Robert A. Happel, Cleveland, Ohio, association secretary of the office of evangelism for the United Church of Christ. His topic will be "Truth and Consequences."

A combined choir from the churches in the Conference will furnish special music. Practice will be held at the Ramseur church Saturday evening at 7:30. Choir members from all churches in the Conference are invited to participate.

Ministers will meet for lunch Friday, September 8, at the Dixie Drive-In restaurant, on highways 49 and 64, Asheboro. Speaker will be the regional director, Rev. Louis F. Suedmeyer of Baltimore.

REVIVAL AT GIBSONVILLE

Revival services will be held at the Gibsonville church next week, according to announcement by Rev. J. Avery Brown, pastor. Guest speaker will be Rev. J. L. Neese.

September 10 will be "homecoming" with special services in honor of the 22nd anniversary of the church. There will be a picnic lunch following the morning worship and a two o'clock service. Evening services will be held at 7:30 through the week.

BAY VIEW TO CONSECRATE NEW BUILDINGS

Services will be held at Bay View, Norfolk, next Sunday at 11:00 a.m., 3:00 p.m., and 7:30 p.m., according to announcement by the pastor, Dr. Charles F. Pegram, in a special day of consecration for the new church and educational building.

The formal consecration ceremony will be at three o'clock and will be followed by a social hour sponsored by the Women's Fellowship. Former pastors, and pastors and members of churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference have received special invitations to attend.

Twelve members of Suffolk Christian Church will be entering college as freshmen this fall. Those going to Elon are Jimmy Dailey and Betty Fletcher.

Come To See Us November Fourth

Dear Friends:

It is our hope and desire that Saturday, November 4, 1961, will become a red letter day in the history of our Home for Children. On this day we hope to have representatives of every church in our Convention visit our campus.

As you know, the months of November and December are the months that the Home has been given to make a special appeal to the churches. This appeal goes not only to our churches, but to various places of business and industry as well as interested individuals both within and without our denomination. Our appeal also goes beyond our two states of North Carolina and Virginia to a number of our churches in other areas that have shown an interest in our Home.

Why do we want the people of our church to visit our campus? First, we are eager for you to see the two new cottages that our younger boys and girls are now living in. Secondly, we hope to have the remodeling of Johnston Hall completed at that time. Thirdly, the Alumni Association is going ahead with plans to build a swimming pool on our campus this fall so it will be ready next summer. By building it now in the off-season they will be able to get a better price construction-wise. Then, fourthly, we would like for you to see our entire campus and our truck-patch farm operation. Because we have ceased to farm on a big scale many people think we do not farm at all. This is not true. We do farm to the extent of meeting our needs. This is proving to be very profitable to us. We also have a small herd of beef cattle and hogs for killing this fall. We are also keeping two hogs for breeding purposes so we can meet our own demand as to the number of hogs we will need each year. Thus we are operating our farm to the extent of meeting our own needs. We try to do only that farming that will be profitable to our total program. After all, our end result is not a farming program, but to prepare boys and girls to take their rightful place in society when they leave our Home.

These are some of the reasons we want you to visit our campus. This day will prove to be a success only if such as you who are reading this column will give the day your full support. Please join with others in your church in a united effort to make sure that your church will be represented on November Fourth when your Children's Home will have open house.

"EACH ONE REACH ONE"

In an effort to discover how a newcomer to the community chooses a congenial church home, the Reverend David Pratt, minister of Pilgrim Congregational Church, Pomona, Calif., asked the members of his congregation how each happened to come to his church for the first time. He found that an amazing number, more than fifty per cent, came because they were "invited by a member."

"I am more positive now than ever before," said Mr. Pratt after the survey, "that the church grows in numbers and extends its influence in proportion to the witnessing of its members. Nothing takes the place of the rule of 'each one, reach one!'"

Mr. Wynn Riley, a graduate of Elon College with a master's degree from Columbia University, began his duties as organist and choir director at First, Burlington, this month.

Schools Adding Fourth R

By G. K. Hodenfield

Washington — Renewed emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic, and a rapid spread in foreign language teaching, spaceage science and how-to-study courses.

That will be the pattern in many public schools this fall when more than 37 million pupils return to the classroom.

A survey by the National Education Association (NEA), released recently, indicates that grade schools and high schools from coast to coast are adding a fourth R—"rigor"—to the curriculum.

The survey doesn't necessarily indicate a trend. But some of the examples cited should please even the most bitter of those critics who call American education soft.

In Davenport, Iowa, for instance, English classes for all 7th and 8th graders will be extended from 46 to 92 minutes a day. Emphasis will be on spelling, reading, and writing. Teachers will have lighter classroom loads so they can spend more time on lesson preparation, grading themes, etc.

In Beverly Hills, Calif., students in grades 7 through 12 will be expected to write at least one theme a week. Auburn, N. Y., plans increased emphasis on teaching pupils to write — and so does Harvey, Ill., and Mt. Lebanon, Pa.

A poor reader is inevitably a poor learner. Many schools this fall will introduce special courses to meet this problem.

Cheyenne, Wyo., hopes to identify potentially poor readers as early as kindergarten. Many cities, such as Farmingdale, N. Y., will offer remedial reading courses all the way through grade school and high school.

Some cities, such as Union City, N. J., and Medford, Mass., have introduced special programs for teachers to improve reading instruction.

New programs of arithmetic and mathematics, particularly those developed at Yale and the University of Illinois, are winning general acceptance across the country, the NEA survey indicated.

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., has gone a step further with a course in "the arithmetic of flying," designed to show the importance of mathematics in the space age.

In another move to keep the schools in step with the space age, Parma, Ohio, reported it will introduce this fall a course in astronomy, complete with planetarium. Other schools reported that earth science courses are becoming increasingly popular.

Foreign language courses are spreading so rapidly through the U.S. public schools that the figures are running far behind the facts.

In Santa Cruz, Calif., all pupils from kindergarten through the sixth grade will get Spanish lessons this fall. In Farmingdale, N. Y., all students from grades 4 through 12 will have a 30-minute period of conversational foreign language, five days a week, all year long. Marion, Ohio is working toward a 10-year sequence in Spanish.

Most educators agree that many college students flunk out in their freshman year only because they don't know how to study. This year, for the first time in the annual NEA survey, many high schools reported they plan special courses to meet this problem.

In Laredo, Tex., for instance, there will be a one-semester course in how to study, designed especially for college-bound students, Boise, Idaho, and Tyler, Tex., plan similar programs with emphasis on taking notes in the classroom.

Other developments:

Bloomfield, N. J., will experiment with the use of teaching machines in special classes for mentally retarded children.

Reno, Nev., plans special classes for slow learners in junior high school.

Casper, Wyo., is scheduling more special classes for both gifted and retarded learners.

Beverly Hills, Calif., has scheduled an optional class, beginning at 7:45 a.m., for students who want to — or need to — take special work.

I'D LIKE TO FIND

1. Enough umbrellas to give one to each member, so she could come to meetings, rain or shine.

2. Some DDT to spray and kill all excuses.

3. Some vitamin pills to give each member so she would want to work.

4. A new pair of glasses that I could lend to each one, so each could get a vision of what we are trying to do.

A Minister's Wife

I love you for the many ways
You've made me glad through all my days;
For th' kind of man you've helped me be,
For the kind of love you've given me.
I love you so for what you are,
And find in you my guiding star;
If I miss the train there you've stood
With counsel great and kind and good.
You raced with me when'er I'd go
Adventuring forth with heart aglow;
You joined with me both hand and soul,
Made right the way, and good the goal.
I love you for the patient way
You've seen me through the darkest day
And praised my work as if 't were good—
But being my wife perhaps you should!

Once To Every Man And Nation

Theme Hymn—1961-62 Laymen's Fellowship and Women's Fellowship

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth with falsehood,
For the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah,
Offering each the bloom or blight,
And the choice goes by forever
'Twixt that darkness and that light.

By the light of burning martyrs,
Jesus' bleeding feet I track,
Toiling up new Calvaries ever
With the cross that turns not back;
New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of truth.

Though the cause of evil prosper,
Yet 'tis truth alone is strong,
Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne.
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow

—James Russell Lowell

(Tune: Ton-Y-BoTel; may be sung to Austrian Hymn (Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken), Beecher (Love Divine), Ellesdie (Hark! the Voice of Jesus Calling), or Erie (What A Friend We Have in Jesus).

Truth Never Dies

Truth never dies. The ages come and go.
The mountains wear away, the stars retire.
Destruction lays earth's mighty cities low;
And empires, states, and dynasties expire;
But caught and handed onward by the wise,
Truth never dies.

Though unreceived and scoffed at through the years;
Though made the butt of ridicule and jest;
Though held aloft for mockery and jeers,
Denied by those of transient powers possessed,
Insulted by the insolence of lies,
Truth never dies.

It answers not. It does not take offense,
But with a mighty silence bides its time;
As some great cliff that braves the elements
And lifts through all the storms its head sublime,
It ever stands, uplifted by the wise;
And never dies.

As rests the Sphinx amid the Egyptian sands;
As looms on high the snowy peak and crest;
As firm and patient as Gibraltar stands,
So truth, unwearied, waits the era blest
When men shall turn to it with great surprise.
Truth never dies.

Why Subscribe?

Why do some 3,000 families in North Carolina and Virginia subscribe to this paper? Why do people in Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Hawaii, Africa, England, India, Japan, and Turkey subscribe for this area denominational paper? (The paper goes also to all Congregational Christian State Superintendents and to all ministers of the Southern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.)

The answer to this WHY is not easy, and there has been no survey to get answers. But even an editor can take a guess.

1. Some people think they should. They are members of our churches. They think there should be a paper, and so they subscribe without being too eager to read. (No comment.)

2. Friendship catches some. Ministers who have served in our area, members who have moved away, and friends of people who live here join in reading the paper to get news of their friends hereabouts. (Better than above.)

3. The paper carries important information and bits of inspirational material, plans and programs that are helpful, news of people and churches, comments on pressing problems of our day. (Let's not brag.)

4. A subscription is a bargain. It is one thing that can be bought for almost the same it was 117 years ago. Farmers can subscribe a full year for the price of five pounds of tobacco (but please do not send the tobacco for we do not want the people in the Convention Office at Elon College to develop bad habits). There is enough material for four 400 page books — and the price is only $3.00, or $2.00 when sent by the church for half the membership. (Here's your bargain.)

There must be many other good reasons for subscribing, or so many people over such a wide area would not do so. But the disturbing thing is that more than two thirds of our church families do not subscribe. This fall is a good time to change this record. Thank you. Ed.

Here And There Among The Churches

Rev. Bill Traylor, pastor of Bethel and Concord churches, is the guest speaker for a revival at Spoon's Chapel September 10-17. Lynwood Hubbard is the minister.

A revival was held at Moore Union August 27-September 1. Many members who live at a distance were able to come back for these services, writes the pastor, James E. Porter.

Rev. Tucker G. Humphries, pastor of our Franklin church, is speaking at a revival at the Waverly church this week. Next week he will be the speaker for a revival at Antioch, Winsor, Virginia.

New additions to the sanctuary of The Christian Temple, Norfolk, are pulpit hangings, the first of three to be secured in the colors for the church year. Also new national and Christian flags have been bought.

The Young People's Class of Bethlehem, Tenth Legion, Virginia, sponsored a lawn party at the church Saturday, September 9, for the benefit of the building fund. Rev. Bland Leebrick is the new pastor.

Rev. John H. Shope has resigned as Secretary for City Church and Urban Strategy of the Board of National Missions of the E. and R. Church to become a professor in the division of social science of the Inter-American University of Puerto Rico. The University, although a private institution, receives support from the United Church of Christ and several other denominations.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Robinson of Fairfield, Connecticut, visited their children in the Southern Convention the first week of September. Dr. Robinson was formerly the pastor of First, Burlington.

The "Family Life Group" at First, Asheville, will resume its meetings in September. This group, which meets during the Sunday school hour, will begin a series on the Christian Family in Rapid Social Change.

A commissioning service for visitation workers who will make calls for the TRPM was held at Mt. Zion, Eclipse, Virginia, during the 11 a.m. service September 3. Rev. Thomas Madren will be the TRPM speaker. Rev. James Madren is the pastor.

E. N. C. CONFERENCE

The Annual Session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference will be held on Tuesday, October 31, 1961, in the Shallow Well Congregational Christian Church in Sanford, N. C. The guest speaker for this session of conference will be Dr. Nathanael Guptill, executive of the Commission on the Ministry, United Church of Christ.

An interesting evening program is planned with emphasis on the Recruitment of Christian Workers. It is hoped that a large delegation of young people will be present for the evening session.

The chairman of the standing committees of the Conference are asked to send in their reports as soon as possible to the conference secretary, Rev. Rosser L. Clapp, 1308 Frederick Road, Garner, North Carolina.

First Congregational Christian Church, Portsmouth, is planning for its sixtieth anniversary. The committee making plans is composed of Rev. Daniel A. Bowers, B. F. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Lee, Mrs. L. V. Gerbie, Mrs. Eugene Jeanette, B. L. Sawyer and Mrs. Dave White.

Rev. Daniel Bowers, pastor of First, Portsmouth, attended the executive committee meeting of the Committee on Cultural Relations of the Virginia Council of Churches in Richmond August 28. He was the speaker for the Prince George County Sunday School Convention August 30.

CLARK BECOMES NEW PASTOR AT DAMASCUS

Rev. Ellis N. Clark has recently moved to Sunbury, N. C., where he will serve the Damascus church. He was previously the pastor of Cypress Chapel, and he is continuing to serve the Oak Grove church. Mr. Clark finished his work at Cypress Chapel August 27, at which time he received four young people as members of Cypress Chapel and five young people as members of the Sunbury church.

In appreciation of the work that the Clarks had done there, Cypress Chapel presented them with a gift of sterling silver flat-wear, service for six. Mrs. Clark also received several extra serving pieces from the choir, the Tommie Ellis Bible Class, and the Nettie Harrell Bible Class. The Ladies' Bible Class gave a silver serving tray. The Clarks report that they appreciate very much this thoughtfulness.

Rev. Julius Rice, minister of Bayside, is the visiting missionary at Union Ridge, Burlington, for the TRPM September 8-15. In the absence of the minister, the speaker at Bayside September 10 was Dr. R. B. Proctor, retired Methodist minister.

Rev. Carl R. Martin, a graduate of Elon College and Lancaster Theological Seminary, became the pastor of Emmanuel Evangelical and Reformed Church, Lincolnton, North Carolina, August 21. Previously he had served the St. Paul-Keller churches, Kannapolis and Shiloh church, Faith, North Carolina.

IMPROVEMENTS AT SUNBURY

An air-conditioning system for the sanctuary of the Congregational Christian church in Sunbury, N. C., has been presented to the church by Mr. S. A. Twifford, of Elizabeth City in honor of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Twifford. Mrs. Lilly Twifford, his mother, was a former member of the Sunbury church. Air-conditioning for the Sunday school rooms has been given by the church membership. The parsonage has been painted inside and out, and new metal awnings have been added to it. The study of the pastor, Ellis Clark, has been finished in knotty pine.

Sunday, September 24. Sunday school teachers will be honored at Bayside. Children are to be requested to sit with their teachers during the 11 a.m. service. Refreshments will be served in the social hall immediately afterward. That evening parents and teachers of kindergarten classes will meet to learn about the new kindergarten literature that the Sunday school will begin to use in October.

SCHOLARSHIPS TO CATAWBA COLLEGE

The Southern Synodical Women's Guild has awarded four $100 scholarships to Catawba students for the current college year. Recipients are Wayne Bowers, sophomore, Route 2, Lexington; Marie Hefner, senior, Hickory; Linda Nell Linville, freshman, Winston-Salem; and Sara Elizabeth Ward, freshman, Route 1, Lexington.

The National Women's Guild has awarded scholarships of $250 each to the following Catawba students: Annie Louise Carpenter, senior, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Huit Carpenter, Kannapolis; Martha Long, sophomore, Route 3, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania; Rebecca Sills, junior, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Horace Sills, Orlando, Florida; and William Sink, senior, Route 9, Winston-Salem.

On each of the four Monday evenings September 4 through October 2, members of Great Bridge church will gather for cottage prayer meetings in connection with the TRPM. Eight groups will meet on each evening, each in the home of a member of the church.

Several gifts have been made to the Bayside church in the form of furnishings for the social hall. A picture, painted by the church's director of music, now hangs over the mantel, in a frame made by one of the members. Other gifts include a rubber plant and a firescreen.

ROSEMONT DEACONS BANQUET

The Board of Senior Deacons of the Rosemont Christian Church held their annual banquet in the Sunset Manor banquet hall located on the Military Highway on the evening of August 29 at 7:00 p.m. As is their custom the wives were included in this event. The attendance was very good. All but one deacon was able to attend and he was away on vacation. A good meal and fine fellowship was enjoyed by all present.

After dinner the chairman conducted a short business session taking care of routine business. He then requested the pastor, Rev. C. W. Lewis, to introduce the speaker from Bay View Christian Church, Dr. Charles Pegram. The speaker in his dynamic way spoke on the "privilege" and "responsibility" of being a deacon. He explained in detail the great importance of this office. He covered this subject from its origin where the Bible speaks of the first deacons. He touched on many Scripture passages dealing with this group. He impressed on his listeners the great sacred task of their leadership.

Dr. Pegram is a retired chaplain. He is a forceful speaker. With his bits of wit he gets off to a good start, then he gets into the great deep truths of the Bible and holds his audience. He must have deeply impressed everyone present considering the after dinner comments. Mrs. Pegram was also present and we enjoyed their visit with us.

Officers of the Board of Deacons are: Raymond Niles, chairman; Luther Bondurant, vice chairman; and W. C. Morrison, secretary and treasurer.

We Are All Evangelists!

Dr. Richard K. Morton, Chaplain of Jacksonville University
2827 Holly Point Drive, Jacksonville 11, Florida

Evangelism is a term now used almost entirely in connection with campaigns by professional evangelists or in association with some emotional or conversion experience realized or sought. Usually, too, it is an activity engaged in by very conservative and orthodox elements in any religious group.

To me this is tragically unfortunate — and also quite unnecessary.

I believe that we all are — and must be — in some sense evangelists. Even if our methods and principles do not take to the forms of evangelistic effort which are common in our area, we have some form of evangelism — even if it is one which is hostile to traditional and established evangelism. I mean to say that we all have some means — good or bad, effective or ineffective — of espousing what we strongly believe to be true and necessary or desirable. In the field of religion we may indeed make do with some vague and weak concepts of this great effort and have few results to show for our more or less unplanned efforts.

In the best sense of our liberal and free churches, I think we ought to be “liberal evangelists.”

To make a beginning in this field we must develop some clear concepts of what is vital and basic in the religion of Jesus and in the Christianity the Church developed in his service. This calls for some research and study and planning. There is little motivation for evangelism if we never succeed in finding or understanding anything which we really want to adopt and proclaim. The evangelist must be a seeker after this message which so many heard and proclaimed before him. He must, in our view, want to find out what it really was, and to divest it from any accrued encrustations, adaptations, or corruptions. He must want to assure himself that his trumpet will sound no uncertain and no false note and that what he proclaims has the authority, the power, and the value which Jesus put into it.

Evangelism springs forth out of love — love of God and of man. It is the product of the activity of the Spirit within man and must follow along lines indicated by individual experience. For most situations there is nothing more flat and ineffectual than stereotyped evangelism, using stock phrases and approved artificialities. Few indeed are reached by what is not personal and genuine.

No one can calculate the loss to the Christian Church of the spirit of evangelism — especially among its more educated and experienced people. Disgusted with so many excesses and superficialities committed in the name of evangelism, they abandon it for a stiff ceremonialism or a formidable and lofty intellectualism, which cuts them off from the masses of the people. In this way the church loses its common and human touch, its ability to lead and to help.

If the Church once more is to be able to minister to the deeper needs of mankind, its fellowship must learn once more how to evangelize. Its people must themselves be disciples of the burning heart and the transformed mind. They must thrill to the challenge of the march and the open fields and to the great ingathering task that awaits the real follower of Jesus.

We are all indeed evangelists! The tragedy of it is that so few of us are working at this primary task. Only since the devotees of Communism have globally taken the offensive and this has threatened our way of life, have more of us realized the survival value of effective evangelism. Either we shall be able to win people to the way of Christ, or we shall be servants of Communism one day!

In addition to this urgency, however, most of us at one time or another feel, I think, that our religious experience lacks power and meaning if it does not include a personal evangelism.

For myself, I can illustrate this in the following manner: It has been possible for me to have a widening ministry by radio and television for several years, centering particularly around some brief Scripture-based

This Interested Me By EMILY C. LESTER

Sometimes we seem to have meetings for the sake of having them, or because a certain type of meeting has always been held on a certain date in a certain way.

Last summer I had an opportunity to read the history of the Congregational church in Baxter, Iowa, prepared by Jean Poage, president of the Iowa Women's Fellowship. In it I found the following:

“The Congregational church of Baxter was host to the Jasper County Sunday School Convention June 6-7, 1888. The Rev. W. W. Hazen of Baxter discussed the best ways to encourage the study of the lesson. He spoke with earnestness, urging the assistance of parents at home. I. O. Kemble stated that children should be taught Bible geography, locality, customs and costume. J. C. Poulson said teachers should square their lives by God's word before trying to teach. D. Brown said to keep children busy. Miss Robinson would have every child own a Bible.”

How many of our Sunday School Convention programs are similar to those of 1888, I wonder? Could we put more stress on leadership training, trying to be sure that teachers and officers are urged to attend, rather than just “anyone who can go,” regardless of their interest in Christian education? Should we stress the importance of and ways to use our own denominational literature? Should we give practical helps for developing worship services rather than “opening exercises?” Maybe we do all of these things, and many more.

It interested me to notice that the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention next year is to be a supper and evening meeting, rather than an all-day session. Thereby, it is hoped, more teachers and officers will be able to attend.

Some areas are having their regular Conference sessions over a week-end, so that more lay participation can be insured. No “gimmick” can make certain the success of Sunday School Convention or Church Conference. Let us use the advice of the leaders on our Convention staff to make our meetings the most meaningful possible — rather than having them just as they were “in grandpa's day.”

REHABILITATION

Quiet now...
Close the mind's door
On the business of the day
And for this brief moment
Clear the way
For God.

Quiet now...
No need for words.
Listen... and be still...
His voice will direct,
His spirit fill
Your soul.

Quiet now...
Breathe in new strength,
New courage. Learn
His master plan for you...
Then, in peace, return
To duty.

inspirational words used during the afternoons by various radio stations and some equally brief inspirational words, based on some illustration or personal experience, broadcast at sign-off. Response to these has been far beyond my expectations, revealing that many were not looking for a deep or complex explanation of some theological or philosophical matter, but simply a friendly word. Then again, as one who has for more than thirty years been delivering sermons, lectures, study-course talks, and so on, I was profoundly moved — at long last — in a service to have the assistant declare at the close of the service that the message delivered called for personal action and commitment. He asked all who agreed and were serious in their dedication to come forward. I thought that once more there would be just a token response, if any at all — only to find the front of the church and half the center aisle clogged with those who wanted to kneel in prayer or shake my hand. It was an experience I had hungered for over many a year — and I shall not soon forget it. But I am greatly stirred to do what I can to cause it to be repeated.

There are, I am confident, roles and ways in which each of us can carry on some form of evangelism. The opportunity is great; the rewards may be in terms of human lives and destiny!

Scholarships For North Carolina Indians

A record number of young American Indians will be going to college this fall as the result of an expanded scholarship program of two Protestant church groups and one secular agency.

A program combining resources of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches, the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church and the American Association on Indian Affairs, has allocated approximately $50,000 in scholarship funds to 131 young people of American Indian descent. In addition, 33 scholarships were awarded by the Congregational Christian Board to Spanish-American young people.

The Rev. Galen R. Weaver, New York City, race relations secretary for the Congregational Christian group and chairman of the combined selection committee, explained that the scholarship program was intended "to encourage all young people in these minority racial and cultural groups, where higher education is the exception rather than the rule, to seek an education."

Mr. Weaver explained that the scholarships were granted without respect to religious affiliation of the applicants. Four criteria, he said, were used in making the grants: promise of a successful academic career; financial need; good character; acceptance by a regionally accredited college or university.

The applicant's plans for his future career were also taken into consideration. Generally speaking, those who planned service careers such as teaching, nursing or social work were given preference.

Mr. Weaver emphasized that there were "no strings" on the scholarships which required the students to go back and work on the reservation for a specified period of time.

A total of 46 tribes was represented among the 131 recipients. The geographical spread of the recipients ranged from Alaska to North Carolina, although by far the greatest majority live in states lying west of the Mississippi.

North Carolina Indians receiving scholarships are: Harley Sawnook, Cherokee Tribe, senior, University of Oklahoma; Brenda Brewington and Patricia Lockyear, Lumbee Tribe, both freshmen at Pembroke State College, Pembroke, N. C.

The Congregational Christian Board of Home Missions has been carrying on a scholarship program to Indian and Spanish-speaking youths since 1954 and has aided well over 400 young people since that time, according to Mr. Weaver. They have gone into professions ranging all the way from school teaching and nursing to dancing in a Broadway show.

Kind Of Missionaries Needed

Excerpts from address by Professor Chandran Devanesen, Madras College, India, at General Synod.

Missionary venture is not coming to an end, it is just beginning. Now a radically new challenge faces us. No longer can the missionary go into the world representing a superior culture and under the protection of a colonial power. Now we go not to bring the blessings of a superior culture but to seek to bring reconciliation to places that are torn, wounded, suffering with division and hatred.

People in other lands want us to come — but as partners, as ones who participate, join in and share their lives. "They greet us when we come with garlands of greetings — but also with handcuffs, a roughhewn cross and a newly translated New Testament that speaks and is relevant to Asia or Africa." In other words they want the missionary to really enter in and share their lives and sufferings.

Now, as never before, the missionary is called into real confrontation. Competing religions, national hatreds, diverse ideologies cause divisions among people and communities. The missionary is called on to reconcile — to somehow speak of a Christ that will not exclude or deny other religions and ideas and hopes but is big enough to include and transform them.

As the missionary does this he will be called on to suffer as never before. He will need to participate in the struggle for political, economic, social freedom — and must be ready to be martyred.

In other words a new spirit of missionary work is essential. A gigantic new job faces us.

Mission Hospitals "Swamped"

By Hugh Samson
British Council of Churches

(Leopoldville, Congo) — Mission hospitals in the Congo are being swamped with patients, and according to Dr. Glen Tuttle, chairman of the Congo Protestant Relief Agency, the position "is going to get a lot worse."

Dr. Tuttle, a U.S. medical missionary, says that the serious shortage of doctors in the Congo has not yet resulted in any marked decline in public health, but "we are only just about holding our own. Like every sector of public life in the Congo we are coasting along under the impetus of the administration before Independence."

Before Congolese independence there were about 750 doctors, mostly Belgians, in the country. This represented one doctor for about every 20,000 persons. The position today is that there are only 250 qualified practitioners including those brought in temporarily by the World Health Organization and the Congo Protestant Relief Agency. The League of Red Cross Societies also brought in doctors on a temporary basis but, being essentially an emergency organization it has since withdrawn them.

The first two Congolese doctors graduated last month (July) from Lovanium University, Leopoldville; but Dr. Tuttle estimates that it will be at least 25 years before there are anything like enough qualified Congolese.

There are about 45 Protestant mission hospitals in the Congo and though inadequately staffed they are a little better-off for doctors than the Government hospitals. The plight of these Government hospitals has led WHO to raise its 5-year target from 100 doctors to 200. Meanwhile, unable to get treatment in Government hospitals, patients are crowding the mission hospitals.

Through gifts from churches and drug houses overseas the drug scarcity at mission hospitals has been eased somewhat; however, there is still a shortage of antimalarials, worm medicines, iron for anemia, and aspirin. State hospitals are in a worse position because the Government lacks currency. Recently about L150,000-worth ($420,000) of medical supplies arriving at the Congolese port of Matadi had to be turned away because the Congolese Government was unable to pay for them.

Under the Congo Protestant Relief Agency's "Operation Doctor" about 20 doctors will be in action by September. The CPRA target is 100 doctors over a 5-year period. The agency brings the doctors in from overseas on temporary engagements for periods of 4 months, 6 months or a year. Their passage and keep are provided for by the agency, and dependent families left at home are also given an allowance. A man coming in under Operation Doctor receives about L70 ($200) a month plus half that amount again for his wife if she accompanies him. Present CPRA doctors are mostly from the U.S.A., but there are two from Britain and two from Canada.

At a 200-bed mission hospital some 50 miles west of Leopoldville I asked a doctor from Florida what had persuaded him to take a four month leave of absence from his practice at home. "The need," he said simply. "I read of it in a church paper back home and discussed the situation with a missionary home on furlough from the Congo. I just locked my surgery door and came."

Birthplace of Paul. A town of 20,000, on the agriculturally rich Cilician plain, which supplies Turkey with cotton, citrus, and vegetable crops. Institutions: Tarsus College.

September

- 17—Rev. and Mrs. Frank Stone have recently returned to Tarsus College after being in the U. S. on furlough. He has been associate director and has had to teach English, science, psychology, and philosophy. Mrs. Stone studied nursery techniques in U. S. so she could start nursery where none exists.
- 18—Louis Wilkins has just returned to Turkey after a short furlough at home. He is a member of Liberty church, and lives at Lennig, Virginia. A graduate of Elon College in 1958, he went to Turkey to teach for three-years at American College in Tarsus. He is now going for an additional period. Southern Convention members will want to especially remember him in their prayers as he begins his teaching for another year.
- 19—Devon Yoder went in 1960 for three-year term teaching chemistry and mathematics at American College.

IRAQ

- 20—Since 1924 the Evangelical and Reformed Church, United Presbyterian Church and the Reformed Church in America have had a United Mission to Iraq.
- 21—The Harold Schoups are the only E. and R. missionaries who are appointed to Iraq at present. They were asked to leave by government in 1959 when there was political turmoil. They went there in 1957 and he was business administrator of American School for Girls in Baghdad and she was assistant principal and teacher of English and Bible.

THE MISSION OF FELLOWSHIP TO THE CHURCHES OF EUROPE

- 22—Our Mission of Fellowship to Europe is part of the Fraternal Workers program in the Department of Inter-Church Aid of the World Council of Churches.
- 23—Rev. and Mrs. Kenrich Baker, Jr. direct the Fellowship Center at Le Chambon-sur-Lignon, France. It works with Protestant people of France, including seminars, retreats for ministers, youth groups and professional organizations within the church. They met at Geneva, Switzerland, when he was assistant general secretary of the World Council and she (from Germany) was secretary and translator at the World Presbyterian Alliance.

PINEY PLAIN WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP

Mrs. Bobby Hamilton, Reporter

The Women's Fellowship of Piney Plain Christian Church, near Raleigh, has recently elected officers for the coming year. Mrs. Horace Stephens, Sr., is to be the president.

We have an enrollment of twenty in our Women's Fellowship and an average attendance of ten. Our total collections for the year were $96.76. This was used for both foreign and home missions. As our August mission gift we sent a quilt, two sheets, and two pillow cases to the orphanage at Elon.

We are praying that in this new year of 1961-62 we at Piney Plain can do much for the Lord Jesus through our work of missions.

FIRST, PORTSMOUTH, WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP

Mrs. H. W. Lee, Historian

The Women's Fellowship of First Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, reports a very good year. The officers for the coming year were installed by our pastor, Rev. Daniel Bowers.

We participated with our local Council of United Church Women in observing World Community Day, World Day of Prayer and May Fellowship Day. A public service was held at the church for the giving and dedication of the Woman's Gift.

We had the privilege of attending the review of our study book "Safe in Bondage" with the women of Shelton Memorial Church.

At Christmas we gave gifts amounting to $40.00 to five children in foster homes in connection with our Council of Church Women. We presented Bibles to our young people graduating from high school. Our friendly service quota has been met and mission apportionment paid.

The Fellowship sponsored a reception for Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Felton, our interim minister and his wife, when they left and one for Rev. and Mrs. Daniel Bowers as they assumed the regular pastorate. In August a "watermelon feast" was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave White.

A number of our ladies attended the District Rally, Women's Conference and Southern Convention.

The women have enjoyed working together and we believe that another successful year lies ahead for the Women's Fellowship of First Church, Portsmouth.

GOOD YEAR AT BETHLEHEM

The Women's Fellowship of Bethlehem Christian Church has had the most successful year in its history under the leadership of Mrs. Walter Graham. We have 138 members on roll and each one has worked with diligence to make it successful.

We have organized a new circle which consists of all new members. This is the seventh circle in our Fellowship. It was named for two of our most faithful workers, Mrs. O. D. King and Mrs. C. W. King, and is known as the King Circle.

We have met all requirements and apportionments and are proud of our financial report which includes: $1200 raised for building fund, $300 on Apportionment, $100 Life Memberships and Memorials, $250 for Home Missions and Social Service, $166.55 Thank Offering, $35.00 for Friendly Service. Also included in this project were seven bed spreads and brushes, and we sent a child to Moonelon. The young people collected clothes and school supplies for Delmo Center as their Friendly Service. Our Cradle Roll sent 35 dolls to the Indians.

Mrs. I. W. Johnson taught our foreign study book and Mrs. Robert Woolridge taught our home study book.

Other projects of the past year are: Showering Patrick Henry Hospital and Mother-Daughter Banquet, which we voted as annual affairs; Fall Conference at Great Bridge; mission study at Franklin; World Day of Prayer at Liberty Spring; World Community Day; Women's Fellowship Sunday; Friendly Service Program; Cancer Workshop; Spring Rally at Cypress Chapel; being co-hostess with Suffolk Christian Church for the Southern Convention Women's Fellowship; and sponsoring a church-wide picnic at Planters Club.

With the building of our big new sanctuary, which we are all so proud of, we have a much bigger dream and hope for a more prosperous year to come.

Mrs. Harvey Speight, Historian
Mrs. Mills C. Luter, Assistant

Superintendent Clyde Fields is to be the guest speaker for the TRPM at Rosemont, South Norfolk, October 8-13. Twenty teams of visitors from the church will make calls in connection with the TRPM. A prayer vigil will be held Saturday night, October 7. Carroll W. Lewis is the minister.

How The United Church Works

Sweet Corn

OVERSEAS MISSION

The United Church Board for World Ministries will continue the work previously carried on by the Board of International Missions (Evangelical and Reformed) and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (Congregational Christian), the oldest foreign missionary society in America. The new board will operate under the charter of the American Board which is being revised for this purpose.

The Congregational Christian Service Committee, Inc. and the Commission on World Service (E & R) will merge to form a division of the Board for World Ministries. It will deal with emergency relief and aid to refugees.

HOMELAND MISSION

The United Church Board for Homeland Ministries is charged with carrying on work in the fields of church building and extension, evangelism, Christian education, Christian higher education, the urban church, race relations, research, health and welfare services, publishing, special ministries to migrant workers, American Indians and other minority groups, and to Puerto Rico.

Cooperation between the uniting communions in the field of Christian education began even before union was achieved. A totally new United Church curriculum is being prepared. A joint leadership development program has included specialized summer schools for directors and ministers of Christian education and the recruitment of Christian Education Associates.

The national councils of the two young people's organizations met jointly in 1958 and 1960 to work out the youth program of the United Church.

The campus ministries have been completely coordinated for several years.

The Division of Evangelism and Research was created within the past year with a joint staff.

Anticipating creation of the Division of Church Extension, the separate organizations have worked together in the establishment of 36 new churches of the United Church of Christ.

Staff and committees of both communions have been working side by side in the areas of the urban church and the town and country church.

SOCIAL ACTION

The Council for Social Action (CC) and the Commission on Christian Social Action (E & R) work together in the Council for Christian Social Action of the United Church of Christ.

PUBLICATION

In October 1958, ADVANCE the century-old magazine of the Congregational Christian Churches was united with THE MESSENGER of the Evangelical and Reformed Church to form the UNITED CHURCH HERALD.

COMMUNICATION

The Office of Communication for the United Church of Christ has served the United Church since 1956. This agency is charged with responsibility for press relations, the making of motion pictures, and for the denominational ministry in radio and television.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION

Since 1957 the uniting communions have coordinated their missionary education and promotional materials, each using the publications under its own imprint.

The Stewardship Council of the United Church, organized early in 1961, embraces the work of the Missions Council, promotional agency of the Congregational Christian Churches, and the Evangelical and Reformed Department of United Promotion and Commission on Stewardship.

There are a dozen explanations of why the first settlers from Europe came to America, but the historians all overlook the real reason. Cortez and Pizarro may have been searching for precious metal, but the colonists in our part of the hemisphere found even more precious gold in a green corn husk. They came and they stayed because the Indians had a grain called maize. Despite what the historians say, sweet corn changed the course of empire.

Doubt it? Look at the markets right now. Look at the farms and gardens. Glance into the kitchen, and follow your nose to the dinner table. But don't spend too much time deliberating over the origin of the roasting ear itself. Just taste and you will know the truth, especially if the ear was hurried from field to pot and from pot to plate. Slather it with butter, sprinkle it with salt, and eat. And don't stand on ceremony. Those luscious kernels were arranged on the cob especially for two-handed convenience. Give them proper attention, and let history fend for itself.

True, there is a good deal to be said for the tomato, another American native, and the pumpkin, and even the bean, especially when it accompanies corn in succotash. But sweet corn is in a class by itself. The Indians knew it, and the white man soon learned. If the Indians had kept their secret, they might still own Manhattan Island. Fortunately, they didn't. . .

Thank you, Massasoit. And please pass the corn again!

SPARE MOMENT

When you're very, very busy and you've heaps of jobs to do — and when you're tired and can't see how you're going to get through — just stand quite still and tell yourself that in the crowded hours — you will be given guidance, quiet strength and inner powers. . . You say you have no leisure time, but surely you can spare — a moment in the hectic day, you may be anywhere — a street, a shop, an office — any place that you may be — just calm your worried, flurried thoughts, and, pausing quietly — you'll find new zest, new energy — the will to start again — and you'll complete your daily work without the stress and strain.

(Used by Plymouth, Des Moines, Women's Fellowship)

This Day Belongs To God

"This is the day the Lord hath made. . ."
His workmanship: the dawn, the light, the shade,
The wind, the rain, the starshine and the dew.
He loans its hours, for me to live them through Joyfully and gladly without lack;
And then at nightfall, bids me bring them back
And lay them at his feet that he may see
I have lived worthily.

God grant I be deserving of this day.
A child's heart proves its gladness in its play;
The little wild birds, as they sing and fly,
And I, who am so blest, why should not I Go singing, light of heart, no matter what
The hours may hold for me? My grief forgot,
And suffering and loss that I have had—
Today I shall be glad.

ADMINISTRATIVE CONSULTANT VISITS ELON

Dr. Thomas E. Jones, administrative consultant with the Association of American Colleges, has been on the Elon College campus for a two-day visit. He is under a program supported by the Lilly Endowment.

To set the stage for a thorough study of the college curriculum which will be initiated this fall was a primary purpose of Dr. Jones' visit to the campus. This is the next step in the continuing program of self-study and evaluation being conducted by the college.

During his visit Dr. Jones conferred with administrative officers, met with faculty members and studied reports of the institutional self-study which was recently completed. He reviewed curriculum trends in American colleges and universities in an address to the faculty.

Other consultants who have participated in the program of self-study include Dr. Guy E. Snavelly, Director Emeritus of the Association of American Colleges; Dr. Goddrich White, Chancellor of Emory University; and Dr. Susan Grey Akers, former Dean of the School of Library Science of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Jones is a graduate of Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, received the B. D. from Hartford Theological Seminary and M.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia University.

He served in various faculty positions, served as president of Fisk University from 1926 until 1946 and as president of Earlham College from 1946 to 1958. Since his retirement in 1958, he has served as special consultant to colleges and universities in all sections of the country. In his consultant capacity in the last three years, he has visited 101 institutions of higher education.

LAYMEN'S SUNDAY — OCTOBER 15

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention calls attention to Laymen's Sunday on October 15. It is highly desirable that every church in the Convention give emphasis to the cherished conviction that "the priesthood of believers" is true in practice as well as theory.

A "Handbook for Laymen's Sunday" will be mailed to all Laymen's Fellowships and churches from the Convention Office. The booklet is made available by the National Laymen's Fellowship. Dr. J. Earl Danieleley, president of Elon College, is the newly elected President of the National Laymen's Fellowship. President Danieleley and Rev. Robert Knowles are anxious to have laymen make use of the handbook and churches to participate in Laymen's Sunday on October 15.

MINISTERIAL SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATIONS

Rev. Robert Kimball, Burlington, N. C., is chairman of the Ministerial Scholarship and Loan Committee. Ministerial students who need scholarship help for financial reasons are reminded to make application for scholarship help. Scholarship applications need to state reasons for making application and bear the signature of the chairman of the Committee on the Ministry of the conference of which the applicant is a member.

Ministerial students should seek the counsel and help of the Committee on the Ministry in his or her conference in any and all matters relating to the spiritual and educational process toward the achievement of the goal.

MINISTERS AND ENROLLMENT IN THE UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST

Ministers are to enroll as members of the United Church of Christ in much the same manner as churches. Ministers have been mailed an application for enrollment. Many ministers have forwarded the application to the proper destination.

Some ministers have not returned the proper form to the Southern Convention Office or to the chairman of the Committee on the Ministry in one of the five conferences. Ministers are reminded to follow through on this matter as soon as possible.

A list of ministers enrolled as ministers of the United Church of Christ will be carried in the Christian Sun soon.

SAY IT RIGHT . . . WRITE IT RIGHT

"Mr. Brown is a blind man." The abbreviation Mr. indicates that Brown is a man. Say: Mr. Brown is blind.

Peel refers to a natural and pare to an artificial process. An orange is peeled, not pared. A cucumber is pared, not peeled.

"Thank you kindly." This is a common misuse that should be avoided, especially in business correspondence. "I thank you kindly" says literally "I am being kind in thanking you." Better say: I thank you very much.

"She got married in June." Got means procured, acquired, obtained. Say: She was married in June.

C. B. R.

Gaius, A Christian Layman

Background Scripture: III John.

Devotional Reading: I John 3:13-24.

Memory Selection: I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth. III John 4.

The title of the Lesson mentions only one layman, Gaius. But there are three laymen mentioned in the chapter which composes the lesson — Gaius, Diotrophes, and Demetrius, and we will do well to consider all three of these laymen.

Gaius the Great Hearted

Gaius was a great soul. He had integrity of character, a charitable and hospitable spirit, a devout and deeply spiritual nature, and a consuming love for his fellowmen. He was undoubtedly a man of means if not of wealth, and he was especially generous in entertaining itinerant evangelists or missionaries of the Early Church. He was a man of faith and he showed his faith by his works. He was "one of those men you could count on."

He may have been a convert of the John who wrote the letter. In any event he was a joy to the apostle. "I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth." John was also pleased with the charity of Gaius as expressed in his hospitality to Christian missionaries or ministers. Gaius was a worthy representative of that great host of laymen, whom no man can number, who make glad the heart of their minister and who do so much to enrich and strengthen the life of the Church. The Church today is gradually discovering the place and power of the lay-ministry. More and more laymen are assuming more and more responsibility in the life and work of the Church. And this is as it should be. The wise minister will discover, train, and deputize laymen, thus multiplying the influence of his own ministry. Thank God for the laymen of the Church.

There is one significant verse in this letter. John expresses the hope or prayer that Gaius may prosper and be in health, even as his soul prospered. How many paupers there would be, and in fact are, on this basis. How prosperous would many people be if they were only as healthy and as prosperous as their souls? Folks spend all kinds of money and any amount of time on their bodies and their business, with but little attention to their souls. It would not mean much to many people to express the hope that their business prospered, or that their health was as good, as their soul prospered.

Diotrophes the Despicable Dictator

There was a layman in the church to which Gaius belonged named Diotrophes. John says he "loveth to have the pre-eminence." Do those words remind you of anybody in your church, man or woman, who wants in all things to have the pre-eminence? Do you know of men and women who want to be boss, who will rule or ruin? Many churches are cursed with such despicable people. Diotrophes was a man of consuming ambition, conceited, arrogant, tyrannical, abusive, a snob and a pain in the neck. He not only would not extend his hospitality to others like Gaius, but he forbade Gaius and the other members of the Church to do it. John's words indicate that Diotrophes had even gone so far as to withhold or destroy a letter which he had written to the Church. He was one of the long line of numerous folks whose ambition and greed have worked against Christ and his Church.

Through over forty-six years in the ministry, the writer of these NOTES has not become cynical about people. But he is convinced by his experience that many people are interested in the Church because it gives them an opportunity to exercise power, it inflates their ego, it gives them a chance to get to the top of the totem pole where otherwise they would be small potatoes! They get an office or are given a little power and they covet more power and exercise more authority. They strut, and boast, and bluster and make a general nuisance of themselves. One suspects that they are more concerned with their office than they are with service to Christ. Is there a Diotrophes in your Church? Are you a Diotrophes? Perhaps that last question is unfair. For what Diotrophes would ever admit that in all things he wanted the pre-eminence!!

Demetrius the Dependable

This Demetrius is mentioned only once in the Bible. (He is not the Demetrius mentioned in Acts 19:24.) Nothing else is known about him except what is said here. "Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself; yea, and we also do bear record; and ye know our record is true." He evidently had no ambition to be a leader. He evidently did not have the resources of Gaius. He was just a practically unknown and unsung layman, willing to do what he could in the service of Christ, taking whatever talents God had given him, and using them as best he could in the Master's service. Such a man is the salt of the earth, the strength and hope of the Church. We often say that the Church needs leaders, and of course we are right. But the Church also needs followers, men and women with modest means and even meager talents who are willing to give and use what they have wherever they can. John thought a lot of this modest man. In a few words he paid a great tribute to him. One wishes we had more information about the man.

The Church of Jesus Christ could use more brilliant people and people with more money. But these people are not the hope of the Church in the last analysis. Given faithful, loyal, generous-spirited, "run of mine" people who are willing to use and to give such as they are and have to the service of the Kingdom, the Church of Jesus Christ can go from strength to strength. Dependability — what a most desirable virtue. How desperately needed everywhere, in business as well as in the Church. One of Jesus' greatest accolades was given to those who had been faithful, to those who were dependable! "Well done, good and faithful servant — and He could as well have said "dependable servant." We can not all be brilliant. We are not all tent-talent men and women. We can not all do great things. But we can do good things, and we can be dependable. Good old Demetrius. Three cheers for him, as well as for Gaius. And a Bronx cheer for Diotrophes!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON SEPTEMBER 24, 1961

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, D.D.
Pastor of Berea Congregational
Christian Church,
Driver, Virginia

The softball team of our Suffolk church has led its league for the entire season, and has a record of 11 games won and 3 games lost.

Lee's Chapel, Northview, Turner's Chapel, and Zion churches plan to hold their quarterly Sunday school workshop September 25 at Turner's Chapel.

A service of recognition for the workers in the Suffolk church school will be held Sunday morning, September 24, at the eleven o'clock service in observance of Christian Education Week. That evening the annual "Back-to-Church" night service will be held at 7:30.

The outside of our Sanford church is in the process of being painted, and the ladies' lounge is being re-decorated. The Pilgrim Fellowship has raised $400 for a Modernfold partition which will soon be installed. New pews will be installed for use the second Sunday in October. Last Sunday a dedication service was held for new robes which the choir was wearing.

A TRIBUTE TO AYLER HOLLAND

The Holland area, and especially the congregation of the Holland Christian Church, suffered a great loss in the passing of Mr. Ayler J. Holland on August 16. He had spent his sixty-three years in the town of Holland, active in its civic affairs, its religious and social life, and its business activity. He had served as mayor of the town, had been a member of the mother chapter of the Ruritan club and a member of the Holland Christian Church, serving his church in several capacities.

Mr. Holland was the grandson of Rev. Robert H. Holland, the founder of the Holland church, and the son of Dr. Job G. Holland, who was prominent in the life of this area and a devoted worker in the Holland church.

He is survived by his wife and by a son, Ayler Holland, Jr. Our sympathy goes out to his loved ones and our prayers go up in their behalf. We have indeed suffered an irreparable loss but we thank God for what Mr. Holland has meant to us.

C. Carl Dollar, Pastor

Rev. Theodore Preuss, of Columbus, Ohio, will preach and commission the lay visitors for the ARPM at Bayside.

The fall meeting of the Southern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church will be held at Catawba College, Salisbury, October 17.

Fall meeting of the Eastern Virginia Laymen's Fellowship will be held at Great Bridge September 24, beginning with supper at six o'clock.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, interim pastor, reports that two members were received at Rocky Ford at the close of a week of special services held there recently.

Lewis Wicker, a member of Northview, Sanford, will enter Duke Divinity School this fall. Leslie Wicker will enter Greensboro College as a pre-ministerial student.

WINS ALL-EXPENSE SCHOLARSHIP

Miss Sandra F. Daniel, talented, seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Daniel, Jr. of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, has been awarded a four year, all-expense scholarship to Talladega College. The award was made on the basis of Miss Daniel's scores on the Cooperative Intercollegiate Examination sponsored by the United Negro College Fund.

A 1961 graduate of Druid High School in Tuscaloosa, Sandra served as President of the Senior Class, Secretary of the Girl Scouts, District President of the Student Council, Lay-out Editor of the School newspaper and was an avid member of the debating society.

Active in church work, she is District President, Youth Department, Vice President of the Junior Missionary, pianist for the Sunday School and pianist-organist for the Junior Choir.

A most versatile young lady, Sandra's hobbies include: stamp and shell collecting, sewing, drawing, printing and reading.

Sandra, who incidentally was also valedictorian of her graduating class, will enter Talladega this Fall where she intends to work toward a degree in Modern Languages.

MT. ZION WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP INSTALLS OFFICERS

By Myrtle Shepherd, Reporter

The Officers of the Women's Fellowship of Mt. Zion United Church of Christ, Route 3, Mebane, N. C. were installed by the pastor, Rev. Glenn Garrett, on Sunday night, August 27. The scripture reading came from Acts 1:4-11. Mr. Garrett gave a brief talk on "The Statement of Faith of the Women in the Church." He said that women have played an important part in the Church from its earliest beginning.

The lights in the church were put out. Then the minister lighted a candle on the altar, which showed the light of Jesus to the world. From this candle, he lighted his own candle. As he called each officer's name and office in the Women's Fellowship, each one came forward and lighted her candle from his, which showed how the light of Jesus Christ's Gospel has spread from person to person throughout the ages. Then the following were installed: Mrs. Hazel Harris, president; Mrs. Frances Tate, vice-president; Miss Elizabeth Strayhorn, secretary; Mrs. Ruby Terry, treasurer; Mrs. Kathleen Parker, reporter; Miss Lillian Sharpe, Christian Education chairman; Miss Mary Wilkerson, Friendly Service chairman; Mrs. Belle Poole, Missionary Education chairman; Mrs. Kathleen Parker, Social Action chairman; Mrs. Betty Garrett, Spiritual Life chairman; Mrs. Lettie Allison (not present), Stewardship chairman.

Mr. Garrett examined the candidates, who answered his questions. The officers held out right hands, signifying service to their fellowmen; folded their hands, signifying that each one should be much in prayer at all times; and joined hands together, signifying their joining together in proclaiming and witnessing to others of the love of Jesus Christ to all mankind.

Immediately after the installation service, a home mission filmstrip, "The Church at Warren," was shown. The closing hymn was "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

A revival was held at Zion August 6-11. Good attendance is reported. Three members were added to the church. The pastor, Rev. James Porter, led the services.

Shoes, Shoes, Shoes — 70 Pairs Needed

Dear Friends:

REPORT FOR AUGUST 31, 1961

Southern Convention Churches and Sunday Schools

Johnston Hall, where our offices are located, is a very quiet and lonesome place right now. August 28 we moved all our older boys from the building in preparation for the remodeling program.

The boys are living temporarily in the Old Main Building which is slated to come down this fall. This is the building that has been replaced by our new cottages. As our plans are now, this building will be demolished in November.

The remodeling work on Johnston Hall will get under way this week. When the work is completed it will house thirty-two children and two housemothers. Also our offices and our supply rooms will be housed here.

We are hoping to have all this work completed by November 4 when we will observe Open House on our campus. On this day not only our new cottages will be open for inspection, but all our buildings, the entire campus and our farm. Plan now to be among those who will visit our campus November 4!

Monday August 28, the Teen-Age Council of the Burlington Teen-Age Club carried our 16 youngest boys and girls into Burlington and purchased shoes for all of them. Pictures were made during the shoe fittings and it was a real joy to see the expressions of wonder and excitement on the faces of our children as they were fitted for their school shoes. All of our boys and girls have to have new shoes at one time or another during the fall months and it is a big help to us to be assisted in this generous way by the young people from Burlington.

There are about four major times when large purchases of shoes are required: opening of school, Christmas, Easter and summer. Many individuals and classes help with shoes at Christmas and Easter. One or two Women's Fellowships send gifts for the Easter shoes. We are very grateful to all of these groups for helping to provide so well for our boys and girls.

WHAT DID IT MEAN TO YOU?

Our church has just recently completed a week of Revival Services. The messages were well delivered and very inspirational. At the beginning of the week Rev. Grant Burns brought two messages, one dealt very aptly with the talents all Christians possess — namely, always being present at services, always praying, and giving of both time and money. On Wednesday evening our own minister, Rev. Joyner, asked the question "What kind of Christian are You?" which caused all of us to think very seriously about our duties to God and man. The last two messages of the week were ably delivered by Rev. Jim Jackson who challenged us for just one day, 24 hours, to deal with situations as we felt Jesus would if he were in our place.

Now our week of Revival Services have come and gone. The meaning of revival is to renew, to revive, to spiritual awaken. The services were wonderful, but they will mean nothing if we do not strive to put them into practice. Have you done this? WHAT DID IT MEAN TO YOU?

Mrs. C. M. Wicker

CONSIDER THE INDIVIDUAL

Often we lose sight of individuals and think only of groups and organizations. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick has reminded us in the following quotation that Christ would have us think first of all about the importance of the individual.

"... the only force which can break down prejudice, racial, national, or class, and introduce us into a decent and civilized brotherhood of man is the ability to get our eyes clearly on the individual and give him his chance to stand on the basis of his personal merit, regardless of any collective class to which he may belong. One says of a man that he is black, or brown, a Jew, a Roman Catholic, a Japanese, a German, an employer, an employee. I answer that first of all he is a person, of whom it is my business to think, and with whom it is my business to deal, as an individual, and strangely enough, through the door of individualism, which seems to some narrow, runs the only road which leads to a decent and civilized brotherhood of man."

Rev. W. T. Joyner

Our Wealth Of Devotional Opportunity

By W. R. Cullom, Wake Forest, N. C.

It is my privilege to stand near the top of the line in the matter of age among North Carolina Baptists. As I look back across the years and note some of the changes that have taken place amongst us, it seems to me that no one of them is more significant, more meaningful, or more important than the increasing opportunities for cultivating and enriching the inner life of the soul.

Take, for example, the publication and use of the daily guides that are issued in the field. Probably most of these have made their appearance within the last 30 or 40 years. Take the Upper Room as an example. This is one of the most familiar, most interesting, and most helpful, probably, of all of them. Our Methodist people were celebrating the 25th anniversary of its birth last year. I believe that this Upper Room was one of the earliest of these publications. If we look around today, we see Day by Day, issued by the Presbyterians, the Open Windows, by Southern Baptists, Forward, by the Episcopalians, The Secret Place by American Baptist, and this by no means exhausts the list.

If we look into the field of what we may call Retreats, we see such places as Ridgecrest, Montreat, Junaluska, Dr. E. Stanley Jones' Ashrams — a dozen or so of them, the C.F.O. (Camp Farthest Out), etc.

Note the radical change in type and character of the evangelistic service today as compared with that of 50 years ago. At that time, such services were largely emotional; today they are mainly for instruction, appeal to the deeper and inner man. As far as I can observe the older type of evangelistic appeal is about left to the "Holy Rollers" and such people today. Nor do I mean to use that phrase in way of ridicule. What I am talking about here is too serious a matter to be subjected to any such thing as ridicule.

Within a short distance of my home there are three good women who meet one morning in each week for prayer and fellowship. I believe this habit will become more common and be very helpful in the general field that I have in mind in this article.

And what I have said is probably sufficient to suggest to my readers some of the wealth of devotional opportunity that is about us. My final word shall be one of exhortation; and this is that we awake to see, to accept, and to use what God so graciously, so abundantly, so richly, and so attractively places about us! So shall we grow in grace, in the knowledge of God, and in happy fellowship with all those who carry in their lives the spirit and image of Him whose we are and whom we serve!

World Council Statement

Geneva—The Executive Committee of the World Council of Churches has called upon the government of Portugal "to refrain from deliberate action involving death and maiming of thousands of Africans" in Angola.

The statement is one of the strongest ever issued by the 12-member body which is the interim-policy making group which meets between annual sessions of the larger Central Committee. The Executive Committee was in session in Geneva, Switzerland, June 19-24.

The Committee declared that Portugal "will inevitably forfeit sympathy and respect of other nations" if it continues its present policy. It appealed to the government of Portugal "in the name of humanity and Christian principles so long professed in Portugal" to change its methods. The statement deplores "mounting evidence of the rapidly deteriorating situation."

The World Council's Executive Committee said that the attacks of the Portuguese in Angola were particularly directed against those with education "and the gift of leadership."

These attacks, the Committee declared, involve women and children and widespread destruction of property.

Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, is chairman of the Executive Committee. The Committee called on the World Council's 176 Protestant, Anglican, and Orthodox churches "of whose deep concern it has been made aware" to press upon their governments the urgency of the situation. The World Council's Division of Interchurch Aid and Service to Refugees was instructed to continue and extend relief operations currently conducted for tens of thousands of Angola refugees now in the Congo.

FAITH AND DOUBT

"The point is that no person's faith is going to be vigorous and meaningful to him unless he has thought it through and fought it through. Nothing is too sacred to be doubted, to be questioned, to be criticised when necessary. Nothing is too sacred to be asked, "Is it really so?" "Why is this?" "What does it mean?" The trouble with many of us is that we either suppose that to have doubts is to make faith impossible, and so give up on faith; or that we accept a faith and suppose that is something static, unchanging, never to be questioned. The truth is that both faith and doubt belong in the religious life. The answer is not to eliminate all doubt, nor is it to eliminate all faith. The answer is to keep the two, faith and doubt, in a kind of creative tension, or balance, all the time."

—William R. Stevenson, Tryon

Mission Hospitals

medical staff now has 260-in-patients and an almost uncountable number of out-patients who walk or ride in from miles around and sleep in the huts provided for them during their treatment.

The normal practice in Africa, where nurses are almost as scarce as doctors, is for a patient to bring one "helper" to hospital with him to cook his food and look after his general needs. With the single exception of the new Lovanium University Hospital near Leopoldville, no hospital feeds its patients. The helpers are generally wives or sisters who, although leaving older children in the care of relatives, have to bring unweaned babies along to hospital with them — not to mention cooking-pots, blankets and other miscellaneous possessions.

At Kimpesi it is estimated that over 600 people sleep every night in this 200-bed hospital. When I toured it at 9 p.m. one evening it required the utmost care to avoid treading on sleeping bundles lying head-to-toe along every corridor and between the beds in each ward.

The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing. — Edmund Burke

It Is Time To Think About Missions

The Church is created for mission and every Church member is a missionary, an apostle of that mission. The local church in effect is the mobilization station and training center for recruiting and equipping church members to fulfill their missionary calling.

An integral and indispensable part of this training program is the Family School of Missions. The Missions Council has long recommended such a School to local churches in the Congregational Christian fellowship. It particularly urges that each local church hold a Family School of Missions in September-October of 1961 as part of our Year of Decision program in preparation for Our Christian Enlistment in November. It is hoped that each year such a School will be a regular part of the local church's program of education for mission.

From Manual for Family School of Missions

HOW TO STIMULATE INTEREST IN THE CHURCH'S MISSION

1. Include missions in all corporate prayers. Pray for missionaries by name.
2. List as a staff member on your bulletin and letterhead any missionary the church may sponsor.
3. Carry brief items about mission work in your church bulletin, paper, or newsletter.
4. Make contributions to "the church's mission" a part of the regular church budget.
5. Remember that "missions" means "people." Report on individuals rather than statistics.
6. Encourage personal contacts with foreign students and furloughed missionaries.
7. Encourage reading books on missions and international affairs and watching foreign documentaries on TV.

We have been entrusted with a great heritage. Ours is a faith in a God gone into action to change men into the likeness of Christ and to transform society. This is a faith that serves no light or transient causes. It speaks to the condition of men today. It is a faith embodied in the Church whose mission reaches unto nations — and unto each individual man whoever and wherever he may be. This faith is the revelation, the way — of forgiveness, humility, compassion, justice and love.

God is at work in his world. In the large sense it is he, not we, who will save it. But it is through men that he works. So he sent his Son in the likeness of a servant. So he sends us.

The Teacher--A Builder

A builder builded a temple;
He wrought with care and skill;
Pillars and groins and arches
Were fashioned to meet his will;
And men said when they saw its beauty:
"It shall never know decay.
Great is thy skill, O Builder,
Thy fame shall endure for aye."

A teacher builded a temple;
She wrought with skill and care;
Forming each pillar with patience,
Laying each stone with prayer.
None saw the unceasing effort;
None knew of the marvelous plan;
For the temple the teacher builded
Was unseen by the eyes of man.

Gone is the builder's temple —
Crumbled into the dust —
Pillar and groin and arches
Food for consuming rust;
But the temple the teacher builded
Shall endure while the ages roll —
For that beautiful, unseen temple
Was a child's immortal soul.

Here And There Among The Churches

Rev. Harry Baldwin, pastor of the Hopewell church, is serving as interim minister at Bethlehem (Disputanta).

Mrs. J. R. Kernodle, Burlington district chairman for the Women's Fellowship, installed officers for the Beverly Hills women Tuesday evening, September 5.

The weekday kindergarten at Eutaw Community Church, Fayetteville, has enrolled 30 pupils. It is under the direction of Mrs. Esther Dept and Mrs. Elizabeth Stout, members of the church.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, a former pastor, preached for our High Point church last Sunday, when Dr. Lester was in Cleveland, Ohio, attending a meeting of the new United Church Council for Church and Ministry.

Dr. Ruth Graham, minister of music at The Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, North Carolina, recently attended the International Hymnological Conference in New York City.

Activities at The United Church of Christ, Southern Pines, where Rev. Carl Wallace is pastor, include: Church night dinner, September 20; Southern Convention team to meet with church leaders to tell "The Crisis in Missions," October 1; kindergarten opening October 2.

First meeting of the Women's Fellowship of United Church, Raleigh, was held September 12 with Mrs. Peggy Hoffman and Rev. Collins Kilburn reviewing books on the mission of the church in this country and in Latin America.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention will meet at Virginia Beach from 5 p.m. Friday September 29 to 5 p.m. Saturday, September 30.

Last week-end the Men's Fellowship of Eutaw Community Church, Fayetteville, had a retreat at Carolina Beach. Their latest project was repairing old and making new equipment for the church weekday kindergarten.

The topic of Rev. Collie Seymour's first sermon as pastor of Apple's Chapel (September 3) was "The Church's Task." Following the service September 10 the members enjoyed a picnic lunch.

Rev. Daniel A. Bowers is preaching a series of sermons at First, Portsmouth, on "The Church." Subjects include: The Church Organization, Failures of the Church, The Divine Imperative—The Ecumenical Church.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. Glenn Garrett, wife of our minister at Mt. Zion, Mebane, whose father, Mr. F. S. Fields, died September 10 following surgery for a brain tumor. Dr. W. W. Sloan of Elon College preached at Mt. Zion that day in the absence of the minister.

In observance of Christian Education Week, Trinity Church, Concord, North Carolina, where Dr. Banks J. Peeler is pastor, will have a "Family Education Evening." Following a picnic-style meal, Mr. Sam Hinson of Charlotte, civic leader and Bible teacher, will describe his recent travels in Europe and the Holy Land.

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman and Mrs. F. C. Lester attended joint committee meetings of officers of The Women's Guild of the E. and R. Church and the National Women's Fellowship in Chicago September 9-12.

Rev. Billy Joe Willett has resigned as pastor of Union Grove and Seagrove in the Western North Carolina Conference in order to serve Beulah and New Hope churches in the Eastern North Carolina Conference.

September Sunday morning services of Beverly Hills, Burlington, are being broadcast over radio station WBAG. Rev. Kenneth Register's topics have included "The Labor of Love!" and "Too Busy to Live!"

Recognition Service for Rev. Collie Seymour as pastor of Apple's Chapel, near Gibsonville, will be held Sunday evening, October 1, with Superintendent Clyde L. Fields and other ministers participating.

All the members of the Women's Fellowship of First, Burlington, met in the fellowship hall Monday evening, September 11, for a supper meeting. Mrs. Robert M. Kimball presented plans for the year, following which each circle had a brief business session.

The High Point church has voted for a two-hour combined Sunday school and morning worship service with sermon, 9:30-11:30, each Sunday morning. Children's classes meet at the parsonage and other classes and the worship are held in Tomlinson School auditorium. Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News were welcome visitors Labor Day Sunday.

HUNTERDALE DEDICATION SERVICE

The Hunterdale Church has extended invitations to all former ministers, to the president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and to the president of the Southern Convention to participate in the dedication of the Joe R. Cutchins Memorial Wing. Harvey Cutchins, the only surviving brother, will present the keys. The Southern Convention superintendent, Clyde Fields, will deliver the dedication sermon.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend this service, October 8, at 3:30 p.m. Immediately following the Dedication Service, the Joe R. Cutchins wing will be opened for inspection and refreshments will be served, according to announcement from the pastor, Rev. Harold W. Tribble, Jr.

Dr. H. H. Cunningham, president of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention, has recently sent each church material for the observance of Laymen's Sunday, October 15. Included is a leaflet on "The Laity and the United Church of Christ" and two copies of the "Handbook for Laymen's Sunday" produced by the National Council of Churches. "You Shall Be My Witnesses" is the suggested theme.

W.N.C. MEETING AT RAMSEUR

About 250 members of Congregational Christian churches in the Western North Carolina Conference gathered at Ramseur Christian Church Sunday evening, September 10, for the beginning of the Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission in that area. Presiding was Rev. Thomas Liverman, chairman of this region's TRPM, who led the opening song service. Featured speaker was Rev. Robert Happel of the Department of Evangelism of the United Church of Christ. His topic was "Truth and Consequences."

Others participating in the program included: Rev. Billy Joe Willett, who gave the opening prayer; Rev. W. W. Hall, who led the worship service; and Rev. Lynwood Hubbard who consecrated the offering.

Special music was provided by a choir composed of people from several churches in the Conference. Director was Mrs. John L. Davis of the Asheboro church.

Following this combined service, special services were held by guest "missioners" in seven churches of the Conference each evening last week.

Carl Wallace, Jr. is the new president of the Senior Pilgrim Fellowship at Southern Pines. Our fellowship was host to the city Youth Federation September 10.

LAYMEN HOLD SERVICE AT LEBANON

By Mrs. Carlton Scott

The laymen of Lebanon Church had charge of the service Sunday morning August 20, in the absence of their pastor, Rev. L. T. Wilkins, who was vacationing.

Ezra Stowe had the call to worship. Foster Pointer led the responsive reading, and the scripture was read by Stickney Taylor. Clyde Owen McSherry made all the announcements and received the offering. The men's choir sang a special prior to the message by Maynard Wills on "What God Has Given Us." Mr. Ellis Wills closed with benediction.

We are most grateful for this program by our laymen and all who took part. We are looking forward to another such program in the near future.

The annual all-church retreat for United, Raleigh, was held September 17 at Camp Sycamore, Umstead State Park, 2:30-7:15. Rev. Oscar McCloud of Davie Street Presbyterian Church and Rev. Arthur C. Thomas of Covenant Community Church, Durham, spoke on "The Ministry of the Layman." Discussion groups followed. After recreation and supper, the P. F. group led in closing vespers.

This week Eutaw Community Church, Fayetteville, where Rev. Alfred M. Campbell is pastor, is having a "Spiritual Life Mission." Theme for the week is "Jesus Christ Is Lord." Speakers: Monday, Rev. Carl Wallace, Southern Pines; Tuesday, Rev. Max Vestal, Shallow Well; Wednesday, Rev. James C. Jackson, Charlotte; Thursday, Rev. James E. Porter, Turner's Chapel and Zion; Friday, Rev. Earl T. Farrell, Wake Chapel. Time: 7:30 p.m.

The new United Church of Mission Village, San Diego, California, where Rev. Melvin Dollar is pastor had an average attendance during the summer of 288. 46 members were received, making the total membership 348. Total offerings for the summer amounted to $5,177.50.

Trinity E. and R. Church, Concord, September 10 began a program of personal visitation in the Sunday school. This was planned and promoted by teachers and officers of each class and department.

Our Sunday Schools

In our church calendar September 24 to October 1 is known as Christian Education Week. Just what is being done about it is not highly publicized hereabouts. However, this is a good time to think a bit concerning our Sunday schools.

Records for 1960 as found in the ANNUAL indicates that 187 schools reported last year. No enrollment is given for the other 21 church schools. Schools reported enrollment ranging from 19 to 762, with a total membership of 28,856, which means that our schools have an average membership of 153 persons. Other statistics indicate that there were 8,041 more church members than people enrolled in Sunday schools.

The large majority of our schools are very small. Seventy have fewer than 100 members, and only 45 have more than 200.

Interpretation of these figures will differ among friends. However, certain things seem to be clear.

Closely graded schools are very difficult if not impossible in most instances. Group grading is about the best that can be done, but this is exceedingly important in order to do real educational work. Selection of literature will be difficult, but such materials have been made by our denomination so that even the smallest church can have excellent schools.

Leaders in small churches need not be discouraged. Best learning is done in small groups. That is why big schools are divided into little classes. Furthermore, there are said to be some 70 million Americans not in any church, and some of them doubtless live near our churches, and could be secured for membership in our Sunday schools. Officers and teachers in small schools can be just as well prepared as those in larger schools.

The larger schools should rejoice in their wonderful opportunities. They can do work equivalent to that in the best grade and high schools which are supported by the state. They can have trained directors of religious education who will in turn train all teachers and workers.

What will Christian Education Week this year mean in our churches? Have we reached the summit in membership and effectiveness, or are we striving for something "far better"?

Rally Day

Next Sunday has been designated as Promotion and Rally Day. Promotions will be a delight to those who are recognized in this way, especially the children who like to feel that they are growing.

What of the Rally Day? It can be stupid and dull — a great disappointment. What we hope is that it will be just the opposite. If plans were made weeks ago for every member and prospect to be contacted by mail, by telephone, and by personal contact — if an urgent invitation is given to all and sundry — then it can be expected that a big crowd of people will be at Sunday school on Rally Day.

What happens then? Good planning means that visitors and prospective members will be met at the door (if not accompanied to church) by friends who are glad they have come. Newcomers will be introduced to other people, and will be directed to proper classes and introduced to teachers. Leaders of worship will be sure that people are led in worship. Not all the time will be given to welcome speeches and singing for the purpose of singing only. The entire program, including the teaching, will be of such high order that interest will be created in what is being undertaken in the way of Christian education — not just in which "side" wins a contest in getting people to come one time. After all the real reason for Rally Day is to enlist more people in the study that has to do with religion and life. Rally Day in Sunday school is not the same as a political rally that is completed when the day is over. This is the beginning of new friendships that may ripen through the years, of enlistment in study that can change the life of individuals and groups, of growth that can mean happiness to families, churches, and communities. It should be a big day in the life of the people who attend and the church of which the school is part.

Incidentally, Sunday school Rally Day is not complete until and unless the whole group attends church. Did you ever wonder what happens in the mind and spirit of the minister who sees droves of people heading for home when he is just ready to enter the pulpit to lead a congregation in worship of God, and to deliver a prepared message that he thought would help people to live more happily? What happens to people who are encouraged to believe that going to Sunday school is all that is necessary? That church is a sort of elective to be chosen primarily by elderly saints who want a little additional credit when they come to the end of their earthly journey? Such teaching by words and example is excellent assistance to Communists who believe there is no God, that worship of God is a superstition to be eradicated. Rally Day in Sunday school should be, and rightly is, an effort of the Church to reach the entire community with the message of Christ, and the best trained person to deliver that message is likely to be the minister. Hear him.

Sympathy To Dr. Morgan

A news item in dealy papers told of the recent passing of the beloved wife of Dr. S. L. Morgan, Sr., of Wake Forest, North Carolina, who is one of our valued contributors. Readers know something of how Dr. Morgan felt about his treasured companion who brought joy to his life for such a long time. Now that he is ninety, she has proceeded him through the door to the eternal home. The loneliness he has felt through the years of her mental darkness may be intensified, but his devout faith which he has so generously shared with us will lend a glow to his waiting as he anticipates the welcome home not many years hence. Shall we offer sympathy? If that is what is best, that is what we give. Doubtless many of our Christian Sun family do now stand with him in the shadow that will prove to be the dawning of a new and brighter day, and in our hearts there is a prayer for comfort and peace.

NEGOTIATIONS AND AGREEMENTS (First of two articles)

What may be known in political history as the most amazing story of negotiations and agreements between two countries is State Department Publication 528 containing correspondence between President Franklin D. Roosevelt and a Russian official in 1933 concerning recognition of the USSR.

Webster defines negotiate as "to confer regarding a basis of agreement", and an agreement as "an exchange of promises; mutual understanding, arrangement or stipulation".

In an exchange of correspondence between President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff, representing the USSR as Commisar, the USSR representative accepted all the terms and conditions stipulated by the United States under which it would recognize the USSR. Recognition of the Russian Empire was withdrawn in 1917 following the revolution of the Bolsheviks led by Nicolai Lenin.

Among the many agreements entered into by Mr. Litvinoff on behalf of his government but never kept were:

(1) "To respect scrupulously the indisputable right of the United States to order its own life...to refrain from interfering in any manner in the internal affairs of the United States, its territories and possessions". (2) "To refrain from...any act or overt act liable in any way to injure any part of the United States." (3) "Not to permit the formation or residence on United States territory of any organization or groups...or permit any recruiting of such organizations or groups." (4) "Not to permit the formation or residence on its territory of any organization or group — and to prevent the activity on its territory of any organization or group... which has an aim or the preparation for the overthrow of, or the bringing about by force of a change in, the political or social order of the United States, its territories and possessions".

Soon after the United States accepted these agreements, American communists attended a meeting in Moscow to discuss ways of undermining the United States Government. When the United States charged Russia with gross violation of its promises, Litvinoff blandly replied that he had no jurisdiction over what had happened.

The story of Russia's failure to keep promises from that time is too well known for recital in this space. However, this further fact is worth recording: The Soviet Government agreed that the USSR would not engage in or promote any propaganda in the United States to promote communism.

But there has been a ceaseless flow of communist propaganda into the United States since 1933. During 1960 a check of communist propaganda admitted through the port of San Francisco showed 17 tons of postage-free material. During the same period seven tons of Red literature came through the port of New York. During the same period Cuba sent 162,000 packages of magazines and 11,700 packages of newspapers. From all countries, a total of 14,200,000 packages of communist literature came into the United States.

Let Karl Marx (1818-1883), German-Jewish socialist but no admirer of the Russians, conclude this story: "Russian diplomacy, more dangerous than Russian generalship, seeks to fulfill the Russian ambition for 'universal empire' by threats, cheating and duplicity".

The Teacher's Task

To guide with patient, loving skill
The vagrant thought, the wayward will;
To build respect for every creed
That issues in a noble deed;
To help the light of truth appear,
And banish every groundless fear;
To so direct the eager mind
That worthy knowledge it may find;
To strengthen courage for the right
When justice burns with feeble light;
To stir the prison'd soul to see
The splendid vision of the free;
To teach each growing soul to share
The burden of his neighbor's care;
To show beneath each brother's skin
The beauty of what lies within;
To kindle joyous, thankful praise
To him who blesses all our days—
This I believe my task to be.
Lord, for this task illumine me.

"I Want To Be Promoted"

Last June I was promoted from the sixth to the seventh grade at school. That means that this September I went to a new school — I'm in junior high. It's exciting to have a new teacher and to be studying more "grown-up" books. I sure would hate to have to stay back in the sixth grade. Who wants to be in a class with little kids?

But I'll tell you something funny. At Sunday school it doesn't make any difference that I'm a year older and a year smarter. I'll just stay in the same old class I've always been in, unless I decide to move to another class some Sunday. Two boys in my grade at school have already started going to the class with most of the high school students in it. I might just do that too — my class is awfully boring since so many first and second and third graders are in it. And one girl is only four years old.

Do you know what I think would be smart? For somebody to say "All little children go in one class, all children in the lower grades in one class, all junior high students in another, and all high school students in another." We don't have a big Sunday school, but none of the classes would be too small this way. Each class could have lessons just "hard enough" for that age. We wouldn't have the same kid stuff year after year. And then every fall those of us who get promoted in school could be promoted in Sunday school too. I wonder why my Sunday school doesn't do that. Does yours?

The Minister Is Loyal To God

Dr. Richard K. Morton, Chaplain of Jacksonville University
2827 Holly Point Drive, Jacksonville 11, Florida

A barrage of attacks is constantly being leveled at the clergy — especially the Protestant minister who seeks to be both diligent and discerning. If he sincerely believes that something in individual lives, in institutions, or in some relationships is not what it should be or is not in accord with Christian principles, he speaks out. Often this is unpopular — and often it challenges someone's views, economic, political, or social status.

Parishioners within his own flock all too often blame him for not calling enough or in the right places. They criticize him for what he preaches on — and what he does not preach on. They object to community work — and to his not doing enough of it. So it goes. Some of this criticism is well-reasoned, justified, and even necessary. Many of us, alas, are weak, not too outstanding in intelligence, and our training sometimes has open spots. We are not perfect; few of us stand out as unquestioned leaders in a community made up of many professions, trades, and activities. Ministers are people, with many of the frailties and exasperating qualities that other people sometimes also display.

I step forward at this moment, from the lowest and humblest ranks of these people, as one who is able to look at the profession and individuals in it with added perspective because I have been an editor, newspaperman, radio broadcaster, and educator. I have held jobs with secular organizations. I have done the work of a layman as well as that of a clergyman.

I do so to defend, in a sense, all ministers of Christ, but especially the Protestant, for it seems that added criticisms come to him.

Only in a small sense am I noting or answering any special attacks.

Without adopting a procedure of legal or logical process or marshalling evidence, I should like to make a few affirmations.

1. If this country has no worse enemy than the average Protestant minister, I do not believe we are in bad shape! Will people stop a moment and review, even superficially, the day-by-day, night-by-night, devoted, poorly paid consecrated service of the minister of every denomination? Does anyone at all seriously doubt the tremendous help he renders, the tremendous good he does? And does anyone at all seriously believe that, in the midst of all this, he is, down-deep, a devotee of a hostile philosophy, ideology, government, and way of life? Does anyone in our midst know of a single bona fide clergyman who actually advocates the overthrow of our government and the supremacy of the Soviet system of economy, government, or society? Is it possible that people can go rummaging around to find some statements that individual ministers may have said at one time or another or something done, that is not quite true or very wise — and then ignore the general motivation and aim of their life and work?

Do these who readily criticize, especially those who call clergymen and educators Communists the minute they dislike or disagree with them or don't understand them, really know them as individuals? Have they really examined their total work, in its full context?

2. From 35 years of experience, in five states, I say that the overwhelming influence and activity of Protestant clergy of all denominations has been to serve God, to preach the life, death and resurrection of Christ and through all this to transform life and to work toward making earthly society more like the kingdom of God. It is a work of love, study, human understanding, and hard work — not subversion, hate, and strife.

3. These clergy are mostly not the dupes some call them — but many of those who are doing the smearing and name-calling are obviously dupes of the Communists or at least of someone else. They are only partially informed; they have taken something out of context. The minister sees evils in individual and group life and in society in general. He works against these influences. This often brings him into conflict with vested interests — with some business men, with some operators of unwholesome activities, and so on. Naturally, they use all means to oppose him.

4. If anyone takes the trouble to study basic Christian belief and the historic development of the views and systems of Marx, Engels, and such, he can find individual points at which the systems grow close together. The ethics, social system, philosophy and general critique of society, as presented by Christianity, can be likened at some points to some theories shared by Communists and by many other systems. Does it mean that, if in some individual points and on basic questions of human welfare, Christianity draws close to some views held by Communists, therefore Christians in general or ministers in particular are Communists? Logic hardly calls for this conclusion.

5. In all this sensitiveness about our differences in belief and this rather frightening witch-hunting that is going on, it is certainly regrettable that the one profession giving most of its time to loving and serving people has to come under the allegation of being disloyal and subversive. The training and community service of ministers is a loud and daily denial of this disloyalty.

6. Much hard work in the field of social and economic research and inquiry into the structure and functioning of our group life is scholarly, vital, serious, and constructive. It seeks to root out evils and weaknesses, and it is the sort of activity which often arouses people and makes them think that someone is trying to break down our way of life, our beliefs, or some established structures from which we are profiting in status, money, or in some other way. Without this energetic inquiry and analysis we might easily develop a regimented and even Fascist society.

Clergy are trained to think and to suggest better ways of living and organizing society. These suggestions often disturb or even threaten what some other people are wanting or pursuing. But this does not necessarily mean that what the clergy is doing is subversive or a danger to the foundations of our government.

7. I submit to anyone who wants to look into the matter that no group of individuals in this country, and no profession, is doing more to work against Communism, than the clergy — Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish. Even were there in fact 7000 who were suspect, this number out of 300,000 or 400,000 would be rather small, wouldn't it? But the fact is that probably a few thousand at most have at some time or other expressed

The Work Of A Pastor Is Important

He has the most important charge in the world — the soul. For what will it profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses his own soul? Yet his function is often considered negligible.

Though he is a messenger of peace, a steward of grace, an ambassador of Christ the Friend, he is caricatured as a long-faced, dour-looking joy killer.

We have guards at our banks, policemen on our streets, locks on our doors, and pastors to watch over our souls. We should have, for Robert South, an English divine, has wisely expressed it, "If there were not a minister in every parish, you would quickly find cause to increase the number of constables."

The pastor has a varied occupation. He is, in similes of Scripture, a harvester, a fisherman, a shepherd, a householder, a sower, and a healer.

His calling is one of service — to teach the children, to strengthen the brethren, to comfort the people, to rebuke the gainsayers, to lift up the fallen, to proclaim salvation to sinners. A commander of the Salvation Army put it all in one word in this greeting to all his captains: OTHERS.

"I have set thee for a tower and a fortress among My people." Thus saith the Lord of a pastor. "I have made thee a watchman" . . . to "seek that which was lost and bring again that which was driven away and bind up that which was broken, and strengthen that which was sick." Ezekiel 3:17; 34:16.

John Dryden said it in a quatrain: "The proud he tamed, the penitent he cheered;
Nor to rebuke the right offender feared;
His preaching much, but more his practice wrought,
A living sermon of the truths he taught."

one or more ideas to which some affinity with an idea also shared by some Communists may be noted. Would that necessarily make these men Communists?

You who want to defend our nation against Communist people, theories, institutions, and actions, don't be too disturbed about the clergy. Look elsewhere for the real dangers. No one is doing more on your behalf than your clergyman.

Conscience is something pictured as a miniature self perched on your shoulder and telling you off. But often the still small voice becomes dull, drowsy, and indistinct. It needs a shot in the arm of flesh. That's where the pastor comes in — the vocal, visible, conscience of the people.

That's why he is often left out of parties, personal affairs, and tokens of appreciation. Self-examination is not popular.

"Preach about the other man, preacher,
The man we all can see—
The man who drinks and beats his wife,
The man who swears and raises strife.
Preach about the other man, preacher,
Don't preach about me."

The Christian king Louis XIV felt differently about it. He said to Massillon, "I have heard many great orators and have been highly pleased with them: but whenever I hear you, I go away displeased with myself." That is high tribute.

It recalls Webster's reply to the query why he went to a little church in the country instead of one of the big churches in Washington. "In Washington they preach to Daniel Webster, the great statesman; but in the country they preach to Daniel Webster, the sinner, and it has been doing him some good."

One of the most appealing titles of the pastor is the German word SEELSORGER, one who cares for your soul. The heart of a pastor is always on the rack. The cares of the people are his cares, and so he is always burdened with care. Even as in the picture of a village at night, when all the houses are dark, there is a light burning in the telephone office; so pastors are always on call.

They are the spiritual constables of a community, who "watch for your souls, as they that must give account." (Hebrews 13:17.)

He lights the candles of eternity.
The prayer of St. Francis expresses the pastor's dedication. Where that is fulfilled, tribute is due:

Lord make me an instrument of your peace,
Where there is hatred, let me sow love;
Where there is injury, pardon;
Where there is doubt, faith;
Where there is despair, hope;
Where there is darkness, light;
And where there is sadness, joy.

Decalogue For Preachers

1. Thou shalt remember that thou art not addressing a seminary class or professors of theology; hence, no involved theological dissertations, please.

2. Thou shalt strive to "feed" rather than impress, strengthening thy brethren with that with which thou thyself hast been strengthened.

3. Thou shalt preach sermons with handles that others may grasp, making use of common illustrative materials.

4. Thou shalt preach with an earnest spirit and with expectations of a good response.

5. Thou shalt preach good news with joy and with the excited thrill of sharing.

6. Thou shalt preach the Living Word in living words.

7. Thou shalt mount thy pulpit with the assurance that the Holy Spirit is with you.

8. Thou shalt dedicate the sermon before thou openest thy mouth to satisfy the desire of every living thing.

9. Thou shalt speak with humble appreciation of the debt thou dost owe to others and to God for His grace at work in the hearts of thy hearers.

10. Thou shalt dip the arrows of thy tongue in love and shalt aim them without fear of man and without regard for his praise of thee as a marksman.

A Hint To Preachers

A beginning of days to many preachers would be to take possession of some new province of literature, as Robert Hall did when, at sixty, he studied Italian to read Dante; as Arnold did when, two years before his death, he began Sanscrit, pleading that he "was not so old as Cato when he learned Greek." How many weary and starved congregations listen hopelessly to a dejected preacher who will never give them a word, a phrase, or a thought they have not heard hundreds of times.

Christian Education

By Rev. Scott Libbey, Director
Christian Education, Iowa Conference

Not to Inform—But to Transform

The Christian Faith has a powerful message of God's love — a call for man's life in response to this love, with the strength to answer that call and know "fullness of life" through the power of love. The essential task of the church is ever this: To communicate to persons the story of God's love in such an intense and significant manner that a life is "grasped by a structure of moral greatness" — "offered a niche" — and discovers some "shaping to character and destiny."

To have so defined the "essential task" of the church is not the same as accomplishing it. The Christian Church is ever charged with the high calling of communicating this faith into person's lives.

Christian Education, when properly understood, sets itself to share in pointing toward this mission. The first hurdle in the church's work of Christian Education is to understand its goal and to recognize that the transmission of knowledge alone is not sufficient to bring persons to a sense of being grasped by this structure of moral greatness. The "facts" of the Christian Faith are tools to be used in shaping this character and destiny.

Among the most essential insights which one must "learn" in order to be grasped are the following: (a.) Persons are holy and must be related to accordingly. (b.) Belonging to a concerned and sustaining fellowship is essential. (c.) The values of Christian living must speak relevantly to everyday life.

Let us look at these:

The Holiness of Persons

A characteristic of our age is growing impersonalness... To a politician you may be a voter... To a shop keeper you may be a customer... To an employer you may be a piece of his machinery. In all of these you really don't count for very much. One vote more or less, one sale more or less, one piece of machinery... easily replaced.

But, in truth, you are a person, who thinks, feels, suffers, and knows the possibility for creative joy. Fulness of life depends upon the whole person discovering himself to be of worth, understood, and accepted by a world that has a place for him.

Let me illustrate: In Father Huddleston's book, Not For Your Comfort, he tells the story of an African man, an elder in his church, who ventured out one day forgetting his native pass which allowed him to move freely from place to place. He was picked up by the police, and during the period of his detention, so severely beaten that he died within two or three hours of his release.

Huddleston points out that to most of the white citizens of South Africa this native African was just another

TEACHERS ARE BRIDGES

Across the wide, blue river, like a hand
The bridge extends itself in love to lead

The traveler on into another land.

Is not the teacher like a linking bridge
Leading pupils on from shore to shore
Adventuring atop the mountain ridge?

Teachers are bridges glowing with the Light
Of Christ that shines amid the darkest fear

To dawn a lustrous day out of one's night.

Teachers are bridges, paths where pupils trod
In being guided over life's great span
Into the heavenly Realm, the Way of God.

—Harold A. Schulz

man who had forgotten his pass and whose lack of responsibility to the law threatened the entire system of white control.

If this view of him was correct, then, perhaps the manner in which he was treated makes sense.

But, suppose you see him in another light... you know him to be a member of the Church of Christ, a father of children who have been baptized, a man whose very spirit bespeaks a sensitivity to the presence of Christ. Most important you know him to be a child of God for whom God has the deepest concern which he reveals through the life and death of His own son, Jesus Christ. This image of him, this sense of the "holiness of person" which envelops the native African makes a difference in the way you relate to him.

Now the challenge to the Church and to Christian Education, is to communicate this "holiness of persons" in such a way that each of us, can discover its penetrating truth, know it for ourselves as others relate to us in this way, and discover the power by which we can know others to be children of God.

Belonging to Concerned Christian Fellowship

There are many times in the life of each of us when we need to turn to others for counsel and for comfort in order to retain our own sanity. To have someone care for us in this fellowship is to invite us to belong; and, when rooted in this caring, concerned fellowship, belonging is a foundation for all that we shall become. The burdens of life are not removed, but are much more easily borne when one stands within a fellowship that cares — and in addition to the personal caring, points beyond itself to God as the source of all caring.

It was the end of church services on a cold winter morning, and there was a flurry of getting bundled into warm clothes for the journey home. In the hustle and bustle of getting ready to leave, a six-year-old girl stumbled and fell halfway down a flight of stairs. She was not injured for the heavy winter clothing protected her — but this was a tremendously frightening experience and she cried out in terror.

A junior high boy, whom she hardly knew, picked her up from the floor and comforted her — adults gathered round to help her and to see if she were injured. In a matter of a few minutes she was quieted and gaily on her way—a frightening experience had been transformed into one of light and love and learning.

One could not help sensing how much each participant learned about "belonging." For the little girl, for the junior high boy, and for the adults there had been an experience of what it means to belong to a fellowship that cares.

Prayers For Little Children

Morning

Now I wake and see the light,
Thy love was with me through the night;
To thee I speak again and pray
That thou wilt lead me all the day. Amen.

Mealtime

Father, we thank thee for this food,
For all thy love so great and good;
Feed all thy hungry ones today;
Bless all the world with us, we pray. Amen.

Thanks for Families

Great Father of all the world:
I thank thee for putting people in families
So that they can love and care for one another.
I thank thee for my home and for my family —
My mother and father, my brothers and sisters.
Please help us all to be loving
And thoughtful of one another,
So that our home may be full of joy. Amen.

For Forgiveness

Forgive me, God for things I do
That are not kind and good.
Forgive me, God, and help me try
To do the things I should. Amen.

(From The Book of Prayers Compiled for Protestant Worship)

This is what the Christian community is called to be. So many times in our churches we do not search out the deep meaning of the words "we are a covenanted fellowship." We allow ourselves to become bogged down with organizational concerns. — "Are the Sunday School children quiet as the church worship is beginning?" — "Why haven't the trustees had the plumber fix that dripping faucet in the kitchen?" — "Why do we have so much trouble getting our pledges in to underwrite the budget?" Appropriate quietness, and faucets that work are helpful in a church's life. However, it would be well for us to re-discover the primary purpose of the church.

It is not enough to tell a person that belonging to the church and to God is important to him, but rather, more fully, he must be invited into a fellowship that is so important that he discovers its lifelong significance. This kind of belonging to a concerned Christian fellowship will sustain him and will enable him to become a part of that sustaining fellowship as it ministers to others.

The resources of the Christian faith which we study in Christian education help us to discover this belonging — but to genuinely know that one lives within a concerned fellowship depends primarily upon experiencing this kind of concern reaching out and enveloping the person, as an expression of living care.

Relating the Christian Faith To Everyday Life

If we would help persons discover for themselves the value in life which we believe God has created then we must assist them in finding a key for unlocking the meanings of life's experiences.

It is our conviction, standing within the Christian faith, that the secret of the key is caught up and contained within the central doctrines of God's revelation through Christ. Regardless of how true this may be, the phrase, "God's revelation in Christ," contains no magical formula for helping a person who does not know the vocabulary of faith. Most of the great words of the language of faith have disappeared from common usage. In this twentieth century they sound

All of this is part of what Christian Education is about — it is to hope that as one experiences and learns the holiness of persons, as one experiences and learns belonging is a concerned fellowship, and as one experiences and learns the relationship between where we live and the Christian Faith — then, and only then, will we know ourselves to be grasped by a structure of morality and greatness where we are offered a niche, and where we have our own character shaped and freed for creative living.

unusually "churchy" and are reserved as accompanying garments for our "Sunday go-to-meeting clothes."

Where we live and work is a world that has vocabularies of reality — fraught with feelings and emotions, rooted in the actual living experiences of person-with-person, and persons within the context of a world whose values are not Christian.

Many times in our churches we almost force persons to the threshold of hypocrisy by encouraging them to profess ideas and concepts which they do not embrace, and/or which they do not understand. The words of the Christian faith are easily stated — but seldom do we grasp their meanings and seldom are we grasped by them for a lifelong quest.

The challenge to the church in its educational mission is a clear one. It must move in two directions: (1) It must focus on the central experiences of a person's life and identify those experiences with meanings that are of God's creation. The language of faith must be made relevant to life in such ways that one can see all of life as part of God's pattern of creation. (2) It is necessary for the Christian heritage to become usable on an everyday level. At present we stand on the outside, looking in — we need to get inside of the Bible, the life of Christ, church history and all parts of this heritage so thoroughly that we can use it freely and easily as the common coin of our own lives. It is not enough, however, to invest words with meanings that can be understood — but rather we must discover those words and meanings to be those which define who and why we are, and what our life is all about.

Until we can identify ourselves as being redeemed — can know the force of judgment and are enabled to be forgiving — the ability to use the words is pointless.

The ever-present, staggering responsibility in Christian Education is to draw into dialogue the experiences of real life with the heritage of the Christian Faith in such a manner that the meeting ground of man and God becomes for a person the transforming power which frees him.

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

What Shall I Do With My Life -- A Job Or A Vocation?

This is the biggest question you will ever have to answer!

And there is no escaping an answer. Whatever you do will be your answer.

You can make a thoughtful, well planned, conscious choice.

Or, you can drift, and let shifting circumstances of the moment decide for you.

Our Christian Faith gives us a starting point, by making us know that our lives are not just our own.

Each of us has been born and has grown out of the love, dreams, efforts, hopes and sacrifices of others.

We draw upon the character, labor, purpose of others every day of our lives.

The lives of others, in turn, will be affected by our lives.

Living requires doing something with the powers and potentialities of our lives.

For most of us living requires doing something that "earns us a living" in the human economy.

"Job" and "Vocation" may seem to be the same thing—but

To "earn a living" only, is to have a job.

To make one's daily work a means of fulfilling God's purpose is to have a vocation.

To choose a Christian vocation that is a part of the organized work of the church is to have a church vocation.

To do any job well requires a knowledge of the skills required, and the ability and desire to achieve those skills.

To fulfill a Christian vocational "calling" — in the organized church or elsewhere — requires a concern for knowing as much as you can of God's will for the world and your own life, as well as a knowledge of the skills required and your ability to achieve them.

Northview Women's Fellowship

By Mrs. H. S. Clark

The Women's Fellowship of the North View Community Church held its August meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Johnson. It was a family night picnic, supper meeting and all of the members of the church were invited to come and bring their families.

At 6:30 a bountiful picnic supper was served on the spacious back porch of the home. After supper the children enjoyed games on the lawn while the ladies held their meeting in the living room. Special guests were Mrs. Cox of the Sanford District of Women's Fellowships of which she is the District Supt. and Mrs. Hight, both from the Eutaw church in Fayetteville, N. C.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. L. C. Wicker. Mrs. Sam Johnson gave a beautiful devotional reading from the book of Psalms. The secretary gave a report of the year's work. Mrs. Cox installed the new officers for the coming year. They are:

President, Mrs. Aline Rogers; Vice President, Mrs. Annie R. Millikin; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Betty High.

Mrs. L. C. Wicker, the outgoing president, gave a talk to the women, which was as follows:

"Tonight we place in our records another milestone for our Northview Women's Fellowship. I feel that the past year has been a most rewarding one for our Society. Our Women's Fellowship has been a warm feeling of love and friendliness toward each other and a fellowship with God. We have had good attendance at each meeting. Our meetings have been very inspiring. We feel that God was present and he was working with us. Christ promised us that when two or three are gathered together in his name he would be in their midst. Each member has been co-operative in taking part in our programs.

"A society is like a wheel. We have a new wheel of officers for this coming year. But if we let the spokes weaken the axle will not be strong. It is our duty to cooperate with this slate of officers, so the wheel will stand up.

"Our society is a branch from the church. It is built on Christ the Solid Rock. I feel sure that this coming year will be the most rewarding one yet.

"This past year we have been to many places in person and in imagination. We have taken part in all we were asked to. Being your president has been very inspiring for me. I have learned to live closer to Christ. I would like to thank Mrs. Joyner and Mrs. Millikin, for being responsible for our book reviews. Our secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Rogers, is to be given credit for a fine job of keeping our records. Mrs. H. S. Clark has been so faithful in giving us our Bible Study, Luke's Portrait of Christ. I want to thank each one for the fine cooperation that you have given me for without your help and God's help, we could not have done so much. The wheel would have wobbled to the ground. Let's go into the new year with a prayerful spirit of willingness.

Elon College Begins New Year

The 1961-62 term at Elon College opened Friday, September 8, when members of the faculty gathered for the first faculty meeting of the year. A "cookout" for the group was held near McEwen Dining Hall the previous evening.

Dr. J. Earl Danieley, Elon's president, addressed the faculty at the first meeting. Others appearing on the program were Prof. Fletcher Moore, dean of the college; Prof. Jennings Berry, registrar; and Prof. Alfred Hassell, director of student personnel and guidance services.

Approximately 250 freshmen dormitory students also reported to the campus September 8 for a weekend of pre-registration training and counseling. Freshmen commuting students reported on September 11 to begin a week's program of orientation for all freshmen.

On Monday and Tuesday all freshmen were given a series of placement tests to determine their assignments to classes. Freshmen registered for their courses on Thursday, preceding the regular opening of classes September 15.

Included in the freshman orientation program were a series of tests; an address of welcome by Dr. J. E. Danieley; an address on the history of the college by Dr. H. H. Cunningham; and an address on The Christian College Campus by Rev. John S. Graves, College Chaplain. Also included in the week's program were group discussions, sessions with appropriate advisers and deans, a pep rally and varied social activities. The first football game of the season was played Saturday evening, September 16, when the Elon Christian team met the Guilford College team.

Members of the freshmen class attended morning services at Elon College Community Church Sunday, September 10, as a group.

Who Is Educated?

A professor in Chicago is reported to have given the following test to his pupils. He told them they were not really educated unless they could say Yes to all these questions:

Has your education given you sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public-spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and to keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself?

Can you look, an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye?

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Will a lonely dog follow you down the street?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the meaner drudgeries of life?

Do you think washing dishes and hoeing corn just as compatible with high thinking as playing the piano or golf?

Are you good for anything to yourself? Can you be happy alone?

Can you look out on the world and see anything but dollars and cents?

Can you look into a mudpuddle by the wayside and see anything in the puddle but mud?

Can you look into the sky at night and see beyond the stars?

Can your soul claim relationship with the Creator?

Laymen To Meet At Elon

The annual meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference Laymen's Fellowship will be held in McEwen Memorial Dining Hall, Elon College, September 29. Dinner will be served at 7:00 p.m. The business session will begin at 8:00 p.m. Cost of the meal is $1.50 per person. Reservations are to be sent to Dillard Powell, Route 2, Ruffin, N. C. by September 26. Our speaker for the evening will be Dr. Harvey A. Fesperman, President Southern Synod, Evangelical and Reformed Church. New officers will also be elected at this time. Please make an effort to be with us.

Dillard Powell, Sec.-Treas.

President Danieley Addresses Freshmen

Welcoming more than 350 members of Elon College's new freshman class to the Elon campus at the opening chapel program of freshman orientation week, Dr. J. E. Danieley, president of the college, urged the youthful members of Elon's newest class to take full advantage of the opportunities which college offers them.

After citing the college's own institutional aims to be a Christian college and to maintain high academic standards, Dr. Danieley told the freshmen that it also holds high hopes for each and every member of their class during the coming years.

He listed among these hopes for each student the desire for each one to work and study to the best of his individual ability, for each student to develop new interests and thus obtain a liberal education and for each student to have his Christian faith deepened and strengthened.

Dr. Danieley pointed out that, while Elon College is affiliated with the Congregational Church and with the new United Church of Christ, no student at Elon is subjected to denominational pressure, citing the fact that the college's student body is composed of young men and women from many and varied religious backgrounds.

VIRGINIA CHURCH - FAMILY CONFERENCE

A Regional Conference on The Church and Family will be held at Emory and Henry College, Emory, Virginia, on Monday, October 9, from 9:30 to 3:45.

The conference has been planned by the Committee on Family Life of the Virginia Council of Churches. The Rev. Gilbert Cofer of Falls Church, Director of Christian Education, Alexandria District of The Methodist Church, is chairman.

The conference is planned especially for church leaders who are responsible for the program and activities of the church. Problems for discussion will include: factors affecting the family today; responsibility of the church for family life; the place of the family in the Christian fellowship; developing a church program that will strengthen the family.

The leaders will include Dr. Mildred T. Tate of Blacksburg, Consultant and Writer on Family Life; Dr. Minor Wine Thomas of Radford, Director of the Mountain Empire Guidance Center, Radford College; and the Rev. William C. Mason Jr., Chaplain of Emory and Henry College.

For registration blanks write to the Virginia Council of Churches, 109 West Grace Street, Richmond 20, Virginia.

How Jesus Grew

Background Scripture: Deuteronomy 6:1-9; Luke 2:39-52.

Devotional Reading: Deuteronomy 6:1-9.

Memory Selection: And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon him. Luke 2:40.

We begin today a series of lessons — fourteen of them — on Christian Growth. That is a lot of lessons, but that is a big subject. For Growth in Grace is one of the most important things in the Christian Life, and we will do well to try to understand its laws, and practice its principles. There is no such thing as “static Christianity.” Perhaps it would be better to say that static Christianity is dead Christianity. Christians are to “grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.” And a person never grows so old or knows so much, but that he can continue to grow in spirit. We begin this series of Lessons with a consideration of HOW JESUS GREW. The Background Scripture is the very familiar story of Jesus’ first visit to Jerusalem, and Luke’s comments on that great event. The whole lesson could be summed up in one verse: “And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.” Luke 2:52.

The Divine and The Human

We should never forget that Jesus was divine, the Son of God. But we should never forget, too, that Jesus was human, the Son of Man. When He came into the world He took upon himself the form of a man and was made in the likeness of men, and was found in fashion as a man. (Philippians 2:7,8.) As a human being He was subject to the laws governing all human beings, including the laws of growth. There were natural factors, as well as supernatural factors, in his life. His strong, rugged body, his keen and discerning mind, his social graces, and his personal relationship with God were not given; they were achieved.

His Heredity

Jesus was fortunate in his heredity. Both the genealogy of Jesus as given by Matthew and Luke show that Jesus had “royal blood” in him. He had a fine ancestry. He came of good stock from away back. It was a part of the divine plan that he should have from the beginning the priceless heritage of a good ancestry. And not the least of this pattern of good and great heredity was his mother Mary. She was a pure, devout, sensitive, deeply religious woman who all unwittingly had kept faith with all those who had gone before her, and with God, in transmitting to her son, the Son of God, a goodly heritage of a goodly heredity. To be sure, heredity is not everything, but it is a great thing. Young people starting out today ought to give their children a good heredity so far as lies within their power. But alas, this thing called heredity extends far beyond the child’s own parents. Heredity is deeply rooted in ancestors many generations before the child is born. But let every young couple remember this: they can help to give future generations a good heredity.

His Environment

The debate about the relative effects or influence of heredity and environment goes on and on. Perhaps there is no final and complete answer. But even as heredity is important, so is environment. Environment counts tremendously. Parents themselves cannot do much about the heredity of their own children, but they can do a great deal about the environment in which their children grow up.

Reverently it can be said that the Lord Jesus Christ would never have been what He was if God, in his wisdom and grace, had not seen to it that He was reared in a good environment. To be sure, Nazareth was not much to speak about as a town. But Jesus had that priceless and almost all-determinative factor in character, a wholesome home life. Joseph, his fosterfather, was an humble man, a carpenter by trade.

We know little about him. But we may be sure that he was a solid, sensible, religious man. Jesus must have been greatly influenced by this humble Galilean peasant. And Mary his mother was an unusual woman. Deeply devout and religious, we may be sure that from his earliest years, Jesus was surrounded by a most wholesome atmosphere, given the best of training both at home and in the synagogue, and initiated into the great traditions of the Chosen People. This home did not have much money or material things to give to Jesus. But it had something far more valuable — it gave him a religious environment and religious training. As someone has said, there are many modern parents who are giving their children everything to live with, and nothing to live for. There are thousands of homes which are giving children almost everything but religious training. The children are growing in body and mind and even in social graces, but not growing in favor with God. God to them means little or nothing.

His Growth

There are two significant statements in today’s lesson. One is to the effect that Jesus, the boy Jesus, was subject unto them (his parents). This statement follows hard upon the account of his pivotal experience in Jerusalem where there came to Jesus the clear consciousness that in some way God had something special for him to do. Obedience is not the outstanding virtue of many children. And all too many modern parents minimize the importance of teaching obedience in the home, or they teach it in a dictatorial way. The very fact that Jesus realized He was the Son of God made him the perfect son of his human parents.

The other verse states simply that the boy Jesus grew in stature: wholesome food, exercise, sleep, good habits were conducive to bodily strength and growth. He grew in wisdom: what knowledge He had was not given to him — He had to study and work for it. He grew in favor with man: He was courteous, kind, unselfish, thoughtful of others, friendly toward all. He grew in favor with God also. He undoubtedly committed to memory many of the great passages of the Old Testament, meditated in a boyish way over them, prayed, obeyed the impulses that came from God. In all respects He grew because He obeyed the laws of growth.

A Visit To Lynnhaven

Dear Friends:

Today (September 12) twenty-one of our older children are back in school after a long week-end at Lynnhaven, Virginia. With the permission of our new principal, Mr. Primm, here at the Elon High School, we left on Thursday after school and returned on Monday afternoon.

The purpose of our trip was twofold. First, we went to visit our new and young church, The Lynnhaven Colony Community Church, located in a most prosperous and growing area. Second, this was to be a week-end at the beach for this group of young people, some of whom had never seen the ocean.

As for the beach phase of our trip, it could not have been better. Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Anderson, members of the Lynnhaven Church, we were given three cottages on the water front in which to live while we were there. For you who might not know, Lynnhaven is located at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay. From the Lynnhaven beach one can observe about any hour of day or night some ocean-going commercial ships or naval ships or submarines going and coming from the Norfolk harbor and its ship yards.

Sometimes September is not a good beach month. This, however, proved not to be true this time. The weather could not have been nicer. The girls and boys thoroughly enjoyed the bay area for swimming. All of them were able to visit Virginia Beach, which was just five miles away.

Now as to our visit to the Lynnhaven Church — this too, was most enjoyable. Like all young people, our boys and girls sometimes don't like to have to go to Sunday school, morning worship and then back to church on Sunday night. This time they eagerly looked forward to it. This was due to the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and a number of the young people had made our boys and girls feel so much at home. Our boys and girls have never been more graciously accepted by any church or group. They thoroughly enjoyed having Mrs. Anderson as their teacher for the Sunday school hour. Since so many of the members of this church come from backgrounds other than that of our own denomination, I was given the Sunday school hour to tell them about the Home and its program. We were very happy with the response. Several families are considering coming to our Open House November 4.

At the 11:00 hour, Rev. Sam Nelson and the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Norfolk exchanged pulpits. This was because the church is in the midst of a Building Fund Campaign drive with which Rev. Mr. Mosier is helping — a fine example of church cooperation across denominational lines.

On Sunday evening our young people went to Ruskin's Restaurant in South Norfolk, where one of our trustees, Mr. Charles Richardson, and his family had dinner with us. Then we returned to the church for the youth program, after which our young people were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bennett for a social hour which was thoroughly enjoyed.

In about twenty years of being in the ministry it has been the privilege of Mrs. Snyder and myself to take a number of young people's groups on trips, but never have we taken a group that responded and cooperated better than this group. We were more than proud to be associated with this fine group of young people from our Home.

Many thanks to Rev. and Mrs. Sam Nelson and their fine people for all the kindness they showed to us on a visit that twenty-one boys and girls will never forget.

(Next week we will tell you more about those who helped to make this trip possible.)

EDUCATION

Education does not mean teaching people what they do not know. It means teaching them to behave as they do not behave. It is not teaching the youth the shapes of letters and the tricks of numbers, and then leaving them to turn their arithmetic to roguery, and their literature to lust. It means, on the contrary, training them into the perfect exercise and kingly continence of their bodies and souls. It is a painful, continual, and difficult work to be done by kindness, by watching, by warning, by precept, and by praise, but above all — by example.

TRPM In Davidson District

By John G. Truitt

Let me tell you about the TRPM in the Davidson district. I am writing from the guest room in the parsonage of the First Evangelical and Reformed Church in Winston-Salem. It is a joyous privilege to know the Rev. and Mrs. Aubrey W. Hedrick, their daughter, Alice, who went yesterday to Catawba College to begin her second year there; and Ruth, now in the eighth grade. A week in their home has convinced me that their church has a most excellent family in their parsonage.

The church has been well trained during the several past months for this Teaching - Reaching - Preaching Mission. This they have shown by the excellent congregations, the response in all their committee work — and there are many committees — and their willingness and promptness in attending the three nearly hour-long training sessions of their Missioner (I believe that is what I am called here) and their faithfulness in attending the four forty-minute after-meetings each night. These people are busy, and besides many of their children are in school, yet they have meant business about this Mission.

There are 16 churches, and as many pastors, and as many guest Missioners — 32 ministers in all — who have met together for seven weekdays for prayer, Bible study, and training under the direction of the Rev. Robert A. Happel, of the national office of Evangelism at Cleveland, Ohio. They have met in Paul's Chapel Church near Lexington where the women of that church have served luncheon each day.

In each of the local churches teams of laymen and women have, after having been trained, gone forth two by two to call on assigned persons from the prospect lists of the churches. It is too early for me to try to give you final results, but I am sure many lay people have had joy in the work they are doing, individuals and families have been brought into the churches, the churches themselves have been greatly strengthened by having this business of evangelism being placed directly upon their own hearts; and the ministers feel much encouraged by the Mission. The method is sound, Christ-centered, and is to become a continuing part of each local church's program.

The fellowship of these ministers, and the friendliness of the members of First Church have been an inspiration to me, and I am thankful to have had some small part in this program.

LEBANON WOMEN HOLD SHOWER

By Mrs. Carlton Scott

Mesdames Foster Pointer, G. M. McSherry, Frank Hudson, Jr., Carlton Scott, Ezra Stowe and Miss Nancy McSherry were joint hostesses at a miscellaneous shower at the Semora Community House for their pastor, Rev. L. T. Wilkins, and his future bride, Miss Martha Brittle.

On arrival Miss Brittle was presented a rolling pin from which she lifted a fringed carnation corsage. Mrs. Foster Pointer and Mrs. Frank Hudson started the recreation, which ended with the entrance of one of the men of the church, dressed as a woman. Very few knew he was Foster Pointer at first. His natural talent for acting and his being dressed as a woman made this a merry party for everyone.

Miss Brittle and Mr. Wilkins opened their gifts, which were numerous and useful. A wheelbarrow all covered with white and green ribbon streamers was a unique way to present the gifts. Mrs. Walter Scott presented Mr. Wilkins with a love offering from the members in appreciation of his faithful and efficient service.

Following the opening of the gifts, refreshments in green and white were served. Misses Judy Pointer and Dorothy Gale McSherry poured punch. Candles were used throughout the building, and shed a soft glow.

Miss Brittle and Mr. Wilkins expressed grateful appreciation to everyone for their generosity.

The couple was married Sunday, August 27.

At the August meeting of the Albemarle Women's Fellowship their departing pastor's wife, Mrs. Collie Seymour, was presented with a gift. Presiding was Mrs. Addie B. Troutman. As this was the last quarterly meeting of the year, reports were given and officers elected.

NEW OFFICERS AT PFAFFTOWN

By Mrs. Kieth Wright

The Women's Circle at the Community United Church of Christ, Pfafftown, held its installation of officers at the September meeting. New officers installed by the pastor, Rev. Kieth Wright, are: president, Mrs. Lee Grubbs; vice president, Mrs. Claude Higgins; secretary, Mrs. W. R. Franklin; treasurer, Mrs. Agnes Daub; Christian education, Mrs. Charles Gross; stewardship, Mrs. Farrell Luper; spiritual life, Mrs. Steve Scott; assistant spiritual life, Mrs. Delfred Richey; missionary education, Mrs. Clarence Fulk; social action, Mrs. Dallas Shelton; hostess, Mrs. K. W. Long; reporter and historian, Mrs. Kieth Wright.

"What do you think about a new church building" was the subject for a round table discussion.

Dr. Frank Hamilton of The Christian Temple, Norfolk, was in Boston September 19-20 for a meeting of the Board of Directors of the United Church Board for World Ministries.

The goal of science is to describe the universe; the goal of religion is to find the most abundant life that man may possess in such a universe.

In Memoriam

COLE

We, the members of the Northview Community Church, near Sanford, N. C., wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Pauline Cole, wife of Mr. A. R. Cole, whom God in his infinite wisdom took from our midst August 30, 1961.

She was a charter member of our church. Although for many months she was unable to attend church due to her illness, she was always interested and concerned in the work of the church.

Mrs. Cole's life was characterized by deep sympathy and understanding. She was a kind and loving wife and mother and her inspiring influence will always remain with her family. She was a charter member of the Northview Community Club, a civic organization of women whose aim it is to create a better community and to help those in need. Her community has lost a faithful friend. We shall miss her presence among us. In appreciation of her faithfulness, her happy and cheerful manner in the face of much suffering, we extend to her loved ones our sympathy, and resolve to keep a memory of her love and devotion to her community alive in our hearts. "He that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth it for my sake shall find it."

Mrs. H. S. Clark

God Gives -- Man Receives

Never before has there been so much bewilderment and doubt among the common men and women of our nation. All in vexation are asking: When? Why? Where? Our people are distressed and worried. Recently one of the dear little ladies of my congregation, facing the unknown as a result of a recent operation which offered the dreaded verdict, cancer, offered me this comforting suggestion that will work more than one may realize. She has known and is practicing its formula. She said, "I am not afraid because I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, and in him I place my trust." From her portrayal of trust in the serenity of her belief, I listened to the dictates of my faith and am including the following statement of hope for the Christian:

God gives us rain;
The slow, soothing patter upon the window pane,
The flash flooded rivers along the street, again,
The growing crop, long leaf and tall, in fields of corn and grain.
God gives us rain.

God gives us light;
The black dispelled, the valley, the wandering brook, the whispering sight,
The red of field, the blue of sky, the silvery mist of jet in flight.
God in Christ offers, we receive His light.

God gives us a friend;
The warmth of hand clasp, the firmness of loyalty, the enduring word of hope and promise.

God gave and gives us the true Friend;
To know and believe and follow and serve
The joy of God's true gift, a friend, The Friend,
And the way of security and victory come the end.

If God gives and we receive,
Why then our doubts — our fears — our dreads?
Open your eyes to God, He is alive! He is not dead!
Believe, Hope, Pray, Trust, Love,
For God gives in Christ—
We receive.

SO WE BELIEVE IN GOD.

WORLD-WIDE COMMUNION OCTOBER 1

Come, Risen Lord

Come, risen Lord, and deign to be our guest;
Nay, let us be thy guests; the feast is thine;
Thyself at thine own board make manifest
In this our sacrament of bread and wine.

We meet, as in that upper room they met,
Thou at the table, blessing, yet dost stand;
"This is my body"; so thou givest yet;
Faith still receives the cup as from thy hand.

One body we, one body who partake,
One Church united in communion blest;
One name we bear, one bread of life we break,
With all thy saints on earth and saints at rest.

One with each other, Lord, for one in thee,
Who art one Savior and one living Head;
Then open thou our eyes, that we may see:
Be known to us in the breaking of the bread.

George W. Briggs, In The Pilgrim Hymnal

Eternal God, Whose Power Upholds

Eternal God, whose power upholds both flower and flaming star,
To whom there is no here or there, no time, no near, no far.
No alien race, no foreign shore, no child unsought, unknown,
O send us forth, thy prophets true, to make all lands thine own.

O God of love, whose spirit wakes in every human breast,
Whom love, and love alone can know, in whom all hearts find rest,
Help us to spread thy gracious reign till greed and hate shall cease,
And kindness dwell in human hearts, and all the earth find peace.

O God of righteousness and grace, seen in the Christ, thy Son,
Whose life and death reveal thy face, by whom thy will was done,
Inspire thy heralds of good news to live thy life divine,
Till Christ is formed in all mankind and every land is thine.

Henry Hallam Tweedy, In The Pilgrim Hymnal

COMMUNION

Bread of the world, in mercy
broken,
Wine of the soul, in mercy shed,
By whom the words of life were spoken,
And in whose death our sins
are dead,
Look on the heart by sorrow
broken,
Look on the tears by sinners shed,
And be the feast to us the token
That by thy grace our souls are fed.

Here And There Among The Churches

October 1 will be rally day, promotion day, and world-wide communion Sunday at The Christian Temple, Norfolk.

Teachers of the East Southern Pines School were guests at the church night dinner of the Church of Wide Fellowship there September 20.

Rally Day will be observed at Wake Chapel October 1. The highlight of the service will be the observance of World-Wide Communion Sunday. Following the worship service there will be a fellowship dinner in the assembly room.

Rev. Edwin Alcorn, pastor of Trinity E. and R. Church, Conover, gave Bible lectures at our Tryon, N. C., church September 19 and 26. These were to provide background material for the church school teachers as they prepared for their new year's curriculum on the Bible.

Mr. Virgil Sorrell of the Wentworth Christian Church is directing the choir of The Community Church, Garner, North Carolina. Forty-five were present for a church social at the parsonage September 16. The pastor is Rev. Rosser Lee Clapp.

Readers of The Christian Sun will be saddened to know of the death of Mrs. H. H. Butler, 105 years old, who passed away August 30 at her home, 124 Chestnut Street, Suffolk, Virginia. She was the widow of Rev. H. H. Butler. Funeral services were conducted in the Suffolk Christian Church by Rev. John G. Truitt, Rev. H. S. Harcastle and Rev. R. E. Brittle, her pastor, Rev. George D. Alley, being on vacation.

Palm Street Church, Greensboro, received seven members during August. Attendance at Wednesday evening prayer services has exceeded 60. Rev. Odell Powell is the pastor.

"Ready for the Hurricanes" was the appropriate sermon topic of Rev. Bill Simmons at Great Bridge, Norfolk, September 17. This church is holding eight cottage prayer meetings each Monday for a month preceding their TRPM October 6-13.

The annual fall meeting of the Valley of Virginia Churchmen's Fellowship was held at St. Paul Church, Woodstock, September 24. A United Church youth rally for the Valley was held at Camp Strawderman September 17.

Revival services at Bethlehem, Nansemond County, Virginia, began August 29 with Rev. H. E. Crutchfield of Wakefield doing the preaching. Twenty-three members have been added to the church this year. The reporter, Mary Jones, tells us that work on the new sanctuary is progressing nicely and they are expecting to get into it the first of the new year.

Dr. David Shepherd writes that during the past few weeks our Sanford church has received as members two former Roman Catholics, one from the Church of God, one from the Disciples, one from the First Baptist Church — and one Congregational Christian! In the bulletin of Trinity Church, Concord, where Dr. Banks J. Peeler is pastor, we note a welcome to Mr. and Mrs. William Wade, members of our Sanford church transferring there.

Rev. and Mrs. Bland Leebrick and children, Gloria and Deborah, moved their membership to Bethlehem, Tenth Legion, Virginia, September 17. As a part of the service there next Sunday there will be a roll call of all members.

William Wynn Riley, who received his A. B. in music and diploma in organ at Elon College in 1960, became organist-choirmaster for First Christian Church, Burlington, this month. He received his M. A. in music and music education from Columbia University.

From the newsletter of St. Paul United Church of Christ, Cincinnati, Ohio, we learn that Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Jackson have built a summer cottage on Rocky Fork Lake, which will be available for use by church groups for outings, retreats, picnics, and may be used by families on a rental basis.

We learn from The Standard of the Southern Synod that Rev. Carl J. Landes, 5606 Oak Street, Guilford College, N. C., has been selected to succeed Miss Dorothy Hampton as Race Relations Consultant in the Southern Synod, the Southern Convention and the Convention of the South.

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro was guest speaker for the first general meeting of the year for the Women's Fellowship of our Tryon church. Her subject was "The Woman's Gift and Its Outreach." Following the program and a sandwich luncheon, Mrs. Wisseman shared in a communion service led by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Stevenson.

What The Communion Means To Me

By Dr. L. E. Smith

The rich personal experience of a devout Christian as he participates in the Holy Communion service is difficult to communicate to another. There are some experiences that can be made plain with words. There are others that cannot be conveyed with words. They are too deep, too rich and too personal for their real meanings to be expressed in words. I know of no language that is sufficiently vivid and penetrating to lay bare the full meaning of a true worshipper's feelings when he eats of the bread and drinks of the wine of which the Son of God said "This is my body, broken for you. This is my blood shed for the remission of sins."

Personally, when I participate in the Communion service my mind is refreshed, my memory is revived. I seem to see the Lord in the upper room with the twelve apostles. Evidently he is carrying a great burden. He knows what the burden is. His disciples do not.

My heart is moved, my emotions are stirred when I am assured again and again that the Son of God suffered, suffered much for the world; but it is also true and significant that he suffered for me. In reality and in truth while suffering for the world he also suffered for me — he suffered on account of my sins. When I eat the bread I am made to realize that my sins broke his body. When I drink the wine I am also made to realize that my sins made him shed his blood; that he suffered and died for me. My spirit is overwhelmed within me, my heart is burdened with guilt, my mouth is filled with confessions and my soul pleads for mercy and forgiveness. My whole being is over-joyed with the assurance of his abundant mercy and forgiving love. Nothing could be more satisfying and more joyous than the assurance of our Lord's abiding mercy and saving grace.

My duty, as a true servant of God, is plain. My will is submissive to his will. I give myself to him anew. He gave his life for me. Why should not I give my life to him? I yield to him my spirit, my life, my all.

This is what the Communion Service means to me. And I participate in it, in all sincerity, in humility, in devotion and in gratitude to God for his great love, his ever present and abundant mercy.

N. C. Women's Conf.

Mrs. J. R. Lackey, President

Women from all our North Carolina churches are reminded of the annual conference to be held October 3 at Pleasant Hill, near Liberty. Guest speaker will be Mrs. Alfred C. Bartholomew, assistant moderator of the United Church of Christ, and a former national officer of The Women's Guild of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. Her theme will be "Creating and Renewing the Church."

Registration begins at 9:30 and adjournment will be at 3:00. Lunch will be $1.00. To reach Pleasant Hill from Burlington go on Route 49 toward Liberty, turning left at the first paved road beyond Shady Oak Service Station (about two miles). From Liberty one goes about 4 miles toward Burlington on Route 49 and then forks right at a church sign. The church is about two miles down this road.

Holy Communion

Communion is not a word to be found in our Bible, but commune is used in Psalm 4:4; Psalm 77:6; and Ecclesiastes 1:16. In each case the communion is with one's self, and the idea is closely related to thinking. In all four Gospels there is the story of Jesus eating with his disciples on the night in which he was betrayed, and St. Paul tells the same story in his letter to the Corinthians. From that night in an upper room until now Christians have eaten bread and drunk wine in memory of the Lord Jesus — and we have called it Communion.

Christians of every faith and order in all parts of the world are requested to meet next Sunday, October 1, in their places of worship and partake of bread and wine in memory of Christ, and to enter into Communion.

What is this communion about which so much is said and written? Does it have value for today?

The ancient Psalmists and the Preacher communed with themselves. They looked into their own experience, and tried to understand themselves. Today multitudes pay psychiatrists large sums of money to help them understand themselves. Meditation in the night on one's bed, especially if it is done as it was by the writer of Psalm 77, may go a long way toward solving personal problems. An even better place to seek solutions is in church where hymns are sung, prayers are made, and communion is shared.

At the Table of the Lord, in a house dedicated to his honor, we lift our thoughts from ourselves to the one who said, "This is my body." While these words sound in our ears and reverberate through our souls, we draw near to the great God who gave his Son for our release from all bondage of self-pity, self-centeredness, feeling of loneliness, desire to do evil rather than good, suspicion, hatred. By thinking of Jesus climbing Calvary carrying a cross that should never have been laid on his shoulders by human sin; Jesus saying, "Father, forgive them," and "into thy hands I commend my spirit"; as we relive those moments on the mountain where people like us "railed at him" because of their hatred and then turn our eyes on our own conduct — it is then that we, like many another, cry out in the depth of the soul, "God be merciful to me, a sinner." And it is then that the unseen Presence moves across the spirit, and there is peace.

That is communion. Then we eat the bread and take the cup with gratitude, and a pledge to keep the currents open between us and God and our fellowmen. Color, creed, circumstance, distance — all such things fade into nothingness, and one feels at home in the family of God. This is Communion, Holy Communion.

Does it have value for such a time as this? Silly question. It is just this that our world needs desperately. It is the world's best hope. If all of the professing Christians of the world would meet in their places of worship the first Sunday in October, if all of them would enter into the "holy of holies" where God abides and take of the food offered by the Master, if such an encounter with the Eternal could take place this coming Sunday, then next week would witness a change in world affairs. Suspicion, hatred, jealousies, and all such would begin to fade. Brotherhood would flower. Nations could lay down their arms without fear. Denominations could join hands and hearts in fellowship and service. Deadly rivalries would die. The human family could look to a future of peace and plenty, of hope and joy.

BUT, will we go to church for Communion — Holy Communion — or will we doubt its value, continue our aloneness, and stupidly sink into oblivion? The Table of the Lord awaits.

Poison Air

The one free thing left in our world, some have thought, is the air we breathe. So far it has neither been denied nor taxed. But now it is being poisoned. In order for human beings to continue their earthly existence they are being urged to make holes in the ground, and live like moles. Bomb shelters may save some for a short period of time, and that is important, but what assurance can one have that survival is possible when a single bomb can destroy the largest city, and when deadly poison is being scattered across the world, poison that will enter the land, water, and food?

Those who test the atmosphere tell us that "fall-out" from the Russian explosions is settling across our nation, and that our Convention area is getting a goodly portion. So far, they say, there is no danger. That is cold comfort. Explosions continue, and the winds bring more and more strontium 90 for us to breathe and to eat. If the world is to be safe, we cannot wait for the atmosphere to be filled with deadly poison before something is done about the explosions.

This is a new kind of war. There are no battle fields. None are needed. Everybody can stay at home and die from the poison.

It appears to be time for the civilized world to do more than express opinion, which is discarded effectively, or to seek to negotiate. There are enough free people, and those who really want to be free, to quarantine those persons or nations that seem to be determined to destroy the human family. It is time for them to move in concert towards the elimination of those evil forces that now poison the air.

Forward Together

A vast majority of our churches have voted for the United Church of Christ, and many of our ministers have indicated their desire to be part of that thrilling adventure. Some churches and ministers are still hesitant. In all kinds of races a good start makes success more certain. Waiting at the starting line never won a victory.

This is the time of year when our churches are having meetings for business. It is a good time to complete important unfinished business by voting to unite with the United Church of Christ. By doing so, a local church will be moving forward together with the other churches of our denomination, and will still be among friends. Ministers are reminded that the only way they can be members of the United Church of Christ is to fill the blank making such a request and send it to the proper person. There is no better time than NOW to move forward.

NEGOTIATIONS AND AGREEMENTS (Second of two articles)

The late Alfred E. Smith, once Governor of New York State, and candidate for the presidency of the United States, was wont to say "Let's look at the record". Those who believe that honest negotiations and worthwhile agreements can be reached with Soviet Russia should do as the former governor suggested.

It would take a sizeable book to include all the sordid record of repudiated agreements of the Soviets but a few examples should be convincing that their bold promises and easy-made pledges fail to match their unworthy deeds.

The USSR signed a non-aggression treaty with Finland on January 21, 1932, and joined the League of Nations on September 18, 1934. Russia also signed a covenant outlawing war and promising to respect the territorial integrity of other nations. On February 10, 1939, Russia invaded Finland. The League expelled the USSR for this act of aggression, but Russia went ahead and invaded East Poland and partitioned it for the fourth time with Hitler.

In 1940 the Soviet Union invaded the three Baltic States and set up puppet communist regimes. The opposition was liquidated and the Red regimes "applied for" admission to the USSR.

On January 1, 1942, the USSR signed the Atlantic Charter, promising to "seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other"; to oppose territorial changes that "do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned; to respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live". But ponder what happened: Since that time the USSR has gobbled up about 300 thousand square miles of new land and imprisoned nearly 30 million peoples who were formerly Finns, Poles, Romanians, Balts, Germans, Czechs, and Japanese.

On November 1, 1943, the USSR promised to treat Austria as a liberated country and restore her freedom and independence lost to the Nazis, and not to demand reparations. For 10 years the USSR treated Austria as an enemy, occupied and stripped it of equipment and resources.

Time and again the USSR promised to support the Republic of China and to covet no gain for herself in the Far East. The USSR supported communist enemies of the Republic of China and demanded land and privileges in Asia.

At the Yalta Conference the USSR agreed to consult with the United States and Great Britain with respect to the liberated countries of Eastern Europe. This agreement has been consistently ignored.

The USSR promised to acknowledge four-power rule over Germany. This mockery of a promise ended March 20, 1948, when the Soviet commander walked out of the Allied Control Council. That was the real beginning of the present trouble over West Berlin.

Under the United Nations Charter the Soviet Union made many solemn promises, pledging itself to be "a peace-loving" nation and to "practice and live together in peace with another as good neighbors". The record is devoid of human acts. The record is one of pilfer, plunder, maim and murder.

The United States sent Russia more than $11 billion in lend-lease with a promise that settlement would be made at the end of the war. Sixteen years later not a dollar on the debt has been paid.

Those who believe that honest negotiations can be made with Russia should remember the words of the man of brown derby fame.

Purpose Of A Church

Let us never lose sight of the fact that behind the obviously practical and outward aspects of the church — its program, organization, etc. — is her real purpose for being. A church is more than a building, more than the minister and officers, more than a fellowship of neighbors. It is primarily a place where men, women and little children come to find God — and, finding him, they also discover such love, courage and peace as only he can give. It is a fellowship of those who, old and young, believe in God and in one another, and who wish to live their lives in the light of the life and teachings of Jesus. Her life is the light of God in human souls and she is only as strong as we, her members, permit her to be.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

TO KEEP THEE

For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. Psalms 91:11.

There are so many beautiful lines in the 91st Psalm, I can see why it is such a favorite. God's promises to the man that dwells in the secret place of the Most High. These promises are to the person who lives with God in his thoughts, in his heart, in his abiding place. How great they are and how good!

But let us remember that privilege carries with it responsibility. "To keep thee in all thy ways" may mean that you will be honored with some tough assignments for God, and fellowmen.

Quoting from this psalm: "the devil saith unto him, if thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, he shall give His angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone." (Matt. 4:6.)

They hanged Jesus on the cross. He had the courage and the willingness to serve his Father and his fellowmen; and he replied "It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God!" I like that! Read both sides of the coin! Honor on the one side, service on the other. Too often we read the "precious promises" and overlook the, "Come follow Me!"

Let me add that Jesus not only had the courage and the willingness to serve his Father and his fellowmen, but the top incentive was his love. "And though I give my body to be burned and have not love it profiteth me nothing... love never fails."

Ah, if God's angels look us over and give us that incentive we will tackle the tasks that God gives us, and come out all right. "We are not here to dream, to drift." May God give us the spirit of Jesus. "I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honor him."

Amen.

African Whirlwind

An address given at the Third General Synod of the United Church of Christ, the evening of July 3, 1961, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

By Charles P. Blakney of the Rhodesia Mission

As a missionary, I have found strength in many of the ideas and ideals presented to these meetings. One idea in particular has recurred so often that it amounts to a major affirmation. It is this: we have reconceived our relationship to other peoples; we have given up the image of ourselves as the benefactors and civilizers of the world; we want, now, to become disciples in a larger fellowship of disciples under a leadership higher than our own. If we really do affirm this principle, there can be no serious question as to the ultimate success of our ministry in Africa.

It is an ancient proposition that the future is not built on what we know and what we want, but rather on what we are and what we do relative to what God wants. That Africans have entered the modern world in a whirlwind, rather than in a burst of glory as we had planned, merely demonstrates the truth of that proposition. For it is just this whirlwind of current events that has forced us to reconsider what we are, what we have been, and what we ought to be relative to what God wants.

As far as what we are and what we have been is concerned, one African view of us is illuminating. Ndaou tribal elders can tell many stories of conquerors who have come to the area now served by the Rhodesia mission. There were the vaRozvi under Shiriyedenga; there were the amaZulu under Soshongana; most recent were the white men under the British South Africa Company. A close examination of Ndaou oral tradition shows that none of these conquests, particularly the latest, have been purely military; they were political, cultural and religious.

As the vaNdaou interpret their history, it was no coincidence that the white missionaries arrived the same year as the white settlers: farmers, traders, colonial officials and soldiers. To the vaNdaou, missionary and settler were cut from the same cloth: they spoke the same language, they bought the same brands of guns, they wore the same kinds of ties and coats to the same kinds of churches and read from the same black book.

More important, missionary and white settler shared a common scorn for all that was African: black soldiers were dubbed savages; the protecting ancestral spirits were condemned as demons; tribal dances became sinful; traditional healing was regarded as superstition. So it didn't seem odd that among white men, some of whom specialized in farming, others in selling, others in government, and others in fighting, that there should also be those who were specialized in propagating the white man's culture and religion in order to complete the conquest.

This, of course, is just one interpretation of why we began schools, hospitals and churches in Rhodesia. This interpretation does have the virtue, though, of recognizing that the church was then, as it is now, pervaded by the prevailing attitudes and prejudices of its time. So perhaps we can accept it for the moment, if only as a chance to see ourselves through African eyes.

Hundreds of students are baptized each year in Rhodesia. But only a few ever become active in the church. Most of them readily admit that they joined the church because membership will be an advantage to them in getting further schooling. (Would you be happy, for instance, if the missionaries sent students to America for study if they had no connection with the church?) They know that without a membership card it will be difficult to get work as a teacher. (Do we want non-Christians teaching in our mission schools?) They know that church membership opens up many doors into the Africa which is dominated by the white man.

The more thoughtful and articulate of these young men, especially those who are taking political leadership, are vocally critical of the church. They see that the thinking of the church is dominated by western patterns of thought. They see that the worship in the church is controlled by European liturgical traditions. They resent the fact that the church still shows no interest in the insights and relationships of traditional African life. They find it difficult to reconcile a gospel of love with the spirit of superiority, or the doctrine of man's dignity before God with a foreign mission's judgemental beneficence. They love to repeat the popular jibe: "When you white men came to Africa, we had the land and you had the Bible; now we have the Bible, but you have the land."

Somehow, in spite of our good intentions, we have obscured the body of Christ, which the church ought to be, by cultural arrogance and participation in political domination. It is not a moment too soon for our provincial arrogance to be replaced by the humbler desire to serve among those who belong to a larger world, and we can be happy that this seems to be a growing desire in our time. If we can receive this spirit among ourselves and present ourselves to the African people as disciples seeking mutual understanding rather than as foreign experts, we can take the opportunity which now presents itself.

For the young Africans who use the church to get a foothold in a white-dominated Africa, unwittingly make a touching testimony: they want to belong to one world with us, even at the price of their pride. The prouder young men, who thoughtfully and passionately criticize the church, make an even more significant testimony: they have perceived the rightness of Christ's teaching about love, both Godly and neighborly, and are demanding that those teachings bear more fruit in the attitudes of the church and in their nation. I can't think of two testimonies which could call us more clearly to a more fruitful ministry in Africa. And it is humbling to reflect that, in spite of the confusions we have inherited, that the missionaries of the past century have achieved something immense: they have created among the African people a desire to belong to our world and have successfully presented Christ's teachings and made them understood in many African hearts and minds.

Young Africans stand between two worlds: the world of their ancient tribal heritages with all their wonderful insights into spiritual relationships; and the world of the West with all its brilliant speculations and

Orthodox Churches In Bulgaria

By the Reverend Francis House

(The Reverend Francis House, an Anglican, associate general secretary of the World Council of Churches, writes of his impressions of a recent three-week visit to Bulgaria and Rumania.)

dazzling materialism. They have serious questions to ask of both worlds. But their own elders are no longer able to even understand the questions. The answers of white men are suspect because they cannot account for the tribal insights and too often imply western intellectual domination. And I am convinced, after many conversations by firelight and lamplight, that African young people are desperately hungry for a new dimension of truth, a new environment of love. I believe that they are willing as never before to explore the leadership of Jesus Christ in a company of disciples.

That is why I think that if we can present ourselves convincingly as disciples, the future of our church in Africa is assured. But it must be clear to us, if it is to be clear to them, that our western theologies and traditions are not sufficient to encompass the whole of God's truth, and that we come to them in the spirit of seeking. It must be clear that love is not our ethic to be taught by us and learned by them, but a divine life that calls us to constant confession of error and a struggling for more perfect togetherness. Such an approach to our ministry can present Christ as our common leader in a way which will remove the barriers to accepting Him and us. And, I believe, as they grow in the confidence of this discipleship, they will contribute a new dimension to our Christian experience with insights drawn from their own religious traditions.

To many of us, Africa still seems remote. But keep in mind that radios, phonographs, movies, television, magazines and newspapers are now being sold even in the remote parts of Africa. The spirit that dominates our missions committees in the local church, the publicity used in our stewardship programs, private discussions in the board rooms, and missionary conversations will quickly communicate itself to the people of Africa. I was overwhelmed when I returned from Africa to find that conclusions which I thought I had reached there independently were already general thinking in this meeting. Somehow the spirit of a people and a church communicates itself across continents and oceans. Therefore, this affirmation of a spirit of discipleship must be the affirmation of the whole church if we hope for the African church to join with us in confidence.

What is happening in and to the Orthodox Churches under Communist rule? We need to know all we can in order to be able to pray intelligently with and for our fellow-Christians in these countries. Many visitors have described their impressions of the situation of the churches in the USSR, but opportunities to visit the churches in Bulgaria and Rumania have been rare in recent years and news has been hard to obtain.

According to recent statistics, an estimated 72 per cent of Rumania's 16,000,000 population and 88 per cent of the 7,000,000 persons in Bulgaria belong to the Orthodox Church. These figures have meant that despite political changes, most of the outward forms of church life remain unaltered. Practically all the churches are open. The clergy still walk through the streets in their cassocks. Many of the church leaders and theological professors have studied abroad.

Some theological books and reviews are published. Seminaries and institutions for higher theological studies continue, though the former are reduced in numbers and the latter are separated from the universities.

As in several other Eastern European countries, but in marked

I know, of course, that our feet are made of the same clay as our predecessors', and there is no evidence that the Holy Spirit works in us more than it did in them — and yet, perhaps it is our very impurity of spirit, our awareness of imperfection in ourselves that will be the key to Christ's success in our ministry. For if we can temper our every affirmation and refine our every decision in the knowledge of our inadequacy and our need for Christ's leadership, we will strike a spark of sympathy in the hearts of many Africans who yearn for a discipleship just like this.

contrast with the USSR, the greatest part of the stipends of the clergy is paid by the state.

In both countries the drive for "modernization" according to Communist conceptions is intense and every means of propaganda and political, social and legal pressure is used to enforce conformity. The churches are under this pressure no less than other public institutions. The law allows them to "perform their religious rites," but all their former social activities and programs have been stripped away. The churches are allowed extremely few contacts with the outside world.

The Communist parties are intensifying anti-religious propaganda of many kinds to which the churches are not allowed to make any public reply. The whole educational system is based on Marxist-Leninist philosophy. Public support of the government's general policies is the condition for the continuation in office of the leadership of any organization.

In the terms of the Bulgarian "Law of the Churches" of 1949, which is vigorously enforced, "Ministers... who break the law, offend against public order or public morality, or who work against the democratic institutions of the State, may, at the proposal of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, be temporarily suspended from office or dismissed, apart from any other liabilities."

In Bulgaria an encouraging sign of the deepening devotion of believers is the fact that the number of communicants has risen steadily during the last ten years.

Many believers are members of "brotherhoods" which meet weekly in the churches to hear lectures in Bulgaria. In Rumania especially, a great deal of repair work is being done in church buildings damaged by earthquakes and war, and a number of new churches have been built.

Both churches have accepted the invitation to send observers to the Third Assembly of the World Council of Churches in New Delhi, India, next November. There can be no doubt about the fervor with which Christians in these countries continue to pray "for the peace of the whole world, for the good estate of the holy churches of God, and for the union of all."

Some Things We Cherish

By Rev. Clyde L. Fields

Superintendent, Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches

Individuals, churches, denominations — all have cherished beliefs and traditions which are meaningful to them. Family customs, doctrine and polity of local churches and denominations are important and should not be discarded lightly. As we enter more fully into the United Church of Christ, there are certain basic customs and beliefs that are cherished among us which some fear might be lost, while others are quite sure will be continued. Some who are reluctant to enter into the United Church of Christ fear that to do so would be to give up cherished beliefs or practices long held by local churches. Others who look with favor upon the United Church of Christ are quite convinced that the essential things cherished by Congregational Christian Churches will not be lost, but continued in the United Church of Christ. All of this leads local churches and individuals to give serious attention to the beliefs and practices held dear by all of us. It would be interesting if each local church would examine the meaning of Congregational Christian polity and Congregational Christian history to discover the essential genius that is reflected in this movement. Having discovered the essential genius of the Congregational Christian way, then one would be more prepared to examine the United Church of Christ, to discover if these cherished principles would be continued or lost in the United Church of Christ.

This writer believes that most denominations are closer together in faith than they are in polity or church government. All denominations must examine themselves in the light of the true nature of the church as it was taught in the New Testament. All denominations and all churches have a common source of faith. That faith rests in Jesus Christ, God's Son — the Head of the Church. Church doctrine is based upon the understanding and interpretation of the Holy Bible. Although there seem to be various levels of interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, there is an essential unity at the very heart of our faith.

It is in the matter of church polity or church government where we find the greatest difference among denominations of our day. The three classical forms, with some variations, seem to cover most church governments in Protestant churches today:

(1) The Episcopal form of polity, which gives greater authority to ecclesiastical leaders, such as Bishops or Ecclesiastical Councils.

(2) Presbyterian polity is based on the political understanding practiced by the United States of America, which we call representative democracy. Units of local churches elect representatives who attend regional meetings, where decisions are made by the representatives present, which are binding upon the units represented there.

(3) Congregational polity. This type of polity recognizes the validity of ecclesiastical leaders, regional meetings of representatives from churches, yet preserves the right for each local church to be the final authority in all matters of church polity and action. This type of polity does not allow a Bishop or an Ecclesiastical Council, or a representative body or committee to speak for the local church. Ecclesiastical leaders and regional bodies speak for themselves and the local church reserves the right to act for itself in all matters. This is the genius of the Congregational Christian polity. This is a polity we cherish and wish to continue. This is preserved for us in the famous paragraph 21 of the Constitution of the United Church of Christ, which guarantees autonomy to the local church. The local church in the United Church of Christ will continue in the same manner as Congregational Christian churches have continued through the years to be responsible to itself and for itself in matters of faith and practice. This cherished custom is perpetuated in the United Church of Christ.

The Christian churches of the Congregational Christian merger in 1931 had five cardinal principles as descriptive of the genius of the Christian Churches:

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

These cardinal principles of the Christian Church have been continued in the mind, the heart, and the practice of our churches of the Southern Convention in the Congregational Christian fellowship. These five cardinal principles will be continued in spirit in the United Church of Christ for the churches of the Southern Convention. The Constitution of the United Church of Christ in no way violates the spirit of these five principles. Local churches and groups of churches organized as Associations and Conferences maintain their integrity in the United Church of Christ. The rights and privileges of individual Christians associated as local churches, Associations and Conferences is at the heart of the genius of the Congregational Christian polity.

It is to be expected that changes will come in the manner by which these cherished customs and convictions of Congregational Christian people will be adapted to each succeeding generation. Maintaining these cherished convictions of our Congregational Christian polity, we move on into a fuller expression in the United Church of Christ. It is not that we are giving up the genius of church polity which has given expression in the organization of the Congregational churches and the Christian churches who later joined together as Congregational Christian Churches, but in the conviction that the essential meaning of the genius of church government that has characterized us will be continued and developed in the United Church of Christ that we move forward.

Dr. Lewis Gilbert, classmate of the editor at Yale and for many years a missionary in China, has just resigned as assistant superintendent of the Ohio Conference after ten years of service there. He is to serve as secretary of the New England Board of Pastoral Supply in Boston. His successor is also a Yale man, Rev. Richard Mapes, who has been pastor of Almsted Community Church, Ohio, since his graduation from Yale in 1952.

The Calendar of Prayer

Please Join In Daily Prayer for Our Missionaries

NOTE: The following is taken each week from The Directory and Calendar of Prayer now being edited by Miss Dorothy Hampton. The 1961-62 issue, which contains pictures and addresses of our missionaries, in addition to more detailed information about them, may be secured from The United Church Board for World Ministries, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts, for 25¢ per copy.

ARGENTINA Buenos Aires

October

- 1—Balazs Deyso and Erzsebet Toth Nagy are working with the Hungarian Evangelical Reformed Christian Church which they helped to organize in Argentina in 1953. Born in Hungary, they worked in Brazil before their appointment by the E. and R. Commission on World Service.

ECUADOR

- 2—The United Andean Indian Mission was organized in 1945 by Evangelical United Brethren, Presbyterian Church, U.S., Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. and the United Church of Christ. Four of the missionaries are from our denomination.

Picalqui

- 3—Rev. and Mrs. Eugene R. Braun have good backgrounds for their mission work, for his father was executive secretary of the Board of National Missions and she was born of missionary parents in Honduras. He supervises mission farm, agricultural classes, extension program and does visiting, teaching, preaching. She supervises medical program at Picalqui, which consists of outpatient clinic and visitation to surrounding areas.

- 4—Rev. and Mrs. Paul Streich were the pioneer missionaries in this area and supervise educational and evangelistic activities, including a primary boarding school, literacy classes, recreation, handicrafts and six Sunday and vacation schools. He wrote one of the programs on Latin America in the current adult program book, "Creating and Renewing the Church."

Quito

- 5—Donald Schultz was born of E. and R. missionary parents in India. He went to Ecuador in 1959 as a Heifer Project representative of the E. and R. Commission on World Service. He can see living standards rise as he provides good cattle and other animals to farmers, and teaches them how to care for them.

HONDURAS

- 6—Mission work was begun in Honduras in 1921 at San Pedro Sula. Emphasis has been given to evangelism, education, healing. In 1951 eleven organized congregations met to form the Honduras Synod. Now there are 18 churches, served by 14 national pastors. Honduras has been characterized by its president as the country of the four 70's — 70% rural, 70% illiterate, 70% illegitimate, 70% of illness preventable.

Concepcion Del Norte

- 7—Miss Diemut Heller was appointed in 1958 as missionary nurse where she visits patients in villages, helps to deliver babies in homes, and treats 40-50 outpatients daily in clinic. She was educated in Germany, her native land.

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

GROUPS HOLD FALL RETREAT

Sharon Davis, President
Greensboro, First, Senior High P. F.

The Pilgrim Fellowship groups of the First Congregational Christian Church, Greensboro, held their annual fall retreat at Camp Moonelon August 26-27. The theme for this year's retreat was "Who Am I?" Several interesting talks were given on this subject and Mr. Roger Gibbs of Greensboro gave a most inspirational message concerning this topic at the Sunday morning service on Vesper Hill.

The Junior High group, led by Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Kent, planned many activities, hoping that each would be highly successful. Officers elected for this group are: Paula Squires, president; Sharron Rogers, vice president; Diane Troy, secretary-treasurer; Robbie Somers, social chairman; Billie Carol Martin and Martha Fenn, co-editors of the Junior Hi World, a newspaper distributed among the members of the group.

Activities for the Senior High group were also planned and a list of "resolutions" was drawn up to help fulfill the plans for the coming year. Advisers for the group are Miss Blanche Warren and Robert Greene. Officers elected were: Sharon Davis, president; Carol Powell, vice president; Pinky Beaver, secretary; and Don Bright, treasurer. Commissions had not been used previously but the group voted that they be used the coming year. Chairmen elected were: Taylor Barrow, Faith; John Scott, Action; and Mary Rountree, Fellowship.

The retreat ended Sunday with an installation service and friendship circle. The groups returned to Greensboro feeling that they had accomplished a great deal and hoping that this year will be the best ever!

P. F. RALLY SCHEDULE

The following schedule was set up at P. F. Officers Camp to establish dates and places where the rallies will be held. They are as follows:
Eastern Virginia — Oct. 1, Bay View
Eastern N. C. — Oct. 15, Raleigh
N. C. - Va. — Oct. 22, Durham
Western N. C. — Oct. 29, Asheboro
Plan now for your local young people's group to be represented at the rally in your conference.

MOONELON

My week at Moonelon was a privilege and a pleasure to have. It was a time of worship, work and play.

I was privileged to attend the Sunday morning worship service at the new Community Church at Elon College and hear Dr. William Andes. The beauty and comfort was wonderful and something to feel proud of for our college.

Even the helping to replace the logs on vesper hill was a job; it was rewarding each night when the beautiful campfire circle service was held.

To me that week at Moonelon will have lasting memories. I hope other boys will have and will accept the opportunity to attend camp as often as possible.

LYNNHAVEN Y.P. ENTERTAIN ELON GUESTS

By David Miller, Reporter

A group of thirty-nine Senior High Youth Fellowship members of Lynnhaven Colony United Church of Christ held a program on "What God Expects of Us" September 10.

The guests were twenty-one boys and girls from the Children's Home at Elon College.

A party was given for the guests at the home of Bill Bennett.

N. C. - VA. RALLY

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference will hold its annual Pilgrim Fellowship rally Sunday, October 22, at the First Congregational Christian Church, Durham. The church is located at 811-813 West Main Street, three blocks from the east campus of Duke University.

Registration will begin at 2:00 p.m., to be followed by a worship service, business session, fun and fellowship. Everyone attending is asked to bring a sack supper which will be spread out. The church will provide drinks. The meeting will close with a friendship circle about 6:30. A special invitation is extended to members of the Evangelical and Reformed churches and to the members of other conferences. Hope to see you at the Rally!

—Officers of N.C.-Va. P. F.

JUNIOR P. F. HOLDS BANQUET

The Lynnhaven Colony United Church Junior High Pilgrim Fellowship held a banquet July 23, after which new officers were installed by the pastor, Rev. Sam N. Nelson, Jr.

New officers are: Paul Hannah, Jr., president; Anthony Owens, vice president; Maureen Bailey, secretary; and Patricia Self, treasurer.

A short business meeting was held, followed by group recreation. The Junior High Fellowship gives special thanks to those who helped prepare and serve the dinner.

U. C. Y. M.

The North Carolina United Christian Youth Movement Fall Assembly will be held in Raleigh October 13-15. Representing the Southern Convention in North Carolina will be Judy Stone, fellowship chairman, and John Kernodle, Jr., treasurer of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship.

TWO BETHLEHEM YOUNG PEOPLE

By Mary Jones, Reporter

Mary Cross Brittle of Bethlehem Church, Nansemond County, Virginia, spent two months this summer working at Back Bay Mission in Biloxi, Mississippi. Mary Cross, along with four other young people from various parts of the United States, made up the volunteer summer service team at Back Bay Mission. This is sponsored by the United Church of Christ (Evangelical and Reformed) and works primarily with people in the fish and oyster industry.

Sunday, August 20, Wayne A. Gardner, one of our ministerial students, received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Elon College. He plans to enter Lancaster (Pennsylvania) Theological Seminary.

The Junior High Pilgrim Fellowship of our Tryon church holds joint meetings with a similar group from the Episcopal church on first and third Sunday evenings. They have a light supper, worship, program, and recreation.

Veteran Organist Honored

Mrs. J. L. Lassiter Jr., Reporter

A reception honoring Mrs. Sally Lou Harris, choir director and organist, was held Sunday afternoon, September 3, in the Fellowship Hall of the First Congregational Christian Church, Henderson, N. C. Mrs. Harris is moving this month to join her husband, W. Brooks Harris, who recently went into business in Orlando, Florida.

The receiving line for the occasion was made up of members of the family, the pastor and officials of the church. The arrangements for the reception were under the supervision of the Social Service Board of the church, Miss Jo Langston and Mrs. Margie Moeller.

The members of the church presented Mrs. Harris gifts of white luggage. She has served as organist for the church for thirty-three years. For the past six years she has been director of the adult choir.

At her final choir rehearsal, the members of the choir and their families paid personal tribute to Mrs. Harris with a gift of jewelry and a surprise ice cream party.

Workshop For Preschool Teachers

MOONELON, OCTOBER 21

If you are a Sunday school teacher in any of the preschool classes in your church, you are invited to attend a Preschool Conference to be held Saturday, October 21, at Camp Moonelon from 9:30 until 4:00. Registration will begin at 9:30, with the first session opening at 10:00. Lunch will be served at the camp.

A discussion of the United Church Press Nursery Curriculum will be held with Dorothy Ballinger of the First Church in Greensboro leading the discussion. The Kindergarten Curriculum will be discussed and many new ideas presented to the group. An Activity Period, at which time you will be given a chance to work with materials suggested for nursery and kindergarten groups, will be led by Reverend and Mrs. Robert Knowles. Filmstrips, such as "First Steps In Religion" and "Nursery Leadership Filmstrip" will be shown, together with the curriculum and numerous additional resources. The conference will close by 4:00.

Whether you are familiar with the new curriculum or not, you are invited to share in this Conference for Preschool Workers. Anyone who works with preschool children will find this one-day conference a most worthwhile meeting.

Further information regarding the Preschool Conference may be secured from Reverend Robert A. Knowles, Box 336, Elon College, North Carolina.

The first dial telephone was designed in 1889 by a Kansas City undertaker, and the first dial telephone exchange was installed at LaPorte, Indiana, in 1892.

FREE FILMSTRIP FOR EVERY CHURCH

A new filmstrip called "The Tangible Evidence" has been produced by the United Church of Christ. It is available without charge for use in all our local churches. According to Dr. Sheldon E. Mackey, "It depicts the great events which have brought the United Church of Christ into being and sets forth in visual fashion the opportunities and challenges of Our Christian World Mission to which each local church seeks to be faithful in our generation." Ask your minister if he has returned the card making it possible for your church to get this free filmstrip.

BIG BUDGET VOTED

The Christian Temple of which Dr. Frank R. Hamilton is minister has voted a Budget of $48,237.00. The Budget includes $9,362.00 for Benevolences (Our Christian World Mission). A new item in the Budget was $1,000 for Church Extension in the Tidewater Area. This is commendable in view of the pressing demands for church extension in growing areas of North Carolina and Virginia. Perhaps other churches will join with the Christian Temple in promoting Church Extension through Church Builders Clubs, C.M.A., the Mission Board of the Convention, or in Conference Church Extension projects.

Three Youth Fellowship groups at The Christian Temple, Norfolk, met for a supper and planning session Sunday evening, September 10. Counselors are: Senior High, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Clements, Jr.; Junior High, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar McClannan Jr.; Junior, Mrs. Martha Byrd, Mrs. Franches Dennis and Mrs. Mary White.

Homecoming At Elon College

By W. B. Terrell

Homecoming plans are already in the making. Student committees have been appointed to work with the Alumni Office in making up a program for the day. October 28 has been set as the day. The climax of the day for most alumni will be the football game in the afternoon. However, other activities will be held during the day that should be of interest to all. Alumni are urged to put this date on their calendar and start planning now to come back to their alma mater for the occasion.

Contact other alumni and plan to come together. All of us here at the college will be happy to see you. The students will appreciate your coming back.

A tentative schedule of activities is given. Others may be added

Saturday, October 28—9:00 a.m.—Open House, Alumni Office. Campus Displays by Student Organizations. Directed Tours of the Campus.

12:30 — Homecoming Parade through the streets of Burlington, featuring colorful floats, displays, bands, etc.

2:00 p.m. — Elon Christians meet in the Catamounts of Western Carolina in football at the Walter Williams High School Stadium. During half-time the Homecoming Queen and her court will be presented.

4:45 p.m. — Alumni Coffee Hour in lounge on second floor of the Mooney Building.

8:00 p.m. — Homecoming Dance in the Alumni Memorial Gymnasium. Alumni are urged to attend. Dress for alumni can be either formal or informal.

How Christians Grow

Background Scripture: Matthew 11:28-30; Luke 9:51-56; Philippians 3:4-17.

Devotional Reading: John 14:21-26.

Memory Selection: I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Philippians 3:14.

Beauty For Ashes — Gain From Loss

There are many Christians who think in terms of what "they had to give up" when they became Christians, of what they lost, of what it cost. Paul thought in terms of what he had gained. "Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord. For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but trash, that I may win Christ." He was saying in this way what one of the prophets of the Old Testament was saying "He giveth beauty for ashes, the oil of gladness for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness..." Isaiah 61:3. The person who thinks in terms of what "he gave up" instead of "what he got" when he committed himself to Christ, has missed the deeper meaning of the Christian life. One can see the expression of Paul's face when somebody suggested that it cost him so much to become a Christian. And there would be pity if there were not anger in his reply. "The idea of such a thing! I made a good bargain when I gave up everything in order to win Christ. I got a thousand times more than I gave up!"

The Secret of Paul's Growth

Paul expresses the secret of his growth in the Christian life in the language of an athletic contest, a race. First of all, there was the aim or goal or objective. Paul had one consuming passion, one goal, to know Christ and to be found in him, and to be like him. To this one goal he pressed. He let nothing turn him aside. It was the custom in those days to place the prize of the race before the contestants so that they could see it as they ran. If they became tired or discouraged the sight of the prize would renew them or cheer them. Perhaps one reason we are not better Christians is because we do not have a worthier goal. We are not better because we do not want to be better. We are so easily turned aside in the race of life. So many things distract us. There is the classic incident in the story of Diana when the racers slowed down to pick up the golden apples and lost the race. Paul allowed nothing to distract him in his purpose to come to final Christian perfection which comes with complete union with God.

In the second place, the contestants had to strip for the race. Imagine a track runner starting a race wearing a pair of hip-boots or carrying an anvil on his back! But there are those of us who do something as foolish or even more foolish in our Christian life. We carry a lot of excess baggage. And as in the case with excess baggage we pay a price for carrying it. Our worries, our prejudices, our past sins for which we have asked forgiveness and for which God has granted forgiveness, our pride and complacency, our besetting sins — these and other things become intolerable burdens as we make our way on our Christian journey, our "race." In another place this doughty warrior and spiritual athlete enjoined us to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race that is set before us." (Or if Paul did not write Hebrews, the man who did write it said this.)

And finally the runner keeps on running. He may trip or lose his stride and even fall down, but he keeps on running. He finishes the race even if he does not win first prize. So must the Christian persevere — there is a word "the perseverance of the saints" — which expresses this prerequisite for the Christian life. The Christian must go on learning and growing. As someone has said, "Life is not a rigid business of being, but a process of becoming." Alas how many there are who either drop out of the race, or who make no real effort to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. "To grow, a Christian must have a destiny to grow toward. And then, in season and out of season, he must press toward the mark, disciplining himself, exerting himself, giving himself in the fullest measure. One suspects that in all too many of us there is not the burning desire to know Christ and to be found in him, and especially to know the "fellowship of his sufferings." We want an easy religion, one that does not make too many demands on us, one that does not make us uncomfortable. And yet Jesus placed a Cross at the very center of discipleship. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his Cross daily and follow me."

Not Yet Attained

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended," or as the RVS puts it, "not that I have already obtained this," or again as the New English Bible has it, "It is not to be thought that I have already achieved all this." These are remarkable and sobering words. Here was a man who had been following Christ for at least twenty years, perhaps even more. Here was the man who next to Jesus Christ, was perhaps the greatest man who ever lived, and certainly one of the best men who ever lived, the man who most fully embodied and expressed the spirit of Jesus Christ. And yet he frankly admits that he has not reached his goal, he has not achieved his full Christian growth. Folks who feel that they have "arrived," that they are good enough, do not know the essential nature of the Christian life. They are like the old man who told a friend "I still have the faith I had as a twelve year old boy. I haven't changed a single idea, nor do I intend to." There must have been something about the old fellow's religion that smelled bad, for in religion, one rises or rots!

But Whereunto We Have Attained

"Nevertheless, whereunto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing." Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge, as Thomas Chalmers the great preacher once said. A man is under obligation to follow the light as he sees the light, and to obey the truth as he sees the truth. New knowledge spells new obligation. And walking whereto we have attained is the way to attaining more, a means of growing in grace.

Dear Friends,

Last week we told you about our visit to our Lynnhaven Community Church in Norfolk, Virginia. This week we want to tell you about those who helped make this trip possible as far as transportation and chaperoning were concerned.

In order to take this group on this trip we had to have five cars. Those driving were my wife, Mrs. W. W. Snyder, Mr. John Biggerstaff and his fiancée, Miss Bertha Bowes, Miss Melva Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Brooks and myself. All of us were well acquainted with our boys and girls with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, who met our young people for the first time on Thursday when we began our trip. Never have we seen anyone become so much a part of a group so quickly as did Mr. and Mrs. Brooks. All of our boys and girls are very fond of them and are looking forward to their visits to our Home. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are active members of our Beverly Hills Church in Burlington.

Mrs. Snyder, with the help of Miss Foster, Mrs. Brooks, Miss Bowes, and Mrs. Bertha Phillips, the housemother for our older girls, took care of planning and preparing the food.

Another interesting incident was the fact that Mr. and Mrs. John F. Norris of Burlington, learning of our trip, decided they wanted to share in it and they provided spending money for all of our boys and girls for this trip. Mr. and Mrs. Norris are neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks and are also members of our Beverly Hills church.

Many thanks to these fine people and those of our children's Home family who helped to make this trip for our young people a real success.

Rev. Avery Brown has resigned his pastorate at Gibsonville in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and has accepted Pleasant Cross, Seagrove, and Union Grove churches in the Western N. C. Conference. He expects to move into the parsonage at Seagrove about October 11.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Vickers, Jr., on the birth of a son, Earl Wright Vickers, III, September 14. Mrs. Vickers is The Sun correspondent for Elon College.

United Church Women To Meet In Miami, Fla.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk will address the representatives of America's 12 million church women at the Ninth National Assembly of United Church Women in the City Auditorium, Miami Beach, Florida, October 9-12.

America's foreign secretary, who has been commuting to conferences with leaders of other countries abroad during the last tension-fraught weeks, will discuss in detail for the 3,000 church women assembled, "United States Foreign Policy in Today's World."

Dean Rusk's address, October 11, will be preceded by a special worship drama entitled "Measure of Man's Mind," written, directed and narrated by the Rev. Dr. George E. Johnson, a member of our denomination, who is pastor of our Miami Shores Community Church. The drama will include a rhythmic choir directed by Mrs. Paul Horn of the same church.

At the morning session Mrs. Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., a leading church woman and former president of UCW, will speak on "The Ecumenical Mind." This ties in with the Assembly theme, "The Church Ecumenical — Its Oneness, Its Mission and Its Ministries."

This theme will be dealt with in daily Bible study conducted by the Right Reverend Chandu Ray, an Anglican Bishop of Pakistan. Each such session is to be followed by intensive study of the theme's relevance to the specific work of the UCW and of the churches, in which groups of 100 discussants each will take part. Aid to agricultural migrants, Indian-Americans, overseas projects and a host of other pressing problems will come under the purview of the UCW Assembly.

Mrs. Esther Peterson, director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, will talk on "Unfinished Tasks in Christian Social Relations." She will be followed by a special panel presentation moderated by Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel of Washington, D. C., former UCW president.

Dr. Henry P. Van Dusen, president, Union Theological Seminary, New York, will give the opening assembly address on "The Church Ecumenical" on Sunday night, Oct. 9.

Dr. Eugene A. Nida, an executive of the American Bible Society, who is known around the world for directing Bible translations into many languages, has taken "Communication with a Purpose" as his topic on the last morning, Oct. 12. The closing address will be delivered by J. Irwin Miller on "The Nature of Christian Responsibility." Mr. Miller is a Columbus, Ind., industrialist and president of the National Council of Churches, of which UCW is a general department.

This final session will do honor to the conclusion of the 75th anniversary of World Day of Prayer, which has been celebrated through 1961.

Imitating The Best

"Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an example." This is not conceit — no man was more truly humble than Paul. He was simply saying that he had found the way to a prize, and that if his friends tried that way, they too would find it. But even at that they would do well to imitate Paul. And so would we. He is a pretty good example for us.

Eastern Virginia TRPM

G. Julius Rice, Chairman
So. Conv. Committee on Evangelism

A Teaching - Reaching - Preaching Mission will be held in the Eastern Virginia Conference October 6-12. This program of evangelism has a threefold purpose: teaching the church, reaching the unchurched, and preaching the living Word.

The missionaries (visiting ministers) will meet Friday and Saturday afternoons from 1:00-4:00 at Rosemont church, South Norfolk. Instructions for the mission and Bible study will be conducted by Rev. Robert A. Happel of Cleveland, Ohio, who will be the regional director. Mr. Happel is associate secretary of the department of evangelism of the United Church of Christ.

Sunday, October 8, the missionaries will preach in the local churches at 11:00 a.m. and commission the lay visitors. Sunday evening at 8:00 Rev. Fred P. Register, superintendent of the Nebraska Conference, will speak at the mass rally to be held at Christian Temple, Norfolk. His many friends in the Southern Convention are invited to hear Mr. Register preach whether or not their churches are participating in the TRPM.

Each evening Monday through Friday the missionaries will hold services in the local churches at 8:00. Each morning the missionaries will share in a seminar on evangelism and prayer and Bible study at Rosemont.

It is our earnest hope that this mission will result in a renewal of the churches participating. It should never be forgotten that the primary purpose of the Church is evangelism.

MY SUMMER WITH "THE SUN"

By Elizabeth Lester

The Christian Sun has been near me all my life. A copy came to our house every week while I was a child; when I was in high school, and my father had become editor, our house held stacks of old Suns. But never before had this paper been such an important part of my life as it was the past summer. From June 10 until Sept. 14, with much help and advice from my father, I became an "editor."

When I agreed last spring to work on The Sun so that my father might have more time to spend on his church in High Point, my knowledge of what this was to involve was somewhat less than complete. I knew that my father received articles and news items from various places; I knew that later a magazine, The Christian Sun, appeared with some of these same articles in it. What happened in between? Well, I was not quite sure.

But I soon found out. I was shown the mysterious and seemingly intricate processes of the world of the Linotype and the galley proof. I learned how various pieces of typewritten copy from various sources became a printed page and how 16 printed pages become a magazine.

I also learned a little about how this paper is planned — on what basis to judge what should go in, what should wait until next week, and what should be left out; which articles should be on which page, etc. I learned to watch for the important details that help to determine the quality of a paper — the right names under the pictures, enough "white space" between articles, the right number of "0" in figures, etc., etc.

But I also learned more than the mechanics of how this paper is put together. From reading the material that was sent to The Sun I learned a great deal. I learned, for instance, about the Southern Convention. Churches that had been "just names" to me became real places with real people as I read about their church school picnics, their Women's Fellowships, their new windows, and their worship services. I also read in The Sun about the larger church — our own United Church of Christ, and the work of many denominations cooperating through the World Council of Churches — I caught a glimpse of the huge movement of which our local churches are a part. Although I traveled no farther this summer than the distance between our home in High Point and the printing plant in Asheboro, through reading I glimpsed a church dedication service in Virginia, the General Synod meeting in Philadelphia, and the church at work in the slums of India.

From my own experience, then, I would like to make a suggestion to you, the readers of The Christian Sun. Read with imagination. The printed words can take you to new places and show you new things. Let this paper show you the church at work in the world today.

Here And There Among The Churches

Thirty new junior choir robes have been made by the Pearl Baker Class of First, Newport News. They were used for the first time October 1.

Eastern North Carolina Laymen's Fellowship meets Sunday evening, October 8, at McCuller's Ruritan Building at 6:00 p.m. Speaker will be Rev. F. C. Lester.

Miss Mary Frances Lankford, the secretary of the church school in our Tryon church, has a perfect attendance record for 24 years in that school!

Dr. Aaron Meckel of First Congregational, St. Petersburg, Florida, was the speaker for the Eastern Virginia Laymen's Rally at Great Bridge, September 24.

Dr. Sheldon E. Mackey, executive of the new Stewardship Council of the United Church of Christ, is preaching each evening this week at First, Newport News.

Eastern Virginia Women's Fellowship meets Thursday of this week (October 5) at 10:00 a.m. at The Christian Temple, Norfolk. Speaker will be Mrs. Alfred C. Bartholomew of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, assistant moderator of the United Church of Christ.

October 1 was a busy day at The Christian Temple, Norfolk: Promotion Day program of the church school in the sanctuary at 9:45 a.m.; World Wide Communion observed at 11:00 a.m.; and the church open from 8:00 a.m. until 8:00 p.m. for meditation and prayer on the part of members in preparation for the TRPM.

C. B. RIDDLE

A heart attack proved fatal to C. B. Riddle Monday, September 25. He was a former editor of The Christian Sun, and was a regular feature writer in recent months.

His body was laid to rest in Rock Creek Cemetery in his much-loved Washington, D. C., Friday, September 28.

A fuller account will appear next week.

Dr. J. E. Danieley was guest speaker for the twelfth annual retreat of our Connecticut laymen held at "Holiday Hills," Pawling, New York, September 23-24. His topics were: Vocation, Avocation, Your Other Vocation.

Women's Fellowship Sunday is observed November 5. A packet of program material for this day may be ordered for 50c from National Women's Fellowship, 19 South LaSalle Street, Chicago 3, Illinois.

World Community Day is observed by Protestant women November 3. The 1961 theme is FREEDOM TO KNOW. The basic pamphlet to use in the program is "Education, Women and the Church in the Americas." A packet containing this and other material to use in connection with the observance may be obtained for 50¢ from P. & D., National Council of Churches, P. O. Box 340, Manhattanville Station, New York 27, New York.

Each third Wednesday evening in the month members and friends of Bay View, Norfolk, are invited to a pot-luck supper at six o'clock. A "singspiration" and some entertainment follow the meal.

One church plans ahead: Beverly Hills, Burlington, announced in its September 17 bulletin that December 17 would be the date for the Christmas programs, with a "White Christmas" dedication of gifts for needy families at the eleven o'clock service and a program of music, Christmas scenes and reading at seven o'clock that evening. There will be no "treat" for the children; instead they and their parents are asked to bring gifts for needy families.

Rev. Thomas Britton, former pastor at Shelton, Portsmouth, and now at First Congregational, Ashtabula, Ohio, served as dean for annual retreat of ministers of the Ohio Conference held recently at Pilgrim Hills. Mr. Britton preached twice in his home church, Circular Congregational, Charleston, S. C., while on vacation. His Ohio church is inaugurating a new "Men's Breakfast Club" to meet in a local restaurant for food, study, discussion.

The Board of Trustees of New College, Sarasota, Florida, has elected Dr. George F. Bauman as president of this new institution, which was founded in cooperation with the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches last spring. It will enroll its first students in 1964. The site embraces the estate of the late Charles Ringling and is adjacent to the Ringling Museum of Art, now maintained by the state of Florida.

Congratulations to Dr. J. Earl Danieley who was elected chairman of the new Council for Lay Life and Work of the United Church of Christ. Also attending the meeting of that group September 27-29 in Chicago were Mrs. W. B. Williams and Mrs. F. C. Lester.

The Burlington - Greensboro area TRPM was held September 8-15 under the leadership of Rev. Winfred Bray of Union, Burlington, and Rev. G. Melvin Palmer of First E. and R., Greensboro. Mr. Palmer reports a "full house" at First, Burlington for the rally, when Rev. Paul Haas of Slatington, Pennsylvania, preached. Twenty-five ministers of the area occupied chancel choir seats and a joint choir of 150 voices provided special music. Area director was Rev. Lawrence Strunk of Hagerstown, Maryland. Reports indicate that 24 first decisions were secured, 7 professions of faith and 28 letters of transfer were received, and a prospect list of 176 compiled.

PRESCHOOL CONFERENCE OCTOBER 21

Mrs. Melvin Moose, of Mount Pleasant, North Carolina, who is the Synodical Children's Worker for the Southern Synod, will teach the course regarding the new Kindergarten Curriculum on Saturday, October 21, from 9:30 until 4:00 at Camp Moonelon.

Mrs. Moose, who was a delegate to the National Preschool Conference at which time the new Nursery Curriculum was introduced, and who has attended many national and area meetings regarding the Preschool material, is a well-qualified leader for this material.

The leader for the Nursery Curriculum will be Dorothy Ballinger from Greensboro who was also a delegate to the National Preschool Conference.

Registration will begin at 9:30 Saturday, October 21, and the first session will begin at 10:00. Lunch will be served at the camp. The afternoon session will end by 4:00.

If you are a worker in the preschool department of your church, or if you are responsible for the materials used in your Sunday school, or if you are an interested parent, this meeting is planned for you. You will find this a most worthwhile one-day meeting.

Further information may be obtained from the Southern Convention Office, Box 336, Elon College, North Carolina.

October 3, 1961

Churches in the Western North Carolina Conference are urged to send representatives to a Social Action Clinic to be held at the Asheboro church Saturday evening, October 14, at 7:30 p.m., according to announcement from Rev. William Joyner, chairman of the social action committee of the conference.

A joint supper meeting for the Women's Fellowship and the Laymen's Fellowship is being held at First, Greensboro, October 4. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman will speak on "Churches for New Times," the current interdenominational mission study was preceded by the showing of a filmstrip "Boom Time" to each of the four adult school classes during September.

An idea for some other churches: The Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, has a Student Loan Fund, which is open to any worthy and qualified student in Polk County, or any member of that church, regardless of age, race, color, or religion. At present this fund is making it possible for four students to attend college. Contributions are made to the church treasurer, and, of course, are tax deductible.

OPEN LETTER FROM CONFERENCE OFFICIALS

To Eastern North Carolina Churches

The Annual Session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference will be held at the Shallow Well Congregational Christian Church, Jonesboro Heights, Sanford, N. C., on Tuesday, October 31, 1961. Registration begins at 9:45 a.m. An interesting program is planned. Dr. Nathaniel Guptill, Secretary and Minister of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, is the guest speaker. Reports of the work of our conference committees will be given. Lunch and supper will be served by the host church.

An inspiring program is planned for the evening session. We hope to have a large delegation of young people present (along with many adults) for this special evening program. Emphasis will be placed on Recruitment for Christian Workers.

The executive committee reminds you that, according to the Manual of the Southern Convention, our churches voted years ago that "every church

Twenty-eight members of Union Grove Sunday School received recognition September 24 for having had perfect attendance for the past year.

President J. E. Danieley and Director of Student Personnel Services A. S. Hassell of Elon College are attending the American Council of Education in Washington, D. C., October 5-6. The Board of Trustees of Elon College meets October 4.

FLORIDA SUPERINTENDENT HONORED

The Christian Sun has just learned that Superintendent Robbins Ralph of the Florida Conference received the George Morgan Ward medal at commencement exercises at Rollins College, Winter Park, last June. The citation, read by Mrs. George Greene, Rollins graduate in 1940 and wife of the minister of our Pass-a-Grille Beach church, concluded thus: "As a good minister of Christ's Gospel, wise counselor of churches in your care, for your wide concern for all people and just causes, for being in yourself what you stand for, it is my privilege to present you for the George Morgan Ward Medal, given in memory of one of Rollins' first presidents."

shall have lay representation... it is recommended that each church shall be entitled to two delegates. Churches having more than 200 members shall have an additional delegate for each 100 members, or major fraction thereof, provided that no church has more than four delegates." Of course, everyone is invited and urged to attend. Will you make an effort to see that your church has more than its required number of delegates present?

The committee also reminds each minister of his responsibility to the conference as set forth in the Manual as follows: "All Ministers shall be present at the regular session of their Conference or be satisfactorily accounted for, and should remain throughout unless, upon request, permission for absence is granted by the President, the Conference confirming by common consent."

David Shepherd, president
Rosser Clapp, secretary

It is the habit of our church people of the Southern Convention to hold Conferences in the fall. The time is almost here.

Announcements are being made for youth rallies, women's conferences, and the Annual Conferences which are composed of delegates from local churches. Attention is called to the night sessions of Conferences to which the young people are especially invited, or in which they will take part.

Why all these meetings? People are busy with their work to make a living, their social engagements and playtime, and the activities of the local church. Isn't that enough?

The answer is a resounding NO. Christians need the fellowship of other people; without it they dry up, disintegrate, become useless. Churches are made up of Christians — together with a few other people. Churches that undertake to live to themselves soon become selfish, little, and useless so far as the Kingdom of God in the world is concerned. Just as man cannot live by bread alone, so people and churches cannot live to themselves alone. They grow by association with others who are growing; they get vision of world-wide events by sharing programs and activities with others, they lift their part of the load not by straining alone but by working in unison with others.

In the meetings soon to be held hereabouts there will be intelligent speakers who can lift our sights from the back yard where we have been grubbing to the lovelier things which God has made for us all to enjoy. They can take us across the world and introduce us to Christians working under differing circumstances and with people of various nations and races. They can, and will if we hear them, tell us of what Christ is doing in this world of ours through people who have dedicated their lives to his will and work. They will bring us hope that is founded in the Christian religion, and they will show us how we can share in the program of the Church that is undertaking to transform the life of peoples and nations.

Then there will be voting to do. Plans for the future will be presented. What will the next year mean in our area? That will depend upon plans approved in the annual Conferences and carried forward in local churches. The care of dependent children, the education we call Christian, the effort to win the world to Christ rather than let it go to destruction, and a dozen other matters will come up in conferences for discussion and vote.

But none of this will have value unless people are present from the various churches. Please, let's have full attendance at ALL these fall conferences. Of course you are busy, but what better business can anyone have than the business of the Church for which Christ gave his life? See you at Conference!

What Next?

Where do we go from here? What do we do next?

At the meetings of the Board of Publications and the Executive Board of the Southern Convention last Thursday at Elon people were disturbed by a need to know the direction in which to move as a Convention. It was reliably reported that people in the churches are asking what we are to do next? What direction are we to take. It was indicated by some that The Christian Sun may have some responsibility in charting our course. The editor is willing to take his share of this responsibility, and he endeavors to do so by expressing his own opinion and by giving information concerning plans and programs as adopted by churches, conference groups and the Convention in our own area, and by presenting the progress being planned or made by the national bodies of our denomination. But the editor of a paper cannot tell anyone what he is to do, and this one would not if he could. He can only suggest what seems to be wise — and then he may be wrong. Chances are that constant readers will sometimes find ideas that have value. That is our hope.

Back to the question, What Next?

So far as the United Church of Christ is concerned the next move should be made in local churches and the Conferences. Churches that have not voted to be part of the United Church can still do so and be able to move forward with the main stream of our denomination. The Mississippi River is mighty and majestic, but it does not start all at one place. Without the Ohio, Missouri and many other tributaries it would never move into the Gulf as it does. The United Church needs all of the four streams of Protestantism that go to make it. And we will render our best service by moving joyfully into that stream of church life.

It was said at the Executive Board meeting that Conferences will be free to discuss and to make plans for uniting the work in their areas. Committees could be formed to study the situation and to bring back suggestions at a later time. The Convention will meet next May, and should be ready to give constructive thought to the matter of the merger. If Conferences will work on plans and then present those plans, we can move forward reasonably rapidly.

All the problems involved need to be considered carefully and in Christian grace. People who favor uniting immediately and those who do not must both be considered. Organizations in the three groups are different and it will take time and patience to get them to function together, but it can be done. Each group has a heritage that gives it joy and that should be preserved — but so do people who get married. We cannot change the heritage, but we must, and will, make the future. That future of the United Church here in North Carolina and Virginia can be an inspiration to all who read, or it can bring disgrace to those who help to make it. We have voted to unite. We have pledged our word of honor.

Where we go from here, what we do next, depends upon how eager we are to make good on our pledge of honor. Your editor favors a frank facing of all the facts, a sincere and immediate effort to formulate the best plans possible to complete the merger, and then to courageously move forward into the moving stream of Christian life that is the United Church of Christ.

The frequently heard statement that war is inevitable, that is, it must come, is among the silly beliefs of a civilized society.

Wars are started by one man, or a group of men to enhance their position and advance some ideology as history shows. Search the record back for centuries and this is the case. But without turning back the pages of history beyond the present century, a few examples are familiar to all present generations.

Mussolini definitely planned a war against helpless Ethiopia and began it at a favorable weather period for the region. It was not a war desired or started by the Italian people but by one misguided Italian who thought he could advance his fascist movement and at the same time make himself one of the world's great.

It was not the German people who started Germany on the road to near destruction and sent some 500,000 men to their graves. It was Hitler and his small group of fanatics, intoxicated with the war idea, who started the tragic war because they decided that it would mean more to them than peace, and make them rulers of all Europe, and even areas beyond.

It was not the Japanese people as a whole, or even a majority, who planned an attack on Pearl Harbor and conceived the foolhardy idea of mastering the whole Pacific. One Japanese war lord even said he would occupy the White House. It was the Japanese military naval group who fanned the flames and enlisted and coerced their fellow countrymen into a holocaust that plagued not only the Japanese people but the world.

On the other hand, in countries that are democratic no man or small group of men has the power to choose war over peace. No French leader, or English leader, or any leader in any of the Scandinavian countries, or the United States, could count on popular support to lead the people into war. Only countries ruled by dictators are free to choose war as a means of accomplishing their selfish purposes.

The element of selfish interest in fostering a war, or supporting it directly or indirectly, is illustrated in the case of Korea. The Russians intrigued Red China to sacrifice millions of men, but not a single Russian soldier was lost in this unfortunate war, while nearly 50,000 American soldiers sacrificed their lives, with an added 100,000 wounded. Communist self-serving interest in Korea is now household knowledge.

The Russian people as a whole do not want war. They know its horrors and its sacrifices. Russia has in recent decades suffered some nine million casualties, including 1.7 million dead, in World War I, and 7.5 million battle deaths in World War II, plus considerable other carnage at German hands in both conflicts. Property losses have been beyond estimation.

The American people, as well as peoples in other free countries, do not rate dictators highly, but free peoples do not consider dictators irresponsible lunatics. Herein lies the danger which the United States is facing. The fate of millions of its peoples, and probably millions in other lands, could well be determined by the decision of Russia's power-mad dictator in his apparent determination to see the world under communism in his day.

A Bridge From War To Peace

Armed forces can wage wars but they cannot make peace. For there is a wide chasm between war and peace — a chasm that can be bridged only by good will, discussion, compromise, and agreement. In 1945 while still bleeding from the wounds of aggression, the nations of this world met in San Francisco to bridge that span from war to peace. For three years — first hopefully, then guardedly, now fearfully — free nations have labored to complete that bridge. Yet again and again they have been obstructed by a nation whose ambitions thrive best on tension, whose leaders are scornful of peace except on their own impossible terms.

—General Omar N. Bradley
November 10, 1948

But no dictator has ever profited by the downfall of another or made himself an admirable place in history. Khrushchev and his co-conspirators should ponder these facts.

IN WHICH PEW ARE YOU?

Rev. C. H. Monbleam

In most churches there are quite a number of pews that look very much alike but are really widely different.

There is first of all the Critical Pew. It watches the minister with an eagle eye; even when he makes an impression on all other pews, the Critical Pew remains unmoved. The choir senses it, and grows nervous. The singing is too light or too heavy, too long or too short. The sexton comes in for his share of attention, for the church is always too hot or too cold. The Critical Pew finds everything except praise and blessing.

Then there is the Irregular Pew. Sometimes it is full, sometimes it is empty. On special occasions you may count upon its presence. But during the regular march of Sundays you will make little mistake if you reckon upon that pew's tenants being elsewhere. The Irregular Pew enjoys only spasmodic blessing.

There is also the Cordial Pew. It is radiant with sunshine, greets other pews with genuine cordiality, extends a handshake to any visitor, and listens with joy and profit to the entire service. On the way out it exclaims, "A most inspiring sermon! The singing was fine!" There is a good deal of blessing received by the occupants of the Cordial Pew.

And there is the Prayerful Pew. It spends a moment or two with bowed head in silent prayer upon entering. It comes to worship, and brings the spirit of worship along. It sings heartily, hears the sermon prayerfully, gives cheerfully and liberally.

In which pew are you?

Wake Chapel Women Make And Write History

The Wake Chapel Women's Fellowship met Thursday evening, September 7, at the church. Following a brief business session and reports from several department chairmen, the program was given by Mrs. Jimmy Powell, member of the younger women's circle. It was entitled "What a Young Woman Expects from the Women's Fellowship."

Mrs. Rex G. Powell, who served as President 1958-60, was honored by the Wake Chapel Women's Fellowship with a life membership.

A memorial was given in memory of the late Mrs. K. B. Johnson, who was a charter member of the Wake Chapel Missionary Society. Mrs. J. Lee Johnson read a brief history of the early years of the Missionary Society, which was written by Mrs. K. B. Johnson two years ago when she was in her eighty-eighth year. (See following article.) It will be included in the records of the Wake Chapel Women's Fellowship in its folder in the History Room at Elon College.

The Rev. Earl T. Farrell led the closing devotion and installed the new officers for the year 1961-62: president, Mrs. R. M. Dickens; first vice president, Mrs. B. B. Johnson; second vice president, Mrs. Joe Mills; recording secretary, Mrs. Linda Keith Scholl; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ashley Hall; treasurer, Mrs. Jimmy Powell; Key Woman, Mrs. Maye Ballentine; Mrs. Jack Blanchard, Friendly Service Chairman; Mrs. Harold W. Johnson, Sr., Stewardship Chairman; Mrs. Jarvis Stephenson, Hospitality Chairman; Mrs. Bobby Cotten, Flower Chairman; Mrs. Jesse Reaves, House Chairman; Mrs. Perry Howard, Membership; and Cradle Roll, Mrs. Thurston Adcock and Mrs. Earl T. Farrell, co-chairmen.

Circle chairmen installed were: Mrs. Hoke C. Powell, Mrs. Earl T. Farrell, Mrs. Dwight Stephenson and Mrs. Carville B. Clark.

Serving as hostesses were Mrs. Pryor Nicholson, Mrs. Earl T. Farrell, Mrs. Jarvis Stephenson and Mrs. Evelyn Cannady.

Wake Chapel History

By Mrs. K. B. Johnson,
A Charter Member

The Wake Chapel Missionary Society was organized on the fifth Sunday afternoon of March, 1912, at the church with the following officers elected: President, Mrs. Ella Johnson Smith; Vice President, Mrs. K. B. Johnson; Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Lena Ragsdall. The only living charter member is Mrs. Bertha Cotten Graham of Jacksonville, Florida.

Regular monthly meetings were held, usually on Sunday afternoon at the church, but later in the homes of members. To get to meetings the members came in horse and buggy with the ladies driving the family "nag." We never missed many regular meetings except a few during the epidemic of "flu" following World War I, when the churches were even closed. Regular dues of ten cents were received from members, with special Thanksgiving offering and on other occasions. Regular quarterly reports with mission money were sent to the State Treasurer of the North Carolina Women's Missionary Society. Miss Ruth Johnson served as Secretary during the 1920s. Under the influence of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who had much to do with the early organization and work of missions throughout the Southern Convention area, The Wake Chapel Missionary Society officers were led to help organize new Missionary Societies in different nearby Christian churches. Mrs. Ella Johnson Smith served as Secretary of the North Carolina Missionary Conference, which was organized early in 1912 also. Mrs. Ella Johnson Smith also taught the Ladies Bible Class at Wake Chapel for many years, which class has honored her memory by keeping the name — Ella Johnson Smith Bible Class. Also she served as president of the Wake Chapel Missionary Society until her health

October

- 8—Miss Magdalene Kroehler went to India in 1930 as a missionary nurse. In 1951 she answered the call to go to Honduras where she is in charge of the medical clinic in the mountain village of Concepcion del Norte.
- 9—Rev. and Mrs. Edgar Krueger are evangelistic missionaries at Concepcion del Norte, where he is pastor of the local church. He is graduate of Elmhurst College and Eden Seminary.

Pinalejo

- 10—Dr. and Mrs. Harold N. Auler, Sr., have recently returned to Honduras, where they have served as missionaries for 35 years, after a two-year special term in Ecuador. This relieved a critical shortage of personnel in United Andean Indian Mission. Now Protestants number 4500 in Honduras — quite different than when they first went there in 1921.
- 11—Miss Ruth Strauss was born in Germany, then lived in the Netherlands, and served as a governess in England while continuing her nursing medical clinic at Pinalejo.
- 12—Miss Louise Vordenberg arrived in Honduras in 1924 and her first assignment was as an itinerant teacher in the banana plantations. She gathered a group of children at LaLima, the center of the banana industry, and taught them under a tree. Now there is an organized congregation with its own chapel there. She is now in U. S. on furlough.

Progreso

- 13—Rev. and Mrs. William Baur have completed two terms in Honduras and are now in U. S. on furlough. He has B. D. and she M. A. from Eden Seminary. He was born in India of missionary parents. He has been station administrator at Progreso and she principal of the primary school.
- 14—Rev. and Mrs. Harlan Levsen have been missionaries to Honduras since 1951. They supervise work at Progreso and carry on program of evangelistic outreach. He uses tracts, slides, records and tape recorders as well as stories and songs to explain the Christian faith.

YEARLY REPORT OF PLEASANT RIDGE

The Women's Fellowship of Pleasant Ridge church, Route 1, Ramseur, N. C., has been blessed this past year in many ways.

Mrs. Lynwood Hubbard installed the officers for the year 1960-61. Several members attended Women's Fall Conference at Union Ridge. The Bible study for the year was led by Mrs. Archie Rumley in Circle 1 and by Mrs. Norman Smith in Circle 2.

Mrs. Quinton Hicks reviewed the home mission study book, "Safe in Bondage." All members led and took parts in the programs presented during the year.

A banquet was held at the fellowship hall March 10. Mrs. R. C. White of Ramseur Jordan Memorial Methodist Church told about her experiences of teaching in foreign countries and travels through same. Information about Japan and Europe was of great interest to the women. Mrs. C. C. Macon of Union Grove church told about her foster-child in Scotland. Members from Union Grove, Spoon's Chapel and Holly Springs were guests.

Thirteen ladies attended the spring rally at Union Grove. May Fellowship Day was observed May 5.

The Fellowship presented a memorial to Mrs. Clifford Williams in memory of Mr. Clifford Williams.

A new slate of officers were elected: Miss Emma Allen, president; Mrs. Norman Smith, vice president; and Miss Velma Allen, secretary-treasurer. Miss Emma Allen and Mrs. S. H. Pell attended the entire School of Missions and Mrs. Lynwood Hubbard was present for one day.

Mrs. Dolan Talbert of Pleasant Grove gave the book review on foreign missions, "One World, One Mission." Circle chairmen installed were: Mrs. Hoke C. Powell, Mrs. Earl T. Farrell, Mrs. Dwight Stephenson and Mrs. Carville B. Clark.

Several members shared in the workshop conducted by Mrs. S. H. Pell, Asheboro District Chairman, at Pleasant Ridge Fellowship Hall in August.

May our experiences in life be blessed in such a manner by our Christian faith and knowledge gained through our women's work that God's power can be identified in the growth of His work.

Mrs. Jimmie Scott, President

Rev. Alfred P. Klausner, elected executive secretary of the Associated Church Press last spring, has been called into active duty as an army chaplain with the rank of colonel. Rev. James M. Flanagan of The Christian will serve as executive secretary pro tem.

Fall Program At Oakland

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Minister

The autumn and fall program at Oakland church includes the following emphases:

1. Sunday, September 17 — EVERY FAMILY VISITATION — when 28 teams visit the homes of the church and community.

2. Christian Education Sunday, September 24, which will include Rally Day and Promotion in the Sunday school. A record attendance is anticipated.

3. October 1 — Church Roll Call and World-wide Communion Sunday. The church membership roll will be called again this year at the morning service, to be followed by Holy Communion.

4. October 8-13 — "Special Services for Religious Awakening and Renewal" — will be held in co-operation with the Eastern Virginia Conference TRPM. Dr. John G. Truitt, will be the guest preacher for these services at Oakland.

5. On Laymen's Sunday, October 15, the men of the church will conduct the morning worship services, and will serve a fellowship supper at 6:30 to the church membership. The church business meeting and quarterly conference will conclude Laymen's Sunday.

6. A Cradle Roll party for the more than 60 babies enrolled, and their mothers, will be sponsored by the Women's Fellowship on Wednesday afternoon, October 18, at two o'clock.

7. Women's Fellowship Sunday will

A LUCKY FELLOWSHIP

Many of our local women's fellowship groups complain because they do not have any "leadership." How fortunate the Elon College Women's Fellowship is with three people connected with the Convention Office as top officers — president, Mrs. W. J. Andes; vice president, Mrs. Robert Knowles; secretary, Miss Ruth Dunn. And among its officers the wife of the Superintendent of the Convention and the wife of the superintendent of our Home for Children. Circle leaders include the wife of the president of Elon College and the wife of the alumni secretary. Many other community leaders finish the roster of officers. One supposes this group never lacks program material!

be observed October 22 with the women of the church in charge of the morning worship service.

8. "Christ's Workday" will be observed by the Pilgrim Fellowships in a community service project Saturday, October 21, or an alternate date.

9. The Christian Stewardship emphasis beginning in October will climax with Loyalty Sunday and the Every Member Canvass November 12.

10. A union community Thanksgiving service will be held Wednesday night, November 22, in which the Congregational Christian, Baptist, and Methodist churches co-operate.

11. Observance of the Christian Advent Season, with appropriate services on Sundays, a Christmas program sponsored by the Sunday school, a Christmas party for the children, and community caroling by organizations and classes.

Sermon subjects for the autumn and fall are: Learning About Labor from Jesus the Carpenter; Shall we Camp, or March?; God's Marching Orders for our Day; What is the Church?; Christ Calls to Unity, Dedication, and Mission; Why do we have this Faith?; What will be our Report to the Creator?; All that we Have and are — Whose are they, Really?; This Thing Called Religion — What is it?; God Speaks to Men; How and Why the Christian Religion is Unique; God Getting Through to Men; God Came to Bethlehem; Let us Prepare Him Room.

Dedication Day At Bay View, Norfolk

The reporter for Bay View Church, Norfolk, Virginia, who signs herself as "Old Lady Smalling," reports a wonderful day for that church September 10 when the new church and educational building were consecrated in services led by the pastor, Dr. Charles F. Pegram.

Superintendent Clyde L. Fields preached on "Vision for Life" at the eleven o'clock service. Dr. George Alley, president of the Southern Convention, preached on "The Nature of the Church" at the three o'clock service. Greetings were brought by visiting ministers. The service of consecration was led by Dr. Alley. At the evening service Rev. E. I. Moshier, pastor of the First Baptist Church, spoke on "I Believe God."

Following the morning service a picnic dinner was enjoyed in the social hall. A reception was held there following the afternoon consecration service.

History of Bay View

History of the church as found in the bulletin for the day is as follows:

The Sunday School out of which this church grew was organized in "Spangler's Porch" on Chesapeake Street near Bayview Avenue, Sunday, March 16, 1920. Ministers of the Methodist and Baptist churches, (Smith and Blackwell, respectively), with several members organized the "Community Sunday School." The following year a building was erected.

The Rev. O. D. Poythress preached on Sunday afternoons for a year. Dr. Leon Edgar Smith of the Christian Temple sent his assistant, the Rev. T. Fred Wright, who served as pastor for one year. Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk Christian Church, loaned the church one thousand dollars on the condition that the church raise five hundred dollars and pay off their mortgage. Conditions were met on Sunday, August 13, 1924, and "the Community Sunday School" was dissolved and "The First Christian Church of Ocean View, Virginia, was organized." The following year the Rev. W. H. Fentress became pastor and served for about five years (1924-1929). The Rev. Dwight M. Spence now minister of Mount Olin Methodist Church (Va.) served for one year. He was succeeded by Rev. J. H. Warren who served for three years (1930-1933). He is now deceased.

During Mr. Warren's ministry an addition was added to the church which accommodated about thirty young people, a class taught by a Mr. Lynn. The church school reached an enrollment of 225. Needless to say, the church has worked in crowded quarters from then until now. In July, 1933, the Rev. Joe A. French came as minister and remained until March 1, 1941.

The thousand dollars to Dr. Staley was paid off, church furniture purchased and a new roof provided. The Rev. J. Everette Neese came May 1, 1941 and soon thereafter the church was relocated on the Boulevard, its present site. The first unit at the new location was erected in 1943 "at a cost of about $8,000."

The extension doubling its size was added following the war. The Rev. Johnson L. Griffin succeeded Mr. Neese in 1948 and remained until after the erection of the Educational Building in 1953. He was recalled to the chaplaincy in the United States Army where he is now serving with distinction on the U.S. Army Chaplain Board, Fort George G. Meade, Maryland. He holds the rank of major. The Rev. Harry G. Titcombe assumed the pastorate in 1954 and served for one year.

Relocating the church was a wise move which was vindicated by phenomenal success. During the first year in the new building, the membership, with the aid of the Mission Board, reduced their indebtedness to $3,000. The old church at the former location was sold for $2,300.

The Rev. J. Everette Neese was recalled for a second pastorate which covered three more years. The present parsonage was purchased in 1955.

Rev. Charles F. Pegram assumed the pastorate of this church June 11, 1958. Promotional activities have been continuous and the cooperation of all interested persons is self-evident. In 1960 the Elmer C. Womack family gave the foundation for our present improvement which really put us on our way. January 8, 1961 the cornerstone was laid with appropriate ceremonies and on Sunday, June 4, 1961, the first worship service was held in the new sanctuary. A record attendance gathered in front of the old chapel and marched to the new church entrance. The church choirs were massed on the front porch and as the chancel choir sang "Open the Gates to the Temple," the large doors were opened and Mr. Clyde R. Kessler, chairman of the board of trustees, cut the ribbon signifying the new church was open for worship and service. More than a hundred persons have been received into the membership of the church during the present pastorate which brings our membership to its all time high of about 260 members.

This Day of Consecration for the new church and educational building is not a terminal at which we have arrived, but a point of departure

Elon Women Install Officers

By Mrs. H. D. Lambeth, Sr.

September 11 the Women's Fellowship of the Elon College Community church met in the church Parish House for the general meeting, at which time all the circles were represented. Fifty-one members and visitors were present.

President, Mrs. W. J. Andes, presided. Dr. W. J. Andes had the installation service. The following officers were installed: president, Mrs. W. J. Andes; vice president, Mrs. Robert Knowles; secretary, Miss Ruth Dunn; treasurer, Mrs. Howard Edgerton; historian, Miss Josephine Farmer; pianist, Mrs. A. S. Hassell; and circle leaders were: Mesdames Richard Haff, J. E. Danieley, D. M. McLelland, W. B. Terrell and Phil

Marino. Mrs. Lois Bost and Miss Nannie D. Reitzel will have the flower calendar; membership, Mrs. W. C. Perry; nominating, Mrs. T. A. Boland; nursery, Mrs. W. W. Sloan, Mrs. A. S. Hassell; parish service, Mesdames Oma U. Johnson and A. I. Braxton; publicity, Mrs. H. D. Lambeth, Sr.

Mrs. J. G. Truitt presented the devotional. Mrs. Robert Knowles directed an interesting program and the study packet for the year was explained. The president announced that all goals for the various auxiliaries had been met. She extended an invitation to all to visit with her and her family any time at the new parsonage.

One representative from each circle assisted in serving refreshments during the social hour.

Many Churches Lagging In Recruiting

By Louis Cassels

A Presbyterian minister in Colorado has been doing a little arithmetic on church membership statistics.

He notes that his own denomination, with a total membership of more than 3 million, manages to achieve a net growth each year of only about 50,000 members.

"This means," he writes, "that it takes over 60 members working a full year with the help of us ministers to add one new member to the church."

Converts

He concludes that "something is seriously amiss in our approach to the great task of winning converts to Christ."

A Roman Catholic Scholar, Fr. John A. O'Brien, of Notre Dame University, has arrived at the same conclusion.

At a recent national conference on convert work, Fr. O'Brien pointed out that in 1959 the 40,871,301 U. S. Catholics won 146,212 converts — one for every 279 members.

In the same year, he said, 800,000 members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect gained 86,000 adult converts — or one for every nine members.

The difference, Fr. O'Brien suggested, may stem from the fact that Jehovah's Witnesses are aggressive salesmen for their faith. And they are not embarrassed to use the same tactics that salesmen use. They go out and ring doorbells. They tell their story to anyone who will listen, and even to those who'd rather not listen.

It is noteworthy that other religious bodies which have registered unusually rapid growth in recent years — for example, the Southern Baptists, the Churches of Christ, the Seventh Day Adventists and the Mormons — also make systematic use of what might be called "personal contact recruiting."

which under God will lead us as far as our industry and combined personal dedication will meet the demands of Christ.

Property value has increased from $14,000 in 1950 to $140,000 in 1961.

October 3, 1961

Pride

If winning converts were merely a matter of proselytizing people from one faith to another, in order to swell the membership statistics of a particular denomination, there might be little point to these comparisons.

But this is not just a matter of denominational pride, or of jockeying for competitive position.

There are more than 50 million people in America today who are not effectively related to any religious body. They constitute a vast "mission field" right under the noses of churches, and any Christian who takes his faith seriously must be concerned about proclaiming the Gospel to them.

The number of converts won by a church in proportion to its total membership is a legitimate index of its evangelistic outreach, and no church can afford to be complacent about a poor showing in this primary mission.

Altho Presbyterian and Catholic statistics have been cited above, it should be emphasized that these churches are by no means the only laggards in convert winning.

The Episcopalians, Methodist, Lutherans, and other major Christian families have just as good reason to be ashamed of their records in this field.

All of these churches have in common a tendency to sit back and wait for people to come to them, instead of going out to bring them in.

Use Laymen

Many of their members would be quite appalled at any suggestion that they should engage in active personal recruitment of new members for the body of Christ.

The best hope for a change in this situation appears to lie in the current movement toward increased participation by laymen in the whole life of the church.

This movement is gaining strength in Catholic and Protestant churches. It is characterized by a strong emphasis on the personal responsibility of every laymen to serve as a bearer of the Christian message.

At present, the job of evangelism is being left, in many of the big denominations, to about one per cent of the church's manpower which consists of ordained clergymen and especially dedicated laymen.

If 90 per cent, 50 per cent, or even 10 per cent of America's Christians begin to act as apostles in every day life, the convert figures will soon cease to be depressing.

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

TO BE — OR NOT TO BE

We hear over and over again, from all sides, that during our teens we are drifters. We drift from one idea or fad to another. We question all around us, the physical world, the people we encounter, the ideas and systems we are exposed to, and ourselves — who we are. But perhaps the biggest thing we may question is our religion. Suddenly we are not content to accept things as they are presented to us. We want to know what and who and why before we accept them. You might say that teenagers are not just drifters, but seekers. That is to say we are not just wandering aimlessly, but we are searching for meanings.

With all this questioning we seem to lose our balance. Then we search for something sound to hold on to. It is at this time that we are most likely to question the soundness of our religion, our personal faith. We scramble, looking for something substantial, lest we fall. Often the security we seek is found in an adult, a parent or teacher, a minister or a Sunday school teacher, or perhaps just a friend. But many times we find this beam of direction in people our own age. When we find a person like this the bonds of affection are strong. But when one is lost, we are left floundering for firm ground.

We all need anchors, but we may become so involved in seeking anchors for ourselves that we tend to ignore others. When we become interested in ourselves alone, we find that we are more unbalanced and we begin to grope frantically.

It is so easy when you are lost to overlook the only way to find yourself. It is elementary, a basic principle of life, and in itself is a paradox: To find yourself, you must lose yourself. This is one of Christ's teachings. For nearly two thousand years it has remained pertinent. If you concentrate on losing yourself, on being an anchor, you'll find that the anchor you sought will be supplied.

The ability to forget about your anchor and concentrate on being one is one of the qualities of a leader. It is an inherent trait in a good friend, and most of all, it is the mark of a Christian. Often, forgetting yourself is difficult, but we must try. You would be surprised to know how much you can do for others and for yourself by just being there — an anchor.

In closing, I paraphrase Emerson's words and say, "The only way to have an anchor is to be one."

LYNNHAVEN COLONY SENIOR HIGH BANQUET

The Senior High Pilgrim Fellowship of the Lynnhaven Colony United Church of Christ sponsored its second annual banquet for the installation of the in-coming officers of the year 1961-62. The theme for the banquet, a smorgasbord dinner, was "Under the Sea."

Bob Solomon welcomed the fellowship and guests, Mr. and Mrs. Hodges; the Rev. Sam D. Nelson and Mrs. Nelson; Mr. and Mrs. Corr, the Senior High Fellowship sponsors; and their assistants, Mr. and Mrs. Filer.

Hubie Young, Southern Convention President, was the guest speaker. He first congratulated Connie Trueblood, newly-elected Faith Commission chairman of the Southern Convention, from the Lynnhaven Colony Church. The group was told that it had the potential of being the largest and strongest Senior High Fellowship in the Southern Convention, and that the challenge lay in recognizing and putting to use that potential.

Officers installed for the coming year are: Tim Barrow, president; Bill Bennet, vice president; Bob Solomon, Jerry Henish, and Connie Trueblood, and Charan Enroughty, program chairmen; Susie Bennett, secretary; Sandra Sykes, treasurer; Diane Skaggs, Faith Commission chairman; Gary Miller, Action Commission chairman; Van Tunstall, Fellowship Commission Chairman; Myron Steele, Bible quiz, and David Miller, reporter.

YOUTH SUNDAY AT PLYMOUTH

By Barbara Ross

The Pilgrim Fellowship of Plymouth church, Route 3, Raleigh, North Carolina, proclaimed September 17, 1961, to be their own Youth Sunday. To celebrate this day members taught Sunday school classes. Susan Ferrell was superintendent and Barbara Ross, pianist. The beginner's class was taught by Sherry Dean; primary, Betty Ross; junior, George Soward; intermediate, Royal Soward; young people, Linda King; adults, Barbara Ross. The Pilgrim Fellowship and the Sunday school all enjoyed their Youth Sunday.

At three o'clock Sunday afternoon the officers of the Pilgrim Fellowship met to make plans for and discuss programs, projects, and activities for the coming year.

Judy Bowden reports in The Road to Damascus, newsletter from Damascus church near Chapel Hill, that Mrs. Harvey Carnes and the young people have organized a youth choir there.

A "Youth Fellowship Canvass" was held at First, Newport News, September 17. The purpose was to visit young people of the church family who were not then attending Youth Fellowship. Topics for discussion in recent Sundays: "I Didn't Think," "What Is High School For?" "Holy Communion," "Would I Date Me?"

Two words that are often misspelled are capital and capitol. Capital means a capital city. Raleigh, North Carolina, and Richmond, Virginia, are the capital cities of these respective States. But each has a building where its legislature meets. These buildings are spelled capitols.

Washington, D. C., is the capital of the United States but the place where Congress meets is the capitol.

It is not uncommon to hear "He (or she) is broken out all over with them", meaning measles bumps. Measles is a disease, singular, and should not be referred to as "them", but always as it.

Beside means "at the side of", as: He walked beside me. Beside means "except", in addition to, as: No one was there besides us.

CLOTHING IS NEEDED IN MANY PLACES

By Mrs. Anne Leebrick, N. C. Friendly Service Chairman

Good usable clothing is needed. Take time to go through your family's clothing. Don't continue to keep things that someone else needs if you are not using them. In sending clothes remember to send only usable clothing—that which you would appreciate. Think of those who receive it as your neighbors, even though they may be in Greece, Africa or other places.

Send clothing to one of the following places:

1. Defiance College Thrift Shop, c/o Mr. R. W. Wahn, Business Manager, Defiance, Ohio.

Growth In The Knowledge Of God

Background Scripture: Matthew 5:17-20, 38-48; John 16:12-15.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 111.

Memory Selection: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. Matthew 22:37.

On the campus of Dartmouth College there stands a house known as "Dick Hall's House." It was erected in memory of a boy who died in 1917. Calvin Coolidge, who had lost a son, wrote a note of sympathy and understanding to Dick's father as follows: "To Edward K. Hall in recollection of his son and my own son, who have the privilege by the grace of God to be boys throughout all eternity."

That was a touching sentiment. But without being cynical we might question the words, "to be boys throughout eternity." For the Christian faith not only exhorts us, or commands us, to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, in this life, but it intimates and suggests that we are to do just that in the life to come. Alas, however, there are many who remain "boys" and "girls" in their religious thinking and faith in this life. They never grow into maturity. Growing in life involves more than inches and pounds; it involves growth in faith and knowledge and spiritual stature.

Fulfilling and Filling-Full

"I came not to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy but to fulfill." Jesus came to enlarge the meaning of the law, to fulfill it and to fill it full. And he asserted that in a world in which change is the most outstanding characteristic, God's laws would never change or pass away. They cannot be repealed or amended. But they can be given new meaning and new applications and he proceeded to do that in this section of Scripture. He gave it new depth, new height, new emphases.

Righteousness That Exceeds

The Scribes and Pharisees were by common consent the most righteous people of that time. They kept every jot and tittle of the Law. And yet Jesus here says that "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of God." How come? What did he mean? How could one be more righteous than these old pros? Well, their religion was legalistic, formal, exclusive, cold, barren, external. It was concerned primarily with the outward act, and not with the inner spirit or motive. It was a righteousness of the Law and of works. On the other hand the righteousness of the Kingdom was to be warm, inner, inclusive, gracious, vital. Its essential spirit was LOVE and not Law.

Retaliation or Redemption?

There follow several sayings of Jesus which are "hard sayings." He says, for instance, that if a man hits us on one cheek, we are to turn the other cheek, if he wins in a lawsuit our overcoat to give him our other coat, that if he makes us go one mile to go with him two miles, that if a man asks us for a gift we are to give it to him, and if he wants to borrow money we are to let him have it. If we take these sayings literally, they present a difficult and even impossible mode of action. What Jesus is emphasizing in all these sayings is that we are to forego personal retaliation, that we are to be governed by mercy and not by strict justice, that we are to be more concerned with privileges than with rights. There are instances in which it would be wrong not to administer punishment to the offender. But always punishment should be remedial and not retaliatory, it should be reformative and not merely punitive.

From Duty to Privilege

"And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." This is what is commonly known as "going the second mile." A Roman soldier had the right to "impress" or conscript, or compel a Jew to perform some task, often a menial and humiliating task for a Jew. Thus Simon the Cyrenian was "compelled" to bear the Cross of Christ. Jesus is saying that we must pass from duty to privilege. There are many things which life demands of us. Work can be done grudgingly, sullenly, bitterly as a stern duty, or one can accept it as an inevitable discipline and privilege. The spirit of the "second mile" transforms drudgery into delight. Old age comes in spite of everything we can do to evade it or postpone it. The spirit of the "second mile" can transform it into something good and beautiful. This principle also should find expression in the realm of the religious life. Attendance at services of worship, giving, praying, service in the church are duties. It is better to do them from a sense of duty than not to do them at all. But unless they go from duty to privilege, they have little meaning and less joy.

Loving Your Enemies

"I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." There it is in black and white, as authentic as anything Jesus ever said! Before we dismiss these words as the babbling of a fuzzy-minded idealist, let us first find out what Jesus really said and what he meant. There are four words in Greek that are translated love. One is stergein which means family love. There is one eros which has the idea of passion in it and is never used in the New Testament. There is another, philein which means affection, warm, tender affection. And agapao which means unconquerable benevolence, invincible good will. Jesus is not telling us to love our enemies as we love our friends or our families. He uses the word agapao. The kind of love Jesus was talking about was not of the heart, but of the will. We are to have toward even our enemies the unconquerable benevolence and the goodwill which will seek nothing but their highest good. We can have this kind of love only when the spirit of Jesus enables us to conquer our natural tendency to anger and bitterness. Jesus was not talking nonsense when he exhorted us to pray for our enemies. Have you ever tried it? If not, try it, try it sincerely.

And The Reason For All This

"That ye may be children of your Father which is in heaven." The world has a right to expect more of us because we are Christians. Folks in the world love those who love them and salute those who salute them. It remains for Christians to do more than this. God goes on loving those who do not love him. As his children we are supposed to express his spirit.

Some years ago three boys broke into the luxurious home of a rich man. They were caught, brought before the Juvenile Court, and were about to be sentenced to long terms in a Reform School. The rich man, himself the victim of the three boys, opposed sending them to the School; instead he asked the judge to turn them over to him, which the judge did. The man thereupon gave these three boys a job in his manufacturing plant. Today one of them is the head of that firm, the second a fine surgeon, and the third a United States Senator!

Thought For Today

"If God is not great enough to embrace everyone, he is too small to be worshipped by anyone."

LEADERS IN TEACHING-REACHING-PREACHING MISSION

The Eastern Virginia Conference Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission is being directed by Rev. Robert A. Happel (left) of Cleveland, Ohio, and the speaker for the great rally at the Christian Temple in Norfolk October 8 (7:45 p.m.) will be Rev. Fred P. Register (right), Superintendent of our Nebraska Conference, and a former minister in our area.

Stewardship And Missions Retreat

By Carl Wallace

September 22 and 23 a group of forty men and women, all leaders in the Southern Convention program of Stewardship and Missions, met at Moonelon for eighteen hours in a new approach to training. The idea for a Retreat was born in the mind of our Superintendent, Rev. Clyde Fields, in conversation with National and Convention leaders at Philadelphia in July, 1961. The purpose envisioned by the steering Committee (Fields, Wallace, French) was threefold: to follow up and implement the pulpit emphasis of this past spring; to offer a substitute for the area Stewardship Workshops which seemed to have had their day; and to meet realistically the challenge of a 60% mission increase placed before us by our Missions Council.

Rev. Theodore Horvath of our Missions Council spent an entire day training four leaders for the Retreat. The entire program, except for two brief addresses, administrative needs and worship, met in five separate groups of eight each. These groups simulated actual calls upon local church leaders. In demonstrating the actual calls the information and the technique were both learned. Dr. Richard King, Professor at State College, Raleigh, N. C., had this to say, "A most progressive method of education and training."

During October teams trained in this progressive manner will visit 27 churches of the Southern Convention that extended invitations. These teams will meet with the leaders of the local churches, and, with charts, etc., explain the "Crisis in Missions," the level of participation by the particular church, and encourage a progressive increase in support of Our Christian World Mission program.

We hope this is only the beginning of an annual emphasis and next year we shall look forward to visiting churches we have not reached in this present program.

The most significant factor in the entire retreat was the new basis of giving for a local church. Heretofore we have felt that the apportionment was our plumbline but now we are being challenged to consider our percentage of giving in relationship to the amount that is being spent for local expenses. The apportionment in most cases is a minimum in the new "Stairway of Progress."

Women's Fellowships To Meet In Fall Conference

The Annual fall Conference of the three Women's Fellowships in the Southern Convention will meet as follows:

October 3, 1961 — North Carolina Women — at Pleasant Hill Church, near Liberty, President, Mrs. John R. Lackey.

October 5, 1961 — Eastern Virginia Women at Christian Temple, Norfolk, President, Mrs. J. H. Booth.

October 25, 1961 — Valley of Virginia Women jointly with Evangelical and Reformed Women of the Potomac Synod — at Bethlehem Church (CC), President, Mrs. Austin Kipps.

The speaker for all three Conferences is Mrs. Alfred C. Bartholomew, of the Women's Guild, Evangelical and Reformed Church. She will speak on, "Creating and Renewing the Church," Women's Fellowship theme for this year.

For the Conference at Pleasant Hill, directions have been sent out by the President, Mrs. John R. Lackey, to local group presidents. For general directions, the following could be used: There is a sign for Pleasant Hill church 3 miles south of Liberty on No. 49 as you go south, and 3 miles north of Liberty as you go north on No. 49. After you turn at the sign for the church, go about one mile.

Come, See Us, Eat With Us

Dear Friends:

A letter went out last week to all ministers in the Southern Convention asking them to send the name of one person in their church or churches who would help us to promote our Open House November 4. We are eager to have every church in the Southern Convention represented on our campus on that day.

We have already begun making preparation for this. Our entire campus and farm will be open for you to see. Come see your Home for Children, how it is operated and to what your money goes when you support it.

We want you to not only visit our campus but to have lunch with us while you are here. Beginning at 11:00 o'clock we will serve lunch, without cost, to everyone who comes on our campus. With the help of our staff and boys and girls, Mr. Holland Phillips and Mr. Roy Robertson of Burlington will prepare for this occasion a delicious, old fashion, North Carolina Brunswick Stew. This we know you will enjoy.

Along with other improvements on our campus, Johnston Hall will have a new look when you arrive November 4. This building, since its erection in 1925, has had no major repair work done on it until this year. Structure-wise this building is in excellent condition and with the repair work now being done it will be brought up to make the right kind of living quarters for girls and boys.

Please work with the representative in your church to see that a group from your church visits our Home for Children Saturday, November 4.

SAY IT RIGHT... WRITE IT RIGHT

The word upperhanded is an unnecessary modification of underhand. Both are often used, but both mean clandestine. Underhand is preferable. A word often misused for the singular of species is specie. Specie refers to hard money, silver or gold, while species is a biological term and may be considered singular or plural according to the sense of the text.

Distinction should be made between the use of the words evidence and testimony, except when testimony proves a fact. The testimony of a witness may not be evidence.

The word sacrilegious should not be associated with religious. But because it sometimes is, the word is often misspelled — sacreligious.

"I read in the paper where a ship was sunk." This means that a ship was sunk in the paper. Correct: I read in the paper that a ship was sunk.

In Memoriam

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

JERIGAN

We the members of Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church and the Women's Fellowship wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mr. Lemuel Jerigan who passed away from this earthly realm to the heavenly on May 10, 1961.

He was a member of the church and the men's Bible class. We shall miss his presence among us.

Because of our appreciation for his faithfulness we resolve:

1. To extend to his loved ones our sympathy.
2. To send a copy of these resolutions to his family.
3. To send a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

FONVILLE

We, the members of Long's Chapel United Church of Christ, wish to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. William Jerry Fonville, Sr., 50, whose tragic and untimely death occurred Saturday, September 16, 1961. He was killed when a hay baler fell on him while he was working underneath it.

His deep devotion and love for his church was evidenced by his faithful and regular attendance at all services. He cheerfully accepted and served any office to which he was elected. He was a deacon and had taught Sunday school for many years. He was active in the Men's Fellowship and the Pilgrim Fellowship. He was chairman of the Building Committee. He left the new church uncompleted. It is ironical that the first service held in it was his funeral, as the attendance was so great they set up speakers in the unfinished church to accommodate part of the many friends who came.

Mr. Fonville's passing leaves Long's Chapel saddened and crippled. The memory of his good example of faithfulness and devotion to Christ and his church will live as an inspiration to his friends and loved ones.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

RAWLS

"There is no death! The stars go down to rise upon some fairer shore, and bright in heaven's jeweled crown they shine for evermore."

And so it is with Miss Effa Robert Rawls. She was one of God's "stars" set in earthly places. She was on the shut-in list of the Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church, Holland, Virginia, for a good many years.

She served many active years in the Woman's Fellowship and was a life-long member of the church.

We the members wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of this life which passed away Wednesday, July 19, 1961. Because of our appreciation for her faithfulness we resolve:

1. To extend to her loved ones our sympathy.
2. To keep a memory of her devotion in our hearts.
3. That a copy of this memoriam be sent to her family, and one be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

SHARE OUR SURPLUS — MEET THEIR NEED

Most Americans are distressingly aware that the world's wealth is not properly divided. We are pleased to be among the fortunate who have plenty, and are grateful that we can share with the less fortunate.

Regular contributions through the church budget, if it includes what we call Conference Apportionments, help to feed the hungry, give clothing to the needy, heal the sick, and open doors of opportunity to people around the world. But many people want other chances to express their good will by giving additional amounts. This is provided through the Congregational Christian Service Committee, 110 East 29th Street, New York 16, New York.

The above picture represents the millions of hands reached out in search of the ordinary human needs of people in many parts of the world. An attractive poster available to every interested group says that "every dollar sends more than 300 lbs. of food to hungry men, women and children." The poster is entitled "Building a Rainbow of Love!" and makes a record of each gift by placing a section of color in the rainbow that encircles a map of the world.

Our Friends

We cannot think of them as dead
Who walk with us no more
Along the path of life we tread;
They have but gone before.

The Father's house is mansioned fair

Beyond our vision dim;
All souls are his, and here or there
Are living unto Him.

And still their silent ministries
Within our hearts have place,
As when on earth they walked with us

And met us face to face.

Ours are they by an ownership
Nor time nor death can free;
For God hath given to love to keep
Its own eternally.

Former Editor C. B. Riddle

The facile pen of C. B. Riddle, a former editor of The Christian Sun, is now still. On September 25 the heart that had kept him working for the three score and ten years allotted to man refused to do more.

At a meeting of the Southern Convention May 4, 1916, a Senior in Elon College, secretary to the president of the college, was elected to be editor of The Christian Sun. For six years C. B. Riddle held this position with such skill as to bring the subscription list to its highest peak. His concluding editorial is found in the issue of May 31, 1922.

Since leaving his editor's office in Burlington, he had made his home in Washington, D. C. where he continued to write for publication.

Concerning him his typist in recent years has said: "Mr. Riddle was not only a grand gentleman, he was a gentle man, kind, considerate, always helping others, and so cheerful despite his suffering (arthritis). He was held in high regard by all who were fortunate enough to know him."

Here And There Among The Churches

Members of the United Student Fellowship at Durham had a discussion at their September 24 meeting on "Nuclear Fall-Out and Christian Conscience." Leaders were Dr. Hans Hillerbrand, a theologian, and Dr. Donald Fluke, a radiation biologist.

Mrs. W. F. Randolph is leader of the Bible study group meeting each third Monday morning at First Christian, Burlington. They are studying First Corinthians with the theme "Creating and Renewing the Church."

Wednesday, October 25, there will be a special service of licensure for Richard Milteer at the Rosemont church, South Norfolk. Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship members are especially invited.

The 60th anniversary of the founding of First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, will be observed October 27, with Supt. Clyde Fields as the principal speaker.

More than 30,000 pounds of emergency relief supplies from the National Council of Churches were rushed to the victims of Hurricane Carla along the gulf coast areas of Texas. Valued at about $35,000 the shipment consisted of blankets, quilts, household goods and clothing from Church World Service.

The senior Pilgrim Fellowship group of Damascus, Chapel Hill, elected new officers September 7. They are: Jean Dollar, president; Lacy Wilson, vice president; Judy Bowden, secretary; Brenda Womble, treasurer. Tentative programs were planned and hostesses assigned for three months.

Our Bayside (Va.) church held two services of communion October 1 — one at 9:45 and the other at 11:00.

Members of Great Bridge church are studying the Book of James at mid-week Bible study sessions each Wednesday under the leadership of the minister, Rev. Bill Simmons.

Palm Street Church, Greensboro, will hold a revival October 23-29 with Rev. R. E. Tally of Third Avenue, Danville, as the guest speaker. Services will be held at 7:30 p.m., according to announcement by the pastor, Rev. Odell Powell.

An all-church planning session for 1962 activities will be held at Great Bridge church October 22. Each committee presents plans for approval and then a plan book is compiled for the total program.

Dick Bandlow, a new member (six months) at Mt. Zion church, Eclipse, Virginia, prepared an 8-page booklet to leave in the homes of inactive and non-members in connection with the lay visitation program of the TRPM. Pastor at Mt. Zion is Rev. James Madren. Missioner for the TRPM was his brother, Rev. Thomas Madren, of Hines Chapel, near Greensboro, North Carolina.

Leroy E. Eide, layman on the staff of the Missions Council since 1949, will be at First, Newport News, Virginia, November 6-13 for a week of study and preparation for dedication of time, talents and treasure to God. January 1 Mr. Eide will become one of the regional directors for the Stewardship Council of the United Church.

"The Torch" of Elon College Community Church lists 24 students at Elon College and 13 at other colleges, ranging in geographical location from Harvard to Florida Southern.

World-Wide Communion Sunday was commemorated by First Congregational, Oak Park, Illinois and the Oak Park Evangelical and Reformed church as they held a joint communion service at the former, with the two pastors, Rev. Oliver Powell and Rev. Paul Bloesch officiating.

Officers for the Women's Fellowship of Damascus church, Chapel Hill, for 1961-62 are president, Mrs. Paul Long; vice president, Mrs. Numa Womble; secretary, Mrs. Essell Womble; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Crabtree. Mrs. Harvey Carnes is program chairman.

Women of the First Evangelical and Reformed and the First Congregational Christian churches of Greensboro will meet in the E. & R. church Thursday, October 26, to discuss joint women's work in the United Church. Mrs. F. C. Lester will be guest speaker.

Expressing their "shock" at the resumption by the Soviet Union of nuclear weapons tests, three national women's groups sent a telegram to President Kennedy early in September urging him to bring the matter before the United Nations. Signing the message were the presidents of United Church Women, the YWCA, and the National Council of Jewish Women. The message concluded, "You will want to know that wherever possible, we are using channels available to us to share our views with women around the world."

Rev. Robert Roschy, minister of First Reformed, Burlington, will be the speaker for the Laymen's Fellowship of First Christian, Burlington, at a supper meeting October 13.

October family night at The Christian Temple, Norfolk, was held October 2 with supper, a showing of the motion picture "Fate of John the Baptist" (ninth in the Living Christ series), adult class business meetings, and a meeting of the official board.

New deacons at Seagrove are J. B. Slack and Birchel Hancock. They succeed J. R. Barker, former principal of the Seagrove school, who has moved away, and R. J. Lawrence, one of the long-time members who passed away.

The American Bible Society is issuing a special appeal for $250,000 to supply Bibles to Indonesia before the embargo on their importation which takes effect December 23. Contributions may be sent through the Convention Office to the United Church Board for World Ministries, or direct to the American Bible Society, 450 Park Avenue, New York 22, New York. If you do the latter, be sure to say that it is from a Congregational Christian church or individual.

SUPPLY PASTORS AVAILABLE

Supt. Clyde L. Fields

The following students and ministers are available for supply and interim work as ministers to the churches of our Southern Convention:

1. Rev. Lewis Wicker, Route 4, Sanford, N. C., a student at Duke Divinity School.
2. Rev. George Phillips, Route 7, Burlington, N. C., a senior at Elon College this fall.
3. Mr. Maurice Staley, 1804 S. Mebane St., Burlington, N. C., is a student at Elon College.
4. Mr. Roger Fletcher, Elon College, N. C., is a student at Elon College.
5. Mr. Thomas G. Brady, Elon College, N. C., is a student at Elon College.
6. Jimmy Lewis Rosser, Elon College, N. C., is a student at Elon College.
7. Rev. Ottis Leonard, Route 6, Lexington, N. C.
8. Rev. William L. Underwood, Route 3, Burlington, N. C., has graduated from Southeastern Baptist Seminary.

Nine young people from Great Bridge church are attending college this year. One of them, Carrie Warren, is attending Elon.

Charles L. Richardson, new mayor of South Norfolk, Virginia, is a member of Rosemont church.

Mrs. J. Monroe Harris, former president of the women of the Southern Convention, began a series of Bible studies for the women of The Christian Temple at their morning session October 3.

A church library has been established at Lee's Chapel by the Board of Christian Education. Mr. M. M. Buchanon has built a bookcase in the church basement. Miss Peggy Gray is serving as librarian.

SPECIAL DAY AT SUNBURY

Sunday, October 15, will be a special day at Sunbury Congregational Christian Church, according to the new pastor, Rev. Ellis N. Clark.

There will be a homecoming service and a dedication service for the air conditioning system in the morning. The air conditioning was given in honor of Mrs. Lillie Lassiter Twiford by her son, S. A. Twiford.

Following a picnic dinner, there will be an installation service for the pastor. All former members and pastors and friends from nearby churches are invited for the occasion.

Rev. Calvin J. Felton is serving as interim pastor of Cypress Chapel, near Suffolk, Virginia.

The social action committee of our Tryon church and the League of Women Voters are sponsoring an open discussion meeting on the United Nations and some of its problems October 24 (United Nations Day) in our church at 8:00 p.m.

Rev. W. R. Cullom of Wake Forest, frequent contributor to this paper, has recently returned home after three weeks in the hospital. The Sun family of readers wishes for him a complete recovery as he enters his ninetieth year of service.

FAREWELL FOR PASTOR

Mrs. Birchel Hancock, Reporter

Following our morning worship service at the Seagrove church Sunday, September 24, the Congregation enjoyed a picnic lunch served on the grounds. We were honoring our pastor, Rev. B. J. Willett, and Mrs. Willett who are leaving our church to serve in the Eastern North Carolina Conference.

We deeply regret to see the Willetts leave. They have done a fine job in our church. The young people have received many blessings from their leadership. We wish them much success and happiness as they continue on in the upbuilding of God's kingdom.

New Parsonage At Elon College

By W. J. Andes

The new parsonage for the Elon College Community Church, built this spring and summer, is now occupied by the minister and his family. The first night spent in the new parsonage was August 31. The Andes family cannot adequately express their thanks for such a beautiful new house in which to live. It is adequate for this minister's family and should be for future ministers and their families.

The parsonage has four bedrooms, with one being used as a study. The living room, dining room and entrance hall are nearly one room. This provides for large meetings of students, committees, friends and visitors. The kitchen and family room are separate, but no door blocks the opening between the two.

The yard has been seeded and the grass is beginning to appear. Shrubbery is yet to be planted, but this comes in the near future.

One cannot begin to thank all of our people who have made this parsonage a reality. Special thanks should go to Mark McAdams and Biff Brafford who have worked hours and hours to oversee the work. Others have done digging, nailing, insulating, electrifying (thanks to Dr. A. L. Hook at this point), etc. Waverly Hughes and his brother-in-law, Don Wilson, installed the furnace — a much bigger job than they had anticipated. Our special thanks to them. The Women's Fellowship bought the carpet for the living room, dining room and the entrance hall. College students have helped in the work, and young people from the Children's Home have been at work.

My Friend Riddle

Monday, September 25, 1961, the editor of this paper lost a personal friend. Carl B. Riddle, a former editor of The Christian Sun, answered the Call from the Eternal, left this mundane sphere and entered that mysterious realm from which no traveler ever returns. The tired heart that had given four previous warnings in recent months that it could not continue to perform its duties just quit work, released the spirit to the God who gave it, and allowed the body to return to mother earth.

C. B. Riddle was a friend of mine.

On entering Elon College as a student fresh from the country, I was soon introduced to the secretary to President William Allen Harper. The secretary had authored a book entitled "College Men Without Money." That book made it clear that college education did not depend upon money inherited, or in the hands of the student's family. A man could make his own way, secure an education, and become a person in his own right. That was the journey before this writer, and the book was a friendly reminder of many others who had led the way. The message of the book still lingers with an assurance that is often repeated to young people of our time — money in hand is not an essential in securing an education, but character and determination are.

Why the secretary to the college president should have paid any attention to the yokel wearing my name is an unsolved mystery, but he did. He was a counselor and friend, unsolicited and effective. He made me understand that any person who is honorable can have honorable company of both men and women. He showed me that physical work is no disgrace, but is rather a necessity, and that the dirt on one's person need never touch the mind and spirit.

When it became necessary for the Freshman and Sophomore to make speeches, the Junior and Senior was ready to offer suggestions, and to point out sources of information. This is not always true of college students, but is a friendly act that lasts long in the memory of the recipient.

When C. B. Riddle was editor of this paper, and the young pastor tried to report activities of his church without knowing how to do so, it was Editor Riddle who not only encouraged the habit but gave suggestions as to how it should be done.

The best teacher in journalism this writer has ever had was his friend Riddle. It was not a formal course. It was a series of suggestions over the years. When editorial responsibility came for the second time four and more years ago, one of my first acts was to ask friend Riddle for help. Although he was suffering from serious arthritis, and later heart trouble, suggestions were freely given, even up to the last week of his life. Readers will never know just how much beauty and life — if it is obvious at all — in this paper is due to kindly suggestions from a former editor for which no credit was permitted. But the editor knows, and will always be grateful.

Inspiration is an invisible something, but exceedingly real. To know a man who has spent a busy life accumulating knowledge and skill who freely gives this accumulation to one he has not seen for a third of a century brings inspiration that sends one down a shining road with a song in the heart.

It would be easy to say that C. B. Riddle was a skilled user of the pen, a student who accumulated factual material enough for many books, a master craftsman with the use of type, a critic who could not endure sloppy use of the English language, a friendly person who laughed much with his associates, a lover of his church and all its institutions (especially its publications). But this writer is content to say:

C. B. Riddle was my friend, and because of that, life has been greatly enriched, and his going makes heaven seem nearer.

The writer of this feature article died September 25. As was his custom, he planned ahead. We will continue the feature as long as the articles last.—Ed.

With an ever-increasing number of history books, the spirit that made much history is often lost in too much emphasis on dates.

There are many illustrations of this, but the case of Christopher Columbus is a good example. Almost every school boy and girl, and many others too, know that the great navigator discovered America October 12, 1492, but many do not know of the impelling spirit and motivating purpose of the world's foremost adventurer.

There was far more than adventure that prompted Columbus to embark on a sea journey that could have meant death to him and his men. He wanted to fight an ideology which, if he had been unable to prove untrue, would have enslaved even longer the men and women of his time to a false international theory . . . that the world was flat.

The earth and sea were not flat, according to Columbus' reasoning, but he did believe that if man were brave enough to try he could sail freely around the world.

To do battle against false geographical precepts and blind human conclusions, Columbus interested such willing men about him as he could find or could intrigue for the most eventful journey of that or any other century.

Many of the men who were willing to assist Columbus were weary of conditions under which they had long lived. In some cases they reasoned that they had nothing better to gain than to gamble for better conditions through wider opportunities.

Thus the adventurous Columbus and his life-risking men went out to face the western-sea enemies of their generation. The legends of that period had long over-dramatized those enemies as being supreme and unconquerable. Many thought that Columbus would reach the rim of an ocean and fall into space. Oddly enough, that conception prevailed among many for a century after Columbus made his discovery.

But Columbus decided on a great adventure. The decision was the magnificent intellectual goal and battle of a man of the fifteenth century to whom the world owes much. There is also a debt which the world owes the brave men who accompanied Columbus.

Columbus to some people of his time seemed to be a man who did not know where he was going. Many even considered him a madman because of his contemplated adventure, while others said he was trying to make himself a great lord of his day. But Columbus not only had his theories but he tested his new ideas by first sailing 100 leagues beyond Iceland.

There is an interesting parallel between the experiences of Columbus and men of the present. No man ever undertook something big or great who was not adversely criticised; who did not have opposition.

Truly it may be said that Columbus first discovered himself, and that discovery was steeped in confidence of a definite purpose. And that in this age is more important than being able to give a correct date in a class room or elsewhere.

THE TRAVELING BELL

Fred R. Hoekert, a layman of Carnation, Washington, conceived the idea of a "Traveling Bell," as follows:

Each bell and mallet with its own "log book," was given to a local laymen's group. These men became "temporary custodians" for a month or so and then "wangled" an invitation for their representatives to attend a group in another church where they joined with "group 2" and, on departure, left the bell and book to be carried on to "group 3," in the same fashion. Each move was recorded in the logbook. This idea was encouraged by Rev. Jackson E. Smith, then Associate in charge of laymen's work in Washington. He writes: "These bells (2 in number) travelled around the Conference — not always regularly or on time, but with fair reliability, and the log-books were kept of their travels." This idea for drawing Churchmen's Fellowship groups together might be worth considering by each Conference.

Churchmen's Fellowship

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

Into His Gates

"Enter into His gates with thanksgiving." Psalm 100:4.

There is something beautiful about a gate. Whether it be at a small cottage in a quaint little town, or the wide, ornate gate of the old plantation, it suggests a sort of selective welcome — at once a kind of keeping-out, and an inviting-in. I like gates.

Especially do I like the above text: "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving." When I arise in the morning and kneel by my bedside it is good to look on the day ahead, and to enter into its gates with thanksgiving. When the task, or job, or work lies invitingly before me I like to feel a gate opens and that I may enter with joy and enthusiasm — with thanksgiving.

The new year in school — how many and how lovely they have been — may be the shining bright gate opening to new adventure of the mind and spirit. The new turn of the road in life, the new adjustment to its ways, these and countless others are gates we may enter with thanksgiving.

But this is a beautiful temple song. A processional perhaps for the great choir as it moved into the presence of God in his holy temple. There is a special thrill about entering God's house! How often I have been alone on some day in the week, and have come up to the door of a little church and gently pushed it open! Words fail me, it is quiet, it is sweet, it is sacred, it is beautiful. "Enter — enter into His gates with thanksgiving." For he is God. He made us. He is good. His mercy is everlasting. His truth endures to all generations. Serve him with gladness. Come before his presence with singing, all ye lands! Amen.

South Norfolk Women's Fellowship

1960-61

The Women's Fellowship of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church reports an enrollment of approximately 120 members with 87 active members. Seven meetings were held during the year with an average attendance of 26. Planned devotionals were presented by the Spiritual Life Chairman, Mrs. Carlton Chappell. The theme "Mission of the Church—Unity, Witness and Service" was emphasized in all meetings.

The six circles held regular monthly meetings with an average attendance of 65. The Bible Study "Luke's Portrait of Christ" was presented in each circle. In connection with this study course, the Women's Fellowship sponsored "The Living Christ Series" film, one series of which was shown the second Sunday evening in each month during the year.

The Home Missions theme, "Heritage and Horizons," was observed in the November meeting with a book review of "Safe in Bondage" presented by Reverend O. D. Poythress, pastor emeritus of the church. The foreign mission study "One World and One Mission" was presented by Mrs. H. C. Davis of Norfolk.

Reports on the bi-monthly meetings were sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Sixteen members attended the Women's Eastern Virginia Conference; five members attended the Spring Rally. Our Fellowship was represented at the Norfolk Federation of Church Women; participated in World Community Day; and twelve members attended the World Day of Prayer and took part in the program.

A special service was held on Women's Fellowship Sunday when the Gift Boxes were turned in and dedicated at the evening worship service, after which the first of the Living Christ Series was shown.

Five Life Memberships were given in honor of Mesdames Eva Creech; Ruth Etheridge; Birdie Hines; Lessie Jones, and Helen Overton. Three Memorials in memory of Mrs. Frankie Pierce Beale, Mrs. Hazel Humphries and Matilda George Vellines.

One Family Night was observed with a supper followed by an appropriate program conducted by the first vice president, Mrs. C. N. Harris, on the women of the Bible.

A Christmas program "He Knew Not The Hour," was presented at the December meeting. This was followed by our Friendly Service dedication service. Our Friendly Service quota was met and overfilled. $15.00 was sent to Rev. Myron S. Miller for migrant workers; $16.00 sent to the American High School for girls at Aleppo, Syria; sent games to Veterans Hospital and pajamas to our Elon Home for Children. Three hundred and twenty hours were given toward making 3,266 cancer dressings. Twenty pounds of cancelled postage stamps were sent to German refugees.

Our Social Action projects were gifts and visits to nursing homes, shut-ins, and sunshine baskets and flowers to the aged and sick. Coupons totalling 2,560 and money value certificates amounting to $5.80 were sent to the Elon Home for Children.

We gave $555.75 through our conference treasurer and $994.81 for local projects, making a total of $1,550.56 for the year.

Our president for 1960-61 is Mrs. W. B. Evans. Circle leaders include: Mrs. Ellsworth Morris, Mrs. Donald Seymour, Mrs. Alice Harding, Mrs. James Hare, Mrs. William Overton, Mrs. Linwood Harrell.

October

15—Mrs. Elise Goepfarth Vargas was appointed a missionary to Honduras in 1923 and has been doing pioneering work in Central America ever since. Literacy classes, training church school teachers, women's work and children's work are her specialties. She married a consecrated layman in San Salvador in 1941, but he died suddenly in 1943. She is a graduate of Richmond Training School for Kindergarteners; Richmond School of Social Work; William and Mary College.

San Pedro Sula

16—Rev. and Mrs. Harold N. Auler, Jr. do a variety of things — he is administrator of the mission high school, chairman of the Honduras Mission, has taught music and science, pioneered in setting up shortwave radio system that operates between various mission stations. She has served as director of boarding homes and of central kitchen, as principal of mission grade school at Yoro and taught piano. His parents were listed in last week's Calendar of Prayer.

17—Miss Louise Filger (1949) is principal of Pablo Menzel School, teaching some classes there and supervising teachers, staff and 240 pupils. On weekends she spends her time in nearby town of LaLima, conducting a class in the Children's Park on Saturday and on Sunday teaching a church school class of 60 children under eight years of age.

18—Rev. and Mrs. Stuart Goude (1959) are at San Pedro Sula, where he is treasurer of mission station, pastor of English-speaking church, and administrator in charge of buildings, grounds, automobiles. She has charge of the bookstore and works with church school and women's groups. He has been Congregational Christian minister in Oregon and a chaplain; she a Methodist missionary in Bolivia.

19—Mrs. Martha Herrscher went to Honduras with her husband in 1927. Following his death in 1957 she became treasurer of the mission. She is an expert on flora and fauna of Central America.

20—Rev. Thomas Puroff, who graduated from Eden Seminary in 1959, specializes in literacy work: takes village census to discover illiterates, trains teachers, organizes classes, and plans follow-up which include Bible study and health.

21—Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth Sell both have degrees from Lancaster Theological Seminary. They went as missionaries in 1957 and work with the Normal School in San Pedro Sula, and direct audio-visual programs for the Honduran Church.

New Elon College Faculty Members

Six new faculty members began their duties at Elon College with the opening of the 1961-62 term, according to an announcement from President J. E. Danielely.

Prof. Wesley Alexander, native of Cabarrus County, who is an assistant professor of mathematics, is a graduate and holds the Master's degree from Appalachian State Teachers College. He has also had advanced work at Florida State University and Rutgers University. After teaching in North Carolina public schools, he was a member of the Wingate Junior College faculty for the past six years.

Prof. Wesley Alexander

Prof. Tyler Deierhoi

Prof. Paul J. Amash, a native of Lydda, Palestine, who has been in America since 1953, is a new assistant professor of French and Spanish. After receiving his early education in Palestine, he attended the University of London and then received the bachelor's degree from Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa. He also holds the Master's degree from Pennsylvania State University, where he was an assistant in languages.

Prof. Paul J. Amash

Mrs. Dorothy S. Mason

Miss Elizabeth Bernhardt, a native of Germany but a resident of the United States for many years, is a new assistant professor of German. Educated in German public schools, she is a graduate of Notre Dame College, Cleveland, Ohio, and holds the Master's degree from Kent State University, Kent, Ohio. She formerly taught in the public schools of Ohio and West Virginia and at the College of St. Teresa, Winona, Minn.

Miss Elizabeth Bernhardt

Prof. Tyler Deierhoi, a native of Richmond, Va., is a new assistant professor of history. He received his undergraduate education at the University of Richmond and holds the master's degree from Duke University.

Prof. Charles D. Mecimore

Mrs. Dorothy S. Mason, a resident of Greensboro and a Guilford County native, is a new assistant professor of geography. A graduate of Woman's College, she holds the master's degree from the University of Georgia and has done additional graduate work at Woman's College, where she served as an instructor in geography.

Prof. Charles D. Mecimore, a native of China Grove, now a resident of Chapel Hill, is a new instructor of accounting. He is a graduate of Pfeiffer College and has completed master's degree requirements at the University of North Carolina, where he is also a candidate for the doctoral degree in business administration.

Some Things We Cherish

Supt. Clyde L. Fields

Now that the United Church of Christ is a reality, most of us will have to learn a new set of names for most of the agencies of our denomination. One of the names long familiar and almost sacred to many of us is The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Many of us know The American Board to be the oldest Protestant missionary sending agency in the United States. For over 150 years, The American Board has sent out missionaries in the name of the Board and the churches to preach, to teach, and to heal. The American Board has on the field nearly 400 missionaries, some 13,000 national leaders, nearly 1,000 schools, nearly 50 colleges, about 80 hospitals, and nearly 2,000 overseas churches. Surely, the work of The American Board has been most profitable for our Lord and His church during the last 150 years.

On first thought, one might be led to believe that the work of The American Board would cease as we enter the United Church of Christ. However, on closer examination, we discover this to be untrue. The work of The American Board will be continued in the United Church of Christ in what we now call the United Church Board for World Ministries. All that The American Board has done and more will continue to be done through the instrument for World Ministries of the United Church of Christ. What we are prone to forget is that the Evangelical and Reformed fellowship brings to us a rich and fruitful ministry in the work of foreign missions. The E. & R. Board of International Missions has established mission stations and provided missionary service to many parts of the world. The work done by The American Board of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Board of International Missions of the E. & R. Churches will all be continued and even strengthened as we move into the United Church of Christ. These two agencies for foreign missionary activity are brought together in the United Church Board for World Ministries, as are the Congregational Christian Service Committee and the Commission on World Service.

It is true the words "Congregational Christian" will not appear in the names of the new instrumentalities for the United Church of Christ, but had you noticed that the word "Congregational" did not appear in The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions? We should not let sentiment for a name prevent us from continuing to send ambassadors for Christ to the uttermost parts of the earth. We should keep in mind that the new names refer to the same time-honored work and institutions and people. We have not deserted our former work through The American Board or passed it on to others. All that we have been doing for these many decades is included in the larger work of the united fellowship.

Many of our people and church leaders have raised a question as to whether or not funds should be sent through the same channels for the carrying on of the work for our Congregational Christian boards and agencies. Many who are deeply concerned that the missionary activity of The American Board will be continued will be heartened to know that the work that The American Board has done will be continued and strengthened through the United Church Board for World Ministries. Local churches and individuals should direct their funds to the Southern Convention Office for the agencies of the United Church of Christ, which are as a matter of simple fact, continuing and expanding the work to which long ago we pledged "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor." As we work out details of financial support of our boards and agencies, a budget for the United Church of Christ will be brought together in a procedure satisfactory to all who share in the financial support of Our Christian World Mission. The churches and individuals of the Southern Convention are reminded that we are still continuing our apportionment for local churches and all the work done by the various instrumentalities of the Congregational Christian fellowship to which our Southern Convention has given financial support will be continued. Therefore, we hasten to reassure all our churches and individuals that they may continue to send their funds for all our work to the Southern Convention Office at Elon College, North Carolina.

GOD AND COUNTRY AWARDS GIVEN

Mrs. Birchel Hancock, Reporter

In an impressive service at the Seagrove Christian Church Sunday evening, September 17, two Seagrove scouts received their God and Country awards. Larry Hancock and Cecil Hinesley received them from Rev. B. J. Willett, pastor of the church, while their parents Mr. and Mrs. Birchel Hancock and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hinesley stood directly behind them during the presentation ceremony. Requirements listed as Christian faith, witness, world outreach, citizenship and fellowship were read by Raeford Lucas, institutional representative of the Seagrove Lions Club, who sponsor troop 513. Larry has been a member of our Seagrove church for two years.

BE SURE TO ATTEND

Preschool teachers, workers and others interested in the Preschool Department of your church are reminded of the one-day Preschool Conference at Camp Moonelon, Saturday, October 21 from 9:30 until 4:00.

Registration will begin at 9:30 — the first session (The New Nursery Curriculum) will begin at 10:00. Dorothy Ballinger will lead the course on the Nursery Curriculum and Mrs. Melvin Moose, Synodical Children's Worker for the Southern Synod, will lead the course on the new Kindergarten Curriculum. Additional resources, filmstrips and creative activities will be available for your "viewing and doing."

Lunch will be served at the camp. The closing worship will end by 4:00. Even though you may not be a worker in the Preschool Department of your church, please telephone your local preschool teachers and tell them about the Preschool Conference at Camp Moonelon, Saturday, October 21.

READ IT

Readers of The Christian Sun will be interested to know that there is a fine article in the November issue of The Church School Worker published by Pilgrim Press, written by Rev. Robert Knowles, Minister of Christian Education of the Southern Convention. I call this article to the attention of the Sunday Schools of our Southern Convention as a part of the fall study in Pilgrim Series for 1961. The article is titled, "What Your Teens Are Reading."

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

ROSEMONT P. F. MEETS

By Doris Anne Blake, Reporter

The Pilgrim Fellowship of Rosemont held the first meeting of the year Sunday, September 17. The meeting was a social hour for the Senior Highs, Junior Highs, and the Juniors. After recreation and light refreshments, the Senior and Junior High groups went into the sanctuary where Mr. Lewis, assisted by Mrs. Lewis, installed the officers and advisors for the coming year.

Officers for the Senior High P. F. are: Joanne Stinnet, president; Freddie Congleton, vice president; Jane Hudgins, secretary; and Jimmy Sparkman, treasurer. The advisors for this group are Mr. John Halstead and Mrs. Clyde Halstead.

Officers serving the Junior High group are: Linda Hodges, president; Bobby Weaver, vice president; Lynette Houston, secretary; and Billy Skelly, treasurer. Junior High advisors are Mrs. W. R. Skelley, Jr. and Mrs. Eddie Reffner.

JOINT MEETING AT SOUTHERN PINES

By Dickey Hoskins,
Fellowship Commissioner

The Pilgrim Fellowship of Southern Pines, N. C. was host to the Mount Pleasant youth at their meeting on the evening of September 24. Mount Pleasant church is a small church which has been organized in Vass, N. C., a rural community near Southern Pines. The P. F. group there is very large and is ambitious to build up the youth program in the new church.

After a snack of sandwiches and cokes, the group joined in a fellowship sing, which was followed by a short devotional period. The program was "Teenage Philosophies," a panel discussion led by Dickey Hoskins. Among those questions discussed were questions such as "What is Philosophy" and "Is God necessary for the use of Christian ethics?" The meeting was closed with a friendship circle led by our president, Wally Wallace.

Officers for the Southern Pines P. F. were installed at an earlier date. They are: Wally Wallace, president; Harold Williford, vice president; Nancy Rowe, secretary-treasurer; Faith Commissioner, Cathie Sandstrom; Action Commissioner, Fay Reid; and Fellowship Commissioner, Dickey Hoskins. Advisors are Mrs. Robert Leland and Rev. and Mrs. Carl Wallace.

P. F. SCRAPBOOK

We are keeping a scrapbook of the activities of the Southern Convention P. F.'ers. Included are, of course, the back issues of the Youth Page in The Christian Sun as well as other articles sent to The Sun. We would also like to have clippings from other sources. If any of your group's activities are printed in other magazines or newspapers, won't you please cut them out and send them to me? My address is:

Cathie Sandstrom, 425 Orchard Road, Southern Pines, N. C.

Let's fill the scrapbook and start on Volume II — soon!

IDEAS, PLEASE

Now that the routine of school has been established, our youth groups are starting to move again. We're getting back to work and doing many interesting things. Why not share some of these things with other groups? When you have an interesting program or take part in a special project, when you elect officers or have a social meeting, write it up and send it in for publication in The Sun. Please don't think you are limited to reporting on group activities only! If you have a special idea or thought, a personal belief or conviction, send it along with your other articles. Not only will I be grateful to you, but so will every other P.F.'er.

WHY HAVE A WORK DAY?

"Why have a Work Day for Christ?" our youth might ask. "Why not just make an annual donation to Our Christian World Mission from the treasury?"

Pilgrim Fellowship Work Day for Christ is a learning experience as well as a means of earning money for the mission. By working together for this one specific purpose, young people become personally involved in the work of our mission in the world. Giving up a Saturday to work often means more to a young person than giving up a dollar.

A Work Day should be preceded by study of the mission and its need for support, so the young people will understand what they are working for. On October 21 (or some other Saturday) the group will work at jobs in the community which have been arranged for in advance. A service of worship should be held either before the work begins or at the end of the day. Some groups close the day with a fellowship supper, followed by a service to dedicate the money earned and the work done in Christ's name.

Money earned through Work Day for Christ should be sent to Our Christian World Mission through your state conference office.

In Mission Today

Workday for Christ was observed by the Senior Hi P.F. group at First, Burlington, September 23, with a carwash in the church parking lot. This group enjoyed a progressive dinner at the homes of four members October 8.

New Consultant Available

Supt. Clyde L. Fields

The Rev. Carl J. Landes has established residence at Guilford College, N. C., as he takes up the work originally done by Miss Dorothy Hampton as a part of the Community Consultant program of the Board of Home Missions for Racial and Cultural Relations in several areas of the United States.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl Landes come to this work after some eight years service as chaplain to Southern Union College at Wadley, Alabama. Mr. Landes has a rich and fruitful ministry and wisdom gained from many experiences in various responsibilities to bring to his new position, as he works for the Board of Home Missions in the area of North Carolina and Virginia.

An Advisory Committee to Mr. Landes has been arranged composed of members from the Southern Synod, Convention of the South, and the Southern Convention. The Advisory Committee members from the Southern Convention are: Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Jr., Mr. Martin T. Garren, and Rev. W. Walter Hall.

In a meeting held recently at Greensboro, the Advisory Committee counseled with Mr. Landes as to how he might effectively serve the churches of North Carolina and Virginia. Mr. Landes will seek to bolster the work of campus ministry in North Carolina and Virginia, seek to be of service in arranging for United Church of Christ summer conferences, be available as a speaker for local church, Conference or Convention on an invited basis, be available to counsel with local church social action committees, be available as a Sunday morning service speaker on invitation from a pastor or a local church, and make himself available in any possible way to render service to the churches of North Carolina and Virginia.

Mr. Landes would be glad to visit Ministerial Associations, Conferences of the Southern Convention, and be available for any service that he might render as speaker, member of a panel, or any possible way in our Southern Convention. It would be most helpful during these trying times of social adjustment for a local church or Conference or the Southern Convention to avail ourselves of this splendid opportunity to have this national leader among us to counsel with us in our problems and concerns. An invitation from the local churches of the Convention would be gratefully received by Mr. Landes. We would urge that all of us make ourselves available of the services of Mr. Landes as he seeks to move in and out among us to be our friend and ally during these tumultuous times.

Message From A Lay Visitor

Mr. Dick Bandlow

We of the Mt. Zion Christian Church are holding a Christian Teaching-Reaching-Predaching Mission expressly for YOU. Regardless of your attitude towards God and his Church, your faith, or your record of church attendance, this revival is an excellent opportunity for you to come closer to GOD, to become a better Christian, a better citizen. Irrespective of your beliefs, every one needs on occasion a personal revival with the Lord, so that our souls, our inner being, may be filled with the strength, peace, and grace, that comes only from God.

There is in our communities, our nations, our world today, great strife at every turn, which makes it absolutely necessary that we return to Jesus Christ not only as individuals, but as a whole nation. If we are to survive, to regain our stature as Christians, to find the strength to overcome the evil in the world today, we must reaffirm our faith in the Lord and pray for strength and salvation.

Without God a person is not complete, there is an emptiness, an unsatisfied thirst in life, but with him a person is strong, radiant, satisfied that any obstacle can be overcome, that life will be fulfilled, and that after death there will be joy and glory in the sight of the Blessed Trinity for all eternity.

It is imperative that for a person to be a good husband or wife, with a full and meaningful marriage; a respected and loved father or mother, with a close and happy family; a loyal citizen, with a love for his fellow-man and country; ready to uphold his obligations as a husband, father, or citizen, that he be a dedicated Christian and a servant of the Lord. Very clearly is this stated in Ecclesiastes, 12:13. "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man."

Stewardship And The Woman's Gift

Mrs. Clyde Fields

S. Conv. Stewardship Chairman

The Women's Fellowship of the Southern Convention will be giving special attention to the Woman's Gift (Thank Offering) in their November Circle Meetings or on Woman's Fellowship Day, November 5. A Thank Offering Ingathering Service, an "Interpretation of the Woman's Gift" by Mrs. Robert Kimball, and a mimeographed "Woman's Gift" information page are included in the Woman's Packet. These will be very helpful tools in preparing for the annual Thank Offering Service in the local Woman's Fellowship.

The Woman's Gift makes possible many projects through our boards and agencies that would not be possible through regular budgets. Two-thirds of the Woman's Gift from the thank offering boxes or special offerings from our Southern Convention women will be used by the boards and agencies of our denomination for designated projects. The remaining one-third will be used for the campus ministry projects of the United Church of Christ in North Carolina and Virginia.

The Woman's Gift is an individual over and above gift as an expression of our stewardship to God. It is every woman, every day, sharing her gifts in loving gratitude to Christ who gave even himself. The Woman's Gift is made possible through our annual thank offering in the Southern Convention and is a part of our Christian World Mission. Many fellowships distribute thank offering boxes into which dedicated women place coins throughout the year. These boxes are gathered together at a time when a special thank offering service is arranged. Your Southern Convention chairman, your Conference chairman, and each of the stewardship chairmen of local woman's fellowships invite all of the women of the Southern Convention to participate in the thank offering for the Woman's Gift.

Growth In Christian Relationships

Background Scripture: Philippians 2:1-18; Colossians 3:1-4:1.

Devotional Reading I John 4:13-21.

Memory Selection: Let each of you look not only at his own interests, but also to the interests of others. Philippians 2:4. (RSV)

A professing Christian should be a worthy representative of Christ. In fact someone has said "A Christian is a person who makes it easier for others to believe in God." Jesus said that we are to be known by our fruits. Not profession but performance is the acid test. Christians are to be measured, not by what they say, but by how they behave. The Christian life is not lived in a vacuum; it must be lived in human relationships. And the genuineness and sincerity of our Christian religion can pretty well be judged by our relationships with others with whom we live and with whom we come in contact. In today's lesson Paul is writing about some of the attitudes and actions of Christians in their relationships with others.

Putting Off The Old Man

Paul does not mean that a Christian becomes good in his own efforts. when he suggests that "put off these things," or as he states in another place "put off the old man." But the vices he mentions, "anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth" were vices accepted in pagan Colossae — they were a part of pagan living. And just as a man would put off an old, ragged, dirty coat or suit, so is the Christian to put off these things. To flare up in wild anger or fury against a neighbor, to hold a grudge or smouldering wrath against anyone, to harbor malice — the word means "eagerness to harm one's neighbor" — to speak profanely about God or to blaspheme his name, to use filthy language, to lie to another, all these are unbecoming to Christians who wear Christ's name. To say that "everybody does it" does not excuse a Christian. The Christian must set an example.

Putting On The New Man

As a Christian puts off vices like he discards an old, ragged, filthy coat, so he is to "put on" the new man. "And the new man embodies and expresses some beautiful and badly-needed qualities of life: mercy, kindness, humility, meekness, longsuffering or patience, forbearance, the willingness to forgive any man who has wronged him. And the basis and incentive of such a spirit of willingness to forgive is the fact that Christ has forgiven us — "even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye." Furthermore, although Paul did not mention it, a powerful incentive to forgiving others is the fact that if we do not forgive, we cannot be forgiven. Jesus himself said this.

Paul adds a striking figure. "And above all these things put on charity." If the above named virtues were like the coat of those days, a flowing garment, loosely worn, then love was like a girder or belt which bound them all together. It was "the bond of perfectness." The peace of God is to rule in the heart of the Christian, the peace which the world cannot give and cannot take away, a peace that is an anchor to the soul in a world of stress and strain. And then Paul adds, not as an afterthought, but perhaps as a climax, "and be ye thankful." Is he suggesting that gratitude is a crowning virtue? The fact that in listing the vices of unregenerate man in the first chapter of Romans he comes to a climax with the sin of ingratitude, and the fact that in listing the virtues here, he comes to a climax with gratitude, is at least significant. One suspects that God can bear with a bad man better than he can bear with an ungrateful one.

One Man In Christ

"Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free; but Christ is all and in all." Paul frankly states that when a man becomes a Christian he ought to lose all prejudices and bitterness toward others. He should rise above racial differences, religious differences. cultural differences, social differences. All races are included in the family of God, and by one Spirit have we all been baptized into one body, The body of Christ. Alas and alack, there are so many of us who have not grown up in human relationships. A church official in Capetown, Africa, saw a Zulu entering a church, and he asked, "Don't you know that this church is for whites only?" The Zulu replied, "I was going in only to sweep the church, sir." "O. K." said the official. "But heaven help you if I catch you praying in this church!" The tragedy of our present situation is the fact that so many Christian people are blinded by prejudice. Old Bluebeard had one room in which nobody was ever to enter on pain of death. There are many of us who are like that, Christ can come into our heart or our home except in certain restricted areas or rooms into which we will not let him come. In many instances that room is where we keep our pet prejudices, our favorite unchangeable ideas, our fervid hatreds, our invincible ignorances. One wonders just what would happen if we would honestly and courageously bring Christ's spirit to our prejudices against the people of other races and religions. But one does not have to wonder; he knows what would happen. They just cannot be defended or justified in Christ's presence. Our trouble is not with the Fatherhood of God, abstractly speaking, but with the brotherhood of man practically speaking. And of course it is in the church. A kindly old usher, instructing his youthful successor in the details of the office said "And remember my boy, that we have nothing but good Christians, kind Christians in this church — until you try to put someone else in their pew."

Which Are You?

When one travels abroad and is asked about his nationality, unless he is hopelessly provincial, he would not say "I am a Missourian, or from North Dakota, or even from Virginia, although there are some who would do that!! He would reply, "I am an American." His identity as a member of a whole nation is more important than his particular location in that nation. And yet strangely enough, so often when we are asked about our religious faith we reply "I am a Methodist, or Presbyterian, or Quaker or Catholic, or what have you, instead of the correct answer, "I am a Chris-

The Whole Of Life And Work In The Name Of Christ

"And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Real Christianity expresses itself in good work well done in every area of life.

A Call To The North Carolina Churches

Whereas the seriousness of world conditions prompts us to call upon Him who in Jesus Christ has revealed Himself to be the God of Peace, and

Whereas we are urged by the Apostle Paul to pray without ceasing for those in authority, and

Whereas we are bidden by our Lord to pray especially for our enemies,

Therefore, we, the Members of the Executive Board of the North Carolina Council of Churches, call upon the Churches of our State to join in solemn prayer.

Pray for peace, for the absence of armed conflict and for the removal of those things which make for armed conflict: jealousy between nations, suspicions, and hatreds.

Pray for those things which make for peace, for all those organizations which are dedicated to the preservation of peace, and in particular, the United Nations, and for those fruits of the Spirit in the heart of men: the love of righteousness and justice, the desire for patience and understanding.

Pray for the nations of the world, their leaders and people, especially for the Soviet Union, the Peoples' Republic of China, and all those whose way of life seems a threat to our own.

Pray for the United States, that she who was conceived in liberty may continue in the same, and for her leaders, the President and all who serve with him, that they may have wisdom to lead us in the paths of peace.

Pray for the coming of the Kingdom of God.

And whereas there is within our hearts that which makes for war, hatred and discord, we urge that confession be made of our sin.

Let us confess our pride of place and station which seeks advantage over other men.

Let us confess our self-centeredness which keeps us from seeking the common good.

Let us confess our slowness to accept as brothers those for whom Christ died.

Let us confess our idolatry which makes a god out of "our cause" while refusing to admit that the One who is with us is also with those who oppose us, loving them even as He loves us.

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPLEMENTATION:

1. Read this Call to Prayer from the Pulpit on World Order Sunday, October 22, and offer prayers for peace on that day.
2. Observe silent prayer for peace at noon each day wherever you are.
3. Arrange special union services in the community to pray for peace.
4. Call together informal groups for shared concern and prayer.
5. Provide opportunities to discuss the world condition.
6. Give wide-spread publication of the Call to Prayer through all local media of communication.

"An Evening in Latin America" will be the subject for two church family night events at First, Greensboro, November 5 and 12. The program, running from 5:30 to 8:00, will include supper, singing, worship, drama and classes for each age group.

Sixty American ministers and architects participated in the first international conference on church architecture, organized jointly by the Department of Church Building and Architecture of the National Council and the Church Architectural Guild. They visited churches in many parts of Europe.

Talladega College, Alabama, will be 100 years old in 1967. Alumni have pledged $135,000 to the Centennial Endowment Fund, which will be used for teachers' salaries and student scholarships to further the training of leaders in education, according to Dr. Arthur D. Gray, president.

Rev. William Cousins, new pastor at South Norfolk, and Rev. S. K. Emurian, retired Presbyterian minister, were guest speakers at Rosemont, South Norfolk, September 10, when the pastor, Rev. Carroll Lewis, was in Liberty, North Carolina, assisting with the TRPM.

Christian Temple Pledges Additional $1,000.

Dear Friends:

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 2, 1961

In a recent letter from Dr. Frank A. Hamilton, minister of The Christian Temple, we were told that The Christian Temple had placed in its 1962 budget $1,000.00 for the third cottage at our Children's Home. This is the first such gift we have received from any of our churches specifically for the third cottage.

The Christian Temple is one of a growing number of churches that has completed its pledge on CHIP (Children's Home Improvement Program). We are hoping that there will be other churches that will follow the example set by The Temple. If those churches who have finished their pledge on CHIP would voluntarily make an additional pledge on our third cottage we could in the foreseeable future have this cottage.

Right now we are in the midst of finishing another stage of our CHIP Campaign — that is the remodeling of Johnston Hall. When the campaign was begun in 1960 it was hoped that two cottages could be erected, properly equipped, and that Johnston Hall could be remodeled and refurnished. This we have almost completed. We hope when this is finished and we have collected all our pledges on CHIP that we will have left a nucleus to begin our third cottage!

Then you see that if other churches or individuals are interested in our improvement program to the extent of making a voluntary pledge, this with what we have left from our present campaign could be enough to enable us to get our third cottage. This would put the Children's Home in good condition as far as facilities are concerned.

We are hoping very much that other churches, having completed their pledge on CHIP, will consider following the fine example set by Dr. Hamilton and his fine people of The Christian Temple.

Please remember November 4th. We hope you will be among those visiting our campus.

YOU ARE WANTED

By William Joyner

If you are trying to follow Jesus Christ, you should be in a Christian church. You should be there not only in name, but in bodily presence actively working and worshipping along with others who are trying to follow Christ. You should be there because you need what the Church has to offer.

God did not intend for Christians to live out their lives in isolation from other people of similar belief. If that had been his intention he would not have sent his Son into the world to establish and die for the Church. If you are physically able and within reach of a church it is God's will that you should be an active part of that or some other church. To neglect the Church or to scorn it as something unworthy of our presence is to despise something which Jesus Christ considered precious enough to die for. If you are a Christian then you are wanted in a Christian church. There is work to be done for the Kingdom of our God, and God means that we should do that work through His Church.

Some will say that their church is imperfect. Of course it is. The church has always been imperfect because it has always been made up of imperfect human beings like you and me. Even the individual of whom Christ said, "thou art Peter and upon this rock will I build my church," was far from perfect. Nevertheless, Christ saw fit to use such an individual and he is still using then today in the church.

If you are too good for the Church then you are too good for God, because God is still in the Church. But if you are willing to follow Jesus Christ along with others who are trying to do the same thing, then by all means stay with the church of your choice and serve God to the best of your ability therein.

N. C. Women's Conference Meets

Mrs. W. J. Andes

The North Carolina Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women held its annual fall Conference under most favorable conditions — good weather, good attendance, good food, and an excellent program. The women met at Pleasant Hill Church, on Tuesday, October 3, 10:00 a.m., with 249 registered, 1 visitor, 33 ministers' wives and 12 ministers.

The president, Mrs. J. R. Lackey, of Winston-Salem, presided over the day's program in an excellent manner. Registrations were taken by the Beverly Hills women in most orderly fashion.

Committee appointments for the day were: Resolutions, Chairman, Mrs. Sarah Kernodle; Place, Mrs. R. W. Isley, Chairman; and Nominations, Mrs. Quinton Hicks, Chairman.

The worship service, led by Mrs. David W. Shepherd, set the theme for the day, "Creating and Renewing the Church," ending with the group singing of Malotte's "Lord's Prayer."

Mrs. Edna Earl Randolph, of Burlington, gave a most able introduction to the Bible Study for the year, using the book of Corinthians. Mrs. Randolph gave some very helpful suggestions on planning the Bible study for the year.

Mrs. Thomas Madren and the District Chairman presented the work of the District Chairman, how she may be of help to local fellowships, and how we may help her.

The speaker of the morning was Mrs. Alfred Bartholomew, of Lancaster, Pa., who spoke on the theme for the day. Mrs. Bartholomew spoke vividly of a trip to Hong Kong, Japan, and other islands in the interest of mission work. She told of the opportunity for Christian missions, with the tremendous need for money and personnel. In our giving as church people for foreign missions, and in contributions from the United Nations for underprivileged peoples of the world, we are far behind what we should be doing and what is needed. The abundance of things in America is a sharp contrast to the needs in the world outside America.

The project of erecting an administration building at Moonelon was presented by Mrs. Robert Kimball. The offering for the day went to this project.

Mrs. Dan Jones climaxed the morning session with a solo, "Not My Will, but Thine."

In the afternoon session, Mrs. Robert Knowles presented the theme hymn, "Once to Every Man and Nation," explaining its origin and meaning.

History Highlights were presented by Mrs. James Rayburn, Recording Secretary, who gave some very interesting bits of happenings in the past year.

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, of Greensboro, presented the work of the Department Chairmen, using an illustrated fan as the symbol of the Women's Fellowship, and the topic, "Fan Into Flame the Gift Within You." The six department Chairmen spoke briefly of their plans for the year. Speaking for the chairmen were: Mrs. Robert Knowles, Mrs. Betty Garrard, Mrs. Carl Wallace, Miss Stella Stout, Mrs. Kenneth Register, and Mrs. Winfred Bray.

The Nominating Committee gave its report and the following officers were elected:

President — Mrs. R. M. Cline, Sanford, N. C.

First Vice President and Chairman of Friendly Service — Mrs. Walter Hall, Asheboro, N. C.

Second Vice President and Chairman of Spiritual Life — Miss Stella Stout, Sanford, N. C.

Recording Secretary — Mrs. James S. Rayburn, Walnut Gove, N. C.

Corresponding Secretary — Mrs. Max Vestal, Sanford, N. C.

Treasurer — Miss Susie Allen, 924 Williamson Dr., Raleigh, N. C.

Department Chairmen: (in addition to two listed above). Christian Education — Mrs. W. W. Snyder, Elon College, N. C.; Missionary Education — Mrs. Robert Knowles, Elon College, N. C.; Social Action — Mrs. Street Morgan, Asheboro, N. C., Route 1; Stewardship — Mrs. Winfred Bray, Route 2, Burlington, N. C.

Nominating Committee: Mrs. T. S. Earp, South Boston, Va.; Mrs. John G. Truitt, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. Dolan Talbert, Bennett, N. C.

The officers were installed by Rev. Reuben S. Askew, pastor of the host church, who used a candlelight consecration service very effectively.

The closing prayer was given by President-elect Mrs. R. M. Cline.

Council For Lay Life And Work

Dr. J. E. Danieleley (seated in center) was elected temporary chairman of the Council for Lay Life and Work when it held its first business meeting in Chicago, Illinois, September 27-29. He is also serving as president of the Laymen's Fellowship.

Presidents of the other three present lay organizations are also seated at the head of the table. To Dr. Danieleley's left is Miss Frances Kapitzky, of Strasburg, Ohio, president of The Women's Guild. On his right is Mrs. Robert Reneker of Chicago, president of the National Women's Fellowship. To her right is Theodore Schwalm of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, president of the Churchmen's Brotherhood. Southern Convention members on the Council, in addition to Dr. Danieleley, are Mrs. W. B. Williams and Mrs. F. C. Lester.

It is expected that a new pattern for work of the laity in the United Church of Christ will emerge as this Council for Lay Life and Work prepares a constitution, sets up plans for work, and chooses permanent officers and staff.

In the meantime, lay members of both Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed churches will continue work through the existing organizations. Wherever possible, churches of both groups are asked to work together in their planning. A meeting of conference and synod presidents of all four groups with the Council for Lay Life and Work is planned for the spring from which it is expected that joint patterns will result.

Conference Speaker

Rev. Nathanael Guptill, D.D.

Visiting speaker at the five conferences of the Southern Convention is to be Reverend Nathanael Guptill, Director of the Council for Church and Ministry of the United Church of Christ. Born in a Congregational parsonage at Deer Island, Maine, pastor of churches, teacher at Andover Newton Theological School, chaplain of the Maine State School for Boys, author of Christianity Does Make Sense and Contemporary Pastoral Prayers for the Christian Year, and a writer for The Christian Century from 1947 to 1957, Nathanael Guptill was a “natural” for an office in the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches where he has served since 1958 in the department of the Ministry and as associate secretary and minister.

He is a graduate of Coby College, Waterville, Maine, and Andover Newton. Coby College conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1959.

Conference meetings are as follows: Virginia Valley Central at Timber Ridge October 24 (no evening service; Eastern Virginia at The Christian Temple October 26 with an evening service at Rosemont at 7:30; Eastern North Carolina at Shallow Well with a 7:30 evening service there; Western North Carolina at Flint Hill (R) with an evening service (7:30) at Sophia; and the North Carolina and Virginia at Belews Creek with a 7:30 evening service.

Here And There Among The Churches

Rev. John de Sousa, minister of men and missions for the Connecticut Conference, will be the guest speaker for Church Mission Week, November 15-19, at Elon College Community Church. Services will be at 7:30 p.m.

Sunday evening services are now being held at Rosemont, South Fork, at 7:30. Mid-week Bible study services are held Wednesday 7:15-8:00. I Corinthians, the Bible study for the Women's Fellowship, is being used for the subject.

World-Wide Communion was observed at Fuller's Chapel with the pastor, Rev. Frank Apple, officiating. Lunch was enjoyed in the basement of the church, and a church conference was held in the afternoon. J. E. Briggs was elected deacon to replace T. T. Beckham, who passed away last spring. Name of the church was changed to Fuller Chapel (United Church of Christ).

"The answer from the Bible and from Christian faith is that both the material and the spiritual are real, are necessary and are good. The Bible is a spiritual book, yes; it is also definitely a materialistic book. Christianity is a spiritual religion, yes; it is also the most materialistic religion there is. It speaks of earthy, practical things. Is not the essence of the Christian faith that God was in Christ? And does not one of the Gospel writers tell this story by saying that "the Word became flesh?" Christianity is both material and spiritual. Life has both material and spiritual meanings. Man is both a material and a spiritual being."

Grand Rapids, Michigan, is the scene this week of meetings of the Midwest Regional Meeting, United Church Board for World Ministries, the National Women's Fellowship, and the Council for Lay Life and Work of the United Church of Christ. Mrs. F. C. Lester is among those attending.

Women's Fellowship of the Virginia Valley Central Conference will meet at Bethlehem Wednesday of next week, October 25. The annual Conference meets at Timber Ridge the day before, and the Eastern Virginia Conference will meet the day after, which is October 26.

PLYMOUTH HOLDS REVIVAL

Sandra Ogburn, Reporter

Revival services at Plymouth, Route 3, Raleigh, North Carolina, were held during the week of August 24, 1961. Rev. Gale Brady, pastor of the Liberty (Vance) church, Henderson, North Carolina, was the guest speaker. The revival was a wonderful success and each one received a spiritual blessing.

TRPM IN EVA

Clyde L. Fields

Attendance at the Christian Temple was 803. Several of the 14 churches participating held all night prayer vigil Saturday, October 7. Holland church held a 52 hour prayer vigil beginning Friday noon and continuing until Sunday at 10:00 a.m. Fifty-two people spent one hour each in prayer at church for the TRPM at Holland.

Bible study held each morning by ministers — Dr. Happel, leader — spirit of Evangelism is moving churches in wonderful way — wonderful spirit manifested.

First Congregational Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., received three members October 8. Attendance goal for the previous Sunday was 100, and the number present was 115. Sermon topic of the minister, Rev. Daniel A. Bowers, was "The Cure of Discouragement."

Mr. E. W. Neville of Chapel Hill tells us the information in the Sun recently about his subscription was inaccurate. He subscribed for this church paper the second Sunday in August, 1898. It has been in his family since the first issue published by Rev. Mr. Kerr.

The new Mission Village church, San Diego, California, now has a membership of 370. Average attendance for September was 321 for church, 211 for church school and 47 for youth fellowship and the average offering was $476.86 per Sunday.

WHAT IS THE PRELUDE FOR?

Preludes are for prayer. Usually we come to the house of the Lord to worship. There has been, perhaps, much hurrying and scurrying to get ready for church — our children are tired — our tempers are on edge — the traffic was heavy. As we enter the church we first have the prelude on the program. It is a quiet time. It is not meant to be a background of music against which we can chat with our friends. If we let it, it helps create an attitude of prayer — a feeling of peace — a sense of nearness to God. If you must whisper, whisper a prayer, for preludes are for prayer.

Personality Factors

By R. C. Helfenstein
Ormond Beach, Florida

A strong personality is that indefinable something that makes for power, influence, happiness and success. A strong personality is an individual's greatest asset. It largely determines one's position and status in life, and one's contribution to progress and the common good.

It is so all-important that every individual should covet its possession and labor assiduously for its attainment.

Following are a few of the many factors that make for a strong personality, namely: knowledge, efficiency, sincerity, goodness, genuineness, idealism, conviction, honesty, altruism, ambition, enthusiasm, gratefulness, humility, bravery, caution, carefulness, hopefulness, discrimination, a sense of humor, modesty, gallantry, fidelity, loyalty, trustworthiness, initiative, stability, sobriety, graciousness, reciprocation, forbearance, naturalness, dependableness, courtesy, conciliatoriness, pleasantness, cooperation, fairness, industriousness, modesty, poise, self-control, gentleness, kindness, sympathy, open-mindedness, alertness, promptness, appreciation, diligence, purposefulness, faith, patience, social-mindedness, winsomeness, world-mindedness, religion, Christ-likeness.

And every person has the privilege and power of determining how much of each of these factors he or she shall have going into the masonry of their own personality.

Mrs. Claire L. Stearn, Reporter

The Women's Fellowship of Beulah Congregational Christian Church of Keezletown, Virginia, has finished a most successful year, under the leadership of Mrs. Claire L. Stearn. Theme for the year was "The Mission of the Church: Unity, Witness and Service."

Our Fellowship was organized March 26, 1958, with 12 charter members. We are the youngest Fellowship in the Conference. We have been very highly commended for accomplishing so much in a very short time. Our meetings have shown friendliness, love, and a desire to work together in unity and service for God and our fellowman. We have good attendance. We owe much of our success to our counsellor and advisor, Mrs. E. J. Rohart. We are indeed very grateful to her for her splendid leadership.

Our required Bible study was completed and led by Mrs. Rohart. Interesting programs have been presented each month, using materials from the packet.

Our friendly service quota was met promptly, and an appropriate dedication service was led by Mrs. Agnes Armentrout, our friendly service chairman.

We observed World Day of Prayer and May Fellowship Day. Five of our members attended the annual Women's Conference, and six the Spring Rally at New Hope where we had charge of the afternoon worship service.

A Life Membership was presented to the writer and a memorial was given in honor of Mrs. Cora Frances Sites. Certificates were presented by Mrs. Virginia Michael, stewardship chairman.

Our apportionment was increased from $20.00 to $50.00. We installed acoustical tile ceiling in the church at a cost of $666.62. We served many Ruritan suppers, luncheons, sales, etc. to add to our income.

Other activities included a contribution of $5.00 for food in Lebanon, $2.50 for migrant ministry, $2.50 for a mixer at Elon College, and $5.74 for a first aid kit as a project of World Community Day which was observed with the E. U. B. church of Keezletown.

The following officers for the coming year were installed at the September meeting: President, Mrs. Gladys Pfamatter; Vice President, Mrs. Lola Dorman; Secretary, Mrs. Lolene Armentrout; Treasurer, Mrs. Mary Billhimer; and Reporter, Mrs. Claire Stearn. Department chairmen are Mrs. Clara Laymen for Christian education; Mrs. Claire Stearn, spiritual life; Mrs. Lenora Tibbins, missionary education; Mrs. Virginia Michael, stewardship; and Mrs. Mary Billhimer, social action. Mrs. Rohart led the very impressive installation service.

The Woman's Gift was dedicated at the November meeting in an impressive service led by Mrs. Virginia Michael.

A project for the new year is a carpet for the church. We are expecting a successful year under the leadership of Mrs. Pfamatter as president and the others who will gladly share in the work.

Lord teach us to speak thy word of hope and cheer,
Direct us, cleanse and commission us,
To proclaim his holy Word throughout the year.

THINK ON THESE THINGS

My greatest loss — to lose my soul.
My greatest gain — Christ the savior.
My greatest object — to glorify God.
My greatest crown — to win souls for Christ.
My greatest influence — the right kind of a life.
My greatest joy — salvation by grace.
My greatest inheritance — heaven and its glory.
My greatest victory — over death through Christ.
My greatest bargain — to lose all to win Christ.
My greatest decision — for Christ and the Church.
My greatest investment — time, talent and money through the church.
My greatest reward — "Well done" from the lips of Christ.
(Mrs. Bobby Hamilton, Piney Plain Christian Church, sent the above, which has been meaningful to her.)

Words To Ponder . . .

Cooperation should be the watchword of every intelligent and civic-minded person. But cooperation to be truly effective must come through a sympathetic understanding, and the avenue through which that understanding must pass is a heart dedicated to unselfish purposes and worthy pursuits. It is not what we do for ourselves that counts most in the realm of success and happiness, but how much we do for others and how well we cooperate for their welfare and happiness.

Conference, Or Another Meeting?

Beginning next Tuesday Congregational Christian people in five different areas of North Carolina and Virginia will meet in annual session of what for a century have been called Conferences. The Christian Sun makes bold to ask, Will they be conferences, or just other meetings? There is a difference.

People who have something in common get together to confer. They talk about their common interests, and try to find ways in which they can be mutually helpful. This is an important phase of church work. There are no dictators to pass along orders to slaves who must obey. In the Church which Christ is building in our world, all people are equal, for they are all the children of God, redeemed by Christ. They are all commissioned to "make disciples of all the nations." For such a group it is exceedingly important to get together for conferences.

They need to strengthen the faith of each other, know just what the others are doing, and they are more successful when they plan united efforts.

All too often the would be "conferences" are simply other meetings. Little preparation has been made either by the leaders or the delegates. Reports of successes and failures are inadequate. No clear-cut vision of future plans is presented, and no definite undertakings are scheduled. There is little inspiration, and less education, in such meetings. Conference programs can be just as they were "in the beginning," or they can sparkle with life, bubble with enthusiasm, and send the conferees back home ready to tackle real problems of spiritual growth and missionary endeavor.

Which will yours be, a conference, or another meeting?

World Order In A Confused World

It is interesting that there is one Sunday in the Church Calendar called World Order Sunday. Sorter shocks you to think of that, doesn't it? The world is a big place, and almost everything seems to be out of order. Moreover, is it the business of the Church to set the world in order? Doesn't it have plenty to do to keep itself in order?

Let's look at the matter from another angle. Who else can bring order out of the chaos of our time?

Nations have tried it only to be told in no uncertain terms that they were meddling in the internal affairs of another state. The United Nations, said to be the world's best hope for peace, has tried it and found itself bogged down in war. Individuals have arisen with grandiose schemes for remaking the world. Hitler thought that his plan would last for a thousand years; but it failed in his own short life-time.

One reason such schemes fail is that they are based on force alone. They undertake to make people do what the leader wants. And people are not made to fit such a pattern. There are "unalienable rights" which all people have, and which they will not give up easily. The spirit of freedom may be in bondage for a spell, but it always finds release.

Now, the Church undertakes to find what is best for people in whatever circumstance they may be, and then it tries to help those people in their efforts to get the good things of life. This is illustrated by missionaries. They do not go to a backward people with authority to force them into a mold which is unusual — though they have been accused of such effort. On the contrary the good missionary helps the sick to be well, the ignorant to get new insights into life, and the sinful to find release from bad habits and spiritual fears. The new life is something to be sought by the individuals, or groups, that want it.

The Church practices and dispenses the Christian religion. It directs people of all races and nations to the Creator, who in himself is orderly and whose creation operates according to dependable laws. There is no confusion in the realm where God abides.

Confusion comes from either not knowing how to live in an orderly fashion, or from desires that conflict. Some people have not learned to live an orderly life. They try to strike out in all directions at once, and have as much trouble as an autoist who tries to start from a cross-roads in all directions. Others are mixed in their desires. Perhaps it is a desire for great wealth and honesty that conflict. Or it may be purity of character and physical passion that cannot seem to fit into one personality. A generous nation wants to help other struggling nations reach a higher plane, but it also wants friends who will always take its side in an argument or war. This leads to confusion.

Local churches, conferences, national and international church bodies are all attempts to bring together people in understanding and in mutual concerns for the world in which we live. The Church, standing at the foot of the Cross, hears and then echoes these marvelous words: "God so loved the world that he gave . . . that whosoever . . . might have everlasting life," life that is orderly in a world that is not confused.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL INTEREST IN SAFETY

The writer of this feature article died September 25. As was his custom, he planned ahead. We will continue the feature as long as the articles last.—Ed.

It is interesting to observe the increasing number of local churches that are including safety slogans in their bulletins with emphasis on safe automobile driving and timely cautions to pedestrians.

Many schools are also becoming increasingly interested in safety as evidenced by the 26,000 boys and girls from half the States who marched in the 25th National School Safety Patrol parade in Washington in May of this year. Some of their slogans were quite modern, such as "If you cross in haste, you may be the next man in space", and "To rocket into space is better by far, than to be pitched up there by a moving car".

When the automobile is snuffing out nearly 40,000 lives each year, leaving a like number of persons maimed, and property damage totaling untold millions, helping to save lives is soul-saving business for local churches and extra educational opportunity for schools.

Pedestrian deaths account for about 43 percent of the country's motor vehicle fatalities, and most deaths so attributed have been due to the failure of walkers to observe regulations promulgated for their protection.

The majority of drivers know the rules and in most cases observe them. Pedestrians also know the rules but they are wont to apply them only when it is convenient, or when they realize they are in immediate danger. Unsuspected happenings do not seem to bother the majority of people who negotiate traffic on foot.

There is a difference between a jaywalker and other pedestrians. A jaywalker is a pedestrian infected with rugged individualism. He wants to be alone in his feverish pursuit of the shortest distance between two points, with no one to tell him when or where to go or to stop. If he can sneak through traffic when the officer is looking the other way, or negotiate it boldly when there is no officer in sight, he chalks up the achievement as a personal triumph. The few seconds he saves may never amount to much, but he seeks to save these few seconds just the same. His argument falls short of reason when he lands in a hospital or under the sod.

Some pedestrians are handicapped in their pursuit of the precious second by age or feeble legs, while others have a natural respect for rules as well as for their own skins. They want to remain alive.

The United States Supreme Court has decreed that a pedestrian may continue crossing the street provided he started when the lights were in his favor. But the decision becomes academic when the pedestrian, half-way across the street, sees a horde of motor cars bearing down on him, or when his rights have made him a victim of traffic. His equal rights with those of drivers seldom give him the courage to argue for those rights in the middle of the street.

Since this is written to encourage churches to unite with schools in a relentless campaign against the death and maiming of persons by motor vehicles, it is well to remember that a church member or a school child can be destroyed by someone who has not learned that alcohol and gas when improperly used can create disasters beneficial only to undertakers.

SAY IT RIGHT... WRITE IT RIGHT

Dark complected and light complected are incorrect; no such word as complected; say his complexion is dark, or light, as the case may be.

"While it may be convenient to have you come..." writes as executive. Wrong, for while means at the same time. He should have written: "Although it may be convenient..." Although means notwithstanding.

"The director was requested to advise Mr. Blank about the committee's position." As Mr. Blank had not asked for advice, the director should have been requested to inform Mr. Blank about the committee's position.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

It was my good fortune to be able to attend not only the N. C. Women's Conference at Pleasant Hill (which was capably reported last week by Carey Andes), but also the Eastern Virginia Women's Conference at The Christian Temple, Norfolk, October 5.

One of the "highlights" of the meeting was the history written by Mrs. Lillie Stagg, and the "citation" and gift presented to her by Tudor Williams from the Eastern Virginia women as she finishes some 20 years of service. As someone said afterwards, "She is a gracious, Christian southern gentlewoman."

Another "highlight" was the manner in which the reports of the district chairmen and the department chairmen were presented — with gardening tools, wearing gardening hats (and very becoming they were!) and using figures of speech concerning planting, cultivating, and reaping a harvest, they gave reports which were different. For instance, Jennie Spratley, stewardship chairman talked about "thyme" which needs to be tended carefully in the garden, and the "money plant" which is sensitive and needs to be watered with care so that it will develop in the right way.

Of course, the highest "highlight," as one would expect, was the speech on "Creating and Renewing the Church" by Joyce Bartholomew. Mrs. Bartholomew, from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where her husband is on the faculty of the seminary, has that rare combination of beauty and brains — and both were used to good effect! She told of events of their family year in Japan, and of the necessity for personal renewal on the part of Christians and the renewal of the Church in this time of great world turmoil.

Mrs. Booth is to be especially commended for the fine job she did on the report book, including in it not just the usual reports but also dates to remember, information concerning the year's work, and a president's report which could well be used by every local group in reporting on this fine day.

News As Reported By The Convention Office

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference Laymen's Fellowship held its annual meeting at Elon College September 29, at 7:00 o'clock P. M. Following the fellowship banquet, the meeting was called to order by outgoing president, E. Irving Anderson. Mr. Anderson has served for the past two years in a most efficient and capable manner.

The evening prayer was offered by Clarence Willis of the Third Avenue Church, Danville, Virginia.

Dr. Fletcher Moore, dean of Elon College, gave a note of welcome to all the laymen assembled. In his remarks, Dean Moore indicated that 976 students are enrolled in the day classes at Elon College this year, including 550 dormitory students. Nearly 400 students are enrolled in the evening classes of Elon College. Dean Moore pointed out that five foreign students are enrolled at Elon, one each from Brazil, Cuba, Jordan, Israel, and Turkey. It was pointed out that two honors have come to Dr. J. Earl Danieley, president of Elon College, recently. Dr. Danieley has been elected a delegate to the International Congregational Council, at Amsterdam, Holland, July 3-12, 1962. Dr. Danieley has also been elected chairman of the Council on Lay Life and Work of the United Church of Christ.

The main address of the evening was brought by Dr. Harvey A. Fesperman, president of the Southern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. Dr. Fesperman challenged the men to their responsibilities as Christian men in these trying and difficult times. The benediction was given by Mr. W. E. Abernathy of the Third Avenue Church, Danville, Virginia.

Over 100 men enjoyed the annual gathering of the Laymen's Fellowship of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

At a meeting of the Historical Society of the Southern Convention on September 27, at Elon College, several matters of concern for the history of our Southern Convention were brought to the attention of the Board. It was reported that O'Kelly's Chapel has been re-painted and made more attractive. The grounds have been cleared somewhat and grass has been sown on the lawn of O'Kelly's Chapel. Many of us will remember that O'Kelly's Chapel was established by the founder of the Christian Church, Rev. James O'Kelly. Many of us will remember when the Christian Church was a denomination before merging with the Congregational Church in 1931. This church holds for many of us a significance relative to a sense of pride in our history as a former Christian Church. Perhaps the Convention should visit the site of O'Kelly's Chapel and the cemetery, where Dr. James O'Kelly is buried. The cemetery is some distance from the church, but is accessible to all who would care to visit the site.

It was also brought to the attention of the Historical Society that the Southern Convention should give attention to the need for establishing a shrine at the site of Old Lebanon Church in Surry County, Virginia. It is believed that this is the spot where the Rev. Rice Haggard stood in a meeting and said, "Christian is a sufficient name for the church." Perhaps the people of the Eastern Virginia Conference, as well as all the Conferences of the Southern Convention, would make it a matter of concern as we seek to preserve the history sacred and dear to so many of us.

It was also decided that at some future time Mrs. Oma Johnson, Curator of the Church History Room, might attend Conferences or local churches and bring some of the historical items preserved in the Church History Room. All of our people of the Southern Convention are reminded of the opportunity we have of visiting the Church History Room on the second floor of the Library building at Elon College, at our convenience.

The Church History Room is made possible by the Southern Convention, Elon College, and the Historical Society joining together in providing salary for Mrs. Oma Johnson as Curator of the Church History Room. The extension of the work of the Historical Society is made possible by memberships in the Southern Convention Historical Society. It is called to the attention of the people of the Southern Convention who are already members that it is time to pay dues for 1961-62. Perhaps many would wish to send a $10.00 membership to Mrs. Oma Johnson, Church History Room, Elon College, N. C.

Rev. Clyde L. Fields, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, has been nominated by the Executive Board of the Convention to be a delegate to the International Congregational Council, meeting in Amsterdam, Holland, July 3-12, 1962. A total of 37 delegates and 37 associate delegates from Congregational Christian Churches in the United States will be a part of a large gathering of Congregational people from all over the world.

A Church and a College Build Together

A CHAPEL

To the Glory of God, and to the Spiritual Growth of His Children

Southern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church (The United Church of Christ) has, through Divine guidance, committed itself to the task of erecting on the campus of Catawba College, Salisbury, North Carolina,

A Temple Of Worship

where students may commune with their God, and thus understand and accept the undeniable truth that this IS —"a purposeful universe with God as its Source and Sustainer"

—"and that human life in its totality is a trust from God to be cultivated and used to His glory and in keeping with His will."

VOCATIONAL TRAINING IN LEBANON

The problems in Lebanon are not essentially different from those faced by other countries in the Middle East. A million people have been displaced from their homes since 1948 and have been drifting along for 13 years in angry exile. They are looking to the United Nations and to the world at large for a just and permanent solution of their plight.

Their needs are many. They especially need vocational training. Few boys have a chance for secondary education. There are very few vocational training centers.

A LETTER TO THE READER

"If I come back," wrote a Marine to his Mother eighteen years ago, "the church and the Bible will mean more to us when ever in our lives," — a decision made in danger, but made when the mind and soul were stripped of all things superfluous.

The American Bible Society is again calling upon all those who have said to themselves, "I will reach higher; I will look deeper; I will be truer," to join the Worldwide Bible Reading program in a united fellowship of reading the Bible daily from Thanksgiving to Christmas.

The Society believes that reason alone cannot answer all of a man's questions. Man reaches for freedom and gains the right to make a choice. Then he finds choice is father to responsibility.

The choices you make are more important than you think. You cannot escape the fact that they will shape the world of your children's children.

Your responsibility is to seek the best in your world and make the best decisions for it. Renew your faith at the source. Read and reread the Holy Bible.

Join the millions around the world, who, on Thanksgiving Day, will open their Bibles and read, "Know ye that the Lord he is God; it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture..." Lady Skipper of "Morning Star" Is Home For 70th Birthday

Miss Eleanor Wilson of Cambridge, lady skipper of the famed missionary Morning Stars in the South Sea islands, has come home to celebrate her 70th birthday but not to retire.

Miss Wilson, an ordained Congregational Christian minister, has just returned to the United States after 36 years of missionary service and will leave in November to become minister of the Koolau Hau'ia Church in Kauai, Hawaii.

She will be 70 on November 3.

Back in Cambridge Sunday school days, Eleanor Wilson herself gave pennies toward the Morning Star V, little thinking that one day she would be skipping its descendants.

After Cambridge Latin school, a secretarial course at Simmons, and a stint in the business world, Miss Wilson did an about-face, decided she was headed in the wrong direction and that she would be a church worker, not a secretary.

She entered the Biblical Seminary in New York and three years later signed up as a career missionary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, now a part of the United Church Board for World Ministries.

After eight years in Japan the mission board recalled her in 1933 to serve in its offices in Boston. One of her duties was to find new missionaries for tough assignments. A particularly tough one to fill, she found, was in the Caroline Islands. She decided to fill it herself. In 1936, a year when the mission board was hard pressed for funds, she paid her way over and supported herself on $150.00 during her first year.

She has taught in mission schools in Kusaie, Truk and Ponape in the eastern Carolines and at Jaluit, Uliga and Rong Rong in the Marshalls.

One day, in the midst of mimeographing Sunday school lessons, she received a message saying that the missionary who had been skipping the Morning Star VI was called home and asking her to take over the job. She suddenly found herself in one of the world's smallest minorities — lady missionaries who are also sea captains.

Forcing back her fear of the treacherous waters, she pored over Mixer's Primer of Navigation, got some valuable tips from a U. S. Navy pilot and presented herself as captain to the horrified crew of the Morning Star.

The ship at the dock bore little resemblance to the neat diagrams in the textbook. The sails hung in tatters. The engine had broken down, as had the generator. The chronometer gained time one day, lost it the next.

Operating on the stateside principle that what is out of order will be fixed, she ordered a new sail from Honolulu, requested the machinery to be repaired, and awaited developments.

There were none. The sail didn't come. The engine was not repaired. Pace in the islands is slow. Mission work fell behind.

"We'll take her out as she is," she pronounced.

And take her out they did, a six-man crew and Miss Wilson at the helm.

They learned much from each other. From Miss Wilson the crew observed first-hand the astonishing courage of this remarkable woman. From the crew Miss Wilson learned the ancient lore of men whose ancestors had for generations maneuvered their craft around the tiny islands.

"The Marshallese are wonderful sailors," she says. "They can tell at a glance by the color of the water how many feet it is down to the

MEXICO

October

22—Work in Mexico began in 1872 with centers in Guadalajara and the West Coast and union work in Mexico City. During the hard years of the anti-religious movement the eleven churches carried on. There are schools at Guadalajara and Mazatlan and social centers and clinics in Guadalajara.

Guadalajara

23—Mr. and Mrs. John Howe do a variety of things — administrative, educational. He was marine officer, business man and teacher before deciding to become career missionary. She was a nurse and pre-school teacher and works with social centers. Guadalajara is second largest city in Mexico with population of 750,000.

Tepic

24—Rev. and Mrs. Malcolm Hayes are in their third term of service. He has been named Superintendent by the Mexican churches. He specializes in encouraging churches to take responsibility, in the development of stewardship, and in enriching musical life of the churches.

25—Rev. and Mrs. William Felts Keeney joined the Mexican missionaries in 1957. He emphasizes Christian education in the churches, she (Marion Gleason) supervises the boarding house for young men in Tepic. Since teaching religion is illegal, one finds in such a "home" atmosphere opportunity for Christian influence.

INDIA

THE AMERICAN EVANGELICAL MISSION

26—The Evangelical and Reformed work in India began nearly 100 years ago in the Chattisgarh region of Madhya Pradesh, with Rev. Oscar Lohr in 1868 began his "Village of Fest" and did evangelistic and educational work among jungle people. The area is size of Connecticut and has 4,000,000 mostly rural people, among whom 11,000 are now Christians.

Orissa

27—Rev. and Mrs. Armin Meyer went to India in 1921 and since that time have continued to open new fields and start new churches. He is also trained in dentistry and she in midwifery. He is now responsible for opening a new field among the Khonds, a hill tribe that formerly practiced human sacrifice.

28—Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Schneider have recently gone out to help carry on work started by the Meyers. He is specializing in agricultural extension and evangelism. She is a medical technician, specializing in nutrition and health.

coral head and whether we should go over that spot or around it."

In a 1000-island parish, a boat is as necessary as a Bible. While the land area of Micronesia is only the size of tiny Rhode Island, its sea area is as big as the entire United States. Micronesia ("little islands") includes the Gilbert, Marshall, Caroline and Marianna Islands.

The Morning Stars have a New England family tree. All but one of the century-old line of missionary vessels sailed east from Boston harbors to serve the peoples of these far-off isles.

The Morning Star VI followed proudly, if shakily, in the wake of her predecessors. Miss Wilson talked about head winds, mainsails, and diesel engines as freely as most suburban ladies talk about recipes.

Then one day, while Miss Wilson was on Ponape, a ferocious storm whipped through the islands and the tired, aging Star sank while being towed from Kusaie to Majuro. She now lies on the bottom of the sea, an estimated two miles beneath the surface.

Eleanor Wilson was beached. Undaunted, she took to the air with the U. S. Navy, when they were going her way; hitched rides in outrigger canoes, and tried, one way or another, to get where she had to go.

When her work began to bog down in a snarl of transportation delays, she packed her bags and came back to the United States for a whirlwind speaking tour. Money marked "Morning Star" began to arrive at the board offices at 14 Beacon Street.

A trim 60-foot ketch was located in Tokyo and after careful inspection by Henry VanLent Baay, a Marblehead, Mass., shipbuilder, it joined the ranks of the historic "floating churches" as Morning Star VII.

In a typhoon in 1958 the Star was dragged from its mooring and tossed onto an island five miles from her home base.

The Marshallese did their best to get the boat into the water, but had no success.

Then the U. S. Navy arrived. With bulldozer, block and tackle and other equipment they got her back into the water.

"We owe our unbounded thanks to the Navy," Miss Wilson says. "God bless these young men."

Shortly before leaving the islands in August the white-haired lady in a sun-bleached cotton dress stood at attention at a commissioning service for a ship presented by the Navy to the Sea Scouts in the area. The name blazoned across its gleaming hull: EE Eleanor Wilson.

During World War II Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations in the Pacific, said, "We have seen the enduring evidence of the Morning Star missionaries... We are proud to follow their trails, only sorry that we cannot do so with their weapons."

Asking the war-battered islanders what they most needed, he heard the reply, "Send us back our missionaries."

Miss Wilson was the first one back. Now, nearing 70, Miss Wilson still isn't ready for those recipes. She's heading out again, this time for Hawaii and a new church. Leaving the United States November 24, after a visit to a supporting church in Florida, she will assume her new duties December 1.

While in the United States Miss Wilson is staying with a brother, Dr. Perrin T. Wilson, 1626 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge. Dr. Wilson served as an osteopathic physician for the late John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Mrs. Rockefeller. Mrs. Rockefeller gave $500,000 to the Kirksville College of Osteopathy in Kirksville, Missouri, to establish a chair in his name.

She has two other brothers, Dr. Edwin Bidwell Wilson, noted scientist who for many years was head of the physics department of M.I.T., and Dr. Theodore H. Wilson, president of Baltimore University in Maryland, and a sister, Dr. Jane W. Hall, a physician, living in Mapleton, Maine, near Presque Isle.

Miss Wilson's work has been supported over the years by the Park Street (Congregational) Church in Boston; the Congregational Christian Church, Winter Park, Florida, and North Congregational Church, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The United Church of Christ was formed by union of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Miss Wilson offers three pieces of advice to young people just starting out:

1. Learn everything you can about as many fields as possible. You never know when in life you may need that information.

2. Never allow yourself to be hurt by what anyone says to you. You are the only one who will suffer by it.

3. Keep your sense of humor.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

GRATITUDE TO GOD

"Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name." Psalm 103:1.

This is indeed a meditative Psalm. The gratitude expressed in it, the reasons for that gratitude, the timely cautions and reminders, the assurance of God's sovereignty, and the pointing up the joy of hearkening unto the voice of his word, and the doing of his pleasure.

What beautiful music it has made, and what sweet choral singing has come from it down across the centuries! How it stirs the best, and deepest, and quietest within us! "Forget not all his benefits!" How about that! Just to sit down and thank him for the forgiveness he has shown you, and the times he has blessed you with the healing he has sent, is good.

"Who redeemeth thy life from destruction." Perhaps the close call on the highway that day was not half so hazardous as some word, or thought, or deed, from which you might have been saved. "And crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies." "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

Yes, those who revere him, honor him, love him — and those who try, for his mercy plenteous and gracious!

However, watch it, "He will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger forever." His laws are not only written in your Book; but also in your body, mind, and spirit. You may persist in being ugly and end up!

"His Kingdom ruleth over all." Look at Jesus! Be his witness in life and word, and deed; and have cause to say anew: "Bless the Lord, O my soul." Amen.

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Pilgrim Fellowship And UCYM

By Rosemary Hoffmann
National Fellowship Chairman

Coming in contact with youth groups in other denominations is an important aspect of the life of every P. F. Through discussions with others, we gain new ideas and new insight into the mission of the entire church in the world. As more young people began to see the need for and benefit of contacts with other denominations, the United Christian Youth Movement (UCYM) was brought into being. The purpose of the movement is to bring young people of all denominations together to participate in unity through a cooperative witness.

Beyond the Local Church

First of all, we need to explore our faith and the philosophy behind our actions. A great deal of this exploration can be done within the P. F. itself. However, at a certain point, it becomes necessary for us to go beyond our own thoughts and denominational training to see what others think and why. Doing this may involve meeting with the youth groups of one or two churches or it may mean a whole series of discussions and study sessions involving young people from churches all over town.

United Action

After exploration comes action. Through exploration we often find that many of the youth groups are carrying on the same, or similar, projects. Many of these projects are best done in small groups; however, others would be more effective if carried on, or at least organized, by a larger group. For instance "Trick-or-Treat For UNICEF" is most effectively carried out, if done by several groups working together. First of all, publicity can be done more effectively because there will be no duplication of effort. Also, in going from house to house, each group can take a different section of town so that the whole community is exposed to the project and has a chance to participate in it.

The Youth Council

In order to bring youth groups in the community together for study and action, many towns (or counties, if it is a rural area) have formed local UCYM Councils which consist of representatives from each church in the community. The councils usually hold regular meetings to discuss mutual problems, bring up special concerns, and plan for action in pertinent areas of concern. If you are interested in knowing more about UCYM and/or forming a local council, write to:

Workday For Christ, October 21

Louise Harrell
Action Co-Chairman

I'm one of your action co-chairmen. My fellow chairman is Jesse Weaver. Jesse and I were elected action chairmen in August, at Officers' Camp. We are from the same school, church, and community. I would like to thank everyone for electing Jesse and me to this office, and I'm sure that we will both strive to do a worthy job.

One of the duties of the action chairmen is Workday for Christ. Saturday, October 21, has been set aside as Workday for Christ this year. This is a day, when young people devote themselves, their time, and their labor to working at regular or odd jobs, turning the money that they earn over to denominational charities. It is an honest effort to work for Christ, and to help people, far and wide, by giving our donation to OUR CHRISTIAN WORLD MISSION.

What is Our Christian World Mission? It stands for all of the phases of mission giving in Pilgrim Fellowship; the total program of Congregational Christian churches to help people everywhere in the United States, Africa, India — no matter where they are, or who they are.

Maybe you are wondering what your money will be used for if you participate in Workday for Christ. You should send your money to your conference treasurer, who will send it in to the Southern Convention. Here your money will be credited to five different accounts.

1. 40% of the money goes to Board of Home Missions for a broad program of aid to churches and educational institutions through leadership, publications, and grants of money.

2. Another 40% will go to American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. In 14 countries, to help establish and strengthen the church and bring abundant life.

3. 15% will go to the Congregational Christian Service Committee for relief and reconstruction wherever and whenever disaster strikes at home or abroad.

4. 5% will go to Council for Social Action to maintain its program of education in the areas of race relations, international relations, legislation, agriculture, and labor.

A Parent's Prayer

Lord, help me to guide, talk with and gently advise my children.

But stay my hand and tongue enough so that

The decision of a life work will be entirely theirs.

And if their choice is not the way I'd chose for them,

Help me to accept their decision without regret, and put each one

Entirely in thy care.
Amen.

C. E. WORKSHOP FOR PRE-SCHOOL LEADERS

Saturday, October 21, there will be an all-day session at Camp Moonelon, Elon College, for pre-school teachers and leaders from local churches. The schedule below gives an idea of the content of the session. Bring this to the attention of your pre-school leaders, and let us know how many we may expect. The cost of the lunch will be included in the total fee of $1.00, and places may be reserved by writing to Miss Ruth Dunn, Box 336, Elon College, N. C.

Persons who attend this workshop ought to come with notebook and pencil, an open mind, a desire to learn, a willingness to share, and with a smock or old shirt that will enable them to plunge wholeheartedly into some of the creative activities that will be suggested and demonstrated. We'll look for you!

The Church And Christian Growth

Background Scripture: I Corinthians 12:12-27.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 3:8-20.

Memory Selection: The whole body . . . when each part is working properly, makes bodily growth, and upbuilds itself in love. Ephesians 4:16. (RSV)

Paul was undoubtedly divinely inspired when he referred to the Church as a "BODY WITH MANY MEMBERS." He could hardly have found a more apt analogy for the Church than that. And of course, the significant fact is that he referred to the Church, not simply as a body, but as THE BODY OF CHRIST! What a dignity that fact gives to church membership! When a person stands at the altar of a church and sincerely confesses Christ as Saviour and commits himself to Christ, he becomes a member of the Body of Christ! What other organization or institution dares say that? Christ is the Head of the Church. The Church is the Body of Christ. What an intriguing picture that conjures up! Here is an organism — the Church essentially is an organism and not an organization — with many, many members, united for the common good of every member, with Christ as its Head. Paul sums up his description of the Church with the bold assertion "Now ye are the body of Christ, members in particular." (vs 27.)

Many Members, Much Diversity

Just as the body has many members, and yet all the members are one, just so does the Church have many members, and yet all the members make one body, the Body of Christ. When one looks casually at the Church he is impressed perhaps first of all by its amazing and sometimes confusing diversity. Have you ever thought of the many kinds of people in your church? What a diversity they present! Lawyers, bankers, doctors, clerks, schoolboys and schoolgirls, day-laborers, noisy people, quiet people, kind and unkind people, hard-working and lazy people, learned and unlearned people, good people and bad people, orthodox and unorthodox people, active people and inactive people. Think of the wide differences in theological views held by the people even of your own church.

To this diversity in the people of one church, think of the equal diversity in other areas of the Church. Diversities in denominational beliefs and customs and procedures. Diversities in church architecture, forms of service, creeds, conception of the life and work of the Church. Think of the colors of the members of the Church of Christ in its inclusive sense — white, black, yellow, brown and red, with all the intermediate colors represented. All colors, classes, cultures, creeds, conditions, countries — even Russians are included — an amazing diversity in the members of the Church, the Body of Christ, in an amazing number of ways. Paul was right, just as the body has many members, just so does the Church have many members.

One Body An Essential Unity

When one comes to think of it, however, the most striking thing, certainly the most significant thing, about the matter, is not the diversity of the Church, but THE UNITY OF THE CHURCH. Many members, but only one Body. "But now are they many members, yet only one body." (vs 20). THERE IS ONLY ONE CHURCH — THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST. Every person, anywhere in the world who is a member of a local church is also a member of the universal Church. That goes, not only for Protestant Churches, but also for the Roman Catholic Church. Many members, one body. A great multitude which no man can number, of every nation and kindred and people and tongues, united in one body with Christ as the Head — that is the Scriptural conception of the Church.

ONE LORD — Jesus Christ is Lord, Lord of all, Lord of Life, Lord of History. He is not the Lord of one people or of one class. He is Lord of all. And all the members of the Body must acknowledge His Lordship.

ONE FAITH — not one belief, but one faith, a saving faith in Jesus

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OCTOBER 29, 1961

By Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, D.D.
Pastor of Berea Congregational
Christian Church,
Driver, Virginia

Christ. How is a man saved? By grace are ye saved through faith is the answer. And there is one faith, faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour. One creed, No! One faith, Yes!

Paul states the basis of that UNITY in his letter to the Ephesians (4:1-7.) Let us look briefly at what he writes. In enjoining his fellow-Christians to endeavor to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," he makes several arresting statements. There is, he says:

ONE BODY — the Body of Christ. Christ is not divided. There are divisions in the Church in the human sense, but there is only ONE BODY in the divine sense.

ONE SPIRIT — the Holy Spirit, and by that Spirit have we all been baptized into one body. Every man who comes into the Church, the Body of Christ, comes by the work of the Holy Spirit. There is not a Protestant Holy Spirit and a Catholic Holy Spirit, and a Methodist, or Presbyterian, or Congregational Christian Holy Spirit. The one Body derives its life from One Spirit.

ONE HOPE OF OUR CALLING — in a double sense. Christians look forward to the coming of the Kingdom of God, that is our common hope amid our confused and confusing views. Furthermore our only hope of salvation is in Jesus Christ — there is no other name given among men whereby they can be saved.

ONE BAPTISM — there are several modes of baptism, immersion, pouring, sprinkling, but only one baptism essential, the Baptism of the Holy Spirit. Unless one has that, the others are of no avail.

ONE GOD AND FATHER OF ALL, WHO IS ABOVE ALL, AND THROUGH ALL, AND IN YOU ALL. One God as Father makes all men brothers. Like it or not, that is the fact. And the sooner our modern world recognizes this fact, and acts upon its implications, the better off we will be, and the faster the Kingdom will come. The difficulty is not in our belief in God as Father, but in our practical behaviour as brothers.

This statement of God as Father in brief compass sums up several great truths about God. 1. The love of God. 2. The control of God — He is above all. 3. The providence of God — He is through all. 4. The presence of God — He is in you all. Our world is a God-created, God controlled, God-sustained and a God-filled world. O God how great Thou art!

Durham Church School News

Mrs. Shirley C. Davis
General Superintendent

Nursery Department — Mrs. Walter Morris, Superintendent. This year featured the inauguration of the United Church Curriculum in the Department. Teachers are pleased with the progress made to help each child establish himself within the Christian fellowship. Success now is evidenced by the children in self expression, added confidence, and almost complete group participation.

Kindergarten Department — Miss Clarine Perry, Superintendent. We have tried to emphasize: (1) reverence in the Sanctuary and during our worship services (2) God is love and we learn about Him from the Bible (3) we can best show our love by sharing...our toys, our money, our time and our love. As we watched our children grow during the year, we experienced certain challenges, true inspirations, and real moments of tenderness.

Primary Department — Mrs. Arnis Glenn, Superintendent. We are particularly proud of our large enrollment and high percentage of attendance. Among many activities enjoyed, outstanding were the deeds of love for shut-ins and those in hospitals. We were proud and happy for this opportunity.

Junior Department — Mrs. Guy Alling, Superintendent. We have emphasized the use of the Bible. To supplement the excellent lesson material, Bible quizzes, puzzles and games were presented. A new workbook, "Jingles for Juniors" opened the doors to the wonders of our Bible and its many possibilities for daily use.

Junior High Department — Mrs. James Harward, Jr., Superintendent. The final course of the year, led by Mr. Curtis Young, proved most stimulating and effective, this being a unit on the theme "growing up." Students took personal inventory of themselves, budgeting of their time and talents. They experienced growth spiritually, physically, and mentally.

Senior High Department — Mr. and Mrs. Walt Langston, Co-Superintendents. The course "The World In Which We Live" was the most interesting and disturbing, since it concerned problems facing future generations in relation to scientific accomplishments. Concerned with the role of the Christian in this new world, discussions were held on such subjects as nuclear fission and fusion, atoms for peace, dangers of radiation and new defenses against disease.

Young Adult Department — Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bohus, Co-Presidents. Under the leadership of their teacher, Mr. Clifton Walker, special lesson material was explored in addition to the regular course of study. Various members of the class substituted as teacher. We have cooperated by answering the call for special participation in programs and for various "work nights" for the church, including special work for the Nursery and Kindergarten Departments of the Church School. The Class sponsored a spaghetti supper with proceeds donated to the Land Purchase Fund. The Class enjoys monthly class meetings at the various homes of its members.

Junior Philathea Class — Mrs. Emmett Lee, Class President. A special joy has been remembering the shut-ins of our church each month with cards and visits. Under the leadership of Mrs. Robert S. Smith, Christian Education Chairman of the Women's Fellowship, the class sponsored the Christian Education Program. Mrs. Robert Kimball of Burlington was the speaker. Our Friendly Service Project was the sending of material for bandages and masks for the Hospital de Dondi in Angola, West Africa. Other highlights included the Mission Study book review, "One World, One

Children Are Visiting Churches

Dear Friends:

The last two Sundays we have had the privilege of visiting in two of our fine churches. October 1 we visited with the Shallow Well Church near Sanford, where Rev. Max Vestal is minister. Here our smaller children shared in the 11:00 o'clock service where we observed Holy Communion in keeping with World-Wide Communion Sunday. Following the service, the families of the church shared with our children and staff members who were present a delicious picnic lunch. This is the second year in succession that we have visited this church in the fall.

Then on Sunday, October 8, we visited our Hines Chapel Church near McLeansville, N. C., where Rev. Thomas Madren is the minister. Here again our smaller children shared in the 11:00 o'clock worship service along with the writer. The pastor was absent from his pulpit because of sharing in the Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission in Eastern Virginia. It was a real privilege to visit both of these churches and share in their worship services.

During November our children will be visiting various churches in our immediate area. In one instance the superintendent will be visiting one of our churches at a distance. We are always eager for the opportunity to tell the story of our Children's Home.

November and December are the two months set aside for the Home's special appeal to our churches. The Southern Convention has authorized a special of $25,000.00. This amount we have never realized. This year this will be our goal from the churches of the Southern Convention and business, industry and interested individuals.

November 4th — Open House at our Children's Home

Our goal: Every church represented on our campus on this date!

After 18 years of effective service as minister of Central Congregational Church of Atlanta, Georgia, the Reverend Dr. Thomas Anderson retired September 1, 1961. He expects to give more time to writing.

QUESTIONS FOR CHURCH MEMBERS

1. In what direction is our church headed?
 - What are we trying to accomplish?
 - Is our church moving toward something?
 - Is it moving at all?
 - Do we really want it to move?
 - What are we doing now and what can we start doing to help it move in the right direction?
2. Is our church depending completely enough on God?
 - Do we pray for and expect God's guidance?
 - Is our church willing to follow his guidance?
 - Do we seriously try to understand God's written Word?
 - Does our church have sociability or Christian fellowship?
3. What kind of stewardship does our church practice?
 - Are there wasted talents and abilities in the church?
 - How can these be uncovered and put to effective use?
 - Have we carefully studied our annual church budget?
 - Is our church income used sensibly and in accord with the spirit of Christ?
 - Have all of us learned to give sacrificially?
4. Are we a mission minded church?
 - Is there a concern for unchurched people in our vicinity?
 - Do we think of our church as a part of the total church's mission?
 - Have we understood the urgency of the Christian World Mission?
 - Have we tried to see the needs of our denominational missionaries in overseas areas?
 - Are we interested in introducing new people here and in areas of the world where our missionaries are stationed to Christ?
5. What are your suggestions relative to any of the above questions or concerning any other part of the church's life which you feel needs improvement? (Write below or use a separate sheet and leave in suggestion box at church.)

Bible Society Offers Booklet

Churches and individual Christians in America and throughout the world are joining the American Bible Society to urge families to observe Christmas Eve by reading together the Christmas story from the Bible. The Society has been encouraging this custom for several years and reports that the response has been most encouraging.

Several million reprints of passages from the first and second chapters of Luke are being distributed by the Society again this year. They tell of the birth and childhood of Jesus and are printed in large type in attractive, colorful booklets, small enough to enclose with Christmas cards and letters.

Titled "Unto You... A Saviour," the booklets are available from the Bible Society in the King James or the Revised Standard Version in English, or in the new Reina-Valera version in Spanish. The price is a nominal $3 per hundred. Through press, radio and television, the Society is offering to send a single copy free to everyone who requests it.

"We hope every church will use these Christmas Portions this year," says Dr. Arthur P. Whitney, Executive Secretary of the Society. "Placing one of them in every home is one of the best ways I know to call attention to the Christ who so often is forgotten in the secular celebration of His birthday. Christmas will be a truly religious holiday for families who begin its observance by reading the beautiful Bible story out loud together in their own homes."

The Society offers to send quantities of the booklets free to hospitals, prisons, nursing homes, YMCA's, YWCA's and other institutions which are not able to pay for them from their budgets and cannot find a church or individual to donate them.

"To the best of our ability," Dr. Whitney says, "the Bible Society will supply a copy of 'Unto You... A Saviour' to every one who wants one, whether he can pay for it or not. We believe that the Good News this booklet contains is the best news any of us will ever hear. We want to share it with everyone who will listen."

The address of the American Bible Society is 450 Park Ave., New York 22, New York.

IT MUST BEGIN WITH ME

By Elizabeth F. Caviness

If we're to have a better world,
Where shall we begin?
Summit conferences with heads of State meeting now and then?
Stock-piling weapons of terrible usage?
Conquering outer space?
No, such are not starting points,
But problems for the human race.
You just can't pile rocks for neighbor throwing
And expect none to come near thee.
No, if we are to have a better world
It must begin with me.

I must be honest with myself,
With God, and those near me.
Each day I must try to live so
That my conscience will be free.

As ripples that spread upon the water
In circles that seemingly never end,
I must show my love to the Father,
My family, neighbor, and friend.

Oh, Father, I must do for others
For love of them and Thee.
If we are to make this a better world
It must begin, now, with me.

HEIFER PROJECT — PEACE CORPS COOPERATE

A young man born and reared on a ranch in Happy, Texas; a Miami nurse who teaches the treatment of communicable diseases; and a Junior High home-making teacher from California will soon be working in a Peace Corps agricultural assistance program on the Caribbean island of St. Lucia. They are just three of 18 now in training at Iowa State University under the leadership of Heifer Project, Inc. personnel.

The pilot project was announced recently by Thurl Metzger, Heifer Project director, following the signing of a contract with Peace Corps director R. Sargent Shriver. Under its provisions, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wendell Rolston of Dundee, Ill., were appointed by the HIP board of directors to supervise the program and activities of the volunteers. They have held assignments in Germany, Laos and Poland.

Heifer Project will make about $20,000 worth of baby chicks and pigs available, said Mr. Metzger, as part of a program to improve stock on the island. In addition, the Peace Corps workers will teach irrigation methods and soil conservation, and assist in vocational training projects.

An interdenominational agency in which the United Church of Christ shares, Heifer Project cooperates around the world in the churches' relief and rehabilitation projects, principally through providing livestock, bees and poultry, and sending trained agricultural workers to underdeveloped areas.

Mission," presented by Mrs. Robert S. Smith, the reading of Dr. Laubach's lecture "A Crash Program for World Saving" brought to us by Mrs. Mittie Branch, donations to the "Laubach Literacy Fund," and to the Land Purchase Fund in the amount of $106. At our regular monthly meetings, we enjoy the fellowship and sociable contacts, since this group, numbering nineteen members, is almost completely composed of business women of the church.

Harrell Bible Class — Mrs. E. F. Walker, President; A. V. Kennedy, Teacher. A large number of our class have pledged themselves to daily Bible reading. Through cooperative work, we have raised $335.00 for the Building Fund. We have met and exceeded each quota assigned to our class by the Women's Fellowship and have fulfilled all obligations. The class has joined the North Carolina Church Builders Club and make annual contributions. We have held monthly class meetings at which time we experience true Christian fellowship.

Boone Fellowship Bible Class — Walter P. Perry, President; Guy Alling, Teacher. The class has made a sincere effort to boost attendance. Mr. Fred Harward has been of great assistance in visiting the members of the class. Members have participated in various projects including Christmas, work nights, and special needs of the church. Proceeds from a barbeque supper were donated to the Land Purchase Fund. Highlighting the fellowship of the class, was a fried chicken dinner to which the wives of the men were invited.

The above is evidence of a busy and fruitful year for our Church School. If you are not a member of an organized class of our church, we invite you to join with us as we prayerfully begin anew.

Cause Of Religious Doubt

By Louis Cassels

The hardest question a minister ever has to face is:

"Why did God let this happen?"

"This" may be the death of a child; the lingering agony of a cancer patient; the capricious destruction of a tornado; the mute suffering of an animal; the wanton act of a depraved criminal; in short, any tragedy which arouses in a human heart a sudden stab of self-pity or compassion.

Inability to find a satisfactory answer to the Great Why is the chief cause of religious doubt. Millions of people have become practically professing atheists because they have found it impossible to believe that a loving and omnipotent God created a world in which there is so much pain and evil.

"Case Against God"

When a person's faith founders on the fact of evil, he is likely to think that he has discovered a "case against God" which has never occurred to those who believe in him.

But this is not true.

Believers in God have wrestled with "the problem of evil" for thousands of years.

No modern writer could state the enigma more forcefully than it is stated in the Old Testament story of Job. And no cynic could possibly raise a question about the apparent contradiction between omnipotent love and innocent suffering that has not already been raised and discussed dozens of times by Christian Theologians from the time of St. Paul to the present.

The Answer?

And what is their answer? How do they reconcile the indisputable fact of evil with the assertion that God is good and all-powerful?

Any attempt to compress the volumes written on this subject into a newspaper column is foredoomed to failure.

There is, however, a new book on the market which can be commended to anyone who is looking for a serious treatment of the problem of evil by a first-rate Christian theologian who does not cut any intellectual corners.

It is entitled "Love Almighty and Ills Unlimited" (Doubleday, $3.50), and the author is Dr. Austin Farrar of Oxford University.

An older and somewhat easier-to-read book on the same subject, which is well worth a trip to the library if you can't find it in a bookstore, is "The Problem of Pain" by C. S. Lewis (Macmillan, 1946.)

Neither author tries to produce a single pat formula to account for all of the many different types of pain and evil. They examine each type separately, and suggest how it may play a necessary role in the beneficent purposes of a Creator who wills for his human children a higher destiny than the "happiness" they are apt to seek for themselves.

Clear Distinction

Both, for example, draw a clear distinction between human and animal pain, and acknowledge that the latter is much harder to explain. Suffering may ennoble a human spirit, draw a man away from complacent pre-occupation with transitory pleasures and make him aware of his need for God. But animal pain can be comprehended only as an intrinsic aspect of the kind of universe in which we live.

Lewis points out that much confusion stems from a misunderstanding of the concept that "anything is possible to God."

Some things, he notes, are impossible even to God because they are inherently contradictory. Thus it would be absurd to say that God can be entirely good and entirely evil at the same time.

Lewis argues that God was confronted with two necessities when he chose to create human beings with free wills.

An Environment

First, he had to give them an environment — the physical universe — in which to exist and make their choices. And if their choices were to have any real meaning, this environment must be neutral and stable, conferring its benefits and banes in accordance with impersonal and relatively inexorable natural laws. God may intervene to suspend these laws on rare occasions called miracles.

But the rain must usually fall on the just and the unjust alike for the good reason that if it didn't, nature wouldn't be a neutral medium and human beings would become puppets instead of free souls.

Second, God had to accept the possibility that men would abuse their freedom, revolt against him and his moral laws, and bring suffering on themselves and others.

Farrar agrees that these two factors — physical accident and human sinfulness — are chief causes of the world's pain, and that both are indirect but inescapable consequences of the Divine Will to create free human spirits.

Final Answer

After going as far as rational argument can in plumbing the mystery of evil, both authors find the final answer in the Christian belief that life in this world of trials and tribulations is meant to prepare men for an eternal destiny.

They acknowledge that skeptics will accuse them of resorting to "pie in the sky" — of ushering in an unproved premise of future bliss to justify the manifest wrongs of present existence.

"And yet," says Farrar, "there is no other consolation but this which carries any force. The issue is all or nothing; either we believe (in the Christian promise of eternal life) or we do not."

If the promise is false, man is indeed a cruel joke, a sentient bit of matter who has somehow evolved in a mindless universe, taunted by intimations of immortality but doomed to a brief and precarious existence, punctuated by pain and terminated by death.

Not Worthy

But if the promise is true, man can accept whatever life brings with the assurance that "the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us as the children of God."

Farrar and Lewis are convinced that the promise is true, and both of them, especially Lewis, explain why they find it believable.

They recognize, however, that logical argument alone can never persuade anyone either that God is, or that God is good.

The ultimate assurance of this must always come from faith, based on or at least corroborated by personal experience.

It is noteworthy that the conviction is often strongest in people who have suffered intensely.

They do not try to rationalize their sufferings, or to assign a clear and proximate "benefit" to each pain. They trust God because they have experienced the reality of his love, and they know, more certainly than they know anything else, that he will make everything come out all right in the end.

NUMBER 42

There is no rest for the heart of man save in God, who made him for Himself. But how shall we rest in God? By giving ourselves wholly to Him. If you give yourself by halves, you cannot find full rest — there will ever be a lurking disquiet in that half which is withheld; and for this reason it is that so few Christians attain to a full, steadfast, unchanging peace — they do not seek rest in God only, or give themselves up to Him without reserve.

INTRODUCING — Mrs. R. M. Cline

New President, North Carolina Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women

By Mrs. Carey Andes

Mrs. R. M. Cline, recently elected president of the North Carolina Women's Fellowship, is a very interesting and versatile person. Behind her calm poise and lovely appearance is a person of talent and ability.

Since childhood Mrs. Cline has been a member of Sanford Congregational Christian Church. She is church clerk, sings in the choir, and teaches a class of young adults in the Sunday school.

For four years Mrs. Cline served as chairman of the Sanford District of the Women's Fellowship.

She is a member and a Past Matron of the Order of The Eastern Star.

As a member of the Sanford Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Cline has served as its president and was chosen by the club as "Woman of the Year" for 1960.

Mrs. Cline has two children and five grandchildren. She enjoys reading music, and sports.

In addition to these accomplishments, Mrs. Cline owns and operates her own Dress Shop in the city of Sanford.

Here And There Among The Churches

Eutaw Community, Fayetteville, has received 9 new members the last quarter, making a total of 24 for the year.

"From the Altar to the Alley" was the unusual topic for Dr. W. J. Andes at Elon College Community Church October 22, World Order Sunday.

Women's Fellowship of The Christian Temple, Norfolk, were hostesses at the Navy YMCA October 15 at a tea honoring men in the armed services of our country.

The evening session of the Eastern Virginia Conference will be held Wednesday, October 25, at Rosemont, while the rest of the session will be held the following day.

Rev. Max Vestal is conducting special services at 7:30 each evening this week at Shallow Well, Sanford. Guest choirs from Pleasant Hill and Zion are expected to share in the services.

A friendly gesture: Members of Emanuel United Church of Christ, Thomasville, visited the new St. Peter's Church in Greensboro Sunday afternoon, October 8. This church was dedicated the preceding Sunday.

A Junior Pilgrim Fellowship (4th through 7th grades) is being held each Saturday morning at Eutaw Community, Fayetteville, following choir practice for this age group. From now until Easter the minister, Rev. A. M. Campbell, will be leading the group in a study of the meaning of church membership.

Rev. Carl Wallace and E. J. Austin of Southern Pines were at Shallow Well, Sanford, October 22 to lead a discussion on stewardship.

"The Place of Worship in the Sunday School" was the topic studied by church school teachers at Pleasant Hill, Liberty, October 20.

The pastor, Rev. Collie Seymour, is leading the Bible study on I Corinthians, sponsored by the Women's Fellowship, each Sunday evening during October at Apple's Chapel.

Rev. James Rumley, graduate of Elon College and Lancaster Seminary, will be the guest speaker October 29-November 5 at Trinity church, Concord, North Carolina, where Dr. Banks J. Peeler is pastor. Services will be held each evening at 7:30.

Rev. Eugene Tally and Mr. Carson Reynolds from Third Avenue, Danville, led a discussion on stewardship and missions at Apple's Chapel October 9. Deacons, trustees and members of the finance and missionary committees participated.

World Community Day (November 3) service for the church women of Portsmouth, Virginia, will be held in our First Church. The pastor, Rev. Daniel A. Bowers, will be speaking to a similar service at Bethlehem, Suffolk.

The atom bomb is not in the least dangerous. It is a thing. What is fearfully dangerous is man. Clearly, if the bomb is left alone, it will do nothing. What we need is control of man. — Louis De Rouchmont (Northview Bulletin).

Mrs. Paul Rosser has been named corresponding secretary for the Women's Fellowship at Shallow Well, Sanford, to keep in touch with young people in college and in military service.

Shallow Well church, Sanford, has received a bequest of $2,000 from the will of Mrs. Mary Wommack Thomas in memory of the parents of her husband. It was used to repay a loan from the cemetery fund.

Those having perfect attendance for the Sunday school year ending September 31 at Eutaw Community, Fayetteville, were: Mrs. Esther Dept, Mrs. Linda Dept, Mrs. Elizabeth Stout, Mrs. Hazel Smith, David Smith, Miss Roberta Smith and H. E. Simpson.

E. N. C. LAYMEN MEET

(As reported in Shallow Well Newsletter)

At the October 8 meeting of the E.N.C. Conference Laymen, Gordon Wicker, of Shallow Well, was elected to serve as president for the next two years.

Serving with Wicker will be Dewey Tillman, vice president, of our Sanford Church; William A. Thornall, secretary-treasurer, of the Eutaw Community Church, in Fayetteville; and Walter Danke, program chairman, from our church in Southern Pines.

Nine men from Shallow Well attended the rally Sunday evening. The total attendance was near a hundred.

Dr. F. C. Lester, editor of The Christian Sun spoke to the group on the topic: "My Christian Witness."

OAKLAND PREACHING MISSION

By John G. Truitt

It was a thrilling experience to serve as the guest minister in a week of special services at our Oakland United Church of Christ at Chuckatuck, Virginia, recently. Dr. W. T. Scott is bringing to the church there, as its pastor, a ministry greatly enriched by his experience as the superintendent of the Southern Convention. I found the people very appreciative of his work — his program-planning, his preaching, and his pastoral care. His concern for every member and family in his congregation was an inspiration to me. My own anxiety for an ever-increasing commitment to the Christ in our present international situation made me anxious that the Good News of the gospel be really good news.

Although I made many calls with Dr. Scott during the week, ate two meals every day in the homes of the members, called on sick, and the bereft, and preached each evening I felt more rested when I left than when I arrived. This I attributed to the graciousness of the minister's wife. The Scotts and Truitts have been good friends for a long time, especially during and since our days together in Dayton, Ohio. The kindness and thoughtfulness Jimmy showed me also helped me a great deal.

I was an old hand at liking lovely old Virginia homes, and I say here only that their charm and hospitality were fully as lovely as I had remembered them.

The meeting! Yes, the Congregations were inspiring, appreciative, and responded to the call to renewal of commitment to Christ. Four adults were received into church membership. I was delighted to see again many friends in the Eastern Virginia Conference where I had preached for twenty-one years.

TRPM AT SOUTH NORFOLK

By Beatrice George

Participation in the Teaching-Reaching - Preaching Mission with other churches in the area of the Eastern Virginia Conference afforded a real deepening of the spiritual life and evangelism of our South Norfolk church.

Working together with members and minister in preparation, and the fellowship of sharing with our missionary, the Reverend Harry C. Carolus, pastor of Messiah United Church of Christ, Baltimore, Maryland, and attending the wonderful rally at The Christian Temple was a privilege and inspirational experience.

The Reverend Mr. Carolus, in his warm and friendly manner, brought us new insights at the instruction meetings and challenging messages on the following sermon topics:

1. What Do we Want the Church to Do? — Acts 2:1-13.
2. Being Born Again. — John 3:1-17.
3. No Other Gods. — Isaiah 44:9-20.
4. A Prevailing Strength. II Corinthians 4th Chapter.
5. Living Our Commitment. — Romans, 12th Chapter.

A service of dedication and commitment, followed by Holy Communion closed the series of Teaching-Reaching-Preaching Mission.

Reverend William A. Cousins is the minister.

Reformation Sunday, October 29, ministers of the Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Congregational churches of Tryon will exchange pulpits.

Reformation Sunday

In the Church Calendar Reformation Sunday is October 29 of this year. Southern Convention churches have never paid much attention to this idea. The major Reformation in the Church which has been taught us was one in the Methodist Church in 1792-1794 when James O'Kelley and a thousand other Methodists withdrew and started the Christian Church in Virginia. That event was important in American life, and it did bring freedom in church government that has become much more widespread than the membership of the merged Christian Church ever was or will become.

But it is good for us to be reminded that a Reformation almost two centuries before the first new denomination in America was started opened doors of the Roman Catholic Church through which multitudes of people moved. Martin Luther, Augustinian Friar, Doctor of Sacred Theology, wrote a letter to the Archbishop of Mainz and Brandenburg, Germany, December 1517, in which he said:

No person can be made sure of salvation through any bishop's work... The Apostle bids us to work out our salvation with fear and trembling and even the righteous man can hardly be saved. Why, then, do they use such false fables and promises about forgiveness so as to make the people sure and unafraid — when an indulgence cannot help any soul to salvation and holiness, but merely reprieves external punishments for sin, incurred under ecclesiastical law.

Nowhere has Christ commanded us to preach indulgences... the instruction book for the indulgence commissioners... maintains that a person can be reconciled to God by the grace of an indulgence and that all penalties of purgatory will be canceled — indeed, repentance is not even necessary provided one just buys a certificate of absolution or an indulgence for departed souls.

The pope cannot forgive any guilt of sin. He can only confirm what God has already forgiven. The pope does not wish to, nor can he remit any penalty for sin except that which church law has imposed.

Thus began the Reformation that gave to the world the Protestant Church, which is now divided into more than 250 denominations. The Evangelical and Reformed churches date back to the early days of the Reformation, and it is quite natural that they are more conscious of this heritage than those whose mother churches come from a much later date, and for quite different reasons.

As Congregational Christians, especially those who look so largely to James O'Kelley for their church heritage, it is very important that we read church history as we enter a merger with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, for only by so doing can we fully appreciate the depth of feeling they have for creeds, statements of faith, church doctrine. We may be a little shallow in our beliefs, and we may not really know the price that has been paid for Protestant privileges.

One does not need to start a war with the Roman Church because he believes in something quite different from the doctrines of that Church. But it is past time for Protestants to reconsider their heritage of Christian faith. If, as Luther believed, eternal salvation comes only as a gift from God to those who sincerely believe in Jesus Christ, then it is wise to consider what our "indulgences" are. "Business is business," "everybody else does," "it doesn't make much difference, we are all going to the same place anyway," "I guess I shouldn't, but..." "it was just a little white lie," etc. etc. Of course we would not buy a little piece of paper that said we are free from all penalties of sin in this world and the next, but we might expect a hefty reward for a large contribution to some good cause. Perhaps it is time for another Reformation — especially in our personal lives.

Off To Conference

The Board of Publications has said that its editor should attend all five of the Conferences this fall. They — these good men and true who make up the Board — are hopeful that he will say some magic word that will secure another thousand or fifteen hundred subscriptions to this church paper. Far be it from the editor to disillusion his superiors, but there are no magic words.

Subscriptions are secured by intelligent workers. Intelligent? Yes. Pastors, teachers, church officials and just church members who think, know that every member of every church should know about the organization of which they are part. They also know that the only weekly church paper in the denomination is The Christian Sun, a religious journal intended for church homes with messages for all ages of persons. They know that there is an exchange of information concerning plans and programs, that denominational news finds a place in its pages, that articles of inspiration and information appear from time to time, and that The Christian Sun is safe reading for children and young people and a "must" for all who want to know what is going on in the Southern Convention as well as in the world-wide Church.

Intelligence alone does not secure subscriptions. Many a member has said wistfully, "I wish all our church members would subscribe and read the paper." Sometimes some of these wishful people bestir themselves, and when they do there goes to the Convention Office a list of new subscribers. It takes work to get subscriptions to any paper, and this one is no exception.

But — that is the Conference speech. That is not the article for this page. 'Scuse me, please!

If you won't tell members of the Board of Publication, you can get in on a secret. The editor is delighted to go to Conferences, and is not eager to make a speech. Since 1914 when he was licensed to preach he has been going to Conferences. He likes the people, he enjoys the reports of work being done in the name of Christ, the speeches are inspiring (sometimes), the fellowship is enriching, and where could one get better food? Yes, folks, your editor welcomes the opportunity to sit with you in conference, share ideas, dream with you of things yet to be done for the Christ we love, think together of the high privileges of Christian service and hope, and in moments of devotion sing and pray. Memory may not recall all names and faces, but it will be a joy to clasp hands with friends again — and to see the new people who are taking places vacated by those of yesteryear. Let's meet in Conference!

When the freedom of countries is threatened by a conspiracy conducted by a leader who cries aloud for peace and who demands disarmament (for the other fellow) it is refreshing to consider Switzerland whose geographic position is more than a footnote to the ability of a country to survive.

Wedge in between Italy, Germany, and France, Switzerland is a symbol of a free and prosperous people in that portion of Europe where freedom has fared badly in recent decades.

Switzerland's unusual position in Europe is scarcely understandable, and certainly not without scanning the pages of this gallant mountain republic's history that stretches over a period of more than 600 years. And even then one might conclude as did Bismarck that Switzerland is only a geographical expression. Like all such epigrams, the Iron Chancellor's phrase leaves out more than it takes in. It is about as true and untrue of Switzerland as it would be of England, because the sea has played much the same role in the development of English liberty as the mountains have played in the development of Swiss liberty.

Switzerland has so long been the playground of Europe that the waiter seems to be as important as the soldier. But this does not mean that the Swiss will not defend their land. In 1493, when the Emperor Maximilian threatened to pay the Swiss a visit, "sword in hand," he received this unusual reply: "We humbly beseech your imperial majesty to dispense with such a visit, for our Swiss are rude men and do not even respect crowns."

The Federal Government of the United States is closely patterned after the Swiss Federation, and the ideals that are the backbone of this country are similar to those which Switzerland has fostered since 1291 when the men of the Valley of Uri met and formed "an everlasting league for the purpose of self-defense against anyone who should attack or trouble them."

That any small federation should have been able to keep its ideals and independence through the troublous centuries when European empires were in the making is remarkable enough. But it is more remarkable since the 22 small states, or cantons as they are called, of this federation are composed of people who differ from each other in language, religion, social instincts, physical attributes, and climate.

Nationally the inhabitants of the Swiss Republic are probably the most patriotic people on earth, yet each canton or state is more jealous of its governmental rights than are the States that composed the American Union. For reasons best known to the Swiss, they are not members of the United Nations.

One of the most unusual things about Switzerland's democracy is that of the 22 cantons or states, 13 are German-speaking, four are French, in three both French and German are spoken, and in the other two there is a mixture of several languages. All public documents, most street and railway signs, and all the paper money are printed in at least three languages. Yet local and national governments are not threatened by internal enemies and the country has taken no part in Europe's many wars.

The Swiss are a busy and contented people tending their forests and farms, dairies, fisheries, and small manufacturing plants which include more than 8,000 clock and watch factories. Theirs is a land where the beacon light of freedom and prosperity shines in the face of a country that makes a mockery of the word peace and which has its own undisclosed definition for coexistence.

Spiritual Life Means Growth

Rev. Lois Wendell

"SPIRITUAL LIFE" means much more than having a few set devotions, private or public, or attending the services and meetings of the church. For the second word in the title of our department is "Life." Let us during this coming season strive to bring true spiritual life into our fellowship and into our own being.

An essential condition of life is growth. Whatever ceases to grow dies. As a flower cannot grow shut away from the sun, so the spirit cannot grow shut off from God. We all need to spend more time in God's presence than we do, and to make that time an ever-deepening and growing experience. Let us resolve to let no tasks, however pressing, interfere with the regular time for prayer. And let us grow in the practice of prayer, using not only such helps as Daily Devotional Guide and books of prayer, but the leaflet "A Technique of Private Prayer," Casteel's "The Promise of Prayer," Lester's "Way of Praying," and other such fine materials.

One of the continuing goals of our department is to sponsor small groups for prayer and Bible study. Do you belong to such a group? Those who do testify that the close personal fellowship of a few who meet for closer communion with Christ and understanding of His Way gain strength and guidance and great spiritual growth. Furthermore, the group becomes a channel for the grace of God to pour into the life of their fellowship and church. If you do not belong to such a group, join one. If there is none in your church or the existing one has the maximum effective number (usually considered twelve), you may grow spiritually by helping to form a group. Invite three or four to join you. The leaflet "Small Groups" will give guidance in the formation of such groups. Freer and Hall's book "Two or Three Together" gives much more detailed information, and also very helpful meditations. We do urge you to consult these or other recommended books for guidance, for groups which depend entirely on the personal resources of their own members, and casual spontaneous prayer, will not long continue to contribute vitally to the spiritual growth of the members or of their church.

Another extremely important way to spiritual growth is through reading. First and foremost among spiritual life books, of course, is the Bible. We need to read Scripture in different ways: for devotion and communion with God; for light on personal problems; to understand its characters; to trace the meaning of the great words and phrases of the Christian faith; to gain light on the problems of the world's life; to find the will of God as revealed to His great servants of old. The Bible books emphasized this year are Isaiah and I and II Corinthians. We need also

Aid To Aged Ministers

By Wm. Kincaid Newman

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief now completes its 75th year of operations — years marked by devoted service of Board members and staff, and by splendid cooperation of churches and ministers, years marked by change but also by a great heritage of consistent practice.

Changing Concept

What have been the major changes during this period? Most significant is the changed attitude of the United States and of our denominational family toward the financial problems of the aging. In the early days we gave relief. We maintained a charity for those unfortunate members of the family who had come upon hard times. Providing for life after retirement was regarded as entirely personal. Churches did not feel responsibility and did not pay any great attention to whether the ministers felt a responsibility either. Some Conferences formed State Relief Societies which functioned effectively but a number of Conferences did not have such societies. Until the formation of The Congregational Board of

to read other books of spiritual life, for we believe that God has more light and truth to reveal to His servants of every age. Read the books in Spiritual Life section of the lists of Adventures in Reading. For this year we especially recommend that you read and study these books among others: "Two or Three Together" by Freer and Hall, "Toward Understanding the Bible" and "Understanding the Christian Faith" by Harkness, "Man's First Love" by Sockman, "The Struggle of the Soul" by Sherrill.

Growth takes time and nourishment, exercise and care, whether it be the growth of the body or of the mind or of the spirit. These are some of the ways by which we may grow as Christians to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, and realize the life everlasting in the midst of time. And this is spiritual life.

In Congregational Iowa

Ministerial Relief there was no organization through which a national look at these problems could be taken. The adverse effect upon the lives of our ministers was lamentable. It was particularly felt by those who gave themselves in service to the churches at the frontier. They left behind established pastorates in New England to found new churches in the Dakotas and other states and discovered themselves in dire straits financially. The new churches were often weak and unable to bear their full share of financial support. Many men died young as a result of the battle against the climate and lack of adequate medical care.

In the early 1900's, national attitudes began to change. The shift from an agricultural economy to an urban economy was well under way. The Congregational Home Missionary Society in an annual report in the 1890's had already stated that the filling in of vacant land in the United States was completed and that thenceforth major growth would be in metropolitan areas. In a predominantly rural situation, security for old age was provided by the family farm. Title to the farm which was the major source of family income remained in the older members until their death. Younger members participated in producing the family income by physical labor and as the older ones grew older, by assisting in management. All members of the family, including the widows and children of those who had died, received their livelihood from it.

As the economy became urban, people did not have family farms. The concept of regular saving toward the expenses of the retirement years became more widely accepted in all walks of life. It became increasingly necessary for ministers. The Reverend Henry A. Stimson who was one of the founders of The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief and who was still its President; the Reverend Charles S. Mills and other Directors of the Board, took the lead in 1914 in founding The Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers in order that systematic provision for retirement might be made. It was one of the first pension funds in the country. Now, this lusty child of the Board of Ministerial Relief has become a much larger corporation than the Board which is its parent. During the next generation of the Board's life, its principle task continued to be the care for the retired ministers and widows of ministers who were too old to participate in the Annuity Fund. It is a witness to the splendid longevity records of our ministers and their wives that a number of this group are still on our grant rolls receiving regular quarterly checks toward their living expenses.

Social Security Helps

In the meantime, pension funds became increasingly popular until today almost every business and industrial concern has its own fund. The national thinking developed until in 1935 the Social Security Act was passed creating a national plan to provide for the old age of almost the entire population. The Social Security program has been extended almost every year. The inclusion of ministers within its scope has been a vast help. We have, however, many ministers and widows too old to qualify for Social Security who need extra help.

This has brought changes within the functioning of the Board of Ministerial Relief. For a number of years now the number of regular pensioners receiving quarterly grants has declined each year, not sharply but enough so that a definite trend has been noticed. On the other hand, the forces of inflation have in many cases rendered the regular annuities from Social Security insufficient to meet their needs. Ministerial Relief has had to step into the gap to supplement annuities on the basis of need so that those who have served the church could be treated with honor in their retirement years.

Emergency Assistance

As the national picture has altered, another function of the Board of Relief has become increasingly important; namely, emergency assistance. Many ministers, budgeting carefully, can get along on a modest annuity and Social Security but when major expenses come such as hospitalization, regular resources are inadequate. Due to the splendid building up of the Christmas Fund, Ministerial Relief is able to help at these crucial times. As standards of medical and hospital care have increased, they have become more expensive. Hospitals who have cared for ministers gratis are no longer financially able to do so. Their wage bills have gone up. They are increasingly dependent upon X-Ray

The Asheboro Regional of the TRPM had a wonderful and fruitful experience. In our Rally, held in Ramseur Congregational Christian Church on September 10th, there were 481 present, 81 of whom were in the choir. Dr. Happel brought the message for the evening. High-lights of our first service of our program was our commitment and the giving of our lives to Jesus Christ and the vast opportunities of service afforded to us in our local churches.

There were 8 participating churches in our district, 7 of which were Congregational Christian. This united effort in our newly formed Church, brought all of us to a close relationship with one another. Our regional director, the Reverend Louis Suedmeyer of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran (United Church of Christ) Baltimore, Maryland, did a splendid job. Many people were won to the Church, many recommitted themselves and the whole community was touched in this wonderful program.

—Rev. Donald M. Leonard

50-year Report: "The need for sympathy, help in disaster, and rescue from the haunting fears of helplessness and poverty will never be completed." It is equally clear that we need to take a continuous fresh look at the problems presented in order that we may be of maximum help to our ministers and their families. May we ask the continued cooperation of all those interested in the Board that the best possible job may be done.

An expensive "brunswick stew" was that sponsored by Beverly Hills, Burlington: They netted $1,275 on this one project.

Miss Susie D. Allen, treasurer of the N. C. Women's Fellowship, reports that the offering at the meeting at Pleasant Hill October 3 amounted to $165.50. This was designated for Moonelon, with the request that it be used to start a fund to build a headquarters building which could include an infirmary.

machines and various other items of scientific equipment, which while greatly improving the quality of care to the sick, have caused prices to mount. By virtue of the Christmas Fund, the Board is able to step in daily to render vital help.

This help is given principally to our retired people but also to ministers in active service where the medical and other emergency costs have been totally disproportionate to their meager incomes.

Spiritual Ministry

The Board of Ministerial Relief has always been concerned with a spiritual ministry as well as an economic one. The pensioners have always been sensitive to that spiritual ministry. A minister and his wife are at the very center of church and community life. For them there has never been a lonely minute. The very nature of the ministry surrounds the parsonage family with people; people in need, people at work, people who are friends. Then retirement comes. Perhaps it demands living in a strange new place. Perhaps it means staying in the same place but now with all connections with people limited if not entirely severed. A terrific adjustment has to be made. To help with this, Ministerial Relief has through letter contact built up a service in companionship which is a true ministry.

A letter characteristic of the replies that come by the hundreds:

"I want to thank you for the quarterly check. Perhaps even more I would like to acknowledge the letter that came with it. To those of us who are on the sidelines with various infirmities, to receive such a letter is a real cheer and encouragement, and I know that is my own case with my failing eyesight, the dark days are going to be a little easier because I can remember that letter from you."

Conclusion

As the first 75 years of the Board's history come to a close, we should express again our deep appreciation for the service of those who have pioneered in this area and for the tremendous accomplishments of their self-sacrificing devotion. As we look to the future, there are many considerations to be reckoned with. It is very clear that the work which is now being done must be continued and must be done with a skill equal to that with which the work has been conducted in the past.

In the words of Dr. Reed in his

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

A number of years ago Birdie (Mrs. Martin) Garren and I attended an Assembly of United Church Women. This year it was my good fortune to again attend such a meeting in Miami Beach, Florida, October 9-12. The 1500 women in attendance represented 23 denominations (running the gamut from Church of God to Episcopalian), and all the states of the union.

What impressed me, however, was not the number in attendance but the spirit of the meeting. Tone was set by Bishop Chandu Ray of West Pakistan (a good friend of Douglas Alberts' parents in Lahore) who gave daily messages on the theme "The Church Ecumenical — Its Oneness, Its Mission, Its Ministries." These were not simply learned discourses by a scholar, but were personal, deeply moving, spiritual messages. We were divided into groups of about sixty for luncheon meetings to discuss the implications of these messages — and these groups lasted from one to four o'clock each day.

Two important government figures took time out of their busy schedules to speak to us, because they thought church women were people whose influence was important — Dean Rusk, Secretary of State, and Mrs. Esther Peterson, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Women of the United Church of Christ were much in evidence in positions of leadership — far out of proportion to the size of our denomination, it seems. The program chairman for the Assembly was Mrs. Theodore Wallace of Kansas City, Missouri — and she was elected the new president. Mrs. Wallace is a member of an E. and R. church, and she comes from a long line of ministers and educators, one brother being president of the Texas Synod and one professor at Elmhurst College. One of the new vice presidents is Mrs. Stuart Sinclair, Congregational Christian from Massachusetts. Furthermore, the new leadership education chairman is Mrs. F. E. Shotwell, C. C. from Arizona, and the new chairman of the nominating committee is Mrs. Fred Buschmeyer, whose husband is secretary of the United Church of Christ. This Assembly was a great experience, for me, as was the secretarial conference which followed — a training session for employed women's staff of the denominations.

Dear Friends of the Southern
Convention:

Drums have been beating in the village most of the day, for the death of an old lady, mother of our hospital technician. It's such a strange, oriental sound. But already we're beginning to feel at home again with it.

We left San Francisco the last week in July, and had a very comfortable trip on the new P. & O. liner CANBERRA. I especially appreciated it because, having its own sea water distiller aboard meant that it was possible to provide washing machines and driers, and I didn't have to spend all my time washing diapers and other clothes by hand. When you are aboard a ship for a whole month this is a wonderful convenience.

We sailed via Hawaii, New Zealand, and around the southern side of Australia, to Ceylon. New Zealand in its early August mid-winter season was bitterly cold. Australia, starting its spring, was milder. I have known so many friends from there it was wonderful to finally see the country. We would like to have stayed longer. At Colombo, where we finally left the ship, it was balmy but not too warm. Two days later we were in our Indian mountain top resort of Kodaikanal, which didn't seem so cold this time after the colder weather of Australia.

We arrived in Kodai in time to start Joy and Louis at school there the last week in August. Louis immediately became absorbed in school life, and was playing games so hard he was coming home with sore muscles for the first time in his life — from tackling football dummies, running, and hiking. Joy, however, failed to take to school, and was miserable at the thought of being left in boarding. After two weeks of this misery we decided to bring her down to the plains for another year and leave Louis alone in Kodai.

So the middle of September we moved the rest of the family down to Kilanjunai to join Ed. Joy and Martha are studying with me. Running the two grades is not as bad as the three I was trying to cope with just before we left for furlough. The baby, though, fills in the extra time.

Little Mary has been doing very nicely in the tropics. She loves the life of sun suits and bare feet. Joy and Martha too have found their old friends and pastimes, and disappear for hours. This morning they were out in the fields digging weeds for our neighbor's cow. People in the village seem genuinely glad to have us back. A few of the old folks have died during the past year, and we have a new pastor. Otherwise things are much the same.

Cordially,
Fran Riggs

Dear Friends,

It has been quite a thrill to get back here. At first everything seemed a bit strange and unreal. It is funny what an absence of over a year does to your memory and impressions of India. When I first came down from Kodai to look things over, the landscape looked so green and lush, because they had been having unusually good rains. I wondered if the people were really as badly off as I had been telling everybody at home. But I soon found that the discrepancy in living standards is just as tragically great as ever. No real change there yet!

As I was cycling through the villages on my way from the bus stop to Kilanjunai, I wondered how much progress the Government had made in extending provisions for medical care during our absence, and whether there was still a need for us. I soon got my answer. The first person to hail me and stop me along the path was a woman with a two-year-old baby, asking me if I could do anything for the baby's eye. It was almost hopelessly blind from a combination of vitamin A deficiency and a neglected infection. Things hadn't changed much yet in that respect either!

"But did you expect things to change?" everybody asked in a bewildered tone. "You were only gone a year!" I guess we had been contaminated too much during that year by being in a country where change is the order of the day, and you literally don't expect things to stay the same. But here, as we looked again at Madura and Kodai and Kilanjunai, and all the other places, it seemed as if we had only been gone a few days. Everything was practically the same as when we left in the spring of 1960.

As a matter of fact there was one feature of the Kilanjunai scene that we were very glad to see unchanged. After our last furlough seven years ago we had returned to find the leprosy clinics collapsed, the patients scattered and discouraged, and the hospital program back to what it was before we started. This time we found five out of the six leprosy clinics going as usual, with attendances only slightly below what they were when we left. The Staff of assistants had been carrying on loyally, slugging in and out through the mud month after month of unusually wet weather, with help from various volunteer doctors who had been making real sacrifices to come and attend one or another of the clinics. Then, this past July, they had finally found a full-time doctor for Kilanjunai. Dr. Packianathan is an older man, already retired once, but with an earnest Christian spirit and a way with patients that has endeared him to all the people around here and made everybody quite enthusiastic. When I came I found that he had not only been carrying the full and increasing load here at the hospital, but had been going out every week to the outside leprosy clinics, even though he had to do so by bullock cart and bus, because the old borrowed jeep was laid up again for repairs. What that means is illustrated by the fact that it took him several hours to get to one clinic which the rest of us reached in an easy two-hour cycle ride cross-country.

He has continued to carry the whole load ever since we arrived while I have been spending my time in various necessary administrative matters connected with planning for the work ahead. The most important single job was to find some way of getting a new jeep for the leprosy and village health work, because the old one is hopelessly decrepit. Before leaving for furlough we had applied for Central Government aid (including a jeep) for an intensive leprosy control program. I finally went to Madras last week to interview officials and try to find out our prospects for getting this help. They urged me to go full-speed ahead with the program, and do my best; aid would be forthcoming eventually — but no jeep now. We can keep going on faith, but the old jeep won't! So I am now working on other possibilities.

We have been back long enough now to realize that in spite of the general impression that everything is the same, some changes are going on. A bus road has been built to a village only six miles north of Kilanjunai. A bus is visiting Salaigramam, six miles south of us, on a regular schedule, even though the road is not yet finished. A road through Kilanjunai itself has been "sanctioned" and will be a reality some day. A new high school has been opened in Salaigramam, the first in our area. And yesterday, Gandhi's birthday, I attended the opening ceremony of the new Community Development Block in Ilaiyangudi, the Block area to include Kilanjunai. So prospects for future development are exciting.

I realize how trivial all this sounds to American ears, where progress is so much more convincing and spectacular. But if you could only be here and see how much of an achievement is represented by each little advance, in a country where even holding a gain represents so much sacrifice and suffering! When the Government officials told me to push on with the leprosy program even though no funds were available to do it with, they were not being facetious. They were only expressing the spirit of the country. Don't slacken; keep going; achieve the impossible — without waiting for the wherewithal to do it. It is a real privilege to have a share in this adventure. And it is no crime, actually, to offer a little help from the outside, as American Governmental and voluntary organizations are already doing.

Everybody was asking us last year: "What can we do to help?", and I was promising I would let you know as soon as we got back here. The situation is still the same in regard to sending things. Leprosy bandages from old sheets still come through Customs with little or no duty, but almost nothing else does, unless it comes through "official" channels through Church World Service for relief purposes. The Mission Boards are arranging for large-scale gifts of drugs from the pharmaceutical houses to be imported in that way, and then distributed in rotation to all the Mission Hospitals. C. W. S. cannot handle free drug samples, but an organization called "World Medical Relief, Inc.", 479 W. Columbia, Detroit 1, Michigan, will take them and repack them into large enough bulk packages to be acceptable for official relief shipments.

Printed matter, of course, comes in free, but for the ordinary village people, nothing but self-explanatory pictures are of any use. Two special groups read English, however. Ministers can use old sermon aids and other discarded theological books from your ministers' libraries, and my doctor friends are glad to get discarded medical books and journals of all kinds provided they are recent enough so as not to be out of date.

Everything else has to be "money in lieu of..." Medicines for our TB cases are available on the Indian market, cheaper than in America, but still out of reach of most of the patients. For malnutrition, the high-protein, high-vitamin "Multipurpose Food" which we used to import from the Meals for Millions Foundation in Los Angeles is now being manufactured by the Government in South India, again much cheaper, and we can buy it with the cash gifts you send for "MPF" or other relief. Plaster casts and special shoes for rehabilitation of ulcerated leprosy feet are made locally, but most patients will not be able to afford them without financial help. We will get our jeep, somehow or other, but it will be able to carry more supplies to the clinics if we can use a trailer with it, which can be built in Madura if we can find the money. But of course all these "above and beyond" needs are secondary to the need for regular support of the budget of the Christian World Mission, without which we could not be here, or in a position to give help at all. For all those who have been so generous in both, during this past year, we are especially grateful.

Best regards,
Ed Riggs

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Raleigh Youth Believe In Work

Friday evening, October 5, two cars pulled into Camp Moonelon laden with six young people from the United Church of Christ in Raleigh, along with their advisor, Miss Becky Rivers. The youth were Bruce Hoffmann, Roxanne Rogers, Peggy Bell, Philip King, Kent Neilsen, Lucy Beatty, and all of them were filled with enthusiasm for the project that they had agreed to undertake. Since it was dark when they arrived, work could not be undertaken immediately but an enjoyable evening was spent in evaluating folk songs and spirituals that might be included in the revised edition of SONGS OF MANY NATIONS. Plans were also gone over for the work project for the following day.

Friday night was somewhat cool but snug sleeping bags kept everyone warm and Saturday dawned bright and sunny. After a delicious and hearty breakfast, prepared by the Veazeys, the gang got to work, and kept up a strong pace throughout the day. Thanks to these service-minded folk, the swimming pool was drained and scrubbed down, all the pipes and tanks were drained for the winter, and the diving board received a fresh coat of varnish in preparation for winter storage.

While some were working at the pool, others were doing a complete inventory of the dishes in the kitchen and of the blankets and linens. The latter were all carefully packaged and wrapped for winter storage. Also, some of the lawn furniture was varnished and the rest of it was washed clean. Two of the girls hied over to Scott Cabin and gave the shower stalls a coat of bright blue. The camp store and the tool shed were cleaned out and much cleanup work was done around the grounds.

Outside recreational equipment was taken down and put away for the winter, thus assuring adequate facilities for next season.

This is not the first time that the group of P.F.'ers from Raleigh has sent work campers to Moonelon and in addition they have participated in work projects at Franklinton Center at Bricks and in those sponsored by North Carolina UCYM. Anyone who has participated in a significant work project invariably comes to the realization that this is an effective way of giving expression to one's Christian faith and that Christian fellowship through meaningful service inevitably deepens and strengthens one's own faith.

If other youth groups throughout the Convention would like to experiment with the idea, it would be good to begin now thinking toward the possibility of having a work camping experience at Moonelon next spring. Those who are interested may contact Rev. Bob Knowles, Box 336, Elon College, N. C.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of Beverly Hills, Burlington, had a "car wash" October 14 for their "Workday for Christ" project. Proceeds went to Our Christian World Mission.

"Brotherhood in Action—Hawaii" was the filmstrip shown at the Pilgrim Fellowship meeting at Apple's Chapel October 8. This group observed Workday for Christ October 21.

Young people from Bethlehem (Valley of Virginia) attending college this year are: John Sellers, Elon College; Linda and Richard Phillips, Bridgewater; Linden White and Buddy Harrison, V.P.I.; and Shirley Sellers, Dunsmore Business College.

FELLOWSHIP

When a fellow hasn't got a cent
And is feelin' kind of blue,
And the clouds hang thick and dark
And won't let the sunshine thro',
It's a great thing, oh my brethren,
For a fellow just to lay
His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort 'o way.

It makes a man feel queerish,
It makes the tear-drops start,
And you kind 'o feel a flutter
In the region of your heart.
You can't look up and meet his eye,
You don't know what to say
When a hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort 'o way.

Oh this world's a curious compound
With its honey and its gall;
Its cares and bitter crosses,
But a good world after all.
And a good God must have made it,
Leastwise that is what I say,
When a hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort 'o way.

Young People's Class at Bethlehem, Tenth Legion, Virginia, will sponsor a halloween party for all the children Monday evening, October 30. Proceeds will go to the building fund.

W. N. C. PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP

Young people from every church in the Western N. C. Conference are expected for the rally to be held Sunday, October 29, at the Asheboro church. Registration begins at 2:15. The program begins at 2:45 and will close at 5:00, according to announcement by Dorothy Lester, president. Officers of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship will provide the major part of the program.

VESPER SERVICE AT ANTIOCH CHURCH

Mrs. W. E. Garrison

The Women's Fellowship of Antioch (Eastern Virginia) Christian Church gathered at the church around sundown for a vesper service August 25 for the last meeting of the year. We were happy to have with us Mrs. Lula Morgan, who inspired us with her message.

The president, Mrs. Cobb, opened the meeting, using as her theme "God and His Handiwork — Nature." After the hymn "Now the Day is Over," we used a responsive reading, "God's World." Rev. T. Fred Wright led in prayer. We sang several hymns and then had Mrs. Morgan's meditation. Her theme was "Three Things to Make a Happy Life." These were: Enjoying nature and the things God made; faith in one another; faith in God — the most important. These three things are essential for happy living, according to Mrs. Morgan.

We closed by singing "Day Is Dying in the West." Everyone was then invited to the Fellowship Hall for a covered dish dinner prepared by the ladies of the church.

Brazilian Girl Is Rotary Exchange Student At Elon

ELON COLLEGE, OCT. 12 — Newest of the international students at Elon College is Anna Elizabeth Fulda, who hails from Rio de Janeiro, principal city and former capital of Brazil, who entered and is attending Elon on a Rotary Club international scholarship this year.

Miss Fulda was born and has spent her entire life in Rio de Janeiro, which she describes as one of the most beautiful cities in South America, but she has had the privilege of traveling through different nations of both South America and Europe.

Her father, who is a native of Germany, is in the beverage business in Rio, but her mother is a member of an old Portuguese family in Brazil. Since her parents are of different national backgrounds, they are also of different religious faiths, but she herself is Catholic like her mother.

Her first schooling was in a Catholic school, but she attended and had her middle schooling in a Methodist institution, the Bennett School in Rio. She has since studied at the Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro, where she began a major in social sciences.

As a result of her schooling and with the aid of travel in Europe, she has been able to learn something of the Portuguese, Spanish, French, German and English languages, and she welcomed the opportunity to study in the United States when the Rotary scholarship made it possible for her to attend Elon College this fall.

Her chief academic interest is still in the social sciences, which she feels will be of help to her and to her country as Brazil passes through a crisis in its national development.

Chief hobby for the Brazilian girl is mountain climbing, a sport with many devotees in Brazil, and she hopes that, along with her schooling this year, she will have the chance to visit some of the scenic mountain regions of the United States, especially the Rocky Mountain area and the Grand Canyon.

She is also interested in art, and she describes Rio de Janeiro as one of the art and cultural centers of Brazil and South America.

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS

"The Family in Rapid Social Change" (social action theme for the year) is the subject of a Sunday morning study group for adults at our Asheville church, being taught by Drs. William and Mildred Morgan and Miss Mary Porter. The topic October 8 was: "The influence of mass media on the Christian family."

Pertinent questions for thought the preceding week were:

1. Do the mass media (radio, television, newspapers, magazines, books, films, advertising industry) present a value system that is contrary to the best insights of Christian thinking? If so, in what way?

2. Would you agree that "a dulling of the conscience and a flattening out of our traditional Christian and democratic ideals is at work in the unrelieved violence and mayhem on TV?"

3. What ill effects do the mass media have on the Christian family today?

4. What are some of the strengths to be found in today's mass media for the Christian family?

5. What can the responsible Christian citizen do to help make possible a more constructive impact of mass media on the culture of our time and on our family life?

Growth In Christian Concern

Background Scripture: Matthew 25:31-46; Galatians 6:1-6.

Devotional Reading: Luke 10:25-37.

Memory Selection: Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. Galatians 6:2.

THE LAST JUDGMENT

"It is appointed unto all men to die, and after that the judgment." This judgment is inevitable and universal. It comes, and it comes to every man, and to every nation. We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ to give an account of the deeds done in the body. That fact ought to induce sober thought in every person.

In the dramatic story which Jesus told, he paints with masterful and majestic strokes this judgment of the nations of the world. It is a scene that would make glad the heart of a writer of a Hollywood script. Here, seated on a throne is Jesus the King, in all his glory. Around him stand his host of holy angels. And before him are gathered all the nations of the world. Between the people of these nations there is distinctly marked separation. In keeping with the familiar division of flocks in those days, on the one hand are the sheep, and on the other are the goats. The evidence is already in, and the King pronounces judgment. To the one group he gives a gracious invitation to "inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world." (It should be noted that they are to inherit the kingdom, and not what we call heaven.) The other group is to depart from him into eternal banishment from this kingdom. How impressive it all is!

The Basis Of Judgment

We must be careful in interpreting this vivid word picture. It is not intended to be simply a lesson on the judgment, or on reward in heaven, or punishment in hell, although these ideas do appear in the story. It is rather a lesson on CHRISTIAN CONCERN FOR OTHERS — ANY OTHERS. It has to do with Christian action — with the relief of suffering and human need, with a Christian love and broad enough to look past the petty little barriers of color or creed or caste. And never let it be thought that Jesus is saying that a man is saved by his good works. He is rather saying that a Christian is known by his good works. Men are judged by moral character as indicated by their deeds. A good description of a Christian is "a man who cares" and who cares enough to do something about it. One of the acid tests of a Christian is our love for, and our help to others.

As Dr. Barclay points out in his brief comments on this passage, Jesus emphasizes several simple and suggestive truths in this story or picture in words.

First, the judgment is based on simple things. The things which Jesus picks out are simple things — giving a cup of water to a thirsty man, a bit of bread to a hungry man, visiting a prisoner, calling on a sick man, cheering a discouraged man, welcoming a stranger, and such simple things. They are things which anyone can do. It is not a matter of knowledge, of wealth, of fame, of position or place, or even of great works — it is a matter of simple things which anyone and every one can do. Nothing that Jesus ever said so opened the way to glory to the simplest people.

Secondly, Jesus made it plain that such help as is given must be uncalculating. There is a great deal of giving that has little if any merit in it. Some people give because they think it will pile up merit. Some give to bolster their self-esteem or to gain the esteem of their fellowmen. Some give out of a sense of stern duty. But the people whom Jesus commended gave instinctively, spontaneously, uncalculatingly, they gave because they could not help it, it was natural with them. In fact they did not even remember that they had done anything worthwhile. On the other hand, the people whom Jesus condemned frankly said that if they had known that it was to Christ they were giving, they would gladly have helped! You see, they thought it was only some common man who was not worth helping! There are many who still give if they think it will bring praise and thanks and publicity. But such help is not to help but to pander to self-esteem and an inflated ego.

Thirdly, Jesus declares the wonderful truth that all such help as had been given by those on his right hand had been given to him personally. How could that be? It could be because Jesus identified himself with humanity and especially with needy humanity. One of the best ways to delight the heart of parents is to do something for their child. For Jesus, God was the Father of all men, and the way to delight the heart of the Father is to do something for one of his children.

A historic incident shows how true this story is. It concerns Martin of Tours, a Roman soldier, and a Christian. One bitterly cold day, as he was entering a city, a beggar stopped him and asked for alms. Martin had no money, but the beggar blue and shivering from cold, touched the heart of this rugged Christian soldier. Taking off his soldier's coat, somewhat worn and frayed as it was, he tore it in half and gave one half to the beggar. That night he had a dream. In it he saw the heavenly places and all the angels and Jesus in the midst of them. And Jesus was wearing half of a Roman soldier's cloak! One of the angels said to Jesus "Master, why are you wearing that battered old cloak?" Who gave it to you?" And Jesus answered softly, "My servant Martin gave it to me." When we learn the generosity that shares with others without calculation even the simplest things, then we too shall know the joy of helping Jesus Christ himself.

The Scope Of Judgment

Perhaps it should be said that this basis of judgment applies to nations as well as individuals. As they stand before the King in the Last Judgment, what nations will enter into the kingdom prepared for them? It will be the nations that have developed and expressed a concern for others, the underprivileged peoples of the world. Although we have a sharp division between Church and State in America — and it is well that we do have it — Uncle Sam is expressing in a very practical way the genius of Christianity in his help to the underprivileged nations or people of the world. Alas for us as Americans if we who are so strong should ever refuse to bear the burdens of the weak. Our generous gestures are an expression of applied Christianity.

YOUTH AND UNICEF

Miss Cathie Sandstrom, editor of the youth page, sent a fine article about the United Nations Children's Fund, better known as UNICEF. Unfortunately it did not arrive until that page of the paper was being printed.

She explained that member nations of the United Nations, individuals and other organizations give money to overcome disease, ignorance and hunger wherever such aid may be needed.

Young people at Halloween, she says, join in raising money for UNICEF through "Trick or Treat" activities, and that this is an important part of Pilgrim Fellowship work. It is her hope that young people in all our churches will share in this excellent program for sharing with the needy, and in this way make the fun of Halloween produce helpful service in many parts of our world.

ACTIVITIES AT OAKLAND

Laymen's Sunday was observed at Oakland church October 15 with the men of the church in charge of the morning church service at 11 o'clock and a fellowship supper at 6:30 p.m. T. Philip Dailey presided at the morning service, and Mills E. Godwin, Jr., delivered the message. J. E. Savage directed a men's choir of 30. Following the fellowship supper the church's regular quarterly conference was held with a large attendance.

Nine hundred persons attended the special services for religious awakening and renewal during the week of October 8-13, with Dr. John G. Truitt, Elon College, N. C. as guest preacher. More than 200 calls in homes were made by lay people of the church, and four new members were received into the church.

A cradle roll party for the 38 babies and their mothers was held Wednesday afternoon, October 18, from 2 to 3 o'clock. Mrs. W. Blackwell Umphlette, superintendent of the cradle roll, Mrs. Raye V. Knight, superintendent of the children's department, Dr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Scott, and other leaders of the church greeted these youngest members of the congregation.

The Nominating Committee of The Southern Convention will begin work soon for the 1962-64 biennium. Suggestions of capable leaders in local churches will be welcomed.

Biggerstaff Is Married — Congratulations!

Sunday, October 15, a group from the Children's Home went to Winston-Salem to attend the wedding of John Biggerstaff, Assistant Superintendent, to Miss Bertha Bowles of Winston. Supt. and Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Bertha Phillips, Mr. C. E. Perkins, Mrs. Eva King of Burlington, and I were glad to be a part of this happy occasion for Bertha and John and to offer them our congratulations and best wishes. The Biggerstaffs will make their home here in Elon College.

On Monday, October 16, Supt. Snyder visited the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association to promote Eastern Virginia churches' attendance to our Open House on Saturday, November 4. We want each church in the Southern Convention to have a group visit our campus between ten a.m. and four p.m. on that date. Lunch will be served, at no cost, from eleven a.m. to two p.m.

Visitors to our campus will see our two new cottages, the remodeled Johnston Hall, the swimming pool which our Alumni Association has built, as well as the general work of our campus and farm. Our friends will also have the opportunity to meet our children and staff. Please see that a group from your church makes the trip to our Home for Children on November 4.

The Women's Service League of Burlington is most helpful to our Home. For several years now they have had our Home as one of their projects. Twice a month they have our older boys and girls for such activities as bowling, skating, swimming (in the summer) and special sessions, such as a charm school for the girls, as well as several parties for both boys and girls. Also twice a month another group from the Service League has charge of activities for our younger children. They take them bowling and skating and on trips to nearby places of interest and have story hours and parties here on our campus. They do quite a bit of work with our younger children in teaching them songs and games. It is of real benefit to us and to our boys and girls for the Service League to assist us in this fine way and we are grateful to them.

We are approaching the Thanksgiving season and in our office we are preparing the envelopes, bulletins, letters and other materials which will be sent as part of our effort to raise a majority of the money needed to carry us through the year. We hope that you will include our Home for Children in your giving at this Thanksgiving season. Our financial report for this week is quite good, especially from the churches. We hope that it will continue to be as fine and will increase as the weeks go by from now until Thanksgiving and on through Christmas. Seventy-two children are depending on us for their shelter, food, clothing, love and training and we are looking to our Southern Convention churches and many other friends in this area and even across the country to help us provide this care for them.

Thank you for your concern about our children and the work of our Home and all the many things you do for us.

History Of Women's Fellowship

Mrs. G. T. Parsons, Historian

The Women's Fellowship of the First Congregational Church of Richmond, Virginia, has just closed another year of fruitful activity. Our faithful president for several years, Mrs. Dennis Cofer, resigned as president February 1 of this year, but we were very fortunate in having our minister's wife, Mrs. J. Everette Neese, fill Mrs. Cofer's unexpired term.

We participated in the World Community Day, World Day of Prayer, and May Fellowship Day with our local United Council of Church Women. We met our Friendly Service quota, and our Missionary apportionments.

Our regular monthly meetings were held each month, beginning with a planning session in September with officers and chairmen of various committees. Some of the highlights of our year's activities are as follows:

October — Mrs. Neese, our Christian Education Chairman was in charge of the program. She presented a most appropriate skit on Christian Education "For their Sakes." This was written by Mrs. Neese, and was so impressive that it was repeated at the opening exercise at Sunday School the following Sunday.

November — A Flannel Board presentation was put on by the President, Mrs. Cofer, entitled "You Are the Fellowship." This was an excellent presentation of the work of the Women's Fellowship.

December — The Women's Fellowship had charge of the morning worship service on December 4, with our Stewardship Chairman, Mrs. Louise Lewis, presiding. Our Woman's gift was turned in and dedicated at this service.

December 6 — Our Christmas bazaar, covered dish supper and Christmas program.

January — Our mission study book, "One World, One Mission" was reviewed by our minister, Mr. Neese.

February — Our Social Action Chairman, Mrs. J. A. Rawls, presented two exchange students, attending Westhampton College. One was from Hong Kong and the other one was from Istanbul. Each girl gave a most interesting talk on the life in her city.

March — Our Missionary Education Chairman, Mrs. James Primm presented as our speaker for the evening, Miss May Finch, a former missionary to Japan, and now Director of Christian Education and Bible teacher at Bon Air School for Girls.

April — Our Friendly Service Chairman, Mrs. Theo Kelly, reported on her work for the year. She reported that dolls had been sent to the Delmo Communities. Toys had been sent to the Marshall Islands. $10.00 had been sent to Rev. Myron Miller for migrant missions, and $6.00 to the Congregational Christian Service Committee.

May — In May our Fellowship sponsored a Family night supper in connection with Christian Family Life Week. Mrs. Neese taught our Bible Study, the Book of Luke. Three Sunday morning class periods were devoted to this study and proved very successful. This was truly a rewarding experience as Mrs. Neese presented so beautifully "Luke's Portrait of Christ."

August — Mr. Neese reviewed the Mission Study Book, "Safe in Bondage."

Our Spiritual Life Chairman, Mrs. W. T. Parsons, gave most inspiring devotions each month and presided at our Devotional Service given each fifth Sunday in the Sunday School.

We gave a Life Membership to our retiring president, Mrs. Cofer.

We have tried to remember our sick ones throughout the church, and have contributed in any way that we could to the needs of our church.

We have high hopes for the coming year, and pray that we may continue to serve our church and our Lord.

Meditations Given At Moonelon

STEWARDSHIP AND MISSIONS RETREAT

By John R. Lackey

OUR CHRISTIAN SELF-IMAGES

Lesson: Matthew 4:17-25.

Text: Matthew 4:19-20. "And He saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they immediately left their nets."

Meditation No. 1

Two thousand years ago Jesus came among men, saying, "Follow me." Some did, some didn't. Today Jesus still moves among us, saying, "Follow me." Some do, some don't.

The first thing I would say is that our self-images are the result of our responses to the calls we hear. And the calls we hear are determined by what we love.

We all have our self images, our mental pictures of ourselves, the images by which we live. Most of us are unconscious of most of our self-images. It is a fascinating thing to study our self-images. These self-images determine what we do, how we act, what our values and aims are.

Vance Packard, in "Hidden Persuaders" and "The Status Seekers, Riesman, in The Lonely Crowd, Wilson, The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit, Whyte, in The Organization Man, and other contemporary writers are showing us how we let the world around us shape our self-images for us. The world of advertising and the world of mass media of communication have caused us to see ourselves as belonging to "the smart set, the Country Club set." We are "the sociables." We picture ourselves as "on the way up," as possessors of certain "status symbols," as "men of distinction," as "keeping up with the Joneses," as a people who "live modern." These are the self-images of the American middle-class.

But when Jesus comes, saying, "Follow Me," and we give ourselves a chance to see Him as He is, His presence gives rise to other self-images within us. We see ourselves, as did those men long ago, as Disciples, as Followers, as Learners. We think of ourselves as sinners finding forgiveness through Him, as sons finding acceptance with the Heavenly Father through Him. As His concerns become our concerns, we take on still other self-images: We see ourselves as "fishers of men," missionaries (right where we are), witnesses, stewards, co-workers with God, managers of all that God has entrusted to us, as men on a mission for God.

The world around us calls. Jesus Christ calls. We find ourselves drawn to one or the other. Our self-images are the result of our responses to the calls we hear!

Some Things We Cherish

By Supt. Clyde L. Fields

For many years, the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches has expressed its stewardship concern for Our Christian World Mission through what we call Conference Apportionment. By an apportionment formula adopted by the Southern Convention now in use, equal attention is given to membership, home expense, and past record of benevolent giving of the local church in determining an apportionment goal for each church of the Southern Convention. The apportionment goal for each church in the Southern Convention reflects the fair share of the local church in the budget adopted by the Southern Convention in session for itself for the current biennium. For the current biennium, we are seeking to raise approximately $275,000.00 for our varied stewardship concern in supporting Our Christian World Mission in North Carolina, in Virginia, through institutions, and through many agencies of our church doing the work of Christ around the world. Our churches through many years have been most generous in their support by their stewardship giving to reflect our concern that the work of Christ move forward in the local church, in the Conference, in the Convention, through the denomination, and around the world. As we become a part of the United Church of Christ, some have wondered what would be the procedure with reference to the stewardship support of Our Christian World Mission in the United Church of Christ.

In a letter dated October 5, 1961, from the Executive Committee of the Budget Committee of the United Church of Christ. The Budget Committee of the United Church of Christ urgently requests that the Conferences and Conventions continue their past practice on remittance of Conference Apportionment through the regular channels. This means that the churches of the Southern Convention will continue to send apportionment money to the Southern Convention Office, Box 247, Elon College, North Carolina. This means that cherished institutions such as Elon College, Congregational Christian Home for Children, and other institutional works held dear by the people of the Southern Convention will still be supported through the Conference apportionment. This also means that the work of the Southern Convention Office, the work of the Board of Christian Education, the summer conference program at Moonelon, the work of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, the publishing of The Christian Sun, support of The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (now the Board for World Ministries, Ed), support of the Board of Home Missions (Board for Homeland Ministry), support of the Conference Fund whereby the several Conferences carry on their work — all these things that we have been doing — will continue to be done as the churches lead stewardship support through sharing in Conference Apportionments. Certainly in the United Church of Christ, we do not wish to do less than we have been doing as a Congregational Christian fellowship.

Therefore, the cherished practice of our churches of the Southern Convention with reference to generous support of our world mission concerns will still be expressed through participation in the Conference Apportionment plan used for many years by the Southern Convention. There is a deep appreciation for the generous stewardship concern of the people of the Southern Convention reflected in all quarters of the church. There should be felt no fear in any of the churches of the Southern Convention that all the cherished institutions and instruments of Christian concern, long held dear by the people of the Southern Convention, will not be continued. Hopefully, in the United Church of Christ, we will continue to do this and even more as we move forward in the spirit of a united fellowship.

Women's Dormitory At Elon College

Newest addition to the Elon College physical plant is a three-story dormitory for women, which was completed in the late summer and occupied for the college's 1961-62 term. The new dormitory, which stands on the site formerly occupied by Ladies' Hall, was begun during the summer of 1960, and the first floor was finished and used to house 24 women students last year. An anonymous gift of $100,000 received by the college last spring made possible completion of the two upper floors this year. The completed structure now houses 80 women students and a faculty counsellor.

Here And There Among The Churches

The deacons and deaconesses of Pfafftown Community United Church of Christ are sponsoring evening services at 7:45 each Sunday, beginning November 5.

Congratulations to Dr. and Mrs. Leon Edgar Smith who observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary October 18. Dr. Smith is minister emeritus of The Christian Temple, Norfolk.

"Open House" was held at the new parsonage of the Elon College Community Church last Sunday afternoon. It is located on Atkinson Drive behind the former "J. O. Atkinson home," which is now owned by the college and the ground floor of which is used as offices for the Southern Convention.

Dr. John G. Truitt accepted a call to become pastor of Monticello church, Brown Summit, North Carolina, October 8. He is coming "back home," for he is moving his ministerial standing from the Eastern Virginia Conference to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, where he first became a member as a ministerial student from Mt. Bethel church.

The annual Greensboro Area Training School for Christian Growth will be held January 14-17 at First Congregational Christian church, Greensboro, according to announcement from Miss Dorothy Ballinger. Ministers, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and any others interested are asked to mark these dates on their calendars, so that nothing else will be planned for this time. Rev. Thomas Madren will be the dean.

World Community Day service will be held in Beverly Hills church, Burlington, Friday evening, November 3, at 7:30.

"What Does It All Add Up To?" was the sermon topic for Rev. William Joyner at Damascus October 22. Bible study on Romans is being held there this evening, October 31.

The 60th anniversary of our First, Portsmouth, church was celebrated with an address by Superintendent Clyde Fields last Friday evening and a sermon by Rev. Calvin J. Felton last Sunday morning. Mrs. Imogene Kitts Roth was guest organist and Mrs. Doris Stowell guest soloist for the Friday service. Rev. Daniel Bowers is the present pastor.

The quarterly report of the Women's Fellowship of Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur, as contained in "Ridgelif" tells that Mrs. Dolan Talbert of Pleasant Grove reviewed "One World, One Mission" at the July meeting, at which time Mrs. S. H. Pell (district chairman and a local member) installed the officers. They will observe Women's Fellowship Sunday November 12.

Hunterdale church, Franklin, Virginia, has recently honored S. M. Joyner and Clyde Burgess by making them "deacons for life."

Miss Naida Sutch, former director of Christian education at Richfield United Church of Christ, West Richfield, Ohio, where Rev. William P. Smith is pastor, has gone to Africa as an associate missionary. She will teach English and religion at Inanda Seminary near Durban.

Rev. John R. Lackey, chairman of the Southern Convention Committee on the Ministry, is calling a meeting of that committee and chairmen of similar Conference committees at Henderson November 9 to consider "common concerns" in this important department of our Church.

A silver communion cup and bread plate, 100-150 years old, were dedicated at The Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, North Carolina, October 22 at the morning worship service. They are the gifts of the Rev. Canon William J. Chase, associate rector of St. James Episcopal Church, New York City, in memory of his father, Herbert L. Chase, who was a member of our Tryon church.

Sympathy is extended to Rev. Bland Leebrick in the loss of his brother, William Leebrick of Butler, Pennsylvania, who was buried in Lynchburg, Virginia, October 27, and to Mrs. Leebrick, whose brother, Lineas Griffin, was buried at Spray, North Carolina, October 22. At last report (Wednesday) Mr. Leebrick, new pastor of the Shenrock Pastorate in the Valley of Virginia, was headed for the hospital in expectation of having an appendectomy.

Golden Years Bring Golden Anniversary

OCTOBER 18, 1911 — OCTOBER 18, 1961

By L. E. Smith

Fifty golden years. Every year filled with golden opportunities. Every opportunity filled with earnest and faithful efforts to realize its meaningful purpose. Cooperation of grateful faithful friends, surrounded by consecrated and loyal laborers have made life happy, joyous and blessed for Mrs. Smith, my good wife, and me as we have endeavored to obey the commands of God and follow the leading of His Spirit. The way has not always been plain, but we have never been left alone. The days have brought their burdens, but always the conscious lifting of an Unseen Hand.

Weakness has been frightening, but fresh supplies of grace have added courage to faltering spirits. The years have been long measured by the calendar, made brief by the noiseless tread of the feet of "Him whose we are and whom we serve."

Today we look back over the way we have come since first we met at Elon College in the fall of 1906; to the bright autumn day when Miss Ella Brunk became my wife on the Colonial front porch of her father's home near Cluster Springs, Virginia; to our first home in Greensboro, North Carolina where I was serving as pastor of our First Christian Church; to Princeton, New Jersey, for three wonderful years in the Seminary and the University; on to Huntington, Indiana where our two dear children came to bless our lives during our pastorate of the First Christian Church for four years; then to Norfolk, Virginia in 1919 to serve the Third Christian Church (after four years The Christian Temple).

Then, of a sudden, a question, a serious question, a never dreamed of question, thrust itself into my very soul. There had never been the least question from the day of my conversion of my call to the ministry. The miraculous events of twelve happy years with an unsurpassed, gracious and consecrated people, during which time the Christian Temple came into being, seemed to assure the rightness of my repeated refusal to consider administrative responsibilities in the field of Christian Higher Education. However, it was our own church college that was calling, which at that time seemed to be doomed. Demanding voices were disquieting, they would not be hushed. The transition finally prevailed and the twenty-six years of faithful service to Elon College are a matter of history.

The march of time clocked off the years. Our retirement was at hand. Again, as age seeks the familiar, it seemed natural that our future home should be near those things and associations that we had long loved.

Before we left Elon College our forty-fifth wedding anniversary was beautifully celebrated with our friends there in the social Hall of the new McEwen building. This year a number of our friends of many years at the Christian Temple, and others, took knowledge of our fiftieth wedding anniversary and arranged a surprise dinner party at the Officer's Club at the Naval Base. This arrangement was possible through the courtesy of our cherished pastor and his wife, the former Captain and Mrs. Frank Hamilton. To complete the plan and surprise, even last summer those responsible had an understanding with our daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Smith Wild, of Anne Arbor, Michigan and our son, Leon Edgar, Jr. and his lovely wife, Elizabeth, of Danville, Virginia, to be present. It was indeed a beautiful party and a delightful occasion.

As we sat at the table, looked into the faces of dear friends for many years about us, we felt a great tenderness and sincere gratitude for the thought and efforts of those who came and the generous sponsors of it all. We remembered, too, the scores and hundreds of warm friends far and near, who through the years have shared with us their efforts, their love and their means to develop those interests close to the hearts of us all and so meaningful to the cause that we love. We also knew that we had their interest and good wishes on this memorable occasion. But above all we humbly and devoutly thank God for YOU all and for each other: a life crowned with every needed blessing — truly ours have been Fifty Golden Years.

Virginia Valley Central Conference

The 113th annual session of our Virginia Valley Central Conference met October 24 in historic Timber Ridge church — the only Southern Convention church in West Virginia. A visit to this area in the fall, with the mountain slopes covered with beautiful autumn colors and the apple trees loaded with fruit, reminds one of the beauty and goodness of God's earth. The host church, founded in 1812, now has a useful parish house across the road from the sanctuary and there the hundred visitors were served a bountiful dinner. Eastern Virginia visitors present were: Mrs. Ray Gordon, Mrs. J. S. Rollings, and Mrs. Garland Spratley.

Presiding was Rev. S. E. Madren. Opening worship was led by a new pastor in the area, Rev. Bland Leebrick. The Convention "team" composed of Fields, Knowles, Andes (for Elon College) and Lester called attention of the group to our common causes. Rev. Kenneth Bishop, E. and R. minister of Woodstock, shared information concerning the United Church of Christ in that area, expressing the thought that formation of an association by this group was inevitable, no matter which direction it went in the realignment process. He stated that the ministers had been meeting together regularly for several years, that the laymen had formed a joint organization, that the youth officers were meeting jointly this fall, and that the women were holding a joint workshop.

Dr. Nathanael Guptill brought a message which emphasized the importance of the ordained ministry: "Where the ministry is industrious, learned, devoted, pious, then the church is the Church; where the ministry is lazy, ignorant, selfish, worldly, then the church is not the church but just another community organization." He also emphasized the importance of the laity in relieving the shortage of ministers: Have a changed attitude in the home regarding the ministry; pay the ministers salaries comparable to

This Is Hallowe'en

This evening (October 31) young people and children, dressed as they suppose witches should be, will travel from house to house displaying their costumes, frightening people, begging "trick or treat," and otherwise enjoying what is usually innocent fun. By so doing they will be joining in a line of "witchery" that runs back through many centuries into forgotten observances of people who really believed in fairies, spirits, witches, and all the rest of the unknown spiritual beings. In ancient times bon fires were lighted, perhaps to frighten away or to direct the course of the multitude of spirits that inhabited the earth.

But when young people did the "Trick or Treat" for UNICEF they broke through the ancient customs with an idea of value. They were seeking aid for needy people, not just begging for themselves, which is far better.

Two Million Per Sunday

If all the members of the United Church of Christ would attend church services every Sunday and present as an offering one dollar each, the offering in our churches would be more than $2,000,000 each week, or more than $52,000,000 per year. This is a sizeable sum, even in a wealthy country like the United States of America.

Of course many members give much more than one dollar per Sunday. The tragedy is that so many members are not present for the Sunday service, and their money stays home with them.

The little that any one of us can give is small indeed in comparison with the amount needed by the United Church of Christ, which is only one of more than 250 denominations. But our gifts added to those of others across the nation will do much to bring medicine to the sick, training to children and youth, churches to churchless, and faith to the faithless.

The offering you make to your church is a very important matter to you, your church, and to the kingdom of Christ. Let it be generous and joyful.

Church Budgets

Church budgets tell the story of the intelligence and devotion of church members.

The objects to which contributions are to be made and the amounts indicated for each show the wisdom of those who make up the budget and those who vote for its adoption. It is generally believed that most church members know very little about what goes with the money they are asked to give. That ought not to be true. Every individual should know exactly why every item is in the budget, and ought to be keenly aware of the proportional amount of each item. Perhaps it is the janitor who is not being paid adequately for his service. Or it may be the amount for overseas ministries that is horribly inadequate. It has happened that budget committees make their work easy by recommending "the same as last year," and promote it by saying, "we have not increased the budget any this year." With the world ready for an explosion that may clear the earth of human habitation it is difficult to believe that this is either the best that can be done, or that it is a good Christian witness. All of us who claim to be Christian should be challenged continually to do more than we have done.

Just for fun — and as an exercise in Christian stewardship — take another look at the budget of your church. What proportion goes for the luxurious comfort of the members who are "begged" to give to Our Christian World Mission? What is the average daily gift of each member for the World Mission, especially that portion of it that lies beyond our native land? Remembering that we are challenged in the Congregational Christian churches to give $11,500,000 in 1962 for work outside the local church, check to see if your church plans to give its share. Since our entire Christian World Mission costs only $22.00 per minute, determine just how many minutes your church proposes to "hold the entire mission in its hand."

Church budgets also show the devotion of the membership. It is said on good authority that budget committees find it difficult to get an increase in items that do not directly benefit the givers. Money can be secured for buildings, heat, light, water, air conditioning, carpets, etc. etc., but it is much more difficult to increase the amounts for Conference Apportionments — for anything that goes outside the local community. Why is that? Lack of knowledge may be part of the reason, but the sad truth is that the devotion of church members to the business of making Christ known to the world is the major reason for the small budget for Our Christian World Mission in many of our churches. Don't take the word of an editor for this. Investigate it for yourself. Talk with your own church members about the great work of trying to make the world Christian. See for yourself the degree of enthusiasm they manifest. If you can do it skillfully and without offense, ask them how much they give to overseas missions weekly, monthly, or annually. Don't be too greatly shocked at the result of your investigation, but see if there isn't something that can be done to change the situation.

This writer is of the opinion that the church budget (together with the treasurer's report) tells more about the spiritual health than any other one thing — more than the property owned, the attendance at services, the number and value of cars parked around the church, the scholarship of the minister, or the social standing of the membership.

Remember Jesus stood over by the offering box and watched as the people put money into it.

COMMUNISM AND ITS TRY IN THE UNITED STATES

Communism is looked upon with disfavor in the United States but at one time it was tried here in one form or another. All efforts to make it a policy for living failed completely.

Near the close of the colonial period in America, more than a dozen groups, small and large, migrated from various parts of the old world to the new with the purpose of setting up a "new order for living."

This "new order" was the establishment of communal villages — in most cases consisting of log houses — where all income from occupations and properties would go into a common treasury. Villages were constructed in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Missouri, Indiana, Connecticut, New York, Iowa, and Oregon. So widely scattered were these communal undertakings that, if they had succeeded, this country might have developed into a communist stronghold.

The principal groups with a purpose to spread their communistic ways of living were the Shakers, the Rappists, the Eben-Ezers or Amanas, the Owenites, the Oneidas, the Perfectionists, the Aurora and Bethel communists. The number of persons in a village ranged from 100 to 600. Each group had its own peculiar religious belief or no belief.

Rev. George Rapp, founder of the Rappists, kept his 600 German mechanics in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Indiana, tinkering by telling them the coming of the Lord was near. Nikita Khrushchev keeps his jail birds fluttering by telling them they are about to be attacked by the United States, the most peaceful country in the world.

All these movements had their beginning in a period of financial depression and social unrest. Many members drew their design for living from the whims of a leader as to what was good and what was bad in life and what should be avoided. Eating was in common dining rooms and in some villages men and women ate at separate tables. Conventional marriages were not permitted; to increase their number they proposed to adopt orphans.

Although some industry became a specialty with each village, a few villages developed more than one industry. The Shakers, for example, produced tables, baskets, and harvesting forks, while the Oneidas developed silverware, the forerunner of the present Community Silver Plate. Amanan woolens, noted for their long-wearing qualities, are still manufactured in Amanas Village near Iowa City, Iowa. The Shaker table and the Shaker basket are coveted antiques, and a few manufacturers duplicate these wares of early design. Many places bear the names of villages of these would-be reformers. Bethel, Missouri; Shaker Heights, Ohio, a suburb of Cincinnati; and Oneida, New York, are examples.

Most villages prospered for a few years, some lasting 10 years and some more than 50. But because of a non-marrying creed and inability to obtain enough orphans to replace permanently the members who died, prosperity waned. Orphans would leave when they realized that they were being shut off from the outside world.

Since these communal villagers were not contributing anything to the betterment of society, they became static and gradually sold their lands and other possessions to capitalists whom they disliked and the receipts placed in trust to insure burial expenses for members who did not choose to return to their native lands.

There was another migration of people to colonial America but who believed in individual living and individual freedom. They were the brave Pilgrims who spent two months on uncertain waters aboard the Mayflower on their journey to freedom-land. And they did not come to demonstrate the inconsistencies of communism or any other ism but to live individual lives in the sacred precincts of liberty.

Harriet Beecher Stowe lived for 18 years in Cincinnati, separated only by the Ohio River from a slaveholding community. Here she often came in contact with fugitive slaves and listened to their stories. It was from them that she received inspiration to write Uncle Tom's Cabin.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

BEGINNING OF WISDOM

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: a good understanding have all they that do his commandments."

Psalm 111:10.

Wisdom — ability to judge soundly and deal sagaciously with facts, especially as they relate to life and conduct, so says the dictionary. To judge soundly and deal sagaciously with facts as they relate to life. Well, the fear of the Lord is the beginning of that ability.

Fear of the Lord, what is that? Do you remember that verse in Paul's letter to the Romans, (Rom. 13:7.)? "Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor." Give all their dues. Next verse is: "Owe no man anything, but to love one another; for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." How about that! It is all tied up with love. If we take "fear" and shoot it through with gratitude and love we get a love-filled reverence.

Trust, faith, and obedience follow. "A good understanding have all they that do his commandments." If the disciples saw him, knew him, experienced fellowship with him, and if they acted wisely they would obey his command: Follow Me.

The beginning of wisdom in a person must come at the beginning of his life, love and responsive gratitude instinctively given for goodness and care shown by the mother and father. The facts pile up! Facts, the answered cry, recovery from the first tottering fall, the kindness and care shown, the love multiplied, the lessons taught — facts — "deal sagaciously with the facts!" How important that a child's education begin in his grandparents and parents before he is born. "Honor thy father and mother." "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God."

Churches Observe Laymen's Sunday In October

Carolina

Mr. Lonnie Thomas and Mr. Tommy Murray gave the morning message. The bulletin included this thought: "The service of the laymen never ends. He is a minister unto all."

Beverly Hills, Burlington

"Ye Shall Be My Witnesses" was the topic with Luther Ingold, Zeb Lynch and J. L. Faulkner bringing the messages. Leader of the worship service was Norman Burke. The anthem by the men's chorus was "God Send Us Men."

High Point

Staley Woodell and Clayton Smith were the speakers for Laymen's Sunday, using "Ye Shall Be My Witnesses" as their topic. Others sharing in the service included C. C. Fairington, Boyd Gardner, and Bruce Woodell. Ushers were Ronnie Gardner and Harry Lester.

Hunterdale, Franklin

W. G. O'Brien preached the "sermon" at Hunterdale October 15. Others sharing in the service included S. M. Joyner (invocation), Stanley Johnson (announcements), Lee Roy Allen (responsive reading), V. B. Harrell (offering), James Campbell (scripture reading); Steve Hornok (morning prayer), Harry Gullett (solo—Ave Maria). The pastor, Rev. Harold W. Tribble, Jr., pronounced the benediction. Ushers were: Arthur Smith, C. W. Burgess Ryland Hasty, Jesse Drewery, Earl Blankenship, and Elwood Gavin.

First, Burlington

Herbert N. Wellons, Horace Freeman and Robert C. Baxter, Jr. spoke concerning the work of "A Christian Layman." Others participating in the service were J. W. McLellan, Harvey Sharpe, and Herman Truitt. Guest soloist was Miss Patricia Jones, senior at Elon College and member of our Suffolk church.

First, Portsmouth

Participating in the service were J. S. Cobb who led the call to worship and read the Old Testament lesson; W. H. Byrd who gave the invocation; H. H. Harcum who gave the offertory prayer and the morning prayer; W. W. Piland who read the New Testament lesson, and gave the benediction; and P. C. Mountcastle sang "How Great Thou Art." Speaker was Mack Cherry, who used as his topic "The Forks of the Road."

Bethlehem, Valley of Virginia

Stanley Lohr, J. S. Sellers and Clarence A. Phillips were the speakers on "You Shall Be My Witnesses." Clark Foltz led the service. Others participating were: Call to Worship, Ralph White; invocation, James Lohr; responsive reading, James Rhodes; scripture, F. H. Harrison, Jr.; prayer, Robert Rhodes; offering, Shirley White; prayer, William E. Jamison; benediction, J. L. Rhodes. The pastor, Rev. Bland Leebrick, christened three babies. The choir was composed of men who sang as their special, "Rise Up, O Men of God."

recognition of the living God. We must proclaim Him in word and in deed. If we want peace, we have the pattern in Christ Jesus, Our Lord, who came as a babe bringing peace on earth and who came as the Saviour of the World. We must act by his example. In Acts 12, Herod's persecutions turned conditions at that time into chaos and confusion; slayings and imprisonments. In all this God's plan was being revealed gradually. Any sacrifice strengthens the roots of righteousness when we turn to God in prayer. When the shining light of God comes upon us and we rise up and follow God, we can depend on God's help when we work for him in word and deed. Mr. Chappell's closing words were, "And when Peter was come to himself" . . . so do we know how to witness with God's help when we follow the pattern of Jesus as set forth in the scriptures.

The hymn of preparation was "Jesus Loves Me" and the hymn of dedication was "Draw Me Nearer."

The Benediction was given by the minister, Reverend William A. Cousins.

MT. ZION LAYMEN LEAD SERVICE

By Myrtle Shepherd, Reporter

The laymen of Mt. Zion United Church of Christ, Route 3, Mebane, North Carolina, conducted the morning worship service October 15.

Jerry Hargis and Tommy Hamlett served as acolytes. Mr. Weldon Ward gave the call to worship. Mr. Gattis Carden led the Lord's Prayer. Mr. Lester Newlin was the moderator. Mr. Vance Albright led the responsive reading. Scripture reading from John 1:1-20 was by Mr. R. H. Coble, following which Mr. Hubert Walker led the morning prayer. Mr. Odis Johnson had the offertory prayer. Mr. Bill Tate gave "Parish Comments" (announcements).

The topic for the morning messages was "And Ye Shall Be My Witnesses," by Mr. William Tate and Rev. Glenn Garrett.

Mr. Tate asked the following questions and then answered them: How can we be a witness? Where are we to be witnesses? (In our home, at work in our church, everywhere). When are we to be witnesses? (Now!) Who are we to be witnesses to? (Go into all the world and witness).

South Norfolk Laymen Lead Services

Laymen's Sunday was observed at South Norfolk church at the morning worship hour October 15.

The theme "You Shall Be My Witnesses" was followed.

Mr. W. Frank Lindsey, chairman of the board of deacons, presided. The opening hymn was "Onward Christian Soldiers" followed by an invocation and the Lord's Prayer and a responsive reading.

Mr. Elliott E. Henley read the scripture from Acts 12:1-8 and offered the morning prayer.

The layman's message was brought by Mr. W. C. Chappell, Jr., teacher of the Onward Friendship Bible Class, who chose as his topic, in the form of a question, "Do We Want God's Help?" His next question was do we show it? He used the analogy of medical help when we are sick and our response to the prescriptions given. Thus, as Christians are we following the prescription of God? In developing his topic Mr. Chappell referred to the cold war with Russia in which we are not responsible for the conduct of the Russians who are atheistic and of the world; but we are responsible for our actions as God's people and as a Christian nation. Our representatives in their dealings in national affairs make no

Rev. Mr. Garrett said we were to witness to a fact — the resurrection of Jesus Christ, who came into our midst. This resurrection is still happening at the present time through the witness of our lives.

Mr. Keyston Young gave the benediction. Mr. Frank Tate and Mr. Charlie Oakes were the ushers.

It was good to sit back and enjoy the service by the laymen. They did a good job and it was enjoyed by all present.

ELON LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP YEAR

Bill Pendergrass, President

The men of our Fellowship in the Elon College Community Church are to be congratulated as our year nears its conclusion. They have participated in and carried out programs in an inspiring manner and with true Christian fellowship.

One of our major undertakings was participation in the construction of the parsonage. Our men contributed through sincere interest. There was no reward to be gained, no desire for recognition and probably no one to say "thanks." What about the long hours spent in the planning, or the running all over the city and county in search of materials at the best dollar's value? How many of us noticed 3 or 4 of our men putting up outside storm sheeting until after dark one Saturday; or the group that worked so hard with shovel and wheelbarrow to get the ground under the house cleaned; or the fellows working with wall insulation until they itched all over?

One of our men worked from 5 a.m. until sundown with his own equipment. He didn't have to, but he did! Some of you might be interested in knowing how long it takes to install a heating system — one of our men can tell you, and he did it at no charge. What about the painting of the windows, the boxing, and the doors — do you have any idea who did it? Who matched the various shades of varnish and stain day by day — and he did it when his health was not too good? The planning and the installation of the electrical wiring wasn't noticed a great deal, but one of our men spent long hours on it. The multitude of scrap lumber and wood blocks was gathered by one man — who was he? The lawn work on a hot Saturday afternoon — our men did that, too. These are just a few of the ways in which our men pitched in and did the work.

Our men contributed not only muscle and sweat but they gave money, too. Under the leadership of one man, $620 was raised for painting and gutter work on the Parish House. This was urgent, and our men came forward with most of this sum.

Our program chairman has secured wonderful speakers for our meetings. Our telephone committee has been faithful in their task. The special projects committee formulated the plans for the parsonage work.

To complete our year, our men will take part in the Church Mission Week, November 15-19. On Sunday, November 19, these men who have given so much will be calling on our Church families to receive our pledges for the combined budget: Current Expenses — Benevolence and Building Fund.

These are the men of our Laymen's Fellowship — the men you see each day and at church on Sunday. Our Church and community can be proud of them.

Howard White, managing editor of the Daily Times-News of Burlington and leading Evangelical and Reformed layman, was the speaker for the Burlington area laymen's fellowship rally at Bethlehem church, Altamahaw, last Thursday.

"Share Our Surplus"

As Thanksgiving approaches, Protestant and Orthodox churches in the nation are preparing to answer the Christian commitment to feed the hungry. Under the sponsorship of Church World Service, the relief and rehabilitation agency of the National Council of Churches, the Share Our Surplus (SOS) program this year will make it possible to maintain and hopefully to increase distribution of wheat, flour, bulgar wheat, corn meal, powdered milk and cooking oils to the needy in 39 areas of Asia, Africa, Europe and Latin America.

The goal for 1962, said Hugh D. Farley, CWS executive director, is for $979,380. Because these food stuffs are made available from U. S. Government surplus stocks and transportation is largely defrayed by the government, this means that more than $30 million worth of food can be distributed. It was pointed out also that a large part of the distribution and administrative work of the program is carried out by volunteers and that some governments of the recipient nations also help defray shipping costs.

In addition to setting aside stocks for eventual disasters (in past years Church World Service has usually been the first on the scene as in Chile, Pakistan, Japan and elsewhere) food is allotted to continuing CWS programs overseas. These include supplemental feeding for widows, orphans, school children, hospital patients and the aged. SOS food is also distributed in refugee camps and hostels.

Funds in response to the annual appeal will be contributed in thousands of churches, at Thanksgiving Week community services and through the Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP), a CWS unit which also contributes foodstuffs given by U. S. farmers.

WOMEN'S MEETING IN SOUTH NORFOLK

By Beatrice George

The Women's Fellowship of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church held its quarterly meeting for the year 1961-1962 Thursday evening September 28 with Mrs. W. B. Evans, the president, presiding.

Mrs. Carlton Chappell conducted the devotionals with the theme "The Living Church" reading from the gospel of Matthew — Peter's revelation of The Christ, the son of the living God and the wise man who built his house upon a rock. The hymn which followed the prayer was "A Charge to Keep I Have."

Mrs. C. N. Harris, vice president, presented our theme for the year "Creating and Renewing the Church."

A service of recognition was presented by Mrs. Hugh Rawls in honor of the designated Life Memberships and Memorials for the past year. After scripture reading from Proverbs 3:13-25 there was a skit on the Christian Higher Education Fund to which the Life Memberships and Memorial funds were allotted. Mrs. Coleman Hargrove and Mrs. Gregory Tegeredis assisted Mrs. Rawls in the skit. After presentation of the Life Membership certificates the group sang "Let the Beauty of Jesus Be Seen in Me" and after the presentation of the Memorials, Mrs. Melvin Thomas sang "Sunrise."

We were honored with the presence of our district superintendent, Mrs. M. K. Hassell.

Work In Our Marathi Mission

Ahmednagar, India
August 15, 1961

Dear Friends,

A year ago now I was enjoying all the good things of America: food, automobiles, beautiful Churches, organ music, running hot water, big bath tubs and best of all my good friends. Helen Burgess and I had an interesting trip on two Italian Liners (I would not choose again, however, to be at sea on Christmas). We spent four days between ships in Naples. We had hoped, too late in our planning, to fly to Rome, Athens, the Holy Land and Cairo. We thought we could pick up our ship somewhere in the Suez. So we spent the days sight seeing in Naples. The cable car trip to the top of Vesuvius and the look into the steaming crater were breathtaking. You would have enjoyed seeing us climbing astride camels for the trip to the Pyramids and "Sphinxes" in Cairo. I was thankful that we had a visit to the Coptic Christian Church. Great heroism has been shown in that church during the centuries.

I had the thrilling experience of being met by friends in many ports around the world. Coming back to the garlands of friends who met us in Bombay was the climax of those thrills. The crowd at the station in Ahmednagar was continued assurance that it was right for me to return to India. I had one day to go to the Industry where I wept tears of joy and thankfulness for the way things had gone while I was away, greet the many who came to the bungalow, and prepare to leave for a 10 day Mission meeting at the Spiritual Life Center at Nasrapur. Helen went along and was grateful for the experience of being in on Mission plans at so close range. She enjoyed it even though accommodations are rather primitive. Many were surprised to see me back after such a short furlough.

My promise had been made to be back so that the two young men who carried so much responsibility while I was away could cram for examinations. David has passed Matric High Second Class. You will remember that he made floor mats at our loom, kept his book beside him, and attended night school. His hopes were set on taking a "Compounder's Course" (Pharmacy) which could be done in two years after High School. But standards are coming up in India. One must have 2 years college. Now David is in Ahmednagar College and works as he has time in the Industry. We are grateful for his swift exacting work. Kishor Ghodke did very creditable supervision of shipping while I was away. In spite of his cramming for his B. A. exams, he failed in two subjects. Most of his other subjects were Second Class so he will not have to take them again. He will pass next time. In the meantime he is carrying more and more responsibility at the Industry. Savetra the 3rd of my fine co-workers is doing most of her work in one-half day, studying in the afternoon and going to night school. Our pay scales are according to certificate and she does not get the wages she is earning because she failed her Matric Exams several years ago. She is capable, she has won the hearts of the workers and she is trustworthy.

It took until March 26 for Helen to get transportation home. And I was most happy to have her companionship. (Eating alone is one of the things I like least about arrangements here.) I had a good excuse to travel over the Mission and to see progress during my furlough; the new High School at Vadala, the buildings at Wai Hospital, and the leprosy work at Satara. It is wonderful to see how changed the outlook is for the leper. Of course fingers, noses and ears cannot be replaced but the disease itself can be arrested by the new drugs. I will divert here to tell about the extended stay I had in Kodi and my trip home.

Harriet Wilder asked me to stay with them until Dr. Thomas gave permission to leave for Vellore. Dr. "Ned" had had a coronary. We left Kodi on June 19th. I had hoped for an excuse to visit Vellore, the great Christian Medical Center. It is thrilling. Do read the latest book, Dr. Ida, the founder of Vellore. Dr. Ida B. Scudder took me through her department (radium) and out to the

- 5—Rev. and Mrs. Eric Gass went out in 1960 and make a great team. He lived in India where his parents were veteran missionaries, and now has been trained at Elmhurst, Eden, Yale, and Syracuse University to be a writer and producer of Christian literature, while she is a nurse.
- 6—Miss Hedwig Schaeffer has done educational work in India since 1925. In the beginning of her service, parents had to be begged to send their children; now the schools are crowded.
- 7—Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Feierabend are medical missionaries stationed at Tilda, where he is superintendent of Evangelical Mission Hospital and she is a nurse. He is son and grandson of missionaries to India.
- 8—Miss Minnie Galt is nursing superintendent and director of school of nursing at the Tilda hospital. Since 1926 she has made this her vocation and her avocation.

Bangalore

- 9—Bangalore is one of great cities in India, with a population of 1,250,000. Capital of the State of Mysore, it is a center of government, education and industry and center of work of Church of South India.
- 10—Rev. and Mrs. Max Hunter Harrison became missionaries emeritus last June after 43 and 49 years respectively in India and Ceylon. After teaching at Jaffan College, Ceylon, he was called to Bangalore United Theological College in 1930, where he became principal. He has taught many of the leaders of the Church of South India. She is daughter and granddaughter of missionaries and was teacher in Ceylon and India. "Theirs has been a full life and they have given unstintingly of their best.
- 11—Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Jones went to Bombay to 1960 to begin a short term with the Student Christian Movement of India. They live in Bangalore and travel to Christian colleges. Both have degrees from Union Seminary.

Medical College. Mr. Bundelu, our own student there, took me through the leprosy ward. The rehabilitation work is amazing. Stiff finger joints are being loosened, and new tendons grafted into the fingers. There is no feeling, but movement is possible. Plastic pieces are put into the flattened noses through incisions in the roof of mouth and skin grafting holds the nose in place. New eye brows are grafted from the hair on the head. (Wonder if hair banks may be developed to help baldness?) Dr. Brand, the surgeon perfecting many of these operations has recently received a citation from the Queen.

At Satara the patients say, "why do visitors come to see us who have been shunned by everyone, even our own families?" the answer— "it was the Christ who first showed compassion for the leper."

Our forces here in the Marathi Mission have been greatly depleted during the last six months. Loleta Wood has gone home for retirement. Robert and Marie Fairbank left suddenly a year before retirement because of Bob's health. The two nurses who came in 1960 have gone back to America. Surely in this age of world concern there are devoted sacrificing young people willing to carry on the great work of our 150 year old Mission (1963). We must carry on until there are more Indian Christians ready to take up the work of the Christ. They too must learn that Christ has no other hands and minds but theirs.

My prayer is for the United Church of Christ (Congregational and Evangelical and Reformed). I am sure on that last day Christ will not ask us our denominational affiliation, how much money we have in the bank or who our circle of friends were, but he will question our spirit in bringing about the kind of world we are all praying for.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Frank Tishkins

P. S. The Memorial for Frank at the Chadron Church is near completion. It is a lovely bulletin board with a frame work matching the church.

We are looking forward to visits from some of the delegates to the World Council of Churches meeting in Delhi in the fall. It is rather sad that the lack of hotel accommodations and of a big enough meeting hall is limiting attendance of Indian Christians and the Missionaries who would very much like to attend this meeting. Next best thing is to have delegates visit in our Mission Stations.

few years ago. We could go on — but this gives us the picture of the rapid changes which are taking place. We are told that the next 15 years will bring even greater changes than the past fifteen.

What about the Christian Church in this new kind of world in which we find ourselves? The latest figures I have seen on this subject tell us that only 8 per cent of the population of the world is Christian. Because the population explosion in certain areas of the world is greater than it is in the western world, it is predicted that by the year 2000 only 5 per cent of the world's population will be Christian. Have you ever realized that we belong to the world's greatest minority?

In the light of world conditions it behooves us to work seriously with this year's theme: "Creating and Renewing the Church." Let us reaffirm the real purpose of the church — to tell the story that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, and that it was because of love for all mankind that Jesus died upon the cross.

We must remember that the church is the body of Christ and that means all persons regardless of race, color or creed who have accepted Christ as their Lord and Saviour and are striving to do his will.

We can readily see that new ways must be found for reaching the masses of people and getting the message of the church over to them. While writing on this report, the postman brought my copy of MISSION TODAY. Let me give you an interesting example of what one Christian layman did:

"Can tooth-pulling be evangelistic? Dr. David Howell, dentist from Alliance, Ohio, proved that it can be. He spent his vacation in March of this year pulling 2,300 teeth in sixteen villages in Honduras.

He traveled over bumpy mountain roads. He used a rocking chair for a dental chair. He worked after dark by flashlight and Coleman lamp.

People walked for miles. Many returned with 14, 15, or 16 less teeth. They paid 25 cents for one extraction; 50 cents for two or more. Their comments were: 'What makes him so patient?' — 'Why, he treats us as if we were somebody! And he calls this his vacation!'

President's Message

By Mary H. Booth

"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and put a new and right spirit within me."

Suppose each one of us would pray this prayer each day from now until the end of the conference year we are now beginning. Can you imagine what kind of reports we could make next year. This is of course, if we really prayed the prayer and tried to help God answer it by committing ourselves fully to his will.

Next year, on October 4, we will be holding our 50th annual session. This should be a real challenge to us as we work through the present year. The comparison of figures show that we have grown much through the years. But before we can determine our present growth we must be sure we are using the right yardstick to measure with.

Today we are living in a different kind of world than we were when our organization was born. Our historian's report mentions that at the first mass meeting held in 1913 "quite a few high top buggies were seen with old dobbins tethered to the trees in the grove."

We are told that our nation has gone almost as far in its development in the last 15 years as it had in the 169 years which preceded 1945. Today jet planes can span our country in 5 hours and 40 minutes. One can take an eastbound plane at 11:00 a.m. from Tokyo and arrive in Honolulu at 10:30 the previous evening. There are PUSH BUTTONS which will heat our homes or cool them, cook our food or freeze it, do our laundry, wash our dishes, bring music and entertainment into our homes and do many other things. We have many miracle drugs which were undreamed of a

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

A PROJECT FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE

Church Building In Mexico

Los Mochis is a fast growing town in Mexico. New buildings are going up and unpaved roads are becoming paved boulevards with modern lighting equipment.

Among the new buildings on one of these newly paved streets is a new church. Christians in the United States are helping Christians in Mexico to pay for their new church.

Rev. Oscar C. Nussmann, the Latin American Secretary for the United Church Board for World Ministries, was in Mexico when the corner-stone was laid in December 1960. He said:

"I saw the children meeting in the morning for Sunday school classes under the open sky before the roof was on the church. They sat on benches where finally the pulpit and altar will be. They could begin to see how the church would look when it would be finished. In the afternoon everyone, children and grown-ups, watched as names, records, and Bible and hymnbook were put in a hole in the corner-stone. Everyone followed as the men carried the heavy stone to the tower fall and it was cemented in place. The stone was inscribed with the date, and was placed as a promise that the Los Mochis church was dedicated to the worship of God and to the service of men."

In the New Testament Jesus is spoken of as "The Cornerstone."

Children and youth who want to help in building churches in Mexico can send their money to the Southern Convention office, Elon College, N. C. The Mexico Church Building Aid is an "Authorized Special" and apportionment credit will be given if requested. This project can be used in connection with the Friendship Press materials on the interdenominational theme, "The Christian Mission in Latin American Countries."

Seven slides of the Los Mochis corner-stone laying program may be borrowed from Missions Council, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts.

HOLY NECK HAS RETREAT

Mamie Harrell, Reporter

The Pilgrim Fellowship of Holy Neck United Church of Christ had a weekend retreat September 15-17 at Virginia Beach, Virginia. We enjoyed planned recreation and worship. Devotionals in the morning and vesper services in the evening were an important part of our program. The Installation Service was held on the beach Saturday night. Sunday morning all twenty of us attended church at the Virginia Beach Methodist Church. After dinner Sunday, we came home. This ended our weekend of "Fun, Fellowship, and Worship" together.

"Smoking and Alcoholism" was the topic for the youth fellowship groups at The United Church of Christ, Southern Pines, October 22. Dick Seymour was the leader.

Members of the Senior High Pilgrim Fellowship of the Elon College Community Church visited in the homes of that community the night before Halloween to receive gifts for UNICEF. This United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund was set up to help the children of the world fight disease and malnutrition.

Young people led the service at High Point October 29. In keeping with Reformation Sunday, they made talks concerning the history of the Protestant Reformation and each of the four Churches making up the United Church of Christ.

HALLOWEEN PARTIES AT TEMPLE

October 27 at 8 o'clock, our Junior High Fellowship had its Halloween Party in the social hall.

The next evening, Saturday, at 8 o'clock, the Senior High Fellowship had its celebration of Halloween. The members of this fellowship invited the members of the Pilgrim Fellowship in our Suffolk Church as their guests.

The annual Halloween Party for the Nursery, Beginners, Primary and Junior Departments of our Church School was held on Monday evening, October 30, from 7 to 8:30. This was a costume party for all the children.

Mary Lynn Murphy, Reporter

The Pilgrim Fellowship groups of the Suffolk Christian Church started their year with a joint outdoor, candlelight communion service. Just before the service our pastor, Dr. George D. Alley, gave an inspiring talk on teenage problems. The choir sang softly throughout the service.

We had as our guests Sue Dennis, Kathy Copeland, Linwood Robinson, Ellen Smith, Sheila Hughes, and Nettie Saied of Norfolk.

"Teenage Fellowship" at Carolina, near Burlington, is studying the world's major faiths. The group has grown to 37 in number. Rev. D. Larry Smith is the pastor.

Last Sunday afternoon a special movie on the UNICEF program was shown to the younger youth group at Pfaftown Community United Church of Christ, where Rev. Kieth Wright is pastor. This evening (Halloween) all children in the community are to meet at the church to be taken by car to collect for UNICEF. Refreshments will be served to them at the church afterwards.

HOMECOMING EVENTS

Eleanor Smith, of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, was crowned as 1961 Homecoming Queen at Elon College Saturday night, October 28, climaxing a weekend of festivities which included a parade, a football game, a contest for the best in campus decorations and two dances. Dian Clary, of Lawrenceville, Virginia, served as maid of honor.

A number of graduates returned for the homecoming weekend which got underway with a dance in the McEwen Dining Hall Ballroom on Friday night. This was followed on Saturday morning, October 28, by the judging of the dormitory and organizational decorations on the campus.

The annual homecoming parade was held through the business section of Burlington at 12:30 on Saturday.

A highlight of the observance was the football game between the Elon Christians and the Western Carolina Catamounts which was held Saturday afternoon at the Burlington Memorial Stadium. The homecoming queen and her court were presented during the half-time intermission of the game. An alumni coffee hour immediately followed the game.

The climax of the homecoming program came Saturday evening when the Homecoming Ball was held in Alumni Memorial Gymnasium with the Duke Ambassadors furnishing the music.

The Student Homecoming Committee was composed of Larry Biddle, chairman; Roger Grimson, Bob Young, Laura Barnes, Wendy Cowall, Wally Sawyer, Bob West, Roger Bednarik and Valerie Spangler.

HIGH ENROLLMENT

Enrollment at Elon College for the 1961-62 term is 1,301 students, of whom 901 are men and 409 are women.

Prof. Jennings Berry, college registrar, reports that 968 of the students are enrolled in daytime classes, while 333 are registered in the Evening School. There are 575 students residing on the Elon campus this fall and there are 393 daytime students who commute.

The student body includes representatives from 23 states and the District of Columbia, along with students from five foreign nations, including Brazil, Cuba, Israel, Jordan and Turkey.

CLASS OFFICERS

Bobby West, of Durham, has been elected president of the current Freshman Class at Elon College. Other officers of the class elected at the same time include Faye Everette, of Henderson, vice-president; and Kathy Sandefur, of Charleston, West Virginia, secretary-treasurer. Dianne Brinkley of Winston-Salem is the class representative to the Honor Council.

Sophomore class officers include Lynn Ryals, of Durham, president; Gerald Allen, of Winston-Salem, vice president; and Gail Bond, of New London, Connecticut, secretary-treasurer.

Officers of the junior class are Tom Brady, of Durham, president; Jerry Hollandsworth, of Danville, Virginia, vice president; and Judy Maness, of Ramseur, secretary-treasurer.

Leading the senior class are Fred Shull, of Burlington, president; Walter Bass, of South Boston, Virginia, vice president; and McIver Henderson, of Columbia, South Carolina, secretary-treasurer.

MINISTRY ON CHURCH-RELATED CAMPUSES

Elon College President J. Earl Danieleley and Campus Minister, Rev. John S. Graves, have returned from Chicago, Illinois, where they attended a Consultation on Ministry on the Church-Related College Campus October 26-28.

Dr. Danieleley, chairman of the Consultation, presided at the opening session Thursday, October 26.

The keynote address was delivered by Dr. William R. Mueller, Professor of English at Goucher College, author of "Prophetic Vision of Modern Fiction" and other books, and National President of the Faculty Christian Fellowship.

Also featured was an address by Dr. Eugene Wehrli, of Eden Theological Seminary, on "The Situation in the Church-Related College." The Friday morning session offered an address by President Daniel Beittel, of Tougaloo Southern College, on "Relationship of the Administration to the Chaplain and Ministry on the Campus."

The Rev. Robert James, of Temple University spoke Friday on "Pastoral Relationships on the Campus," along with a talk on "Peer Groups in the Religious Life of the Campus" by Dr. David Maitland of Carleton College.

Other speakers during the consultation included the Rev. Hartland Helmich, secretary for campus Christian life of the United Church of Christ, who will speak of "Intercollegiate Religious Experience," and Chaplain Clyde Steckel, of Illinois College, who made a talk on "The Worshipping Community."

The Consultation was planned by the following committee members: Dr. Danieleley; Rev. Clyde Steckel, Illinois College; Dr. Lawrence Jones, Fisk University; and Dr. Bryant Drake, Chicago Office of the Division of Higher Education, Congregational Christian Churches.

Growth Through Stewardship

Background Scripture: Matthew 23:1-36; 25:14-30; Romans 12:1.

Devotional Reading: Matthew 5:1-16.

Memory Selection: I appeal to you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your body a living sacrifice, holy, and acceptable to God, which is your spiritual worship. Romans 12:1. (RSV.)

Stewardship is usually thought of in terms of money or material things. As a matter of fact, stewardship is an inclusive thing, including talents or capacities or gifts, influence, time, life itself. And the basic idea underlying stewardship is the truth that God is the owner of all things, man is simply the steward. A steward is someone to whom another has entrusted his material possessions or interests. And of course the steward is held responsible for what has been entrusted to him. As was so often the case, Jesus embodied this truth or principle in a story, the story of what we call "The Parable of the Talents." The story would be readily understood by his hearers. It is equally easily understood by modern readers and hearers.

God The Owner, Man The Steward

"As a man, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods." The man owned, the servants simply possessed for the time being. He entrusted to his servants his goods. They were to take care of them for him. Thus God is the Sovereign Owner; man is the Steward, or Possessor. A man will never begin to understand the matter of stewardship until he recognizes and accepts this basic truth.

God Gives Men Differing Gifts

All men are equal before God — the Declaration of Independence explicitly states that fact. But all men are not equal in ability. In this story one man received five talents, another two talents, and one only one talent. That is true to life. Some men have more natural ability than do others. We have equal rights before God, but there are differences in ability. And, as we shall see later, it is not a man's talents which matter, but the way he uses them that counts.

God Gives Every Man Some Talent

"To every man, according to his several ability." There again the story is true to life. Every man has some talents, some gift, some special ability. The man had no part in choosing that talent — that is God's part or responsibility. But the man is responsible for the use of his talent. And whatever talent we have, be it little or great, we must lay at the service of God.

Risk In Religion

In an old Abbey in Brittany there is a madonna called by the monks "Our Lady of Risk." As Bishop Gerald Kennedy says, "Here is an insight often overlooked. It is a kind of blasphemy to use our Lord as the patron saint for the people who make security their chief goal. The hapless men who bury their talents never receive the Lord's smile or approbation."

The Day Of Reckoning

"After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them," or as Dr. Barclay puts it, "struck a reckoning with them," or "settled accounts with them" as the RSV has it. Here is a sobering truth. Some day every one of us must give an account of himself and his stewardship to God. Judgment Day is not simply a matter of whether we committed the sins of the flesh, or even of the spirit, but also of how we discharged our stewardship of all that God entrusted to us.

The Reward Of The Good Stewards

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter into the joy of thy lord." Here was the approbation of his lord, which was reward in itself. But more important and rewarding was more work to do and the ability to do it. The person who does well what he has to do will be able to do better and to do more. The right use of talents multiplies those talents. The man who used his five talents gained five other talents. Likewise the man who used his two talents gained two other talents.

It should be noted that the man who had only two talents received the same commendation as did the man who had five talents. The man who uses what talents he has for God will be rewarded in the same measure as the man who has more talents. Rewards are not based on the number of talents, but on the use of talents.

The Punishment Of The Man Who Will Not Try

The man who had the one talent did not lose it; he simply did nothing with it. He did not even try. One can hear him saying to himself, or to his friends, "If I had five talents or even two talents — but look, my lord gave me only one talent!" Many one-talent people have dreadful inferiority complexes. Disgruntled because they are not five-talent men, they disdain to use their one talent. And the result is disastrous. They reap to themselves the biting and bitter judgment of their lord. And they lose what they so carefully hoarded! He who does not use what he has, loses what he has. The singer who refuses to pay the price of practicing loses the ability to sing, and this is the case in every other area of life. Use or lose is the law of life, whether it is in playing golf, or carving wood, or preparing sermons, or singing songs, or thinking out ideas. The only way to keep a gift is to use it in the service of God and in the service of our fellowmen.

SAY IT RIGHT . . . WRITE IT RIGHT

"Three men came walking into the room," said the speaker. Why the "walking"? To make it clear they were not crawling?

"Both of them are going." "Of them" are unnecessary words and should be omitted.

"He was drug for 40 feet." Do not use "drug" as the past tense of drag. Say or write: The man was dragged.

Novel things usually are strange and unexpected. Something new is what is seen for the first time.

"She is sick to her stomach." One cannot be "sick to." One may be sick in bed, sick of flattery, sick of one's home, but never "sick to" anything. Better say: "She is sick at the stomach."

PARTICIPANTS IN VALLEY WORKSHOP

Mrs. A. R. Bartholomew, center of attraction above, was the representative from The Women's Guild at the First Joint Virginia Valley Workshop, which is described below. Representative from the National Women's Fellowship was Mrs. F. C. Lester. Mrs. Ray Gordon (extreme right) participated in the officer's workshop and brought greetings from the Southern Convention women. Dr. F. C. Lester served as "chauffeur." They are pictured in Mrs. Gordon's home in Suffolk at the time of the Eastern Virginia Women's Fellowship meeting.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

It was a thrilling experience to share in the "First Joint Educational Meeting" of the Virginia Regional Women's Guild and the Valley Conference Women's Fellowship held at Bethlehem, near Harrisonburg, Virginia, last Wednesday (October 25). It may have been the first of its kind in the United States — where E. and R. and C. C. women jointly planned and carried out a workshop type of meeting.

"Our" Mrs. Austin Kipps and "their" Mrs. John Wilkins, presidents, and the other officers did a great deal of planning to make this a reality. In the first place, it was held in one of "our" churches on "their" regular date. In the second place, the two chairmen of each department spent long hours planning together for each of the workshops. In the third place, the seven workshops (six departments and one for officers) were jointly led. And last, but not least, about 225 women came to participate! It was truly a great day! Next step: a joint meeting of both boards November 5 to evaluate this meeting and decide on further cooperative ventures.

What makes this possible in the Valley of Virginia is that each of the two groups has about the same number of churches, which are fairly close to each other, and which are made up of very much the same kind of people — and close to no other churches of our denomination. The Valley Regional has been separated from other churches in the Potomac Synod, just as our Valley Conference has been from the rest of the Southern Convention. No one knows "where" this group of 40 churches will go when realignment is completed — north with others of the Potomac area, south with what has been the Southern Convention, or simply as part of a Virginia Conference with the Richmond and eastern Virginia churches. But this much is definitely known: the Valley churches will be together! This makes it possible for them to have had for several years a joint "Ministerium" of the pastors; for two years a joint "Churchmen's Fellowship;" and now a truly joint meeting of their women. Incidentally, this fall the two executive committees of the young people are meeting together.

Joyce (Mrs. A. R.) Bartholomew and I both feel that the Valley women have successfully completed an experiment which will probably be duplicated in other parts of the country during the interim period when joint patterns are evolving. "Creating and Renewing the Church" surely seemed an appropriate theme for their day together!

President's Message

A Christian layman, his skill and a vacation were used to show that through Christ, Christians love all people. This is our Christian World Mission.

—Elisa Vargas, Honduran Highlights

We cannot pull teeth in Honduras — but each one of us must make our own Christian witness. Should we become really concerned about this, I am sure there are many things we could do with real enthusiasm.

We have been told that it costs $22.00 per minute to support our Christian World Mission. Each local fellowship has been asked to hold the MISSION for at least one more minute. I am hoping that many will want to do much more.

Becoming informed throughout the WHOLE church is a basic need, I feel — and never have we had so many opportunities available to us for this purpose! Let us make use of them.

How are we growing? Have we been measuring with the right yardstick? To find the correct answers to these questions each church woman will have to ask herself a few personal questions. For as the individual grows — so does the church — so does the Women's Fellowship.

Let us seek for a new enthusiasm as we work towards cultivating the spirit of Christ in all the areas of our personal life. This will bring about a great jubilee year for the Women's Fellowship of Eastern Virginia.

SAY IT RIGHT... WRITE IT RIGHT

After "different", use "from", not "than". Correct: This piece of material is different in design from that.

"Try and be here tomorrow". Since "try" is equivalent to "endeavor", it is better to say: Try to be here tomorrow.

"All of our friends are invited". The "of" is superfluous. Better: All our friends are invited.

"I've got to get going". This is barbarous English. Better say: I must go.

"She has got blue eyes" is worse than parakeet English. She has blue eyes is the way to say it right and write it right.

Church People Invited To Visit

There are so many ways in which we are helped by good friends. This afternoon we had a visit by three gentlemen from Greensboro, representatives of the O. Henry Sertoma Club of that City. They brought a supply of athletic equipment — basketballs, volley balls, kick balls, baseballs and bats — for our children. Our boys and girls will enjoy this equipment so very much and we are very grateful to this club for helping in this generous way.

Also today we have received three boxes of clothing — one from a friend in our Newport News Church, one from the Women's Fellowship of our Hendersonville Church and a package from the Olivet Social Circle, Columbus, Wisconsin, a Friendly Service Gift. In our financial report for this week we have a $25.00 Friendly Service Gift from a group in Illinois. We receive much assistance, both material and financial, through Friendly Service and we are most appreciative of this help. Some groups send us the articles such as sheets, pillow cases, bedspreads, towels, wash clothes, school supplies, etc., while other groups send money to purchase these articles.

Thanksgiving and Christmas will be here almost before we know it. We have already had some requests to have children visit in homes for these holidays. It is our custom to let the children visit relatives, sponsors and friends at these seasons. This year the Thanksgiving holiday for our children will be from Wednesday evening until Saturday evening as we have a trip to one of our churches on Sunday, November 26. If your church or group sponsors one of our children we would be happy to hear from you as soon as possible about having your child visit you for the holidays. We let relatives and sponsors have "first choice" on having their children visit them, but we always have some children who do not have a definite place to visit. These are usually the older boys and girls. If you would like to have one of our boys or girls visit in your home for Thanksgiving or Christmas, please let us know and we will do our best to have a child for you.

This Saturday, November 4, will be Open House at our Home for Children. We have been planning this for weeks now and have been working towards that end. We are hoping that every church will have representatives to visit our campus that day. We have sent a letter of invitation to a key worker in each church in the Southern Convention and asked them to help us in promoting the Open House in their church. We have heard from some, indicating that they will have a group at our Home on November 4. We are eager for our church people to have first hand knowledge of the work we are doing at our Home for Children. You have made your contributions to help in our improvement program and you yearly give your gifts to help in the general support of our work. We want you to have the opportunity to see what is being done here to help our boys and girls have a better life and good training for the future.

Please come to see us November 4.

This week Mr. Snyder is in Cleveland, Ohio, attending the National Council of Churches' Conference on Church and Social Welfare. We here in the offices are busy trying to get straightened out after having been moved out of the offices for several days during the remodeling of Johnston Hall. Everyone on the campus is working hard to have things in good order for our November 4 day.

We are looking forward to seeing you at our Open House.

An interesting historical "note" was given by Ralph Rothgeb who remembered bicycling to conference at Timber Ridge from his home at Leaksville 45 years ago — four boys took about 8 hours to make the trip.

At that time conference lasted three days.

Officers elected to serve the Conference: Rev. S. E. Madren, president; Rev. T. D. Sutton, vice president; Rev. Mark Andes, secretary; Mrs. Shirley White, assistant secretary; O. W. Andes, treasurer; Tommy Showalter, assistant treasurer. These were installed by Superintendent Clyde Fields.

Distinguished Churchmen Called Home

Ernest M. Halliday

Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary of the Division of Church Extension and Secretary of the Board of Home Missions from 1937 to 1946, passed away at the age of 83 on August 23, 1961.

Prior to 1937 Dr. Halliday served as General Secretary of the Church Extension Boards, which became the Division of Church Extension as the Board of Home Missions was organized. His ministry in Home Missionary work of just under 25 years was deeply significant. It was under his administration that the so-called Missionary Conferences were granted autonomy and that the "High Potential" Church Extension program was initiated. He was truly a man of many parts.

Trained as a lawyer, he became a teacher, subsequently graduated from Union Theological Seminary and became a minister of the Ocean Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Upon his retirement from the Board of Home Missions in 1946 he served several churches of the New York area as interim minister.

In 1952 and 1953 Dr. Halliday brought his legal training into play by substituting as secretary of the Church Building Department in a staff emergency created by the Church Building loan fund, as, indeed he had done previously during the second World War.

Not the least of the services he rendered Protestantism was in helping to create the Home Missionary master list of aided churches and to cooperate to the fullest to end denominational competition. His colleagues in sister denominations quite appropriately honored him by electing him President of the Home Missions Council, which office he filled with distinction.

Christian commitment, devotion to his assigned task, integrity in all he did—these were the hallmarks of Ernest M. Halliday.

Stanley U. North

Wynn C. Fairfield

Rev. Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, a distinguished Protestant church leader for nearly half a century, died of a heart attack on Saturday, October 14, at Claremont, California. He was 75 years old.

Dr. Fairfield, who served for 35 years under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions as missionary and administrator, subsequently held top posts in the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, a forerunner of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., and the National Council's department of Church World Service.

Dr. Fairfield began his long career of service in 1909, when he was appointed a career missionary to China by the American Board.

He was married in Karuizawa, Japan, on July 19, 1910, to Miss Daisie Gehman of Norristown, Pennsylvania, who had been serving in China since 1907.

After their marriage they went on together to Taiku in North China, their station for the next 19 years. They served in church and educational work, being associated for their last 10 years there with the Oberlin-Shansi Memorial Schools of which Dr. Fairfield was dean and treasurer.

Dr. Fairfield was called to the headquarters of the American Board in Boston in 1929 and served for the next 16 years as the board's administrative secretary for China and Japan.

In 1945 he became the secretary for general administration of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, the cooperative agency for more than 100 boards of foreign missions in the United States and Canada. His position involved liaison with the International Missionary Council, the Federal Council of Churches, World Council of Churches and other inter-denominational bodies.

Dr. Fairfield served as administrative secretary of the planning committee that established the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. in December, 1950, a merger of the Foreign Missions Conference with 11 other agencies.

In 1951 he was called upon to give his extraordinary organizational and executive abilities to the needs of Church World Service, which at that time became a department of the National Council of Churches. He served until his retirement in 1954 as executive director of this organization.

Dr. Fairfield was born in Tabor, Iowa, October 27, 1886. In 1907 he was graduated from Oberlin College and in 1910 from the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology. Oberlin awarded him an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1926.

HARRELL

Crawley Bolton Harrell, age 71, a life-long resident of Nansemond County, Virginia, and for many years a faithful member of Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, passed away October 13, 1961, following a short illness. Funeral services were conducted by the minister of the church and interment was made in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk, Sunday, October 15. Mr. Harrell is survived by his widow, two daughters, one son, three grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends. He was faithful in life and victorious in death.

ALBRIGHT

Whereas, in the graduation to the Eternal Life of Edward M. Albright on July the 19th, 1961,

This Church experienced the loss of a most faithful and loyal member, one whose long and distinguished service and faithful stewardship advanced the cause of Christ in our midst, and

Whereas, his personal profession of the Christian Life was an inspiration to all, and

Whereas, the members of this church desire to pay tribute to his contribution to our Christian fellowship and faith,

Therefore, Be It Resolved that we extend to his loved ones our deepest sympathy and concern, and convey to them our sincere gratitude for his sharing with us the Christian Way.

Be It Further Resolved that this resolution be presented to his wife, and copies forwarded to The Christian Sun, and spread on the official records of the church.

RICHARDSON

We, the members of Spring Hill Christian Church of Waverly, Virginia, wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. E. B. Richardson, Sr., who passed away from this life July 20, 1961.

Miss Nellie was a faithful member of the church and served for a number of years as secretary. She was a charter member of the Women's Fellowship, which was organized in 1913 and at that time was called the Ladies Aid Society. She was the only charter member who still lived in the community and was active and interested in its work until her death.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First: That we must bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Second: To extend to her loved ones our sympathy.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun and Sussex-Surry Dispatch for publication and a copy be recorded in the minutes of Spring Hill Church.

A Happy Child At Our Home For Children

Mary Lou, a lovely little girl, is among the 72 boys and girls at our Congregational Christian Home at Elon College. These children are depending upon the Thanksgiving Offering in our churches for much of their support in the coming year. With our help, the Home is able to provide the love, care, and Christian training which prepare children for useful Christian adult lives.

The Worth of Our Home For Children

John G. Truitt, Former Superintendent of The Home for Children

To say the right thing for the Home for children at this Thanksgiving season is my sincere desire. I have had now the opportunity to look objectively at its worth.

While at the Home I saw little boys and girls cling to hands which they trusted. They were more than numbers on an enrollment ledger, or cases in a welfare worker's file. They were little children with tear-stained faces — Tommy and Mary — with deep, big questions in their minds. Why am I not like other children with warm homes and loving parents? What will I do? Where will I live? Who will have me?

This I know. I was there. I gave them my heart, for them I did my best. I shared with them the difficulty of separation from familiar scenes, and from whatever ties there were. I brought them to the Home for Children. What would it be like? Would it be "that place"? Would the doors be opened and shut by strangers? Would the children there frighten me, or the people there hurt me?

Only the neediest ones were chosen.

By study and experience, and the thrill of seeing the sun shine into little darkened canyons of need, and by years of joyous work I can size it up, as I see it. For refuge only for a needy helpless child it is worth it. Refuge is a word that comes out of tragic circumstances and tough environment. To have a share in helping little children find that refuge is a priceless privilege. "In Thee, O Lord, do I seek refuge." "I will sing aloud of Thy steadfast love in the morning, for Thou has been to me a fortress and a refuge in the day of my distress."

Those children have found song, laughter, joy, love, and an opportunity for the good life. They, many of them, have found large place in life as outstanding citizens. My advice to you is: Make a really worthy Thanksgiving contribution to that Home, boost its increasing usefulness and its excellent administration, and have the joy of helping it to be all it should be.

Our Cover Girl

The child on the cover is Mary Lou Bolton, who has been living at the Home for Children at Elon College since March 6.

Mary Lou, her sister, Patricia, and her brother, Earl, were admitted to the Home after having been shifted from a broken home to one that had agreed to care for them until plans could be made. After working with the family for several years, the Alamance County Department of Public Welfare decided the children could gain from being placed in an institution.

After strife and disappointment, the father had left the mother with the full responsibility of rearing the children. She was not able to give them the attention they needed and the result was that the children often were left to decide for themselves many of the things which parents should determine. The future of the children under these conditions was not very bright, for, later, two of the older girls were registered at a correctional institution.

Since going to live at the Home, Mary Lou has made many friends in all age groups. She has found security, love, and discipline, and has forgotten unhappiness and deprivations of the past.

Every effort is being made to help the mother prepare to establish a proper home for her children. Her ties with them were not severed when they were received at the Home. Local agencies, the Home, and the family are joining to help provide the best kind of future for these children.

Mary Lou's photograph decorates the envelopes, folders, and other literature which has been distributed in connection with the Thanksgiving Offering.

Our Home Helps A Fine Family

It isn't often that the Congregational Christian Home for Children has five brothers and sisters entrusted to its care.

This is to introduce the Medlin brothers and sisters, five of them, who have been living at the Home since June 26, 1961, and are fine examples of the service it provides and the good it does.

Their father, J. M. Medlin of Sanford, is living and is a fine man. Their mother died on October 14, 1960. The children are: Linda Sue, born October 4, 1949; Peggy Joyce, born September 9, 1950; Janice Dale, born September 21, 1951; Gary Andree, born October 8, 1952; and Jerome Elton, born January 12, 1954.

Mr. Medlin does roofing work. After his wife died, he made every effort to keep his children at home and care for them but when a financial crisis came he realized that he just could not carry on alone. He went to his pastor, Rev. Max Vestal of Shallow Well Congregational Christian Church in Sanford, and told him of his problems. Rev. Mr. Vestal contacted the Home and it was arranged for someone to visit the children. The children visited the Home, too, before the decision that they would move there to live was reached.

Five Sunday School classes of the Shallow Well church became sponsors for the children and are providing money to buy their school clothes.

The Medlin children have done a remarkable job of adjusting to their new life at the Home. Their father visits them whenever he can and shows his continuing love and interest in every possible way.

The boys and girls are happy and have a sense of belonging to each other. The father is grateful that they have the opportunity for growth and development. The Medlin children are not unlike many of the others, but they are an excellent example of how the closeness of the family, the devotion of the father, and the help of the Home have combined to make them well developed boys and girls who are a credit to themselves, their father, and the Home.

REMEMBER OUR CHILDREN'S HOME AT THANKSGIVING

A Note To The Readers

Once each year The Christian Sun runs a special issue for the Congregational Christian Church Home for Children, formerly known as The Christian Orphanage. This is such an issue. It is different from the usual in that it has 20 pages rather than 16, there are far more pictures, and news of the churches and articles on other subjects are greatly reduced or entirely absent. Subscribers will surely enjoy this intimate look into the work of our Home for Children, the only one belonging to and being supported by Congregational Christian churches, and can be assured that the next issue will bring back familiar features.

A Home For Children

Home is really a place for children. Adults who live alone or in pairs never know the full significance of the word home. They may eat, sleep, and entertain friends, but unless there are children they never quite experience the deep emotions, difficulties and delights that go with the rousing noises, growing pains, education, religious development, and affectionate loyalties that bind parents and children together.

Home is a necessity for children. Most baby animals can walk within minutes or hours of birth, but baby children take months or years to become efficient on their feet. Other animals are old when they have lived as long as teen-agers. In the providence of God, human children are made so they need the care, protection and training of their parents. Sometimes parents forget this divine honor, or they become so absorbed in something else that there is not adequate time for the training of their offspring. When this happens, and it often does in our prosperous America, children are denied their rightful heritage, and sometimes they become delinquents — and little wonder, for they simply follow the example of their parents.

Home is provided by the Church. At its best, church people establish and maintain homes in which Christian principles predominate in all phases of activity and in all ideals. Parents are part of the Church. They study its Good Book, they worship at its altar, they seek to know and do the will of its Master, and in the home they recognize the Unseen Guest. By faith they live in love. To them children are God's best gift. Training of children is their highest privilege. And it often happens that children rise up to call their parents blessed.

Sometimes the Church must provide homes for children who do not have the care of their natural parents. Babies have great worth whether they are wanted by their parents or not. Orphans become the responsibility of followers of the Master who took little children in his arms and blessed them. Young people bereft of legitimate parents and home-life rightfully become wards of the Church of Christ. They need a home; and the Church is a shelter in the time of storm, a haven of rest for the weary, a guiding light for travelers in the night, a companion for the loveless.

Our Church furnishes a home for children. For more than half a century the little Christian Church started by James O'Kelly here in Carolina and Virginia has been attentive to the cry of needy children. Our Church has built houses, hired workers, collected children who were in need, and, in the spirit of Jesus, has taken into its affectionate care a sizeable number of boys and girls who did not have as good a home as the Church could give them. Pictures in this paper introduce many of the children and their substitute parents — their devoted friends — who now live in our Church Home for Children. They are there because other people have had compassion in their hearts, and have furnished the money with which our Church Home can serve children who need such care, protection and guidance. Those who share in this program will doubtless feel a deep sense of pride and of joy as they read the pages of this paper, for they make the institution possible, and without them the Home could not exist. The boys and girls would not have such a home without their gifts.

Support of our Home for Children comes from regular gifts through Conference Apportionments, a Thanksgiving Offering, Friendly Service gifts, memorial gifts, the CHIP program, and other special and individual gifts. Part of the food is grown on the farm where the children, especially the oldest ones, learn to work. Care of the buildings and grounds, making of clothing and serving of meals are ways in which the Church family in our Home share in the ongoing of what to them becomes a real home.

It is a delight to the editor of The Christian Sun to be able to commend to all readers the Congregational Christian Home for Children at Elon College, North Carolina, and to solicit for the institution your affectionate care, sincere prayers, and liberal gifts.

This story is in response to a young reader whose school class is studying conservation of wildlife and is interested in efforts to protect the bald eagle of Alaska. But the student's primary question is how the eagle came to be the national symbol of independence and freedom. The answer is gladly given as a service not only to the inquiring young person but to all others who may be interested in the subject.

On the occasion when the Declaration of Independence had been acted upon, John Hancock rose, as president of the Continental Congress, and said: "We now are a nation, and I appoint Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson a committee to prepare a device for a Great Seal of the United States of America."

The committee turned to a professional artist for help. A Frenchman, Du Simetiere, then a resident of Philadelphia, was consulted. He developed a composition featuring a Norman shield divided into six quarterings, each of which he suggested should represent a group of citizens in relation to the country in Europe from which the group had migrated. The rose was to stand for England, the thistle for Scotland, the harp for Ireland, the fleur de lis for France, a lion for Holland, and an eagle for Germany.

But the suggested design did not please Franklin and Adams, and Jefferson was requested to submit something better, including the meritorious detail of the French artist's proposal and of sketches which they themselves turned in.

The drawing which Jefferson finally offered to the Congress preserved the Norman shield and the German eagle. This heraldic idea, however, was not accepted. Indeed, the whole matter of the Great Seal was neglected until 1872, when John Hanson, president of the Confederation Congress, appointed Henry Middleton, Elias Boudinot and Edward Rutledge a committee "to prepare a suitable device".

These gentlemen tried to persuade the Congress to be satisfied with Jefferson's adaptation of Du Sime-tiere's conception. When that proposition was declined, Charles Thomson, a congressional secretary, was told to work out a solution to the problem. He conferred with Boudinot and Dr. Arthur Lee, and they appealed to Will Barton. It was Barton who expanded the eagle into a full-fledged symbol, "displayed proper, holding in its beak a scroll inscribed: 'E Pluribus Unum', and in his dexter talon a palm or olive branch; in the other a bundle of 13 arrows, all proper".

It is scarcely necessary, except for suggested reference, to state that all this detail is shown on the dollar bill which is the only currency that carries a reproduction of the Great Seal of the United States.

Each time a citizen of the United States looks at a reproduction of the Great Seal he should observe with pride that the eagle is looking in the direction of the olive branch, emblem of peace, not in the direction of the arrows that symbolize war. The scene, not tainted with propaganda, but an outward manifestation of a great and living truth refutes the daily repeated statements of communists that this country is a war-mongering nation.

This Atomic Age

By John G. Truitt

The world may soon be finished,

Who knows, it may be soon,

With atom's mighty wrecking

At morning, night or noon.

But now I know its pretty,

With hills and homes and trees,

And I am oh so thankful

I've seen and loved all these.

I've loved and seen its glory,

The rising of the sun,

Known the joy of working

Till each glad day was done.

I've known a bit of heaven

On this heav'n-kissed sod;

I'll leave the old earth's future

Right in the hand of God.

A Prayer For Christian Action

By Richard K. Morton

In these days, O God, when earth is illumined by the lights that mark man's quest for profit, power, and pleasure, give us the will to provide the courage and the faith whereby its dark places may be flooded with the cleansing light of love.

In the face of the world's fears, miseries, and bondage, we must indeed weep until by our tears our eyes can see more clearly the urgency of all this need. In the face of all the world's roughness, cruelty, and show of strength, we would extend tenderness until all feel the touch of our love. We would put on the whole armor of God until all tyrants and oppressors flee from the scenes of their crimes. We would come forth in friendliness until no one walks alone. We would show forth thankful living until all life is a psalm of praise. We would demonstrate the power of a faith rooted in the conviction that God has indeed come to dwell among men until all shall open their lives that He may be born in them.

Stir us, O God, not only in the purposeful acceptance of a faith in Thee, but as those who wish to be builders of Thy kingdom upon earth. Make us, we pray, Thy worthy disciples through our action in our days of living whereby we speed the triumph of Thy law, through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

"Every man's work, whether it be literature or music or pictures or architecture, or anything else, is always a portrait of himself, and the more he tries to conceal himself, the more clearly will his character appear in spite of him."

— Mt. Bethel Bulletin

He that gives all, though but little, gives much, because God looks not to the quantity of the gift but to the quality of the giver. —Quarles

Appreciation Of The Children's Home

W. B. Terrell, Alumni Secretary, Elon College

For fifteen years I served as principal of the Elon College Public School, which the children from the Congregational Christian Church Home for Children attend.

During that period Mr. C. D. Johnston was the superintendent of the Home. The teachers and I appreciated the splendid relationship between the school and the Home. Mr. Johnston and his staff were most cooperative in every respect. I am sure that same fine spirit still exists as the school and Home work for the interests of the children.

I also recall with appreciation the splendid attitude of most of these pupils toward the school program — their studies, school activities and their general cooperation.

During the time I was principal of the school, and quite often since, I thought of the boys and girls from the Home who attended the Elon school, many graduating. During such times I have a feeling of satisfaction as I note the great number who have achieved outstanding success in life, have established homes and are making significant contributions to the communities in which they are living.

Many times over the years I have had the privilege of visiting the Home. I have been impressed with the loyal, faithful services of the staff, with the spirit that permeates the institution, the concern that is shown for all the children.

I observe the children from the Home as they attend school, church and participate in community activities. I am proud of their conduct. The children reflect credit on the Home and those who have a part in their training.

At this time of year our churches and friends of the Children's Home are made aware of the needs of the institution and of the privilege of having a part in providing a home for these fine young people.

Miss Melva Foster, the attractive and competent secretary at the Home for Children, hands some interesting mail to Mrs. Alvertine Privette, housemother for the younger boys in the Clyde Rudd Cottage.

Tasty, well balanced meals are served to the boys and girls at the Home for Children. W. W. Snyder, superintendent, is shown conferring with Mrs. Eva Wilson, center, and Mrs. Nora Lambert, dietitians.

W. N. C. LAYMEN MEET

The Western North Carolina Laymen's Fellowship met at the Albemarle Church Saturday, October 28, at 6:30 p.m. A chicken dinner with all the trimmings was provided by the laymen of the Albemarle Church for the more than 50 men present. President Clyde Pell of the Asheboro Church completed his two year term as president. The chairman of the nominating committee, Mr. Ira McDowell, read the following list of nominees, who were elected as officers for the coming two years: David Lamb, Randleman, N. C., president; Elvin Cox, Ramseur, N. C., vice president; J. C. Newell, Ramseur, N. C., secretary; Alex Talbert, Randleman, N. C., treasurer.

The speaker for the evening was Superintendent Clyde Fields, who brought a message on Our Christian World Mission. The closing prayer was offered by Rev. Walter Hall.

Chief Luthuli Wins Nobel Peace Prize

Dr. Alfred Carleton

Chief Luthuli is the son of an African Christian missionary who went from South Africa to Rhodesia in the service of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches, now the United Church Board for World Ministries. He was educated at our missionary institution, Adams College, near Durban, South Africa, and later taught there before being elected a tribal chief. He made a lecture tour of the United States under the auspices of our missionary board in 1948.

The award of the Nobel Prize for Peace to one of the most respected Christian leaders in the world, Chief Albert Luthuli of South Africa, is an occasion for worldwide thanksgiving and rejoicing in the Christian church. In his leadership of the African people, Chief Luthuli has demonstrated poignantly and tellingly the Christian virtues of patience, prudence and love. He has witnessed firmly and unequivocally to the dignity of man and he has steadfastly demanded the freedom for his fellow Africans which he believes is theirs by right under the law of God. He has suffered indignities and the suppression of his own freedom at the hands of his fellow citizens of the white race without once speaking out in anger or hatred against them. For this saintly man will admit no other man to enmity with himself. He reaches out to each and every other human being with a reconciling love which is the essence of his demonstration of the power of the Christian Gospel.

Missionary Dies

October 1, Mrs. Robert H. Grant, one of our missionaries in Japan, died as a result of a fall in her home September 17.

Her husband writes in moving terms of the death of his young wife:

"We who loved Jean and are inspired by her spirit can, as instruments of God, continue to turn this evil of her death into good as we, like her, learn to give away rather than to hoard our thoughts and energy and time and love. I ask your prayers."

At the funeral in a little Japanese church Easter hymns of faith were sung.

Money given in her memory will pay another year's tuition at Doshisha for a girl for whom Mrs. Grant was trying to raise a four-year scholarship.

in overseas missions had done no more than to educate Chief Luthuli, in missionary schools and nurture him in the church they would have justified every dollar they had spent and the time of the thousands of dedicated persons who have labored in mission fields.

We of the United Church of Christ can be grateful that Chief Luthuli has spent his life in our fellowship. Each of us through sharing with him a loyalty to Christ, also shares in his achievement and in his suffering. But most importantly we also share in his mission to achieve peace and freedom and personal dignity for all mankind. For Chief Luthuli and thousands of other Christians like him all over the world not only represent the meaning of Christianity, they are the Christian mission to our day.

I Meet Elon Christian Home

A. M. Primm, Principal of Elon College Public School

In late July of this year, I made my first contact with the Elon College Christian Orphanage through the person of Tommy West. Tommy, who lives at the Home, made his appearance at our residence one Saturday morning, requesting employment. He was well-groomed, neat, poised and appropriately dressed to do yard work. His manner was so polite and straight-forward that we were sold on him immediately. The subsequent Saturdays with Tommy demonstrated to us the effectiveness of the Home in character development and citizenship training.

As a school administrator, it has been my policy to cut through red tape and attempt to "find the faces behind the figures." While making a routine study of all our school students, I have learned to respect the children that come from the Home.

Soon after my introduction to Tommy, I met other children of the Home. They impressed me with their sense of security. They were consistently well adjusted, well dressed, and polite. On two occasions, I attended football games with them, and the spirit of fellowship and camaraderie was thrilling. I attended one of the birthday parties at the Home, and they extended themselves to make it a pleasant affair for me; and, especially, were they thoughtful of those celebrating their birthdays. The party was gay, and the guests were invited to see a miniature circus displayed by the small children. Paper hats were given to the visitors.

Above all, I was struck by the tenderness with which the house mothers attended their little charges and by the respect shown the superintendent. I thought that the new dormitory facilities were very adequate. I also thought that much needs to be done to bring some of the other facilities up-to-date. As I have lived with the children of the Christian Home, it has occurred to me that they are provided with one of the imperative needs of all human beings — that of being regarded as "somebody" — an individual, an identity. Nobody is anybody until someone loves him. There at the Home, everyone is made to feel like someone. Every child receives the love and affection and respect of the adults. And, above all, he is cared for by his peers.

I have seen the children working, playing, and studying. To complete their development, the leaders bring them en masse to church. I have sat among them and followed the order of worship with them and was inspired by their reverence. As one leaves the service, he thanks God all over again for his blessings to all humanity. The Christian Home's contribution to society is inestimable.

This picture, taken while the Home for Children's swimming pool was under construction, shows Supt. W. W. Snyder, left and Dave Meredith, contractor for the pool, looking over plans.

Fall is football time. All through the year, the boys and girls enjoy sports of various kinds during their recreation hours. Here, W. W. New Swimming Pool

An activity of September and October at the Congregational Christian Home for Children promises much health-giving recreation for coming summertimes.

When the institution's Alumni Association met last June, it decided to build a swimming pool on the campus for the children. The work was done in September and October because these months are an off season for this type of construction and a more economical price could be obtained.

The pool was built by the Meredith Swimming Pools of Greensboro. The people in the Burlington and Greensboro area who supplied material and did the excavating gave the Alumni Association prices below the usual cost and the Pool company allowed these reductions to accrue to the benefit of the association, subtracting them from the contract price of cost plus 10 per cent, not to exceed $6,000.

The pool is 21 by 60 feet in size, two and one-half feet deep at the shallowest point and nine feet at the deepest point. A filtering system was installed. Decking around the pool is 15 feet wide and the pool and decking area are enclosed with a chain fence to assure safety.

The project was handled by the executive and projects committees of the Alumni Association. Members are: Paul Williams of Raleigh, Don Walker, Joe Cox, Mrs. Allen E. Gant, and Miss Ruth Lee Miller of Burlington, Clyde Rudd of Greensboro, and Calvin Clayton of Charlotte.

Danieley Attends Meet

Dr. J. Earl Danieley, President of Elon College, attended the meetings of the Council of Church-Related Colleges of North Carolina and the North Carolina College Conference at Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh November 2 and 3.

The program for the Council meeting centered around the problems raised in connection with the acceptance of government funds by church-related colleges. Dr. Dean M. Kelley, Executive Director of the Department of Religious Liberty of the National Council of Churches, gave the main address: "Federal Funds Are Not Free." A general discussion followed Dr. Kelley's talk.

At the luncheon in the Raleigh Room committee reports were heard, routine business was conducted and entertainment was furnished by St. Mary's College Vocal Ensemble.

Visitors Are Welcome

The person who visits the Congregational Christian Home for Children at Elon College and sees the staff members and the children as they go about their everyday lives comes away with the firm belief that here is an institution which really gives its boys and girls the love and care they need.

Of course, no institution can take the place of a home in which parents and children live together and have the proper atmosphere of a devoted happy family. But when a home is broken and for some reason a child has to be placed in a children's home, it is important that the church or the agency responsible for the home make it as much as possible a place with the spiritual and material satisfactions the fortunate child has in his family home.

The Rev. W. W. Snyder superintendent of the Home for Children, and Mrs. Snyder are people who love children and are interested in all children. One has to be with Mr. Snyder only a few minutes to learn that his heart is completely wrapped up in the boys and girls cared for at the Home. The philosophy of the person who heads an institution usually permeates the whole institution. So it is with the Home for Children. One finds out almost immediately that the members of the staff, like the superintendent, are deeply concerned with the boys and girls in their care.

Before a child is admitted, studies are made to be sure of the need and of the Home's ability to meet this need. Once he is there, he becomes a member of a family in which every effort is made to make him happy and to teach him the principles that are vital to his well-being in adult years.

The children are a part of the community of Elon College. They attend the public schools and the Community church. They participate in the activities of young people. Like all well adjusted children, they help in keeping their home and they enjoy their home.

When the time comes for graduation from high school, the child has no reason to feel alone just because another phase of his life is beginning and he is leaving the protection of the Home for Children family. Care is taken to help him get his start in the outside life for which he has prepared. If he wants to go on to college and it can possibly be arranged, he does so. If he decides on a job, Mr. Snyder and his assistants help him. If he wants some special training for a trade or for business, he has the people at the Home to assist him in his plans. If problems develop and he needs help after moving to his new occupation or enrolling at a school, he knows that — as it was when he lived at the Home — the door to Mr. Snyder's office is always open and the superintendent is there anxious to assist him.

The goal of the Home is to help its boys and girls grow strong in Christian faith and character, to prepare them for adult lives of usefulness as Christian citizens. Those who support it would enjoy a visit to the Home where they would see for themselves just how constant and dedicated is the effort toward this goal.

November 4 was a wonderful day for the Home for Children as it entertained members from the churches in the Southern Convention and friends from the Burlington, Alamance County, and Greensboro area at Open House.

The purpose of the event was to give those who supported the CHIP campaign and have shown their interest in the Home in other ways an opportunity to see what their help had made possible.

The churches throughout the Southern Convention, the individuals and representatives of business and industrial concerns of the vicinity of the Home, and others who are interested in its work were invited to attend. It was almost an all-day affair, for it began at 10 o'clock in the morning and continued until 4 p.m.

Visitors saw the campus, the buildings, and the garden area. They met the staff and the boys and girls. They were guests of the Home at lunch.

As a result of the Open House, many friends of the institution have a first-hand idea of what they have helped the Home to accomplish. Superintendent Snyder and the other staff members have expressed the wish that others who were not able to be at the Home on November 4 will take the earliest opportunity to make the trip to Elon College and see for themselves what is being done.

New Cottages Completed

This year has been a good year for the Home for Children with several valuable improvements made for the benefit of the children.

Completion of the two new cottages which were made possible by the $200,000 financial campaign which was conducted in the spring of 1960 was of great value to the Home in its program of care for the boys and girls.

The cottages were consecrated in public ceremonies held in the early summer. One is named for Clyde Rudd of Greensboro and the other for Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Montgomery of Burlington. Mr. Rudd spent most of his childhood at the Home and he and Mrs. Rudd made a large contribution toward the cost of the cottage in appreciation of what the Home did for him. The Montgomerys made a major gift to the building which bears their name.

Each of the new cottages accommodates 10 of the younger children with a housemother, a dietitian, and three of the older girls. In these cottages with small groups of children, it is possible to have a more homelike atmosphere than could be possible in a type of residence which accommodates more children.

The Home hopes to have two more cottages and is happy that the Christian Temple of Norfolk, Va., has included $1,000 in its 1962 budget to assist in the erection of the third cottage on the campus. It is hoped that construction on this building can begin in the spring.

“Yankee” Project

The Home for Children has been taken as the 1962 Missions Project of the Sunday Schools of the Connecticut Conference of Congregational Christian Churches.

The Home is grateful to Rev. John R. deSousa, minister for Men and Missions in the Connecticut Conference, for his service in interesting the Sunday Schools in undertaking this program. Its exact nature has not been decided but it will be assistance with the building program or the general program.

It is hoped that the work of the Connecticut Conference will serve as an inspiration to other groups outside of the Southern Convention to help in the work of the Home.

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

RALEIGH P.F. HAS WORK CAMP

Bruce Hoffmann, Reporter

On Friday, October 6, a group from the United Church P. F. in Raleigh traveled to Moonelon for a week-end work camp. After we arrived at the camp, we presented our ideas on a proposed revision of the Songbook "Songs of Many Nations." Saturday began with a short worship and then to work. Some of the projects undertaken were draining the swimming pool, cleaning and varnishing the lawn furniture, working on the girls' cabins, painting the shower stalls, and various other tasks. We left Moonelon at 5 o'clock to return to Raleigh. The group included Roxanne Rogers, Peggy Bell, Lucy Beatty, Phillip King, Kent Nielsen, Bruce Hoffmann, and Becky Rivers, our advisors.

The conference budget of $1,000.00 was proposed; $100.00 will remain in the conference to go for operating expenses, and $900.00 will go to the Southern Convention P. F. to be divided there. Betsy Jones was appointed conference reporter by the president.

The program was then turned over to Rev. Bob Knowles. Youth — Whence and Whither was the theme of the program. Those participating were the Southern Convention officers, who gave talks on phases of P. F. growth: Janice Powell, Violet Collie, Betsy Jones and Rev. Bob Knowles. After the program, the group returned to the educational building for fellowship, led by Sharon Davis, and then supper. The rally closed with prayer and a friendship circle.

commissioners; Judy Stone, Fellowship commissioner; and Rev. Bob Knowles, minister of Christian Education.

One of the main items of business was the Fall Rallies. After much discussion, the theme "Youth — Whence and Whither?" was chosen. Using this theme, the officers would present a program stressing significant events in P. F. history — with insight into the future.

Concerning the budget, Connie Trueblood made a motion that the treasurer be authorized to send $1,194.55 to World Missions. Jesse Weaver seconded the motion and it was carried. A suggestion was made that the $115.16 left in the treasury be designated "Moonelon Gift Fund." This is to be a special project for the Southern Convention P.F.'ers. Jesse Weaver moved that this money be left in the treasury designated as Moonelon Gift Fund until enough is accumulated to make a good donation to Moonelon. Louise Harrell seconded the motion and it was duly carried.

N.C.-VA. CONFERENCE FALL RALLY

By Betsy Jones,

Action Chairman of N. C. - Va. P. F.

The N. C.-Va. Conference P. F. held the Fall Rally October 22, from 2 o'clock to 5:30. One-third of the churches in the Conference were represented, with 100 people attending. Registration was held from 2 until 3 o'clock, when the group went into the sanctuary for the business meeting and program. The rally was called to order by President. John Kernodle and was opened with prayer by David Andes, past president of the conference P. F. The president then recognized the conference officers who are: John Kernodle, president; Violet Collie, vice president; Carolyn Walker, secretary; Janice Powell, treasurer; Jerry Moore, faith commissioner; Betsy Jones, action commissioner; and Sharon Davis, fellowship commissioner.

FROM THE MINUTES OF THE S.C.P.F. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

By Mary Ann Barnes
Secretary, S. C. P. F.

The executive committee of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship met at Moonelon September 1-3, 1961. Hubie Young, president called the meeting to order. Attending the meeting were: Hubie Young, president; Cathie Sandstrom, vice-president; Mary Ann Barnes, secretary; John Kernodle, treasurer; Connie Trueblood, Faith commissioner; Jesse Weaver and Louise Harrell, Action

John Kernodle suggested that the "Workday for Christ" money be divided among several projects and any remainder be left for operating expenses. Judy Stone so moved, and Jesse Weaver seconded it. The motion was carried and the money was divided in the following way—

Chr. Home for Children	$200.00
Church Builders Club	50.00
Christian Missionary Assn.	50.00
World Youth Projects	250.00
Louis Wilkins	50.00

The budget for the year 1961-62 was drawn up for presentation to the conferences at the fall rallies. Also discussed were U.C.Y.M. delegates, Workday for Christ, N.A.E.Y.A., Officers' duties and the Youth Page.

Good Clothing Builds Morale

To all boys and girls, it is important to look right.

Smart mothers know that they can dress their children in a way that they are happy just as easily as in a way that causes them to be worried about their appearance. It isn't entirely a matter of money. It is much more a matter of taste and careful buying.

There, of course, is no money to spare at the Home for Children. Economy must be the watchword and no waste can be permitted. It costs a great deal to buy clothes for 75 boys and girls.

However, Mrs. W. W. Snyder, wife of the superintendent, and others at the Home are anxious that the boys and girls have clothes that look like those of other children and they spend many hours and much study in seeing to it that they do.

The money spent is wisely spent to make sure that excellent value is received. The girls are taught to sew and to take care of clothes, lessons which will certainly be valuable to them in later life just as they are today.

When clothing is bought for the boys, the same care is taken to fit them out in "what other boys are wearing" so that they may never have to feel apart from their fellows in school or in church because their clothes are "different."

It takes a lot of "doing" to accomplish this on a small budget but members of the staff are happy over the results of their efforts.

Our Children Need Protection

God holds the parents responsible for the welfare and protection of young children. What a wonderful opportunity for parents and Sunday school teachers to work cooperatively to put into practice the spiritual and moral precepts learned through religious education. Genesis 4 offers the perfect text: "Am I my brother's keeper?" There are many other applications of the religious precepts to safety, including the Golden Rule, the story of the Good Samaritan, and the injunction to love thy neighbor. Christian training needs to include the practical application of these precepts, especially when they will help to reduce injury and loss of life.

Does your moral responsibility show? We, as parents, have an obligation to rear our children in a safe environment.

Are we as parents helping our children?

Farm Provides Food

The Congregational Christian Home for Children no longer raises large quantities of wheat and corn but it operates the farm in a way which brings excellent returns in food.

Under the present day costs of farm operation, Superintendent Snyder says he feels that the farm is being operated in the best possible way. There is a large amount of truck farming.

Some of the boys harvesting corn on the Home for Children's farm.

The boys and girls take pride in the appearance of their home. They help with its upkeep and in doing so learn skills that will be useful when they are responsible for their own homes in later years. Charles E. Perkins, farm and maintenance manager, is shown giving Billy Lamberson and Tommy West some pointers about mowing the lawn.

Sufficient quantities of vegetables were raised in the last season to supply fresh vegetables for daily use in the summer months and to freeze and can enough to carry the Home through the winter. Corn, beans, peas, butter beans, squash, and okra have been placed in the freezer. Tomatoes have been canned and made into juice. Peaches and strawberries, which were given to the Home, have been placed in the freezer.

The fall and winter turnip patch will furnish the tables with turnips and greens to supplement the frozen vegetables.

The boys help tremendously in the truck farming and the girls do an excellent job with preparing vegetables for freezing and canning and helping to do all the work connected with the storing of food for the future.

A portion of the Home's land which was formerly used for farming has been planted with seedling pines under the North Carolina Reforestation Program.

"Free Men Sing Their Faith" was the sermon topic of Dr. W. J. Andes at Elon Community Church October 29, Reformation Sunday. The service of worship emphasized music of the reformation from Luther to Bach, with the senior choir and the college choir leading the congregation in hymns of that period.

Rev. Guy H. Veazey, resident manager of Moonelon Conference Center and interim pastor of Elk Spur and Rocky Ford Churches, entered Alamaance County Hospital, Burlington, N. C., Monday, October 30, for surgery. His many friends and fellow workers wish for him a satisfactory recovery and return to his normal pursuits.

The prayers and best wishes of The Christian Sun family go out to Rev. Bland Leebrick, who is hospitalized in Harrisonburg, Virginia. Superintendent Clyde Fields reported at the North Carolina and Virginia Conference last Thursday that the doctors had been unable to discover the cause of "body collapse."

If you want your neighbor to know what Christ's spirit will do for him, let him see what it has done for you.

Growth Through Self-Discipline

Background Scripture: Matthew 7:13, 14; Luke 9:23-25; I Corinthians 9:24-27; Ephesians 4:25-32; II Peter 1:2-11.

Memory Selection: Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable. I Corinthians 9:25. (RSV.)

Peter's salutation to his readers has a universal element in it. "Grace" was a familiar and favorite word of salutation or greeting with the Greeks. "Peace" was equally a familiar and favorite word of salutation or greeting with the Hebrews. So, consciously or unconsciously, Peter was stressing the universality of the gospel of Christ. And grace and peace were to be multiplied or increased through the knowledge of God the Father and Jesus Christ the Son. As one comes to know God and Christ better — not know about them, but to know them — God's unmerited love and his peace increasingly multiply and abound.

The Divine Power

Christianity is not a farce or a form, but a force. It is a power not of ourselves which makes for righteousness — I think it was Matthew Arnold who said that. All too many of us try to live the Christian life without the divine power, which as Peter says gives us "all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that has called us to glory and virtue."

Exceeding Great and Precious Promises

Many people emphasize, or look upon, God's prohibitions, instead of looking at his promises. If this issue of The Sun were devoted entirely to quoting these exceeding great and precious promises, the half would not be told. They are not only many in number, but rich in content. And God is not slack concerning his promises as men count slackness. He is able to keep them all, and to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.

Partakers of the Divine Nature

Man has a capacity for God. To as many as receive Christ, to them gives He power to become the children of God. "That ye might be partakers of the divine nature" — it is for this reason that the exceeding great and precious promises have been given. God wants his children to be more than sons of men; he wants them to become sons of God. He wants them to become creatures of eternity and not simply creatures of time.

The Corruption in the World Through Lust

"Having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." What a sorry, sordid, slimy, sinful trail lust leaves in the world. And not only in the sense of sexual lust, but the lust of the eye and all other lustful desires. James, the brother of Jesus, said that every man is tempted when "he is drawn away of his lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." One should carefully watch his desires, and constantly discipline them. Here one finds the principle of "sublimation" as the best way of dealing with the lower nature. The best way to overcome the lusts of life is to direct one's thoughts to the higher things of life. To love the good and the true and the beautiful of life is the best way to break the power of the evil things of life.

Giving All Diligence

A man is saved by grace. There is nothing that a man can do to earn salvation. It is not of works, lest any man should boast. But once a man comes into a saving relationship through faith by grace to Christ, he must give diligence to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ, and to do good works. The plain fact is that all too many Christians just do not work at the job of being a Christian. They do not "give diligence." Peter is commanding his Christian friends to "give diligence" to add to their saving faith certain Christian virtues. God gives salvation; we must work it out in fear and trembling. The Christian life demands discipline and determination and diligence.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Seven Virtues

Somewhere in the Old Testament — I think it is in Proverbs — a list of the "seven deadly sins" is given. Here Peter gives the seven virtues that are to be cultivated with all diligence. It is as if faith is the root of the tree, and from it there grow seven branches on which there appear some fruits of the Christian life. Virtue — integrity of character, goodness, good conduct. Knowledge — there are those who think they have to leave their intelligence outside when they enter a church, or beside when they read the Bible, but we are to love God with our minds as well as our hearts. Dr. Mead tells of a minister who once said in a sermon "Few things, my friends have done more harm in the world than thought." Then he added, although it was not necessary, "Don't put me down as a thinker, my friends; put me down as a believer." Well, why not? A Christian should seek all the knowledge he can. He should do some hard thinking about his religion. Temperance — self discipline, self-control, mastery, the power to say "No!" to all forms of intemperance, but especially to the most prevalent and pernicious forms — indulgence in alcoholic beverages. By the way there are perhaps more alcoholics among the "station wagon set" than on Skid Row. One of the tragedies of alcoholism is that many of its principal victims are brilliant people. Patience — endurance, steadfastness, the ability to work and to wait, the faith to believe that the future does belong to the forces of decency. Godliness — the determination to live a Christian life no matter where the providence of God places us. Brotherly kindness, and Charity or love — these graces are combined here. "If a man does not love God whom he has seen, how can he love God whom he has not seen?" asks one of the inspired writers of the Word. And this brotherly love must be inclusive and not exclusive. If we love only those who love us, what praise do we deserve, or what reward can we expect?

And again Peter urges his readers to give diligence to make their election and calling sure. By our fruits shall we be known. Not profession but performance is the acid test. Not creed but character is the crucial point. The man who diligently and unweariedly gives diligence in these things will not be barren or unfruitful.

Christmas Is A Happy Time

Dear Friends:

Even though Thanksgiving is a few weeks away, our boys and girls are already thinking about Christmas. Many of them, especially the younger ones, have places they visit at Christmas year after year, and we always are able to find homes for each child to visit at least for a few days during the Christmas season. However, some our older boys and girls do not have regular invitations, and if some of our readers would like to have one of them for a part or for all of the Christmas vacation, we would appreciate your writing us.

Christmas is always a happy time for the children. Many individuals, Sunday school classes, and churches send or bring gifts. We hope that those who plan to remember the boys and girls this year will have their gifts arrive at the Home on or before December 15, so that they may be delivered before the children leave for their holidays.

The last week before school vacation begins is always a busy one. The Elon College students usually have a party for the children during this week, and often civic groups in Burlington have parties. It is our custom to have a Christmas tree for each cottage on the Thursday evening before school is out on Friday. The program consists of a devotional period after which gifts are given to the children. Santa is always on hand to visit the smaller boys and girls.

We are grateful to friends who remember the Home and share so generously with our children at Christmastime.

In Memoriam

Mrs. Rowena Moffitt Morris, 87, of Asheboro, died October 31. She was a member of the first graduating class at Elon College. Her brother, E. L. Moffitt, was the president of Elon College.

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. J. R. Parks, deaconess of our Asheboro church.

Funeral services were held last Thursday at First Methodist Church, Asheboro, with Rev. W. W. Hall of the Congregational Christian church assisting.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING

The Thanksgiving season is set aside in our Congregational Christian churches each year as a time when the Congregational Christian Home for Children at Elon College makes an appeal for support of its work during the coming year.

A special Sunday, November 19, has been selected as the date for receiving the Thanksgiving Offering in the churches for the benefit of the Home.

Rev. Walstein W. Snyder, superintendent of the Home, has asked that the Offering reach a goal of $25,000 this year. The need for this amount, and more, is evident when we consider the cost of operating this fine institution and the needs of the boys and girls.

Last year, the cost for daily care, food, and clothing for the Home's average of 75 children amounted to between $85,000 and $90,000 without including such necessities as major repairs to buildings, new cottages, and other improvements on the campus. It cost the Home $2.88 a day or $1,054.08 by the year to provide one child with his daily care, food, and clothing.

The Home receives $25,000 a year through apportionment giving. It also receives some help from the Duke Endowment and a few of the families of the children make small contributions. However, it must depend upon the Thanksgiving Offering for much of its support, for there is a big gap between the $25,000 in apportionment giving, the Duke Endowment's assistance, Social Security & Veteran benefits, the help from children's families, and the cost of operating the Home. The Thanksgiving Offering, gifts from the churches throughout the year, and gifts from business concerns and individuals have to make up this difference.

If the churches will raise the $25,000 goal on Thanksgiving Offering Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Snyder and his excellent staff will be able to serve the children in the new year as all children deserve to be served — with a real home, even though it is an institution, in which they have good care, affection, and the advantages which prepare them for happy and useful lives as Christian adults.

In discussing the children at the Home, the superintendent explains that many of them are either fatherless or motherless and three of the older boys and girls have neither parent. However, some of them have both parents living but their parents either do not or cannot take care of them. It is often difficult, if not impossible, for children whose parents are living to understand and accept the fact that their parents do not or cannot give them the care they should have.

As the Rev. Mr. Snyder says: "In a sense, our Home for Children is the mother to all of the boys and girls in the Home. And the churches, individuals, and businesses combine into their father because they provide the support which is needed to give them proper shelter, food, clothing, and care."

The appeal for the Home continues throughout the Thanksgiving season, November and December, but those who are close to the institution and its needs are hopeful that all members of our churches will join in such a great offering on November 19 that the goal will be reached on that day.

The child who lives at the Home for Children has strong Christian training.

Each child has his own Bible. Devotions are held in each building every evening.

The boys and girls attend Sunday school and worship services at the Elon College Community Church on Sunday mornings. They take an active part in the activities of young people.

Wednesday evenings, special services are held in the Holt Memorial Chapel. In the fall and spring, there also are a number of Sunday evening services in the Chapel.

Here And There Among The Churches

Dr. Stanley U. North, secretary of the General Council, visited our Bay View church, Norfolk, and is reported as "delighted with its great strides and new building."

Beverly Hills, Burlington, held a congregational meeting Sunday evening, November 5, at which time a filmstrip on OCWM was shown and the budget for 1962 voted upon. "Loyalty Sunday" was November 12.

G. G. Givens, R. F. Powell and D. R. Taylor were the speakers for Laymen's Sunday at First, Newport News, using the theme "You Shall Be My Witnesses." Ten laymen participated in the service.

An evening of mission study for men and women was held at Shelton Memorial, Portsmouth, November 9. "Land of Eldorado" was reviewed by Mrs. Pearl Helms following a covered dish supper. Members of First Christian and United churches were guests.

The men of Palm Street, Greensboro, Wednesday evening prayer group gave the ladies a hamburger-hot dog supper recently at the Holland farm in Greensboro. This was the result of an attendance contest between the men and women. Mrs. James Winslow reports attendance is growing on Wednesday evenings. A week before the revival 71 were present.

Representatives from the Congregational Christian Home for Children led the worship at Bethel church, near Burlington, November 5. Supt. Walstein W. Snyder preached. A fellowship dinner was enjoyed following the service.

October 25 Bay View church, Norfolk, had its monthly "Family Night Carry-In Supper." 122 were present. This is sponsored by the choir. Following supper there is a half hour of group singing and then choir practice.

Elon College Alumni of the Norfolk area will have a dinner meeting in the social hall of The Christian Temple at 7:00 p.m. November 16. Mr. Sid Oman of the Chamber of Commerce will be the speaker.

Following the monthly Family Night supper at The Christian Temple, Norfolk, last Monday, the Laymen's and Women's Fellowships met in the sanctuary for the Woman's Gift dedication service.

"Loyalty Sunday" will be observed by Union Ridge, Burlington, November 19. The budget for the new year will be voted on at the close of the worship service November 12.

Holy communion will be observed at the close of the evening service on the first Sunday in each month at Rosemont church for those who cannot attend the morning communion service. The first such service was held November 5.

"In The Beginning God" was the topic of Mr. Bernard W. Jewell at the Laymen's Sunday service at Bay View, Norfolk, October 29. John L. Eley, Jr., Charles S. Gifford, Jr., Elmer Gray, Loren Fields and the pastor, Dr. Charles F. Pegram, shared in the service of worship. Soloist was Franklin Hodgins, who sang "My Task." 164 were present for this service.

"Faith and Bomb Shelters" was the subject for the prayer group at Southern Pines, Wednesday evening, November 8.

Eight new members were received into First, Richmond during October. This makes a total of nineteen members received thus far this year.

The Women's Fellowship of First, Portsmouth, had their thank offering service at the church Sunday evening, November 5, with the theme "Witnessing Thanksgiving."

Rev. Willia E. Joiner, pastor of Shelton Memorial, Portsmouth, is preaching for the community service to be held at Park View Methodist Church at 10:00 a.m. Thanksgiving morning.

First Church, Greensboro, has "grade parents" for each department in the children's division of their church school. Newly elected chairman is Joseph Bulla, who thus becomes an ex officio member of the Board of Christian Education.

Two filmstrips, "The Sending and the Sent" and "Into All the World Together" were used at the evening service at Mt. Zion, Mebane, last Sunday. Next Sunday the annual meeting will be held following lunch at the church.

The choirs of First, Newport News and Warwick churches are combining forces for a program of Christmas carols and anthems. The group of 75 will present the program at both churches. The Newport News junior choir has new robes through the generosity of Mrs. Evelyn Stalnaker and the Pearl Baker Class.

Revival At Palm Street

Mrs. James T. Winslow, Reporter

A week of revival services has just been completed at Palm Street Church in Greensboro. Rev. Eugene Talley, from Third Avenue Christian Church in Danville, was the visiting speaker. We had a wonderful meeting. The whole church received a blessing; many souls were saved, and many renewed their faith in Christ. We had special singing each evening which added much to the services. We wish to take this opportunity to thank Rev. Talley for his inspiring, heart searching, messages and the good fellowship which we enjoyed with him and his good wife. Also for the Randleman group who sang for us on Monday night. The Newlyn Street Methodist Church, our neighbor, brought their prayer service group with us on Wednesday evening and their Junior Choir and trio furnished our special music. Saturday night was family night and this was a service that shall long be remembered at Palm Street. The Four Friends quartet rendered the special music which was enjoyed so very much. Thanks again for all those who helped to make our revival a great success including our new choir director, Mr. Johnny Harder, our loyal pastor, Rev. Powell, and our musicians, Mrs. Powell, Ruth Newton, Linda Fulk, and Fayle Newton.

ORGAN FOR SALE

Mt. Zion Christian Church has purchased a new organ and wishes to sell their present one. It is a Wurlitzer, 12 years old, with cabinet and organ in good condition. It is a one-manual, consisting of 61 notes. There are 5 bass tops and 5 treble stops. No foot pedals. This organ in mahogany finish has lid for closing, will lock, and has matching organ bench. It cost $1495 when new and can be bought at a real bargain.

If interested, write Mrs. Christine Wright, 82 Cypress Road, Eclipse, Virginia or Rev. James W. Madren, 213 Grace Street, Suffolk, Virginia.

Laymen of Rosemont, South Norfolk, conducted the "Evening Gospel Hour" October 15. Donald Liverman delivered the message. Others participating were: Wilber DeBaun, Raymond Niles, Mack Miller, and W. J. Phillips. Al Brenneman led the men's chorus.

BAPTISMAL FONT DEDICATED AT HUNTERDALE

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. John R. Lackey of Winston-Salem upon the birth of a daughter, Rosemary, November 7.

Thank offering service for the Women's Fellowship at Mt. Zion, Mebane, was held at their regular meeting November 10 with Mrs. Lettie Allison in charge.

The Women's Fellowship of Rosemont, South Norfolk, has a FOOD AND USED CLOTHING BANK at their church. This is used for needy families in the area.

Dr. Frank Hamilton will be the speaker for the annual Thanksgiving service for the four churches in the Park Place area, which will be held in the Methodist church at 10:30 Thanksgiving morning.

Under the supervision of Don Trexler, minister of music, members of the Senior Choir of First, Greensboro, are trying their hand at composing introits, prayer and scripture responses to be used in the worship service. Four have been used recently — introit and response by Mrs. Robert Dame and similar aids to worship composed by Eunice Rush. Perhaps other churches would like to get copies.

CHURCHMEN ELECTED

W. T. Scott, Sr.

The Honorable Mills E. Godwin, Jr., of Oakland church, was elected Lieutenant Governor of Virginia and the Honorable Shirley T. Holland of our Windsor church was re-elected to the state House of Representatives in Virginia's general election November 7.

Both Mr. Godwin and Mr. Holland are respected, able men, whose Christian devotion and loyalty to the Church are genuine assets to our Eastern Virginia Conference and the Southern Convention. Both are members of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

Mr. B. M. Williams, a member of Rosemont, has received the honor of being chosen "The Outstanding School Board Member of Virginia" for 1961.

The women of Rosemont, South Norfolk, were responsible for the evening service November 5, using "A Witnessing Thanksgiving" as the theme. Participating were Mrs. Howard Gilbert, Mrs. W. F. Funderburk and the president, Mrs. B. M. Herbert, Jr. Ushers were Mrs. W. M. Sparkman and Mrs. I. L. Jones. Mr. F. T. Etheredge also shared in the service.

On The Edge Of Failure And Success

Scripture: Joshua 1:1-9.

By Rev. Earl T. Farrell

Joshua had taken over the place of leadership left vacant by the death of Moses, and the difficult task of going in to possess the Promised Land. It was necessary for God to speak to Joshua words of encouragement. "Be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law . . . then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success."

It is easy for us to picture Joshua standing there on the border between the wilderness and the land of promise. He was on the edge of failure and success. He did not want to go back to living in the wilderness, and so prepared to move forward.

It occurs to me that we spend a lot of time on the edge of failure and success. Events happen so fast, the currents of history move so swiftly that there are always new frontiers to challenge and try us. We are either swept back into the wilderness and lose many of the gains that we have made, or with courage we push forward into a better life.

There can be no doubt that we are today in such a period of history. We of the church are compelled to examine ourselves and our resources, to determine our strength and liabilities. Of late, we have heard the distressing voices of many people crying the failures of the church. They have spoken of its apparent inability to lead men from failure to success, from cold war to peace, from secularism to spirituality, from indifference to commitment, from unbrotherliness to brotherhood, from disunity to unity. From the public press came an article with quotations from leading churchmen taking issue with those too critical of the church. Rather than crying about the failures of the church, we should speak of our successes, the unity that we have achieved, and the important role that laymen are filling. We should emphasize not the decadence, but the vitality of the church.

There is truth and wisdom in what both of these groups are saying. As is true in most instances, there is always a middle ground. Perhaps out of this debate there will come light to guide the church so that it will play a more vital role in the redemption of men. It is good that this debate is going on. Robert M. Hutchins wrote that, "A civilization in which there is not a continuous controversy about important issues, speculative and practical, is on the way to totalitarianism and death."

Only those who are blind to the facts of life will fail to see the way the world is going in our time. We are on the edge of failure. We are not doing our best.

What are these people saying is wrong with the church, what is holding it back? Why are they saying that the contemporary church is in retreat? And have these critics the following facts in mind. (1) Church membership is higher today than ever, three times per capita of what it was a hundred years ago. How is the church failing with this data in hand to refute their claims? (2) Churches have larger budgets than ever. (3) Attendance is high and people enjoy going to church. (4) If there be any doubt left look at our buildings, and the large sums spent every year on new ones. In response it can be said that many of the members are inactive or with only slight interest. As for the budgets, most of the money is spent on "local affairs." Some have expressed a grave concern that we will develop an idolatry of buildings. They pointed out to Jesus the beauty of the Temple. He was not unimpressed, but he was concerned with the decadence within and said, "Not one stone will be left upon another." It is important that light be not hid either under a bushel, or an architect's dream of a fancy building. More relevant than numbers is character. More essential than money is the grace of God. More important than buildings is that we be the temple of the Holy Spirit.

We must not dwell on our weaknesses to the point that morale is lowered and confidence is lost, as we must never cover our failures except in repentance and forgiveness.

I do not believe that the church is ever irrelevant to life or that it will ever reduce itself to an organization that is merely giving "artificial respiration to a body whose life is gone." If we are on the edge of failure, we are also on the border of success. The church has played the role of yeast in much of the dough of our life. Read literature, examine art, trace the benefits and blessings of our land and heritage. There flows a stream of influence right out of the New Testament.

The whole world is in danger of being lost. We can see before us a promised land of new opportunities. But we are not there. If we reach it God must lead us. We are called upon not to limit our faith to a building, nor to only two hours on Sunday. We must live with Christ every day and in every relationship. There will be no freedom from Christian responsibility; but freedom in our tasks. Religion will be the salting aspect in all of life. If we are to lead men we will bring to our altars a burning conviction that Christ is the way, the truth, and the life. We will follow him in sacrifice, believing in faith, hope and love

"That in the name of Jesus
The world shall be reborn."

Did not our Lord move on the edge of failure and success? He faced opposition, the testing of men and devils, but he never retreated. He was warned about going up to Jerusalem, but "he stedfastly set his face" and he went. To follow in his steps is no picnic in green pastures. To bear a cross after him is no leisure jaunt by still waters. But Christ and his Church remain not only our best hope but our last hope to reach a state of brotherhood and peace. We are a long way from success and God is saying to us; "Go in, go up, have courage to obey and I will give you success."

"Our God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guide while life shall last,
And our eternal home."

EDITORIAL

Since the editor had nothing "terribly" important that needed to be said immediately, and since there is an accumulation of materials on hand because it is near the end of the year and because last week we had a very special issue for the Home for Children, it seemed wise to let the readers have a sermon by the pastor of Wake Chapel Congregational Christian Church rather than the regular editorials. Look out for next week. There is no telling what will happen then. FCL.

TOMORROW'S DAWN

The United States is at war in time of peace. Many realize this and without doubt the number who think so is increasing.

For years the freedom lights of the world have been going out, but most of these snuffed-out lights have been so far from the busy, bustling, pleasure-seeking people of this country that they do not see much of the darkness. Time, however, is deepening this darkness and its shadows are spreading — probably faster than most people realize.

A review of some history is not only appropriate in these times but reassuring since other dark hours were met with loyalty and determination of the human spirit.

Dark were the days of Washington at Valley Forge. He and his men were fighting for a dream, a mirage, perhaps something that never had been on the earth since man first worked it with his hands. But there was a dawn of tomorrow. Washington knew it, and the dawn came.

Or consider the tragic days of Lincoln and the Civil War. The country was locked in the bloody struggle of brother fighting brother, father fighting son, and neighbor doing battle against neighbor. Could there ever be a greater darkness than that? This darkness never should have been revived by a celebration prompted by commercial greed. There is no moral justification to celebrate a tragedy, especially one that left more than 800,000 dead and wounded and brought poverty and hardships to 500,000 homes and divided great masses of people for a century... perhaps longer.

Washington and Lincoln worked for the right of free-born men to govern themselves in their own way. And that right is where the darkness of the land now casts its shadow. Countries whose leaders have no honor make promises only for the purpose of self-service, disregard solemn treaties, and have no respect for international law and human rights, and make darkness for the United States. But all know that there will be a dawn as in other times.

Not only so, but these dictators are reverting to ancient warfare with its barbarous customs of 2,000 years ago. Captured men were then slaughtered or sold into lifelong slavery. Human rights meant nothing then and mean nothing now to those who from the podium scream volumes of words about freedom while their agents are directed and compelled to carry out their orders of brutal slavery.

There are times in the life of most men when they meet darkness. Some are wont to say, "Oh, God my Father, I am Thy child, tell me how to live through this dark hour." Or there comes to their minds the words of Washington Gladden —

"In the darkest night of the year,
When the stars are all gone out,
That courage is better than fear,
That faith is truer than doubt."

It is the faith "that is truer than doubt" that every man, woman and child in the United States must have to live and help protect a land blessed with "freedom's holy light."

MEANING OF THE NAME "JOHN"

By W. C. Cullom, Wake Forest, N. C.

The name "John" is probably one of the most popular of the masculine Christian names. Have you ever stopped and asked as to its meaning? It is a compound word being made up of "Jo", which stands for "Jehovah," and "Nathan" which in the Hebrew tongue means "He gave." So that the word "John" means "Jehovah gave."

Comments I would make in this connection:

(1) When a mother gives this name to her baby boy she should think of what it means and believe that he is a gift from God. (2) That mother should accept this gift with that degree of thanks that will lead her to do her best for her son in the fear of God. (3) The child should be taught from his birth to recognize himself as the gift of God. (4) Let those who bear the name of "John" look back through the years to John the Baptist, and to John, "the disciple whom Jesus loved," to John Wesley and John Calvin, and to Jonathan Edwards and all the rest in that line and try to make themselves worthy bearers of that worthy name.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

THE EARTH GOD'S GIFT

"The heavens, even the heavens, are the Lord's: but the earth hath He given to the children of men." Psalm 115:16.

What a beautiful gift! "The earth hath He given to the children of men." More or less I have traveled this land over, been in Mexico, been in Canada; seen its oceans and lakes, its mountains and valleys, its rippling mountain streams and its slow moving mighty rivers; and its forests and plains; its cities and villages, its blue skies and starry nights — "the heavens declare the glory of God," Yes, and so does the beautiful earth!

Remember, Moses told Pharaoh in the sixth plague: "That thou mayest know the earth is the Lord's." You know the very first verse of the Bible says: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." And the 24th Psalm: "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." These are not proof texts, but rather texts to start our minds thinking about the gift of the earth which God has given us.

"And let the whole earth be filled with His glory; Amen and Amen." (Psa. 72:19.) Turn several pages (Isaiah 11) and read of the day when "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." The earth is yours, make it great, make it glorious, make it to show forth the glory of God the world around.

The heavens are God's; his plan of our redemption in His Gift of Jesus; His laws of love and justice in heaven fixed are not for man to brook or gainsay, "The heavens are the Lord's." In Jesus He has shown the way and opened the door, and has asked us to go with the Good News of God's eternal love and mercy to the ends of the earth. Let's begin right where we are.

Amen.

Annual Reunion At Historic Church

Barrett's Christian Church, Wakefield, Virginia

September 24, some 100 members of the John Burwell Barrett family assembled at old Barrett's church grounds to hold their annual reunion with worship services in the morning followed by the traditional picnic luncheon.

The first church was erected on the farm of Reverend Burwell Barrett. He and his wife gave the deed in 1823 for the lot on which the church had been built many years before.

The church was well established before 1808 and was visited by Rev. Joseph Thomas on his preaching tours in Eastern Virginia. It may have been the very first Christian Church that was built in the section.

Rev. Burwell Barrett was the pastor on Sunday, and like many others of the primitive churches, it was used in the week as a school-house with the pastor as teacher. The early members were the pastor and his family; Polly Harnes and her mother, the Traviges, Wellonses, Cokers, Stephensions and others. The preaching Sunday was the 4th Sunday in each month, and has been so most of the time of the church's existence. As was the custom the larger girls kept the church and school-house in order; the older boys kept the fires in the winter time.

In 1888 the present building was erected. The history of the local church and its customs were similar to those of other churches in this section. A great many of the people walked to the church, and in the summer time carried their shoes and stockings in their hands until they were near the church and then put them on. Leaving the church, they were taken off and carried back home again.

There were two sections in the old church, one for the masters and the other for their slaves. This latter custom continued until after 1865, when the colored people met under a willow tree in the church yard and organized their separate congregation.

At first, many of the vehicles were ox carts, then a few stick gigs were used, and later buggies and finally automobiles.

The Eastern Virginia Christian Conference has met at Old Barrett's five times: 1820, 1830, 1838, 1878 and 1917. Its membership was 75 in 1933. The church is the mother of Mars Hill which was of short duration, and of Oak Level that later fell into the hands of the Methodist Episcopal Church and then became extinct. Burton's Grove, another daughter, is still in good condition.

While this church has a peculiar location, it has done more to furnish leadership for the Christian Church in this section of Virginia than any other church and has produced some of its greatest leaders.

Rev. Burwell Barrett, the organizer and builder, was one of the first ministers in this section to cast his lot with the Christians, and to go to work to build up the cause in this community and area.

He was not only a minister, but he was a public spirited man. So closely associated was the name "Barrett" and the Christian Church in Virginia in the early days that in some places the Christians were called "The Barrett Society."

His son, Rev. Mills Barrett, born in 1783, became the leader of this church. He was converted in 1809 under the preaching of Rev. Joseph Thomas at his father's house and began to preach as the companion of Rev. Thomas, the white pilgrim.

Rev. Mills Barrett was followed by his two sons, Stephen S., and Mills B. Barrett.

Rev. Stephen S. Barrett was licensed in 1843 and ordained in 1846. He was instrumental in organizing Berkley (in the vicinity of Norfolk) in 1847.

Rev. Mills B. Barrett began to preach at 19 and was ordained at Antioch in 1850.

Present officers of the John Burwell Barrett Family are: Bernard Barrett, Sedley, president; Edwin Mills Barrett, Alexandria, vice president; Josie Barrett West, Smithfield, secretary; Burwell Barrett Gutridge, Colonial Beach, recording secretary; Winnie Hines Harrison, Ivor, historian; Virginius Hines, Wakefield, treasurer.

The Sophia Women's Fellowship led the morning worship service Sunday, November 5. Each woman presented a gift offering for all the blessings God has bestowed upon her for the past year and as an expression of joy for God's love and guidance. The gifts amount to a penny a day. The reporter says, "The Women's Fellowship has had a big share in the building of the church and establishing God's work in this community. Each woman has her place in the church."

THE WORD FOR THE WORLD

The American Bible Society, for the 18th consecutive year, is again sponsoring Worldwide Bible Reading, from Thanksgiving to Christmas and is calling upon all people to join in a united fellowship of reading the Bible daily.

The Society believes that reason alone cannot answer all of a man's questions. Man reaches for freedom and gains the right to make a choice. Then he finds choice is father to responsibility.

The choices you make are more important than you think. You cannot escape the fact that they will shape the world of your children's children.

Your responsibility is to seek the best in your world and make the best decisions for it. Renew your faith at the source. Read and reread the Holy Bible.

Join the millions around the world, who, on Thanksgiving Day, will open their Bibles and read in their own language, "Know ye that the Lord he is God; it is He that hath made us, and not we ourselves." Continue as follows:

Union Thanksgiving service for South Norfolk church will be held at our Rosemont church Wednesday, November 22, at 7:30 p.m. with the pastor of the Nazarene church preaching.

A Litany Of Thanksgiving

By Richard K. Morton

Out of the abundance of love and care by which we have been nurtured and the unmeasured devotion of those who have labored on our behalf,

We pour forth our thanksgiving, O Lord.

Out of the deep wells of remembrance and the overflowing waters of kindness which have so often refreshed us,

We pour forth our thanksgiving, O Lord.

Out of the continuing benefits we have enjoyed from all that has ministered to our material and spiritual welfare through these years,

We pour forth our thanksgiving, O Lord.

Out of the precious sharing of experiences with those we love and those with whom we work and help build our community,

We pour forth our thanksgiving, O Lord.

Out of a mind stirred by the possibilities that lie within human grasp and the aspirations through which he soars above the earth-bound,

We pour forth our thanksgiving, O Lord.

Out of a heart moved by the privations endured by millions and by the limitations placed by circumstances upon the lives of as many,

We pour forth our thanksgiving, O Lord.

As we actively engage in providing the essentials of life for those who cry out in their bewilderment and need,

Provide for us the true festival feast, we pray.

As we confront the problems of an embattled age which sees so many denied the very basic comforts of life and of happiness,

Provide for us the true festival feast, we pray.

As we partake of the manna from heaven and hunger and thirst after something more than what will meet physical need,

Provide for us the true festival feast, we pray.

As we enjoy the fruits of our labors, the happiness of being with those we love, and the benefits of a culture for which so many have worked,

Provide for us the true festival feast, we pray.

As we come to value that which nurtures the spirit and lifts man above the concerns of marketplace, office, and place of power,

Provide for us the true festival feast, we pray.

As we seek something more important than food for the table and comforts that make for luxury and ease and remember the real ground for our having the many feasts of earth that we love,

Provide for us the true festival feast, we pray. Amen.

New Parsonage at Elon College

Open House At Elon Parsonage

By Luther N. Byrd

The new parsonage of the Elon College Community Church, located on Atkinson Drive near the Elon College campus, was formally opened to the public when the Women's Fellowship of the church held "Open House" in the new structure from 3 until 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, October 29.

The beautiful brick parsonage, already occupied by Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Andes, marks the first time that the Elon College church has owned its own pastoral home since the former parsonage was moved to make way for construction of the new church edifice three years ago.

The old parsonage, which was a frame structure, was removed from the church site to a new location on East College Avenue in 1958 and was remodelled to serve as a demonstration house for the home economics department of Elon College.

Construction was started last April on the new parsonage, which was built on property which was donated jointly by Elon College and the Congregational Home for Children. J. Mark McAdams and E. W. Brafford, members of the church, supervised the construction and did the purchasing of materials. Other members of the church donated many hours of work, with the cooperative effort making possible the completion of a building valued at $25,000 for a cost of slightly more than $18,000. The Women's Fellowship furnished the carpeting for the foyer, living room and dining room.

At the "Open House" the guests were greeted by Dr. John G. Truitt and by Mr. and Mrs. J. Mark McAdams. The receiving line included the chairman of the board of deacons, Ralph Oxford and Mrs. Oxford and Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Andes and their son, David Andes, along with Mrs. Andes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Atkins.

Mrs. D. M. McLelland directed the guests to the dining room, where Mrs. Robert Knowles, vice president of the Women's Fellowship and Mrs. Clyde Fields, wife of the superintendent of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, and Miss Ruth Dunn, of the staff of the Convention office, took turns at the punch bowl. Mrs. John G. Truitt and Miss Edith Brannock were in charge of the refreshment table, with others working with the refreshments consisting of Prof. Roy Epperson and Mrs. W. E. Butler, Jr.

Mrs. Howard Edgerton directed the guests to the family room, where they were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Danieleley. A tour of the house was conducted by Mrs. Richard Haff, Mrs. W. W. Snyder, Mrs. Philip Marino and Mrs. W. B. Terrell, all of whom are chairmen of Women's Fellowship circles. Good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Brafford. Miss Georgia Moore and Mrs. T. E. Gilliam had charge of flower arrangements, and members of the Pilgrim Fellowship assisted with the serving and the parking for guests.

Homecoming Activities

Miss Eleanor Smith, of Winston-Salem, reigned as Homecoming Queen at Elon College Saturday, October 28. She was escorted to the various festivities by Bill Mahaffey. Miss Dian Clary of Lawrenceville, Va., escorted by John Munich, was Maid of Honor.

Homecoming festivities included a parade, judging of campus displays, a football game and two dances. Organizations, their sponsor and escorts, respectively follow:

ELON PROFESSOR ELECTED

Prof. Theodore E. Perkins, Elon College librarian, was elected secretary-treasurer of the college and university section of the North Carolina Library Association at the annual meeting of the association held recently in Durham.

Also attending the statewide library conference from Elon were Miss Arabella Gore, Mrs. John Kittenger and Mrs. Helen Hardee, members of the Elon College library staff.

Babcock New Treasurer For World Ministries

The Rev. Dr. Everett A. Babcock, Cleveland, Ohio, superintendent and minister of the Ohio Conference of Congregational Christian Churches, will be the first treasurer of the United Church Board for World Ministries.

Uniting the overseas missionary, relief and refugee programs of the Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed churches, the United Church Board for World Ministries has a budget of five and a half million dollars to support the work of 514 people in 23 countries.

Dr. Babcock has led the Ohio Conference for 17 years. During his term as superintendent, the churches enjoyed a period of unprecedented expansion. Benevolences increased from $142,895 in 1945 to $557,543 in 1960. Ministers' salaries tripled, going from an average of $2,284 to $7,402.

Until his successor in the Ohio post is chosen next May, Dr. Babcock will divide his time between Cleveland and the offices of the Board for World Ministries in Boston and New York City.

Before going to Ohio, Dr. Babcock was executive secretary of the Connecticut Council of Churches from 1940 to 1945, and of the Vermont Church Council from 1938 to 1940. Previously he was minister of Federated Church, East Burke, Vermont, where he was ordained in 1933.

Born in Craftsbury, Vermont, May 28, 1908, he was educated at Hardwick Academy, Florida Southern College and Yale Divinity School. He received an honorary doctorate of Divinity from Defiance College. Dr. Babcock has served on many boards and committees of the Congregational Christian Churches, the United Church of Christ and the National Council of Churches. In the United Church he

A SONG IN ECUADOR

She sang on the way to her father's funeral. She didn't have a good voice. She didn't even sing in the church choir. But she sang through her tears to show her faith in eternal life.

This was the first time a Protestant had died in Tabacunda, Ecuador. He had joined the fellowship of Protestant believers only about two years before he died. His family and neighbors had marveled as he studied the Bible and earnestly tried to apply it to his living — changing from a dissipated and debt-ridden man to an industrious one who worked hard at his brick making. A wall of earth had fallen on him as he worked and he had died before his son could get him to the hospital.

Helen and Eugene Braun, E & R missionaries in Tabacunda, sat through the night with the family and witnessed the faith and strength of spirit that had come to these people — not just from the missionaries — but from the Holy Spirit. On the day of the funeral, the mission school children sang and the daughter, who does not like to sing in public, sang that her father lived — a testimony to Our Christian World Mission.

MARATHI MISSION
Kodaikanal

November

19—Dr. and Mrs. Horace Thomas are serving the Kodaikanal School for Missionary Children, where 300 go to school and need medical care. He is also head of the Van Allen Hospital there. They went to India from Australia in 1929 and since then have served at Christian Mission Hospital, Madurai.

Kotagiri

20—Miss Bertha Smith has served in India since 1917, training "Bible Women" and working with women's literacy classes. In August, 1960, she went to the Church of South India Children's Home, assisting in managing this orphanage. She has reached retirement age but has been given permission to retire there in the Nilgiri Hills where she continues to serve.

Madurai

21—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dettman are with the American College, Madurai, where he is professor of English and bursar; ordained a deacon of the Church of South India in 1959. He received Douglas Horton scholarship for study at Harvard during furlough 1958-59.

22—Miss Dorothy Hoath, an Australian who has served in India since 1944, is in charge of the nursing school at Christian Mission Hospital. This gives four-year course in general nursing and midwifery to high school graduates.

23—Rev and Mrs. William Kelly finished their year of Tamil language study "with distinction." In 1960 he became chaplain of American College, where he guides the 1,000 men in their religious life.

24—Miss Ellen Lang, another Australian, has been in India since 1944. She is assistant sister tutor of the Nursing School at Christian Mission Hospital, helping train 60 nurses.

25—Miss Oline Nicholson went to India in 1929 to work with the Criminal Tribes. Since 1938 she has taught crafts at Lucy Perry Noble Institute, which salvages village girls from ignorance and poverty and teaches them how to make a living. She has visited the Southern Convention and studied at Penland School of Handcrafts in N. C.

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Burlington Youth Council Formed

For some fifteen years it has been the custom for the youth groups of six of the "downtown" churches in Burlington to meet together on each fifth Sunday during the school year. These churches, besides First Christian, are First E & R, Macedonia Lutheran, First Presbyterian, Episcopal Church of the Holy Comforter, and Front St. Methodist Church.

Recently, an interdenominational Youth Council was formed. Representing our church was Susie Kimball and John Kernodle from the Senior High Pilgrim Fellowship, and Paula Wrenn and Harold Pollard from the Junior High Pilgrim Fellowship.

At their first meeting they decided to observe Youth Week in January with young people from each of the churches participating in each activity. The first of these will be a worship service, which will include both Junior Highs and Senior Highs, will be held at the First Presbyterian Church and there will be an out of town speaker who is an experienced youth worker. Representing our church on the committee planning this service is Harold Pollard.

The following Saturday night, February 3, there will be a social for the Senior Highs at Front St. Methodist Church. Susie Kimball is chairman of the committee planning this event. On the same night, at the Lutheran Church, the Junior Highs will have a social and Joe Tyson, Jr. is our representative on the committee planning for this.

The theme, which is being used throughout the country for Youth Week, is "Called To Responsible Freedom." It is hoped that this will prove to be a valuable experience in Christian cooperation for our young people and only the beginning of worth while activities they can promote. Adult advisors are Miss Mable Nance, Rev. Jas. Bearss and Mrs. W. F. Randolph.

CONQUEST OF DIRT

By David Miller

On the windswept parking lot of the Lynnhaven Colony Church a gathering of prominent young men and women assembled into a huddle to discuss plans about attacking a countless score of dirty automobiles. Knowing that the money would be forwarded to World Missions for the Work Day For Christ, Gary Miller, the head coach also the action chairman of the P. F., gave the signal to commence fire. As told to do so the boys began squirting the water and the soap began to bubble. The cars quickly relinquished their dirt.

The battle had begun on the warm morning of Saturday, the twenty first day of the tenth month of the year nineteen-sixty-one. It was won in the cooling afternoon of the same day.

A total of fifty-one dollars and eighty seven cents was turned in, in the name of the Lynnhaven Colony Pilgrim Fellowship.

The Palm Street Youth Fellowship, under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Fulk, gave their church a thorough cleaning on their Work-Day-For-Christ. They waxed floors, polished pews, etc. A box was placed in the vestibule for contributions. They did a good job which is greatly appreciated.

Members of the Senior High Pilgrim Fellowship of the Lynnhaven Colony Church set a marker in the records of the P. F. scrapbook on October 29, 1961. The "trick or treat" for UNICEF group collected $116.50.

Young people of Rosemont, South Norfolk, earned $66.50 on Work Day for Christ. The adult sponsors worked along with the young people.

Women's Fellowship Sunday Observed

Long's Chapel

Mrs. H. L. Chandler

The morning worship was conducted by the Women's Fellowship at Long's Chapel, near Burlington, November 5. The call to worship was given by Mrs. Ethel Rudd, president. Responsive reading was led by Mrs. Polly Lewis. Mrs. Ida Blanchard gave the scripture reading, followed by the morning prayer by Mrs. Lillian Carey. The choir responded with "Hear Our Prayer, O Lord." Mrs. Violet Shaw, Mrs. Carleen Smith and Mrs. Betty Hopkins received the offering. Mrs. Thelma Fonville read the year's history.

A special tribute to our pastor, Rev. William M. Loy, was read by Mrs. Sarah Faulkner as follows:

Our tribute of praise today goes to our beloved pastor: To one who labors so faithfully with us and for us; to one who has been instrumental in bringing such a vast number to Christ and into His Church; to one who labors so untiringly with and for the youth of the church; to one who performs the marriage ceremony for our young couples, christens our newly-born and comforts us in trouble and sorrow; to one who has labored so hard physically as well as otherwise, to bring about the realization of a dream of his and the congregation — that of a new church building! We take this time, the occasion of your birthday celebration to say: "Thank you for the Gospel, you write a chapter a day, by the deeds you do and the words you say."

After the choir sang "Whispering Hope," Mrs. Edith Anderson brought the message on "Stewardship of Time, Talent, Treasure."

The benediction was pronounced by Mrs. Larry Russell.

Immediately after the morning service a birthday dinner was served in the hut in honor of Mr. Loy's birthday. The table was decorated with fall flowers and groaned with the weight of food. After the meal Mr. Loy was showered with gifts. In his speech of gratitude he said his beloved wife deserved all the credit for what he has done. He mentioned the fact that he has been pastor at Long's Chapel eight years in January, 1962.

The Women's Fellowship of First, Richmond, held their Thank Offering service Sunday, November 5, at the 11:00 service. Mrs. J. Everette Neese, the pastor's wife, led the service.

Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed in our Southern Pines church November 5 with Mrs. James Beasley, Mrs. Everett Walker, and Mrs. Earl Parker sharing in leading the worship. The pastor, Rev. Carl Wallace, preached on "A Way of Life."

The national packet of materials and the Woman's Gift dedication service were used as the basis for the Women's Fellowship Sunday program at First, High Point, with Mrs. Staley Woodell, president, presiding. Others participating were: Mrs. J. A. Johnson, Mrs. George Darr, Mrs. Clarence Payne, Mrs. Clayton Smith, Mrs. Dora Younger and Mrs. F. C. Lester.

Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed November 5 at Holy Neck, Holland. The message was brought by Mrs. J. O. Davidson. Others sharing in the service were Mrs. Ruby Wright, Mrs. March, Mrs. Allen Piland and Mrs. R. T. Grissom, the minister's wife. Mrs. J. L. Adams provided flowers.

Mrs. William T. Harrell brought the message for the thank offering service at Cypress Chapel November 5. Mrs. Walter Bryant rendered special music. Others sharing in the program were Mrs. Edwin Hunter, Mrs. James Boyette, Mrs. Wesley Brinkley, Mrs. W. J. Jones, Mrs. Johnny Speight and Rev. Calvin J. Felton. Memorial flowers were given by Mrs. J. P. Byrd, Jr.

Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed at Beverly Hills, Burlington, November 5 with the theme "Creating and Renewing the Church." Mrs. Leary Riley was the leader of worship. Talks were given by Mrs. Allen Hurdle, Mrs. James Bell, and Mrs. J. R. Crutchfield. Others participating were Mrs. W. D. Rippy and Mrs. Fred Bowman. Flowers were given by Mr. and Mrs. Zeb Lynch in celebration of their 40th wedding anniversary.

South Norfolk

By Beatrice George

Mrs. J. Frank Morgan was the guest speaker in observance of Women's Fellowship Day at the morning worship service at South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church Sunday, October 29.

Mrs. C. N. Harris, first vice president, presided, and was assisted by Mrs. Carlton Chappell, second vice president and spiritual life chairman, who gave the invocation and led the responsive reading, and Miss Beatrice George, historian, who read the scripture lesson and led in prayer.

The choir was made up of all women. Mrs. Melvin L. Thomas sang "Submission," accompanied by Miss Gladys Hanbury, organist.

The Woman's Gift was presented at the altar by Mrs. W. B. Evans, president, Mrs. Hugh Rawls, stewardship chairman and Mrs. Harvey Curling. The prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. William A. Cousins.

Mrs. Morgan divided her talk into three parts:

First, she spoke of the Reality of God — who is creator and ruler of the universe which shows His power and might, yet He is a personal God.

Second, the Permanence of His Word. "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth"... Mrs. Morgan drew contrasting examples of beliefs existing in the minds of people and even in some ministerial students and leaders of the church which would tend to break down the fundamentals on which Christ's church was instituted.

Third, Our place in the program of God's plan in the church. Mrs. Morgan emphasized the important part of the church's program for which the women are responsible.

Mrs. Morgan is known and loved by many in the Tidewater area, and especially among members and friends of South Norfolk Church where she has been a frequent visitor on many occasions — not only is she appreciated for her own cheerful, lovable self but also as the wife of the late Reverend J. Frank Morgan who was highly esteemed in this area. It was refreshing and challenging to hear Mrs. Morgan again at our church with her timely and appropriate message.

Continuing Growth

Background Scripture: Romans 12:1-21; I Timothy 6:11-19; II Timothy 1:3-14.

Devotional Reading: Hebrews 5:7-14.

Memory Selection: Fight the good fight of faith, take hold of the eternal life to which you were called when you made the good confession in the presence of many witnesses. I Timothy 6:12 (RSV).

There was an intimate and strong bond of friendship between Paul and Timothy. The old apostle loved the younger minister even as a father loves his son. Indeed Timothy was Paul's spiritual son, for he was converted under Paul's ministry. And now that the aged apostle was in bonds in prison he longed to see his young friend. There is a warmth and affection in his letter that brings a lump to the throat and tears to the eyes.

Intercessory Prayer

"Without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers day and night." We little realize, and little use, the power of intercessory prayer. For instance what a difference it might make in the ministry of many a pastor if the members of the congregation remembered him regularly in their prayers. There are so many who would appreciate our prayers and profit by them. For years I have had a prayer list of missionaries and Christian workers and causes, and I remember all these on certain days of the week. I do not think for one minute that I have any special merit, or "pull with the Lord." But I do have the faith that we can help one another by our intercessions. And as the people should pray for the pastor, so should the pastor pray for the people.

A Rich Heritage

"When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice, and I am persuaded that in thee also." Nobody knows how much money or other things Timothy received from his grandmother and his mother. But he had a far richer legacy from them than material things. They bequeathed to him the legacy of an unfeigned faith. It was a rich inheritance. For faith can be and often is received as an inheritance. It starts in a family and is handed down from parent to child. How fortunate are the children of a home in which there is religious faith. There are so many parents who give their children everything to live with, and so little to live for! Parents will do well to be concerned with giving their children fewer things and more ideals, fewer gadgets and more faith. To be sure one must develop his own faith and grow in it. But it helps tremendously if he has an inheritance on which to build.

Stirring Up The Gift

"Stir up the gift of God which is in thee by the putting on of my hands." — thus writes the veteran to the young man. Like fire, one's faith dies down unless it is stirred up, or replenished. We need again and again to be stirred up, aroused, revived, strengthened, renewed, even the best of us. That is one value of "Daily Devotions," of regular attendance at services of worship, of preaching missions or revivals. Many of us are like the man who was being married. When the minister asked him if he would have this woman to be his wedded wife, he did not reply. Turning to the bride the minister asked if the man had lost his hearing. The man replied "No sir, but I have kind of lost my enthusiasm!" Even in the best of us the fires sometimes burn low. We need to stir them up.

Unashamed Of The Gospel

"Be thou therefore not ashamed of the testimony of the Lord, nor of me his prisoner. But be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God." How often we are ashamed of the gospel and of religion. One summer, one of my college friends spent his vacation working in the harvest fields of the Dakotas. He told me about the rough and ready life of the crews that followed the harvesting machines. I asked him what they said and did when they learned that he was a ministerial student. He said "I never let them find it out; I never told them." Well come to think of it, who is there of us who can cast the first stone? Have you never recoiled from witnessing in a hard spot? Have you failed to speak a word for Christ because you thought someone might laugh? Have you ever posed as a "regular guy" — among the light-hearted, the light-minded, the cynical, sneering "regulars?" There are many people who are eloquent and vocal in telling others about their memberships in Clubs and Lodges and what have you, who are ashamed to speak about their membership in the Church!

The Gracious Work Of Christ

One cannot read far in any of Paul's writings without coming face to face with some reference to Christ. The letter to Timothy is no exception. In a few sentences Paul mentions several aspects of Christ's work. "Who hath saved us — given us wholeness or health is what the word means, brought us into a new relationship with God. He has called us with a holy calling — the word holy as used in the Bible means "separate or different." And He did all this, not because of our good works, but according to his own purpose and grace. Furthermore Christ abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. Life has new meaning since Christ came. And so does immortality. What was heretofore a vague, impersonal, shadowy existence in Christ became continued personality with infinite possibilities of growth and development. It became qualitative instead of a matter of mere length. Life here and the immortal life were all of one piece. This is the gospel, "the good news."

The Divine Safe Deposit Box

"I am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." Whatever we commit unto him, He can and will keep safely and securely. Thieves cannot break through nor steal.

UNISON BENEDICTION

- May the strength of God pilot us.
- May the power of God preserve us.
- May the wisdom of God instruct us.
- May the hand of God protect us.
- May the way of God direct us.
- May the strong arm of God defend us, now and forevermore. Amen.

PROCEEDINGS

The Ninety-First Annual Session WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

and

The First Annual Session WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST

Flint Hill (R) Church
Sophia, North Carolina
November 1, 1961

MORNING SESSION

The ninety-first annual session of the Western North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches met at Flint Hill (R) Congregational Christian Church, Route 1, Sophia, North Carolina, and was called to order at 9:45 a.m., November 1, 1961, by President Collie Seymour. As the minutes will show, the Conference voted to act as an Association of the United Church of Christ: hence this is the first session as an Association of the United Church of Christ.

Religious services led by Rev. Grant Burns of Randleman consisted of the congregational singing of "The Church's One Foundation," the reading of St. John 1:1-18, and a prayer.

Standing ministers and delegates indicated that a quorum was present, and the president declared the Conference ready for business.

The program prepared by a committee composed of the president, secretary, and the host pastor, Rev. Lucy M. Presnell, was presented and adopted.

Superintendent Clyde L. Fields of the Southern Convention introduced guests and visitors.

By request of Smithwood church, Conference enrolled Mrs. M. A. Pollard of that church, widow of one of our ministers, as an Honorary Delegate.

Delegates from the churches were enrolled.

The first major item of business was a report from pastors and delegates on "How Are We Doing in the Local Churches?" No report was made by Patterson's Grove or Parks Cross Roads. It was reported by a neighboring pastor that the last member of Center Grove died in 1960, and that the community does not seem to need the church. All other churches responded to the roll call, and progress seems to be general.

The Rev. Carl J. Landes of Guilford College was presented as the representative of the Board of Home Missions in our area in racial and cultural relations. He was welcomed and given privileges of the floor.

The second phase of our work was considered under the theme, "How Are We Doing in the Conference?"

As Seen by the Executive Committee was presented by Secretary F. C. Lester, and the report was adopted. See Exhibit 1.

What the Treasurer Knows was presented by Treasurer Ira L. McDowell, and the report was adopted. See Exhibit 2. Superintendent Fields distributed a report showing how much of the Apportionments has been paid to date.

The Pastor-at-Large Reports showed the activities of this officer during the past year, and was received. See Exhibit 3.

Ideas of the Stewardship Committee, presented by Chairman Lynwood Hubbard, were adopted. See Exhibit 4.

As the Committee on Evangelism Sees It told of the Teaching-Reaching-Predaching Mission in this Conference and was presented by Chairman Robert Hultman. Report adopted. See Exhibit 5.

Stimulation by the Social Action Committee was presented by Chairman William T. Joyner, and adopted by Conference. See Exhibit 6.

Laymen at Work was an oral report given in the absence of President Clyde Pell which showed that laymen are at work both in local churches and as a Laymen's Fellowship of Conference.

Where the Women Come In was read by the secretary from the report book in the absence of district chairman Mrs. S. H. Pell. The women come in wherever there is church work to do, especially in missions. See Exhibit 7.

In Memory of the Departed, presented orally by Chairman Rev. Martin L. Fogleman indicated that no minister of Conference had died during the past year. Hence no memorial. Conference stood for silent prayer in memory of church members who have answered the final Call.

A Committee Looks at the Ministry was presented by Chairman F. C. Lester. The report was adopted. See Exhibit 8.

A delightful feature of the morning program was a stirring address by Dr. Nathanael Guptill, Director of the Council for Church and Ministry of the United Church of Christ, who used as his topic: "The Ministry in the United Church." Dr. Guptill was presented by Rev. Reuben Askew.

At 12:30 Conference recessed for lunch, which was bountifully served by the women of Flint Hill church in their new Social Hall.

AFTERNOON SESSION

President Seymour convened the afternoon session at 1:30 o'clock.

Devotional services were led by Jimmy Caviness, Jr., a member in Care of the Conference, who led in singing "Glory to His Name," read verses from Colossians, and led in prayer.

How Are We Doing in the Southern Convention? was the first major consideration in the afternoon.

The Convention Office, As the Superintendent Sees It, was interestingly presented by Supt. Clyde L. Fields.

Report by Our Committee was presented by Mrs. F. C. Lester, Chairman. Report adopted. See Exhibit 9.

Glimpses of the Sunday School Convention were given orally by President L. M. Presnell, Jr.

Training in Churches and at Moonelon was given as an address by Rev. Robert Knowles, Minister of Christian Education for the Southern Convention.

Our College Also Helps was the subject of a brief address by Mr. W. B. Terrell, Alumni Secretary for Elon College.

At the Home for Children was an informative address by Superintendent W. W. Snyder.

Where THE SUN Shines was a short talk by Editor F. C. Lester. Previous to this President Seymour presented the United Church HERALD.

How Are We Doing in the Denomination?

"The United Church as I Saw It" was presented by delegates to the General Council and General Synod last Summer. Those present and speaking were Mrs. F. C. Lester, Mrs. Ira L. McDowell, Rev. Collie Seymour, Ira L. McDowell, Rev. Lacy M. Presnell, Rev. Clyde L. Fields, and Rev. F. C. Lester.

"The United Church as I Want It" was discussed by ministers and delegates.

"Missions as Reported by a Committee" was given by Rev. L. M. Presnell, Chairman. Adopted. See Exhibit 10.

Just Among Ourselves -- A Business Session

Report of Committee on Place, made by Homer Frye, recommended that place for next meeting be left to the executive committee. Voted.

Report of the Nominating Committee was read by Rev. Reuben Askew. It was accepted and nominees elected. See Exhibit 12.

Committee on Resolutions report was made by Rev. Grant Burns, and was adopted. See Exhibit 13.

VOTED: To authorize the Executive Committee to investigate the property at Center Grove, and to take such action as may be necessary to preserve rights of the Conference.

VOTED: To authorize the secretary to edit, and publish in the ANNUAL the minutes of this session.

VOTED: To purchase 150 copies of the ANNUAL, and distribute them to officers and churches.

Superintendent Clyde Fields presented a map showing the location of the United Church of Christ churches in North Carolina and Virginia.

Dr. Nathanael Guptill installed the officers.

President Hubert Beane accepted authority from retiring President Collie Seymour, and asked for prayers and suggestions from delegates and ministers.

Following a prayer by Dr. F. C. Lester the Conference recessed until the evening session at 7:30 in the Sophia church.

EVENING SESSION AT SOPHIA

The evening session, held at Sophia Congregational Christian Church, was called to order by President Hubert Beane. The worship service "Jesus Calls Us" was presented by Pilgrim Fellowship leaders, Sandra Hubbard of Pleasant Ridge, Quayne Chilton of Pleasant Grove, Jerry Cameron of Northview and Margaret Hall of Asheboro, under the direction of Dorothy Lester, High Point, president.

"Call to Christian Vocation" was the subject of a talk by Rev. Reuben Askew, who also presented the guest speaker.

"What It Means to Be A Minister Now" was the background thought of a very inspiring address by Dr. Nathanael Guptill.

Licensure of Dolan Talbert and Lewis Wicker was conducted by Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman of the Committee on the Ministry, by request of President Collie Seymour.

Final adjournment of Conference came at 8:45 following benediction by Superintendent Clyde L. Fields.

F. C. Lester, Secretary

From across Virginia and North Carolina some 600 people came to visit us on Saturday, November 4. Better than 475 of these people had lunch with us.

We were thrilled at the large number of churches represented on our campus. The entire staff at our Home for Children worked unceasingly last week in preparation for Open House. To have so many respond to our invitation was most rewarding.

We would like to especially thank Mr. James L. Faulkner, Mr. Roy Robertson and Mr. Holland Phillips of Burlington and Mr. Charles Pike, II of Mebane, for preparing for us a most delicious Brunswick Stew which we served at lunch. The older boys and girls thoroughly enjoyed helping with the preparation of the stew. The preparation began Friday afternoon and continued through the night. Everything was in readiness by 11:00 a.m. for the lunch.

If you happen to not be among the many who visited us last Saturday, November 4, we would like to extend an invitation to you to come visit us on some week-end at your earliest convenience. We would be most happy to have you.

We are very proud of the progress our Home for Children is making in presenting the kind of program that will be most beneficial to the children living herein. We are so glad that many of you were interested enough to come visit with us. We welcome you back any time.

As you know, we are in the midst of our special appeal to the churches, interested individuals, business and industry. During November and December we make our annual appeal for additional funds to assist us in the care of the boys and girls who live in our Home. We hope each of you will be among those who make a contribution to our Home during this special appeal.

Our Christian Stewardship

"Through The Budget"

By Frank R. Hamilton

A church budget is not just a document. It speaks of people working, of people being served; it tells of the sick visited, the sorrowing comforted, the disheartened encouraged. It speaks of the Church of God, that moves "like a mighty army."

This budget is a living and moving witness of our interest in the Church, of our personal commitment to Christ, our Lord, of the dedication of each one of us to what Samuel Longfellow expressed so well in his lines that have become one of our treasured hymns:

"One holy Church of God appears,
Through every age and race,
Unwasted by the lapse of years,
Unchanged by changing place.

"O living Church, thine errand speed,
Fulfill thy task sublime,
With bread of life earth's hunger feed,
Redeem the evil time."

We are not giving to our Church, but to THE CHURCH, HIS CHURCH, the Body of Christ, universal throughout the world. It is the Church of the Living God to which we give our time, our talents, and our treasure — God's agent and messenger to "redeem the evil time."

Sometimes we hear one say, "I gave TO our church budget." Surely, that is an erroneous statement. We do not give TO the budget; we give THROUGH the budget. To give through a church budget is to enter into every part of the work of the Church in the world. Every dollar we give is a missionary; every dollar we give is a teacher, a hand of mercy, a messenger of encouragement, a means of hope.

By our contribution, we enter into this mission of Christ's chosen emissaries. We become a part of His Body, the Household of Faith. Not only do we help to advance His Kingdom's cause in our own community; we reach out to points throughout our land, and to distant climes beyond the seas, in effecting our Lord's commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

So, by your giving, you are His hand, His eye, His voice. You are a partner with the Redeemer of men in His saving enterprise. You are doing something IN HIS STEAD, and IN HIS NAME — for HIM!

—Voice of the Temple

Some people give to the church like they:

LEAVE A TIP — It is an extra like they give a waitress for good service.

BUY A THEATER TICKET — This is the entertainment level of giving.
People pay when they come like they would pay for a movie.

PAY A YEAR'S DUES — They give because it costs so much to belong.
The same dues every year for the past ten years.

MAY WE SUGGEST that you give....

"Stewardship is the vocation of the Christian. It is not something optional, to be assumed or neglected at will; it is not something trivial, to be scorned in preference to other concerns.

"Christian Stewardship is THE LIVING of our Christian faith; it is living as we pray; it is giving and working toward that for which we pray; it is being what we profess to be."

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER

Almighty God, Eternal Father, who art gracious to supply the needs of every living creature, we thank thee for every blessing of these our mortal years. We are grateful for family joys and for warm ties of friendship. We thank thee for good food and healthy appetites. We thank thee for thy blessings upon our beloved country, for freedom of worship, for opportunities to work and to enjoy the fruits of our labors. Help us, O Lord, to express our gratitude not only in the words we speak, but in the service we render to thee and to our fellow men, through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

The Rice Family Is Going To California

In August, 1956, the Reverend Julius G. Rice became pastor of a new mission church of 94 members at Bayside, Virginia. November 26, 1961, he will move with his family to a new church at Thousand Oaks, Conejo Valley, California.

During their five years at Bayview the Rices have shared in the growth of a church that has bought more land, secured a parsonage, added to the educational building, air conditioned the chapel, increased property value from $50,000 to $130,000, and secured a membership of 450.

Conejo Valley is 18 miles northwest of Los Angeles, located in the hills where many of the western movies and TV programs are filmed. The community has mushroomed in the last two years from a very small community to a population of more than 13,000. It is expected that by 1970 there will be 80,000 people in the community where this new United Church of Christ is just beginning.

Here And There Among The Churches

Finish each day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in — forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. Anon.

Rev. Don Leonard, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed church of Asheboro will be the speaker for a 7:30 service Thanksgiving Day at Pleasant Ridge church near Ramseur. The church will serve a turkey dinner from 5:00 to 8:00 o'clock Saturday evening, November 25. The public is invited.

Your editor thoroughly enjoyed a visit to Mt. Bethel November 5. He went to sit again where he was a Sunday school superintendent and a deacon while still in his teens. Voices from the past brought sacred and delightful memories of those days half a century ago. It was good to hear pastor John Permar preach and to be a member of a Sunday school class again where once securing teachers was a problem. The church seems to be doing well.

The choir of our Asheville church will present a short cantata next Sunday morning in celebration of the Thanksgiving season. The work is Mendelssohn's setting of the 13th Psalm. Ruth Lambert will be soloist. A modern setting of Psalm 46 will also be presented, using speech choirs. Members of the church school will bring food for baskets for the needy in the community and gifts to be sent to Plymouth Church Community Center,, Charleston, South Carolina.

Two Bible study opportunities are being offered to members of Shelton Memorial, Portsmouth: Tuesday mornings at 10:30, and Wednesday evenings at 7:30.

The William Shipp of Louisville, Kentucky, are the proud parents of a 7 lb., 4 oz. baby girl, born October 2. Her equally proud grandfather is Rev. Charles Pegram, pastor of the United Church of Christ, Bay View, Norfolk, Virginia. He now has five grandchildren and one great-grandchild, so reports "Old Lady Smalling."

Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, now has four choirs (cherub, junior, youth, senior) under the general direction of Mrs. Royal Gallup, director of music. Mrs. Virginia Wentz and Mrs. Carol Kent assist with the cherub choir and Mrs. Robert Evans with the juniors. Mrs. Elizabeth Goforth is the organist.

JACKSON TO BE ORDAINED

James C. Jackson, a licentiate of one year in the Western North Carolina Conference, is to be ordained by that Conference in the new Clanton Park church, Charlotte, North Carolina, at five o'clock, Sunday afternoon, December 3, 1961. Mr. Jackson is a graduate of Oberlin School of Theology. During the past year he has been working in a new housing area in Charlotte, and recently organized a new United Church of Christ there.

Ministers and members of Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed churches in the area are cordially invited to witness the ordination, and to encourage the congregation by sharing in the service.

Best wishes to Rev. Frank E. Ratzell, who returned to his pulpit in our Asheville church November 12 after absence due to illness.

Cypress Chapel Christian Church, near Suffolk, presented Rev. Ellis N. Clark, their former pastor, with a pulpit robe Sunday, November 5.

Miss Emma Allen made the morning talk at Pleasant Ridge (Ramseur) November 12 when the Women's Fellowship had charge of the church service. Others sharing in the service included Mrs. Quinton Hicks, Mrs. Earl Lowdermilk, Mrs. Norman Smith, Mrs. Theodore Cox, Mrs. Lynwood Hubbard, and Mrs. Jimmie Scott.

Rev. W. W. Hall of Asheboro and his family spent last week on vacation with Mrs. Hall's people in Pennsylvania. The Asheboro church, of which Mr. Hall is minister, has just begun receiving payments on a building fund that is expected to add additional educational facilities to the church plant which was opened for use at Easter 1948.

Lelia Anderson, the Pilgrim Circuit Rider, is spending half her time visiting churches among the Indians of the northwest, Negroes in the southeast, and white churches in the Southeast Convention. She says that many mothers like to read to their children during long winter evenings, and that some of the Pilgrim Series Sunday school literature is very helpful for this reading. If you have material you would like to give for this purpose, write her at 19 South LaSalle Street, Chicago 3, Illinois.

A CALL TO THANKSGIVING

... This year, as the harvest draws near its close and the year approaches its end, awesome perils again remain to be faced. Yet we have, as in the past, ample reason to be thankful for the abundance of our blessings. We are grateful for the blessings of faith and health and strength and for the imperishable gifts of love and hope. We give thanks, too, for our freedom as a nation; for the strength of our arms and the faith of our friends; for the beliefs and confidence we share; for our determination to stand firmly for what we believe to be right and to resist mightily what we believe to be base; and for the heritage of liberty bequeathed by our ancestors which we are privileged to preserve for our children and our children's children.

It is right that we should be grateful for the plenty amidst which we live; the productivity of our farms, the output of our factories, the skill of our artisans and the ingenuity of our inventors. But in the midst of our thanksgiving, let us not be unmindful of the plight of those in many parts of the world to whom hunger is no stranger and the plight of those millions more who live without the blessings of liberty and freedom...

Let us observe this day with reverence and with prayer that will rekindle in us the will and show us the way not only to preserve our blessings but also to extend them to the far corners of the earth. Let us by our example as well as by our material aid assist all peoples of all nations who are striving to achieve a better life in freedom...

WOMEN LEAD SERVICE AT LYNNHAVEN

Mrs. Naomi Morse

Women's Fellowship Day was observed at the Lynnhaven Colony United Church on November 5 and a number of the women assisted the pastor in conducting the morning worship service.

The All Ladies Choir was real good, and for special music a trio composed of Mrs. Jean Corr, Mrs. Ann Filer and Mrs. Martha Midgett sang "Breathe On Me." Our Pastor's wife, Mrs. Diane Nelson, read the scripture lesson, led the responsive reading, and assisted by our ushers, Mrs. Ada Nottingham, Mrs. Ann Livingston, Mrs. Ethel Higgins and Mrs. Peggy Gillroy, received the morning offering.

Instead of the usual sermon, three ladies shared this time, Mrs. Jean Reeder spoke on Women in the Community; Mrs. Ruth Husk on Women in the Home and Mrs. Naomi Morse on Women in the Church.

Mrs. Betty White, our Stewardship Chairman, arranged for the dedication of our Woman's Gift boxes which was a very inspiring close to our worship service.

WOMAN'S GIFT DEDICATION

Mrs. H. S. Clark

Sunday, November 5, the Women's Fellowship of Northview Community Church, Sanford, gave a program dedicating "The Woman's Gift." The worship center was a table covered with a beautiful cut-work cloth, with a centerpiece of a horn of plenty overflowing with fall fruits, nuts and berries, surrounded by autumn leaves of red, gold, and yellow.

The program began with the singing of the Doxology. Mrs. John Clark gave "The Interpretation of the Woman's Gift." Opening thoughts were given by Mrs. W. A. Rogers. Mrs. H. S. Clark read scripture from II Corinthians 9. Prayer was led by Mrs. Annie R. Millikin. The congregation sang "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come." The women of the Fellowship then presented their gifts, each woman saying a prayer of thanksgiving for her many blessings and dedicating her gift to God. The ushers, Mrs. J. B. Clifton and Mrs. Arthur High, received the offering from the congregation.

Mrs. L. C. Wicker, former president, led the prayer of dedication. The program was directed by Mrs. John Clark.

THANKSGIVING FOR WHAT?

By Mrs. Bill Simmons

For the Convention Committee
On Family Life

As we enter this Thanksgiving season let us examine our lives closely. Many of us are doubtless guilty of being thankful for things that are not worthy.

The first Thanksgiving in America was one of gratitude and humbleness before God, and of thankfulness for being alive. Those people in early New England lived under very different conditions from ours, and they observed Thanksgiving quite differently from what we do. Of course we would not want to go back to the conditions of that time, but we need to remember their reasons for Thanksgiving and add to them some of our own.

Many of our children, and some adults, when asked the meaning of Thanksgiving, give a variety of reasons for thanksgiving. Here are some: turkey, holiday from school, visit to grandparents, big dinner, football game, rest day, parade, and the arrival of Santa Claus. So goes the list.

Is this the meaning of Thanksgiving that has come to our nation in this modern day? Are these the things for which we are thankful, and the only ones? Let this Thanksgiving be a day of soul searching and praying that our nation shall never forget the true meaning of Thanksgiving. Let this be a day of praise to our Living God.

The friendly service committee of the Tryon Women's Fellowship has sent 504 pounds of good used clothing during the summer and fall to Franklinton Center; Cuban Refugee Center, Miami; Delmo Thrift Shop; Baytown, Texas, for flood victims; Casa Mia Settlement House, Naples, Italy; Yaquiyu Rural Community, Puerto Rico; Greece; and to the Service Committee for distribution, as well as to needy people in the local community.

MEDITATE ON THIS

We are living in a day when the Church should be exalted more than ever before... The Church is the Body of Christ and the Bible is the text book of the Church... The Church furnishes a place of worship... The Church teaches us something of the sacredness of childhood... The Church functions in elevating womanhood... The Church lifts up the sacredness of marriage and the home... The Church keeps alive our consciences... When does the Church fail? The Church fails when her members do not uphold their vows... Always be sure that you can be proud of the name Christian and that you honor the Church and through the Church honor God. — Dr. Harvey A. Fesperman, President Southern Synod.

It Is Time For Thanksgiving

Thursday of this week has been designated as our official Thanksgiving Day for 1961. Patriotic people should heed the call of their country's President. He knows, perhaps better than others, that we have real reasons for thanksgiving in this good year.

Ordinarily when reasons for thanksgiving are listed we leave out the most important. Of course we are grateful for food and shelter, for sunshine and shower, for home and native land, for cars and roads, for hills and valleys, for seedtime and harvest, for flowers and fruited fields. Millions of refugees could remind us that gratitude should be expressed for a chance to work, to train children, to live somewhere and be somebody.

"We will bury you" sounds ominous indeed when the words are backed by 50 megaton bombs, and when the air we breathe is being poisoned so that the full effect of the poisoning will not be known until the third and fourth generation. The little red telephone underground in one of our western states is a constant reminder that human civilization can be destroyed within minutes. We have known all this for more than a year, but through the year we have lived. For the high privilege of living we can be profoundly grateful.

Thanksgiving for life need not be directed to any particular human being. Scientists are discovering more and more of the secrets of life and how to lengthen it, while others plan for life's destruction. It is good to remember in a time like this the ancient story of a father who raised his hand to slaughter his only son as a sacrifice to the God he feared, and to know that an unseen hand stopped him just in time to save the life of the boy. That same Unseen Hand doubtless still moves among men, and, like the Voice to the oceans, makes clear that "thus far shall thou go and no farther." At the heart of the Christian religion is the universal belief that "God so loved the world that he gave his Son, that whosoever... may have life." It is in this confidence that Christians can give thanks this year. And the thanks will be directed to the God of the Universe, the living One, the loving One, the Father of the human family.

We can be grateful for America, even though it is hated by multitudes around the world. We can be grateful for our homes, though they may not be all that we would like. We may be grateful for our churches, filled as they are with faithless and spineless people sprinkled among the saints who are honestly striving to follow the Christ. But most of all we should be grateful for life, human life, length of days, filled with love, guided by God, redeemed thought grace, leading upward, inspired by hope, preparing for heaven (part of which is here and now), life that is eternal. Only God can give us this, and it is to God that we render thanks for "his unspeakable gift."

Happy Thanksgiving, kind readers, to each and all, and this you will surely have if you really give thanks.

The World Council Needs Our Prayers

The World Council of Churches is meeting in New Delhi, India. "Jesus Christ, the Light of the World" is the theme being considered by representatives of church people gathered from around the world. Our own Dr. Alfred Carleton of missionary fame will preside at some of the sessions and several of our leaders will help to guide the thinking of the entire group.

We can easily exclaim, "What a Group!" and be proud that we are so well represented. Or we could join with a multitude of critics and lowrate the entire proceedings and the leaders. But it is much wiser to ask God's blessings on this assembly. In our extravagant moments we are likely to claim that the Church is the Hope of the World. If there is truth in the statement, and surely there is, something very important should come from this Assembly of the World Council. This could become the turning point in world history. If all the people whose delegates are there saying to themselves, and all who will listen, "Jesus Christ is THE Light of the World" will really pray to the God who gave us Christmas and Easter, if this should happen, then surely God will move through the hearts and minds of the delegates and they will move among the peoples of the earth proclaiming through word and deed that in Jesus is redemption for our sorry world. Then the light can shine in the darkness, the darkness cannot overcome it; truth will pull down walls that separate mankind, and gradually, ever so gradually it may be, the dawn of a new day will break across the eastern sky and the highest hopes of mankind will be realized as people everywhere turn towards him who gave us Christmas. For this we are asked to pray.

In these troublesome and uncertain times when often civilization seems on the brink of disaster, one hears much lament about not being able to return to "the good old days".

There are many who deeply feel that present economic ills and serious conflicts between or among nations could be greatly relieved, or even solved, if conditions were as tranquil as they were in the horse-and-buggy era. But Paul must have had in mind the impossibility of returning to former times when he wrote: "... this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth after those things which are before, I press forward..."

The desire of the human heart for a return to the past, although remembered as rough and rugged, never ceases. When Elizabeth Akers Allen, in 1860 wrote "Rock Me To Sleep" for Saturday Evening Post she expressed this desire of living life over again in the first stanza of that frequently quoted poem —

"Backward, turn backward,

O Time in your flight.

Make me a child again just for tonight."

... and millions since have repeated these words for 100 years. But times and conditions change, and humanity cannot stop the forces that dominate the physical world, and return to conditions that no longer exist.

To return to a former state of living, socially or economically, is impossible. Carl Sandburg may have been too melancholy when he wrote "... the past is a bucket of ashes", but often poetic license permits an expression of great truth.

Mankind seems to be passing through its most painful throes. Doubt is cast upon what history may record of some movements motivated by emotions, impulses, and a conviction of what is thought to be correct at the time of action.

The least desire for change is by nations or groups less civilized than others. This explains why certain races are now emerging from darkness and trying to find their way in a world which they have not yet fully comprehended. History, too, will reveal the extent and value of their achievements for independence, since many small nations without sufficient resources for survival, or wares to exchange for needed things, and no adequate defenses of their own. One day they may find the word dependence a more adequate word than independence.

But separate a people from a desire for change and they are separated from progress. Many tribes, such as the Bantu and Tembu in Africa, and a few thousand people scattered on certain islands around the world have no desire to change their mode of living and probably never will. Church missionary and other efforts have failed to kindle in such people a desire for change.

It is from a limited school of thought that advocates of "live as our forefathers lived" come. If "the good old days" theme were carried to its logical conclusion, the oxcart would still be around, and overshot mill wheels and rail fences would no longer be only an artist's dream.

Present readjustments with many peoples are more difficult to make because of failure to prepare for impending conditions. But even the wise are often short of wisdom, and the never-ending task to find his way in the world is still man's great challenge. He can find that way only by looking forward, not backward.

THERE COMES A TIME

By Elizabeth F. Caviness

There comes a time for each of us

When we climb our mountain alone;
When friends can't help and we're bereft

And the grace of God seems gone.

There comes a time for each of us

When we climb with feet of lead,
For the weary load has pulled

Our hearts down to the valley bed.

There comes a time for each of us,

And it matters not the place—
Whether hill, valley, field or garden—
Gethsemane is ours to face.

There comes a time for each of us

When we do what we do alone,
Except for the strong cord from on high—

His strength—the bedrock of our own.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

Within a two week period recently it was my good fortune to have the opportunity to visit the two places I look back upon as "Home" — Winter Park, Florida, and Whitehall, Michigan. In each there is a church where many of my memories of long ago center. I have visited the Florida "home" much more frequently in recent years than the Michigan one, and so it was with a special sense of urgency that I took advantage of a ride from the Mid-West Regional Meeting of our denomination in Grand Rapids to spend the night with old friends in the little town of Whitehall.

The center of the home I visited is a "grand lady" ninety-two years old. When I was a child I remember her as "the first lady" of the little town, the wife of the president of the bank, the leader of the Eastern Star, the crusader for all good causes. But I especially remember her as my Sunday school superintendent, as president of the Ladies' Aid, as one who was always present at church on Sunday. I think it did something for me "way back then" to know that the social and cultural leader of the community put her church ahead of other activities. She became the state Worthy Grand Matron of the Eastern Star — and beautiful she looked in her lovely evening dresses! — but she was never "too big" for the little Congregational church.

She is still every inch the "great lady," who at 92 still rolls up her hair every night! She had been working in the yard the day I arrived, "because my yard man is getting old and I have to help him." (Her daughter told me "on the side" that he is 74. The only difference, she said is that he knows he's old and her mother doesn't know she is!) She still believes in the importance of prayer and in the worth of the church. They have a "fine young minister" now, and I presume she has supported all the ministers this little church has had down through the years.

And so, I would like to salute Mrs. Mark B. Covell, who convinced me as a child that church was important, and who at 92 still believes it herself!

The writer of this feature article died September 25. As was his custom, he planned ahead. We will continue the feature as long as the articles last.—Ed.

Why Build A Church?

By John Pugh, Jr.

Fellow Church members, visitors and children. I have been asked to talk to you this morning on the responsibilities of the church member, in connection with our building program.

I have been told that this talk is supposed to last about ten minutes. As this is the first time I have talked to you, and may well be the last, I thought I would make the most of it by using up all of the ten minutes.

Before we go into the subject of our responsibilities let us talk and think about some other things concerning us and our church — sort of warm up to the subject, so to speak.

Down through the ages there have always been men and women in every nation, every state, every town, every community and every church who have devoted a great deal of their time and means to the betterment of their fellowmen. They worked most times against tremendous odds, adverse criticism and lack of cooperation from those they were trying most to help. These men and women achieved immortality. Some of them we have heard of, some of them we have not, but they are all the same in spirit. We have people living today who are like them. To them we owe much.

Why Go To Church?

Have you thought of the reason you are in God's house this morning? I suspect that I would get several different reasons right now, if I were to ask for them. Actually there are only two. You may be here because of one or both of them. One is, someone asked you to come or brought you, the other is, because you want to be here.

Why come to church? We can worship God at home, in the fields, in the woods or any place we choose. This is all true, but, there is a difference. The church is a special place. It is God's house, built with his share of our earnings and his share of our time. It is the place where we worship together, share together and have fellowship and understanding together. There is no other place like it in all the world.

My friends, this is our church. This is the place where we expect to come for the rest of our natural lives, to worship together, pray together, to renew our spiritual strength together.

This is the place above all others where we need to bring our children, and where we hope our children will bring their children.

This is the place where we hope that all those in our community who do not know God and do not have a church home will come and find God, worship with us, work with us and share with us.

This is the place that shows the world how much work, how much time and how much money we are willing to give to our God.

We Can Build

We know that we need to build more to our church. Now is the time to get started. The need gets greater with each passing day and will continue to do so.

Some may say, we can not afford it. Others may say, we are not able, that we just can't do it. These are negative thoughts. They bring negative actions. When we think we can't we generally don't. When we think we are not able we generally don't try.

John Pugh, Jr., son of the late Rev. John Q. Pugh, is a layman in our Asheboro Congregational Christian Church. This talk was made at the beginning of a campaign to raise money for an addition to the educational building.

Positive thoughts bring positive actions. When we think we are able we generally try. When we think we can we generally do.

Too many of us are afraid of tomorrow. Too many of us are afraid of what the future holds for us. Too many of us are so concerned with physical strength and material power that we forget, or never realize the far greater strength and power of the spirit. This spiritual strength and power can not be bought with the world's goods.

This spiritual strength is the only power available to us that will enable us to endure all things and triumph in the end. We should seek and pray for this spiritual strength that we need.

We need to look up and ahead, to step out on the high road, with faith in our hearts, that the future is ours and all eternity. With such faith and spiritual strength in our hearts and minds we can face tomorrow, build for the future and go forward to meet our destiny.

God will not build this church for us. That is our job. If we want to build it we can, for God will give us the strength and help us to find the means.

We must keep this fact in mind though: The more of us who join in this work, the greater will be the strength and help from God and the sooner the work will be done.

Ten Responsibilities

I have divided what I think are our responsibilities into ten parts.

First: We must forget ourselves and our needs and think of God's work and its needs. We must turn to God with faith and prayer, telling him that we are willing to do whatever he would have us do, if he will show us the way and guide us in the direction he would have us go. We know that he has said that he will provide for all our needs and will not ask us to do more than we are able.

Second: It is our responsibility to turn over to God his share of our earnings. It is rightfully his and he requires it of us. Even our government recognizes this fact and accepts it.

Third: Each of us should immediately sit down and re-appraise our financial affairs. After making sure that we are, or that we are going to contribute God's share of our income, we should also remember that each of us should share still further, as much as we are able, according to the talents and blessings we have received.

Fourth: It is our responsibility to get busy and concerned with this building project of our church. God's work requires our time and our talents as well as our money. This work is necessary and it will be rewarding. There is nothing else we can do that will accomplish so much and be so lasting for the effort put forth. We will be serving our God, working with our neighbors, building a place for our children to worship and bringing satisfaction to our souls.

Fifth: It is our responsibility to support and encourage our pastor and church leaders. They are sincere, dedicated Christians. If they were not they would never have undertaken such a tough proposition as this project. This project is complex and far reaching. It requires a lot of time and hard work in the planning and preparation. It will require still more in the execution. We are fortunate indeed in having such people in our church.

Sixth: It is our responsibility to provide church facilities as required by the times or age in which we live. It is just as foolish to say that we do not need this addition to our church as it would be to say that we do not need any more schools for the education of our children.

Seventh: It is our responsibility to see that our church grows with our community, that it is a recognized part of our community, that it fulfills its mission in our community.

Eighth: It is our responsibility to our families to provide a place where we can worship together with other families of our community; where we can get help in teaching our children and bring them up in the way they should go.

Ninth: We are responsible for carrying on the work begun by those who came before us and who have passed on into eternity. We owe them a very real debt for their work, their sacrifices and their dedication that made it possible for us to have the privilege and opportunities we have today. This debt can only be repaid by us by doing as they did, working, sacrificing and dedicating ourselves to the growth of our church.

Tenth: It is our responsibility to ourselves to provide a place where we can go and lay our burdens down for a little while and gain renewed strength through faith and communion in the house of God with our fellowman.

These, my friends, are our responsibilities. If they are carried out we will have a full and rewarding life, and at the end will bring us this: "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

A Bit Of Church History

By E. W. Neville

Presented to E. N. C. Conference

The General Convention of The Christian Church met May 4, 1894, at Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, and was called to order by Dr. W. W. Stanley, president. During this convention the N. C. and Va. Conference and Deep River Conference were united and then were divided into three conferences: the Eastern N. C. Conference, the N. C. and Virginia Conference and the Western N. C. Conference. The Eastern N. C. Conference, composed of thirty churches, met at Christian Chapel church, Chatham County, N. C., November 27, 1894. The conference was called to order by Honorable S. P. Read who had been appointed by the Convention to act as its president. The conference elected the following officers: Rev. M. L. Winston, vice president; Rev. J. L. Foster, secretary; W. R. Goodwin assistant secretary; J. E. Ballentine, treasurer; Rev. W. G. Clements, W. C. Wicker and J. H. Moring were appointed as a committee to select place, time, and program for the Sunday School Convention, and they were to report through The Christian Sun. The second Conference met at Liberty (Vance) Christian Church 1895. Rev. J. H. Fleming was elected president and Rev. W. D. Harward elected assistant secretary, J. D. Mood, J. H. Moring and C. H. Rowland made the report on Sunday schools. The report said we have 18 churches that have no schools, 12 churches have schools. They made an earnest plea for steps to be taken to organize those 18 schools and get them back into the conference. The Conference should congratulate Christian Chapel and its delegates for inviting and entertaining the first session of the Eastern N. C. Conference.

LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP SUNDAY

United Congregational
Christian Church
Portsmouth, Virginia

The Laymen of United Church did a superb job in the pulpit on Laymen's Sunday, October 15. Mr. Bruce Deans, who also teaches one of the Adult classes spoke at the service on the theme "Ye Shall Be My Witnesses."

Mr. W. G. McPherson gave the call to worship and invocation. Mr. Marc Jester read the morning Scripture lesson and offered the morning prayer. The offertory prayer was led by Mr. Albert Morrison. The all-male choir sang, "How Great Thou Art."

THANKSGIVING

Frank E. Ratzell

Beyond gratitude for material blessings this year there is a deep sense of thanksgiving to God that we are alive still in a frightening world, that the sweet beauties of earth are still there before our eyes, that our men have not yet fallen before guns on some farflung battle-line, that many good men, principled men, honest men, are struggling still to keep peace on earth.

Our national season of Thanksgiving, as well as our personal feelings about it, must be overcast with these fears and anxieties of the world in which we must live. Yet at such times we turn more than ever to God, simply because "before the hills in order stood, or earth received her frame, from everlasting Thou art God, to endless years the same." We are reminded once again that our Pilgrim ancestors also faced an unfriendly world, with far less to defend themselves than we have, and with faith and courage "founded a nation." Let there be no softness in our faith.

NINE THINGS TO BE ASHAMED OF

J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the F.B.I. and trustee of the National Presbyterian Church in Washington, D. C., emphasizes again some of the things about which Americans should be concerned and ashamed.

1. People spend eight times as many hours at movies as they do at Sunday school.

2. Only one out of twelve persons in our country attends Church regularly.

3. Seven out of eight children quit Church and Sunday School attendance before they reach fifteen years of age.

4. Fifteen million sex magazines are printed monthly and are read by teenagers.

5. There are more barmaids in America than college girls.

6. One million illegitimate babies are born annually.

7. One million girls have venereal disease.

8. Our nation harbors three times as many criminals as college students.

9. A major crime is committed in America every twenty-two seconds.

THE MARATHI MISSION

Manamadurai

26—Rev. and Mrs. Paul Heineman are at elementary boarding school where they help village boys and girls from a very poor area to get an education. An engineer as well as a minister, he works in trade school and in village uplift program, too.

Pasumalai

27—Rev. and Mrs. Verne Fletcher went out to India last year and train lay ministers in the Madurai-Ramnad Diocese of the Church of South India. He served with Church World Service in Germany and Austria. Her father was minister-professor of Spanish Evangelical Church; later she lived in France. He was educated at Wheaton College; Princeton Seminary; Sorbonne; and Ph.D. from U. of Chicago.

Ramnad

28—Miss Miriam Brown, who went to India in 1937, is manager of St. Andrew's High School, which is in poorest, most desolate part of the Diocese. She also is treasurer of Birdsnest Orphanage in Madurai.

29—The Marathi Mission is where the first work of the American Board was started in 1813. Work is carried on in Bombay, Sholapur, Ahmednagar and in five rural centers. Outstanding are Ahmednagar College; Nagpada Neighborhood House; leprosy and tuberculosis control programs in Satara and Vadala; and the demonstration farm in Vadala. The churches are part of the United Church of Northern India.

Ahmednagar

30—Rev. Edith Pruesse (pronounced Price) has been in the Southern Convention. She has done a variety of things since going to India in 1944: taught in girls high school, Bible training school, Union Theological College. Now she is District Minister for Ahmednagar and Supa districts working with city and rural ministers.

December

1—Mrs. Eleanor Tishkins is manager, treasurer, and adviser of Sisal Fiber Industry where more than 100 women earn their living, while their babies are cared for in nursery. These articles are sold through many women's groups in the U.S. A letter from Mrs. Tishkins was in recent issue of Sun.

Bombay

2—Mr. and Mrs. Ross Thomas have been in India since 1928, he working with business administration and she with blind. He is now treasurer of National Christian Council of India, the Madura Mission, Marathi Mission, and Ahmednagar College.

Joint Study Group Meets

Mrs. Walter Daeke
Publicity Chairman

The Women's Fellowship of The United Church of Christ, Southern Pines, dedicated their October meeting to the study of "New Churches for New Times." The program was divided into 3 parts: The background and need for such a study; old churches in new times; and new churches in new times.

The outstanding feature of the study was the visit of several members of the Fayetteville Women's Fellowship who participated in the section on new churches in new times. The information they brought was pertinent and timely since their church is only 10 years old and the members have first-hand knowledge of the joys and disappointments of starting a new church. The women from Southern Pines, on the other hand, have experience in an established church which is trying to meet the needs of changing times.

Doing double duty as a member of the visiting panel was Mrs. A. E. Cox, who is one of the three remaining charter members and also chairman of the Sanford District. She brought greetings and enlisted support for a stronger and more effective district.

Mrs. James Covey, missionary education chairman arranged the program which was well attended and enthusiastically received.

Dr. Sloan Publishes Another Book

Dr. W. W. Sloan, professor of Bible at Elon for the past fourteen years, has just had his new textbook, entitled "A Survey of the New Testament," published; and he also joined a group of America's outstanding Bible scholars in preparation of the new 1962 edition of "The International Lesson Annual," which presents the Sunday school lessons for the year.

The Elon professor's new textbook is a companion volume to his "A Survey of the Old Testament," which appeared in 1957 and is now used in over 60 colleges, as well as being widely used by Sunday school teachers. Dr. Sloan's books have been prepared in simple language which is easily understood by lay readers as well as Bible scholars and this fact has made the books popular with persons who seek Bible knowledge but are not acquainted with complex scholarly language. A multigraphed edition of his latest book has been used by Elon students and examined by teachers in other colleges previous to the recent publication.

Most of the 41 chapters of Dr. Sloan's New Testament book are based upon a portion of the Christian scriptures and each chapter is followed by a group of thought-provoking questions and suggestions for use of the material. Suggested supplementary readings are also listed at the end of each chapter.

The work of Dr. Sloan is preparation of the "International Lesson Annual" for 1962 was done as a result of an invitation from the Abingdon Press, publishers of the book. He prepared fourteen articles explaining the scriptural background of the lessons to be used during July, August and September of next year, which deal with Hebrew history and the prophets.

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY

She walks in beauty like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meets in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellow'd to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

One shade the more, one ray the less,
Had half impair'd the nameless grace
Which waves in every raven tress,
Or softly lightens o'er her face—
Where thoughts serenely sweet express
How pure, how dear their dwelling-place.

And on that cheek, and o'er that brow,
So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
The smiles that win, the tints that glow,
But tell of days in goodness spent,
A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent.

—Lord Byron

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

Sunday evening, November 26, the Pilgrim Fellowship of Rosemont church, South Norfolk, will lead the evening service of worship.

The Halloween "Trick or Treat" for UNICEF was a wonderful experience for everyone. Our thanks to all who helped. $36.00 was received. — Bethel Bulletin.

I will this day try to live a simple, sincere and serene life; repelling promptly every thought of discontent, impurity and selfseeking; cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity and the habit of holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, carefulness in conversation, diligence in appointed service, fidelity to every trust, and child-like faith in God.

Quoted in Wentz Memorial Bulletin

Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Arthur Miller's only published novel, "Focus," will be dramatized as a full-hour special on the NBC Television Network early next year. "Focus" has been praised for its eloquence. "In words that burn like carboic acid, that flash like tracer bullets through the midnight of bigotry," one critic wrote, "Arthur Miller has pictured the agonizing fear and revulsion and finally the courage of a little man named Newman."

YOUTH WEEK AND PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP PACKETS

Youth Week will be observed January 28 - February 4, 1962. Materials for this observance ($.75) are available from The Southern Convention Office. Also, the Pilgrim Fellowship Program Packet ($.25) with suggestions for programs for the year is available. Send all orders to Miss Ruth Dunn, Box 336, Elon College, N. C.

DO YOU JUST BELONG?

Mrs. G. L. DeLong,
West Chester, Iowa

Are you an active member — the kind that would be missed?

Or are you just content that your name is on the list?

Do you attend the meetings and mingle with the flock?

Or do you stay at home to criticize and knock?

Do you take an active part to help the work along?

Or are you satisfied to only just belong?

Do you bring in new members and help the old ones stick,

Or leave the work to just a few and talk about the clique?

Now think this over, members, for you know right from wrong.

Are you an active member, or do you just belong.

UNICEF AT HINES CHAPEL

Tina Ann Wyrick and Bobby Isley, Reporters

The Youth Fellowship at Hines Chapel church ventured out among the ghosts and goblins on Halloween to "Trick or Treat" for UNICEF. About 18 of our group of 25 members, along with counselors, Mrs. Bessie Isley and Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Madren, canvassed the community for this worthwhile project.

We joined forces with the Bethel Presbyterian Church, Mt. Pleasant Methodist and Monticello United Church of Christ. Youth from each church canvassed in their own area and then joined in a report rally at 9:00 o'clock. Seventy-five young people were present. We had fellowship singing, apple bobbin', and refreshments. Our young people collected $48.00. A total of $135.00 was received for the United Nations project.

We enjoyed the experience very much and commend this group idea as well as the project to youth groups everywhere.

Nine of our group also attended the youth session of the N. C. and Va. Conference at Belew's Creek church to hear Dr. Nathanael Guptill speak on "Making Your Life Count." The ordination service for Mr. Harry Mathis was very impressive. This session caused serious thinking among our youth, both on church vocations and life. We enjoyed it very much.

UN MEAL AND PROGRAM

"Do I smell spaghetti?" A question asked by one of the Burlington Junior Highs at the regular fellowship meeting on October 20. It was spaghetti and other foreign dishes furnished and served by Mrs. Robert Kimball, Mrs. H. C. Pollard, Jr., Mrs. John Williams, Mrs. Herman Truitt and Mrs. Joe Tyson.

After the delicious meal, a most interesting program on the United Nations was given by Ricky Kimball, Debbie Williams, Scott Pollard, Susan Truitt and Joe Tyson. They told us the history of the U. N., its functions and what it has achieved to date. Questions were asked and there was audience participation.

The closing prayer will remain with us through these crucial days, "Let us not forget that all men are brothers. We pray for the United Nations, the best hope to date the world has for peace!"

Junior Highs collected $52 for UNICEF on Sunday October 27. This was a service project and the money will be used by the United Nations for needy children all over the world.

READING CLUB WITH BOYS AND GIRLS

By W. C. Cullom, Wake Forest, N. C.

A friend from another part of the state has just handed me a half dozen books that she had just purchased here in the Wake Forest book store. She teaches music in her home community and intends to take these books to her home for the young people of her church to read. In my judgment this woman is doing one of the finest things that an older person can do for the young ones about him or her.

As I was looking over these great books, the thought came to me that it would be one of the greatest of blessings for groups of young people everywhere to form reading circles and cultivate the reading of good books among themselves. Suppose a dozen boys and girls form a circle each one purchasing a book to be kept for one month, when the circle would meet for a social evening together and the exchange of books. At the end of the year each one would come to be permanent owner of the book that he or she had purchased, and at the same meeting there would be a distribution of books for the year that was just beginning.

I can think of nothing that would bring more or greater blessings to the individual boys and girls or to the community of which they were a part. And there are experienced and cultured men and women in every community that would feel honored and blessed in helping such groups in the selection of the books to be read.

How much better this would be than allowing athletics, dancing and other such amusements to monopolize the time! Not that I think there is anything wrong in athletics or social dancing, but my point is that such amusements should not be allowed to monopolize ones spare time from his daily business.

I'll soon be 95 years of age, but if I can help any such group as I have described while I am able to go they have only to command me. I insist, and insist strongly, that time is too precious to be wasted!

Ministers Receive Praise While Living

H. S. HARDCASTLE

WHEREAS, The Reverend Howard Scott Hardcastle, A.B., B.D., D.D. Servant of God and Minister of the Eastern Virginia Conference, United Church of Christ, (Congregational Christian) has reached the retirement time from the active pastorate of the parish ministry, AND,

WHEREAS, he has given long and faithful years of service to our beloved denomination in the regular parish ministry and in teaching, also as Pastor-Teacher-Preacher and writer of Church School Lesson material Par Excellence, and has served well and faithfully on every committee of importance and held every position of honor in the gift of the Southern Convention and the Conference in which he has served, and having held a number of the leading pulpits of the area, and two of the outstanding pulpits of the denomination, and having covered himself with glory, and represented the denomination in particular and the Church Universal in general, THEREFORE:

Be It Resolved: That we express the generous felicitations of this body to this deserving and faithful servant of God and his gracious and devoted life companion by adopting these resolutions, by extending to them a rising vote and sustained applause, and by so doing, wish them all that they deserve and the continued blessings of Almighty God in the beautiful sunset years that lie ahead, in their very own self-created home of retirement.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Conference, a copy be delivered to Doctor and Mrs. Hardcastle, and copies be released to The Christian Sun, The United Church Herald, The Pastoral Records Office of The denomination and to the Public Press of the cities of Norfolk and Suffolk, Virginia.

GEORGE D. ALLEY

WHEREAS, The Reverend George Douglas Alley, A.B., B.D., D.D., Servant of God and Minister of the Eastern Virginia Conference, United Church of Christ, (Congregational Christian) Federated Theological Faculty of the University of Chicago, and minister of Congregational Christian parishes, and now in the eighth year of service in a historic pulpit of a great church within the bounds of this Conference, Vis: The Suffolk Christian Church, having resigned said pastorate, and planning to leave this area and go elsewhere, And, WHEREAS, The Reverend Mr. Alley has rendered yeoman service in many and varied Committees, Commissions, Advisory Groups, Boards and Conferences, not only locally, but also of the Southern Convention, in which he has served and is at this time serving with distinction as President, as well as on certain denominational assignments of importance, THEREFORE, Be It Resolved, That we express to this our brother beloved and his capable and devoted companion, our fervent Christian and brotherly love and high esteem, which they fully merit, by their sacrificial service and cooperative work of love to our Lord and His Church, and that we assure them of our continued confidence and loyalty as they depart for other fields of service.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That we assure our brother that as long as men believe in unquestioned integrity, an unsullied Christian conscience and courageous honor, George Alley will be held in the same high esteem he has won.

Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the minutes of Conference, a copy delivered to Dr. and Mrs. Alley and copies be released to The Christian Sun, The United Church Herald, The Pastoral Records Office of the denomination and to the Public Press of the cities of Suffolk and Norfolk, Virginia.

Eastern Virginia Conference Ministers
Charles F. Pegram, President
Daniel Bowers, Vice-President
Kennyon Edwards, Secretary
Willis Joiner, Treasurer

Note: These resolutions were unanimously and heartily adopted by the Eastern Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches in its recent session at The Christian Temple.

Elon College News

Three Republican congressmen conducted a panel in Whitley Auditorium at Elon College last week.

The "Paul Revere Panel" visited Elon as part of a three-day tour of North Carolina. Panel members included Reps. William C. Cramer of Florida, Samuel L. Devine of Ohio and James E. Bromwell, of Iowa.

Prof. Charles Lynam of the Elon College music faculty played the male lead role in the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina Theatre production of "Annie Get Your Gun" November 1-4, at Aycock Auditorium in Greensboro. Shirley Bosta of Hampton, Va., starred as Annie.

Bob McKinnon, of Burlington, has been elected president of a new student club at Elon College to promote interest in the field of business.

Other officers of the new group, which includes business majors from Elon's junior and senior classes, include Tom Carlberg, of Hampton, Va., vice president, and Virginia Moorefield of King, secretary-treasurer. Prof. Dudley Watson of the business administration faculty is the advisor for the new group.

Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, geologist, was on the Elon College campus from Sunday through Tuesday as a Danforth visiting lecturer. His visit was made possible by the joint sponsorship of the Association of American Colleges and the Danforth Foundation.

Features of the visit were four addresses to campus groups by Dr. Mather. On Sunday evening he met with the Student Christian Association for a discussion of "Geology and Genesis." He spoke to chapel groups Monday and Tuesday mornings on "Science and Religion in the Atomic Age." On Monday evening he addressed students and faculty, along with the public, on "Earth's Resources and Man's Future."

Dr. Mather is an internationally known geologist, author and lecturer. A member of the General Board of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., he is presently especially concerned with ways in which science can contribute to the intelligent organization of a peaceful world on a just and durable basis.

Professor Alfred S. Hassell

Prof. Alfred S. Hassell, director of student personnel services at Elon College, is the new president of the North Carolina Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers. He was named to the post at the association's annual meeting held recently in Raleigh.

A native of Durham, Prof. Hassell joined the Elon faculty in 1957 and had served as registrar for the college until this fall when he assumed new duties in the field of admissions, guidance and counseling.

Other Elon delegates attending this meeting included Prof. W. Jennings Berry, registrar, and William R. Ginn, Elon's Admissions counselor.

Also meeting in Raleigh recently was the North Carolina Association of Academic Deans, which was attended by Prof. Fletcher Moore, Dean of Elon College, and Dr. H. H. Cunningham.

A CHRISTMAS SHOPPING PRAYER

I thank Thee, Father, for the privilege of giving. I thank thee for the Christmas stars on city streets, the soft music in the stores, the little children with tightly clutched savings who come to choose gifts for mother and father. I thank thee for the bells of the Salvation Army, singing of dedication and loving-kindness. Help me, I pray, to keep this feeling of wonder and loveliness at Christmas time all the years of my life.

Make me patient in crowds, quick to smile and in some way bring a lift to the spirits of those whose work is heavier at this time. May each gift be a discerning token of understanding and may I always give with love. Amen.

Mrs. E. H. Morris, 87, of Asheboro, a member of the first graduating class at Elon College, died October 31 at her home.

The former Rowena Moffitt, she was born in Randolph County and lived in Asheboro since she was five years old. Her late brother, E. L. Moffitt, was a president of Elon College. She was a member of the First Methodist Church of Asheboro and the Randolph Book Club.

Surviving are her husband, three daughters, Mrs. J. M. Russell of Matthews, Mrs. C. B. Williams and Mrs. L. D. Howell, both of Fayetteville; one son, E. H. Morris, Jr., of Raleigh; eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. J. R. Parks of Asheboro and one brother, H. E. Moffitt, of Winston-Salem.

ACTIVITIES AT HAYES CHAPEL

Mrs. Marjorie Partin, Reporter

Members of Hayes Chapel, Garner, N. C., had an evening of warm fellowship together November 3. Much fun was enjoyed by all as everyone paraded in their costumes. Prize for the best costume went to Paul Wright, one of our deacons. After refreshments of cake and coffee were served, our pastor, Rev. Conrad Cornelius, and his family were surprised with a "pounding" by the group.

We had five representatives to visit our Home for Children at Elon November 4. They were greatly impressed by the good training the boys and girls are getting there.

National Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed in our church November 5 with the Women's Fellowship members taking part in the opening of Sunday school. Each department chairman told of the work of her department in the Fellowship. Also, the women shared in the morning worship service by rendering special music.

Growth Through Witnessing

Background Scripture: Matthew 5:13-16; Luke 10:1-24; Acts 4:13-21.

Devotional Reading: Acts 1:6-11.

Memory Selection: We cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard.
Acts 4:20.

Let us get the background of this lesson. Peter and John had been instruments of healing to a man long lame and crippled. Called to account for this amazing incident, they frankly said that it had been done by the power of the One who had been crucified, buried, and who had come alive from the dead and was alive forevermore. This preaching about the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ was especially repugnant to the Sadducees who did not believe in either spirit or the resurrection. Luke says "they were grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead."

Something had to be done to silence these men, so the Sadducees did what many of their kind do who do not want to hear the truth, or have the truth proclaimed—they put the apostles in jail. As if putting men in jail could stifle the truth! There is a noble man living as a virtual prisoner on a little plot of ground in Africa who has recently received the Nobel Peace Prize as a champion of truth. He is bound but not the truth he proclaimed and for which he suffers. The truth goes marching on! Trying to stop truth is like trying to stop the wind from blowing, or the tide from coming in, or the stars from moving in their courses.

The next thing these men tried to do to stop Peter and John from speaking the truth, was to hold them in contempt. They looked upon them as "ignorant and unlearned men." These words do not mean that the apostles were ignoramuses, or dumb-bells. It simply means that they were not educated men in a technical sense. They were simply laymen un-schooled in the intricacies of rabbinical law and religious practice. Sometimes it is more difficult to suffer contempt than to be put in jail, especially for a sensitive man. In any event after heaping contempt upon the apostles and putting them in jail overnight, they brought them before the Sanhedrin, the highest court of the Jews, and "gave them the works." But they had bitten off more than they could chew. Two factors embarrassed them.

Raw Courage

"When they saw the boldness of Peter and John..." It is rather remarkable that it was this quality of character that impressed the Sadducees and priests. Here were men who had the courage of their convictions. "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." Like John Knox, because they had seen the face of God, they were not afraid of the face of man. The trouble with so many of us is that, as H. G. Wells once said "the voice of our neighbors sounds louder in our ears than the voice of God." It takes courage to be true to our convictions, and to bear our witness before men. For us, as for the disciples, the source of this courage is in Christ.

Exhibit A

There was another stubborn and solid fact which embarrassed the Sanhedrin. The lame man who had been healed was standing right there before them, healed, and healthy. There was no mistake about it — he was the same man who a little while before had lain as a cripple at the Gate Beautiful. There was no answer to that argument. They were not dealing here with a theological argument or a religious theory; they were facing a solid and stubborn fact. Jesus Christ had made this man walk; there stood the evidence. They could say nothing against that. There are many valid arguments in behalf of Christianity, many evidences of it, but the greatest and most unanswerable defense or proof of Christianity is a Christian man. As Dr. Roy L. Smith says somewhere, "The best evangelist is not the one who can put up a good argument, but the one who can offer a convincing life."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON DECEMBER 3, 1961

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, D.D.
Pastor of Berea Congregational
Christian Church,
Driver, Virginia

A few years ago a distinguished American teacher went on a good will tour of India seeking to make clear the nature of American policy for the world and building good will for his country. In his speeches he carefully explained that he was not an official representative of the United States. But his Indian friends would say "Everyone who comes from your country is a representative." In like manner every Christian is a representative of Jesus Christ. People make up their minds about Christ and the Christian life from what they see in us. What sort of an idea of our Master do we give? What kind of advertisement of Christianity are we?

Witnessing For Christ

"For we cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard." They were bound to witness. And it should be noted that they witnessed to what they had seen and heard. A man can really witness only on that basis. Hearsay is not enough. Personal experience is a prerequisite. Is it because we do not have anything for which to bear witness that we do not witness more often? Come to think of it, it could be.

But we witness not only with our words, but with our works and our life. There are those who could not possibly preach a sermon, or conduct a prayer meeting, who are effective witnesses for Christ. People who know them best, and those who associate with them most intimately, take knowledge of them that they have been with Jesus. As a vessel absorbs something of the lovely perfume with which it is filled, so do men and women who live with Christ, diffuse in life something of the radiance and the loveliness of his Spirit.

Mrs. F. C. Lester was guest speaker at our Wentz Memorial Church in Winston-Salem November 12 when the women of that church had charge of the morning service. Others sharing in the service included Mrs. William J. Earl, Mrs. Lizzie Pharr, Mrs. C. C. Lassiter, Miss Esther M. Wentz, and Mrs. Madge M. Neely. "Lift up Thine Eyes" by Mendelssohn was the anthem, and Miss Juanita Falls used as an offertory "Oh, Rest in the Lord" by the same writer. Dr. Joseph E. Patterson is the minister.

Burlington Rotary Club Entertains

Dear Friends:

Monday, November 13, was quite a big day for us at the Children's Home. At 10:30 a.m. the Board of Trustees met for their annual meeting. Fifteen of the twenty trustees were present.

The Board voted to ask the Building Committee to move forward with plans for a third cottage which will fulfill our present needs at the Home so far as living facilities for the children are concerned.

The Board reaffirmed their decision to eventually remove the old white building. It was felt that the building is needed during the transition and will be used to house 14 girls and as dining space for 33 children and staff members until the third cottage can be built. At that time it is the intention of the trustees to remove the old white building.

What was known as the Baby Home is now being used as a supply and storage building. This building will also continued to be used during the transition. No decision has been made as to what will be done with this building.

We now have five groups of boys and girls. Ten small boys and three older girls live in the Clyde Rudd Cottage; ten small girls and three older girls live in the Montgomery Cottage; fourteen older girls live in the old white building; thirteen intermediate girls and boys live on one side of Johnston Hall, and eighteen older boys live on the other side. This means a total of 31 boys and girls now living in the remodeled Johnston Hall.

On Monday night the boys and girls of the Home went to the College dining hall to have dinner with the Rotary Club of Burlington. This was the annual visit of the Rotary Club. This year instead of coming to the Home for the meal we went to the College where our children could eat with the members of the Club.

A most interesting program was put on by our smaller children. This program was prepared by Mrs. R. O. Wilkins, Jr., of our First Christian Church of Burlington. This was a most excellent presentation enjoyed very much by the Rotary Club. The Children's Home is the Rotary Club's major project. They left with us a very generous gift, which we appreciate greatly.

MEMOIRS REPORT FROM VALLEY CONFERENCE

During the past year two deaths have occurred among the ministers who have served in the Valley of Virginia Conference.

W. B. FULLER

On December 17, 1960, after some years of failing health, Rev. Walter B. Fuller was called to his eternal reward. He was a son of Presley Jefferson Exlulist Fuller and Pattie Jane Fuller, born December 18, 1885 in Vance County, North Carolina. In 1907 he entered Elon College to study for the ministry. During World War I, he did Y.M.C.A. work in Oglethorpe, Georgia. Following this he held pastorates in the Eastern Virginia Conference and the Valley of Virginia Conference. At the time of his death he was retired and living in Harrisonburg.

Rev. Mr. Fuller was a faithful, well-loved pastor and even during his years of retirement supplied in vacant pulpits, always showing a vital interest in the work of the churches, and attending the conference.

ROBERT LEE WILLIAMSON

On May 11, 1961 another retired minister, Rev. Robert Lee Williamson, 85, died at his home in Charlottesville, Virginia. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Virginia Moore Williamson, who was the daughter of Rev. H. C. Moore, and a brother Oscar C. Williamson of Florida. He graduated from Elon College in 1910 and was ordained to the ministry that same year. He served as pastor of the Leaksville Church from 1911 to 1914, and at Winchester and Timber Ridge churches from 1928 to 1933.

Other churches he served in the Valley of Virginia, were Concord, Bethlehem, Woods Chapel, Wisslers Chapel, Mayland, Mt. Lebanon and Island Ford. He was president of the North Carolina Conference for two years and of the Valley Conference for seven years, during the 1930's.

Rev. Mr. Williamson was a devoted, much-loved conscientious pastor and rendered valuable services to the Valley churches, especially during his years as President.

At this time your committee would ask the conference to stand in silent prayer as our tribute and give thanks to God for the life and services rendered by these two servants of the Lord, praying in unison Psalm 19:14.

—E. J. Rohart, Chairman

In Memoriam

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

POND

With the passing of Mrs. G. P. Pond on September 10, 1961, the West Memorial Bible Class lost a loyal and consecrated member. In this tribute to her memory we wish to express our appreciation for her unselfish life and labors in her Sunday School Class and for her devoted service rendered to the Christ.

We are grateful that we have had the opportunity of working with Mrs. Pond in our class. We shall remember her friendship and fellowship among us, her faithfulness to duty, her deeds of kindness, her words of encouragement. We feel that our lives have been enriched by our association with her. She served not only willingly and efficiently as a member, always accepting her share of the responsibilities but also capably as a former recording secretary. We especially shall remember her faithful presence on Sunday mornings as well as her regular attendance at class meetings until ill health forced her to give up her active work.

All of us have been saddened in our hearts by her passing but are happy in the memory of her Christian life as she lived it among us. In remembrance of her we have a summons to deeper consecration and a renewal of our dedication to Christ, praying that we may have courage to be true to our vows.

To the members of her family we wish to express anew our sympathy and desire this tribute be sent to them as a testimonial of our love for her, also a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy to be entered in the records of the West Memorial Bible Class.

RAWLES

We, the members of the West Memorial Bible Class, make this tribute to the memory of our beloved teacher and fellow class member, Mrs. C. C. Rawles, who passed away August 27, 1961, after a lifetime of devoted Christian service in her church and Sunday school class.

For many years Mrs. Rawles was the guiding spirit of "her girls" in the Young Ladies Bible Class by precept and example, inspiring and leading them in continued spiritual growth and devoutly teaching the Word of God. Later, when her class joined with the West Memorial Bible Class, she served as one of our teachers until ill health forced her to give up her active work in the class. Even then she continued at home to get new members, to send cheerful and encouraging messages to our officers, teachers, and class members, and to show an abiding interest in all phases of our work. Surely she believed like the Psalmist "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path," for she has lighted our pathway of appreciating and understanding the Bible as God's sure word of truth and as an effective guide to everyday living. Her teaching was simple and direct, and her love for her Heavenly Father the motivating power in her life. She was devout and reverent, a believer in worship in its most beautiful form.

Once when asked one of her favorite Bible verses, she answered readily, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." We know that her skill and success as a Christian leader and teacher were largely due to the fact that she believed in and practiced that great passage of Scripture.

It is impossible for us to measure the great influence "Miss Linda's" dedicated Christian life has had upon us, just as it is impossible to measure the influence on our lives her memory will have on us in the future. We are grateful for her Christian life as she lived it among us — a woman of purpose who "pressed on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Jesus Christ;" a woman of faith who believed that "faith without works is dead;" a woman of prayer who prayed without ceasing. We are thankful that she lived so close to the Heavenly Father that He could use her talents and abilities for carrying on His work. May we have the strength and courage to be true to the heritage that is ours in following in the footsteps of her spirit and guidance.

We wish to extend anew our sympathy to the members of her family, knowing that the pleasant memories which they have of her will comfort and sustain them in the days to come. We desire this tribute to be sent to them as a testimonial of our love for her, a copy to be forwarded to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy to be entered in the records of the West Memorial Bible Class.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS

By Mrs. Leocia Trotter

Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Romans 5:1.

We have faith that the sun will rise tomorrow; that when we turn them on, the electric light, the T.V., and the radio, they will work — belief in the operation of powers we cannot see or comprehend. Why then, does our faith in God often falter? Without it, we can have no peace.

Meditation On World Need

I.

"WHERE CROSS THE CROWDED WAYS OF LIFE,"

Echoes from everywhere: The shuffle of a river of youth on Tokyo's Ginza at night—
Calcutta's pedestrian multitude at the end of a day of general strike.

"WHERE SOUND THE CRIES OF RACE AND CLAN,"

Echo from Assam: "Down with Benail;" "Down with Assam and their dirty language. Never shall my children have to learn it."

Echo from the Middle East: "Israel must go." "Arabs must learn." "The border, the border guns, they are never far away."

"WE HEAR THY VOICE, O SON OF MAN."

Jesus said, "So, if you are offering your gift at the alter, and there remember that your brother has something against you, leave your gift there before the alter and go; first be reconciled to your brother, and then come and offer your gift." Matthew 5:23-24.

II.

"IN HAUNTS OF WRETCHEDNESS AND NEED,"

From Lebanon: "We have seven children, Sir, but housing is short since the bombing." "No pictures, No. Not in the refugee camp."

"ON SHADOWED THRESHOLDS DARK WITH FEARS,"

Istanbul: "Yes, there was martial law. We kept to the house as soon as darkness fell."

"FROM PATHS WHERE HIDE THE LURES OF CREED,"

Greece: "This island could irrigate and produce food, but four families control."

"WE CATCH THE VISION OF THY TEARS."

And when he drew near and saw the city, he wept over it, saying, "Would that even today you knew the things that make for peace! But now they are hid from your eyes." Luke 19, 41-42.

III.

"FROM TENDER CHILDHOOD'S HELPLESSNESS,"

Echoes from India, Lebanon, Turkey: "Vous etes Americain, vous etes Millyanaire! Buy my walnuts, buy my postcards. Shine, Sir? Shine! Good, good! Hungry. Baksheesh, baksheesh, baksheesh!"

"FROM WOMAN'S GRIEF, MAN'S BURDENED TOIL,"

Thailand: "They thought our children should not stay with us in the leper colony."

"FROM FAMISHED SOULS, FROM SORROW'S STRESS,"

Thailand: "Yes, I had fourteen children, but eight died."

"THY HEART HAS NEVER KNOWN RECOIL."

And they were bringing children to him, that he might touch them; and the disciples rebuked them. But when Jesus saw it he was indignant, and said to them. "Let the children come to me, do not hinder them; for to such belongs the kingdom of God." Mark 10:13-14

IV.

"O MASTER FROM THE MOUNTAIN SIDE. MAKE HASTE TO HEAL THESE HEARTS OF PAIN:"

From Kyoto: "Fifty-eight suicides a day, yes." "He burned the gold pagoda for revenge, so his mother committed suicide to apologize."

"O TREAD THE CITY'S STREETS AGAIN."

And Jesus came and said to them, "All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always..." Mat. 28:18-20.

YOUTH PRAYER

O young and fearless Prophet,
we need Thy presence here,
Amid our pride and glory
to see Thy face appear;
Once more to hear Thy challenge above our noisy day,
Again to lead us forward

Here And There Among The Churches

"A Church Should Never Beg for Money" was the sermon topic of Rev. W. R. Stevenson at Tryon November 12. The following Sunday pledges were made for the work of the church.

"The Thanksgiving That Is Ours" was the sermon topic for Rev. Glenn Garrett at Mt. Zion, Mebane, November 19. The offering went for payment on the organ. Dinner and the annual church meeting followed the morning service.

Pleasant Union church is sponsoring a "gospel sing" featuring The Carolinians and Deacons quartets at Farmer High School Auditorium Saturday, December 2, at 8:00 p.m. The public is invited to attend, according to announcement from Mahlon Snider.

A good idea: Beginning Sunday, November 19, and continuing through Thanksgiving Day, Pleasant Grove Christian Church bell was rung at six o'clock each evening. This was a call to all members and neighbors to pause for a few moments of thanksgiving and prayer for world peace.

Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed November 5 at Dendron Christian Church, Dendron, Virginia. Leader of worship was Mrs. Garland Morris. The meditation was given by Mrs. Garland Spratley. "The Woman's Gift at Work" was the topic for Mrs. Thurman Williams. Mrs. Owen Whitmore had charge of the dedication of gifts and Mrs. W. H. Savedge led the closing prayer. A musical meditation was given by Mrs. Ruth Liversay and a solo was rendered by Mrs. J. R. Bishop.

Morning worship services from our Elon College Community Church, where Dr. W. J. Andes is pastor, will be broadcast over WBBB, Burlington, during December.

As part of the Loyalty Sunday service at Union Ridge, Burlington, November 19, each individual was asked to come forward and place his or her pledge card on the offering plates at the altar.

The Women's Fellowship of Pleasant Grove Christian Church (W. N. C. Conference) sponsored the annual Harvest Sale and Supper Saturday, November 11. The evening netted a profit of $300.00.

Rev. Cecil Hartman was the guest minister for Bethlehem church, Tenth Legion, Virginia, Thanksgiving Sunday. His topic was "To Own is to Owe." The bulletin for that day reports that the pastor, Rev. Bland Leebrick, was then well enough to enjoy company.

Rev. Kenyon Edwards of Central Church, Norfolk, was the guest speaker at South Norfolk church Sunday evening, November 12. His congregation were guests. The sermon was entitled "The Significance of Baptism" and five were baptized at this service.

Barbaros Chelikkol, Elon College student whose home is in Turkey, spent the Thanksgiving holidays as guest of our new Clanton Park United Church, Charlotte, North Carolina. The Pilgrim Fellowship there is studying Islam and this provided them with an opportunity for first-hand information.

Rev. Richard M. Petersen, pastor of Shallow Ford church, was the speaker for the Elon College community Thanksgiving service at 10:00 a.m. last Thursday in the First Baptist Church.

No doubt the pastor of Beverly Hills, Burlington, was delighted with the one amendment voted to the tentative budget — Rev. Kenneth Register's travel allowance was increased from $1,000 to $1,200.

Twenty-four members were received into The Christian Temple, Norfolk, November 19. The preceding Sunday the Loyalty Day appeal, with $30,086.80 in pledges was turned in, the greatest ever. This amounted to 80% of the budget. Additional pledges are now being received.

The Women's Fellowship had charge of the morning service Sunday, November 5, at Sanford with Mrs. L. M. Stevens presiding. Miss Stella Stout spoke on "The Women's Fellowship—Origin" and Mrs. George Griffin on "Women and Our Changing World." The junior choir sang "Thanks Be to Thee." The Woman's Gift was dedicated.

Three laymen presented the budget for 1962 in lieu of the sermon at the United Church of Christ, Southern Pines, November 12. E. J. Austin spoke on "Missions" which makes up 20% of the budget of that church; Jack Reid on "Ministry, Leadership, Service" (39%); and R. M. Cushman on "Operational Cost (19%), Maintenance (3%) and Expansion (19%)." The following Sunday was Loyalty Sunday when pledges were made.

REV. JAMES C. JACKSON

Ordination service for James C. Jackson will be held at Clanton Park church, Charlotte, N. C., at five o'clock, Sunday afternoon, December 3. A product of our Tryon church, Mr. Jackson has his B.D. from Oberlin Theological Seminary.

The railroad station in Elon College has been torn down after serving the community for 75 years. A landmark is gone!

Mrs. W. B. Williams, former president of the Southern Convention and the National Women's Fellowship, was the speaker for Women's Fellowship Sunday at Bethlehem, Suffolk, Virginia.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association will be held Sunday afternoon, December 3, at 4:30 in the Great Bridge church. Annual memberships are $10 for men and $5 for women.

The 9th Triennial Assembly of United Church Women meeting in Miami recently launched a nationwide three-year program to combat racial discrimination, and invited all Protestant and Orthodox women to join in fighting it everywhere. In announcing "Assignment: Race, 1961-1964," Mrs. David D. Baker said that the program will be directed toward eliminating discrimination against Negroes, Indians, Jews, Puerto Ricans, Japanese Americans and others in communities where racial tensions exist anywhere in the United States. The national director is Miss Carrie E. Meares, a former teacher and YWCA director with experience in Africa and other parts of the world.

"Creating and Renewing the Church" was the theme for Women's Fellowship Sunday at Great Bridge November 5. The meditation was given by Mrs. B. J. Staley. Others assisting in the service were Mrs. S. P. Frost, Mrs. Martha Brinkley, and Mrs. Douglas McClain. The total given for missions was $182. The service closed with communion.

Our Sanford church, where Dr. David Shepherd is pastor, has been concentrating on stewardship recently. The finance committee presented the budget for 1962 for consideration at the conclusion of the morning service November 12. That evening the annual business meeting was held in the Fellowship Hall, followed by coffee and doughnuts and good fellowship. Friday, November 17, the annual pot-luck supper was held in the Proctor Building. The program consisted of colored slides of church activities. Thanksgiving and Church Loyalty Day were observed November 19.

Watch This: A special report on the World Council of Churches Assembly in New Delhi, India, generally heralded as one of the most important church meetings of the generation, will be presented by NBC-TV network Sunday, December 3, 1:00-1:30 p.m. EST. "Decision at New Delhi" is the title of the report.

CHRISTMAS FUND for the VETERANS OF THE CROSS

This is the sixtieth year of the Christmas Fund. There is really nothing quite like it. It is the way this denomination has cared for retired ministers and their wives and for the widows of these men. It is the tribute paid to the Veterans of the Cross. Years on small salary, plus the inroads of inflation, have made pensions inadequate even with good planning. The times of crisis and special need when they come simply demand added aid. Then the Christmas Fund goes into action with special grants and with Christmas checks to lift the load.

Last year from every corner of the land 4,905 individuals and 1,744 churches sent gifts to a total of $161,000. From this, 722 Christmas checks went out. A second check was added in March. The balance, held in the Emergency Fund, has been used throughout the year to make certain that no emergency need should go unmet. The letters of thanks are full testimony of the validity of the Christmas Fund appeal.

This year you will want to participate in this Fund. Do it directly or through your church.

A Personal Message From Rev. Bland Leebrick

I would like to express my deep appreciation to the many people who showed an interest in me and my family during my illness. First, I thank you for your prayers in my behalf. I definitely feel that God saw fit to give me more time on earth because of the many prayers offered. I also thank you for the beautiful cards, the letters of encouragement, the flowers, the money sent to help with the hospital bill and other acts of kindness.

During the critical days, I knew that I was very sick. It was a wonderful feeling to know that God was with me, and never was there any fear in my heart as I thought of death. I would not want to have such an experience without faith in God. The doctors diagnosed the trouble as acute pancreatitis.

I have heard people tell of a loved one describing heaven as he or she was dying. I, too, had a vision of heaven, and it was a beautiful sight, more beautiful than I am able to describe.

It has made me very humble to know that people were so concerned about me. The people at Bethlehem, Wissler's Chapel, and Wood's Chapel have been wonderful to us and have helped in many ways. Also, the people at Apple's Chapel and Carolina have shown a great concern and have helped us. We appreciate everything that has been done.

Since coming home, I have improved each day. I and my family are most grateful to God for giving me more time to be with them and to serve in His Kingdom. I want to use the time wisely. We are also grateful for our many friends. May God bless each one.

Listen! Something Is Coming

As we turn from Thanksgiving towards Christmas it may be with a sigh, or with expectancy. Over eating and lack of giving thanks may send us to the next holiday groaning and complaining. But a clear mind and thankful spirit can give us exuberance as we think of the Birthday of the King.

If we listen, and few really do, it would seem, there can be heard coming our way something of great importance. Walter Rouschenbusch once said:

The world of men is made of jangling noises.

With God is a great silence.

But that silence is a melody
Sweet as the contentment of love,
Thrilling as a touch of flame.

Christmas parades bring the noise. So do the rushing cars, the excited shoppers, and the would-be music in the market place. Much is said about the explosion of great bombs, launching missiles, marching multitudes of demonstrators, a dividing wall in Berlin, the long speeches in Communist conclaves; and even the "music of the spheres" is disturbed by the clicking of man-made instruments circling the globe. Truly "the world of men is made of jangling noises."

By listening to the noises we often miss the more important. This is impressively indicated by Clarence W. Hall in the December issue of Christian Herald in an article entitled "So God Imparts." Quote:

"In 1588 the world's eyes were focused on the flashy forays of the Spanish Armada; few paid heed to Galileo in his cluttered studio pursuing his theories of gravity that would revolutionize the world of science. In 1620 the big news was the build-up towards the Thirty Years War; few paid heed to a few Pilgrims clambering aboard their tiny ship and setting forth to a new world where they would set the pattern for Western democracy."

Although not many are listening to the World Council of Churches meeting in New Delhi, India, it just may be that history will remember 1961, not for the number of bombs exploded, the provocative speeches in the Assembly of the United Nations, or the revolutions in Africa, but our children's children may think it much more significant that Protestant and Orthodox churches united in a search for ways in which to make "Jesus Christ the Light of the World" in which we live.

It is in the summer twilight as youngsters listen not only to "the whispering pines" but to the "still small voice" within that ministers and missionaries are born. It is in quietness that one — anyone — renews spiritual strength. It is in serenity that the Great God super-vises the millions of solar systems in his universe, and it was ever so quietly that he donated his best Son to be the Redeemer of human kind.

Ninety-seven years ago Phillips Brooks, one of America's greatest preachers, remembering a Christmas in Bethlehem three years before, wrote these words we delight to sing:

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is given.

Advent

Stanley U. North

They were all looking for a king to slay their foes and lift them high;
Thou cam'st, a little baby thing, that made a woman cry.

Advent has had a variety of meanings. For the Hebrew people in bondage to Rome it was to signal the restoration of the Davidic kingdom. "For unto us a child is born . . . of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it and to establish it. . ." His name was to be called "Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." This was to happen in spite of the power of Rome, through the "zeal of the Lord of Hosts." (Isaiah 9)

Little wonder that the Hebrew people failed to recognize in the Christ Child, whose birthplace was a stable, whose cradle was a manger, and whose parents were humble peasant folk their long-looked-for Messiah. Another prophet, also known by the name of Isaiah, conceived of the anticipated Divine intervention in quite different terms: "Who hath believed our report and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant. . . He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. . . Surely he has borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows. . . He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." (Isaiah 53)

Advent continues to have a variety of meanings. It has been grossly commercialized. Not infrequently a secular festival has supplanted it. All too often its spirit is that of a holiday rather than a holy day. But for those of us who call ourselves by the Name of Christ, it has a deeply significant meaning: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Once again Advent is upon us. And again the Herods seek to destroy the Christ and his influence. They shall surely fail even as did that ancient tyrant. We need have no fear but that God will do his part. The uncertainty centers in us: can we be as wise as kings bringing their precious gifts to "that little baby thing?" Can we be as humble as shepherds attuned to the Eternal? May it be that we shall be moved to say to each other, "Did we not feel a warm glow in our hearts?"

A PRESIDENT'S REMARKS

When one has had the privilege of knowing six Presidents of the United States he usually remembers their most significant remarks.

Some remarks made by Presidents seem to mean less and less over the years. Others come to have a greater and more challenging meaning when evaluated in the light of events that affect a nation and its people.

One statement by a President that loomed large in the mind of this scribe when it was made and has vital meaning for the present, contained only four words. It was made by President Calvin Coolidge when his attention was called to a book calculated to detract from the greatness of this country's first President.

Coolidge, as was his custom, listened in thoughtful silence. Then, looking at the 555-foot-high granite memorial which could be seen from the White House window, he remarked "The monument still stands."

The book which was brought to the President's attention had a brief life, and the name of its author has passed into oblivion. But the monument which Mr. Coolidge saw as he made his laconic remark still stands as a symbol of things abiding — the immortality of honor and goodness and greatness.

The name of George Washington need not be idolized, for he was only human. The perfect man has not yet appeared, except in the person of Him who was more than man. It requires no genius to note in Washington's life some of the things that bore the mark of human frailty. His fame abides despite his mistakes and because his purposes were true. Those purposes were enforced by convictions born of faith in a divine Providence and the great country in which he believed so explicitly, so deeply.

The Washington Monument in its silent majesty inspires the hopes of all America and the passion of human hearts everywhere for freedom. It stands not only for America but for liberty-loving peoples throughout the world. But the symbol of the famous monument is today being challenged as it never has been since its foundation was laid 123 years ago.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

+ + +

THE TRIBES OF THE LORD

"Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord... to give thanks unto the name of the Lord." Psalm 122:4.

Tribes? Let's look in the dictionary: "Any large group of people united by descent from a common ancestor, community of traditions, adherence to the same leaders, etc." That is us! The followers of the Lord Jesus. And please remember the emphasis He placed on "our Father!" "Tribes of the Lord," there you are, how about that!

I can see them, or I wish I could, all across the world tribes of them going" into the house of the Lord." This psalm begins with "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord!" There, that is your job and mine, whether lay or clergy, as a part of the greatly favored section of His Church, to help see that people in all lands know the joy of going into the house of the Lord. Yes, to see that some people, enough people, in every country and nation be "the tribes of the Lord" going into the "house of the Lord"; whether it be a beautiful temple like that one in Jerusalem, or like the little white, one-room church which I knew in my childhood, or ships at sea, or bamboo huts in far places.

"United," ah yes, "united by descent from a common ancestor!" Having the same divine traditions; adherence to the same leaders — the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. "The tribes of Israel," indeed!

It is high time we had the sort of world that kind of situation would make. Once there was a generation of dreamers. It was just before World War I. The dream was: The evangelization of the world in this generation. Many college students volunteered themselves for the mission fields. And many of them were never sent for lack of funds. There have been funds, and lives, for two world wars since. Seems to me the man who does not go to church, and support the church, is on the wrong side somehow. We need a church-going world.

Strange things are taking place in the world, the shadows of which are being cast across the land of George Washington. Those shadows call for a renewal of faith in the American system, its churches, its schools, and other institutions. There is need for a reconsecration to the things for which Washington gave his full measure of devotion.

Shadows of strange things also call for a recital of what John Philpot Curran said in 1790 in his "Speech upon the Right of Election": "It is the common fate of the indolent to see their rights become a prey to the active. The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance; which condition if he break, servitude is at once the consequence of his crime and the punishment of his guilt."

The monument about which the thirtieth President of the United States spoke so decisively stands as a symbol of faith and freedom of the American people and their individual hopes and aspirations.

May future generations always be able to repeat, and with pardonable pride, the four words of the beloved Calvin Coolidge — "The monument still stands."

The Deacon

(Notes from a sermon used by Supt. Clyde L. Fields for the ordination of deacons at Pope's Chapel.)

I. The Office

Acts 6:1-6 leads us to believe that the office of deacon grew out of a special emergency in the congregation at Jerusalem on the complaint that the Greek widows were being neglected in the life of the church.

The early Christian church in Jerusalem gathered for what they called "Love Feast," held as a meal of fellowship prior to the Communion Service.

The apostles were overworked and unable to give individual attention to all the needs of the congregation. Hence, the suggestion that worthwhile assistants be ordained to help in the spiritual life of the church.

This passage from Acts records the fact that the apostles ordained seven deacons and set them apart by the laying on of hands.

II. Qualifications of the Deacon

I Timothy 3:1-13 uses the following words in giving the qualifications of a Deacon (definitions are from Webster's Dictionary).

GRAVE — deserving serious consideration; important; momentous; sedate and dignified; solemn, sober.

Not DOUBLE-TONGUED — deceitful; insincere.

Not GREEDY — eagerly desirous, especially of wealth; avaricious or grasping; insatiable, miserly, covetous.

No SLANDERER — one who makes a false report; one who maliciously utters and tends to injure the reputation of another.

SOBER — habitually temperate in the use of liquor; not drunk; solemn, grave, sedate, steady, calm, quiet, cool, collected, staid, serious.

See Pages 30-31 Southern Convention MANUAL, "Duties of Deacons," and Page 74-75, "Ordination of Deacons."

Acts 6:1-3 indicates that the primary qualification for the office of deacon was that of a person of strong faith. Persons weak in their testimony were not to be considered as a candidate for this office.

I Timothy 3:8 indicates that a deacon must possess an exemplary Christian character. The deacon must be of an unblemished, unsullied character. Perhaps here we see the indication of the origin of one of the Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church, namely, the insistence that Christian character is a sufficient test of faith and fellowship.

The book of Acts indicates that a deacon must be one of courage in witnessing to his faith. This is illustrated in the fact that Stephen was stoned because of his strong witness. Note also that Phillip was willing to leave his home and seek to witness in desert or remote places.

III. Duties of Deacons

1. Assistant to the minister. From the very beginning, deacons were special assistants to the minister in conducting public service of worship, assisting in the rite of baptism, and the sacrament of communion, and acting as confidential advisor to the minister in all matters relating to the congregation. The early church gave the deacons the responsibility of caring for the poor and sick on behalf of the congregation. The deacons were to seek out and care for the aged and the sick and the erring.

As duties of deacons increased, more and more responsibility was entrusted to them, such as providing financial support of the church by appeals made to the congregation, seeking to relieve the minister of the urgent problems relating to the work of the church, accepting many of the responsibilities of temporal matters, so that the minister might be free to teach and to preach.

A deacon should carry on his heart and mind the welfare of the church. To the minister, he is a brother beloved and a fortress in times of need. To the congregation, he is one who is set apart for duty and loyalty on solemn and sacred occasions, as well as joyous occasions. In some cases, deacons are responsible for the church property also.

A Deacon should bear in mind that he is an example, and that he has a sacred trust.

The deacon holds the highest office in the church for a layman, and in this office, he is also something of a minister.

"Deacons are called to share with the minister in the pastoral oversight of the Church; to assist him in all that concerns its life and order; and to serve the whole congregation with

REV. AND MRS. C. C. JONES

Rev. C. C. Jones of Richmond, Virginia, preached at Holy Neck church, Holland, October 8, soon after his 90th birthday. Mr. Jones grew up in the Holy Neck community, where he united with the church. He graduated from Elon College and became a minister of the Christian Church. He was pastor in Wakefield when the present church was built. For a number of years he served Methodist churches and is now retired.

comfort and good counsel." — Order for Admission of Deacons, Page 210, A BOOK OF PUBLIC WORSHIP.

(Several Church Constitutions were consulted, and most all include these duties.):

It shall be the duty of the deacons to cooperate with the pastor in ministering to the spiritual interest of the church and the community. They shall assist in the administering of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; in caring for the poor, the sick, the sorrowing, the indifferent, and the stranger. Any grievance to be brought before the church must first be brought before the Board of Deacons.

The board shall make regular reports to the quarterly meeting.

They shall provide for the supply of the pulpit in the case of a vacancy and in the absence of the pastor. In case of resignation of pastor, the Board of Deacons shall be represented on a Pastoral Committee authorized by the church.

They shall make an annual survey of the church roll, and at the annual meeting submit recommendations to the church regarding necessary revisions.

They shall assist the pastor in receiving into the fellowship of the church all new members. Sometimes this is done by the right hand of fellowship.

Membership — from six to nine members usually, two of whom shall be elected at each annual meeting of the church for a term of three years, but do not succeed themselves in office after their term of election has expired until a year has elapsed. They can then be elected, for another term. Deacons are elected for life in some cases. For a larger church, sometimes a larger number of Deacons is needed.

Conclusion

From the Abingdon Commentary, these conclusions are reached about church leaders:

Paul does not attach as much significance to the duties of bishops, deacons, and deaconesses as he does to their character. He is concerned with matters of conduct. Their "ruling over the church" will be influenced most of all by daily living, by consistent illustration of the faith. Christlikeness is wondrously attractive and contagious.

Let the deacon show a worthy dignity, let him control his tongue, his appetites, and his desire for gain; let him maintain the faith by conscientious living. A man is to be made a deacon only after he has been properly tested; the office is too important to be trusted to the untried. If women are received for service, they too are expected to qualify for office by the same blamelessness of conduct and holiness of character. Note the high assumption that elevation to office is justified solely by thought of service. Office means service. To serve well, one must attend on the school of discipline. He who will lead well must first learn to follow. The disciplined life promises the richest service.

"In this climactic period of history foreign policy involves every citizen, lays its hand upon every home, and embraces our personal aspirations for the kind of world in which we hope our children can live."

WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP SUNDAY

Speaking to the Congregation at the United Church in Portsmouth on Women's Fellowship Sunday, Mrs. Ray Gordon, Southern Convention president, stressed the importance of the laity in the work of the Church. Mrs. Gordon used for her topic the line from the theme hymn, "New Occasions Teach New Duties."

Mrs. William L. Crutcher, president of the Women's Fellowship, gave the call to worship and invocation. Mrs. W. W. Dew and Mrs. Robert Holland read the Scripture lessons, and the morning prayer was given by Mrs. Herbert Martin. The offertory prayer was led by Mrs. L. T. Moss.

The Woman's Gift dedication was led by Mrs. James T. Twine assisted by Mrs. Marc Jester, Mrs. John Lane, Mrs. Winston Creech, Mrs. Bernerd Jester, Mrs. Walter Hodges, Mrs. L. A. Worsham and Mrs. P. W. Swisher.

Mrs. Robert Marshall pronounced the benediction.

Ushers for the morning were Mrs. Otho Ayscue, Mrs. Aubrey Chambers, Mrs. Durwood Wahrenburg and Mrs. Elmo Austin. Mrs. Claude Gore greeted the worshippers at the door.

BOARD OF ABSENTEES TO MEET!

The Board of Absentees will meet each time the services of the Church meets. At these meetings, there will be a discussion as to how to keep the attendance as low as possible. WE will see that there is no enthusiasm for increased attendance.

The Board of Absentees will discuss ways of decreasing the offering.

It will be discussed as to how to weaken the Preaching of the Word.

The Board will also discuss ways to hold back Revival.

The BOARD OF ABSENTEES is composed of the following members:

1. Mr. Real Unconcerned.
2. Mr. Sleep Late.
3. Mr. Don't Come.
4. Mrs. Every Other Sunday.
5. Mr. Do Little.
6. Mrs. Nothing ever Right.
7. Mr. Very Lazy.
8. Mr. & Mrs. Take It Easy.
9. Mr. & Mrs. Don't Like Preacher.

It is the aim and purpose of this Board to close the Church Door as soon as Possible, do away with the Mission Program and shut off the Gospel Message.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

A chance remark by a Negro minister recently set me thinking. He told of one of our churches meeting in a Seventh Day Adventist church building until they could build, and I said, "I didn't know there were any Negro Seventh Day Adventist churches." He replied, "Don't you know we Negroes have everything you white people have?" I asked, "Even the itch?" and he agreed and we both laughed. Then he added in a more sober tone, "That's the reason you white people have so much to be responsible for."

"Negroes have everything white people have" — I have thought about that remark much since. Yes, good people and bad people; good drivers and poor ones (though my husband maintains the Negroes must be better drivers because if an accident occurs they are almost invariably blamed!); smart people and stupid ones; educated individuals and ignorant ones. Sick and well, rich and poor, you find all kinds in both races.

"You have so much to be responsible for." Again, I thought of reading recently about a church where both races worshiped until after the Civil War; then the Negroes started a church of their own. White people gave them the message of Christianity. Now when they need leadership, are we responsible for giving it? Would this mean, in our own location, invitation to Negro ministers of our denomination to share with others of the United Church of Christ for monthly meetings, so as to learn better how to do their jobs? Would it mean joint training schools, where learning might be shared? Would it mean joint board meetings for men's, women's, youth groups in the Convention and Conference areas, so as to make better use of national leadership and materials?

There are in North Carolina and Virginia some 150 Negro Congregational Christian churches, many of them "just like the white people have." I wonder as we become a part of the United Church of Christ if we can show our sense of responsibility toward these churches we have so long ignored. . .

Churches Rush Aid To Honduras

"I was hungry . . . naked . . . and you . . ."

An urgent request for a continuing flow of food, vitamins, clothing, and blankets has been received from Church World Service representative, Murray Meador, in disaster struck British Honduras.

Latest shipments of food for some 15,000 persons made homeless by Hurricane "Hattie" include: 70,000 pounds of rice; 70,000 pounds of beans; 10,000 pounds of cocoa; and 10,000 pounds of sugar provided by CROP, the community food appeal of Church World Service.

Nearly 50 per cent of all buildings in Belize, the capital city with a population of 31,000, were destroyed or badly damaged; Stann Creek, a settlement of some 7,000 people south of Belize, suffered even greater damage.

Many people fled to the hills, but 204 are reported dead and some 2,000 injured.

Waves described as 10 to 20 feet high swept through the buildings. All harbor facilities were wrecked. The city of Belize was left without electricity or fresh water. All communication in or out of the city was cut off for four days with the exception of a ham radio reserved for government use.

Word was finally received November 6, by cable and ham radio from Mexico and neighboring Honduras which stated in part, "RUSH ALL FOOD CLOTHING B L A N K E T S VITAMINS," signed Murray Meador.

Meador is asking for unlimited quantities of food, including rice, milk, flour, beans, sugar, pickled meats, tea and cocoa for use at the feeding centers.

An initial $5,000 has been sent by Church World Service to help construct emergency housing, help local churches in their emergency action, and for warehouse repairs.

Contrary to first reports, the YWCA building, housing the inter-church aid committee's chief issuing office and storeroom, is intact. One hundred people are now being sheltered there.

Some clothing was salvaged before the storm hit, 90 bales dry and 60 bales wet, but the warehouse housing most of the CWS supplies was destroyed by 15-foot waves.

The inter-church aid committee which is cooperating whole heartedly with the government disaster committee, is running two out of the six emergency feeding stations in the city. The local Mennonites are operating another.

Immediately after the disaster Church World Service provided shipments of cornmeal, flour, rice, lard and milk taken from its program supplies on hand in Jamaica. Clothing of all kinds and blankets were shipped by air from CWS centers in New Windsor, Maryland, St. Louis, Missouri, and Modesto, California.

In Belize, the chief difficulty is transportation. For a while, many planes were unable to unload due to lack of trucks to take the goods to the stricken city. Even eight days later, relief operations were hampered for lack of vehicles.

Governments and volunteer organizations are coordinating their assistance through representatives in Jamaica. British and United States Governments are providing air and sea transportation, doctors, nurses, and supplies. Help, especially food, has been flowing in from Honduras, Mexico, Guatemala, Costa Rica and other countries.

The American Red Cross, National Catholic Welfare Conference, Mennonite Central Committee, and others are also giving assistance.

THE PLACE OF PARENTS

By Gladys Lambe

You and I, as parents, are bridge-builders. God grant that we may build the supports strong, that our children may walk safely across the span of life.

The home is the most important institution in America, yet parents too often depend upon schools, churches, and other institutions to raise the child properly. God arranged life so that a human at birth should be wrapped in the love of a mother and father. Within that love, this person begins to grow and develop. The love of a family circle is important. We cannot set standards for our children that we do not follow. We cannot demand honesty of them if we, ourselves, are not honest. We dare not demand that they be pure morally if we have a smutty mind. Our actions must always reflect our words, or else the child will detect our shallowness.

What we do and say is important, for the child looks to his father and mother almost as we look to God.

Pray with your children. Have fun with them. Love them.

MONEY

By Elizabeth F. Caviness

Sitting at a table
Counting the Rally offering,
"Can you make a poem of that?"
"No."

Later I thought "Why not?"
What is offering money?
Poems are written about the animate
And the inanimate—

About life and death—
Land and sea—
Starry eyes and starry skies—
Why not money?

Lack of money often causes human misery.

Love of money often causes misery to humans.

Is money used for evil more than good?

What of hospitals, libraries, scholarships?

What of churches, childrens' homes, foundations?

These would not be possible without
The life and love Jesus Christ came
To bring to his followers.

These would not be possible without
The use of money.

Money used by dedicated Christians who let Christ into Every part of their lives
Can bring hope to some who have none;

Health to some who are ill;
Beauty where there is ugliness;
And the story of Jesus Christ to Those who know it not.

This use of money by Loving hands and prayerful hearts
Is more beautiful,
Like a tree,
Than any poem, made of words,
Could ever be.

Burlington Women Hear Mrs. Kernodle

By Mrs. M. Z. Rhodes, Publicity Chairman

"Now Thank We All Our God." So states the theme for November in the Year Book of the Women's Fellowship of the First Congregational Christian Church, Burlington. November's Message of Thanksgiving was truly carried out in the program given for the Burlington Fellowship Monday, November 6. Here interwoven were three phases of the church life; stewardship, the study of missions, and the presentation of the Woman's gift. Heading it all was devotion.

Mrs. Harry Jolly opened the meeting with a devotional entitled, "Mite or Mighty?" Sacrificial giving recharges Spiritual batteries and the gift becomes not a mite but mighty.

Mrs. William Sellers, stewardship chairman, led in a consecration service and the presenting of the Woman's Gift. These were offered before an altar upon which a "horn of plenty" filled with autumn flowers and fruit spoke of the abundance of God's love and mercy. Mrs. Sellers then introduced Mrs. Kernodle, with the thought that devotion, Stewardship and giving find their highest fulfillment in missions.

Mrs. Kernodle spoke on "New Churches for New Times," and began by stating "In each age the Holy Spirit of God creates and recreates His Church." Bringing to light the many changes taking place in our world today, Mrs. Kernodle noted that science and religion stand on new frontiers. In many cases changes bring about alienation both between God and man and among men themselves. There is a need for reconciliation, with God and with man. Mrs. Kernodle brought out what the church really is, that it is not just another organization. In the beginning it was given those who were faithful to share a new way of life. Today it is still a fellowship called by the Holy Spirit to be God's people. In this changing world the church has a great responsibility to meet the needs of others. "The Congregation is the front line, the cutting edge against the edge of the world. Now, not tomorrow is the time to be willing to be used. God doesn't wait until we are perfect before He can use us." Christ's Kingdom must be IN but not OF this world."

Mrs. Kernodle gave an example of different churches and how they were meeting the challenge of changing times. Each was different but each was bound by ties to Christ and to the Church. They take both the world and Christ seriously. One church near home was "The Church of the Covenant," Lynchburg, Va. Here is emphasized prayer, witness, stewardship. We are to be a Christian witness daily to those in our community.

In closing Mrs. Kernodle stated "We are called to be an Apostolic Church" — those who are sent.

The fellowship expresses its sincere appreciation to Mrs. Kernodle and to all who made possible this inspirational program. Appreciation is also expressed to Mrs. Robert M. Kimball, program chairman for the year 1961-1962.

The minister's wife, Mrs. Ellis N. Clark, was the speaker for the Women's Fellowship Sunday service at Sunbury November 5, using as her topic "A Witnessing Thanksgiving." Mrs. James Ashley presided and the ladies' choir presented special music. Ushers were Mrs. G. E. Rountree and Mrs. L. E. McCoy. Next Sunday the laymen will be responsible for the service, with Mr. Mack Eason of Oak Grove church as guest speaker.

THE MARATHI MISSION

Poona

- 3—Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Bashore, graduates of Oberlin, went to India in 1959. They have been assigned to the United Theological College of Western India.
- 4—Rev. Ella Loleta Wood went to India in 1918; was stricken with polio after 3 years; returned in 1929 to be principal of Pierce Memorial School for girls in Rahuri until 1948; then professor of Old Testament at United Theological College. Returned to U.S. last June for pre-retirement furlough. She has M.A., B.D., and S.T.M. from Oberlin.

Sholapur

- 5—Rev. and Mrs. Robert Fairbank are in this country because of his health which necessitated an operation this fall. They have visited the Southern Convention in time past. He is a fourth generation missionary. They have had a variety of assignments since going to India in 1926, most recently in the new field of ministry to industrial workers. They are supported by our Reidsville church.
- 6—Miss Margaret Hammaker planned to retire September 1 after 35 years in India, training kindergarten teachers and leading women. Instead, after a furlough year in Oberlin, she sailed September 13. She says of the change in plans, "Our Marathi Mission personnel has dwindled so much that my heart smote me and I felt that never before had I had a stronger call from God to go to India."
- 7—Miss Miriam Rogers went to India in 1937 to teach; she got polio and had to return to U.S.; she returned in 1960 as principal of Woronoco School and as secretary of the Marathi Mission.

Supa

- 8—Rev. Joseph Moulton visited in the Southeast Convention and in the Convention of the South churches in October. He is retired after 43 years in India. For 40 years he and his wife served in rural areas, preaching, teaching, doing social work. He had a "parish" of 2500 square miles, where he endeared himself to Indians. In 1953 he was elected to a committee of 15, representing a million citizens, to administer famine relief and welfare work — only Christian on the committee.

Vadala

- 9—Dr. and Mrs. Hale Cook work in Vadala, where he is director of public health program for the Marathi Mission. He is an ordained minister as well as a medical doctor and visited the Southern Convention as a friend of Rev. and Mrs. Al Gleason. His wife is a nurse from Sweden. They have six children, ranging in age from 14 to 2.

Youth Faces The Future

Cathie Sandstrom

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

WHAT'S GOING ON?

What is going on? The Youth Page is the place to find out if you don't know. But the Youth Page depends entirely on you. It cannot function without your support. You may be thinking, "Our group is so small. What do we do that would interest anyone else?" Here is an answer for you — everything you do is important. The Southern Convention is made up, for the most part, of groups your size. Don't underestimate your importance. Remember, the Youth Page belongs to you. Its future and its effectiveness depend on you. Make sure your group shares actively in the responsibilities and benefits of The Christian Sun. One more thing — why not start today?

P. F. SCRAPBOOK

The Pilgrim Fellowship Scrapbook that was started this fall has been growing, but very slowly. Any articles about any of your activities that appear in any publication other than The Sun are in demand. If you find that you have no news for the Youth Page or the Scrapbook, you have a wonderful chance to make some!

FALL ACTIVITIES AT ASHEBORO

By Margaret Hall, Reporter

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Asheboro Church has been working hard this fall to make money for the Building Fund of the church. On October 7, a car wash was held in the church parking lot. Young people stayed there all day without a moment to spare as cars were constantly lined up to be washed. The pick-up and delivery service which the group ran to aid business caused an increase in profits beyond what had been expected.

October 14 the P. F. group held a very successful fish fry at the Masonic Hall. Over 500 fish plates were sold during the evening.

All proceeds, amounting to $240, have been given to the Building Fund to aid in the addition of a new educational building.

October 28 the advisors, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bowers, treated the group to a party. Members and their guests were served hot dogs and hamburgers, and an evening of fun and fellowship was enjoyed by all.

SENIOR HIGH P. F. AT ELON

The Senior High Pilgrim Fellowship had their Work Day for Christ on October 14. They washed cars all day, from early morning until it began raining. The next week they tried washing cars again, and again it rained. After paying expenses, for soap and other materials, they have $38.33 for Our Christian World Mission.

They visited in the homes of our community the night before Halloween on behalf of The United Nations International Emergency Fund (specially set up to care for children the world over). These gifts amounted to $45.

They have been on a hayride. They have attended the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship Conference in Durham. They have been studying neighbors to the south in Latin America. Several of them attended the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at Belews Creek on November 2.

Each month two or three parents serve as counsellors along with Dee Athinson, their leader. Last month Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Dixon and Mr. and Mrs. Walt Smith served. In November, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Marino, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Spohn and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ward are serving.

These Senior High's are responsible for their own programs, and so far they have done well.

The Junior High Pilgrim Fellowship

This group is not far behind! Each Sunday, one young person with his parents (or someone he selects) prepares and gives the program. They also have had a hayride, recreation and Mission Study.

NEW FILMSTRIPS AVAILABLE

Building for Christian Experience, Part I, 70-frames, Part II, 74-frames, written script.

Two filmstrips on space and equipment for Christian education.

Part I is concerned with the close relationship between understanding how persons learn and how to build so that persons can learn and grow in Christian experience.

Part II considers the essential details of planning and building for Christian experience.

Peace On Earth, 52-frames, 33 1/2 rpm recording.

This filmstrip is a service of worship and dedication. It would also be valuable to use for discussion of Christmas and World Peace. It not only tells the story of Jesus' birth but helps us to see why He came into the world and what our place in this plan should be. "Peace On Earth" means peace for all men everywhere. For youth and adults.

These two filmstrips may be reserved by writing to Miss Ruth Dunn, Box 336, Elon College, North Carolina. There is no charge except return postage.

Work Day for Christ money from the Junior High and Senior High groups was dedicated at the morning worship service at our Sanford church November 12.

Activities At Elon College

"WHO'S WHO" CHOSEN

Five Elon College students have been chosen for listing in the 1961-1962 edition of "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges."

Selected for the honor were Thomas Brady, of Raleigh; Mary Ann Hepner, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Fred Shull, of Burlington; Eleanor Smith of Winston-Salem and Helen Wright, of Greenville, South Carolina.

DANIELEY HEADS LAY COUNCIL

Dr. J. E. Danieley, Elon College president, has returned from Cleveland, Ohio, where he presided over the national meeting of the Council for Lay Life and Work of the United Church of Christ.

Dr. Danieley, chairman of the group, directed discussion of plans for increasing the participation of laymen and lay women in all areas of church life which emphasize witnessing for Christ.

Following the Council meeting, Dr. Danieley remained in Cleveland to preside over the annual gathering of the board of directors of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Church. This meeting was held jointly with the directors of the Churchmen's Brotherhood of the Evangelical and Reformed Church to plan union of the two groups in the new United Church of Christ.

PUBLIC INVITED TO "MESSIAH"

"The Messiah" will be presented by the Elon College Choir in Whitley Auditorium at 4 p.m., Sunday, December 3.

This will be the twenty-ninth annual rendition of Handel's oratorio by the college choir.

The production will be directed again this year by Prof. Charles Lynam, who first began taking part in the annual Elon program as a student singer during his undergraduate days. Since graduation, he has taken part several times as a member of the chorus, as a bass soloist and for the first time last year as the director.

Prof. Lynam has announced that four well-known Greensboro singers will appear as guest soloists with the Elon student group, two of the soloists returning for a second straight season. The returning soloists are Peggy Sue Russell, soprano, who is soloist for the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant in Greensboro; and Paul Berry, tenor, who sings at Greensboro's West Market Street Methodist Church. Other guest singers will be Jeannette Davidson, contralto, of First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro and Walter Vassar, bass.

The great oratorio, which is based upon the story of Christ, tells of the prophecies and anticipations of the coming of the Messiah, following with the story of his suffering and death and finally his triumphant resurrection.

The public is cordially invited to attend the program.

FORMER ELON DEAN HEADS NEW COLLEGE

Dr. C. Robert Benson, former dean of students at Elon College, was inaugurated as the first president of the College of Albemarle, community-level junior college at Elizabeth City, North Carolina, November 7.

Dr. J. Earl Danieley, Elon's president, was the official Elon delegate and was a participant in the academic procession. Accompanying Dr. Danieley to the event were Prof. John S. Graves, Elon College Chaplain; Mrs. Emma Lewis, who was formerly secretary to Dr. Benson when he was dean of students at Elon; and Mrs. Virginia Johnston, secretary to the Elon College registrar.

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK

Dr. Harland Lewis, pastor of the First Church of Christ, Congregational, of Farmington, Connecticut, will be guest speaker for Religious Emphasis Week at Elon College November 28 - December 1.

Daily religious services will be held at 10 a.m. in Elon College Community Church by Dr. Lewis. On Tuesday and Thursday mornings he will be addressing members of the freshman class. His subject on Tuesday morning will be "Alive or Dead?" "Weathervane or Sign Post?" will be the Thursday morning topic.

On Wednesday morning Dr. Lewis will speak to upperclass students on the subject "Where Is God These Days?" He will speak to the same group Friday morning using the topic, "Where Is The Frontier?"

The guest minister will also be available for individual or group conferences during the week. The conferences at night will be at the request of groups or individuals.

Dr. Lewis is currently a lecturer at Hartford Theological Seminary; a member of the Executive Committee, International Congregational Council, London, England; a member of the Board of Directors of Homeland Ministries, United Church of Christ; and is correspondent for the "Christian Century."

He received his B. D. degree from Yale University Divinity School and has done graduate work at Harvard University. He is a former pastor of the Church of Christ at Dartmouth College.

I Don't Want To Go

The director of a church school on telephoning a parent because of a ten-year-old's persisting absence, received this reply: "He doesn't want to go." Apparently in the case of religion this mother was willing to abide by the wisdom and judgment of the boy.

Over all other phases of life she imposes her judgment, will, knowledge, and experience; his bed-time, his diet, his schooling, his appearance. She guides him in every phase of life except religion! If religion were an untried way, or a new invention, or if God were an experiment, then we could understand this mother's timidity about not insisting that he cultivate religion.

But religion has been tried and tested throughout the ages. It is the best builder of morale, the best generator of courage, the unflinching hope, the unshaken faith in the decency of man and society that can be named.

Here is religion worshipping the one God of the universe, emphasizing the ideal of one humanity, vaulting the difference between nations and races, and called on by human beings in every crisis of life. And this mother (and others like her) keeps her child from it because "he doesn't want to go."

Growth Through Bible Study

Background Scripture: Luke 4:16-21; 24:25-27; I Timothy 4; II Timothy 1:5-6; 3:10-4:5.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:105-112.

Memory Selection: Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee. Psalm 119:11.

Today's lesson is concerned with Growth Through Bible Study, or the Inspiration of the Word of God. In these introductory verses, however, there is an example of the Inspiration of Men of God. These are two sources of inspiration to all Christians.

Inspiration of a Man of God

Paul knew that Timothy, like every man, "had a date with trouble." He knew that in his work as a minister he would have a hard time, facing persecution, criticism, misunderstanding, discouragement, at least partial defeat, and frustration. By way of encouragement he cites his own example, not by way of boasting, but by way of boosting. He reminded Timothy of his faithfulness in preaching the gospel, his patience and long-suffering under persecutions, his steadfastness under fire, his afflictions and hardships. And then he says that out of them all, the Lord delivered him. Nothing can separate a man from the love of Christ. Come what may, let Timothy be a good soldier of Christ. It is a timely word for us. Let us call to mind the men and women, some of whom we have known, who have been faithful and bold in Christ's service. We too are surrounded by a great cloud of witnesses. Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, fight the good fight of faith that awaits us, looking not only to Christ's faithful servants of old, but to Jesus himself, the author and finisher of our faith.

Inspiration of the Word of God

When he turns to the place of the Bible as a source of inspiration and teaching he says some interesting things. He reminds Timothy that from a child, he had known the holy scriptures. He was referring of course to the Old Testament — there was no New Testament at that time. But here was a young man, who from his childhood had been nurtured on the scriptures. He had stored his memory with its great words and fed his soul on its great truths. In another place Paul pays tribute to the unfeigned faith that dwelt in his grandmother and his mother. Perhaps it was due to their influence that the boy, and later the young man, had steeped his mind and heart in this spiritual bread. And he had grown in grace and in a knowledge of the truth as it was in Christ Jesus. Alas that in our day there are so few children and young people who know anything about the Bible. In how many homes that you know are the children "exposed" to the Bible, either by their parents, or by personal reading. And yet here is one of the most vital factors in growth in the Christian life. Man cannot live, much less grow, by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Many of our children are spiritually illiterate.

Paul reminds Timothy that the Scriptures "are able to make thee wise unto the salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." "Search the scriptures" said Jesus, "for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." Regular, sincere, devotional reading of the Bible will awaken and quicken a faith that will enable one to know Jesus Christ, whom to know aright is life eternal.

Paul further reminds Timothy that "All scripture is given by inspiration of God." He is not discussing here the inspiration of the scriptures — he took that for granted — he is referring to the inspirational value and use of the scriptures. Do you want to know whether the Bible is inspired or not? Do you want to know whether it has any authority? Do not listen to learned theologians talking about it. Do not read books about it. Read it yourself. Listen to it. Go to a quiet place, sit down, read it slowly, read it with an open mind, read it with a responsive heart, read it with an obedient will. Inspiration is not something to be announced; it is something to be discovered. One who reads it critically will miss its meaning; one who reads it conscientiously and in the spirit of consecration will know of its authority and its inspiration.

The old veteran goes on to mention some of the values of the Scriptures. They are profitable for 1. Doctrine, that is teaching. The Bible must be taught, it has a body of teaching that must be conveyed to others. It is the greatest text book of Christianity. 2. Reproof. The Bible is not all sweetness and light. Its words stand as a rebuke of our acts and attitudes. It shows us as sinners. It does not gloss over our faults. It rebukes and reproves us uncompromisingly. That is one reason why folks do not like to read it. 3. Correction. It is the great touchstone of truth. Even as a compass reveals any deviation from the proper course, so does the Bible correct our misconceptions of truth and our misdirection of progress. 4. Instruction in righteousness. As stated above, the Bible is the greatest text-book on righteousness. Here is the guide to all ethical conduct, not spelled out in detail, but stated in principle. And because it deals with principles, it will never be outdated or outmoded. 5. That that man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. It is a means of growth, a means of equipping Christians with the principles and the power for Christian living and service. William Lyon Phelps, distinguished professor of literature at Yale University, once said: "A person who is ignorant of the Bible is not an educated person, no matter what other things he may know." That is perhaps an exaggerated statement, but there is a lot of truth in it.

Making Use of the Word of God

There would be little disagreement among Christians about the inspiration and the inspirational value of the Word of God. The problem does not lie there; it lies in getting people to read the Word of God. Dr. Leslie Weatherhead suggests a few rules for Bible study: Read it uncritically. Criticism can come later, much later. But at first read the Bible uncritically. Read it imaginatively. Let

HOMECOMING AT REIDSVILLE CHURCH

An unknown correspondent writes eloquently of Homecoming, Rally Day, Promotion Day, Visitation Sunday in the Reidsville church. Excerpts from the article follow:

October 1 was a banner day for the Reidsville church at both Sunday school and church. The goal was 500 for Sunday school. Each class was given a frame representing a ladder without rungs. As a member or prospective member or visitor came in they fastened a rung to the frame. The total present was more than the 500 goal. Mrs. Jay Strickland, Mrs. Marjorie Somers, Mr. Phillip Jackson, Mr. Dillard Murrell and many others worked untiringly to achieve the gratifying results.

At the eleven o'clock service both children's and adult choirs rendered appropriate selections under the direction of Mr. Jay Strickland. Two charter members, Mrs. Bob Brown and Mrs. Annie Chaney were present. Corsages were pinned on them by their daughters, Mrs. Bart Pegram and Mrs. Lee Somers.

The recently renovated sanctuary and new furnishings were dedicated in memory of loved ones or as a living testimony of love and devotion. The pastor, Rev. Mack Welch, read the dedicatory ritual and Rev. Clyde Fields offered the prayer of dedication.

The morning message was by a "son" of this church, Rev. Clyde Fields. Because Jesus gave the salutation heavenly dignity, no greater your mind go back across the centuries, join the invisible company of its prophets and apostles and saints and martyrs, and march with them. Let your mind go. Read it devotionally. Look reverently for Christ in the Book. Come to it in humility. Let the reading be an act of worship. And Dr. Weatherhead should have added, Read it Regularly, every day preferably. An English author of the finest travel books on Italy said that there is a difference between the people who visited Italy a generation ago and modern tourists. The former were travelers, taking their time to become acquainted with places of historic interest. The latter are for the most part, trippers, rushing here and there, not understanding what they see. In your Bible reading are you a traveler or a tripper?

honor could Clyde have bestowed upon those hearing him that to call them "My friends." As he reminisced his heart seemed to overflow with praise and thanksgiving for the training in this his first and home church and for his devout mother who dedicated him to God here. He was silent as to his own achievements but paid glowing tribute to his mother and this church to which he was brought as "a babe in arms" and from whom he learned this lesson: "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength." (Isaiah 30:15.)

Following the morning service dinner was enjoyed in the fellowship hall. It was a great joy to break bread again with friends and loved ones whom many had not seen for some time.

The health of the church was revived. We look forward to greater things as we finish this year's work and embark on the new.

The Master Owner

By Elizabeth F. Caviness

You may be captain of your ship of life;
You may be master of where you sail;
You may choose from a variety of cargo;
You may choose the Owner's will to fail.

But, if you sail without the Master Owner
You may run aground on some far rocky shore.
If you sail without His charts and cargo
You'll wreck your life's ship and be no more.

And some day the Owner will call for an accounting,
And you must report on where and how you sailed.
You're only the captain, the Owner will judge
Of work well done, or where and how you failed.

Your Pledge

Your weekly pledge to Pilgrim Church is more than money! It is a gift of part of yourself to aid in Christian work. Your pledge is:

A contribution to Christian Education;
An investment in a better community;
A gift in gratitude to God;
A vote for a Christian world;
A gesture of good will;
An obligation to God;
A service to those in sorrow;
An aid to Christian youth;
An expression of faith in the future;
An effort to express your Christian life;
And an honor to God.

A Litany For The Consecration Of Pledges

To the preaching of the good tidings of salvation,

We consecrate our gifts.

To the teaching of Jesus' way of life,

We consecrate our gifts.

To the leading of every little child to the knowledge and love of Jesus.

We consecrate our gifts.

To the healing of broken bodies and the soothing of fevered brows,

We consecrate our gifts.

To the caring of helpless age and the relief of all who look to us for help,

We consecrate our gifts.

To the evangelization of the world and the building of the Kingdom of God.

We consecrate our wealth, our efforts, and our lives.

Home Is Called "Redemption Center"

Dear Friends:

Many thanks to all our friends across the Convention who remember us at this season of the year. There are those who not only go the second mile with us but even farther. Then of course there are a few who don't even go the first mile. This is kind of hard to understand. We believe that the work that goes on at the Children's Home is very much a part of our Christian World Mission. We believe it was best said by Rev. John deSousa of Hartford, Connecticut, when he visited our Elon Community Church in a Preaching Mission and said that our Home could best be described as a "redemption center." A place where young lives are reclaimed. For sure this is the mission of the church. We are glad to be a part of this mission. We are most grateful to those who support our work in such a fine way.

We were most happy to have Rev. John deSousa, Minister for Men and Missions for the state of Connecticut visit our campus last week. He was instrumental in placing our Home before all the church schools in the state of Connecticut. Our Home this year is one of the home mission projects for this group of church schools. It is so gratifying to have people like John deSousa take such a deep interest. He took parts of two afternoons to visit our campus to get pictures of our children and various views of our campus. Thursday evening (November 16) he had the evening meal in the Clyde W. Rudd Cottage with our younger boys.

Thus, not only within the bounds of our Convention, but beyond, people have a deep interest in the welfare of the children who live in our Home.

The members of the Beulah church (E.N.C. Conference) welcomed their new minister and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. B. J. Willett, to the church community with a "pounding" Thursday evening, November 16.

Thanksgiving morning at 8:00 members of our Parkway United Church, Winston-Salem, had a service followed by a light breakfast. Members of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church were guests.

Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed in our Suffolk church with a dedication in the sanctuary at 5:00 p.m. Mrs. James Darden presided and Dr. George Alley, Mrs. J. J. Felton and Mrs. Hubert Young shared in the program.

Community Thanksgiving service was held in our Great Bridge church Thanksgiving morning at 7:30. Rev. Bill Simmons, pastor, led the service and music was furnished by our choir under the direction of Mrs. Roberta Whitten with Mrs. Betty Sawyer as organist. Speaker was Rev. Graham Carlton, pastor of Oak Grove Methodist Church.

Miss Elizabeth Baugh, Hopewell city librarian, gave a travelogue on Venezuela, Ecuador, Peru and Colombia at the Thank Offering service at Bethlehem Congregational Church, Disputanta, Virginia, November 19. At this evening service she told about mission work carried on in parts of South America where she lived while working for the Department of State.

Flags were dedicated at our Sanford church Sunday, November 12. The Christian flag was given by the Junior High Pilgrim Fellowship and presented by its president, Mary Lee LaRue. Mrs. L. D. Grantham presented the American flag on behalf of the Alpha Sunday School Class of which she is president.

Children's departments in the Suffolk church school have presented special programs for their parents this fall: Kindergarten, October 8, 3:45 o'clock; Primary, October 22, 3:30-4:30 and Beginner, October 22, 4:30-5:30; Junior, October 29, 7:30 p.m. These departments presented a special program during the morning worship hour, Sunday, November 19.

Dr. Frederick Herzog led a study group at First, Durham on three Sunday evenings recently using "Jesus Christ, the Light of the World" as the basis for discussion. This is the study book published for the World Council of Churches in preparation for the current New Delhi meeting. At the second session slides were shown of the World Council meeting in 1954, and at the third session a recording was heard enabling members to hear the voices of Christian leaders in the world.

Wood's and Wissler's Chapels in the Valley of Virginia are having joint services of worship while their minister, Rev. Bland Leebrick, is recovering from a serious illness. Rev. Mark Andes was the guest minister when they met at Wissler's Chapel November 12. A Thank Offering service for the Women's Fellowship groups was held the fourth Sunday.

The Richmond News Leader of October 25, 1961, carried a picture of the Rev. Mina E. Mina, his wife and three children, and a lengthy story of this pastor of First Congregational Church of Jackson, Michigan. They are a family without a country. He is Egyptian and she is Chinese. He came to America in 1953 to study chemical engineering and remained to be a minister. She fled from the Chinese mainland to Formosa in 1949 and came to America in 1954. Rules governing the admission of foreign students provide that a student seeking citizenship can be deported within fifteen days. After marriage and a family, a church to serve, and no country to which either could return, they were in real difficulty. A Minnesota Congressman secured permanent residency permission for them, and now they can seek citizenship.

THANK OFFERING AT CAROLINA

Mrs. Hillary Jones

D. Larry Smith, our pastor, was the speaker in observance of Women's Fellowship Day at the evening worship service at Carolina United Church of Christ (near Burlington) November 19.

Mrs. J. W. Trollinger, Jr., vice president and stewardship chairman, presided. She was assisted by Mrs. Hillary Jones, president, and Mrs. Harper Dickens, Jr., spiritual life chairman.

The Woman's Gift was presented at the altar by Mrs. Clinton Thomas and Mrs. Johnny Smith. The prayer of dedication was offered by Mrs. J. W. Trollinger, Jr.

Rev. Mr. Smith brought to us a message from our Thank Offering theme, "A Witnessing Thanksgiving." From the thoughts he brought to our hearts, we feel that we will have greater courage to be faithful witnesses for Christ, and that we will recognize our duty and responsibility to God and to our fellowmen.

In Memoriam

FERENCE

We, the members of the Prince George Congregational Christian Church, Prince George, Virginia, wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Andrew Ference, Jr., who passed away suddenly on August 23, 1961.

He was a faithful member of his church and Sunday school class. He was quiet and unassuming in his manner and a sincere friend to all who knew him. He looked for only the good qualities in his fellowmen. A loyal and faithful citizen in our community, we shall miss his presence among us.

Therefore, be it resolved that we extend our deepest sympathy to his wife and family and we commend them to the care of our Heavenly Father.

Be it resolved further that a copy of this memoriam be sent to his wife, a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be entered in the records of the church.

TAYLOR

We, the members of Lebanon Congregational Christian Church of Semora, North Carolina, wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Walter Lee Taylor, who passed from this life to his eternal reward July 18, 1961, at the age of 85.

Brother Taylor not only served his community as he represented Caswell County in the North Carolina House of Representatives for two terms; but he also was a devoted Churchman. He was our oldest member, having united with our church in July, 1896, and served it faithfully as a Sunday school superintendent for a period of eight years. He was elected to the Board of Deacons on July 27, 1918, and continued to serve his church as its senior deacon. He also was elected as a trustee of the church in 1915.

Because of our appreciation of his loyalty and faithfulness, we resolve:

First: To extend to his family and loved ones our deepest sympathy.

Second: That we keep a memory of his devotion in our hearts and follow the example that he set before us.

Third: That a copy of this memoriam be sent to the family, to The Christian Sun, and to the local paper for publication, and a copy be entered upon the church records.

T. J. Earp, Secretary
L. T. Wilkins, Jr., Pastor

Mrs. F. C. Lester was the speaker for the Thank Offering service led by the Women's Guild of First United Church of Christ (Reformed) in Winston-Salem November 19. The preceding Sunday she spoke for Women's Fellowship service at Wentz Memorial Congregational, Winston-Salem. Special music by three choirs at the former and by a women's chorus singing selections from Mendelssohn's "Elijah" at the latter added much to these services.

A Pre-Requisite For Success

By Roy C. Helfenstein, D.D., Ormond Beach, Florida

Enthusiasm is a priceless virtue. And because this virtue is so often absent in modern life, thousands are losing their way in the world's confusion.

Not even keenness of intellect can take the place of wholesome enthusiasm in the realization of human achievement and human happiness. That's why the Apostle Paul told the Colossian Christians — "Whatsoever you do, do it heartily as unto the Lord."

The deepest enthusiasm, like the deepest grief or the deepest joy, is not expressed by words or by noise, but by attitudes and actions. Enthusiasm for one's joy — enthusiasm in one's daily work and in one's religion is perhaps the most needed virtue in modern life. Enthusiasm for life, for God, for the right, for the highest and the best constitutes the religion of Jesus Christ. There is no place in God's favor for half-heartedness and luke-warmness in individuals or in organizations. People who are not enthusiastic about their work find life a drudgery, because they keep their eyes on the clock instead of putting their hearts into their job. People without enthusiasm for their work and for life in general are content to see how little they can do and get by with it, instead of being concerned about how much they can do so as to have something to be proud about. Enthusiasm for one's work and for life has been the secret of the success attained by every person who has attained greatness.

Enthusiasm is the pre-requisite for success in every field of human effort. The woman who dislikes cooking is sure to be a poor cook. The teacher who doesn't like children is sure to be a poor teacher. The secretary who does not like figures and details is sure to be a poor secretary. And so it is in every field of human effort. No matter how much knowledge a person may have regarding his vocation or profession, if he does not like his work, if he does not have enthusiasm for it, he will fail. The half-hearted, unenthusiastic worker anywhere — in office, in store, in mine, on the farm or wherever people toil, is not only a head-ache to those who have to work with him, but also a definite hindrance to their accomplishments. It is more important to put heart into one's work, whatever one is doing, than merely to put time at it. Time is never a substitute for accomplishment. One cannot truly put his mind on his work unless his heart is in it also.

The Christian philosophy is that life has its richest meaning and its brightest prospect for those who make their everyday work as worship unto God, doing their daily tasks "as unto the Lord," putting their mind and heart, their enthusiasm, into their work.

The world has a right to expect superior service from the Christian laborer, the Christian teacher, the Christian physician, the Christian banker, the Christian salesman, the Christian clerk, the Christian attorney, the Christian soldier, the Christian statesman, the Christian servant, and from Christians in every other line of human service, because Christians are dedicated to the proposition of living their lives and doing their work "heartily (enthusiastically) as unto the Lord."

To be half-hearted means to be half-happy. The person who has lost his enthusiasm has two strikes registered against him at the very beginning of anything he attempts. People to whom life appears to be but a dead-end street, people for whom life seems to be decked in a mournful grey, people who are discouraged or defeated, need to pray to God to give them back their enthusiasm for life. And we all need to guard well our enthusiasm for life, for the truth, for the right, for the beautiful, for progress and for God as we would guard life itself; for life is meaningless and without either purpose or prospect when enthusiasm dies within the soul.

LET US PRAY

I thank thee, O Father, for the talents which Thou hast given into my keeping. To some Thou hast given more than to me, to others less. But thou askest of me only that I be faithful. May I use my talents with pride in the work for which they are best fitted, caring only to hear Thee say, Well done, good and faithful servant. Amen.

Here And There Among The Churches

Larry Smith, who wrote the sermon used in this issue, is a senior ministerial student at Elon College.

A special Thanksgiving service was held at Pleasant Hill, Liberty, North Carolina, Wednesday evening with the senior choir, junior high choir and teen-age choral group providing music.

Rev. Carl Wallace of Southern Pines was the guest speaker for revival services at Mt. Pleasant Congregational Christian Church the first week in October. The pastor is Rev. Ronald Nickols.

We are indebted to Congregational Iowa for the article used on the back page of this issue. Editor-in-Chief of that conference paper is Dr. Judson Fiebiger, son-in-law of the late Dr. Warren H. Denison, once pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk.

Breakfast was provided by the deacons of First, Portsmouth, preceding Thanksgiving morning service at 8:30. A lay member, Mack W. Cherry, conducted the morning service last Sunday in the absence of the minister, Rev. Daniel A. Bowers.

Rev. Don Leonard, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed church in Asheboro, was guest speaker for the annual Thanksgiving Service at Pleasant Ridge church, near Ramseur. Scripture readings were given by Roy H. Lowdermilk, Jr., Theodore Cox, Page Craven and H. V. Cox, Jr. J. C. Newell led in the symbolic act of thanksgiving. "Because of Thy Great Bounty" was the solo sung by Mrs. S. H. Pell. Miss Velma Allen was organist.

The Wilkins Kindergarten Choir sang "Bless This House" as part of the Thanksgiving service of worship at Union Ridge church, near Burlington, November 19.

Women's Fellowship Sunday was observed November 5 at Pleasant Hill, Liberty, with messages by Mrs. Ruth Aiken, Mrs. J. C. Euliss and Mrs. R. S. Askew, the minister's wife. A second circle of the Women's Fellowship was formed November 17 by members of a young women's class.

Remember to plan for the annual Christmas Offering for the Veterans of the Cross (retired and disabled ministers and their wives). This is used for an "extra" in time of special need for these worthy servants of God. It should be sent to the Convention Office marked "Christmas Fund."

Christmas is fast coming upon us. What kind of Christmas will you have this year? Will it be an "Xmas?" "X" in math means the unknown. Is Christ an unknown to you? If so, you will have an "Xmas," and if not, a CHRISTMAS. — Beulah Bulletin

Wood's and Wissler's Chapels in the Valley of Virginia had a joint Women's Fellowship Sunday service November 26 with the theme "Stewardship of Time, Talent, and Money." Women sharing in the program included Mrs. Sylvia Shirkey, Mrs. Nina Wills, Mrs. Ruby Green, Mrs. Florence Day, Mrs. Gladys Litten, and Mrs. Anne Leebrick, the minister's wife. Pianist was Mrs. Dale Kipps. Guest speaker was Rev. Philip Senft, pastor of Timberville E. and R. Church.

Rev. Carl Landes, race relations consultant for the United Church of Christ in this area, now has his office in the Talbert Building, 5721 Friendly Road, Room 203, four blocks from his home at 5605 Oak Street, Guilford College, North Carolina. His mailing address is Box 8112, Greensboro.

Radio programs on World Council of Churches: ABC Network, 9:00-9:30 p.m., each Sunday through December 31. NBC-TV will broadcast a special program on the World Council 10:00-10:30 a.m. December 10 (at time regularly held by Lamp Unto My Feet).

The Advent series of sermon topics for Rev. Carl Wallace at Southern Pines has as its theme "God's Gift Through Christ." Sunday topics are: The Gift of Understanding, The Gift of an Ideal, The Gift of a Book, The Gift of a Spirit, and The Gift of a Saviour.

A general assembly of the church school at First, Durham, was held November 19. A thanksgiving program entitled "Singing Hymns of Praise" was given by representatives from all departments in family groups. Thanksgiving day service was held at 10:00 a.m.

See "The Star of Bethlehem" at the Morehead Planetarium, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, between now and January 8. The reverent pageant tells the story of the birth of Jesus. It may be seen every evening at 8:30 and at matinees on Saturdays at 11:00 a.m., 3:00 and 4:00 p.m. and on Sundays at 2:00, 3:00 and 4:00 p.m. The Planetarium will be closed December 25 and 26.

GOOD BOOKS TO READ AND GIVE

Two recent books by Dr. Fred Field Goodsell about the world missionary enterprise of our denomination are of value for ministers and lay people alike.

YOU SHALL BE MY WITNESSES gives "an interpretation of the history" of The American Board from 1810 to 1960. Out of 55 years of identification with the Board, plus extensive research, Dr. Goodsell tells in an interesting manner about the beginnings, the changes, and the ideals of our mission board. Cost: $1.50 in paperback or $3.00 in the hardcover edition.

THEY LIVED THEIR FAITH is an entirely different kind of book for it is "an almanac of faith, hope and love," which gives for each day in the year a story about some missionary of our faith and order. Daily reading of these sketches would give one a real picture of the missionaries' lives down through the years. Cost: $2.50 in the paperback or $5.50 in the hardcover edition.

Both books may be ordered from: United Church Board for World Ministries, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts. They would make fine Christmas gifts for church friends or to the church library. Many in this area remember Dr. Goodsell, who served for years as executive vice president of The American Board, and who taught at the School of Missions several years ago.

Readers of The Christian Sun will be interested to know that Dr. Nathanael M. Guptill, who visited the fall Conferences, is the author of "Contemporary Prayers for the Christian Year," published by Christian Education Press, Philadelphia, Pa.

This book of pastoral prayers selling for $2.50 would make an ideal gift to a minister, a Sunday School teacher, or a leader of public worship. The prayers were offered as a part of the Sunday service in a church served by Dr. Guptill.

The prayers contained in this book are rooted in the faith of our fathers and often use familiar Biblical language. The prayers are contemporary in mood and content. They follow the calendar of the Christian year with additional prayers for special occasions. A full table of contents makes it easy to find the prayer desired.

SUCCESSFUL CANVASS AT DURHAM

Our Durham church reports enthusiastically about the every member canvass which had a dual purpose this year: Pledges for purchase of land for a new site for this downtown church, and pledges to the regular budget. Thursday, November 9, a large group met for training session for canvassers; hostesses planned a "kick-off" meeting on Friday, with 95 people in attendance to hear Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, enjoy dessert, coffee and fellowship; Saturday another training session for canvassers. Sunday they were commissioned around the communion table. Following lunch together they made their pledges — the canvass chairman, Guy E. Alling, hoped for $13,000 from these 32 men and their families, and the total was $17,500! Total pledges reported in news letter: $20,000 for budget and $20,900 for land fund. The pastor, Rev. W. T. Scott, Jr. was really able to preach a thanksgiving sermon!

Mr. Howard White, city editor of the Daily Times News in Burlington, and an active E. and R. layman, was the speaker for the annual banquet of the Loyal Men's Bible Class of First Christian, Burlington, December 1.

"Voices of Christmas," eight choral concerts of Christmas music, will be heard over the NBC radio network December 14-24. All concerts are 10:05 - 10:30 p.m. The Elizabethan Madrigal Singers of the University College of Wales — December 14; St. Kilian Boychoir — December 15; Temple Church Choir of London — December 18; N. Y. University Glee Club — December 19. Other groups will be heard December 20, 21, 22 and 24.

Dr. Alford Carleton, executive vice president of the United Church Board for World Ministries, was the only representative of the West to give one of the Mott Lectures at the 1961 East Asia Christian Conference held November 8-11 at Bangalore, India. Dr. Masao Takenaka (who was aided in graduate study in the United States by the Anthony Fund of First Church, Greensboro) of Doshisha University gave another of the lectures and the third was by U Kyaw Than, outstanding Christian layman of Burma.

STATISTICS SHOW THAT A CHURCH PAPER PAYS

Think of This When Making Your Budget

The Sandy Run Association has taken a close look at its stewardship record and the information revealed in the survey points up once again the value of the "Biblical Recorder" in achieving worthy goals.

The following 10 churches were the highest in per capita gifts through the Cooperative Program last year: Forest City First Church, Cliffside, Spencer, Caroleen, Temple, Haynes Memorial, Florence, Chase, Sulphur Springs and Sandy Run.

Everyone of these 10 churches has a strong "Biblical Recorder" club, with four of them sending the "Recorder" to every family. First Church, Forest City, leader in the association with $23.75 per member to the Cooperative Program, has had the Every-Family Club for years.

Now a look at the other side: Among the churches reporting no gifts to the Cooperative Program last year, almost invariably there were no "Recorder" clubs in them.

To economy-minded budget committees which sometimes like to cut the "Recorder" out of the budget, we submit the Sandy Run Story for their consideration. The "Recorder" doesn't cost, it pays. —Biblical Recorder

NEW MEMBERS OF WORLD COUNCIL

Twenty-three churches were voted into membership in the World Council of Churches when it met in New Delhi — 18 Protestant, four Orthodox and one Anglican. Two of these are Congregational groups: The Bantu Congregational Church in South Africa with 12,000 members and The Congregational Christian Church in Samoa with 67,735 members.

Largest of the groups was the Orthodox Church of Russia. Although its exact membership is not known, it reports 30,000 priests and 20,000 parishes with more than 25,000,000 members. Another new member, the Rumanian Orthodox Church, has 13,000,000. Largest member previously was The Methodist Church of the United States, with about 10,000,000 members.

Eleven of the new church bodies are located in Africa. Two Pentecostal groups from Chile are the first from that tradition to join the World Council.

WHAT
YOU THINK?

How big is your town? We do not mean its area in feet or miles or blocks. We do not mean the number of men, women and children. We do not mean the number of houses or the miles of paved streets and sidewalks. We mean, is your town big in heart, and if so, how big? We mean is your town big in purpose, and if so, how big? We mean is your town big in ideals, and if so, how big and how compelling are those ideals? We mean is your town big enough to protect the weak, the innocent and the helpless? Is your town big enough in thought and purpose and motive to have adequate churches, good ministers, and good schools, and all other things that elevate and educate? How big is your town? Give the answer without using the dollar sign.

What Have We To Offer?

Many members of the Southern Convention are asking about the next steps in making the United Church of Christ effective in our area. This was a major consideration in a meeting at Suffolk, Virginia, on Thursday of last week when leaders of that Conference and of the Convention met to discuss a proposal that Virginia churches join in a conference composed of our churches in Washington, D. C. and Maryland.

It seems wise to your editor for us to think a bit about what we have to offer in any merger. Back in the days when marriages were really for life in America, and in many countries yet, a bride approached marriage with a dowry. Her father saw to it that she had something valuable to give to the new family. Such a custom has its values.

What do we of the Southern Convention have that we can present to the new United Church Family? Here are some things that may have value.

We have a century old convention organization. It is a representative government, very much like the new Church is to be. The convention is composed of delegates from the conferences. It is a strong organization, and has called itself Church. It owns property, directs programs of activity, and passes suggestions on to conferences and churches. Conference is also a delegated body, with representatives coming from local churches. It maintains standards for the ministry by licensing and ordaining ministers. It can hold property, and does have a vested interest in all church property. Churches are autonomous bodies, owning their property, calling their ministers, making their budgets, planning their programs, and serving wherever and in such ways as they may determine. Because they are members of the larger groups by their own vote, it is customary for local churches to cooperate to the best of their ability in whatever may be decided by Conference and Convention.

We own property of considerable value. Elon College, the Home for Children, Moonelon, and at least two parsonages belong to the Convention. More than 200 church buildings and not quite so many parsonages are owned by the churches, and are worth more than $12,000,000. The Mission Board owns some property, and handles thousands of dollars annually. The Board of Christian Education has some property and directs a program of service. The Board of Publications owns a little property, and publishes the only weekly newspaper in the denomination. Add to the above the annual contributions by the churches for benevolences amounting to $275,000 and the $1,100,000 raised for their own expenses, and the amount of money involved is impressive. We are not rich, but we have some wealth.

We have some ideas. Since 1794 we have believed that Christian character is an adequate test for church membership. Congregationalists in our midst have a rich English heritage that goes back to the Mayflower, a little sailing ship that brought believers in the Bible and the freedom of its interpretation to American shores in 1620. James O'Kelly, founder of the Christian Church in North Carolina and Virginia, insisted that slaves should be freed long before the Civil War ended that debate by bloodshed. It is not strange, therefore, that the black and white people worshipped together in church just as they worked together in home and field. Independent people always want things of their own. So, the freed slaves built their own churches. Many years have strengthened this custom — so long that some of us may forget that it has not always been thus. Now that the BIG idea in the Church World is the UNION of the followers of Christ, we are having to reconsider the divisions that follow racial lines. (Sometime we may give more thought to the cultural divisions, and try to understand why the poor and ignorant are separated from the affluent and educated.) In the field of cooperation there appears to be a rapidly growing number who are willing, or anxious, for the dividing walls to suffer the same fate as the "curtain of the temple" did that eventful afternoon when Jesus of Nazareth cried out from a cross. In many fields of Churchmanship members of our Convention are versed, and are willing to give of their consecrated best.

Our history, wealth, and ideas are not sufficient to make us oppressively proud, or inflexible. We can rightfully pray for forgiveness for the things that we ought to have done and failed to do. However, our dower is sufficient for us to stand before an altar, or kneel before the Christ, and offer to share the future with our neighbors and fellow-churchmen, some of whom are Congregational Christian of the African heritage, and others are Evangelical and Reformed with a German heritage.

Let the ceremonies proceed. Old things pass away, and, behold, all things become new. So let it be, now, and henceforth. Wipe away the tears, if any; forget your fears; rejoice in the past that is fragrant, and in the hope of a future that is sublime.

About * * *

A BELL THAT IS MORE THAN A BELL

There are many places in the United States where tourists and others can see things that are intimately associated with the history of the United States, but one place quickens the spirit of nationalism more than any other.

That place is Independence Hall, Philadelphia, where more than a million visitors pass through its doors every year. They come from every State of the Union and many foreign lands. More than 100,000 of these visitors are school children. The principal thing they come to see is the famous Liberty Bell.

If looked at coldly, it is only an old bell, and not a handsomely made bell at that. Certainly not with a crack in it, but the American people do not look at the famous old bell with a spirit of coldness. Indeed, to them it is not only a bell but a symbol of this country's political freedom and national independence. When the old bell is viewed in this light it becomes as warm as the patriotic heart, and is looked upon with peculiar and understandable reverence.

Retired from active duty many decades ago, the famous old Liberty Bell is mounted on a pedestal, but visitors are permitted to touch it. Many not only do, especially school children, but some others stand or kneel in silent prayer because the bell to them represents a part of their heritage which carries no price tag.

There are many legends about the Liberty Bell that have little in common with true history. Consider one of these legends: That on July 4, 1776, when the signers of the Declaration of Independence had finished placing their names on the document, it was printed, and on July 8 it was read from the observatory platform to the accompaniment of ringing the Liberty Bell and many church bells in Philadelphia. Signing of the great document did not begin until August 2.

On July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was approved and a small boy ran out to tell the bellman, who in turn yanked the bell rope so hard that the bell cracked.

The story is colorful, but the facts are that the first bell was cracked in 1772 when its tone was being tested in a London, England, bell foundry. The bell was recast and found defective, and again recast. The third bell was hung in Pennsylvania State House, now Independence Hall, in 1773. This third bell is what all true Americans look upon not only as a bell but a symbol.

The Liberty Bell was rung on every anniversary of the event and did not acquire its present crack until July 8, 1835. That was the occasion when the body of retired Chief Justice John Marshall was being removed from his Philadelphia home where he died the day before for burial in his native Virginia.

On a bronze plaque on Independence Hall visitors may read: "Here the Continental Congress sat . . . here George Washington accepted his appointment as General of the Continental Army . . . here the Declaration of Independence was signed."

As visitors read these lines silently and reverently they know that the Liberty Bell is not a mere bell but a symbol of their heritage, which is something to be cherished when freedom is under attack throughout the world.

"Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God, our King!" •

CAN YOU REMEMBER?

Can you remember when you could buy a cup of coffee for a nickel — when you could ride on a streetcar for a nickel, or go to a movie for a dime? Can you remember back that far? Apparently many in our churches can, for that is the basis of their giving to the Church.

Salaries today are much, much higher. Utilities have increased many fold. The cost of materials has spiraled. Every time your church purchases materials or services, the cost increases.

We can no longer go to the theatre for much less than a dollar, a dollar bill will barely buy a lunch, but not a dinner. Yet we consider a dollar an appropriate amount to meet our responsibility to our church for a whole week!

How long is it since you gave serious thought to the amount of your church subscription in terms of the increased costs of its services, or in relationship to the other expenditures you make? —Voice of the Temple

THE WISDOM OF ADVENT

Stanley U. North

The three wise men of the Nativity narratives are referred to in the much beloved Christmas carol as kings. And they may well have been. But if so, they are remembered not for their royalty but for their wisdom — evidence of which Matthew records in their question, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him." By some they are referred to as astrologers. And perhaps they were. But of this there need be no doubt: they were seekers after truth. In this was their wisdom. And how great was their reward!

We will never be kings. Astrology is discredited. We have no star to guide us. But we do have Advent to remind us that Christ's day is approaching. And we can be seekers after truth, even as were those ancient seers. We shall be very wise, indeed, to prepare ourselves lest peripheral concerns, not Herod, prevent us from discovering the meaning for our lives of the Christ Child who became the Saviour of the World.

"GET BACK TO FUNDAMENTALS"

The more I ponder the current world crisis, the more convinced I am that we must get back to the fundamentals and renew our faith; our faith in the great principles upon which our republic was established; our faith in the rightness of the democratic process; our faith that patience and goodwill, coupled with a firm resolve not to betray principle, is better than chauvinistic belligerence; above all, for those of us who call ourselves Christians, our faith in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This last, of course, must be evidenced by more than sanctimonious statements of piety. Anyone who thinks those will suffice does not know Jesus! — Morton R. Kurtz, Director, N. C. Council of Churches.

How Far Is It To Church?

D. Larry Smith, Pastor
Carolina United Church of Christ

"God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." John 4:24

Meeting a member in my former charge who had been absent from the church services, I said, "God morning, I have greatly missed your attending church." He answered, "We live so far away, and I have found that it is just too far for me to attend regularly." I inquired where he was employed, and when he answered, I called his attention to the fact that it was farther to his place of business than to the church. He merely replied, "Well, that's different."

Since then I have wondered just how it is different. Six days a week he travels a long distance to his work and then on Sunday it is too far to go a lesser distance to church. It is different in that lack of interest and failure to realize its importance make the journey to church farther than to his work.

"How far is it to church?" I recently asked a member of a local church who has to travel several miles to worship. "Oh," he answered, "it isn't very far for us. We love to go."

It was certainly not far for the early Christians who from all parts of Rome gathered in the dark shelters to worship and to fellowship together. Yet today we have those who search for reasons to escape their lack of spirit in this thing called Christian work and fellowship.

The spirit of the thing measures the distance. Hear the pilgrims from afar and the apostles in the upper room and the early Christians in the underground caves adding their voices to millions of other Christians of vanished generations and to ours in the song: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."

One reason many people offer for not attending church is that they cannot find the Lord in this structure of stone, wood, and mortar. I think in many cases this reason does hold some truth. Many of our churches have lost, in the consuming force of social function, the blessed value of the Holy Spirit. We should realize that the only fit temple for God is man's complete and total self. The Bible describes the Christian as "The temple of the Holy Spirit." The real structure of the church is the life of its members: She is the union of "many members in one body."

I'm sure with little searching we can all find many excuses for not attending our nearest place of worship. There is without doubt much fault in the church. The church is not perfect, but where does the fault lie? For those who are sincere and devout Christians, I need not answer this question. But for those who wish to sit back and criticize unconstructively, the fault finds a home.

Oliver Wendell Holmes once said, "I am a regular churchgoer. I find pleasure in the midst of devout worshippers. In the corner of my heart is a little plant called reverence which wants to be watered weekly." When we enter God's house in sincere worship, God puts the best into us.

No, it is not very far for the person who is glad to come. Any distance is too far for the man who comes in body and leaves the spirit at home. It is likely, at any time, to become too far for him who comes only in the formal way. "God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

Let us all worship God on our day of worship. And in worshipping him in his house, let us each be able to say: There my soul breathes in the heavenly atmosphere. There I fellowship with him and feel the power of his spirit moving toward a more complete life. There my faith is renewed, and reverence for the beauty of life becomes embedded in all that I speak or do. There the spirit of worship is nourished so that I can worship in my home and wherever I may go.

Ah! Let me enter into the house of the Lord, for there I can hear God's voice in Word, sacrament, prayer, message, and song. There my spirit is drawn to the Lamb of God. There my soul bursts in new expression, budding with joys of new and unknown things to come. —Burlington Times-News

TRPM In WNC Conference

By Rev. Thomas F. Liverman, Jr.

There were eight churches participating with a total of 13 ministers and missionaries involved. The Rally opened on Sunday night at Ramseur with a record attendance of 481 inside the building and approximately 50 or more outside the church (this figure was an actual count by the ushers). The rural churches, particularly, were deeply impressed and greatly inspired by the message that was brought that evening by the Reverend Robert Happel of the Office of Evangelism of the United Church. This speaks well because of the fact of some skepticism that existed in the minds of these people in regard to the United Church. According to the report from each of the churches every church involved was blessed with good attendance and a definite renewal of spirit and desire to further the cause of Christ. There is no doubt in my mind that this was brought about largely because of the consecrated and concentrated efforts required of the laity to make this program a success.

Another important contribution to the success of this program was the leadership furnished by the Regional Director. Our Regional Director was the Reverend Louis F. Sudemeyer of Baltimore, Maryland. Dr. Sudemeyer led the missionaries and ministers in fruitful Bible study, discussion and devotions each morning from 9:30 until 12:30. It was during these periods that we ministers were given the opportunity to strengthen ourselves through study and prayer.

There might not be any great surge in numbers at our churches because of this mission, but it is without doubt that the effect of this program will be felt for many months to come in all the participating churches. It is the hope of many of us that such a program will occur again during the Spring of 1963 in this Conference.

It was a pleasure to serve in this work and to be connected with the wonderful brethren of the E. and R. branch of our denomination. My thanks go also to the office of Evangelism of the United Church of Christ for their contribution in the strengthening of the spiritual life of not only our church but also for the help that we as ministers received from participating in this wonderful effort. This report is not complete in every detail because words cannot express what was felt in our Conference during the week of the T.R.P.M. program. The closest that I can come to describing what has happened is simply by saying, "My cup runneth over."

Universal Bible Sunday — December 10

A Sunday to give special attention to the Bible was first suggested in 1549 when Bishop Cranmer wrote a Collect to be used in the first Prayer Book of King Edward VI, which read,

"Blessed Lord who hast caused all Holy Scriptures to be written for our learning; Grant that we may in such wise hear them, read, mark, learn and inwardly digest them that by patience and comfort of Thy Holy Word, we may embrace, and even hold fast the blessed hope of everlasting life, which Thou hast given us in our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen."

The American Bible Society advocated a special Bible day as early as 1900 when a conference of the representatives of the Bible Society and its auxiliaries passed the following resolution, "Resolved that the auxiliary Societies should endeavor to induce all the churches in their territory to devote one service in the year to the presentation of the Bible cause and that the closest relations between the churches and the Bible Societies should be fostered by every practical means."

In 1915 the Panama-Pacific Exposition was held in San Francisco and a part of the program was a World's Bible Congress, August 1-4. That same year an official call was issued to the churches of America which read, "The Centennial committee of the American Bible Society requests all Christian ministers and congregations throughout the United States to recognize the beginning of its Centennial celebration by the observance of a Universal Bible Sunday, December 5, 1915."

One year later the following report was made, "A year ago, friends of the Bible were invited to inaugurate the celebration of a centennial of the American Bible Society on Universal Bible Sunday, December 5, 1915. Now again, on Universal Bible Sunday, December 10th, 1916, they are invited to participate in the close of this year's celebration.

"The aim throughout the year has been the exaltation of the Word of God. The celebrations have been most encouraging. Great official and union meetings have been held in such national capitols as Washington, Buenos Aires, Tokyo, Peiking, Bangkok and Cairo. In the great cities of the United States from the east to the west, from the north to the south and in foreign cities like Honolulu, Yokohama, and Seoul, great and high tribute was paid to the Bible and the Bible Society by notable speakers such as the President and the Vice-President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Bishops and leading ministers of practically all Protestant churches, jurists, publicists and professional men. Thousands upon thousands of celebrations by churches, Sunday schools, auxiliaries, colleges and seminaries have aroused interest in and sympathetic appreciation of the great work of the American Bible Society in providing and circulating the Scriptures."

The following year, 1917, President Woodrow Wilson wrote to the Executive Secretary of the Bible Society, "...I take pleasure in writing to say that the setting apart of a Universal Bible Week and Bible Sunday and the designation of Sunday, December 9th, as the day upon which the work shall receive its emphasis, meets with my very cordial approval."

Thus, the practice of celebrating the second Sunday in Advent as Bible Sunday became established. Sometimes the second Sunday in Advent was the first Sunday in December and sometimes the second Sunday. Gradually the second Sunday in December became the officially recognized day. This was a problem, however, for the liturgical churches because of the difference in the church calendar during certain years.

The emphasis on Universal Bible Week, however, enables every church, liturgical and non-liturgical, to celebrate a day that will fit into their church's program. For the past eighteen years this day or week has been the high point of the Worldwide Bible Reading program from Thanksgiving to Christmas.

Bible Sunday, therefore, has been a recognized observance of the Protestant churches of America for 60 years in one form or another, and Universal Bible Week for 44 years during the first part of December, receiving official recognition from the President of the United States on various occasions and regularly during the past 17 years.

LIST OF DAILY READINGS OFFERED BY BIBLE SOCIETY

An inexpensive program of daily Bible readings is offered to churches and individuals by the American Bible Society.

Copies of the Society's 1962 Daily Bible Reading schedule are now available at 2¢ each or 60¢ per hundred. The Society will send a single copy free to everyone who requests it.

The schedule is printed in convenient bookmark form and features a two-color reproduction of the Society's newest Worldwide Bible Reading poster.

A passage from the Bible is suggested for each day throughout the year. Special readings are listed for Lent, Ascension Day, Mother's Day, Pentecost, Independence Day, Thanksgiving, Advent, Universal Bible Sunday and Christmas. Other readings cover the entire Book of Luke and Acts.

The address of the American Bible Society is 450 Park Avenue, New York 22, New York.

BIBLE CATALOG FREE

Complete Bibles for as little as 90¢ each, New Testaments for 18¢ and Gospels for only 3¢ each are offered in a new 32-page illustrated catalog issued by the American Bible Society.

Because the Society's Scriptures are intended primarily for evangelistic and missionary use, they are not luxury editions such as can be obtained from denominational publishing houses and retail booksellers. Nevertheless, they are printed in clear type on good quality paper and are substantially bound.

The Society's sole purpose is to achieve the widest possible circulation of the Scriptures, so prices are set below the actual cost of production and distribution. In 1960, the Society distributed more than 23,000,000 Bibles, Testaments, and Portions.

The new catalog also lists literature, motion pictures, filmstrips, posters and exhibits the Society has produced for use by the churches. They include Bible-reading helps as well as materials about the history of the English Bible and about the Society's own worldwide program of translation, publication, distribution and encouragement of use.

A copy of the catalog will be sent free on request to the American Bible Society, 450 Park Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

Twine; Co-Chairman, Mrs. Otha Ayscue; Christian Education Chairman, Mrs. Robert Marshall; Evangelism & Spiritual Life Chairman, Mrs. W. W. Dew; Missionary Education Chairman, Mrs. P. W. Swisher; Christian Social Action Chairman, Mrs. Robert Holland; Friendly Service, Mrs. Claude B. Gore; Co-Chairman, Mrs. Winston Creech; Hospitality, Mrs. A. V. Pearce; Co-Chairman, Mrs. Danial Grant; Pianist, Mrs. T. A. Cross.

To offer leadership opportunities to a larger number of ladies the Fellowship was divided into two circles. Mrs. James Twine and Mrs. Bernard Jester will serve as Circle Chairman.

A budget of $620.00 was adopted by the Fellowship for the year 1962.

Besides an increase in Conference Apportionment new items added to the budget were scholarship aid to Moonelon, and Church School supplies.

Mrs. W. L. Crutcher, Mrs. Bernerd Jester, and Mrs. Ronald Stephens were delegates to the Eastern Virginia Conference of Women's Fellowship.

NEW WORKER ELECTED

Vernon H. Branneky of 14 Thorpe Road, Needham Heights, Massachusetts, has been elected controller of the United Church Board for World Ministries. Mr. Branneky, who joined the mission board's treasury department a year ago, formerly lived in Florissant, Missouri.

The United Church Board for World Ministries, which has an annual budget of more than six million dollars, represents the work of more than 500 missionaries in 25 countries. They work with some 16,000 nationals in 1200 schools and colleges, 80 hospital clinics, 3000 churches, and 35 social service centers.

NEW ASSISTANT TO PRESIDENT OF UNITED CHURCH

Dr. Ben M. Herbster, president of the United Church of Christ, has announced the appointment of Dr. Robert F. R. Peters, Cleveland, Ohio, as assistant to the president. He will take office in New York City January 1.

Dr. Peters, from the "Christian" side of the Congregational Christian Church, a graduate of Defiance College and Yale Divinity School, has been pastor of East Cleveland Congregational Church since 1958. He also served churches in Sandusky, Ohio, Bridgeport and Stony Creek, Connecticut.

A former moderator of the Ohio Conference, he is currently serving as president of the East Cleveland Ministerial Association, a member of the committee on conference organization of the United Church, and co-chairman of the committee on union for the greater Cleveland area.

LAY PEOPLE LEAD SERVICES

Mrs. E. H. Thompson

Laymen's Day was observed at Apples Chapel Sunday, October 15, with the laymen having the whole service. Monty Busick played the organ and the choir was composed of men only. The speakers were Lloyd Chrismon, Percy Price, and J. W. Busick. They used the subject "You Shall Be My Witness." Other men took part in the service.

The ladies had the whole service November 19. The women of the Women's Fellowship sponsored the service and several women took part. The members of the Women's Fellowship dedicated their special gifts, and a general offering was taken for missions. The main speakers were Mrs. Bessie Apple, Mrs. Nannie Pritchett, and Mrs. Ann Oliver. "Creating and Renewing the Church" was the subject discussed.

A Litany For Advent

By Richard K. Morton

As in the fullness of time Thy Word became flesh and the Spirit of the Most High came to dwell among men,

Be born in us today, O Spirit of God!

As Thou hast revealed Thyself in ages past through warriors, kings, prophets, teachers, and many others,

Be born in us today, O Spirit of God!

As Thou hast spoken in great literature and made Thyself known in the councils of men, as they have given voice to Thy truth,

Be born in us today, O Spirit of God!

As Thou hast moved many to reveal the gifts within them and to express some measure of Thy loving plan,

Be born in us today, O Spirit of God!

As Thou hast shown that Thou art a loving and revealing God, ready to save and ready to answer those who call upon Thy Name,

Be born in us today, O Spirit of God!

Through the power that brought Thy life incarnate to us through Thy Son,
Give us the power to become Thy sons, we pray.

Through the love that opened up a way of saving grace,
Give us the love to become Thy faithful disciples, willing to sacrifice for what is eternal, we pray.

Through the will to labor for Thy kingdom and to make manifest upon the earth the teachings of eternal life,
Give us the mind to build Thy kingdom, we pray.

Through the faith that sees beyond the present goals and looks for the deeper rewards of living,
Give us the courage to work to embody His way in the plans and methods of our day, we pray.

Through the understanding of spiritual truth and the insight into things eternal and of supreme worth,

Give us a part in making incarnate Thy grace, Thy power, Thy love, Thy forgiveness, Thy great goodness, we pray. Amen.

THOMASES IN INDIA

Rev. and Mrs. G. Ross Thomas, missionaries of our Church in India (who were listed in the Calendar of Prayer recently) have been in Nagpur at the National Christian Council headquarters since September in order to help with plans for the World Council of Churches meeting in New Delhi. He is responsible for raising the funds in India for the Indian Church's share in the expenses and to arrange visits to various parts of India for the delegates. Mrs. Ross is heading the National Christian Council's Committee on the Welfare of the Handicapped while its Secretary is on furlough. This committee has set up a training course for teachers for the blind.

A film strip, made with pictures Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have taken and with a tape-recorded commentary by them on the work of our Marathi Mission is available for rental fee of $1.00 from the Film Library of the United Church of Christ, 1720 Chouteau Ave., St. Louis 3, Missouri. The name of the filmstrip is "The Church At Work in Western India."

In a recent letter the Thomases tell of a visit to a mountain village where some of the 30,000 Tibetan refugees live. They met one man plodding up a steep path with a 100 pound sack of rice labelled "Houston, Texas." This help comes through Church World Service. The World Council of Churches is providing treatment and care for more than 225 Tibetan tuberculosis patients.

PIONEER MISSIONARIES DIE

Mrs. Helen Goodrich (George) Rowland, a Congregational Christian missionary in Japan for 44 years, died November 4 at the age of 93. Dr. and Mrs. Rowland sailed as newlyweds to go as evangelistic missionaries to Honshu, Japan. After nine years there they served 28 years on Hokkaido Island, making their headquarters at Sapparo.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sheffield Stelle, widow of Rev. William Stelle, died November 5. She was born in China where her parents did pioneer educational work. After graduating from Oberlin and a kindergarten training school, she went to China to teach in 1899. She published a book of songs for kindergarten and primary use in China.

Both had been residents of the Walker Missionary Home, Auburn-dale, Massachusetts for many years.

A LAYMAN WINS CONVERTS

In June 1958, Mr. Aniano Salibo, a lay evangelist of the United Church of Christ in the Philippines, hiked the rugged mountain trail to reach a village of the Manobo tribe in the central part of the island of Mindanao, to preach the Good News of the Christian Gospel. Mr. Salibo made the trip weekly to reach the village of Kitobo and its inhabitants.

One year later, when an ordained pastor was able to visit the village, more than eighty adults were baptized into the Christian faith. At the service of baptism the village chief, called a Datu, spoke to the new Christians saying that he would not be baptized unless he saw that the Christian faith made a difference in their daily lives. Two months later the Datu, along with several others, received baptism.

Today, less than two years from the first preaching of the Gospel in Kitobo, there are more than 100 Christians, and every family in the village is a part of the Church. In almost every valley in the mountains there are similar villages waiting for the Gospel. We lack Christian workers to reach the remote places.

This is part of Our Christian World Mission, your mission and mine.

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

ATTENTION—TEENAGERS

What Can We Do?

GROW UP AND GO HOME

This message is hard-hitting and brutally frank and possibly some people will not agree with it, but it certainly deserves consideration and serious thought. Always we hear the plaintive cry of the teenager: "What can we DO? Where can we GO?" The answer is, "GO HOME." Hang the storm windows, paint the woodwork, rake the leaves, mow the lawn, shovel the walk, wash the car, learn to cook, scrub the floor, repair the sink, build a boat, get a job. Help the minister, visit the sick, assist the poor, study your lessons. And then when you are through, and not too tired, read a book.

Your parents do not owe you entertainment. Your city or village does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and talents so that no one will be at war or in poverty or lonely or sick. In plain simple words, GROW UP! quit being a cry-baby. Get out of your dream world and develop a backbone, not a wishbone, and start acting like a man or a lady. You're supposed to be mature enough to accept some of the responsibility your parents have carried for years.

GROW UP AND GO HOME!

No doubt there are many who will disagree with this advice. As a Christian teenager, how would you reply to this? Does this apply to your gang? What do you think? We would like very much to have comment on this from our young people.

"Remember Now Thy Creator In The Days Of Thy Youth."

GREATER UNION TO BE STUDIED

United Church to Begin Talks With Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, and Methodist Denominations.

New York City, November 10 — The United Church of Christ today accepted an invitation to join in exploratory conversations toward union with the Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal and Methodist denominations.

The Rev. Dr. Ben M. Herbster, New York City, president, announced the United Church would be represented by a delegation of nine at a conference scheduled for April 9 and 10 in Washington, D. C.

In a letter to the Rev. Dr. Charles D. Kean, Washington, D. C., secretary of the Commission on Approaches to Unity of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Dr. Herbster agreed to begin formal conversations "exploring the establishment of a united church — truly Catholic, truly Reformed and truly Evangelical."

The invitation was extended by the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., represented by the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, Stated Clerk, and the Rev. James I. McCord, chairman of its Committee of Nine; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, represented by the Rt. Rev. Robert F. Gibson, Jr., chairman of the Commission on Approaches to Unity, and Dr. Kean.

Dr. Herbster appointed the Rev. Dr. David G. Colwell, minister of First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., to represent the United Church of Christ on a preliminary committee to plan the agenda for the conference. Dr. Colwell is chairman of the denomination's Commission on Christian Unity and Ecumenical Study and Service.

HISTORY OF LONG'S CHAPEL WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP

September 1, 1960 to August 31, 1961

Officers for the year 1960-1961 were Ethel Rudd, president; Sarah Faulkner, vice president; Billy Murphy, secretary treasurer; Thelma Fonville, historian; Mrs. B. F. Blanchard, Sr., and Lillian Carey, leaders of spiritual life; Larry Russell and Edith Anderson, directors of Christian education; Lillian Chandler, chairman of friendly service; Daisy Hester, leader in missions; Iris Fonville, chairman of social action;

December 5, 1961

Violet Shaw, leader of stewardship; and Edith Anderson, Larry Russell, Marcia Shepherd and Lillian Carey, group chairmen.

The society gave to Alamance Cancer Society, $28.00 for Thank Offering, cheer baskets to shut-ins at Christmas, purchased coffee urns for church kitchen, served snack suppers to Youth Fellowship every other Sunday, entertained at tea for the new Young Adult Sunday school class, sponsored a fellowship dinner in honor of pastor W. M. Loy, and furnished flowers and cleaned church each week. We attended Women's Convention at Suffolk, World Day of Prayer at Bethel church, Spring Rally at Elon College, and Fall Conference at Pleasant Hill. We led the morning service on Women's Fellowship Day, using the theme: "A Church Woman — She's a Christian." We have used the programs recommended by the Convention Fellowship.

This has been a busy and good year for our Fellowship. The same officers were elected to serve another year.

September 1, 1961 there was 36 members on roll.

During the past year Apportionments were increased from $15.00 to $18.00 per quarter, and the total amount was paid in full.

The four groups raised $370.75 for the building fund, and this was presented to the church August 27.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

THE LORD'S CHOICE

"The Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation."
Psalm 132:13.

God is near to us. God is our Neighbor, in a manner of speaking. "The Lord hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for His habitation." Or read John 1:14: "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth." Or read Rev. 21:3 "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Or read Matt. 1:23 "And they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."

Perhaps you think I have gone far afield. Let us come back to that simple, plain, beautiful line: "The Lord hath chosen Zion." I like that! The beautiful city of Zion! He wants it for his habitation. He will live there!

Let me bring it home to us. In the Old Testament it is Zion, in the New Testament it is the Church. At pentecost the Spirit of God in a very special manner was given the Church. And Jesus, standing as it were, in the very door of the Church, with the disciples about him gathered, said, "Go!" Go preach the Good News of salvation, as you have seen it, heard it, known it in me; and lo I am with you always!

And wherein that has been done, bravely and beautifully across the centuries, the world has been blessed; and wherein we have failed to do that we find the peoples of the earth frustrated and searching for they know not what.

The Lord has chosen Zion. There is your best fall-out shelter, right close up to God in holy obedience and loving service. "He is a Rock in a weary land, a Shelter in the time of storm." It is the Lord's choice, and it came by way of Calvary. Amen.

Elon Students In Who's Who

By Luther N. Byrd

Five Elon College students have been named for a place in the 1961-62 edition of "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," according to an announcement from Prof. Fletcher Moore, dean of the college.

The group of five represents a sharp reduction from the number of Elon students honored in recent years, for twelve were named to the Who's Who group last year and twenty-one were chosen the year before. The reduction is due to tightening academic standards. Three of the five students honored are seniors, while the other two are members of the junior class.

Listed in The Sun last week, a brief biography of each follows:

Thomas Brady, a junior from Raleigh, is majoring in history and is preparing for the ministry. After first attending Campbell College, Brady transferred to Elon last year and is president of the junior class this year. He is also a member and chaplain of the Student Senate, a member of the Student Affairs Committee, the Elon Choir and the Elon Quartet.

Mary Ann Hepner, a senior from Philadelphia, Pa., is a major in history and religious education. She is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, honorary social science fraternity, of which she is secretary this year. She is also a member and treasurer of Pi Kappa Tau sorority, a member and treasurer of the Ministerial Association and a member of the Student Christian Association.

Fred Shull, a senior from Burlington, is president of the senior class this year, and he has served both last year and this as a member of the Student Senate. He is a member of Sigma Mu Sigma fraternity, having served that group as vice president last year and president this year. He is chairman of both the Student Affairs Committee and the Judicial Committee in the Student Government Organization.

Eleanor Smith, a junior from Winston-Salem, is a major in both music and mathematics. She reigned as queen over the recent Homecoming observance. She is secretary-treasurer of the Student Government Organization, a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council, was vice-president of her sophomore class, is a varsity cheerleader, a member of the Student Christian Association, a member of Tau Zeta Phi sorority and assistant editor of the college annual.

Helen Wright, a senior from Greenville, S. C., has been active in many phases of student life. She has served as a member of the Student Senate, as a member and treasurer of the Pan-Hellenic Council, was vice president of her junior class, is a varsity cheerleader, has served as a commencement marshal and as a member of the May Court and as Homecoming sponsor. She is a member of Tau Zeta Phi sorority.

Friends of Dr. W. W. Sloan will be interested to know he plans to conduct another tour to "Lands of the Bible" this summer — June 14 - July 3. There will also be a "round the world extension" returning to New York August 9. Those interested in going on this trip may contact Dr. Sloan at Elon College or Pleasant Travel Service, Burlington, North Carolina.

Thanksgiving And Christmas

By George D. Alley

At Thanksgiving all of us have reason to count our blessings; none lack reason for gratitude; for, despite any trials and difficulties we may have had, or may need to face as we look toward the morrow, we are a people blessed far beyond anything we deserve. The citizens of our nation need only to look at the rest of the world to realize that God has not done for any others so abundantly as for us. But, as we give thanks to Him, let us beware lest we fall into the sin of pride! His goodness to us does not mean that we are better than those less fortunate than ourselves! On the contrary, the accident of our birth, the unlimited opportunities which have been ours because we were born where and when we were... these are things for which we cannot take credit; neither can we really understand them. All we can do is to fall on our knees and give thanks to the One who has done it for us, and then rise from our

MISSIONS COUNCIL CHANGES

The November-December issue of Mission Today is the last issue of that bi-monthly information sheet which has been coming free of charge to all Congregational Christian ministers. It is anticipated that early in 1962 its successor from the Stewardship Council will be published.

Personnel changes listed in Mission Today include Mrs. Dorothy Preble from director of the Speaker's Bureau to the Board of Pastoral Supply, Boston; Porter Bower from the Bureau of Audio-Visual Aids to the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, Honolulu, Hawaii; Miss Lucy Seidler to the treasurer's office, United Church of Christ; and Mrs. Ethel Case to the Board for World Ministries, New York.

With the exception of those on the Women's Fellowship staff, other members of the Missions Council staff are joining the staff of the Stewardship Council, headed by Dr. Sheldon Mackey. This group will have their headquarters at 1505 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Women's Fellowship staff will be retained during an interim year by the Council for Lay Life and Work, as will staffs of The Women's Guild, the Laymen's Fellowship and The Churchmen's Brotherhood.

knees to do all that we can for Him and for our neighbor, whoever and wherever he may be! In our good fortune we can never afford to forget that with privilege goes, always, responsibility. To accept the one and to neglect the other is the same as saying to God that he owes everything to us and that we owe nothing to Him. And, eventually, that which we may have taken for granted is somehow taken from us and is no longer ours to ignore.

In this special time of remembrance of God's goodness and, beyond, as we begin to plan for the celebration of His greatest gift to us in the Christmas season, it will be my prayer that each of us may forget self, join together in mutual love and service through our church, and let God know, through every thought and word and deed, not only of our gratitude, but of our deep desire to be worthy of His goodness.

Growth Through Adoration

Background Scripture: Luke 1:26-80.

Devotional Reading: Luke 1:26-38.

Memory Selection: My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. Luke 1:46, 47.

These two women, Elizabeth and Mary, had common bonds. In the first place they were cousins, blood relations. Furthermore each of them was to have a baby, a baby boy. And in each case, that baby boy was to be an unusual character, fulfilling a unique mission or ministry. The son of one, Elizabeth, was to be John the Baptist, the forerunner of Jesus Christ the Messiah. The son of the other was to be the Messiah himself, Jesus Christ, the Son of God. Both were women of devout spirit and spiritual sensitiveness. Both had been told that they were instruments in the divine plan of God in bearing and rearing these sons. There was one difference between them — age. Elizabeth was a mature woman, old enough to be the mother of Mary who was a young Galilean peasant. The story of the meeting of these two women which comprises today's lesson is one of the classics of religious literature. Enshrined in the literary gem which Luke wrote, it is immortal. One should approach it not in the spirit of scientific analysis, but in the mood of reverence and prayer.

Mary went to visit her cousin Elizabeth, who was in her sixth month. When she entered the room, strange things happened. The unborn baby in Elizabeth "leaped in her womb, and she was filled with the Holy Spirit." By that strange way in which the Holy Spirit often works, the divine affinity between Jesus and John was already established while each was in the womb. Elizabeth's unborn baby is prophetically aware of the unborn Messiah, and the mother of John the Baptist recognizes that her cousin is to be the mother of the Christ. Elizabeth is overwhelmed by the thought that the mother of the Lord Jesus Christ should come to visit her. "And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?" She also asserts her faith in the divine promise. "For there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord." Humility, joy, faith, adoration are the hall-marks of this chosen woman of God.

The Paradox of Blessedness

"Blessed art thou among women" exclaimed Elizabeth as Mary entered her home. Blessed indeed! There was given to her the greatest honor that ever came to woman — to be the mother of the Saviour of the world. Well might her heart be filled with a wondering, tremulous, amazed joy at so great a privilege. And yet that very blessedness was to be a sword that pierced her heart. That glory was to break her heart. She who was to give birth to the Saviour of the world was one day to see him hanging on a Cross! Here is a parable of life. To be chosen by God means both a crown of joy and a cross of sorrow. God does not choose us for ease and joy alone, but for a great task that lies ahead. God chooses a person to use that person. Christ came not to make life easy but to make men great.

The First Christian Hymn

Mary's poetic and ecstatic song, called "The Magnificat" from the opening words in Latin, is the first Christian hymn. A close parallel to Hannah's song as found in I Samuel 2:1-10, it is shot through with Old Testament phrases and ideas, but it is still Mary's song — an ecstatic meditation on the power and goodness of God from the beginning of time until the hour of the Messiah's coming. It is a prayer of gratitude and an affirmation of faith. Like many Christian hymns it is divided into sections or verses or stanzas.

The first section expresses praise to God. Mary first magnifies her Lord and her God. That is a good way to begin a prayer — praise, adoration, reverence. It is a good thing to "sing praises unto his name." The Doxology is a basic or classic expression of praise to God from whom all blessings flow. By the way, we will do well to praise God for Christmas. Come to think of it, only God could think of Christmas.

After praise there comes thanksgiving, or gratitude. Mary is overwhelmed at God's goodness and grace in selecting her as the mother of the Saviour of the world. That she, an humble Galilean peasant girl, should be chosen for this supreme honor overwhelmed her. Here again is a basic factor in prayer and praise — gratitude. How often we ask God for things, how seldom do we thank him for his gifts. There is too much "Give me" and not enough "Thank you" in our prayers. Alas, if we allow this Christmas Season to pass without a prayer of gratitude to God for his unspeakable gift, the Babe of Bethlehem.

Next comes what can well be called observation. Mary clearly sees the hand of God in the affairs of men and in the history of the nation. God is great and God is good. "He that is mighty hath done to me great things. He hath showed strength with his arms, He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts, He hath put down the mighty from their seats." Oppressors have been punished, tyrants have been dethroned, the haughty have been humbled, enemies have been defeated. God is powerful. His is the kingdom and the power, as well as the glory. But this great God is also a good God. Even though he telleth the stars by number, he also heals the broken in heart. He has shown mercy on them that fear him from generation to generation, he has exalted them of low degree, he hath filled the hungry with good things, he has helped his servant Israel in remembrance of his mercy. Thus does Mary sing of the goodness of God, as well as the greatness of God. What a terrifying thing it would be if God were simply a God of power. Think of illimitable or infinite power in the hands of a dictator or tyrant. But our God is a God of great mercy and love as well as of great power and might. He is a loving Father. His power is ruled by love, his justice tempered by mercy. We should not only sing "How great Thou art," but also "How good Thou art."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Visits Are Made To Churches

Dear Friends:

During the month of November we had the privilege of visiting six of our churches in the Southern Convention. Five of these were visited by some of our children and part of our staff, while the sixth was visited by only the superintendent. Those visited by the children were all in the vicinity of the Home since we do not make it a practice to take the children on extended program trips.

On the first Sunday we visited the Bethel Church on Route 3, Burlington, and on the second Sunday we visited the Concord Church, Route 1, Elon College. Both of these churches are ministered to by Rev. Bill Traylor. Thirty-two children, three staff members and the Superintendent made these visits, with twelve of the children presenting a fifteen minute worship service and the superintendent presenting the sermon. At each church a delicious picnic lunch was served after the service. This was very much enjoyed by all those attending from the Home — children and adults alike!

On the third Sunday in November we visited the Shallow Ford Christian Church which is located just a few miles from Elon College. This is a visit made annually to this church which is ministered to by the Rev. Richard M. Petersen. Twenty-seven children, three staff members and the Superintendent made this visit with again the twelve children presenting a program and the Superintendent presenting the sermon.

On the third Sunday evening at 6:00 all our children and the entire staff were invited for the evening meal at the First Christian Church, Burlington. The program was under the direction of Mrs. Edna Randolph, Christian Education director of the church. Here twenty of our children, under the direction of Mrs. R. O. Wilkins, Jr. of the First Church, presented a part of the program. When we arrived we were divided into four groups — smaller children, junior highs, senior highs and adults. After a get acquainted session in each group with those of the local church the smaller children and the junior highs met in the social room of the Education Building for their meal and program. The senior highs and adults met together for the meal and program in the main social hall of the church. This is an annual visit that the children and staff always enjoy.

On the fourth Sunday the entire staff and all the children made their annual visit to our Bethlehem Church at Altamahaw, which is located about ten miles from Elon. The Children's Home part of the eleven o'clock service was presented by the same twelve children presenting the other programs and the sermon was given by Rev. John Biggerstaff, Assistant Superintendent. Following the service a delicious picnic dinner was served by the families of the church for all present from the Home. This was very much enjoyed by all attending.

On the fourth Sunday it was my privilege to be invited to present the cause of the Children's Home Improvement Program (CHIP) at our Liberty Springs Church, Route 1, Suffolk, Va., where Rev. Raymond Phelts is the minister. After participating in the eleven o'clock service we had a most delicious dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch and their three children, Catherine, Janet and Jimmy. In the afternoon the men of the church canvassed the membership for the purpose of raising $879.00, which was Liberty Springs' goal in the Improvement Program. At the writing of this letter we are eagerly waiting for word on how well the canvassers were able to do on their goal.

Many thanks to these churches for their inviting us to visit with them. While it is not our policy to take our children on extended program trips, upon invitation the superintendent would be happy to visit your church and present a program with slides of the children and various scenes of life on our campus. We are eager for the people of each of our churches in the Convention to become better acquainted with our Home for Children.

In the closing verse Mary sees in the Incarnation the fulfilment of God's long delayed promises of the coming of the Messiah in the coming of her Son. "As He spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed forever." God is sometimes slow concerning his promises, but he is not slack concerning them. He keeps his word. We can depend on him. He will not let us down. But neither will he let us off.

Let us keep in mind that Christmas is Christ's birthday, the greatest hour on earth. How can we be complacent about that? No other day holds more meaning than this day. Let us keep Christ in Christmas and worship and honor Christ on Christmas.

Parable Of The Seed Company

Roland M. Wendell

And the Master went out and sat beside the sea beyond which lay Our Christian World Mission. And the churches gathered about him. And he taught them a parable:

Into a Seed Company came some husbandmen to package precious seeds. And some were chosen and sent to far highways and bi-ways, bearing to the sowers seed-producing nourishing fruits and beautiful flowers. And the fame of the Seed Company became known throughout the land for the planting of plenty and beauty.

As the Seed Company grew, more acres were planted, more seeds packaged, and the barns enlarged. And husbandmen in greater numbers volunteered to bear the precious seed to distant places. And health and beauty and blessing spread on earth.

Then arose sons of the husbandmen who were builders and who said: "Let us build the loveliest packaging plant in the land!" And they called in architects and stewards. And they built at a great cost. And landscapers laid out a magnificent garden, and stone-masons added sculpture, and sons of Jubal installed continual music, many were the sparkling fountains. And the stewards reported to the distributing husbandmen in the far places of earth the glory of the luxurious park which their Seed Company maintained for rest and recreation.

Then the stewards took counsel with one another, saying, "Great is our operating expense. Let us increase the gardening abroad, but reduce the distributing husbandmen for economy." And so it was, and the budget was balanced, with some distributing husbandmen coming home, and others carrying on at great self-sacrifice.

But a population explosion occurred, and the thirst of far peoples for beauty and plenty was multiplied. And the far-off husbandmen, laboring with shrunken means, were hard-pressed, and implored the stewards at home for aid. Then the stewards counselled with the Lord, and made these proclamations:

FIRST: That the Packaging Plant glorification be halted, the cost of home operation be curtailed, more acres be devoted to seed and less to pleasure.

SECOND: That Distributing Husbandmen be sent out in greater numbers, provided with a better service investment, and that new areas of earth be contacted.

THIRD: That loyal distributors of long standing be given fairer provisions for service, and meet provision for their retiring years.

And the husbandmen in the homeland heard the proclamation, and provided plenty and beauty in rising tides to the corners of the earth. And the Seed Company throbbed with new vision and vitality. And dividends of heavenly joy replaced the fevers of material pursuit.

Thus the Master ended the parable.

Then the churches besought Him, "Why have you spoken this parable?" and He answered them: "The Seed Company is my United Church in the homeland. And the distributing husbandmen are the missionaries abroad. A former generation lived humbly and gave greatly of its seed for the world harvest, but in this day and generation giving for local programs and expenses has far outstripped giving for the Christian World Mission. Now the exploding world population exposes acres of need as never before. Our Christian World Mission must ADVANCE ITS PROGRAM from $7 million annually in 1960, to $11½ million in 1962. He who has ears to hear, let him hear."

A PRAYER

Dear Lord, hear my prayer for those who have no Christmas. . . For the darkened millions who go to bed hungry tonight and all the nights; For the children in whose homes the candles have been put out by war, and pestilence, and fear; For boys and girls whose hands press against store windows while their eyes devour the glories they can never touch; For those whose hearts are torn by hate, twisted by prejudice, crippled by narrowness and pride; For those who have no Christmas this day, Christ of deathless love, let Thy Presence come with joy and healing in its wings.

Preparing For Christmas

By A. Lanson Granger

How shall we prepare for Christmas? By opening our hearts to be generous, to love, to be giving and forgiving. Sylvia Porter, the columnist on economic affairs, has written that we Americans are getting ready for the biggest Christmas ever, a big spending spree. . . The God who came right down into the dust and crying need of our world has more to say to us than that. He has something to say to us about what it means to feel on our hearts the aching burden of the world until we care enough to do something about it. How poor we shall be if this Christmas comes and goes and it has been nothing more than one more big indulgence of ourselves. God grant that we may know that "love came down at Christmas," a love that pushes out the sides of the heart until we know the blessedness of caring and sharing ourselves and the gifts that God has given us.

Christmas Services In Our Churches

New Rules Concerning Audio-Visuals

The Audio-Visual Aids of the Southern Convention and Southern Synod have been combined and beginning on January 1, 1962, all Audio-Visuals for both groups will be available from the Southern Convention Office.

The Audio-Visual Committees have met and made out some rules governing the use of the Audio-Visuals under the new arrangement. Strict adherence of these rules will be requested so that everyone will be able to use them to the best advantage. A copy of the rules are being sent to all ministers and others are asked to consult these rules in the future. Thank you for your cooperation.

1. Films are to be returned immediately after use for prompt delivery at next showing.
2. If films and/or filmstrips are damaged in any way, please notify Miss Ruth Dunn when films or filmstrips are returned.
3. All films are free except return postage.
4. All correspondence concerning Visual Aids is to be sent to Miss Ruth Dunn, Visual Aid Counselor, Box 336, Elon College, N. C.
5. Requests should be made two weeks in advance of date to be used.
6. Please make a first and second choice in case the one desired has been previously scheduled.
7. Each minister has received one copy of the Audio-Visual list. Additional copies may be ordered from the Southern Convention Office at 15¢ each.

DEACONS ORDAINED AT POPE'S CHAPEL

Ethel M. Holmes, Secretary

An ordination service was held at Pope's Chapel Christian Church, near Franklinton, North Carolina, November 12 for the four newly elected deacons, namely, Messrs. Richard R. Holmes, Otho Evans, Jr., G. T. Perry, Jr., and Miss Ethel M. Holmes.

The ordination sermon was delivered by Rev. Clyde L. Fields, superintendent of the Southern Convention. It was a forceful sermon which lingers long in the memory of its hearers.

Preceding the sermon Rev. Robert Knowles met with the young people for the purpose of helping them organize a Pilgrim Fellowship. That was the first step and the church hopes it will be followed by definite plans for this organization.

At six o'clock, prior to the assembling of the congregation, a covered dish supper was served by the Women's Fellowship for the visitors and our speakers. There were visitors from Raleigh, Henderson, Louisburg and Franklinton, besides from our neighboring churches.

Special music was rendered by the church choir. The entire service was well planned by our pastor, Rev. E. M. Powell.

November 26 at the morning service a dedicatory service was held by the pastor for the infant son (Richard R. III) of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Holmes, Jr. This was the first service of its kind ever held in our church. It is hoped other similar services will follow.

CHRISTMAS WORKSHOP AT FIRST, GREENSBORO

The first Sunday in Advent a Christmas Family Workshop was held in First Congregational Christian Church, Greensboro, from 5:00-7:00 p.m. Each family brought sandwiches and salad, drink, and dessert was furnished for a quarter.

Each family made a "pinata," since they had studied Latin America recently. There were eight other things to choose from to make, including decorating candles, making gift paper, and paper sculpture.

Closing worship was held in the sanctuary and included music by kindergarten, primary and lower junior children and a choral reading by upper juniors. The offering went for a scholarship for a Latin American student.

Vote To Be Part Of United Church

Clyde L. Fields, Superintendent

Churches which have voted to be a part of the United Church of Christ will be listed as such in the new Year Book which will be a combined venture with our E. & R. friends in the United Church of Christ. Churches that have not voted to be a part of the United Church of Christ or who have voted "NO" with regard to the Constitution, or who have voted "To Abstain" will be included in a section in the new Year Book, indicating that they have not become a part of the United Church of Christ by their action or lack of action. This procedure seems altogether fair in the context of democracy and autonomy.

We are reminded that we are no longer voting on whether or not to approve the Constitution. Churches that have not voted to be a part of the United Church of Christ, or who have voted "NO" on the Constitution, or who have abstained from voting, may now take a simple vote expressing their desire to be a part of the United Church of Christ. It is our hope that many churches of the Southern Convention will express their faith in this matter by joining with many other churches in the Southern Convention who are now a part of the United Church of Christ. It would be our hope that churches that have not taken appropriate action may do so at their earliest convenience.

CHECKS FOR CHELIKKOL

Women's Fellowship groups are reminded that the checks for the special expense fund for Barbaros Chelikkol, Turkish student at Elon College, are to be sent to their conference treasurer, designated for this special fund. Please do not send this money to the Convention Office or to Mrs. Carl Wallace, chairman of social action, who communicated with groups concerning it.

When James C. Jackson was ordained in Clanton Park church, Charlotte, December 3, sharing in the service were Revs. Reuben Askew, E. C. Brady, W. W. Hall, Lynwood Hubbard, F. C. Lester, Banks Peeler, L. M. Presnell, W. R. Stevenson, and Rev. Carl Wallace who preached the sermon.

EDITORIALS

Self-preservation may be the first law of nature but sacrifice of immediate self-interest is certainly the rule of the religious civilized man. In all history no man who put himself and his interests first is remembered pleasantly and with affection by mankind. The men and women whose memories we revere rose above mere self-protection and self-satisfaction. Those we honor most risked their lives and their all in order that others might fare better.

Balancing The Books

Within a few weeks (and one more issue of The Christian Sun) we will come to the end of this good year. All of us will need to give an accounting of the year's work, especially that portion for which we received pay. The government will see to that. We still have time to make adjustments that can make a real difference.

We must list for taxation all property owned as of January 1, 1962, and we must report all income and expenditures during 1961. Two things are said to be certain — death and taxes. The latter may help to prepare us for the former.

None of us want to meet our Maker with characters like Old Scrooge as portrayed by Charles Dickens in his Christmas Carol. Neither do we want to be like the rich man Jesus told of who was too stingy to give to sick Lazarus whom he had to see daily. We want no "gulf" between us and opportunity.

While there is separation of Church and State in our beloved America, the leaders of the nation know that the United States government was founded on a firm belief in God, and that religion is still exceedingly important. The Federal tax man can tell you that. He will tell you that 30% of your income, if given to the Church, will not be taxable. There are things that urgently need to be done, and they call for money. If the orphan and the aged are taken care of by the churches as a matter of Christian compassion, it is not necessary for the government to tax the populace for these matters. If the hungry are fed by the churches, and if Christian business men so conduct their affairs that all people have a chance to make a living, the Department of Welfare can close shop and get back into productive activity. If the churches make effective the Ten Commandments and the teachings of Jesus in the life of the nation, the cost of crime will slump and the courts will have little business. Christian religion at work in hotels and eating places will cut the costs of international diplomacy and make friends of representatives of other nations who come within our gates. Missionary statesmanship backed by adequate financial support can eliminate the necessity for governmental supplies of food to hungry nations — and will soon reduce the billions now needed for armaments.

Why don't we see this? Are we so blind as those who WILL not see?

A wall in Berlin divides governments and guns, but churchmen from Russia journey to India to join with Christians around the world in proclaiming that "Jesus Christ Is the Light of the World." Why pay dollars to separate governments and guns and then give dimes, or pennies, for the union of Christendom and the effort to make the world a brotherhood?

There is still time to change the looks of your checkbook before you celebrate again the birthday of God's best Son, God's gift to our world. The change might mean that a new church could arise on American soil, or that the hospital workers in one of our institutions in Africa would not have to walk half a mile each morning to get water for the operation of the hospital that day — they go because there is no pump, for which they have been asking us for four years. It might mean that some intelligent young person could get the training needed to become a scientist, philosopher, statesman, minister, or missionary. Or it could mean the clothes or car your own minister and his family have dreamed of and have not had the money to buy. There are hundreds of things your money could mean after it leaves your hands, things your government would like very much to have done and for which you would receive credit on your income tax return.

But the change in the checkbook will reflect itself best in you. It will open your eyes to new opportunities; it will make you hear the cries of human beings; it will attune your heart to the pulse-beat of Him who gave us Christmas; it will warm your spirit and drive away the coldness that has kept you from fellowship; it will put you in partnership with earth's best people, those striving against great odds to make this a good world; it will give you a "glory" in the soul, a shining radiance indescribable; it will prepare you for the best Christmas you have ever known. And you may even forget that your gifts will reduce your income tax which will be due next spring.

Why not balance your accounts now? Christmas will soon be here, and the end of the year once past seals the destiny of 1961 forever.

Your Church needs the money in many of its agencies, your government urges you to give and credits up to 30% for church gifts, and deep in your heart there is a yearning to do your best. Don't be satisfied until you are sure that you have done your best. Then Christmas can be joyful for you.

Then Comes The End

Forty-nine times this paper has gone to subscribers this year, and only one more issue is to go. News from many sources has filtered across the editor's desk, gone through the fingers of a linotype operator, arranged itself on pages at the hands of the make-up man, and rolled from the press for the mailing boys. Mingled with the news have been ideas (we hope) and a variety of helpful reading.

Next week there will be a Christmas salutation and good wishes. Then comes the end. Fifty papers is all that is promised, and all who work with the paper are delighted to get a little rest at Christmas.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS

With free speech and a free press silenced in many parts of the world, and the virus of slavery advancing, possibly the two greatest democracies where free speech and a free press are freer than ever are the United States and England.

Freedom of debate in the halls of Congress of the United States, and in England's Parliament, goes on unrestricted. And in both countries, too, members of both national law-making bodies are free to speak in any place on any subject of their choosing.

This does not mean that free speech is not often challenged, for it is challenged, not only in the United States but in England. It has been this challenge, however, that has kept the subject of free speech of ever-increasing interest in both countries. It is this, too, probably more than any other factor that has helped to preserve free speech and freedom of the press. For each time an attempt is made to abridge freedom of speech, the privilege comes out of the ordeal with added glory and more supporters.

How free speech has taken on an ever-widening aspect in the United States is only one of the interesting phases of the subject. When the framers of the Constitution made the original draft, it probably never occurred to that historic body to make a provision for free speech. But that provision is contained in the first amendment to the Constitution.

But the liberty to speak freely is not license to abuse, and because a few people in this country and England sometimes employ such license, the cry goes up that a restriction should be placed on speech.

There is a legal restraint in both countries providing a penalty for anyone who agitates the overthrow of established authority by unlawful speech, writing or by actual violence. Then, too, there are liberal laws by which an individual may have redress in the courts if anyone defames his name, or injures his reputation or business by improper speech or writing. These are the main factors by which the United States and England have maintained free speech and kept it from abuse.

Thus there has been firmly established in this country and in England the principle of freedom of speech and press. Frequently attempts are made to destroy this principle because it frustrates the aims of some political group or checks the ambition of some individual, but when the truth becomes known these efforts come to naught.

It is to this principle of freely reporting the truth for public appraisal that the press of the United States and England is dedicated. It is one of the traditional liberties the peoples of both countries cherish.

Long live and wave high and proud the Stars and Stripes, and the Union Jack, that hoist their inspiring colors over the two great democracies that have free speech and a free press.

This Interested Me

By EMILY C. LESTER

The same week in June each year the Women's Guild of the Southern Synod and the Women's Fellowship of the Southern Convention have been holding summer conference sessions — the former at Blowing Rock and our group at Elon College under the name of "The School of Missions."

Executive boards of both groups voted this fall to try a combined session, since we are now all a part of the same denomination and have been having programs the same week which almost duplicated each other.

The last of November a joint committee met to see if plans could really work out. It was interesting to see how many times as one group told about their usual plans, the other would say, "We do that, too." The result was that the committee found a number of reasons for a joint summer conference session — and none for separate ones!

New dormitory space at both Catawba and Elon make it possible for either college to accommodate the group. It is planned to alternate locations, beginning this year with Elon. The dates are June 19-22.

Mrs. Robert M. Kimball will be the chairman, with Mrs. H. F. Kennedy, Jr., of Thomasville the co-chairman. Mrs. Kennedy, who is president of the Piedmont Regional of the Women's Guild, shared in the program of the School of Missions one year and so is familiar with that, as well as having served as chairman of the Women's Guild Conference at Blowing Rock.

Another year the chairman will come from the E. and R. group and the co-chairman from ours. Details are to be worked out by other joint committee meetings.

Thus begins the process, as suggested by both national women's organizations, of doing cooperative work in the framework of our existing groups while waiting for realignment to take place.

THE HUMILITY OF ADVENT

Stanley U. North

One wonders just why the birth of Jesus should have been announced to lowly shepherds tending their flocks on a lonely Judean hillside. Possibly the answer is to be found in Micah's affirmation: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God." It doesn't follow that the reward of the humble is to experience an angelic visitation. Or does it? For what is an angel but a profound spiritual insight which comes to one only if he be humble in his seeking for the supreme values of life. To shepherds meditating beneath a star-filled sky could well have come a compelling conviction that the long-hoped-for Messiah had indeed come. If for us Advent is to be more than a season which comes and goes, it must be an experience to be lived. Expectancy is its key word. Humility is its prerequisite. Only as expectancy is accompanied by humility will one hear angel voices proclaiming: "Unto you is born this day a Saviour which is Christ, the Lord."

The Light Gets Through

By The Rev. John Garrett

There was a church in Corinth in the middle of the First Century where people met for worship, became inspired, and indulged in excited noise. Paul, who was troubled about them, told them that their singing and nonsense syllables obscured the Light of the world from other people.

"If I don't know the meaning of the sound the speaker makes," he wrote to them, "his words will be gibberish to me, and mine to him." He made the same point about their prayers: "Your prayer of thanksgiving may be all that could be desired, but it is no help to the other man."

Church Talk Meaningless

One of the acute problems before the assembly of the World Council of Churches at New Delhi in late 1961 must be the failure of many churches to make sounds that have meaning for outsiders. Many of us are carrying on earnest conversations in pulpit and committee language. We all believe in translating the Scriptures into Urdu and Hottentot. But we ourselves need to be translated into the languages of Main Street, sports page and village water pump.

Newspaper men are familiar with this problem. After a church meeting they scratch their heads and puzzle over what they have taken down. One church leader has said "We must proclaim redemption." Another has told his approving friends: "Man must be transformed by a living confrontation between the Evangel and his own existential predicament." There has also been a much-applauded speech containing the sentence "We are all familiar with the series of remarkable ecumenical pronouncements on this issue, from Lake Mohonk, through Willingen to Bad Boll."

It is very close to what Paul explored when he said, "I don't know the meaning of the sound the speaker makes." No wonder the newspaper man says, "I ask myself what all this is going to mean to the Kansas City milkman."

The jargon of theologians and committees is out of tune with the tastes, interests and daily life of the majority of the world's population. Most people are simply not interested. They are not abstract thinkers. They work with their hands, operate machines and ply tools. They prefer pictures and stories to general ideas. They feel intimidated by words like "confrontation", totally mystified (except in financial deals) by words like "redemption", hilarious at the thought that Lake Mohonk is a pronouncement.

New Media For Message

It seems unlikely that anything done at New Delhi to get into living touch with Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism and other world religions will go far unless it is understood that the world has changed rapidly through the march of science, engineering and mass communications. Within our century, people who are newly taught to read and write, in Africa, Asia and Latin America, will be engaged in industry and large-scale agriculture on the Western pattern. Very few of them will want to read the Bible. Fewer will come to hear individual preachers. They will have television and vernacular illustrated papers in their own style and national pattern. Why go out to a Christian church when you have a more diverting world to hold your interest at home?

Activities At Elon College

MESSIAH PRESENTED

Four visiting soloists were featured when the Elon College Choir presented Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," in Whitley Auditorium Sunday, Dec. 2.

A sizeable crowd was present for the 29th annual rendition of the great masterpiece which was directed by Prof. Charles Lynam.

Soloists included Peggy Sue Russell, soloist for the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant in Greensboro; Paul Berry who sings at Greensboro's West Market Street Methodist Church; Jeannette Davidson, a soloist at the First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro; and Walter Vassar, also a Greensboro singer.

Dr. J. Earl Danieleley, Elon College president, attended the annual convention of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools which was held last week in Miami, Florida.

Pictures, speech and stories mean more to most of the world's population than print. When we go into print it should more often be in story form, evocative, simple. The parables of Jesus are an object lesson in what could be done in new ways today if we were trying to communicate. The message remains the same; it is no myth. But it must be told, this story of God's deed, with imagination. The dull, self-absorbed talk of scribes and temple secretaries is far removed from the vivid realities of the Bible. The trouble with many Christians is that they want, in their hearts, to be like the scribes, when Jesus told them to be like little children.

At New Delhi there should be a disturbing question hanging over the whole work of the Church when we look at it in this way. Why are we pouring so many thousands of dollars into schools and hospitals in the non-western world? Most of them will almost certainly be taken over by governments. In others it will become impossible any longer to put the Christian faith at the center. Large institutions run by Western missionaries look suspiciously like packaging for Western civilization and for Christianity. The tendency of the local population is to accept the packaging, and to reject the contents

N. C. GOVERNOR AT ELON

Governor Terry Sanford addressed representatives from 14 counties attending a regional industrial development conference at Elon College Tuesday, November 28.

The luncheon meeting was held in McEwen Dining Hall as the last in a series of six sponsored throughout the state by the State Conservation and Development Department.

W. R. Henderson, administrator for the Division of Commerce and Industry, presided and made concluding remarks summarizing the conference sessions.

Elon's president, Dr. Danieleley, welcomed the group to the campus. The invocation was given by Dr. W. J. Andes, pastor of Elon College Community Church.

Dr. Danieleley was selected as Tar Heel of the Week last week by The News and Observer of Raleigh. A picture and article about Dr. Danieleley appeared in the Sunday, December 3, issue of the News and Observer.

once the container has been thoroughly unwrapped and laid aside for the future use of the consumer.

Exciting Opportunities

In the modern world many of the institutions should be sold to governments and welfare groups as time goes by. A great part of this money could then be re-directed to such new kinds of projects as television, film, radio and illustrated magazines. The aim should be to devise a united Christian strategy in all parts of the world to reach city and country publications.

Moving pictures, should be made by nationals for their own nationals, at the highest artistic and technical standards. Missionary television, in both East and West, should advance with radio. The churches should acquire and operate more transmitters. They should be investing huge sums in the training of local production teams to take drama, interview, news and documentary problems to broadcasters who want high quality material for vacant spaces in their schedules.

For this work, and for Christian journalism, there should be centrally-placed training facilities in each continent. From the centers, ideas for stories, promotion, pictures, layout, design and financing should go to editorial teams at work in the field. Papers should be independent, professionally cut away from church apron strings, but run by people who are loyal members of the church. They will shock both church and general public by the bold way they put the Christian case about politics, sex, other religions, sport, race, and trade. That will be their function. The element of shock belongs to the liberty of the Christian message. It has the great secondary advantage of keeping up circulation and demand.

People engaged in jobs like these will often popularize and be "unpopular" with church officials. They will be kept steady by their fellowship of prayer and worship. They will be aided to get on their feet financially by Christians who have money and vision, and who love risks.

The effect of the new approach will be to influence the future of entire cultures through the most readily available means of communicating with individuals in the world of our day. It is fatal to underestimate the life-transforming power of the mass media. They have come to stay. It is nonsense to say that they are impersonal and must inevitably manipulate people. Only those who are afraid of them and do not know them say so. Radio and television, particularly, are intensely individual media. Here one man speaks to one man. And the recipient can always switch off; which is more than one can easily do when being manipulated by some authoritarian who is preaching a sermon in church. Naturally those who work with these media for the churches get dirty hands. That is true of all the laity. But many work there already as lonely pioneers — and bring with them integrity and faith.

Use Artists

The churches have another ally to enlist in the press, in film, radio, television and in the ruthless circus of modern publicity. He is the artist.

Many writers, painters, theatrical producers, many film and television directors, are hungry for opportunities to get rid of the sentimentalism and moralizing that often pass for the Christian message. These people are not unemployed; they are simply unemployed by the churches. Their imaginations have never been fired by church leaders who say: "Sit down with us for a few months, and let's find out together how the terror and beauty, the depths and the splendors of the Bible can be given new life in the modern world through sound, image, dance, drama, song, mime, color sequence, and spaces of silence..."

These people are waiting to work. They need Christian friends who understand creative freedom, who know that in spite of us scribes the Light of the world gets through.

Baseball Or Missionaries?

By William N. Tuttle

I am a Red Sox baseball fan, and proud of it. It takes religion to be a Red Sox fan. Indeed, being a Red Sox fan is a religion — mostly of sack-cloth and ashes and requiring Faith, Hope and Charity in large amounts. I have Faith that next year we'll finish in the first division and even that some day another pennant will come to Boston, and I hope to live to see it. I have Hope that youngsters like Karl Yastrezemski, Chuck Shilling and Don Schwall will be even better than this year, when they were superb, and that the oldsters like Pete Runnels, Frank Malzone and Jackie Jensen have at least one more good season left in them. I have to have Charity for the times we had it all sewed up and then threw the game away in the ninth.

There are some moments of ecstasy — like a year ago when we beat the Yankees five straight, or the day this summer when we were trailing by seven runs in the last of the ninth with two out and two strikes on the third batsman, and then went on to get eight runs and win the game.

When the world series is over I see little interest in the ensuing months until April. Except for my wife's birthday, Thanksgiving and Christmas. I'd just as soon hiber-nate. The only gain is getting to bed earlier. I do not have to sit up until midnight to get the late scores on the TV.

This year, though, I have a new interest. Early in October there came to my desk a copy of the "Calendar of Prayer and Directory" of our United Church Board of World Ministries, successor to the American Board. For every day from now to next September 30, there is a short biography of one of our Foreign Missionaries, telling about where he works and what he is doing. As I have looked it through I am downright ashamed to find I know the names and batting averages of more ball players than of the missionaries who represent you and me around the world.

So far in October I have been getting acquainted with new friends in Argentina, Equador and Honduras, where the work has been in charge of the E & R Churches. Next we move to more familiar ground in Mexico and India, and before the year is over I will visit, Turkey, Lebanon, Africa, Japan, Europe and other places.

A year from now I am determined to know as much about our missionaries as I do baseball.

Exciting Life Of Riggs In India

Kilanjunai P.O., via Salaigramam
Ramnad District, So. India
November 20, 1961

Dear Friends of the Southern
Convention,

We have been back here nearly three months now, and are gradually getting adjusted again to the way of life we had gotten to know so well, but which was so different from last year's American experience. When we first arrived from the colder climate we found the late summer heat here difficult to bear. But now cooler weather has arrived with the rains; and we shiver and shake along with everyone else when the cold damp winds blow and the temperature dips below 80.

Somewhat harder to adjust to is the slower tempo of change that seems inevitable here. We can report no perceptible progress yet, on any front, which after three months here seems shameful to us. As expected, the rains have been heavy, and the "roads" in all directions worse than ever. The old jeep, now safely outside on the highway, is still chugging along and providing a great comfort in reaching the various outside leprosy clinics. But the six-mile trek in and out to where the jeep is parked is more and more troublesome as the mud and standing water get deeper. The Indian doctor who is here with me has been insisting on doing his full share at these outside clinics, despite the fact that he cannot ride a cycle or walk; and the weekly ride in and out by bullock cart has been hard on him. But when the people in the town where we park the jeep begged him last week to start an additional clinic there, instead of showing any sign of giving up, he simply proposed that he start the weekly trip at 4 a.m. instead of 6 a.m., in order to be able to give them the extra two hours on our way to the leprosy clinics.

Then this week, after he had gotten up at 4 o'clock and waited two hours in vain for the bullock cart which finally refused altogether to make the trip, he said, "Well, let's walk anyway." It was drizzling steadily, with the surface of the muddy path as slippery as ice, and a river to cross with water waist deep. Since he has never done any walking before, we were sure he would never make it. But we had the greatest difficulty talking him out of making the try. We are now engaged in trying to buy a bullock cart and bull team for the hospital, so that we will not be at the mercy of temperamental drivers from now on.

The outlook for the future is actually not too bad. Some new paint for the hospital buildings now, and the promise of needed repairs and construction after harvest season, should raise the morale of the Staff working in the hospital. And for us on the outside, the jeep is still running on the main roads, and we have new cycles, and will have our bullock cart, for village visiting. The latter can also be used to taxi leprosy patients in and out for short-term intensive treatment of foot ulcers. One of our technicians is now at Vellore for two months to learn the latest methods for this work. And we are planning to open a hospital kitchen, so that leprosy patients who come without bringing their families along to feed them can still be taken care of.

Some of you have asked whether you can help buy a jeep (which is still our greatest need). No, the cost is too high, and I still believe we may get it from the Government or some other source. What we need now is the right mixture of oriental patience and stick-to-it-ive-ness, along with a refusal to be complacent about things as they are.

Best regards,
Ed Riggs

VELLORE

- 17—Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Gass, who have served in India since 1931, are now on staff of Christian Medical College and Hospital at Vellore. He was born in India of E. and R. missionary parents. He is head of the department of dermatology, leprosy and venereology and honorary medical adviser to the Mission to Lepers for Southeast Asia.
- 18—Miss Pauline King is now studying at Columbia University on a Research Award Fellowship from the U. S. Department of Health and Welfare. She expects to return to Vellore next June to be consultant in public health nursing at Christian Medical College.

THE CEYLON MISSION

- 19—The Ceylon Mission, founded by Congregational Church in 1816, has worked among Tamil-speaking people of Jaffna Peninsula. Two hospitals, 60 elementary schools and junior colleges, and Jaffna College have grown out of this mission work. Now many of these share in the Jaffna Diocese of the Church of South India.
- 20—Miss Dorothy Appleby was an English nurse at a hospital for tea planters when she decided to become a missionary and went in 1950 as nurse at Green Memorial Hospital, Manepay. Since her furlough she and a Ceylonese nurse conduct a simple clinic in an isolated area.
- 21—Rev. and Mrs. Coenraad Bavinck are Dutch, but he grew up in Indonesia where his parents were missionaries. He is chaplain at Jaffna College, Vaddukoddai, teaches Bible and manual training in secondary school, and is active with Boy Scouts and Student Christian Movement. She does social work and has started Sunday school in outcaste village.
- 22—Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Bunker have headed Jaffna College for 20 years. He was born of missionary parents in Natal, South Africa. He graduated from Oberlin and from Union Seminary, where he was granted its highest academic honor, two-year fellowship at Oxford University, England. He taught at Talladega College, Alabama 1935-37. She trains Sunday school teachers and is working on a project for women of the depressed classes in nearby villages.

Dear Friends,

This bullock buying is turning out to be quite an adventure. First we have to have a shed to keep the rain off the bulls. Our gardener has been collecting scraps of wood, from an abandoned chicken yard and a broken fence, and I think finally had enough for everything except half the roof. So we bought some matting, tarred it, and filled in with pieces of kerosene tins. Now he is touring through all the local villages looking for the best buy in bulls. It is like shopping for second-hand cars. We surely hope the bulls he buys will be faithful and strong, and serve us well. They are being paid for by gifts you have already sent, and will be a real nice Christmas present both for our home and the hospital. We get so tired of fighting with the temperamental local cart drivers.

Our latest addition to the household is a white mongrel puppy, which belongs especially to Joy. She literally spends hours with it, cuddling it, chasing it, and cleaning up its puddles. Unfortunately the dog does get into village filth and then jumps on clean beds. We have finally bought her a collar and chain, and have told Joy that if she is not under good control after a three-day trial period, she will have to go. Mary is still a bit too young to enjoy the puppy, although she is crawling everywhere and walking with support.

Besides building cowsheds and chasing puppies, I have been keeping busy teaching. Louis is home from boarding school, but is spending nearly full-time in make-up work because of his late start. Joy and Martha, too, are working hard. Joy's books haven't arrived from the U.S.A. yet, and I'm running out of material to teach her. So I'm gradually using Louis' 6th grade books to teach her 5th grade! I surely hope her books come soon. It is a wonderful thing to have Louis at home and our family together. The children know how to swim now, and can have a swim every day while the irrigation pond is full. They have to keep the water out of their mouths, though, so they swim with care.

We will spend Thanksgiving here at home, not trying to move the family out through the mud and water to join the Mission gathering at Madura. We may have a chicken. At any rate we will be thankful, along with all of you. Life is interesting and good here. We also cele-

LAKE BYRD LOGIC

This Missile Age

"A word very much on our modern tongues, missile," said the Rev. Edward J. Vorba the other day, "comes from the same Latin root as the word mission. They both mean to send. In this twentieth century we Christians are sent out to Florida, our nation and the world with God's good news in Christ. From the launching pads of our local churches we are sent forth to preach good news to the poor, to proclaim release to captives and to set at liberty those that are oppressed."

Each Church A Launching Pad

Preaching to his West Palm Beach congregation, Mr. Vorba continued, "The task of each church is missionary. We are the product of a mission, we are a mission, we are on a mission. Unless we are concerned about people beyond our local borders we will cease to be a church and wither and die. We cannot claim allegiance to Christ and be deaf to his commission to us."

The Missile Gap

Politicians have argued over our nation's alleged failure to keep pace with Russia in Rocket development. Whether a missile gap exists or not, there is a mission gap between Christians and Communists. While their emissaries go into all the world, making disciples for Karl Marx in every nation, too many Christians keep their talent and treasure bottled up at home. Seen from Lake Byrd, it appears more logical that the world may be saved by missions than by missiles. How does it seem from your viewpoint, Friend?

BANDAGES FOR DR. RIGGS

Recently one of our women's groups sent the torn strips of old sheets to Dr. Ed Riggs in India, as requested for use in bandaging lepers. However, they found the postage cost high and asked me to check on it before they sent additional packages.

From Mr. Frank Stowers, the purchasing and shipping agent for the Board for World Ministries, comes this reply:

"Unless the group has a tremendous amount of these bandages and enough to warrant a freight shipment through to India, it is still best to send these in small packages through the International Parcel Post Service. It is far easier for Dr. Riggs to receive these packages in small amounts and clear them through customs than it is in a large freight shipment. I have checked on the latest rates and I find they are as follows: ninety cents for the first two pounds and 35¢ for each additional pound, with a 22 pound limit per package.

"You will need to attach two customs tags (Form #2966) and one yellow sticker (Form #2922) to each package. These you get at the post office. The packages should be dispatched at intervals, probably about a week or ten days apart so they will not all arrive at the same time. You will have to declare a very nominal value on each of these packages and I would suggest that each one be marked very clearly, 'Donation —Unsolicited Gift.'

WHAT WOULD YOU READ?

If you prepared a "survival kit" to use in a bomb shelter, would you put any reading matter in it? Dr. Billy Graham's Crusade Bureau asked a number of people what five books they would take into a bomb shelter. Half of the people written were known Christians, the other half chosen only by occupation. Letters were written on plain paper, so as not to tempt people to give an "expected" answer.

Only 23% of the people questioned answered the letter. 87% of these listed the Bible, usually in first place. "A dictionary" came second, but with only 17% of the votes cast. Hymn-books placed third, with 13% of the votes. Shakespeare's Works and The Reader's Digest tied for next place.

What would YOU choose?

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIPS REPORT

Rev. G. Julius Rice reported (before leaving our area for California) that the annual reports of the local Pilgrim Fellowship groups of the Eastern Virginia Conference showed that fourteen groups responded and six met all the goals. The six were: Bethlehem (Nans.) Senior High and Junior High; Holland Senior High; Suffolk Senior High and Junior High; and Oakland Senior High. Christian Temple lacked one and Liberty Spring lacked two. As advisor, Mr. Rice wished to thank all the groups which made a real effort to improve their work.

Each group was asked to check the following:

The Wider Pilgrim Fellowship

1. Studied and discussed the P. F. Statement of Purpose.
2. Studied the meaning and purpose of the three Commissions.
3. Had a Planning Retreat or some other opportunity for long-range program planning.
4. Made annual report to the Rev. G. Julius Rice.
5. Sent at least one news article to the Christian Sun.

Christian Faith

1. Used the Interdenominational Mission Study books.
2. Contributed to Friendly Service Projects.
3. Had at least one membership in the Christian Missionary Association.
4. Observed Work Day for Christ.

Christian Fellowship

1. Had some organized study of P. F. on local, state, and national levels.
2. Paid apportionment in full. Our year ends September 30, 1960. Your apportionment is———. Payment may be made to Sammy Barnes, Route 1, Box 169, Holland, Virginia.

3. Was represented at Eastern Virginia P. F. meetings.

Summer camps

Southern Convention P.F. meetings.

4. Observed Youth Week in your own church and in cooperation with youth of other denominations.

5. Participated in United Christian Youth Movement activities: local or state councils, rallies, training conferences.

ACTION CO-CHAIRMAN

Louise Harrell is the new co-chairman of the Action Commission of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship. She is a member of Bethlehem Church, Suffolk, Virginia and a senior in Holland High School, where she is a member of the Beta Club. She is also an officer of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship.

Louise wrote the article on "Work-day for Christ" which appeared in a recent issue of The Sun.

YOUNG PEOPLE SEND GIFTS

By David Miller

Members of the Lynnhaven Colony Senior High Fellowship ripped and sent fifteen bundles of bandages for the sick and injured in India. The bandages were made from old sheets.

The group also wrapped and sent thirty-five gifts to patients at the Patrick Henry Hospital. Along with these gifts were approximately fifty white shirts with the collar and cuffs cut off. These were to be used by the patients as hospital shirts.

YOUTH WEEK 1962

The 1962 observance of Youth Week will focus on a delicate and pertinent theme: "Called to Responsible Freedom — The Meaning of Sex in the Christian Life."

From Youth Sunday, January 28, to be observed in Congregational Christian churches, to the interdenominational community services on Sunday, February 4, young people and their adult leaders are urged to take a sobering and honest look at the Christian's responsibility in the realm of sex. A moment's reflection will remind us how confusing it is for the growing teenager to adjust himself to the pressing demands of the culture and of his own physical stirrings, and yet be vaguely conscious of the "Be good," "Don't do it" admonitions which come from the home and the church.

Your church can lift this theme to a meaningful level by helping your young people deal vigorously with this topic for Youth Week 1962. It is recommended that young people participate in the Youth Sunday morning worship service, with the pastor preaching on the theme. That evening, or in a series of evening meetings, the young people have opportunity to deal directly with the Christian's responsibility with regard to sex. Where there is a community observance on February 4, be sure to involve your senior high young people.

A 1962 Youth Week Packet, including a radio play, may be ordered for 75 cents (postage prepaid) from the P. & D. Department, National Council of Churches, P.O. Box 340 Manhattanville Station, New York 27, N. Y. Shipping deadline is January 12, 1962. The current December and January issues of Church School Worker also carry some helpful suggestions for dealing with this theme.

Churchman Defines "Fabulous Riches"

In an open letter which he has published, Robert S. Krieder, chairman of the Mennonite Board of Christian Service, says that to nine-tenths of the earth's people he is fabulously rich." He gives these reasons:

I have never been desperately hungry.

I have never been a refugee.

I have never been a prisoner.

The secret police have never knocked on our door at night.

No lepers roam the streets of our village.

I have always lived within a few minutes of a doctor's services.

In our community we have one doctor for every 1,000 people.

In our town I have never heard the guns of approaching armies.

I have never seen enemy troops occupy our town.

No one died in our community this year of starvation.

Our house has many rooms and each member of our family has a bed.

"Desperate peoples living in want, inflamed by rising expectations of the 'good life,' are impatient to have even a fraction of what we have now," Mr. Krieder goes on. "This impatience bursts forth in anger: the violence towards the Belgians in the Congo, the bitter anti-Yankee feeling in Cuba, the riots in Angola. These people want food and soap and a pair of shoes and a bicycle and free education for their children — and they want these now."

After reviewing church relief work for the needy around the world, Mr. Krieder ends his open letter with these words: "We who are rich are called to give of ourselves to the poor of the world. We may give of our money. We may give of our service. We may give of our hearts. However, GIVE WE MUST!"

TOLLEY TO COME HOME

A recent note from Bill Tolley reads:

"Just a note to let you and all my others friends there in the Southern Convention know that tomorrow, Saturday the 25th, I am leaving Lunanda, Angola, Africa, via the S. S. Steenstraete (Belgian African Lines) for New York, where we are supposed to arrive either December 9 or 10, depending on the weather. My wife, Nancy, is meeting me in New York, where we will stay a few days until I can get my physical (required for all returning missionaries). Then we will go on to Virginia, where we will stay for a few weeks of rest and visiting with the family. Thereafter, we will be ready for some speaking. Of course, this part must be planned through the Board in Boston. We are looking forward to spending some time in the Southern Convention, as well as the New England States and the Ohio Conference perhaps."

"It will be nice to meet you all again and renew old acquaintances."

For Southern Convention churches, it would be well to write to the Convention Office, where requests for a visit from Mr. Tolley could all be considered in view of the amount of time he is allowed to spend in the Convention. The Southern Convention Office could act as a clearing house for all requests, and make an itinerary for Mr. Tolley, after clearing with the Boston office about the amount of time allowed for his visit.

The Pilgrim Fellowship group at Parkway church Winston-Salem, meets each Sunday at 5:00. Eight young people from this church are now in college: Diane Binkley and Stafford Peebles, Jr. at Elon College, and others at Salem, Skidmore, Peabody, Woman's College and University of North Carolina.

A Sunday School Workshop is held each quarter for teachers in Turner's Chapel, Northview, Zion and Lee's Chapel churches, near Sanford, North Carolina. Zion church will be host to the group in January.

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

Psalm 139:23, 24.

Walk behind the closed doors within, O God. "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock," says Jesus. There is the "holy of holies" in everyone. I cannot be sure you will follow me, but I think it is wonderful that there is an innerplace where in the last analysis only God sees and knows — a fellowship indescribably beautiful and fine.

Come in, O God, and walk behind the closed doors! Only God the eternal Father could make such a prayer possible. To him we come when there is no one else to come to. Do we not feel it in our private devotions and prayers? Do we not feel it so often as we call on him, as we walk with him, as we think of him?

Didn't the psalmist feel it when he asked God: "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; see if there is any wicked way in me." The hope and the hunger of his heart comes to the fore in the concluding bit, "And lead me." Help me, walk with me. "Lead me in the way everlasting!"

That was a prayer from behind closed doors! Remember the great play: Green Pastures? How God and Noah sat on the deck of the ark together? Just the two of them! Together, God and Noah! Remember what Jesus said: "When ye pray go into your closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." Ah yes, that is what I mean!

Happy is the person who knows how to wait alone in his presence, and feel the togetherness divine. In every one's best innerself there must be room for Him. What a privilege! "And I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me."

Amen.

4. Missionary Education — Mrs. Mark Andes, P. O. Box 307, Winchester, Virginia.

5. Stewardship — Mrs. E. J. Rohart, Linville, Va.

6. Social Action — Mrs. DeWitt Cupp, RFD, Harrisonburg, Va.

District Superintendents

Eastern — Mrs. Luther Johnson, Winchester, Va.

Western — Mrs. Howard Hensley, Route 2, Elkton, Va.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Inasmuch as the Women's Fellowship of the Valley Conference goal for the 1963-64 Biennium has increased, we recommend that each local society make a sincere effort to meet the goal that the Finance Committee has prepared.

2. That the Conference contribute to the Edith Galt Memorial.

3. That each local society pay their president's expense to the School of Missions, and that the conference pay their president's expense.

4. We further pursue joint meetings and other activities with the Guild.

5. That we encourage more young people to enter full time Christian service.

"Good News Of A Great Joy"

Background Scripture: I Corinthians 13; Ephesians 4:11-24.

Devotional Reading: Matthew 1:18-25.

Memory Selection: And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for behold I bring you good tidings of a great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.
Luke 2:10-11.

The Mysterious Ways of God

William Cowper wrote a hymn the first lines of which are "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." We see an instance and a striking instance of this mysterious way of God in the fact that Jesus was born in Bethlehem. Normally he would have been born in Nazareth where his parents lived. But a pagan emperor who knew little of the ways of God, and cared even less, had made a decree that a census should be taken, so that his government might know not only who should be taxed, but who was available for military service. And in keeping with the custom of that day, a man "registered" not where he lived, but at his ancestral home. Thus it was that instead of registering at home where they lived — in Nazareth — they made the long eighty mile trip to Bethlehem, "because he was of the house and lineage of David." And while in Bethlehem, Jesus was born. So what? Anything especially strange about that? Why make anything out of that? The fact is that there is something especially significant in that fact. For over four hundred years before that event took place, a prophet of Israel, Micah by name, had predicted that in Bethlehem in the land of Judah, should come forth he that was to be ruler in Israel! Coincidence? Chance? Nothing of the kind! God was literally fulfilling his word as uttered by his prophet of the long ago. There is something mysterious and majestic and moving in this fact. God is not slack concerning his promises. He speaks and it is done. He is able to bring to pass that which he has promised. Christmas celebrates the miraculous in life.

God and the Common Life

Here was one who was the Son of God, the one who was to be the Lord of life and of history, a royal king, the one who should have a name above every name that is named. Think what plans would ordinarily be made for the coming of such a one. A place especially prepared, the best doctors, the most skilled nurses, the most elaborate lay-out or layette, the utmost privacy and protection. And yet what about where He came and how He came? This Son of the Most High, this Saviour of the world, this King of Kings, born in a stable and laid in a manger! Not even a common midwife — the mother herself had to wrap her new-born infant in simple swaddling clothes, and lay him of all places in a manger! And all this with little or no privacy and even among dumb beasts. What is the meaning of all this? Is it not that God was trying to tell and to show men that he is a God who knows our common life because he too entered intimately into it and lived it, and claimed no special advantage over common men? Is he not trying to tell us that that life is poor indeed which must borrow its glory from material things, that a man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things he possesses? And wonder of wonders, when God did enter into human life and history, he came as a baby. How mysterious are the ways in which he works, his wonders to perform!

Crowded Out

"There was no room for them in the inn." That is a simple statement of fact. It was exactly like the sign in front of a motel which emblazons the fact that there is "No Vacancy" — the place is filled up, there is no room available. There were other pilgrims in Bethlehem that night — that was the ancestral home of many. And when the tired travelers at long last reached the little village, every available place had been taken. The only place left for even the simplest accommodations was the cave or grotto used as a stable, and there the innkeeper assigned Joseph and Mary. If he had known, ah! if he had known, he would have done differently! But he did the natural thing to do in the light of what he knew.

But the words "There was no room for them in the inn" are more than a simple statement of fact. They are a parable of life. To be sure there are many who will have nothing to do with the Christ, who want no part of him. But for the most part, we simply crowd him out of our lives. We are not particularly bad people. We really mean to give him a place in our homes and in our hearts. But there are so many other interests, there are so many demands on our time and energy, there are so many other competing factors and forces, that there just isn't any room for Christ in our lives. Think of how Christ is crowded out of our lives, not by the bad things, but by even good things. We would not crucify Christ! Or would we? But we simply crowd him out, we leave no place in "the inn of life" for him!

Good News of Great Joy For All People

"And the angel said unto them. . . " Unto whom? Not the highly intellectual or deeply pious and punctilious scribes and Pharisees and Sanhedrin — they did not know what was going on. But the message first came to humble shepherds, watching their flocks by night on the Judean hills. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. It was to simple men of the fields that God's message first came! It is to the meek in spirit and the humble of heart that God makes known his truth and imparts his Spirit.

"Behold I bring you good tidings or good news. . . " The gospel is not primarily good advice, but good news. To be sure it is good advice. But essentially it is good news, the news that God took the initiative, that God is a God of grace rather than a stern dictator of justice and law, that God loves men, that God would have all men to come to know him whom to know aright is life eternal, that he has sent his Son as the Saviour of the world. It is as if a newsboy stood at a busy street corner crying out "Extra! Extra! Good News! Good News!" And this good news is of great joy, the best news that ever came to man.

Christmas Gifts From Many People

Dear Friends:

As we move from the Thanksgiving Season to the Advent Season we reach the half-way mark in our Children's Home special emphasis period. We have already heard from a number of our churches as well as many individuals. If we are to reach our goal of $25,000.00 we must continue to hear from the remainder of our friends and churches. If you have not already made your contribution toward this goal we hope you will do so during this Advent Season.

Christmas activities have already begun on our campus. Gifts have begun to arrive for various children as well as general gifts for the use of the Home in giving care to the children.

We had our first Christmas party December 3 when Rev. R. E. Brittle and a Sunday School Class of the Bethlehem Church in Eastern Virginia visited our Home and brought gifts for each of our children. The majority of these gifts were gifts of clothing which the children were thrilled to receive. They also gave them a treat of candy, fruit and nuts. They also brought two huge bags of peanuts to be roasted and enjoyed by the children.

December 9 our children did their Christmas shopping in Burlington. This was sponsored by the Burlington Jaycees. This also is an annual event. Each child was given money by the Jaycees and each had a chaperone to help with the selections. The Jaycees arrived on our campus around nine in the morning and returned around the middle of the afternoon with an exhausted, but very happy group of boys and girls.

Then December 14 the Pan-Hellenic Club at Elon College will entertain our boys and girls at a party in McEwen Dining Hall. This is also an annual event that the children look forward to each year. This club is made up of all the sororities and fraternities on the campus.

The afternoon of December 17, The Woodmen of the World will visit our campus and present to our children their annual Christmas party. This is an organization which has been coming to our campus now for a number of years.

Finally, December 19 the boys and girls will have their own Christmas party in each of their groups before beginning to leave the campus on the 20th when our school is out here at Elon. For the holiday season they will visit in homes across both North Carolina and Virginia.

Many, many thanks to all who help to make this holiday season such a joyous one for our children.

In Memoriam

DAVIDSON

God in his infinite wisdom and mercy saw fit to call to his eternal home John Roland Davidson, September 19, 1961.

He was a member of Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church and a member of the Men's Bible Class. He was a man of simple tastes, friendly spirit, and a loving character. He had been in ill health for some time; however his abiding faith enabled him to endure suffering with much courage and patience.

Therefore, be it resolved:

That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the members of his family.

That a copy of this memorial be sent to the family, one placed on the church record, and one sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MARSHALL

The members of the Women's Fellowship of Mt. Olivet Church, Dyke, Virginia, wish to pay a tribute of love and respect to Gertrude Marshall, who passed away November 21, 1961, at the age of 80.

Mrs. Marshall was a life-long member of Mt. Olivet church, uniting in her early teens with the church known now as Old Mt. Olivet. She was a charter member of the Women's Fellowship, known then as the Ladies Aid Society. She remained faithful to her duties as a member until about a year ago when her physical condition prevented her from attending. She was a teacher in the primary department of the Sunday school for a number of years.

She is being greatly missed by her many friends and neighbors in the Dyke community and her absence in the church, around the old home, and in the entire community will be felt by all who knew her for a long time to come.

Her body rested at Mt. Olivet Church from twelve until two on Thanksgiving Day and then was carefully laid to rest in Mt. Olivet cemetery beside her husband, Robert C. Marshall, who preceded her more than two years ago. Services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. S. E. Madren.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Arline Munday of Harrisonburg, Virginia; one son, Robert D. Marshall, Dyke; one granddaughter, Mrs. Lowell Richie, Petersburg, West Virginia, and two great-grandchildren; and a sister, Mrs. Bessie Bickers, Holvedysburg, Pennsylvania.

Committee of the Women's Fellowship

Using the proceeds from the annual Harvest Sale October 21 and the gift of $100 from the Women's Fellowship, the members of Mt. Pleasant church, Vass, North Carolina, have paid the debt on the remodeling of the church, according to Mrs. Beulah Cameron, secretary.

NEW ADDRESSES FOR SERVICE COMMITTEE

The Congregational Christian Service Committee, becoming a part of the Service Division of the United Church Board for World Ministries, has moved its office from East 29th Street to Interchurch Center, 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, New York. All correspondence and checks should be sent there.

The warehouse has also been moved and is now located at 637 West 125th Street, New York 27, New York. All clothing and other material goods should be sent there.

At either place the address should be Congregational Christian Service Committee, or United Church Division of World Service.

This good news of great joy is FOR ALL PEOPLE. God is not the God of a special clique or class or country. Jesus Christ is the Saviour and Friend of all men and every man. We have not yet learned that basic truth. There are many, and they are not all Jews, who think of themselves as God's "chosen people." The gospel is universal, it is for all men and all of a man. Christ is the Saviour of all.

The Vision and the Visit

"Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us... And they came with haste, and found... the babe lying in a manger." Insight and inspiration, then action.

A Tree Of Compassion

By Stephen Diller

Once upon a time there was a man who believed in Christmas, so he spent $60 to buy a Santa Claus figure to be mounted on the roof of his house. A few dollars more purchased reindeer. Another $12 bought lights. Ten dollars got it wired. It was so spectacular! He felt so proud of himself! Everyone noticed his house!

Two years later one December morning he saw a sticker on a car bumper. This sticker read, "Put Christ back in Christmas." This sign bothered him. The next morning at breakfast, he said to his wife, "I've got it — Now I know what to do!" — And he immediately rushed out of the house to work. During lunch hour, he went to the store and made an arrangement to spend $250 to buy the basic items of a "Nativity Scene" to be put in his yard. He planned to add more from time to time, as shepherds could be purchased for $60, and sheep for $45 each. Since he had a large lawn, he felt that, over a period of a few years, he could have another spectacular display — and people would see he was really clever.

The question we have to face is, "If we are sincere in our Christian faith — how do we celebrate Christmas?"

Christmas truly celebrates the Birth of the Lord of Compassion. It is to honor the One who taught us — "Inasmuch as you do it unto the least of these — you do it unto me."

In Venezuela and other South American countries — in the Middle East and in Asia and Africa — incomes of more than $50 a year are very rare. Over half of the persons on this earth go to sleep hungry each night. Thousands of children die each month of diseases we know how to prevent. The need is urgent.

If we love our Lord, how do we celebrate His birthday? Do we give Him something which would please Him, or do we share the indifference of a Herod, while the children of a whole area are dying? Whose birthday is it?

What can we do?

One thing we can do this Christmas, as a beginning is to put up a Christmas tree in the sanctuary, and every time a family or individual gives $10 turn on a light. Fifty dollars turns on a light of a different color. When $100 has been given, it turns on a light of still another color.

You can do this in your church.

The Occasion: The Birth of the Lord of Compassion.

The Place: Your church fellowship in your town.

The Method: Through lighting up a Tree of Compassion in the sanctuary.

It would seem a high kind of esteem to use this as the Lord would have us use it: To feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to buy medicine for the sick, to reach out to the least of these little ones in the loving spirit of the loving compassion of our Lord.

In our church, we are going to send our money to Tree of Compassion, World Service of the United Church of Christ, 1720 Chouteau Avenue, St. Louis 3, Missouri, in the knowledge that none of this designated money is used to pay overhead expenses, but actually buys food and practical compassion for the needy children and families of the World.

In this way, Christmas becomes truly a blessed time!

In this way, our gifts are acceptable unto Him!

The Birthday of the Lord of Compassion can be truly honored only by acts of compassion.

THE COMING OF CHRISTMAS

As the prophet foretold
Has brought manifold blessings
To millions untold.

How the world needs to hear
The Christmas Story anew
To help with the crisis
It is now passing through!

The angel's message was Peace and Good-Will,
And these are the blessings of Christmas still—
If only Christ be born again
Into the hearts of men!

THE COMING OF CHRISTMAS
With its joy and its cheer,
May it remain in your heart
Throughout the New Year!

COUNT YOUR LIFE WITH SMILES, NOT TEARS

"Count your garden by the flowers, never by the leaves that fall;
Count your days by sunny hours,
not remembering clouds at all.
Count your night by stars,
not shadows;
Count your life with smiles,
not tears,
And at this bright Yuletide season,
Count your age by friends,
not years."

CHRISTMAS

The joy of Christmas is a joy that war cannot kill, for it is a joy of the soul, and the soul cannot die.

Poverty cannot prevent the joy of Christmas for it is a joy no earthly wealth can give.

Time cannot wither Christmas, for it belongs to eternity.

The world cannot shatter it, for it is union with Him who has overcome the world.

A PRAYER AT CHRISTMAS TIME

Lord, in all the stir
When Christmas comes around,
The games and the greetings,
The songs and the meetings,
The toys and joys and shining trees
The carol's sweet sound—
Father, in the midst of these,
Let us not forget
The fair Star of Christmas,
The Star that cannot set.
Let us lift our hearts and say,
"Glory be to God in heaven,
On Christmas Day!"

“...and on earth peace, good will toward men!”

PEACE AND GOOD-WILL were in short supply at the time angels sang above the hills surrounding Bethlehem nearly twenty centuries ago, and still there is need for more.

Joseph and Mary witnessed to Roman rule in their native land of Palestine by going to Bethlehem to list for taxation. Their flight into Egypt with a young son speaks vividly of the cruelty of Roman rulers who dared not risk competition in the field of politics. Jews were free in their own country only up to a certain limit, and they were constantly reminded that they were subject to the government centered in Rome. Any peace they had was bought at the price of submission to an alien, and generally hated, government.

Good-will walked tottering even among the leaders of Israel. Pharisees and Sadducees were the two major parties, but even they could not agree on such an important matter as immortality. The former believed in the resurrection, but the idea made no sense to the richer Sadducees. (St. Paul used this division of opinion to his advantage at a later date.) Herodians thought it wise to “get along” with the Romans as represented by Herod, and the Essenes took consolation in piety that paid little attention to outward circumstance. The rich oppressed the poor, and almost everyone could find someone to hate. Good-will was not very evident in that period of history.

“Peace in our time” was the hope of a notable statesman who found that his method of securing peace led to a World War in our generation. Some of those now living have shared in two world wars and another war that involved many nations. Little wars have plagued the world in recent years, and a “cold war” calls for constant consideration and billions of dollars annually. Peace? There is no peace in our international world.

Good-will can be found here and there, but bombastic tirades in the United Nations, rattling of missiles by power-mad nations, and demonstrations against persons and nations make it difficult to see this desirable human characteristic among the peoples of the earth in our time.

Nations are ill at ease and find it difficult to live happily with each other because people have little peace and good-will within themselves. People are perplexed, bewildered, afraid. In America, even at Christmas, far too many are primarily interested in financial returns. A bit more concern for the kind of persons we wish to be, and much less interest in what we can gain in prestige and economics will lead in the direction of inner stability. The introduction of meals with prayers of thanksgiving rather than with cocktails will do much to make midnight hours quiet and restful, even without the use of tranquilizers. A deep sense of reverence, a constant loyalty to right, and faith in God will give an individual inner peace that will lead to good-will in human relations. This is what Christmas is all about.

The Divine Father was so anxious for his people to have peace and good-will that he sent his holy Son to live that way, and to draw all men unto him. Christmas was never intended to rush and crush people to death. It was a demonstration of the quiet confidence of parents and children, of workers and wise men. The ringing bells, tingling tinsel, frantic merchants and purchasers — all this sort of thing has been added by people who have lost much of the original idea of Christmas, the birthday of the Christ.

The Christian Sun is wishing for all the “family” the “peace and good-will” about which the angels told the shepherds on the hills near beautiful Bethlehem.

Until 1962

With this 50th issue The Christian Sun rests its case until 1962. This has been a year of turbulent growth, for our Convention, for our denomination, for the universal church, and for the world in which we live. The turbulence has not been like that of the sea which rises and falls, foams and frets, and then returns placid again where it was. In human relations the turbulence has indicated growth. We now have the United Church of Christ; the World Council of Churches has greatly enlarged its fellowship; new nations have been born.

With this word of hope we close the book for 1961 and await the early dawn of a New Year, fresh from the hands of God. F.C.L.

A Host Of Christmas Assurances

By Andrew Vance McCracken

According to St. Luke's account of Christ's nativity, the first words spoken by the angel to the astonished shepherds "keeping watch over their flock by night" were "fear not." Then when the "good tidings of great joy" had been delivered, "suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host."

Perhaps the two words "fear not" have more meaning and relevancy at this Christmas season than ever before. We too are "sore afraid" — the victims of deep-seated anxiety and defensiveness. Our concern with fall-out shelters and whether or not we shall exclude our defenseless neighbors are frightening examples of the anxiety. We live in an atmosphere of chronic alarm that broods over us and weighs us down — destroying our dignity, unnerving our spirit and distorting our outlook. Ours is a generation of crises

We too need to hear angelic voices saying "fear not." We need to discern through the turgid storm clouds of our insecurity and through the fogs of our dread that host of Christmas assurances the remembrance of which will make it possible for each one to be of good faith and firm resolve. The Herald greets its readers with a salutation and a prayer for a blessed Christmas. Keep the day with hope, courage and faith. The ground of our assurance is a staunch belief in God's redeeming love, revealed supremely at Bethlehem.

—An Editorial in United Church Herald

A MEDITATION

By John G. Truitt, D.D.

AT BETHLEHEM

"Jesus was born at Bethlehem..."
Matthew 2:1.

What beautiful words, and what a divine and world-stirring fact! The fact that Jesus was born in the flesh on earth among men at all is God's doings and is marvelous in our sight.

At the way in which this fact was written, so plain along, as I say, so masterful in its simplicity, guided by the Spirit of God, written by a non-professional writer, of whom it was said "ignorant and unlearned," which of course was far from true, also makes it so wonderful. That it has been preserved for so long is marvelous, and yet since it is true it is really not so marvelous after all — it is too great to perish! It is eternal and beyond the ways of this world.

Bethlehem, house of bread! Jesus, the Bread from heaven sent! Jesus said: "I am the bread of life." Said he: "I am the bread which came down from heaven." Again he said: "Whoever eats this bread shall live for ever."

Yes, there you are: "God loved the world so much that he gave his only Son, that everyone who has faith in him may not die but have eternal life. It was not to judge the world that God sent his Son into the world, but that through him the world might be saved." (The New English Translation.)

It is to be more than beautiful songs, more than all our pre-Christmas plans, more than our gifts to one another, more than cards of remembrance sent to friends and neighbors far and near; more than delicious food and delightful fellowship; but it is to be also above all faith in Jesus, and a willingness to follow him. That is the kind of Christmas that will make us loving, giving and forgiving today, and through all the days that follow. Amen.

About

* * * * * SPIRITUAL CONCEPTIONS OF PEACE

To read eleven different statements from that many church groups on how to achieve peace gives both pause and surprise. But religious bodies have always had their differences over procedures.

Each of the eleven printed affirmations is an expression of a different conception of the spiritual basis on which to achieve peace and preserve civilization. Yet, in the aggregate, they constitute a single thought in the name of Almighty God expressed against any attempt which might be made to develop a system of government for the diverse peoples and nations of the earth in neglect of his fatherhood of them all.

The pronouncements present nothing new, nothing startling. In 1939, Pope Pius XII was joined by 38 other leaders, Protestant and Jewish, accepting the world challenge of war in these words:

"The present evils in the world are due to the failure of nations and peoples to carry out the laws of God. No permanent peace is possible unless the principles of the Christian religion are made the foundation of national policy and of social life."

So evident is that sacred proposition that it may be wondered why it should be necessary to repeat it again and again. The explanation is to be found in the weight of perversities of human conduct. Only those unacquainted with the history of the human race in the past ten centuries will think of the task of lifting the burden of sin from aching shoulders of mankind as being easy of accomplishment.

The power of greed and hatred, complete disregard for many laws, the dynamics of organized violence and crime, and the impact of rampant tyranny — when these forces are combined they can shake the globe. That is what they have done, are doing to a frightening degree, and will continue to do so long as they remain unopposed by superior spiritual energy of men of goodwill everywhere.

Certainly the conflict among nations is not new. It has been in progress for ages. Different names have been applied to it at various times, different conditions have affected it, and different methods have been employed in attempts to correct it.

The sum total of the various views on how to liquidate strife, remove its cause, bring about a lasting peace, and develop an acceptable society is the imperative requirement of the Creator and His Martyred Son as the fundamentals of life worth living on this man-tortured planet. All other courses have failed for reasons patently true.

The Reassurances In Christmas

By Richard K. Morton

The reassurances of Christmas begin with the experience of the amazed shepherds: indeed God the Most High will visit His people and will redeem them. He is indeed a God who loves — and thus must reveal Himself if He is to be fully loved. He cannot be deeply loved unless He is at least somewhat understood and present among them. The next reassurance is that He has not only entered the world in a form comprehensible to man — but He will remain and has a purpose among men.

Another reassurance lies in the fact now disclosed: it is possible to lift man above his fretful and anxious quest of things and status and power, to rejoice in the eternal and the divine. Man can himself be the dwelling place of the Most High. Whereas the Babe may have had only a stable or manger on that holy night, He may be found in the life of all who will let Him enter in.

The reassurances of Christmas lie, too, in the history of the centuries. There were many mighty forces that marshalled their strength to stamp out this new faith, but still it went on from victory to victory. There were many lives that had the chance to be the dwelling place of the Child, but they turned Him aside — yet He continued to find hospitality among both high and low. There were plausible forces and greedy enterprises that sought to win the minds and the institutions of men — but still the gates of evil and hate and worldliness have not prevailed against Him who became a Babe in Bethlehem!

More reassurances of Christmas lie in the experience of many millions through the years that He has indeed been born anew in them — they know He lives because He lives in their hearts! He is the Presence in their meditation; He is the Companion along the way; He is the Comforter in their place of suffering and sorrow; He is the end of all their aspirations.

Still more find reassurance, not only in this rebirth but also in the steady advance of an appreciation of the soundness and indispensability of His teachings — in this world of clamorous production, of scientific inventiveness, and military might. They recognize that principles enunciated many centuries ago find tremendous illustration and convincing vindication. They realize anew that no way of life has been found to offer more surely a way of redemption and an assurance of happiness.

Reassurances of the value and eternal quality of the Christmas spirit and power are to be found daily in all the various applications of the love of God as it is channeled through man. There is endless encouragement in the fact that people of every race and station and clime are finding in its principles that which unlocks the meaning of life and stirs the individual to seek fullness of life. Here is no story told of old and confined in relevance to a forgotten period. Here is no mere solution to a temporary crisis. Here is something for all mankind, in every age.

In this matchless story is found motivation and incentive for those in high and low station to transcend the bounds of race and class and creed and to be discontented with the rewards of the marketplace and the revelations of the laboratory. In this spirit man finds his higher self and envisions the framework of a better society, more like unto the kingdom of God.

Jesus was born in Bethlehem on that first Christmas Day. We give thanks and find reassurance in the glorious fact that He is born again in us and that the world strives to "give back the song which now the angels sing."

OUR CHRISTMAS WISH FOR YOU

God grant these gifts to you—
His star to lead you on your way.
The joy, the faith, the friendship, that comes with this Glad Day.
And, even in the New Year —
Like an answer to prayer,
The light of Peace to bless you — and guide you everywhere!

ALWAYS A STAR

There's always a Star,
If the eyes wish to see;
For the wise travel far,
When their vision is free.

There's always a Child
In a manger so bare,
But the angels of God
Stand guarding Him there.

Wise men of today
From near and afar
Seek light through the Child
In the peace of the Star.

AT CHRISTMAS

Are you willing—to stoop down and consider the needs and desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old;

to stop asking how much your friends love you, and to ask yourself whether you love them enough;
to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you;
to make a grave for your ugly thoughts and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open?

Are you willing to do these things for a day? Then you are ready to keep Christmas!

A Jeep For The Riggs

The Women's Fellowship of the Franklin Christian Church is attempting to raise $3,500 for a jeep delivered in India for the use of Dr. Ed Riggs.

A letter of appeal to friends reads "In far-off India and for long years past, Dr. Ed Riggs, one of God's servants, has ministered to the physical and religious needs of the people. Most of his patients are suffering from leprosy or tuberculosis. His field is large, spread over a vast territory; his medical stations many; and his patients many, many, many.

"Up to a short time ago, Dr. Riggs traveled in his work for the Master by jeep. But he traveled so far and went so often that his jeep is worn out."

Sun readers who would like to share in this gift to Dr. Riggs may send contributions (immediately, please!) to Mrs. J. A. Nicholas or Mrs. T. G. Humphries, Franklin, Virginia. Checks may be made out to the Franklin Women's Fellowship.

REULING WITH LUTHULI FOR NOBEL PRIZE

Dr. John Reuling, Africa secretary for our United Church Board for World Ministries, left Boston December 7 for Oslo, Norway, where he had been invited to attend all the ceremonies held December 10-11 in connection with the 1960 Nobel Peace Prize given to his long-time friend, Chief Albert John Luthuli. Dr. Reuling will then go to Southern Rhodesia and South Africa for official visits.

Chief Luthuli and Dr. Reuling were for six years fellow members of the faculty of Adams College in South Africa, later closed by the South African government. During those years a warm friendship developed and the two have been in almost constant contact since Dr. Reuling returned to this country in 1941.

Though born in Southern Rhodesia, where his parents were missionaries, Chief Luthuli's ancestral home was in the Groutville Mission on the coast of Natal near Durban, a mission organized by Aldin Grout, a representative of the American Board. Chief Luthuli was educated in our mission schools and at Adams College.

UNITED WORK IN JAPAN

December

24—The first American Board missionaries arrived in Japan in 1869, the first Evangelical and Reformed missionaries in 1879. Both groups became part of the United Church of Christ in Japan when it was formed in 1941.

Annaka

25—Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Beecken specialize in audio-visuals in addition to teaching at Niijima Christian Boys' School, teaching Bible classes, and serving as evangelistic missionaries.

Haramachi

26—Rev. and Mrs. Gilbert Schroer went to Japan in 1922; had trying prison experiences during World War II; he served as director of missionary education, E. and R. Church in U. S. 1945-54; now consultants for churches on Pacific Coast of Fukushima Prefecture.

Hiroshima

27—Dorothy Stroup was with U. S. Foreign Service in Japan and became missionary in 1960. Her English students were born about the time of the bombing and their essays reflect that Hiroshima must forever be a symbol of peace.

Kitami

28—Rev. and Mrs. Richard Lammers were term teachers and then became career missionaries to Japan in 1954. They are doing pioneering educational and evangelistic work on Hokkaido, northernmost island which is now being rapidly settled.

Kobe

29—Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Morrill are at Canadian Academy, school for missionary children, where she teaches and he is business manager; formerly at Kobe College.

Kyoto

30—Virginia Carson studied music at Virginia Intermont; Vienna, Austria; and Yale. She went as a term teacher, but has become career missionary teaching music at Doshisha Women's College.

31—Mr. and Mrs. Otis Carey (3rd and 4th generation missionaries respectively). He is professor of Doshisha University and she is medical supervisor for the 400 Interboard missionaries in Japan.

January

1—Robert Grant teaches at Doshisha University — very much alone since his wife, Jean, died tragically this fall. They were the first appointees of any denomination to reach Japan after World War II.

2—Rev. Paul Griesy was in Japan 1955-57 as representative of Carleton College and went back in 1960 as career missionary after B. D. from Yale.

3—Miss Alice Gwinn is only full-time American teacher in Doshisha Jr. High which has 900 students; also works with Doshisha church and teaches two Bible classes of university students.

4—Miss Esther Hibbard went to Japan for three years and has been there thirty! She teaches English in Doshisha Women's College and edits "The Japan Christian Quarterly."

5—Rev. Robert Howard went in 1960 to teach 3 years at Doshisha Senior High and to direct the Fellowship House (student center).

6—Dr. and Mrs. Allen Irwin decided while chaplain in Japan during Korean war that they wanted to return there as missionaries. They are in language school waiting to be assigned.

Boys and Girls—

Have you told your parents:

- That religious books and records are wonderful Christmas presents?
- That you would like to help in decorating your home for Christmas?
- That you would like to have a family service at home on Christmas Eve to celebrate the birth of Baby Jesus?
- That you would like to help with making the cookies this Christmas?
- That you would like to make some Christmas gifts for some people who may not get many?
- That you want to tell your S. S. Teacher "Thank you" in a very special way?
- That you may borrow some excellent religious books for a week or two from our own Church Library?
- That one of your drawings or finger paintings would make a much appreciated gift to Grandmother or to Grandfather?
- That a year's subscription to Youth magazine would be a fine gift for that "teen-ager" in your home?

Christmas Games

SANTA'S SLEIGH

Someone in the circle begins the story. "Santa's sleigh is on our roof, and in it he has put a toy airplane." The person next in the circle continues, "Santa's sleigh is on our roof and in it he brings an airplane and a basket of grapes." The third person repeats the first two items and adds one that begins with the letter c: the next must give in correct order the first three items and add a fourth that begins with the letter d, and so forth to the end of the alphabet.

It can be a lot of fun, and pity those persons toward the end of the alphabet.

WORDS

Provide each player with a pencil and paper. Ask them to write at the top: "Merry Christmas to You."

Next, ask them to make a list of as many words as possible from the letters in the Christmas message.

PINNING ON SANTA'S PACK

Place a large picture of Santa on the wall. Blind-fold each child in turn and see which one can thumb-tack a pack nearest to the right place. The others will have fun watching. The winner is given a small prize.

CHRISTMAS MEANS —

Christmas to some means presents,
 To others a Christmas tree,
 To some it may mean a party;
 That's not what it means to me.
 On Christmas we do receive presents.
 We have a Christmas tree, too,
 But to me it means the Christ-Child's birth;
 Is that what it means to you?

A GIFT FOR JESUS

"Have you put Jesus on the Christmas list?" asked the teacher.

"Put Jesus on the Christmas list?" queried a little girl.

"Yes," nodded the teacher; "we can give Jesus a gift on His Birthday."

"How come?" spoke up a ten-year-old; "I never thought we could give Jesus a present."

"Once Jesus said," came the answer, "Inasmuch as you did it to one of the least of these, you did it to me. When we give in this way, we keep Christ in Christmas."

WE REMEMBER JESUS

We remember Jesus
 On this Christmas Day.
 He was once a baby
 Lying on the hay.

We remember that he Taught us to be good.
 Saving what we ought to,
 Doing what we should.

We will try to serve him
 All our whole life through.
 Christmas Day—and always—
 We will love him, too!

CHRISTMAS STORY

A fourth-grade girl received a copy of the Society's Christmas Portion. "Unto You a Saviour," at a Christian education class in California. "Does it tell about the angels, the star and the Baby?" she asked. When told that it did, Mabel replied, "I don't read so well, but my ten-year-old big brother will read it to all of us on Christmas, the way you said we should." For a moment she looked down and continued: "Jesus' mother must have loved Him very much and hugged Him lots. I wish my Mom had time to love me like that. Maybe on Christmas, when she hears the Christmas Story, she will."

A Story for Children CAN CHRISTMAS EVER BE LOST?

By Robert T. Taylor

On December 22 Larry Brand, a young reporter, was sent on a strange assignment. His editor wanted him to write on the true meaning of Christmas. Larry talked with many business men, who told him it was a time set aside to develop good will. "Christmas," said Mr. Whipple, the owner of the local department store, "is a time when we raise charity funds to make people happy."

"Sure," agreed Mr. Best, owner of the shoe store, "it's also the time of brotherhood." Larry stopped at various places and found people busy wrapping toys and clothing for little children. Others were building manger scenes and practicing Christmas programs. On a street corner he happened to find a leaflet about Christmas, but he still didn't find Christmas.

Larry hurried back and reported to his editor, "Chief, Christmas is lost; but I picked up a few clues about it, like jingling bells and a mother holding a Child. It's also connected with a star, snow and reindeer." And so, on December 22 the Gazette ran an article called "Christmas Is Lost."

Soon after the paper came out, a Chinese man, whose name was Mr. Ming, appeared at the office with a Testament in Chinese. He told Larry and the editor that he had never lost Christmas and translated some Good News about a Baby in a stable.

A few minutes later a little Hungarian girl named Olga came into the office. "I know what Christmas really is," she said. "It's about how the Saviour of the whole wide world was born in Bethlehem."

People like Mr. Ming and Olga know the true meaning of Christmas. God is counting on each of us to help people remember the Christmas of the Bible — the Christmas that never can be lost.

With Candles -- Let Us Go Forward

Edna Bresko

E. Va. Social Action Chairman

Christian men and women can bring a spiritualizing force to the inner life of our nation by exemplifying confidence, character and courage in our daily living. In II Chronicles 7:14, we read, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways: then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins and will heal their land."

Spiritual values are indispensable. Because the Christian is what he is, someone different, he is able to influence for good those about him. The Christian must carry the message of the Gospel to all the world. A proper social concern must be given because it is part of the teachings of Jesus Christ.

Christians must be ALIVE that is:

Actively concerned in the processes of government. Christian citizens should take leadership in groups and organizations which are a part of their daily life.

Lighted with a love motivated by the Holy Spirit within us. Not all of us are good preachers and teachers, but God can use everyone of us.

Intelligently aware of Christian social responsibility including a proper concern for others. James reminds us that faith without works is dead. We cannot divorce ourselves from our social situations.

Vital in Christian living. Our lives will not always be perfect, but with God's help our greatest potential can be achieved. When established in right relationship to God, the Christian will have a vital, dynamic life that will have an impact upon those who surround him.

Effective in Christian witness. A dynamic Christian life speaks louder than words. This means displaying Christian virtues to our associates and sharing the problems of our neighbors.

With candles in our hands, let us go forward for Christ by making our Christian witness ALIVE, not only during this Christmas season, but all through the New Year.

A CHRISTMAS PRAYER

"O God, grant us hearts thankful for the Christ, Thy choicest gift, our dearest guest this day.

Let not our souls be busy inns that have no room, but quiet homes of prayer and praise where the needful cares of life are wisely ordered and put away, and wide, sweet places kept for One Who is no new Master, but a Friend long loved and known."

Amen.

Christmas Is A Blessing

Christmas is at once a time of remembrance and a time of anticipation. Families gather in festive mood, soon to become lost in reflection and reminiscence. Just so the family circle, keyed to anticipation of the surprises lurking in the tinsel-garlanded packages, looks forward to the unwrapping ceremony. Christmas is a time of remembering and of promise. One recalls "the hopes, the fears of all the years" that came to focus in the Babe of Bethlehem. And from the manger issues a lively hope for the promise of triumphant, indestructible life, and of joy beyond measure all declared unto mankind by Christ Jesus, Our Lord and Saviour. So it is at Christmas time that at whatever level, in whatever spirit one approaches that joy, memories are vivid, and hopes are lively. Yet if our Saviour, Jesus Christ, is not central to all our thoughts and activities memories are delusions and hopes are dupes. If all the gifts exchanged between friends and loved ones are given otherwise than in remembrance of the live hope He has planted in our hearts, the gifts are merely so many packages. Gilbert Keith Chesterton wrote, "It is in the heart that a parcel becomes a gift."

A Christmas Prayer

By Rev. Clyde L. Fields

Our Heavenly Father, we thank thee that thou hast entered our universe in the form of human flesh. Remove from our eyes and hearts the sophisticated scales and hardness that would prevent us from joining ancient shepherds as they moved with a holy hush to a holy manger. Grant that wise and foolish men from East and West may kneel and adore the Babe of Bethlehem, now become the only "Hope of the world."

Grant, O God, that our thoughts may turn from missiles and implements of death and destruction to peace and the Christ, who gives life everlasting. Help us to seek after values that make for human brotherhood rather than human annihilation.

We praise thee, O God, for placing the first Christmas in a family setting. Strengthen family ties of devotion that bind all our families together. Remind us again that all who have left our family circles with faith in Christ are together with us and the larger family in spirit. Grant that little children and youth may find Christ and Christmas in the truest sense in family circles. Teach us to learn to give as well as we have learned to receive.

We are truly grateful for the sharing of Christ among us through his body, the Church. Give us again a witness unafraid, a hope beyond despair, a mission beyond barriers, a zeal for integrity and right, a vision with compassion, and humility with courage.

Speak to us, O Holy Spirit, of Incarnation rather than commercialization; of service and sacrifice, rather than revelry and resting. May holy angels sing again in this year of our Lord, through Jesus Christ, in whose name we pray. Amen.

Youth Faces The Future

We the youth of the United Church of Christ affirm that God has made himself known to us in Jesus Christ and has called us into his Church. Believing that he seeks us in holy love, we would respond by joining together in covenant with him.

He gathers us into a loving fellowship in which we encounter one another as unique persons who are created in his image. We seek to express the spirit of this fellowship in all our relationships.

Our vocation is to witness to the message and mission of the church among all people, serving the world in the name of Christ, and striving toward the establishment of brotherhood, justice and peace. Our hope is in God who in Jesus Christ offers redemption to all men and gives promise to his kingdom of love.

CHRISTMAS

Christmas — a word written with red and green letters on fine white paper. Christmas — a dream of young children wrapped in warm slumber. Christmas — a time when people glance at the threatening sky, half hoping for snow. Christmas — a season when hearts are high and full of happiness, when postmen are heaped high with greetings from other friends, when mysterious packages from grandpas and grandmas arrive. But most of all, Christmas — a feeling, a glow. A time when Love reigns supreme, when men's thoughts are turned toward Peace.

Christmas has its own set of sights, sounds, and even smells. Right after Thanksgiving towns put on their holiday brightness. Gay bells and colorful lights decorate city streets. Store windows gleam with Christmas treasures. People shake the wrinkles out of their smiles for the joyous season. At homes, mothers work long hours in kitchens, the only apparent result being a thousand delicious, spicy odors that assail the small red noses of children coming in from play. Folks rush to and fro on city sidewalks, dashing in and out of shops, exchanging good wishes as they hurry through their shopping. The excitement mounts as groups of carolers work their ways across the town singing the traditional songs of "good tidings." All things add to the scramble and tension until Christmas Eve, when it all subsides, and a warm glow of happiness settles on the town. Late at night, when children are fast asleep, the older ones sit together in quietness, straining to hear the voices of the angels that sang that first Christmas. Through the holy stillness, hearts are raised in thankful prayers to Him who gave the greatest gift of all.

The beauty of Christmas is all around. But it is very true that an open heart sees much more of this special beauty than careless eyes do. It is so easy to become so involved in worrying about the season that one misses most, or perhaps even all of the deeper meaning of Christmas. This understanding will not come by itself. It must be found in acts of love and sincerity.

At this special time of the year, as we are preparing ourselves for a new season, we should keep in mind the Great Gift we have from God. This Christmas instead of thinking, "What are you getting for Christmas?", think, "What are you giving to Christmas?" Let's give this Christmas to Christ, where it belongs.

Have a merry, merry Christmas, and may God bless you in the coming year!

Most sincerely,
Cathie Sandstrom

A CHRISTMAS WISH

I ask for you
At this sweet, hallowed time.
A stillness and a star,
And then a room
Where little children are,
Where yellow lamp-light
Sweetly sheds
Haloes of glory round their heads;
The will to worship
The urge to give
A sense of holiness
About the place you live;
Goodwill to all mankind,
Surcease from grief, release
From dull regret
A deep abiding peace.
Frances McKinnon Morton

Franklin Pilgrim Fellowship were guests of the Bertie Rowland Circle and the nine counselors at supper December 17. Afterwards they went caroling in the homes of shut-ins. Following that they had refreshments at the church.

The P. F. group at Parkway Church, Winston-Salem, met at the church Saturday morning, December 16, to decorate the tree, bag the treats, and otherwise be helpful. They will share in caroling December 22. Saturday evening, December 30, they will have a Christmas-New Year's party with dancing, games, and pizza eating. Each boy is to invite a girl (or vice versa) and each couple may invite another couple.

FAMILY ADVENT SERVICE

By Harold Tribble

The Hunterdale United Church had unusually good attendance at their December 3, 5:00 p.m. service. Using the suggested program in the November issue of The Church School Worker, the Nursery through Primary grades sang Christmas Carols around a manger scene made by S. M. Joyner. Danny Goodness played the part of Joseph and Suzanne Gullette played the part of Mary. Mrs. James Campbell read a Christmas story. Following the service a covered dish supper was served. This was made possible by the faithful work of Mrs. Robert Hollowell and her committee. Mr. Chester Burgess set up the tables and Mrs. Edgar Blythe decorated same. During the supper Edgar Blythe and Reginald Kitchen were honored on their 38th and 28th birthdays, respectively.

I Hear These Bells At Christmas

By Charlotte Heide

School Bells bringing the gift of knowledge to minds seeking the life abundant —

Rhythm bells bringing the gift of trust in the tight little hands of a five year old as he lifts his radiant face to life —

Doorbells bringing gifts of warm relationships which weave themselves into the circle of Thy care —

Telephone Bells bringing gift messages of hope, of despair, of need, of kindness, as they sing across the wires —

Salvation Army Bells bringing the gift of remembrance that another's suffering is also our own —

Sleigh Bells bringing the gift of aliveness through the crispness of the out-of-doors, the brightness of diamond studded snowflakes, the ever-changing panorama of ice and stars vibrantly brilliant in a cold clear sky —

Wedding Bells bringing the gift of self to another self, uniting themselves in holy love —

Carillon Bells bringing soft deep tones of reassurance across a world of reverberating fears — and Christmas Bells bringing the gift of the Christ to all mankind because no man can hold back the eternal flow of love.

These are the Bells I hear at Christmas!

Christmas "Specials" At Winston-Salem

"The Round Robin" of Parkway church, Winston-Salem, indicates that in addition to the usual Christmas observances they had a number of special activities.

A "mitten tree" was placed in the sanctuary during December, and trimmed with mittens and socks to give to those less fortunate.

A "Seven Days of Christmas" tree (partridge in a pear tree) was on the communion table during Advent to help create color and joy of the season.

The church was progressively decorated during the season, with palms in the sanctuary being decorated and a live tree decorated in narthex, which was later transplanted in the lawn. A creche was made by the Pilgrim Fellowship for the narthex table.

Advent candle ceremonies were sent out for use by each family on the four Sundays and on Christmas Eve. The last one was to be lit in silence, with each one naming it for his deepest desire.

The Christmas Bells

(Adapted from "The Christmas Bell" by Henry W. Longfellow.)

One Christmas morning a poet sat in his little New England home, trying to write a new poem with a message for the world. He was very sad for there was a war on, and so Christmas that year was not a happy time for the people. As he sat thinking, the bells in the little church in the valley began to ring. "I hear you, bells," the poet said aloud. "I hear you playing the old familiar carols. I know what you are saying so wildly and sweetly." It seemed as if the bells heard the man, for they rang softly then, as if they were listening for his words.

"Peace on earth, good-will to men," said the poet. "That is your message. It was the message of the angels who announced the birth of Christ so long ago in Bethlehem. It is the message of the bells of all Christian lands." The bells rang louder, as if they agreed, and the music echoed throughout the whole snow-covered valley. "But don't you know there is no peace on earth?" the poet asked. "Can't you see how man fights man, how hate goes on and on?" He spoke sadly. "What a wonderful promise it was when the angels sang of peace from the heavens to the shepherds in the hills."

Then the bells rang louder and deeper than ever. They seemed to be in the very room with him and their message was clear. "You must have faith," they cried. "God is not dead nor does He sleep. Believe us for we know."

"I will believe it," cried the poet. "The wrong shall fail and the right shall win," called the bells. "There will be peace on earth for those who are just and kind and good. This is our message. Let it be yours too."

So the poet went to his desk and began to write a poem about the message of the Christmas bells, so that all the world might read and find comfort. Thus he wrote the lovely words:

"God is not dead; nor doth He sleep!
The wrong shall fail, the right prevail,
With peace on earth, goodwill to men."

—Warwick Messenger

I Heard The Bells On Christmas Day

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

I heard the bells on Christmas day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet the words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men.

I thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along the unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good will to men.

And in despair I bowed my head;
"There is no peace on earth," I said,
"For hate is strong, and mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good will to men."

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep:

"God is not dead, nor doth he sleep;
The wrong shall fail, the right prevail
With peace on earth, good will to men.

Till, ringing, singing on its way,
The world revolved from night to day,
A voice, a chime, a chant sublime,
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

"NO VACANCY" – Even In 1962?

J. Earl Danieleley

A few years ago, a group of us drove to the mountains of North Carolina to attend a performance of the outdoor drama, "Unto These Hills," at Cherokee. After the dramatic production, we left the theatre, started driving toward home and looked for a place for the night. We saw many motels and homes which had rooms to rent, but in every case, the sign out front read, "No Vacancy." We drove many miles and saw this sign repeatedly. How tired, frustrated and unwelcome one can feel when it is late and there is no room!

"No Vacancy," Then

My mind wandered to another time in another land. According to the story, there was "no room in the inn." But that situation was quite different — there was a baby to be born and so a stable had to be used for the birth of the child whose name was to be called "Jesus." How often we have been displeased with the attitude of the innkeeper. If we had been there, we would have made room for the expectant mother and we would have been especially pleased to have had the Christ child in our home.

"No Vacancy," Now

But what about today? This same Christ still lives and seeks room in the hearts and lives of people. So frequently we are guilty of being "too busy," of being too much concerned with "coming, going and doing"; of hanging out the "no vacancy" sign and going "about our own business." And today, in business, in the lives of individuals and sometimes even in the lives of churches, Christ is crowded out, because there is "no room" for Him.

As we approach the Christmas season, let us stop for a moment and consider our own attitudes. May our prayer be in the words of the well-loved hymn: "Come to us, abide with us, our Lord Immanuel."

—Churchmen's Fellowship

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS AT ELON

Dr. and Mrs. J. Earl Danieleley entertained students and faculty members at Open House Thursday, December 14, in their home. Students called from 3 until 5 p.m., and faculty and staff members were invited from 7 until 9 p.m.

President and Mrs. Danieleley entertain students and faculty each year preceding the Christmas holidays at the college, which this year began December 16. Classes will resume at 8 a.m., January 2.

The Renewal Of Christmas

By William Joyner

During the Christmas season we always hear a multitude of bitter complaints about the wrong ways in which this holiday is celebrated. Since such complaints will be made in abundance elsewhere, let us consider here some of the positive values of the season. One of the chief values is renewal. Of course, it is true that after we take care of all the special arrangements and shop for all the gifts, we may be quite exhausted by December 25. But the very fact that these things are done in a spirit of genuine, outgoing, love for others, causes us to be inwardly renewed even though we might be very tired physically.

The glad change of emphasis from getting to giving, the gay lights and decorations, the very presence of beauty almost everywhere — all of these add to the value of Christmas. Most important of all, of course, is the presence of the One for whom this holiday is named. Even though our celebration of Christmas may include Santa Claus and many other non-Biblical additions, the spirit of Jesus Christ is still in Christmas. We recognize him in the quiet loveliness of Christmas pageants and nativity scenes in the churches, but we may also recognize him in the midst of our shopping on busy streets and our preparations at home. We must try to recognize him everywhere. That is why God entered the world on Christmas — so that men might know that God is not isolated and far off from them.

The title Immanuel, means "God with us." Let us rejoice and live in this truth rather than spend our time pronouncing words of condemnation on everything in Christmas which does not label itself, "Christian." Let us thank God that our whole weary, broken world comes once again before the manger of the Christ where it is offered rest and renewal and salvation.

—The Road to Damascus

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY

The way to be happy on Christmas Day is to give something away. Perhaps it may be impossible for you to give or even help provide a Christmas for the less fortunate. But there are other things to give. How about forgiveness for some real or imagined wrong? How about a friendly hand-clasp to some lonesome friend? How about a warm smile, maybe to your newsboy or store clerk?

Such might be all — and the only thing some people need. The way to be happy on Christmas day is to give something way. Try this and see.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR

As we come to the end of the Old Year, I want to thank readers of The Sun for their words of appreciation and encouragement concerning this page of our Church Paper, and as we stand at the beginning of the New Year I want to extend to them Greetings and Best Wishes. My wish for the New Year is summed up in a quotation from the Watchman-Examiner which expresses it much better than I could do:

"May you have enough happiness to keep you sweet; enough trials to keep you strong; enough sorrow to keep you human; enough hope to make your heart sing; enough labor to keep you from rust; enough leisure to make you broad; enough religion to make you value the best; enough love of Christ in your heart to make you glad to serve."

Growth Toward Christian Maturity

Background Scripture: I Corinthians 3; Ephesians 4:11-24.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 1:15-23.

Memory Selection: Therefore let us leave the elementary doctrines of Christ and go on to maturity. Hebrews 6:1 (RSV).

Today's lesson is the last of fourteen lessons on Christian growth! Every one has emphasized and illuminated some phase or some factor in Christian growth. Some lessons emphasized growth in the individual life, some in social relationships, some in church fellowship. Running through them all was the insistence that growth is an essential factor in the Christian life. The Chris-not static; it is dynamic. Growth is the basic law of the Christian life. It is not an elective; it is required. We must grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The teacher will do well to review briefly the whole series of lessons as a background for today's discussion.

tian life which does not continue to grow, begins to die. Christianity is

SOME TESTS OF GROWTH

When I was a boy, eager to grow, I would back up against the trim on the kitchen door and have my mother or father measure me against a mark that had been made a while before — and often not much of a while before — to see if I had grown. Well there are some simple ways in which we can see whether we have grown in our Christian life. Only a few can be listed here.

1. Does my Bible mean more to me than it did when I began my Christian life?
2. Do I give a larger proportion of my income to the Church and to charity?
3. Is prayer more real to me? Do I pray more? Do I pray in larger terms?
4. Do I love Christ more than I did ten years ago? Is he more real to me? Am I more fully committed to his will and way?
5. Am I less prejudiced toward people of other races and religions? (That is a good one, and many folks will flunk on that question.)
6. Do I control my tongue and my temper better than I formerly did?
7. Am I easier to get along with in all my social contacts?
8. Does the Church and the Kingdom have first place in my life?
9. Am I more charitable in my judgments?
10. Am I the slave of the same old habits, or do I have increasing mastery over them?
11. Am I willing to stand by my Christian convictions in public and in private?
12. Am I willing to give up my pet peeves and my cherished grudges, to forgive and to forget?
13. Am I more ready to respond to some call for service in the Church or in the community?
14. Am I satisfied and complacent, or do I still feel a deep yearning for a deeper faith and a richer experience of Christ?
15. Do I look backward to "the good old days" or forward to the better days?
16. Is the "old time religion good enough for me" or do the times demand a religion that is relevant to life today?
17. Am I concerned primarily with saving my soul, or am I genuinely concerned with a redeemed world?

Babes In Christ

Jesus said that unless a man is born again, he can not enter or see the Kingdom of heaven. He was not speaking about a heaven of pearly gates or golden streets. On another occasion he said that except one become as a little child, he can not enter into the kingdom of heaven. When a person becomes a Christian he comes in as a baby. This may take place by a process or it may take place in an instant. There is no need to quarrel or quibble about that. It is no reflection on a person that he was at one time a baby, or a little child. And it is no reflection on a person that at one time he was a babe in Christ or a child in the faith. But it is a reflection and a disgrace if he stays that way. Thousands of people have never grown up emotionally or spiritually. They are still babes and children. There is a difference between being a child and being childish. Countless Christians have never grown up either in knowledge or grace. For instance, there will be many older young people and even adults, whose "noses will be out of joint" if they do not get an apple and a bag of candy at the Sunday school Christmas party. What pastor does not know of grown men and women who act like spoiled children in church matters? They would be disasters if they were not so tragic. Folks get out of sorts with the minister or members of the church and leave the church for the most childish reasons. Paul's words are in point here: When we become a man we ought to put away childish things!

Dear Friends:

As you receive this Christmas edition of The Christian Sun, very few of our children are here on our campus. They have either left or are leaving for various places over North Carolina and Virginia. When Christmas Day arrives the campus will be a very lonely place for our children will be away visiting their relatives and friends. This loneliness that we of the staff experience at this reason is in reality a source of joy and happiness to us for we know that this means each of our boys and girls is visiting in someone's home having the time of his or her life.

We always eagerly look forward to their return to the campus to hear them tell of the wonderful time they have had on their visits. Only one who lives and works with these boys and girls can realize how much these visits mean to each of them.

For everything you have done for us during this past year we want to say a great big "thank you." It is difficult to put into words our deep appreciation for the fine support we receive from many of you as individuals as well as many of our churches. As we think back over the year we think of many gifts, both large and small, that have come our way and we are so very, very grateful.

We at the Children's Home would like to take this opportunity to wish for each of you a very Merry Christmas and a prosperous and happy New Year.

The biennial session of The Southern Convention will be held at Bethlehem Church, Nansemond County, Virginia, May 1, 2, 3, 1962. The guest speaker will be Mrs. George Kahlenberg. Moderator of the General Council, from Two Rivers, Wisconsin.

The Carol That Never Was Sung

By Alfred Hassler

The first Christmas eve, of course, was a very important event. The birthday of the Child called for the biggest celebration the heavenly hosts had ever had. Even the Carols, held in reserve for ages for some really special event, would be sung.

The choir was to be one of Heaven's very best, with some exceptionally rich angelic tenors and basses brought in from the glee club to help out. All the stars had been rubbed with a special polish, and one brand new star added just for the occasion. The Carols were quite puffed up with pride and excitement, and they all promised solemnly to be on hand in plenty of time.

On the great night, everything went off fine. The stars shone as they had never shone before, the angel choir outdid itself in paeans of joy, and the Carols were a great success. There was only one little flaw, and hardly anyone ever noticed it. One of the Carols didn't get there in time.

In fact, it didn't get there at all. It was quite a sweet Carol, too, the angel singers told each other, a little sadly. It had been a pity not to have sung it.

The Carol was very penitent. It had stopped on the way, it explained vaguely. Something had got its attention, and it had stopped, and been late. Questioning by the Choirmaster produced little more. The Carol got vaguer and vaguer as the questions became sharper and sharper. Only one thing it seemed sure about.

It would never happen again, the Carol promised earnestly.

But it did.

Down through the ages, when the Carols would gather to celebrate the Child's birthday, the Last Carol would always be late — too late. The choirs sang in the great cathedrals and churches, and carolers stood in the snow outside warm windows lit with candle or lamp or electric bulb, but the Last Carol never was on hand. In spite of all the solemn resolutions it made, each year it turned up with some vague excuse or even none at all.

They were very patient with the Carol, but of course one can be patient only so long. All the protests, all the reasoning, seemed to have no results. The Carol would be ashamed and remorseful, and would promise to do better the next time, but each year the same thing would happen all over again. The Last Carol was quite incorrigible.

When nearly twenty long centuries had gone by with the Last Carol still not sung, they brought the situation to the Throne Room. There they explained, more in sorrow than in anger, about the Carol that was always late, and so had never helped to celebrate the Child's birthday, and they asked what ought to be done with the Carol.

There was a long silence and then, at a sign, they left, and the Last Carol was summoned. The Last Carol was ashamed and frightened and hung its head as it stood in the Throne Room, and explained, with no more vagueness, why it had always been late.

Each year there had been something different, it admitted sheepishly. Sometimes it had been a man in a dungeon, or people waiting to be cast into the arena, or burned at the stake. Sometimes it had been men at war, lonely and discouraged and longing for peace. Often it had been men and women whose spirits had fallen low in the face of great obstacles, whose faith in love was almost extinguished and who could not join in the rejoicing over the Child's birthday because it had seemed to them the Child had been born in vain.

Always, explained the Carol simply, it had seemed important to stop with these for a while, and somehow it had always meant being late. "But next year—" began the Carol. But the Voice from the Throne interrupted.

"Next year," said the Voice, "you will do as you have done. Next year and" said the Voice with mingled sweetness and sorrow, "for many years to come. For you are the Carol that must be voiceless until all men sing together in a mighty chorus that covers the earth. Only in the hearts of men who have seen the vision," said the Voice, "can you honor the Child until all men love each other as He loved them."

"Then," said the Carol wistfully, "must I be silent forever?"

"Not so," said the Voice, and the full choir of angels had never sounded so richly majestic. "They flee from it, in fear and greed, but with their fear there is shame, and through their greed shines love. One day they will cast out their fear and let love lead them into the rich habitation I have prepared for them. Then," said the Voice, "all men will join in singing the sweetest carol of all — the song of universal brotherhood."

Christmas is a time of giving — not merely of gifts, but of one's love and joy, happy and kindly thoughts toward others, and spreading the spirit of Christ. — Bethlehem Bulletin

Mature In Christ

A father who was "baby-sitting" one night heard a dull thud and then a cry from his daughter's bedroom. He rushed in and found the little girl lying on the floor where she had fallen out of her bed. Assuring himself that she was not hurt, he asked her what had happened. She said, "Daddy, I guess I fell out of bed because I went to sleep too close to where I got in bed!" All unconsciously she summed up a tragic fact in the lives of many members of the church. Many think that the important things, the only thing that counts, is to profess Christ, and to join the church. Then they proceed to sit down, and even to go to sleep. They feel little if any impulse to grow, and do even less about it. One must be born as a child into the kingdom, but he does not have to remain that way; indeed he dare not remain that way. He should grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The Christmas Symbols

By Edwin Osgood Grover

The real meaning of Christmas cannot be understood until we know the deep significance of the Christmas symbols. It is little wonder that in the confusion and change of twenty centuries we have almost lost the real Christmas spirit, although we cherish many of the outward forms and ceremonies that used to mean so much. Let us keep watch over our own hearts lest we lose in the beautiful symbols of Christmas the still more beautiful things they symbolize.

The Tree

The Christmas tree is only the symbol of something better. It is more than a receptacle for the candles, the glittering chains of tinsel and the beautiful gifts. From the beginning of the world the Tree has powerfully influenced man's life. He has worshipped at its shrine, lived beneath its branches, and been buried at its foot. The evergreen tree has always been the symbol of the immortal Tree of Life, that divine tree that knows no death. So the Christmas Tree has become a symbol of Immortality — of eternal life and eternal growth.

The Candles

As the gleaming star led the Wise Men of old to Bethlehem and to the Little Child in the manger, so should each Christmas candle upon the glowing tree be to us a symbol of this ancient glory. Who knows but that if we should follow the gleam of the Christmas candles we, too, might discover the Little Child and learn to be like him?

The Gifts

The essence of Christmas is giving. What would Christmas be without Christmas gifts — the outward expression of the inward desire to make someone else happy. And so we symbolize God's great gift to men by giving to others the things that they desire. Every triquet on the tree is our poor attempt to symbolize this great and holy gift.

The Carols

The Christmas Carols we sing now are but echoes of the heavenly song which the Angels sang on that first Christmas morning of "Glory to God in the highest and on earth Peace, Good Will toward men!" Unless we sing our Christmas songs in the Christmas spirit and hear in them an echo of the heavenly song, we miss the real beauty and significance of the Christmas Carols.

Santa Claus

Every Santa Claus that ever came down the chimney laden with Christmas gifts is only a symbol of the Wise men, who, beholding the star that stood above Bethlehem, came with their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh and laid them at the feet of the Little Boy who brought the first Christmas. So, when we play Santa Claus, let us not forget to bring our gifts to others in the same spirit that prompted the Wise Men of old.

(Dr. Grover is a member of First Congregational Church, Winter Park, Florida. Now 91, he wrote the above 50 years ago and has sent it as his Christmas greetings to friends this year. He formerly served as vice president and Professor of Books at Rollins College. He became the next door neighbor and friend of Mrs. Lester thirty-five years ago.)
