FREE WILL BAPTIST MISSIONARIES TO ALASKA

On this front page are pictured our Free Will Baptist missionaries to Alaska, the Rev. and Mrs. D. L. Whaley and sons, Vernon and Rodney. Mr. Whaley states: "In an article that appeared in a July issue of 'The Free Will Baptist,' I informed you that a door had opened to property that could well be developed to adequate church property, which also had living quarters. At that time we were in need of $3,000 in order to be able to make the down payment by the last of the summer. Because of the faithfulness of our heavenly Father, the needed amount was supplied, plus an additional $2,000 which made the construction an extension possible. This afforded two restrooms and one classroom. We purchased a 40 by 20 foot surplus building and moved it back of the church which will give five more classrooms."

The seating capacity of the auditorium is 175. There is also a respectable three bedroom apartment. The balance due on this property is approximately $16,000.

Last summer Vernon's vision went as low as 20 2500 in his right eye, which was a complete loss of its use. Many encouraging letters were received from prayer supporters. In October a most wonderful announcement was made by the doctor that the inflammation had subsided and his vision was normal. The doctor acknowledged that this was a work of the Lord. This is declared to be an incurable disease and Vernon will always be under treatment, but the Whaleys are trusting the Lord for continued victory.

Religion in Review, 1959

TO review the world of religion during the Year of Our Lord, 1959, is, in essence, to review the march of events in the world in general; for much of what monopolized the headlines and claimed priority in the minds of men was of direct religious significance.

This was the year of the Great Unmasking. Beneath grinding cameras and television lights, facing not only investigating committees but also the disillusioned eyes of John Q. Public, people whose names had become household words confessed to sports-fixing and quiz show rigging. The word "payola" with its dubious connotations pushed its way into common usage; the use of "call girls" was described as a generally accepted phase of big business public relations; sports idols were revealed to have gangland ties—and front pages rather than church pages for once told the story of moral bankruptcy.

This was the year of the Great Debate. With the presidential tourney still a year away, the question of the propriety (to name the necessity) of religious tests for candidates for high office was already very much in the air.

And this was the year of many other front-page stories with church-page significance. Early spring uprisings in fabled Tibet focused attention on Red brutalities, were climaxed with the flight of the god-king, Dalai Lama, into India. Chairman Khrushchev visited the United States, and playwrights sprawled Christian crosses across the skies which (whatever else might be said about their appropriateness) reminded the basic difference in the ideologies which met face to face across the conference table. Typhoon Vera slashed across Japan leaving her wake of heartache. Her sister, Sarah, pounded Korea to cut new ears in the little land that already bears so many; raging floods evicted 5,000,000 from their homes in India; multiplied thousands of Formosans dug for bodies in the rubble left by Typhoon Ellen; famines, floods, droughts and earthquakes etched their dismal pattern of suffering across the globe—and wherever disaster went, the Church went too with its medicine and its message.

The United Nations proclaimed World Refugee Year, to run from mid-'59 until mid-'60, and the Church in its missionary enterprise showed every sign of seizing upon this as both responsibility and opportunity to serve in the name of Christ.

Conversely, this was also the year of church-page stories with front-page significance. Long-standing Protestant-Catholic differences in the matter of birth control received new attention, reached out into matters of government aid and sparked top-level debate.

The call of Pope John XXIII for "an ecumenical council for the universal church" was discussed and debated and generally defined by Protestants as in actuality the proclamation of a Roman Catholic on ecumenicity rather than any interfaith venture.

Evangelist Billy Graham suffered a physical slow-down in the early months of 1959, and many concerned Christians learned to rattle off "angio spastic edema of the macula of the left eye" as easily as they would discuss a common cold or headache. But Graham and his team went on to post one of the most significant records in the history of evangelism when in Australia and New Zealand they ministered to an aggregate attendance of 2,309,800 and registered 111,269 "decisions for Christ."

Church leaders, incensed by the tidal flow of obscenity in the mails, used pulpit, press and pressure in vigorous counterattack, saw governmental leaders take up the fight and press for stronger and more efficient legislation.

The question of racial segregation was far from answered, although tension spots below the Mason-Dixon line in the U. S. A. shared the spotlight with problems related to the apartheid policy in South Africa.

Karl Barth touched off a brief-but-heated furore with his "Letter to a Pastor in the German Democratic Republic," interpreted by some as an appeal to Protestants in East Germany to cease from any active resistance to Communist controls.

In Kerala, South India, church groups rose up in protest when their primary and secondary schools were to be put under the direct supervision of their local Communist government, persevered until the national parliament of India stepped in to order the dissolution of the Red rule.

In Japan, the Christian minority (less than one half of one per cent) celebrated the centennial of Protestant missions in their land. Numerous observances were held, one of the most colorful and impressive the Osaka Crusade conducted in May by Dr. Bob Pierce at the request of 400 churches in the populous Osaka-Kyoto-Kobe area. Complete with a 75-piece symphony orchestra for musically-literate Osaka, the event attracted over 93,000—and saw an exact total of 7,500 recorded "decisions for Christ."

In Colombia, conditions for Protestants seemed to worsen, then go suddenly better, next to turn into a sudden emergency opportunity for Christian ministry and evangelism.

On the general religious scene, the calendar was dotted with assemblies and conventions and councils of major significance. Early in the year the Nyborg Assembly in Denmark brought together 80 representatives from 18 countries (on both sides of the Curtain) for a meeting with significance deemed far out of importance to its size. In May, the East Asia Christian Conference held in Kuala Lumpur, Malaya, attracted delegates from the "younger churches" of 14 countries. In August the 90-member policy making Central Committee of the World Council of Churches voted to encourage the development of contacts between the Russian Orthodox Church and the World Council, and to call for the discontinuation of nuclear tests, among other important actions. And also in August, 100,000 German Protestants gathered for the 1959 Kirchentag—ninth German Evangelical Church Day Congress in Munich.

Throughout the year, statistics told the story of the importance of religion on the world scene. In the United States, the steadily increasing church membership had pushed its way up to the record high of 109,557,741 (1958 totals), according to the 1960 Yearbook of American Churches.

Strengthening Our Churches

(Lesson for January 10)

Lesson: Acts 14:19-28.

Golden Text: 2 Thessalonians 3:5.

I. INTRODUCTION

The apostle, Paul, was an evangel; and as such he was faced with stern opposition; but out of them all God delivered him. The churches were also faced with opposition. If it had not been for Paul's deep concern for his converts in the churches, many would have drifted back into the world. The same may be said of young converts today. They cannot be left alone to face the enemies of God. Encouragement is essential in the young Christian's life. Such encouragement and help must come from the older Christians. Paul recognized this fact; therefore, he spent much time revisiting the already organized churches.

Just as in Paul's day, there are many churches today which need encouragement and strengthening. The larger, more capable churches, as well as God's minister, can do much to help the newly organized or weak church. Yet, the very opposite is sometimes the case. If Christianity is to progress, there must be strong, spiritual churches.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Where was the man who had been miraculously healed when the mob stoned Paul? (Acts 14:19).

2. Not even a shower of stones can halt the man whose work for the Lord is not yet done (Vs. 20).

3. Preaching in the power of God prepares other hearts to receive the gospel (Vs. 21).

4. Miracles magnify our Maker and His power, but it is the gospel that brings deliverance from sin (Vs. 22).

5. It is one thing to preach the gospel and win souls to Christ; it is another and important thing to establish the believers (Vs. 22).

6. The choice and induction of church officers is a solemn matter and should never be treated lightly (Vs. 23).

7. God leads and guides His servants in their work, but He also leads them home again to give reports (Vv. 24, 25).

8. The home church of the missionaries greatly rejoices to have them return and tell of their work (Vs. 26).

9. It is a sign of good missionary interest when the whole church gathers to hear a missionary's report (Vs. 27).

10. Diligent missionary workers need an extended furlough after laboring on the field for several years (Vs. 28).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. At Lystra, Paul and Barnabas had penetrated into a region of strong pagan worship of idols. According to this pagan belief, Lystra was watched over by Jupiter, the ruler of the pagan gods who always was accompanied by the god of eloquent speech, Mercury. The people were taught that, long before their time, Jupiter had become displeased with the city, had assumed human form and went to live in the palace of the king, Lycaon. The king, refusing to believe that his visitor was really Jupiter, had a stranger in the city slain and his roasted flesh served to his visitor, Jupiter. The story says that the god, Jupiter, became enraged at this insult, burned down the palace and turned Lycaon into a wolf. Such was the superstition which held the people in great fear of offending their god, Jupiter.—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

2. The church in every age needs to be warned against the bitter prejudice and mob violence that so nearly ended Paul's career. It begins with an unreasoning rejection of anything different from "our people" and what they have always done and believed. It builds up with bitter and exaggerated charges against those who dare to be different, and it issues in the irresponsible actions of a frenzied crowd. "No 'justice' is so certain to be injustice as mob judgment."

This does not mean that Christians ought to believe, or even entertain with favor every new idea that comes along. It does mean that both the new and the old need to be examined in the light of God's Word, and either held or rejected according to its teaching.—Standard Commentary.

3. Paul was left for dead, but while in that condition he was caught up in the spirit to paradise and saw unutterable things. Paul did not stay there at that time, but came back to preach a little longer. He writes of this experience in 2 Corinthians 12:14. He does not say it was himself, but he said he knew a man who had this experience, fourteen years before. This man was undoubtedly Paul himself, describing what took place when he was stoned at Lystra, fourteen years before he wrote 2 Corinthians. All this experience was made possible because Jesus was crucified, buried and raised again.—Selected.

4. We do not destroy an idea by killing the man who holds it. The Jews who came down from Iconium and Antioch (Antioch of Asia Minor and not of Syria) were unable to match Paul's arguments, and therefore they tried to kill him by stoning him. Doubtless, if they had been able to kill Paul, the doctrine of salvation by faith would have still lived. But they acted as if stones were the final argument in the world of Christianity. The only way to defeat an idea is to find a competing one that is more reasonable, more vital, and more nearly immortal. Men and women who are truly believers in the Christian faith are convinced that it is a way of life that meets such standards.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

5. Modern scientists have discovered that there is a measurable increase in the physical energy of the person who has just received encouragement in his work. Nothing is better fitted to give that encouragement than the knowledge that his efforts are succeeding. The greater the task and the keener the interest of the worker in it, the more important it is to know that his labors have not been in vain. This is one of the great values of missions, and especially of the kind of missionary work in which a church gives substantial support directly to a missionary and receives frequent reports of his activities. Such a church will have its attention diverted from the petty annoyances that frequently cause trouble in churches and it will be more enthusiastic and effective in all its work.—Selected.

6. The daughter of a blatant unbeliever was critically ill. The girl's mother was devout, practicing Christian. Often she had prayed for the daughter's conversion. The daughter weakened progressively. As she neared death, she said to her father, "Mother has often tried to get me to put my faith in Christ and become a Christian. I am dying and I am not ready to die. Ask you now, 'Am I to follow your infidelity, or am I to trust her Saviour?'" The father dearly loved his daughter. Weeping, he said, "My infidelity holds no hope for you in this dark hour. Take your mother's God, your mother's Christ, and your mother's Bible!"—Selected.

Incentives are a Must!

by James E. Adams

BEFORE WE CAME to Formosa from the mainland, one person out of every thousand was a Christian. That is still true on the mainland. But today in Formosa one person in every hundred is a member of some Christian denomination." So said Dr. Weiping Chen, chief of chaplains for Nationalist China and personal chaplain to Generalissimo Chiang-Kai-shek. Dr. Chen also said that many of the island's social, business and political leaders are Christians, and "They give the people of Formosa an added incentive for the fight against the Communists."

The fact that Christians give others incentive is as it should be for God gives us incentives to serve Him.

Webster defines incentive as that which arouses to determination or action. Incentives excite man to do things he might have left undone, prompt him to do willingly what he might have done under duress, stimulate him to do joyfully what otherwise might have elicited scant pleasures. Incentives are a must in Christian life and experience!

Satan's awareness of this fact led him to ask God, ". . . Doth Job fear God for naught? Hast not thou made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? . . . But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face" (Job 1:9-11). Satan thought Job served God only because of temporal advantage.

Then, with God's permission, Satan proceeded to remove from Job every earthly possession. Finally, the evil one afflicted his body. "In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly" (Job 1:22). What Satan did not realize was that good men have a deeper incentive to serve God than meets the eye.

Nevertheless, God promised temporal blessing to men who would obey Him. To the children of Israel He said, ". . . if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers: And he will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he swore unto thy fathers to give thee" (Deuteronomy 7:12, 13).

And men (women, too) have realized that people will really excel when an incentive is offered them. Now, if girls had situations as well in hand during Old Testament times as they do today (some say a young woman can prophesy almost to the day when her finance will propose), Achsah may have approached her father, Caleb, like this: "Father, you want the city of Kirpath-sepher, and I want Othniel. I'm sure he loves me, but he is too timid to ask you for my hand in marriage. If you would say in his hearing, 'He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife' (Judges 1:12)—if you would say that, Father, perhaps both of us would get our desires."

Maybe it didn't happen that way. But Caleb did make that proposition, and Achsah was the incentive which led Othniel to conquer the city. Which, in turn, was incentive enough for Achsah to wed the young man. A fellow who would endanger his life to win a girl must really love her. He ought to make a good, faithful husband, too.

Now the disciples of Jesus needed an incentive. Peter said, ". . . Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" (Matthew 19:27). We might be inclined to question Peter's what's in it for me attitude. But Jesus didn't. Rather, He said, ". . . Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life" (Vv. 28, 29). Jesus gave them incentive in time and eternity.

Mature Christians need incentives. Do we invite evangelists because our pastors cannot preach just as well? No! Besides being an incentive to stimulate the unchurched and unsaved to attend, evangelists revivify our old dry bones experiences. Sometimes a different personality in the pulpit brings a eulogy from us although our pastor may have preached well on practically the same topic several weeks previously.

We are quite familiar with our missionary program, and we support it. But sometimes a missionary convention will incite us to sacrifice and to spend more time in prayer. Without the incentive of that missionary convention we would not have been so moved. We oldsters need incentives.

So do our youth. The crowds and the traffic which accompany a big convention have no charm for me. But the International Society of Christian Endeavor engineers a great convention every year. It brings young people (and oldsters) from far and near. In addition to the convention atmosphere renown speakers and ministers have been incentives to draw thousands.

A local church has a youth revival every year. Young people lead the song service, read the Scriptures, make the announcements, lift the offering, arrange for special musical selections—everything but preach the sermon. They bring unsaved friends with them and conversions result. Incentives pay off!

And children need incentives—the yearly pin for perfect attendance; the reward for memorizing 50, 100, 200 or more Bible verses; the prize for inviting others to attend V. B. S. But, sad to say, some of us adults who appreciate adult incentives have objected to these rewards.

The only answer to these objections lies in providing the proper atmosphere when awards are given. An experienced storyteller could take a small basket and a napkin and enact the lad giving his lunch to Jesus. Yet the Lord gave him enough to eat, and the lad had the joy of being real close to the Master.

Our children give their time in Sunday school, memorizing, etc. But better than the rewards are these facts: Jesus appreciates

NEWS NOTES

Neglect Cited in North Carolina

North Carolina has been described as the state of neglect, so far as expansion in home missions is concerned. This was very vividly pointed out in the December 15 issue of The Sunday School Reporter, organ of the North Carolina Sunday School Convention.

It was pointed out that the northern counties, from east to west, have only six churches with a membership of approximately 842. An interesting observation was made in comparing the membership of Free Will Baptists in Pitt County which has a Free Will Baptist membership of approximately 3,766, with the northern area mentioned above which includes all and part of 31 counties. The Reporter stated: "From the standpoint of Free Will Baptist occupation, it is as much a mission field as is Cuba, Africa or India. The Free Will Baptist denomination had its beginning in this area, yet more than two hundred years later we have less than ten churches within the area (mentioned above)." The area contains approximately 80 towns with a population of about 1,000 which have no Free Will Baptist churches.

It is pretty evident that North Carolina Free Will Baptists have failed during these 232 years to see the need in their own back yard. The state has a population of about 1,288,000. In comparison, Free Will Baptists have a membership of nearly 50,000 in the state.

Church Makes Christmas Gifts to Building Fund

One of the main features of the Christmas celebration at the First Free Will Baptist Church of Beaufort, North Carolina, was the special offerings to the building fund. These offerings were made in a very impressive service. Following the message by the pastor, the Rev. W. A. Hales, each family was given an opportunity to lay their gifts on an open Bible at the altar. These offerings amounted to $729.20, which added to the building fund will allow the church to reach the goal set for this year, paying $2,000 and the interest on the church debt. The church thanks God for His faithfulness in helping them raise this money, and also for the fact that the church was able to pay off all the indebtedness on the parsonage in June of this year.

The choir presented a beautiful cantata at 5:00 p. m. They were trained and led by the new minister of music, Mrs. Lelia Willis, who has proven a great blessing to the church.

The church reporter states: "It is the hope of the pastor and the church officials that we all will be so impressed with the knowledge of what our Father can do through our lives when they are yielded to Him that greater heights will be preached during the coming year."

"The Reverends D. F. Pelt, J. L. Lavenander, John M. Rich, M. H. Taylor, A. L. Anderson, L. R. Curtis and John Edward have visited with us one or more times. If other churches in Alabama would give us a helping hand, it would make it so much easier for us. We thank all who have helped us. The Free Will Baptist Press gave us Sunday school literature to get the Sunday school started for the last quarter of 1959. We would appreciate help from other ministers and churches who haven't assisted us as yet. We need your prayers and assistance so we can move faster."—Rev. QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Did Jesus show a lack of respect to His mother in the manner He addressed her in John 2:4, calling her "woman"?—G. A. Smith, Arkansas.

Answer: I think not! Here He says, "Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come" (John 2:4). He used the same when He addressed her from the Cross as He arranged for her to be kept by "the beloved disciple." "When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son!" (John 19:26). The word He used here according to some scholars was about the same then as "lady" would be were a prince in England to thus address his mother, the queen. In other words, it was a title of respect in that day. Jesus used it on other occasions in addressing women that he commended. "Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour" (Matthew 15:28).

I know of no occasion in the Bible or no evidence from any reliable source that says Jesus ever used the title, "mother," after He began His ministry when addressing Mary; "woman" seemed His favorite title. A new relation was established when Jesus entered His public ministry, one different to that, no doubt, assumed before stepping out of the home life He had experienced in Nazareth. (See Matthew 12:46-50.) From then through the remainder of His earthly life He emphasized that He was the only begotten son of His Father in heaven, ever giving place to His supernatural parentage and but little to those on earth, His mother and foster father.

Question: Where will the Holy Spirit be located when the church had been translated?—S. D. Jones, Arkansas.

Answer: He will be with the church. "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you" (John 14:16, 17). According to the latter part of Verse 16 the Holy Spirit is, upon being sent after Christ's ascension, to abide with you for ever. This in itself should give satisfactory answer to your question but note that nearly the same thing is said again in the latter part of Verse 17 for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you.

The church is the temple of the Holy Spirit; therefore, when it is raptured the Holy Spirit will go with it, for He shall continue to abide or live in it. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" (1 Corinthians 3:16). Let us not forget, however, that the Holy Spirit is omnipresent, that He is God and that God is present everywhere at all times. The Holy Spirit is equal in power and authority to either Christ or God the Father. Therefore, even though His present local abode is on the earth, He is in heaven in a real sense of the word. The Father is now on His throne in heaven, but He is present here upon earth; so is the Son present here, for He promised to be with all Christians as they struggle against sin working for Him here on the earth. Both you and I who are Christians can sense His glorious presence in a very real way. Paul heard Him and even saw Him after He went back to be with the Father and after the Holy Spirit had appeared to the one hundred and twenty disciples at Pentecost. Then again let us remember that God has never left Himself without a witness here upon this earth and will as long as it exists. A careful reading of the book of Revelation will help us to understand this marvelous truth. The Holy Spirit will operate here during the great tribulation period probably quite similar to the way in which He operated during the Old Testament period and when John the Baptist was witnessing. In the Old Testament period the Holy Spirit came upon Elisha, Elijah and many others, empowering and enabling them to do great things while they preached. The book of Revelation seems to indicate two witnesses. "And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth. . . . These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.
(PSALM 119:105)

HAPPY NEW YEAR

"Only be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever thou goest. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have success" (Joshua 1:7, 8).

I suppose that people the world over have wished each other "A Happy and Prosperous New Year" millions of times during the past few days. By many it was a sincere wish, but by many others it was only done through habit or custom. In the verses above God gives the formula for a real happy and prosperous life during all our years here on earth. I like the translation of these verses as found in The Berkeley Version of the Holy Bible: "Only be very resolute and strong, to keep practicing the whole law which Moses My servant commanded you; do not depart from it to the right or to the left, so that you may prosper everywhere you go. This book of the Law must never depart from your mouth; you must meditate on it day and night, so that you may keep living in accord with all that is written in it; for then you make your way successful, and then you will prosper." God's promise to Joshua smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will" (Revelation 11:3, 6). Then there are to be one hundred and forty thousand Jews, an equal number from each tribe, that the Holy Spirit enables to witness for Christ until they are all martyred probably one by one, according to Revelation 7:4-10. Compare Revelation 14:1-10. From these and other Scriptures I understand that there will be some awful things taking place as the Gentile period comes to a close; but that in all this turmoil, God will give support to witnesses that will be winning souls for Him to the very end.

Verse 5 was “. . . so I will be with thee: will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.” So with the presence and sure help of God we may enter upon and journey throughout the year with the certain knowledge that we will have happiness and be prosperous, if we continue to be His true and faithful servants.

God told Joshua in Chapter 3 and Verse 5 as they came to Jordan, “. . . for ye have not passed this way heretofore.” During 1960 we, too, are face to face with untraversed country, and with unsolved problems. Think of the many, many things in our lives, our homes, our churches and the whole world that need the attention and attention of all true Christians. The road will not be smooth, nor the burdens light, but with the presence and power of the Holy Spirit we can do all things that God has assigned to our hands. But the big question is, “Are we willing and ready for the strength and courage that we must have to conquer the unwon battles of progress, and to win lost loved ones to God?”

The following poem was written by a preacher I used to know and love. When I was a boy I heard him preach many wonderfully sound gospel sermons. I believe you will like his message contained in the poem.

ANOTHER YEAR

We're facing now another year
With all its sorrow and its cheer,
With all its comfort and its pain,
With all its loss and all its gain;
A year we've never tried before,
And know not what there is in store
To bless us good, or try us out,
To make us weep or make us shout.

We do not know what we shall meet
To bring us victory or defeat;
We know not how the foe will fight,
Nor how he'll take his stand or fight.
We cannot see with mortal eyes
Just what along our pathway lies,
But let us do the best we know
And trust the future as we go.

We'll fight some battles, we are sure;
There'll be a lot we must endure;
The road won't all be strewn with flowers,
The days won't all be sunny hours;
There'll be some trav'ling that is rough,
And up-grade pulling that is "tough,"
But let us trust the God who stands
To help us with His outstretched hands.

We'll find a lot of work to do,
Along with problems old and new;
We'll have some burdens hard to bear
That call for patience, faith and prayer.
We'll have the privilege to bless
Some fellow-pilgrims in distress,
And show our love and courage, too,
And prove that we are Christians true.

There's blessings great in store for those Who bear their cross and take the blows;
Who will not shrink from duty's road,
But like a hero bear their load;
Who plod the vale and climb the hill,
And do whatever God may will,
Resolve to give the world our best,
And wait for God's sweet day of rest.

—Walter E. Isenhour.

Incentives are a Must!

their faithfulness; they have been close to Him in their activities; and He wants them to stay close to Him. We can point all of this out through the story.

From the cradle to the grave incentives spice our lives with variety. They inspire us to continue and to grow in grace, to reach the place that, though every temporal thing were swept away, we would have the deeper incentive of Job—the promise of God's love and presence.

And since we enjoy fellowship with Him, we also have the incentive of a glorious future awaiting us. For Jesus said, “I go to prepare a place for you. . . . that where I am, there ye may be also” (John 14:2, 3).—Gospel Herald.

Some people really enjoy their religion, others just endure it.

A man is like a tack; he can go only as far as his head will let him.

LOUD PROCLAMATIONS

(Isaiah 58:1-4)

Introduction: Much is being said today about co-existence between Communism and capitalism. Also much is being said concerning this same thing in the field of religion; they say we are to love, but not reprove, thus sacrificing truth for union. This is not the Bible way.

Isaiah Was to Reprove Sinners in Zion

- This was his commission from God.
- It is intended for all ages and not just confined to those of that particular age.
- There are to be no evading issues.

The Manner of Reproving

- Must be faithful to God in reproving, and the reproof must be very plainly presented.
- Do not flatter, but reveal the transgressions and sins of the sinner.
- Isaiah was to cry aloud. There must be a good, earnest desire.
- He was not to spare or be afraid. He was to lay bare to the bone.
- His voice was to be as a trumpet: no uncertain sound.

What to Cry Aloud About

- Self-righteous religion (Vv. 2, 3).
- Hypocritical religion (Vs. 4).
- Loss of first love (Revelation 2:4).
- Self-sufficiency in religion—no need of the Spirit (Revelation 3:14-19).

The Reasons for Crying Aloud

- The time will come when people will not endure sound doctrine (2 Timothy 4:1-4).
- To earnestly contend for the faith is worth fighting about.
- We should desire that all be ready to meet the Lord.

Results of Not Crying Aloud

- A loss of sense of values.
- We begin to compromise with works of darkness.
- Sin is made light of, resulting in our own lives, filled with sin.
- Brings total loss someday.

SAVED AS BY FIRE

One of God's servants preached a searching sermon on the possibility of God's children being saved so as by fire, and missing any rewards when they stand before the judgment seat of Christ. After the service, the minister walked home with a wealthy businessman who said, "I didn't like what you said in your sermon about the possibility of some Christians barely entering heaven, and not receiving any rewards for faithful service. Why, I will be satisfied if I can just get inside of heaven and lean against its walls!" At that moment, the two entered the palatial home of the wealthy businessman. It was replete with all the luxuries that money could buy. How different was the wealthy man's thinking of his earthly home and his thinking of his heavenly home! Let us aspire to enter glory joyously, aboundingly, triumphantly! Peter said, "For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 1:11).—Selected.

Give Thanks

Thanks from the head or lips may be polite, but it is thanks from the heart that rings true.

The poor are often more thankful than the rich. They count their blessings—God's sun and air, health and life, love and peace; the things that make life rich indeed. Thanks is not measured by the amount of our possessions. It's the man with the thankless heart who is poor; the one with a thankful heart who is rich.

Once again our nation is summoned to observe its national day of Thanksgiving. We do not thank a thing, nor a law or a nature, nor luck; we thank a Person. We do not thank America; we thank God for America. How much there is to be thankful for to Him!

Above all else we hear the clear call "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift" (2 Corinthians 9:15), the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ has come, the Gift of God's love, freely offered to all, and, if our hearts are not warmed with gratitude, it is because we have not received Him.

Accept Christ as your Saviour from sin and as the Lord of your life.—George Welby Arms.

AN OLD MESSAGE FOR A NEW YEAR

In Volume 1 of Saint Mary's Messenger, January, 1920, a New Year's message was written by Mrs. Alice E. Lupton. I was editor of the Messenger and Mrs. Lupton was its associate editor. Also at that time, I was pastor of St. Mary's Church in New Bern, North Carolina. I preached at 11:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. each Sunday. I also preached at Bridgeton on second and fourth Sundays at 4:15 p. m. On every first Sunday, I preached at Antioch, Craven County, at 3:00 p. m. Each quarter (October, January and July) I preached at 11:00 a. m. on Saturday and 7:30 p. m. at which time we observed the Lord's Supper. Since I was so busy with serving three churches, and one of them a full-time work, Mrs. Lupton did most of the writing for the Messenger. So for the January issue of 1920, Mrs. Lupton prepared an editorial with a New Year's message. I am quoting this message anew, that she might be blessed to read her work of forty years ago.

"Christmas has come and gone, and we are entering into a New Year. Let us hope that everyone has taken advantage of the quiet hour in which they have taken inventory of their lives and seen to it that the evil has been pushed aside, and that more room may be found in their hearts for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Of course this is the time for New Year's resolutions; but, unless we are possessed with the will power to resist the wiles of the evil one and have enough grace in our hearts to enable us to lean hard on the arms of the One who is able to give us strength for every trial, our resolutions will come to naught.

"Just think, three hundred and sixty-five new, clean pages are opening to us. What shall we write on these beautiful white pages in the coming year? Let us be careful and prayerful, looking unto God each day, depending on Him for divine guidance. By so doing, we will be better men and women, better fathers and mothers, better neighbors, and better Christians. The pastor will not have to almost run himself to death trying to keep us attending worship services." (You see, in those days, a pastor had to do a lot of visiting to keep folks coming to church; and then often he failed to make the grade.) "We will be glad when the Lord's Day arrives, because we can go to the house of the Lord.

"Let us make our aid societies better." (In those days the women had aid societies. This work was done largely on a local level. They looked after the work directly in the congregation and in the surrounding areas, acting as janitors, seeing that the poor were looked after, the sick visited, and often they acted as a finance committee in securing the pastor's salary if he had one.) "And let us spend more time in our mission and Sunday school work, also our mutual endeavor." (There was a Mutual Endeavor Union, an adopted name from a sister denomination. A lot of good was done through this organization in which many of our young people were engaged.)

"Our Mutual Endeavor Union can be improved in various ways. We can be used in the advancement of the Kingdom of Christ. This present year marks the beginning of greater things along every line of denominational work. The young people's committee met at the writer's home a few days ago to draw up resolutions, a constitution and bylaws to submit to the executive committee of the state convention, relative to our Mutual Endeavor Union. During the present year, we expect, with the Lord to lead, to do great things for the advancement and training of the young of our denomination." (You see, back there Sister Lupton was thinking of the youth of our denomination and making plans for the training of the youth. Even though we had to borrow a plan from others, these plans were being used for the glory of God by helping our youth improve their talents. This writer remembers many of the young people who worked to make the Mutual Endeavor Union a success.)

"I am trusting that every preacher in the state of North Carolina will co-operate with us in this splendid work. All together now we will try for the best year's work we have ever done for the Master. 'Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.'"

In this same issue of the Messenger, we placed our writing under the heading of "Notes and Quotes," and here is a part of what was said:

"Can we look back all the way through the year of 1919, and say that we are satisfied with the service that we have rendered to God and to man? Have we lost opportunities that we might have used for the glory of God? Really what did we do with the year, 1919? Was the time used for God? We will have to give an account for every day; and, therefore, we should take an inventory that we may see where we are. All business concerns, amounting to anything take inventory. They do it because it is necessary to successful business. Our standing with God is of more importance than our financial standing."

"For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" (Mark 8:36). Now we want to ask the question as did our Master—What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? What shall a man give in exchange for his soul? Now as we enter the New Year, 1920, may we well remember that our souls can be bartered for the filthy things of this world. Let us remember that Jesus has warned us against the wasting of time and sinning away our day of grace. No man can keep the Word of God in his heart without first accepting and confessing the Lord Jesus as Lord and Master. He is the only Saviour and only Mediator between God the Father and man. So, my reader, if you are not saved, accept Christ this very moment.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

The Pearl Handled Knife

by Florence M. Hill

Alan waited by the school gate as Harry and Jess hurried to join him. "Who d'ya think's been swipin' Mr. Hall's stuff?" Jess asked, looking Harry over. "First his money's missing and now his knife that was given to him in Korca!"

Alan moved close to Harry, feeling protective. He was a Christian and a new pupil, here. "Mr. Hall will find out who's swiping!" Harry looked at Alan, gratefully.

"I'll bet I know who's doing it!" Jess said with a sneering look at Harry. Alan felt like poking Jess, but that would start another fight. They'd had too many already. Since Alan had been converted, he'd tried to avoid fighting with Jess. But it was hard sometimes!

The boys separated at the corner. Alan walked home, slowly. He'd admired detectives and policemen for a long time and if he could find the guilty one, he'd be a regular Sherlock Holmes!

He thought of it all evening until it was time to go to bed. As he leaned over to untie his shoes he felt something hard in his pants cuff. He turned it over and a tiny pearl handled knife fell on the floor. Alan picked it up in astonishment. "Here's Mr. Hall's knife!" Alan exclaimed aloud. "How'd it get in my jeans' cuff?" Then he giggled. "Some Sherlock Holmes!"

Alan turned the small knife over and over, examining the fine workmanship on it. He'd never seen one like it before. No wonder Teacher liked it! Alan wished right then he could run to Mr. Hall and give it to him.

Then a chilling thought came to Alan. What if Mr. Hall won't believe me? The more Alan thought of how it was going to look for him, the more he worried. What should he do?

Maybe he could just wait till the room was empty and leave it on Teacher's desk. That's what he'd do! With that thought, he prayed and got in bed.

The next morning Alan saw the kids looking at Harry. Bet that Jess has been hinting around that Harry took the knife! Alan felt for the knife in his pocket. What if he leaned over and the knife fell out? He broke out in goose pimples, thinking about it.

He was glad when noon came. Alan hurried to eat his lunch and get back to the room before anyone else did! He peered in. It was empty and he went in, quietly, then stopped. If he left the knife on the desk, the kids would suspect Harry even more. Alan stood, undecided, then prayed, Lord, help me to do the right thing. Mr. Hall walked in that moment.

Alan wet his lips and walked to his desk. "Mr. Hall, I want to talk with you—" Alan explained about the knife, taking it out of his pocket and handing it to Mr. Hall. He looked at Alan sharply. Alan added, "I was afraid you wouldn't believe me, but the kids were all looking at Harry, so I had to tell you!"

Mr. Hall was silent. "I don't believe you, Alan. But before I say anything I'll give you a chance to tell the truth."

Alan turned away, heartsick. What good did it do to pray? He felt so bad he couldn't keep his mind on his work. The thought came to him to pray again and he lowered his head, thinking hard, Lord, help me prove I didn't take the knife!

Just before the end of the last period Mr. Hall picked up a sheaf of notices and walked down the aisles, leaving one at each desk. As he neared Alan's desk, he leaned over to pick up an eraser and one flew out on the floor. He leaned over to pick them up, then stood up suddenly. His face was red as he turned to the class.

"I know what happened to my knife and change, now," he admitted. "I put things in my sport shirt pocket and when I was helping Alan with a problem, I was leaning over. No doubt it slipped out and fell in Alan's pants' cuff. He told me he found it, last night."

He placed a large hand on Alan's shoulder and whispered, "Sorry, Alan." Alan whispered to his best friend, the Lord Jesus, a heartfelt, "Thank You, Lord." Alan had learned a good lesson if he ever was to be a detective. A clue didn't always prove something even if it looked that way.—My Pleasure.

A CHILD'S QUERY

Susie H. Keen

MAY I sing 'Happy Birthday, Dear Jesus?' asked little Ruth Ann, last Christmas day. Her parents were entertaining guests at dinner and she seemed to fear Jesus might be forgotten during the feasting.

Almost a living question box was Miss Four-Year-Old and in explaining, "Why Christmas" she was told about God's Son coming to earth as the little Baby Jesus, being born in a manger, etc., in words thought understandable to a child. But the practical application was a bit surprising, nevertheless; although later her parents termed it a very lovely thought.

Evidently in that home birthdays were linked up with singing "Happy Birthday"—filling in the name of the one mentioned whose natal day was being thus recognized. What could be more logical, therefore, in the child mind than that the same should be sung for Jesus?

We children of a larger growth may well learn many important lessons from the actions of those we sometimes think almost too small to understand what we try so hard to present in words suited to their intelligence.

As Christmas is celebrated in many homes (and also elsewhere) mention is made more often of a creature of the imagination than of Jesus Christ. Those children who are early taught the truth eat through life much sweeter and sacred memories of home than do those who are deceived by tales of Santa Claus. Love of parents is not lessened by knowing that they try to make Christmas a joyful occasion by giving gifts on that day—for it was then God gave the unspeakable Gift of His dear Son to the world (2 Corinthians 9:15).

Stand Firm for God

Young people have many hard battles to fight and many temptations and difficulties to encounter, but one thing is sure if they are steadfastly minded to go through with the Lord, they are bound to win the day. Settle it, therefore, to stand firm for God, and victory is sure.—Selected.

The world today is hearing too many sermons and seeing too few.

State Auxiliary Makes Plans for New Year

The officers of the Georgia State Woman's Auxiliary Convention met Decem-ber 10, 1959, at the home of the Rev. and s. E. C. Morris in Tifton, Georgia. Mrs. Myron Shiver of Elmodel, state president, presided over this executive board session. Plans were made for the new year. These plans included a Youth Fellowship Day to support a missionary in India; and to support a mission station in Mexico.

held at Camp Mount Bethel on Friday, June 10, 1960, at which time the declamation contest will also take place. Each local auxiliary is requested to send five dollars for the expenses for the day. A state workshop was set for June 23, also at Camp Mount Bethel. All auxiliaries in the state were urged to support the Children's Home at Eldridge, Alabama; to support a missionary in India; and to support a mission station in Mexico. Shown above is the group of women who were recently elected officers of the Georgia State Woman's Auxiliary Convention. They are (standing left to right) Mrs. E. C. Morris of Tifton, field secretary; Mrs. J. W. Cobb of Baxley, study course chairman; Mrs. J. W. Franks of Tifton, youth chairman; Mrs. Louis Sheffield of Pearson, corresponding secretary. Not shown is Mrs. Manse Cason of Moultrie, stewardship-prayer chairman.

Keeping pace was church construction, with totals month after month establishing records. The Roman Catholic church counted constituent noses in a global survey, came up with a world total of 527,643,000 Catholics.

As always, denominational doings made news. American Baptists (historically with their major activity based in the northern part of the United States) eyed the South—ears cocked for the “come over and help us” of ABC members who had migrated there. Meanwhile, Southern Baptists continued their steady missionary advance in the North. Each week's news was marked, it seemed, with reports of new Lutheran mergers or invitations to merge. (In India, the million-member Church of South India and the Lutheran Church with its 650,000 constituents were moving closer together short of actual merger.)

Annual convention time (June-July) found the 807,000-member Evangelical and Reformed Church naming its first woman moderator. The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod voted a six-year $145,000,000 expansion program and authorizing “unity talks” with the American Lutheran Church which will be formed next April. The million-member African Methodist Episcopal Church drew up a statement denouncing states right legislation pending in Congress as a “threat to freedom.” This is just a sampling of the multiplicity of such actions and resolutions voted by church bodies in a busy and momentous year.

In a key religious event in June, 3,000 members of Christian Churches and Churches of Christ met in Atlanta for the “non-denominational, non-official and non-delegate” North American Christian Convention. With the theme “Christian Unity: Our Unchanging Plea,” they celebrated the 150th anniversary of “The Declaration and Address” of Thomas Campbell.

The year was, in fact, marked by anniversary celebrations. These ranged from the 20th anniversary of Gospel Recordings, Inc., to the 25th anniversary registered by the Wycliffe Bible Translators, and the 75 year mark reached by the Evangelical Free Church of America to the whole series of observances connected with anniversaries related to John Calvin (such as the 450th anniversary of his birth and the 400th anniversary of the final edition of his Institutes of the Christian Religion.)

Thus it went—a big and busy year. To evangelical Christians in particular, 1959 took on special significance as mass evangelism continued at a steady pace. Christian colleges and seminaries moved ahead with increased enrollment and large-scale building programs. The revitalized Sunday school movement seemed to gain even new impetus, as marked by highly successful, tri-part conventions of the National Sunday School Association—and new books such as Revelation and the Bible (Baker) by Dr. Carl F. H. Henry, and The Case for Orthodox Theology by Dr. Edward John Carnell sparked great interest and discussion, while other titles such as Jungle Pilot (Harper) by Russell T. Hitt carried the impact of evangelical missionary enterprise and sacrifice to wide audiences.

STATE MISSION NEWS INCLUDED AS SUBMITTED FROM THE FIELD

News from Alaska

The report that I believe to be the dearest to the heart of our Lord is the spiritual victories. In August a spirit of revival began to prevail and since that time several souls have been saved and a number have been added to the church. The church is experiencing a slow, consistent, but apparent solid growth. The outlook is most encouraging, and more than ever we realize that the days of testings were necessary stepping stones for the foundational structure of the work. God has had His hand on every undertaking in a wonderful way, for which we do praise Him.

Now shall we take a look at the present and future possibilities of our work in this northernmost mission field. As I lift up my eyes and look upon the field of Alaska, my heart is moved with compassion for the isolated villages that have never heard the gospel of our wonderful Saviour. As I look far north of the Arctic Circle I can see a group of Nomadic Eskimos only recently known to the white man. Up and down the frozen Yukon River is village after village that is crying for someone to come over and help them. Far out on the northwest corner along the Bering Sea are places that challenge us. As we turn our eyes south down the Aleutian Chain, one of the most neglected areas in Alaska, we see many villages that have no gospel witness and their only contact with the outside world is through the U. S. mail boat that makes one trip a month through the dangerous seas to reach them.

During the summer months a lady from one of the villages on the Aleutian visited our church several times. Her testimony was a most challenging one. She was a mother of four children and had come to Anchorage to be admitted into the native hospital to give birth to a fifth child. She was a Christian white woman who was married to a native. She was the only school teacher in this village of 150 people, and the only gospel witness there was a Sunday school in this dear lady's little native home. She is unable to minister to all the children at once for lack of room, so she teaches each child or group as they arrive and then sends them on their way in order to be able to take the next comers. I've never seen a soul so hungry for fellowship.

Let us again take a look at Anchorage, a city of sin. Recently a juvenile delinquency officer looked us in the faces and said, "We are desperate for someone to be concerned about the delinquency problem here. We are greatly in need of a girl's home, or even a large house that would be dedicated to the purpose of taking these little girls from Ages 12 to 17 and giving them a home." How our hearts melted within us as he discussed the need, but we could merely echo, "We wish we could help but our hands are tied." God help us to find a way to meet these challenges.

Does God's Word really mean every creature? Then we need to be obedient and faithful to hasten with the good news of salvation. Our hearts are burdened for the unevangelized areas of Alaska, and we are asking God to help us through the channels of Free Will Baptists to open at least two more missions in the year of 1960. We are praying for two more couples to come to Alaska to open new stations and adequate funds to support the undertaking. Won't you join us in prayer about this need? The Lord can and will work as we yield ourselves to Him as vessels to work through.

We would like to say that we do thank you for the way you have supported our work in the past, and I know you rejoice as you share with us in the progress, but we must not stop here. We must keep pushing forward with the gospel message until Jesus comes. Please remember that all funds for Alaska must be earmarked for this field.

For more than a year, five Free Will Baptist businessmen have sponsored a fifteen-minute broadcast for us over radio station WFTC, Kinston, North Carolina. This broadcast is titled, "The Alaska Report" and consists of local mission news, weather conditions, gospel music, and a gospel message or mission challenge. If you know a person or groups, or even churches that would like to sponsor such a broadcast in your town, we are in a position to supply you with the taped program. We can also supply copies of the broadcast or any other mission message or information by tape to churches, Sunday schools, or leagues who would be interested in using it in services. We will be happy to have you contact us for further information.

May God bless you and grant you a most blessed new year. May He strengthen our labor together that we might have a great year in the field of Alaska Missions.

Yours for souls,
D. L. Whaley and Family

Our First Church

You may all rejoice with us in that after almost two and one-half years of labor we have organized the first church to be organized by Arizona-Mexico Missions. As you know, we don't baptize anyone here until after they have been a professing Christian for six months. This is to give us time to observe their lives to see if they have truly renounced their Catholicism and other superstitions.

On December 6, 1959, the First Free Will Baptist Church of Nogales, Arizona was organized with fourteen full members and eight associate members. The position of associate member is for those who are not old enough for full membership, who wish to maintain their membership in their home churches, to be in fellowship even though without voting privileges.

The church elected the Rev. John Elliston as pastor, Virginia G. Breeding as clerk, and Jose Guzman as deacon on trial and also as treasurer. Some of our members speak only English, some speak only Spanish, and the rest speak both languages. One could almost call this the first English Free Will Baptist church. Some of our members live in the United States, and others live in Mexico. We organized on this side because we had no one qualified to be a pastor in Mexico.

The church prepared a petitionary letter to the First Arizona Association of Free Will Baptists for admission, and sent the letter, along with the pastor and delegates to the association which convened in Tucson, Arizona, on December 12. The church was accepted into the association by unanimous vote, and their delegates seated. Our plans are that at some future time when we have organized some more churches here, to have a Southern Arizona Association of Free Will Baptists. And, of course we look forward longingly to the day when we shall have a Northwestern Mexico Association of Free Will Baptist Churches. We cover your earnest prayers that God may speed the day when we shall have Mexican preachers trained to carry the gospel throughout Mexico and other parts of Latin America, for such is our hope. Please continue to pray for the work here and to support it as God lays on your heart so to do.

The Gospel Versus Legalism

Lesson: Acts 15:1-35.

Golden Text: Galatians 2:16.

INTRODUCTION

The circumcision party, who are sometimes called Judaizers, were those who tried to force upon Christians of the early Church the necessity and obligation of keeping the Mosaic Law. The particular emphasis was that they should be circumcised and should observe dietary laws which prohibited the eating of certain foods, and prescribed the method and manner by which permissible foods should be prepared and eaten. They also emphasized that Christians who thus observed the law must ostracize, or withdraw from those who neglected to keep it; all of which amounted to adding legalism to redemption by faith.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. The law says, "This do, and thou shalt live" (Luke 10:25-28). The gospel says, "Believe and live" (John 3:16, 36).
2. The law is a yoke of bondage which we are unable to bear (Acts 15:10; Galatians 5:1). The gospel is the yoke of Christ, which is easy (Matthew 11:28-30).
3. The law could only work wrath against the transgressor (Romans 4:15). The gospel freely justifies all who believe (Vs. 24, 25).
4. The law was a schoolmaster (child-rearner) (Galatians 3:24). The gospel brings us to the Holy Spirit as our Teacher and Guide (John 16:13).
5. The law could make nothing perfect (Hebrews 7:19). The gospel brings perfection through the perfect work of Christ (Hebrews 7:19; 10:9-14).
6. The law was given to Israel (Deuteronomy 5:1-3). The gospel is for all nations of the world (Mark 16:15; Luke 24:47; Acts 1:8).
7. The law was the ministration of death (2 Corinthians 3:7). The gospel is the message of eternal life (1 John 5:10-13).
8. The law brought a curse upon the transgressor (Galatians 3:10). The gospel is the message of redemption from the curse (Vs. 13).
9. The law could not justify a sinner (Romans 3:20). The gospel brings the message of justification by grace (Vs. 24).
10. The law could not disannul the promises of God (Galatians 3:17). The gospel repeats the promise of God (Vs. 22).
11. The law is done away (2 Corinthians 3:7, 11). The gospel of the grace of God remains and is operative today (2 Corinthians 3:11; Titus 2:11).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The theory and practice of legalism are just about as ancient as the Mosaic Law. False prophets, corrupted priests and ungodly kings throughout the Old Testament period of Israel's history acted in concert in this matter. They encouraged the people to make of God's divine oracles a fetish. The beauty of God's law that was to be fulfilled in Christ was changed into vanity, abomination and a stench in the nostrils of God. He was weary of their forms and degenerate approach to the law. Jesus called those held high before the law in men's opinion, whited sepulchers, vipers, hypocrites. The Pharisees were the chief offenders. They were the fundamentalists toward the law which, however, they had reduced to their own dimensions.—Selected.

2. Perhaps we should point out here the manner in which the Jews had perverted the ordinance of circumcision from the original purpose which God had commanded it. God had commanded that His people be circumcised as a witness that they were separated to God, that all they were and that all they were able to do in the world arose from the activity and government of God. Therefore, circumcision, which had been designed of God to prevent self-righteousness on the part of His people, had been twisted by them to be made the instrument of their self-righteousness. Perhaps some of us need to examine our attitude toward the ordinances of our own church today. Do we say we are saved because we have been baptized, and because we observe the Lord's Supper and wash the saints' feet? or do we say we observe these ordinances because we are saved by the mercy and grace of God through our faith in the shed blood of His Son, Jesus Christ?—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

3. To insist that Gentiles be circumcised and keep the ritual law would have worked a double evil. It would have suggested that the sacrifice of Christ was insufficient for salvation, and it would have presented an insuperable barrier to many who could not bring themselves to accept the national observances of the Jews.

4. The Gentiles had already met the same requirements to become Christians that the Jews had met in accepting Christ. The words of Peter, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, . . ." were for ". . . you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call" (Acts 2:38, 39). A penitent faith in Christ and the symbolic death, burial and resurrection provided by Christian baptism, calling on his name, were required alike of Saul, the Jew (Acts 22:16) and Cornelius, the Gentile (Acts 10:48); of the Ethiopian proselyte (Acts 8:38) and the Roman jailer at Philippi (Acts 16:33). Hence to say that no unnecessary burden was to be laid on the Gentiles did not remove the basic commands set forth in the great commission (Matthew 28:18-20; Mark 16:15, 16).—Selected.

4. James, as minister of the Jerusalem Church, became the spokesman. James was the brother of the Lord Jesus (Mark 6:3), and from all evidence, he was head of Christian activities in Jerusalem. This church, of course, was the mother church. "And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me" (Vs. 13). If Peter had been the head of the church, or Pope, as the Roman Catholic church claims, he would have spoken as the final authority.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

5. The first verse of our lesson deserves careful study. We should beware of denominations that proclaim that no one can be saved unless they belong to their organization. Others try to frighten their hearers by telling them they are sure of hell unless they accept some doctrine that is unscriptural. So when you run up to some fellow who insists you cannot be saved unless you join his "crowd" or accept some doctrine that is not warranted by the Bible, don't get excited. Paul didn't.

They Are Not Far

Said one of God's aged saints: "Husband, child and brother have been taken away from me. Yet it does not seem as if they have gone far from me. When I was a child, my older sister, whom I loved dearly, married. She went to live in a house about a mile from our home. At first, I cried very hard. Then one day Mother said, "Why, Eunice, don't you see that Sarah hasn't left us? She has only gone down the road to make another home where we can go—a house as full of love and welcome as this house. Now you have two homes instead of one. Come, put on your bonnet and run down to the other home!" When I saw it that way, no more tears were shed. In this way I think of my dear loved ones who have left this earthly house. Before long, I am going to put on my bonnet just as I did when I was a little girl, and go to see my loved ones in the heavenly home!"

"The dear ones left behind,
Oh, foolish ones and blind,
A day and you will meet,
A night and you will greet!"

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Resolutions of Respect

Our loving, heavenly Father saw fit to call from this life of suffering, our dear sister in Christ, Marjorie Lamm, on August 3, 1959. She was a faithful member of the First Free Will Baptist Church in Wilson, North Carolina, the auxiliary, and circle number one. All who knew her keenly miss her and feel the vacancy she left very deeply.

Therefore, we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

First, that we express our deepest appreciation of her devotion and faithful service to her church and auxiliary. She was always willing to serve when asked to do any task as long as she was able.

Second, that we commend our deepest sympathy to those who knew and loved her; a devoted husband, a three-year-old son, sisters, brothers and a host of friends. We feel that our loss is heaven's gain. May they all find comfort and peace in Him who said, "Come unto Me all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to the Free Will Baptist Press for publication, and a copy be placed in our records.

Life is hard and full of trouble,
Yet don't let a minute pass;
Tho' we're always burdened with sorrow,
We know this life can't last.

For, 'tis soon this life is over,
Snatched away from toil and care;
Sorrowing on the wings of heaven,
With no more thought of pain or fear.

Just to think down here we struggle,
For our cabin and daily bread;
Up there it has all been paid for,
By Jesus' own precious blood.

Won't that be a happy meeting,
After saying good-by down here;
Just to know we've got a mansion,
All complete and furnished there.

Church Proposes $21,000 Renovation Program

On October 31, 1959, the St. John's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church of Stacy, North Carolina, caught fire. Upon being informed of the fire, nearly the entire community turned out to help extinguish the flames. By the use of a bucket brigade the fire, which had succeeded in gutting most of the auditorium, was put out. The congregation is presently meeting in the educational building.

On December 20, the building committee presented to the church a twelve-point proposal for the rebuilding and improving of the church, which was unanimously adopted. It was the consensus of the congregation, after the adoption of the proposal, that what at first seemed to be a tragedy was in reality a blessing in disguise. Pictured above is the architect's drawing of the church as it will appear after the improvements are completed. (The proposal for the renovation is given as a short feature article in this issue.)

CONQUEROR OF ALL

C. H. Overman

Nations rise and fall. In the light of history, we cannot deny this truth. Those who fall do so as a result of their own choosing; for no nation can remain a great power that turns from God or does not acknowledge God as the supreme Ruler of the universe. How wonderful it is to realize that we serve the eternal Conqueror of all nations. We believe in America, but we are now faced with another nation who is our enemy. Because of this present danger, we do not know the peril which may overtake us at any time. Regardless of these facts, however, it is a great consolation to Christian people to know that God is still on the throne; He is still holding the reins.

From the song, "Have Faith in God," the poet so aptly expresses the feeling of one who trusts God:

"Have faith in God though all else fail about you;
Have faith in God, He provides for His own;
He cannot fail, though all kingdoms shall perish,
He rules, He reigns upon His throne."

—B. B. McKinney.

There have been many earthly conquerors, but all have, or will, pass on into the pages of history and all that remains is their records in black and white.

The poet, Percy Bysshe Shelley, in his poem, "Ozymandias," expressed the futility of earthly kingdoms and rulers:

"I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desert . . . Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
The hand that mocked them, and the heart that fed:
And on the pedestal these words appear:
'My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!
Nothing beside remains, round and decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away."

The seven ancient wonders of the world were built that the generations thereafter might be reminded of man's greatness. Only the decayed ruins of three remain to give account of man's ambition to conquer. In time, these shall pass into ruins, and like the kings who had them built, they shall be forgotten; but God shall still be on His eternal throne. In the final analysis, God shall be bowed down to as the Conqueror of all.

Clarence E. Macartney tells the following story:

"When Julian the Apostate, who sought to light again the fires on the altars of the pagan gods, and thus destroy Christianity, was on the march with his army in the campaign against Persia, in the year 363, one of the soldiers of his army said to a Christian who was being abused by the soldiery, 'Where is your Carpenter now?'

"'He is making a coffin for your emperor,' was the reply of the Christian.

"A few months afterward Julian received a mortal wound in battle. The rumor spread through the army that the wound was inflicted by a Christian soldier in the ranks of the Roman army. According to the story of the Theoderet, Julian, realizing that his death was near, dipped his hand in the blood of his wound and threw the blood toward heaven, exclaiming as he did so, 'Thou hast conquered, O Galilean!'

"Yes, the Carpenter of Nazareth, exalted to the right hand of God, is making a coffin for all the kings and kingdoms of this world. One by one they flourish and are gone. But Christ's is an everlasting Kingdom. All that is not obedient to Him, and subject to Him shall perish. That alone endures which belongs to Him."

What about the towering monuments of our generation? Will they also speak of our folly to those who behold them hundreds of years from now? or will they speak of the great God, the eternal Conqueror? Our foe may prevail over us, but he too will one day recognize that God is truly Conqueror of all.

RECIPE FOR HAPPINESS

"Dr. George Gallup was being interviewed on a television program. He was questioned about some of the unusual polls of his American Institute of Public Opinion. Dr. Gallup explained one poll for the finding of that group of people, the members of which were the most happy people. Said Dr. Gallup: 'Our survey showed the most happy people are those who have had a religious experience. The most unhappy are those who frequent taverns.'"—New York Temperance Action.

God's Hilltops

As a child I was taken regularly to the Presbyterian church where almost weekly I heard the old Scottish paraphrase of Psalm 121: "Unto the hills around do lift up, my longing eyes." It seemed to me that there were more verses in that song than any other in the book. The message was indelibly imprinted on my mind and even though I did not understand it, I always wondered how I could look up unto the hills when I lived in a part of the country as flat as a dinner plate. To my childish mind this symbolism meant nothing. Since those days, however, I have personally visited God's hilltops. There I have found the help which the song prom-

The first of God's hilltops which I visited was Sinai—the hilltop of conviction. From my earliest recollections I was acquainted with the story of how God came down upon the top of the mount and His presence was like lightning and thunder to those who were there. The people were awed with a holy God and His demands of perfect obedience to His law. Not knowing the deceit of their own hearts, they promised obedience in Exodus 19, Verse 19: "And all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do. . . ."

Moses then went up to the top of the mount with God to write the law—with the promise of obedience from the people ringing in his ears. After many days Moses returned from the top of the mount with the written law of God on two tables of stone. As he descended the steep crags of Sinai he heard the clamor of heathenish merriment, and found the people dancing and feasting before a golden calf. In that instant Moses realized the inefficiency of the law to save his people. He was so angered by their weakness and failure that he hurled the tables down and shattered them on the rocks at his feet.

What a picture of conviction! Every heart must experience it before God can bring salvation. When Sinai ceases to be a mere event of Bible history and begins to be a personal experience in the individual's life, then it is one step in God's direction. Some modern Christian teaching minimizes old-time conviction and repentance and produces anemic saints who are not quite sure whether they had much to be saved from.

The Holy Spirit alone can bring us face to face with a broken law and its unpaid penalty. This experience alone will prepare us to cry in desperation, "What must I do to be saved?" The Bible says in James 2:10, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Guilty! Guilty! Until you know you are guilty, you will not look for a Saviour. Until you know you are condemned, you will not desire justification. Until you know you are in bondage to a broken law, you will not be willing to accept divine liberty.

Until you know you are unable to keep the law, you will not look for one who is righteous to take your place.

Moses knew the need of his people who were faced with the broken law of a holy God. They needed divine forgiveness. Moses cried out in Exodus 32:32, "Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—" Then a long pause. Moses realized that God cannot forgive, and be just, unless the penalty of the broken law is paid. Then he goes on, ". . . and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written." Moses loved his people so much that, in spite of his anger over the broken law, he was willing to give himself as a substitute for their sin. God refused his offer, for Moses himself had sinned. Man needs a substitute with a perfect record. The case looked hopeless, indeed was hopeless, if God had not prepared another mountain top—Calvary—the place of conversion.

Many souls who have felt the biting guilt of Sinai's conviction never go on to Calvary and find relief for their guilt. Instead they go through life carrying a guilt complex which clouds their whole existence. To them Sinai has become an experience of conviction, but Calvary is still just an event of history. Happy is the sin-laden soul who is led by the Holy Spirit to Calvary where by faith Christ becomes the sin bearer to carry his sin and remove his guilt. What a perfect substitution God gave when He gave his only begotten Son.

On Mount Calvary Jesus Christ bore the shame of being numbered with the transgressors. When we come to Him, we lose our shame because we are then numbered with the righteous. He was naked that we might be clothed with His righteousness. He suffered that we might be comforted. He thirsted that we might drink of the water of life. He was in physical darkness that we might have spiritual light. He was separated from God the Father that we might be reconciled to God the Father. Only at Calvary will our burden of sin roll off as we look by faith to Christ—our substitute. What relief from guilt to discover at the Cross that there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus.

There is, however, another side to the Christian life. Our new relationship carries with it responsibility. Many Christians know that Christ wants them to live victorious, fruitful lives. They fail, however, to appropriate the means that God has put at our disposal to accomplish this in our lives. There is another hilltop that we as Christians need to visit—Mount Olivet—the hilltop of consecration.

In Acts 1, Verses 3-9, we hear the Saviour's last words to His disciples before His ascension from the mount. There is but one command here—followed by several promises. The implication seems to be that if the disciples will keep this one command, they will be heirs to the promises. They will be filled with the Holy Spirit and will become ardent witnesses. The command is simple—wait on God. But you say, "They were to wait for the coming to earth of the Holy Spirit. Now we need not wait for this, He is here already"—indeed he dwells in the hearts of all God's people. Does not the Word say in Romans 8:9, ". . . if any man have not the Spirit (continued on page four) of Christ, he is none of his"? This is all true, and doctrinally very sound.

Let me suggest, however, that these people, some of whom are named in Acts 1: 12-14, waited for more than a dispensational reason. They waited for personal reasons. I used to picture these 120 men and women sitting, with pious faces and folded hands, placidly waiting for God to get ready to send His Holy Spirit to earth. On examination of Chapters 1 and 2 of Acts, I can see that this waiting had another purpose.

In Acts 2:1 we read that at the end of the ten waiting days, the people were all with one accord. This was before the Holy Spirit came upon them. Something surely must have been accomplished in their hearts by God during the ten days. A time of revolutionary heart searching must have taken place to make these people of one accord.

Peter was present here—the enthusiast who boasted that, though all forsook Christ, he never would. His self-confidence made him impatient with everyone else's faults.

There were James and John—the sons of Zebedee who irked their fellow disciples, with their spirit of self-seeking. With their ambitious mother's encouragement, they tried to pull strings by requesting from Christ the chief seats in His kingdom.

Thomas was there, too, we read, with his "I'm-from-Missouri" spirit of self-importance. He annoyed the disciples by refusing to believe that they had seen the risen Christ until he could see for himself. He wanted to pass what he considered to be his more mature judgment on the matter. He could not trust his fellow Christians to do anything properly without his presence or direction. He craved constant recognition to bolster his sensitive soul, which was so prone to despondency and discouragement.

The women, none of whom are named specifically except Mary, the mother of Jesus, were there too. I'm sure Martha, that overworked zealot who was brimming with self-pity, was there. Remember how she chided her more easy-going sister, Mary, for being irresponsible? She even had a sharp tone in her voice for the Lord when she asked Him, "Dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone?" She felt constantly resentful toward others who failed to appreciate her willingness to serve the Lord.

In ten days of waiting on God these people and 115 more were all of one accord. If this is the result of waiting on God—let us have more of it! Let us go to Olivet and hear Christ's command to wait, then we will inherit this promise and will be filled with the Holy Spirit and go forth to witness effectively. As we wait—God will deal with the many expressions of the self-life which mar our unity and effectiveness as Christians.

When we are emptied we can be filled as we give ourselves in consecration to God. It has been observed that the saints are constantly singing, "Fill me now, fill me now" when they should be singing, "Kill me now, kill me now." This is a Scriptural observation for we read in John 12:24, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."

There was once a wealthy miser who sat daily by his window, counting his money. A friend one day visited him and asked him, "How can you sit here by your window counting your money while those in need pass by on the street? Do you not feel a twinge of pity?" "I see no needy people pass by my window," said the miser, "or I would surely help them."

When his friend went to show him the need outside his window he made a discovery. The miser's window—like his life—was backed with silver. All that he saw when he looked out on life was his own self.

What expression of the self-life clouds our view and turns our eyes inward so that we cannot see the needy world to which Christ wants to send us? Let us wait before the Lord as He commanded His disciples till He has shown us ourselves. Then we can confess our sin and be emptied for God's Spirit to fill.

How many of God's hilltops have you visited? Happy is the soul which has experienced the conviction of Sinai, the conversion of Calvary, and the consecration of Olivet. Then and then alone will we be filled with God's Spirit and begin to "go" into our world and, living fruitfully, preach the gospel to every creature.—Gospel Herald.

Church Proposes $21,000 Renovation Program

THE congregation of St. John's Chapel, Free Will Baptist Church, Staeb North Carolina, voted December 20, 1950 to proceed with a $21,000 renovation program. $15,000 of the amount has already been raised in cash and pledged according to the Rev. Gordon Sebastian pastor.

The renovation program was decided upon after fire extensively damaged the church October 31.

Plans for the major undertaking have been drawn by John Valentine, architect.

Mr. Sebastian said that the congregation entered into the program with the thought that the improvement of His house of worship shall be a birthday present for Jesus.

The building committee, Romaine Gaskill, chairman, presented 12 proposals to the congregation, all of which have been approved. The proposals follow:

1. The church will be moved back from Highway 70, raised and underpinned.

2. The interior of the auditorium (gutted by fire) will be repaired and rebuilt to conform to its original plan and design. (Since the fire, the worship services have been held in the educational building.)

3. The chancel will be changed and rebuilt to conform to the suggestions of professional architect.

4. The front of the church proper will be extended 14 feet for the purpose of adding two classrooms, one on each side, and to provide additional auditorium space when needed.

5. A porch, extending from 10 to feet out from the building, will be added to the front of the church.

6. The present steeple will be replaced with a new steeple, conforming to the suggestions of a professional architect.

7. The church, including sanctuary and educational building, will be brick-veneered.

8. A nursery will be provided and finished.

9. The present office will be rebuilt to provide for two rest rooms.

10. The present heating system will be replaced by a central unit adequate for heating both the auditorium and educational building.

11. The building committee will be given the authority to dispose of fire-damaged furniture.

12. The building committee will have the responsibility for all plans and decisions concerning the renovation proposals.

On the building committee, in addition to Mr. Gaskill, are Monnie Willis, W. Mason Jr., Ralph Pittman and Doity C. Kill.

Safeguarding the Youth of America

POSTMASTER General Arthur E. Summerfield announced that the first meeting of the recently appointed Citizens' Advisory Committee on Obscenity Through the Mails was held Tuesday, December 15, in his office with all members or their representatives present, except Mr. Douglas Black, President of Doubleday and Company, Inc. of New York City, who is presently in Europe.

The committee meeting opened at 11:00 a. m. with Postmaster General Summerfield presiding. In his opening remarks to the committee, Mr. Summerfield emphasized that the committee was concerned with the illegal transmittal of obscene and pornographic material through the mails, including letters, advertisements, photographs, film slides, movies, newspapers, magazines and books. Mr. Summerfield pointed out the growing size of this social blight; the fact that it is now a half billion dollar a year business; and that its sales promotional efforts are increasingly aimed at teen-age youngsters.

Herbert B. Warburton, General Counsel of the Post Office Department, outlined the responsibilities of the Postmaster General under the statutes in determining matters of obscenity relative to both hard core and borderline pornographic materials.

David H. Stevens, Chief Postal Inspector, traced the growth of obscenity in the mails during recent years and the important progress being made in the department's intensified drive to clean the mails of obscenity. Mr. Stephens noted that whereas in 1958 public complaints against obscene materials totalled 50,000, they will exceed 70,000 this year. Arrests, between 1954 and 1958, increased 45 per cent. With 281 arrests in major cases during 1959, a new high in prosecutions for obscenity violations will be reached."

L. Rohe Walter, Special Assistant to the Postmaster General, outlined the step by step intensified public relations effort of the department to rid the mails of obscene materials. He emphasized that the objectives of this effort are relatively simple, namely:

"1. To arouse parents in particular to the menace of this social problem and its damaging effect upon the dignity and moral principles of the youth of America.

"2. To get parents to promptly report and deliver to local postmasters unordered obscene materials received in the mail so that post office department can start action against the purveyors of this filth."

Former Congresswoman Cecil M. Harden, now a Special Assistant to the Postmaster General for Women's Affairs, summarized some of her experiences during the past ten months in addressing groups of men and women, members of all civic organizations, on obscenity in the mails. She emphasized the need for local action at local community levels to clean up this social menace and reported welcome evidence of public concern and positive dynamic action by citizens at the village, town, city and state levels.

The committee members viewed an exhibit of recently apprehended obscene material, most of which was being sent unordered to youngsters. In their opinion the mailing of such filth is indefensible and must be stopped.

"The purpose of this first meeting of the Committee on Obscenity Through the Mails," Mr. Summerfield said, "was purely informative and exploratory. I feel certain the members were given a good overall picture of the complexities of this problem of obscenity in the United States mails and the great need to eradicate it. I am happy to report to the American people that the distinguished members of this committee expressed their whole-hearted determination to assist the department in every way possible in combating this growing menace. I feel certain that the future actions of the committee will be helpful to the national welfare; to revitalizing standards of moral decency; and, in particular, to safeguarding the youth of America by legally stopping obscenity in the mails."

Christian Artist's Victory

by J. B. Tweter

Dr. Robert James Devine tells this story on the artist Mr. Vaughn Shoemaker of Chicago: they were together at a men's meeting at which the artist was to make a drawing of the broad and narrow roads. A letter was to be given a sinner on the broad road which contained the invitation of John 3:16.

"I shall do the drawing," Shoemaker had told Devine before the meeting, "but you will have to give the invitation."

"No, you can give the invitation, too," Mr. Devine insisted.

"Oh, no, I could never do that!" the artist replied nervously.

Finally the drawing was finished. The way of salvation had been drawn so clearly, that with the letter of invitation, no one could misunderstand. Vaughn Shoemaker then nodded to his friend Devine, who was seated in the front row, to get up and give the invitation. Imagine his surprise and desperation when Devine stubbornly shook his head in refusal. There was nothing else for Shoemaker to do but to give the invitation himself.

His second surprise was to see a drunkard, known as Charlie the Barber, get up and come forward for salvation, and behind him another man! Shoemaker's heart glowed with a holy joy.

Later that evening after the artist was home, he called Dr. Devine on the telephone. "Do you know that my tires just seemed to float on air," he exclaimed, "and isn't it wonderful that two souls were won to the Lord!"

Truly it is as the Scriptures say: "The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that winneth souls is wise" (Proverbs 11:30).—Gospel Herald.

Grifton, N. C., Church Shows Rapid Progress

The Grifton, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church has shown rapid progress in the past year. There have been over 14 decisions for Christ (many of these were backsliders), and over 50 have been baptized. The active membership of the church has tripled. Prayer meeting attendance around 75 to 100, while a year ago it was only 3 to 10. Sunday morning worship and Sunday night evangelistic services are running close in attendance to that of the Sunday school—around 130, while a year ago it was only 55 to 65.

The pastor of the church, the Rev. Owe Ganey, reports the following:

"We have experienced three good revivals. In the revival which I held in March there were 22 decisions for Christ. Then we had a wonderful revival in October with the Rev. Jack Paramore as the evangelist. There were 35 decisions for Christ during that revival. The third revival was held in December with the Rev. Guy Owens as the evangelist. The members were really pleased with the blessings the Lord gave us through Brother Owens. There were seven decisions for Christ, all of these being adults.

"The church is making plans now to build a new church and educational plant. We have outgrown the old one; we hope to have a parsonage also in the near future if possible. We are thankful for the Lord's blessing in 1959, and trust all of our brothers and sisters in Christ will pray that the Lord will bless the work at Grifton even more in 1960."

The church announces the following schedule for revivals in 1960:

January 17-24: Evangelist, the Rev. Bobby Jackson; song director, the Rev. LaRue Davis.

May 23-28: Evangelist, the Rev. Ronald Creech.

October 10-23: Evangelist, the Rev. Jack Paramore.

Recipe for Revival

If all the sleeping folks will wake up,
If all the lukewarm folks will fire up,
And all the dishonest folks will confess up,
And all the disgruntled folks will sweeten up,
And all the discouraged folks will cheer up,
And all the depressed folks will look up,
And all the estranged folks will make up,
And all the gossipers will shut up,
And all the dry bones will shake up,
And all the true soldiers will stand up,

College Named Beneficiary

President W. Burkette Raper has announced that E. L. Jones of Walstonburg, North Carolina, has become the sixth person to name Mount Olive College the beneficiary of an insurance policy. Mr. Jones has assigned an ordinary life policy of $1,000 to the college.

President Raper explained that the college is advocating that its friends use insurance policies as a long-range plan to provide endowment and building funds for the institution. The college is also encouraging interested parties to include the college in their wills, Raper declared.

Attention Students

Dean Michael R. Pelt announced today that Mount Olive College will begin a new semester on January 27, and that new and transferring students may enter at that time.

Interested students are invited to contact the college for catalogues and application forms.

Carve Your Name High

Dr. A. Purnell Bailey in his syndicated column, "Daily Bread," tells the following story:

On the campus of Baylor University is a beautiful marble building which for many years has served as the library and the chapel. The funds for this building were given by a Mr. Carroll. Not long after he made the gift to Baylor, the donor lost nearly all his wealth.

Later when he and Mr. Potect were walking across the campus the latter remarked, "Don't you wish you had all the money back which you put in this building?"

"No," replied Mr. Carroll, "if I had not given it when I did, it would have gone for all the rest."

With that thought Mr. Potect went to his room and wrote:

Carve your name high o'er the shifting sands,
Where the steadfast rocks defy decay;
That you hold in your cold dead hand
What you have given away."

GIFTS THAT LAST

Mount Olive College offers Free Will Baptists a challenging opportunity to make gifts that last. The most permanent investment that we can make is in people, and a gift to Mount Olive College is an investment in choice young men and women. Contributions in any amount may be made for either of the following purposes:

1. General Fund.
2. Library Fund.
3. Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation or other Endowment Funds.
4. Memorial Loan Fund for students.
5. Capital Fund for Growth and Expansion.
6. Scholarships for worthy students.

Your gift may be in the form of cash, stocks, bonds, property, insurance or through your will. Let a representative from the college help you develop a plan of giving that will speak for you when you can no longer speak for yourself.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Is it right for one to give a part of his tithes to support a radio program?—Jim Kennedy, Missouri.

Answer: Yes, indeed, it is always right to support the propagation of the gospel to all creatures throughout the whole world and that is one of the best modern means by which this may be accomplished. Of course, a Christian would not give to just any program over the air any more than to just any religious program propagated through any other means. It is our responsibility to give as unto the Lord; and in order to do this, one should find out whether or not the support of any program comes up to this ideal before he gives. Few weeks pass by that either a beggar from a Catholic or Seventh Day Adventist interest approaches me for a gift, most of them panhandling at my door. When I inquire, they reluctantly admit the group from which they come. Of course, I let them know that my conscience votes against the order they represent; therefore, I cannot give. I help to support Dr. Fuller's Old-Fashioned Revival Hour, The Back to the Bible Broadcast, World Vision, The Hour of Decision, Dr. DeHahn and Dr. Michelson's programs and think any Christian may support these and any other programs that he knows are true Bible believing programs.

Question: Please explain, "Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world" (1 Corinthians 5:10), especially the last clause.—Nathan Jordan, California.

Answer: Here in this whole chapter Paul is appealing to the Christians to live a dedicated life, separated from the ungodly world and worldliness so prevalent in Corinth when the writing of the epistle was effected. This, of course, is an appropriate exhortation to all Christians at all times. The worldliness of Paul's day was the same as that of our day and needs to be especially guarded against at all times. Every backslider begins his backsliding by becoming favorable to worldliness.

In the previous verse Paul says, "I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators" (1 Corinthians 5:9). Then following this in the verse of your question he gives these other things that Christians must shun or refrain from. The verse following the one you mention says they should not keep company with a person posing to be a brother that is a fornicator, one that is covetous, an idolater, a railer, a drunkard, or an extortioner. They were to not even eat with such as these. It would seem from such verses of Scripture that the church members are entirely too sociable with worldly people. It would seem that today the Christian is very unfamiliar with God's several commandments calling us unto a separated life from both worldliness and worldly people, but if I understand the Scriptures correctly, their teaching is just as up-to-date now as when written. Of course, we must come in contact with such since we live in the sinful world being more or less confined in our activities to the sinful world that is being more or less exposed to it each day, yet we are to raise our voices of protest in every time and place possible; otherwise, we might be taken for one of such description as portrayed above. Then when it comes to such as these being recognized as members of a local church, such should never be. On the other hand, this does not mean that we should go into monastic seclusion as did those of the dark ages; rather, we should cry aloud as did the prophets of old, Elijah, Daniel, Malachi, John the Baptist and others.

When it comes to keeping company with Christians that habitually participate in gross, worldly sins we are to go to them in love, warning them; then if they pay us no heed, we take two or three saints to them. And if they refuse these, we take the matter up with the church. If they pay no attention to the church's injunction, then we excommunicate them, still living, praying and hoping to restore them. "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be

THE BIBLE AGAINST ITSELF

"For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ" (2 Corinthians 2:17).

Some weeks ago as I was looking over the magazine rack in a public library my eyes fell upon the above title of an editorial in a religious magazine which has a nation-wide, if not almost world-wide circulation. I am speaking of The Christian Century, an interdenominational weekly, to which I do not subscribe and very seldom read, because it is of the moderate school of thought. But when I saw the subject, I decided I wanted to see what new assault was being brought against the Bible. Much to my surprise and pleasure I was reading an article which I think should be read by everyone. Therefore, I am giving it in full during the next three weeks of meditation. I urge everyone to read it and take to what it says. It is especially important to our young Christians as I believe you will agree.

The editorial from The Christian Century, October 28, 1959:

After years of relative quiet, the movies are once again making noisy news. It no longer does the film industry desire compatibility with the nation's mores and operation with its religious impulses and organizations; it has declared its independence from both. In fact, the industry has recently been acting like an irresponsible boy who runs away from home. Over the years Protestants have become so accustomed to deerying censorship against mass media that they have created the impression of being impereceptive about the quality of films. Roman Catholicism, the two last decades since its last clashes with this particular medium, had, in the public eye a virtual monopoly as guardian of religious standards in movies. In the process a significant change in national life has come into play; as unto thee as an heathen man and a publican" (Matthew 18:15-17).

aniel W. Brogan has observed, legal Puritanism has moved from rural Protestantism to urban Catholicism.

The movies have always presented unique problems. A mature theater-goer sees a Broadway play after he has read reviews, has discussed the play with others, and after considerable hardship has secured tickets. He is not likely to find his imagination or his conscience compromised. But the promotion of movies is geared to front and hinderland and, in the drive-in theater era, particularly to the teen-age and family trade. Thus what the movies portray becomes a part of young people's lives. The Catholic sponsored Legion of Decency has recognized this influence, even if it has not always acted responsibly. Hollywood cannot complain that Protestants have interfered. But movie-makers have misused their freedom.

Recently Protestants have begun to ask, "What can we do? How can we bring about change without ourselves undertaking coercion and censorship incompatible with Protestant principles? Following an initial and tentative attack against the film industry by George Heimrich of the National Council of Churches, Hollywood has remained rather sensitive about Protestant reaction—to the surprise of Mr. Heimrich and all of us. The national stir his charges provoked should give us the courage to look for things that Protestants can do to set new moral and artistic standards in the mass media.

We have a specific suggestion for a specific first step. Protestant churches have in recent years become the unwitting and allible promoters of some of Hollywood's worst movies. There have been families and Sunday school classes and youth groups to the least artistic and least edifying examples of film fare. We are speaking of the free publicity given in church periodicals and Sunday bulletins to the anti-Biblical extravaganzas. The films are the culmination of what Mr. de Mille was the first to discover: that Bible and bubble bath make an unbeatable combination. We are sure that, once he deserted the bald-head row for the mudstail trail, father has not seen as much to excite him elsewhere as he has at the movies which the churches tell him to see: The Prodigal, David and Bathsheba, Samson and Delilah, The Ten Commandments, and now and soon The Big Fisherman, Solomon and Sheba and Ben Hur. Mother enjoys a dinner-to-midnight epic without realizing that it is undercutting Biblical religion. And the kiddies think it is real fun: all this world and heaven too. We cannot remedy everything about Hollywood (and there is much about it that is good and does not need remedying), but Protestants can at least begin to challenge the promotion of lurid distortions of the Bible. Protestants need not subsidize these vulgar efforts to use the Bible against itself. Let us now explore in the light of certain Biblical realities the ballyhoo for the three newest Bible films.

Without It I Should Die

When the Japanese were on a spy hunt in Burma, anyone who could read was a suspect, and it was almost a crime to be in possession of a book. But books were precious, and the people took to hiding them. Hymnbooks, prayer books, and testaments were hidden away and only brought out to be read in secret. Some Christians hid a book or two in the pillow they used every night, and others wrapped the precious volumes in waterproof leaves from palm trees and hid them in the forest. A few refused to be parted from their New Testaments, whatever the risk. They were proud of their faith and scorned concealment. "What's this book?" asked a Japanese soldier on finding a testament in the house of one of them. The reply was a memorable one and must have impressed the soldier, for he left the Christian his book and did not question him further: "That is my Bible, my life. Where I go it must go with me, and without it I should die."—Bible Society Record.

John H. Noble to Speak At Greenville, N. C., Church

John Noble, one of the few Americans ever to return from a Russian slave labor camp, will give his unforgettable experiences when he speaks at Greenville Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville, North Carolina, Saturday, January 16, at 7:30 p. m.

Mr. Noble, whose visit is sponsored by evangelical churches of this area and the National Association of Evangelicals, will be accompanied by Rev. Mahlon L. Macy, NAE's field director, who will introduce him.

John Noble was born in Detroit, Michigan, in 1923 and attended school there until 1938. At that time he accompanied his parents to Germany to study in one of his father's photo industry factories, while his father was receiving medical treatment. When World War II broke out the Noble family was put under local interment by Hitler's forces until 1945. As the Soviet Red Army occupied East Germany, the Nobles expected to be liberated, since they were United States citizens, but instead were imprisoned by the Soviets. Later John's parents were released but he was held in the Dresden Prison for fourteen months, and late in 1946 was shipped to concentration camp Muehlberg in East Germany, and then on to notorious Buchenwald.

In 1950, Noble was sentenced, without trial or accusation, to fifteen years' imprisonment and was shipped through Poland into the U. S. S. R. For four and a half years he was kept in the infamous arctic slave camp, Vorkuta, working in the collieries under unspeakable conditions. He dropped to under one hundred pounds weight and had to endure fifty and more degrees below zero weather.

Finally, he was able to smuggle out of Russia a postcard which reached his parents in Detroit and resulted in his liberation after personal intervention by President Eisenhower. John Noble, who related his religious experience in his book I Found God in Soviet Russia, has dedicated his life to serve God and the American nation. He spends much of his time on speaking tours from coast to coast in an effort to awaken America to the dangers of communism.

At the meeting in Greenville Free Will Baptist Church, Mr. Noble and Mr. Macy will tell their audience what the evangelicals of America are doing to combat Communism and other enemies of the gospel.

THE CHURCH TRIUMPHANT

- A. She has weathered the storm and conquered.
- B. She has reached Mount Ararat's peaceful harbor.

—Charles J. Noble,
E. Wenatchee, Washington.

FILLERS FOR YOUR CHURCH BULLETIN

COST OF FOLLOWING GOD

It cost Abraham the willingness as to yield his only son. It cost Esther the risk of her life. It cost Daniel being cast into the den of lions. It cost Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego being put in a fiery furnace. It cost Stephen death by stoning. It cost Peter a martyr's death. It cost Jesus His life. Does it cost you anything?

SUCCESS

Success is in the way you walk the paths of life each day;
It's in the little things you do and in the things you say.
Success is not in getting rich or rising high to fame;
It's not alone in winning goals which all men hope to claim.

Success is being big at heart and clean and broad of mind;
It's being faithful to your friends, and to the stranger, kind.
It's in the children whom you love and all they learn from you;
Success depends on character and everything you do.

SOME RELIGION

If you could get religion like an old-time Methodist, experience it like a Baptist, be positive of it like a Disciple, be proud of it like an Episcopalian, pay for it like a Presbyterian, propagate it like an Adventist, and enjoy it like a Negro—that would be some religion!

Can You Say This?

"I'm going to glory." Grace starts us—good things attend us on our way—glory awaits us.

"I'm going to glory." It is only the truly repentant, truly believing ones who can rightly say this. Those who are not forgiven, unjustified, cannot have present peace with God and cannot rejoice in hope of His glory. For them there is only judgment in view—the righteous judgment of God on account of their sins.

And yet, if such is your case, you may be saved from your position of peril and distance from God. Today the voice of mercy calls to you. Give up all hope of gaining deliverance by your own works of righteousness. Rest not on any supposed goodness of your own. Rely not on outward ordinances. You need Christ for salvation. You need His precious blood to cleanse your guilt away. You need His power to support you so that you may serve Him aright.

Come to Him then at once. Wait not for improvement or reformation. Come as you are to Christ. He will do in you all that is necessary for your well-being and for His praise through your redeemed life, now and always.

Then will you rightly be able to say, "I'm going to glory."—Scattered Seed.

PAIN CLOSES BAPTIST CHURCH COOLEY SAYS ISSUE SHOCKING

The above was the headline in the Raleigh, North Carolina, News and Observer, December 4, 1959. The article was written by Jack Russell. The article read as follows: "Representative Harold D. Cooley of Nashville charged here Thursday that religious intolerance is rampant in Catholic Spain. Just returned from a brief trip to Madrid, Cooley said he saw there evidence of shocking intolerance to Protestants."

News has been brought to our attention from those who have visited Spain in the past few years, but these were religious incidents by religious leaders. But now come our most outstanding political leaders, a man in whom the people of his district have placed confidence in and kept him in Washington, D. C., as their representative several years, visits Spain and brings the news that the intolerance there is shocking. Protestants are persecuted and their churches closed by the laws of Spain. We further quote from Mr. Cooley's remarks as written by Mr. Russell: "One Baptist church in Madrid, he said, has been closed by the Spanish police and its minister arrested and jailed. The church is owned by the Southern Baptist Convention of this country." Here are honest statements as reported by an eyewitness, a man of the United States law-making body in our capacity. Of course there will be some, no doubt, who will disbelieve the statements, and those who doubt will probably be faithful to the church of Rome. I want to say that this writer believes every word spoken by Representative Cooley. Mr. Cooley continues to speak according to Mr. Russell, "I did not go to Spain on a religious crusade, the Tar Heel lawmaker said, I was so shocked by my experience while there that I felt I must speak out."

You Southern Baptists and all Protestants might as well prepare for the worst. Not only are the Protestants in Spain persecuted, but in all places where the Roman Catholics have control. In Colombia, South America, churches have been burned and Protestant ministers shot to death, as well as members of the Protestant churches. As I would like to quote from the United Evangelical Action as follows: "Veteran Christian leaders in Spain say that 1958 was one of the worst years for Protestants in that country since the close of the Spanish Civil War of 1939. This is in spite of the fact that Article 6 of the Spanish Bill of Rights says, 'No one shall be molested for his religious beliefs or in the private exercise of his worship.' This freedom of religion, however, is wiped out in the very next sentence which says, 'No other external ceremonies or manifestations than those of the Catholic religion shall be permitted.'"

You see that by the so-called Spanish Bill of Rights, that the only freedom of religion in Spain is for the Catholics. This is the kind of freedom you find in Communist countries. You are free to vote, but you can only vote one ticket, that is a Communist ticket. So there is freedom of religion in Spain, but only for the Catholics.

We learn from Contact that, "A recent newspaper article in Barcelona, Spain, mentioned that the United States government was making a gift of $130,000,000 through the Catholic Welfare Conference." As I meditate on the treatment of the Protestant people in Spain, I wonder if Mr. Cooley voted to make this gift of $130,000,000 to a nation that is violating the agreement and lawful exercise of human rights. If I were in Mr. Cooley's place, I would call for a referendum on the act of giving $130,000,000 to a country whose actions are that of persecuting those who differ in religious beliefs.

You say that the Constitution of the United States would not allow such persecution, but remember friends that constitutions are changed by sufficient voting power. The United States is losing control of its constitutional powers; different interpretations are being put on the Constitution. Thus we are having trouble in the public schools of the United States.

We quote again from Action: "Generally speaking, the persecution of Protestants in Spain is more subtle than violent. Spain no longer kills Protestants—it just makes it impossible for them to live. The idea is to exterminate the Protestants by simply making life rough for them. They are thus liable to be put out of their homes by fanatical parents or other relatives, and expelled from jobs or refused promotion in such places as factories. Especially is this true in smaller cities or numerous villages."

This article goes on to describe types of persecution as follows: "Protestants are prohibited to: (1) identify their churches by any outward sign; (2) advertise their services either by press or radio; (3) circulate Bibles or portions of the Bible without Roman Catholic notes; (4) distribute tracts or other evangelical literature on the streets; (5) have private schools to educate their own children; (6) teach in public schools; (7) be officers in the armed forces; (8) operate their own hospitals; (9) establish old folk's or orphan homes; (10) broadcast the gospel over Spanish radio stations; (11) rent public halls for special gatherings; (12) operate public evangelistic bookstores.

"Among the major types of persecution are six things. These include: (1) closing churches; (2) refusing to grant permission for the civil marriage of Protestant young people who have been baptized in the Catholic church in infancy; (3) restriction and confiscation of Protestant literature; (4) causing hardship for the education of Protestants in Spain; (5) Protestant servicemen subject to disciplinary action for their faith; (6) making it difficult for the burial of Protestants, especially in smaller cities and villages."

The sources from which I have quoted this week are reliable sources. They should make us say, "No!" to that gift of $130,000,000 to a nation that allows and backs up persecution of a minority group. I do not appreciate the persecution of any minority group by the majority. I believe in fair play. I do not believe in the religious confession of many groups, but that is their business. My business is to believe that the Lord Jesus is the only begotten Son of God for my salvation, and to depend on no man-made salvation. Only in Christ are we secure.

One must be a believer if he would be an achiever.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

SALLY'S GOOD TURN

by Margaret N. Freeman

SALLY stole a quick look at Bob as he clumped noisily to his seat across the aisle. Instead of his usually frank and lovable smile, he scowled a little as he caught her look, then smiled faintly.

"Bob?" Sally whispered softly before classes resumed: "you are coming to the Sunday school class party tonight, aren't you?"

Bob shook his head and ducked it swiftly as he groped for his geography book.

Sally felt a hot blur of tears cross her vision. Bob was so different, and she was worried. It's that Sam Moore, she mourned silently. Oh, why, why, does Bob want to get involved with him?

Sam was big and handsome and the best in sports on the whole playground, but Sally didn't like his bragging way or reckless I'll-do-what-I-want-to-manner.

A month ago she and her cousin Bob had planned the Sunday school party. Bob had been so enthusiastic as they planned the Bible quizzes. "Let's have a testimony time, too," he'd said, "and then wind up with refreshments."

"Cocoa and sandwiches and cookies," Sally planned. "Oh, it's fun to get together with Christian friends!" Bob had agreed and now everything was different.

He caught her by the arm at recess. He looked tense and faraway as he so often did these days. "Sally, I'm sorry I can't make it tonight."

Sally was about to ask sharply: "can't or won't" but Bob looked so guilty she said gently: "Are you doing something with Sam?"

"Yeah," he gulped and swaggered a little, "he's asked me special to go downtown with him after school and then we're going to the gym to practice basketball shots tonight."

"If you don't go along with his plans, you can't be part of his gang?" Sally asked.

"Yeah, that's it. You do understand. You're swell, Sally."

What I don't understand, Sally thought as she turned away, is why it's so important for Bob to be with Sam so much. I guess it's because he's a leader and so good at sports. What puzzles me even more is why Sam is always after Bob to come along. Bob is younger and he isn't Sam's type at all.

She just couldn't get over the idea that Bob was in real trouble. Right after school, Sam, Bob and three other boys shot down the street. Sally stared after them a moment. Then her lips tightened. I'll follow a ways, she decided.

They headed for Henderson's Sporting Goods Store. Maybe they're just going to fool around in the stores, Sally thought. Maybe I should have gone right home and helped Mother get ready for the party. But as long as she was here, she might as well bluff it out. She went in the back door and got behind a counter of games. The boys were up front by the basketballs.

It was almost closing time and Mr. Henderson was closing the venetian blinds.

"Bob, I'm going to get a new basketball. You look them over and tell me which one you like best—you'll be using it a lot, too," Sam said in a flattering voice.

He motioned to the other three boys and they walked back so close to where Sally crouched, she was afraid they could hear her heart thump. She strained to listen as Sam whispered: "We gotta work fast. Old Henderson is near the door. Stupid is up by the ball I want. When Henderson comes near and turns his back, we'll work fast, and Bob will carry the ball out for me and never know he's stolen it!"

I knew something was up, Sally thought. I'm glad I followed them.

She heard Mr. Henderson coming. Mr. Henderson was a deacon in their church. He always had a warm smile and all the kids liked him for his kindly ways. Sally heard him say: "Well, Bob, can I sell you a ball today?"

"Fraid not," Bob grinned. "I'm just looking at them."

Mr. Henderson went back to the cash register and began counting cash. He hadn't looked her way yet, and Sally was almost hidden from his view.

She watched Sam motion to the other boys and they all walked up front to Bob.

"That's the one I bought," he said to Bob in a low voice. "I'll let you carry it for me. First honors!"

"Did you pay for it already?" Bob asked.

"Sure! Sure! Let's get going!" Sam looked uneasy. The other three sauntered ahead.

"Okay!" Bob put the ball under his arm.

Sam had been watching Mr. Henderson.

Sally, too, had been twisting her head first in his direction and then looking at the boys until she felt like a puppet on a string.

Why, oh why, Sally thought: why does Mr. Henderson look up? Oh, she remembered Mr. Henderson wore a hearing aid. She scraped her foot along the floor. Mr. Henderson looked up and saw the boys going out the door.

"Bob!" he called, his voice sharp with shock.

"Yes sir?" Bob turned around.

"Where are you going with the ball?"

"I'm just carrying it for Sam, sir."

Sam stepped forward, surprise and curiosity seeming to light his face as he asked in an incredulous voice: "You crazy something, Bob? How did you expect to get away with a basketball? Cornball, huh?" he turned to the other boys as he shook his head.

"Yeah." They snickered and started walking away.

"Just a minute!" Mr. Henderson said. "Let's get this settled before any of you leave."

"You saw with your own eyes who was makin' off with the ball, didn't you, Mr. Henderson?" Sam asked patiently.

"Yes," Mr. Henderson said quietly, "I did. I'm really surprised, Bob!"

He turned indignantly to Sam: "You saw you boys—"

"Want me to call the cops?" Sam interrupted turning to Mr. Henderson.

Sally popped out from her hiding place. "That's enough!" she sputtered indignantly. "I saw it all. I can explain."

Sally saw the boy quiver. He's really just a big cowardly bluff, she thought. Glad Bob can see him the way he really is.

Sam whined: "Don't turn me in to the cops."

Mr. Henderson studied the boy. "I'll let you go, on one condition. You will be in my class on the balcony. You will be on probation six months. If you miss one Sunday without a good reason, I will take steps to punish you. I'd be glad to see the rest of you boys, too," he glanced at the other three.

Sam nodded sullenly, eyes downcast. "Okay!"

Bob and Sally went their way. Sally was weak and trembly.

Columbia, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Sound Side Free Will Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. P. V. Edwards on December 19, 1959, at 7:30 p. m.

The president presided over the meeting which was opened by singing Christmas carols. Mrs. Bernice Maitland led the group in prayer, followed by the Scripture reading. Miss Mozella Brickhouse, president of Mount Olive Junior College, presented the program entitled, "The Living Word." Following the program, the business was transacted as usual.

After the meeting adjourned with prayer, the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Last Blow; Rock Rent

Nathan Bangs, as a young minister, became discouraged by difficulties and lack of success. He was on the point of giving up when he dreamed he was working on a rock with a pickax. Stroke after stroke and no effect. He threw down his pick, crying, "Useless!"

A stranger stood beside him and said, "You will pick no more?"

"No more."

"Were you not set to this task?"

"Yes."

"Why abandon it?"

"I make no impression on the rock."

"What is that to you? Your duty is to pick. Your work is in your own hands, the result is not!"

He resumed his task. At the first blow the rock burst into pieces.—Selected.

Mr. Thomas D. Owens

Mr. Thomas Daniel Owens was born in Duncan Community near Chipley, Florida, on April 27, 1872. He passed on to be with the Lord December 13, 1959, making his stay on this earth 87 years, 7 months, and 16 days.

"Uncle Daniel," as he was lovingly called, was a deacon in Piney Grove Church, and was one of the charter members. He lived in Washington County all his life. He also served as a member of the board of county commissioners. He was a strong supporter of his church and all denominational work. He was a real friend to preachers everywhere. He worked faithfully in the Liberty Association. He loved to hunt and fish, and was active in these sports almost to his death.

He was married to Emma McFatter, who preceded him in death several years ago. To this union were born two daughters and three sons. Mr. Owens is survived by one daughter and three sons, who are all leaders in their church and community. He is survived also by many grandchildren, great-grandchildren, along with one brother and two sisters.

His body was placed beside that of his wife in Piney Grove Cemetery on the afternoon of December 14. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, the Rev. Freeman Edwards, and the Rev. C. A. Huckaby.

Chester A. Huckaby

Mr. Thomas L. Rigdon

On December 17, 1959, about 7:00 p.m., Mr. Thomas Lawton Rigdon went to be with the Lord. Mr. Rigdon was born November 15, 1888, making his stay on this earth 71 years, 1 month, and 2 days. He was the elder deacon of Pine Level Church located near Alma, Georgia, where he was faithful in the support of his church and all of its work.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fanny Rigdon, four daughters, three sons, four sisters and 21 grandchildren.

He left his Christian testimony by saying just a few minutes before his passing, "If this is my time to go, I am ready." He is not only missed by his family, but also by the people of Bacon County where he was one of the most outstanding citizens. To know him was to love him. It was said that he was such a good man that you could not help but love him.

His body was placed in the cemetery at Pine Level Church to await the resurrection of the just. The funeral was conducted by the Reverends E. B. Joyner, L. C. Johnson and C. A. Huckaby.

A Queen Refused to See

As Queen Elizabeth I advanced in years, her wrinkles deepened. The hapless master of the mint incurred the Queen's disfavor and was dismissed in disgrace because of his producing a faithful likeness of her on a shilling. The die was destroyed. Only one mutilated specimen of the coin is now in existence. The Queen's maids of honor, not wishing to displease the Queen, removed all mirrors from the palace. An old journalist wrote: "The Queen had not the heart to look herself in the face for the last twenty years of her life!"

God's Word is a mirror. It is the mirror that reflects the true condition of the human race: "The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint." Let us make daily use of God's mirror, that we may see ourselves as He knows us to be, and "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit."—Selected.

Preparing for the Ivory Coast

6 Villa Maurice
Asnieres, Seine, France
December 24, 1959

Dear Prayer Partners,

"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel who only doeth wondrous things."

Date of Departure: February 11, 1960.

Date of Arrival: February 23, 1960.

Destination: Abidjan, Ivory Coast, West Africa.

Cargo: Bill and Joy Jones with baggage and a Volkswagen Kombi.

Remarks: Never before in our lives have we seen the hand of the Lord work so wonderfully as we have in the past month. We applied for our visa November 2. One month later, it was here and is now stamped in our passports. Normally, one has to wait at least 3 months to buy a Volkswagen. Our waiting period is one month if all goes well. The mountain of the language barrier has been reduced to a steep, but climbable hill. The Lord has met every need and worked out every problem. There is an old adage: "Seeing is believing." For us as Christians, this should be turned around: "Believing is seeing." This is what we have experienced.

Important Date: The month of January was so named because it represented a Roman god who looked in both directions: backwards and forwards. As we look in these two directions as a new year commences, our hearts cry out for more workers for both France and Africa. We look backward on this field of civilized, but gospel-hardened people who are looking for peace but never find it. We look forward to a people who have not even the gospel in written form. Our responsibility is to both of these people. What does God want you to do?

Action: Paul said, "I press forward." We look forward and realize we can do nothing else. Today is not only an important hour, but it is also a crucial one. If we hesitate, the enemy will win the battle. May we together follow the Lord as He leads us ever forward to victories in language study, in spreading of the gospel, and in winning souls to Him!

Attention: Our new address after January 31, 1960, will be B. P. 54, Bondoukou, Ivory Coast, West Africa. Your letters have meant much to us; we hope and trust that you will continue in this ministry!

Stand: Pray with us for the financial needs of the station we will start building as soon as we arrive (Koun) that all might be well as we go into Africa, that the duty will not be too much on our car, and that the Lord might continue to grant wisdom in the learning of French and the native language. We praise the Lord for all of you who have prayed, and earnestly request that you will continue to do so. We see the results daily. May God bless you one and all as you start a New Year for His glory!

Yours in Christ to the lost,
Bill and Joy Jones

Note: The above letter was sent to the foreign missions office to be mailed out to some of the Joneses' special prayer partners. It is so interesting and challenging that I wish to share it with the readers of this paper. Too, more funds are needed to get the Joneses into Africa. In addition to the amount currently in their account, around eight hundred dollars is needed for this passage, transportation on vehicle, baggage duty, etc. This is an opportunity for you to share in the ministry of this very wonderful missionary couple. Thanks in advance for whatever you may be able to contribute to this cause.—Rolla D. Smith, General Director.

Former Missions Director Assumes New Duties

Bethany Free Will Baptist Church
Rev. Raymond Riggs, Pastor
4624 Larkin Street

Dear Christian Friend:

First, may I make it clear that this is a personal letter.

As you perhaps know, my official connection with the Foreign Mission Board as General Director terminated as of December 31, 1959, and Rev. Rolla Smith assumed the duties. It has been my privilege to serve as a member of our Foreign Mission Board for some twelve years and almost seven years as full time director and treasurer. What has been accomplished is a matter of record and to God and Him alone belong all the credit, glory and honor.

The Gospel Changes Lives

Lesson: Acts 16:13-15, 25-34.

Golden Text: Acts 16:31.

INTRODUCTION

After the matters of the Jerusalem council were taken care of, Paul and Barnabas decided to visit “. . . our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do” (Acts 15:36). In this course, this was the beginning of the second missionary journey. Contention arose between Paul and Barnabas as they prepared about to depart. Barnabas wanted to take John Mark with them, but Paul would not consider him a good risk. This disagreement resulted in the parting of the two, with Barnabas taking Mark and Paul leaving Silas. Luke also accompanied Paul. We have no record of Barnabas' activities from here on.

Chapter 16 contains some marvelous incidents offering evidence to the power of the gospel. At Lystra, Paul met Timothy, brought him to Christ and established him in ministry. They traveled through Phrygia and Galatia; and under the Spirit's leadership, they found themselves at Troas where Paul had a vision which resulted in his going to Macedonia, a part of what is now Greece, to carry the gospel.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. The place where prayer is customarily offered is the place where God-fearing people meet (Acts 16:13).

2. God is ready to open the hearts of those who take time to listen to His Word (Acts 16:14).

3. True Christian hospitality is one of the results of a genuine conversion (Vs. 15).

4. When Satan “as an angel of light” has been exposed, he becomes a “roaring lion” (Vv. 19-24).

5. Some who recognize the true servants of God are themselves the servants of Satan (Vs. 17).

6. It takes more than natural courage to stand for God with feet in the stocks, a bleeding back, the walls of prison, and the blackness of midnight all around (Vs. 25).

7. No prison is able to “keep safely” God's children without His consent (Vv. 24, 26).

8. When the apostles in Jerusalem had prayed, the place was shaken (Acts 4:31); and when Paul and Silas prayed there was an earthquake (16:26). There is always power in believing prayer.—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Lydia evidently was a good business woman and had a home large enough to entertain several people. She became a fine Christian; she was hospitable and unafraid and had authority in her own home. She was baptized, and also her household. She had time to go to the place of prayer. Many business and professional men and women today are greatly refreshed and renewed when they take time out in busy days to attend noonday prayer meetings or the weekly prayer meetings. Certainly the family altar should not be neglected by student, farmer, banker, homemaker, business man or woman. What blessings and opportunities we frequently miss by thinking we are too tired or too busy! We probably never would have heard of Lydia had she not gone to the place where prayer was wont to be made.—Selected.

2. The words of Jesus in John 8:24 teach us that no person can be saved during the gospel age who refuses to believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Under the Mosaic Law, which was given of God, both Lydia and Cornelius would have been saved persons, but Romans 10:4 tells us that Christ was the end of the law of Moses. Read also Verses 9 and 13 of this chapter. Lydia's experience was not a so-called second work of grace.

3. Paul's stay in Philippi was not destined to be peaceful. The arch opposer of God immediately devised a means of bringing pressure and persecution upon these emissaries of Christ. This time, it was a clash, not with the Jews but with those who placed selfish economic interests above the welfare of human souls.

A group of men in Philippi had hired the services of a poor demented and demon possessed damsel who was supposed to have been given the power to tell fortunes by a pagan snake god. When this young girl saw Paul and his party, she forsook her trade and began to follow them crying, “. . . These men are the servants of the most high God, which show us the way of salvation” (Acts 16:17).—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

Jesus refused to accept the testimony of demons during His earthly ministry, so Paul was bound to reject the testimony of a demon-possessed girl. See Luke 4:41.

4. Closed Doors Lead to an Open Door. (See Verses 6, 7). God may direct a missionary to his field of labor by closing up other fields. Adoniram Judson had intended to be a missionary in India, but upon arrival in Calcutta was ordered out by the gospel-hating East India Company. Also his efforts to be allowed to labor at Madras proved in vain. As a last resort he took passage for Burma, landing in Rangoon in 1813. This surely seems providential, for Judson's success among the Karens of Burma was phenomenal. “When Judson died, hundreds of baptized Burmans and Karens were sleeping in Jesus, and over 7,000 survived in 63 churches, under the oversight of 163 missionaries, native pastors, and helpers.”—Selected.

5. The jailer's attempted suicide was due to his desire to die by his own hand, rather than to suffer crucifixion, the penalty he would have been subjected to for allowing political insurrectionists to escape from prison. He would have been made to die in their place for the charge against them.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

6. “. . . Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house” (Acts 16:31).

What constitutes saving belief? Take time to read John 12:42, 43. Did they have a saving belief? Now turn again to Romans 10:9 and you will see that open confession is necessary to saving belief, and this the many believers among the chief rulers refused to make.

As we read Acts 8:13, we find that Simon, the sorcerer, believed Philip's preaching. Was Simon's belief acceptable to God? Was he a child of God? You will find the answer in Romans 8:9. Simon the sorcerer did not receive the Holy Spirit and so did not belong to God at all. A man may believe the Bible from kiver to kiver and still be eternally lost if he persists in holding on to something this same Bible says is a sin.

Said Sir Walter Raleigh, as his head was severed from his body, “It matters little how the head lies just so the heart is right!”—Selected.

Don't pack the preacher in an ice house and then abuse him all year if he does not sweat.

Bob finally burst out: "Boy! have I been a dope! You were swell, Sally, to help me out of that mess. It's great to have a Christian friend!"

Bob is himself again, Sally thought joyously. "Let's hurry home and get things ready for the Sunday school party," she said.—My Pleasure.

We are now living in Norfolk, Virginia, at the above address and have assumed the pastoral care of Bethany Free Will Baptist Church. This is a new church, with less than one hundred active members. We are meeting at present in a rented building paying $85 per month rent. We have purchased adequate land for building for $12,000. We also owe for this land.

We hope, by the grace of God, and through the strength of His Son, and the power of the Holy Spirit, to build a strong local Free Will Baptist church with an outreach into the regions beyond.

The city of Norfolk is the largest city in Virginia. It is indeed a growing city and connected with its neighbors, Hampton, Portsmouth and Newport News, offers a challenge of over one-half million people. The opportunities for evangelism, church and radio ministry is unexcelled. We hope to strengthen the gospel witness as proclaimed by Free Will Baptists already underway in the Tidewater area.

Also, Norfolk is the largest naval base in the world and boasts the world's greatest harbor. This affords a wonderful opportunity to minister to service men who come from all parts of our nation, and who sail the seven seas.

Now, for the real purpose of this letter. First of all, we would like to be assured of your prayers for this new endeavor. Will you pray for us and Bethany Church that we may, under God, accomplish His purpose here in this fast growing strategic city?

Second, if you have friends or relatives who live in this area who are not regularly attending church, or who need Christ as Saviour, please submit to us their name and address and we shall be glad to make contact with them and endeavor to lead them into the fellowship and ministry of Bethany Church.

Third, our coming to Norfolk has been a step of faith. Because of the small group, and the heavy financial responsibility, it will be necessary for us to trust God for some outside assistance, at least for awhile.

All the outside help, however, will be us for the building fund or payment on the lot. If you feel this to be a worthwhile endeavor, and if you feel that our past services merit your co-operation and conce we shall be most grateful.

Sincerely in Him,
Rev. Raymond Rig

CAN YOU TAKE IT?

C. H. Overman

He who would become a leader of small or large caliber, must brace himself for criticism. Then the question arises, "Can you take it?" What will the leader do when he makes a decision true to his convictions and is then criticized? Especially if such criticism tends to be destructive to the cause he is propagating.

Let's take, for example, the highest office in America—the presidency. In spite of his good qualities and leadership, he always has some enemies. Lincoln was so severely disliked by some that his life was threatened many times. Finally, he was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth. He was one of America's greatest leaders, but in spite of this fact, he was severely criticized.

All who are totally dedicated to a task will be criticized. Even in the Christian world, this is true; for few are so severely criticized as the faithful Christian. If he is fully consecrated to God, he is classified as a fanatic. If he spends time doing things which the nominal Christian ignores, he is going too far in his religion. Every Christian leader must be prepared for a bombardment of criticism, and this often comes from Christian friends. Perhaps the greatest test in the young Christian's life is the test of criticism and doubt cast upon him by those who know him well. This is to be expected, and with the passing of time, he can take it.

Christ, knew, however, that there was danger involved in the Christian's life when all men speak well of the Christian, for He said: "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! . . ." (Luke 6:26). Christ was speaking to His disciples, and was warning them against seeking the praise of men; that their first fulfillment of service is to God. It is quite impossible to please all the people all the time; therefore, it behooves us to obey God first, and let Him perform His ultimate purpose.

When one publicly takes his stand, criticism will surely come. Those who never make a positive decision will never face opposition, but who wants to glide easily along with each and every crowd and belief which comes along? Some of the leaders within our own denomination have been criticized for the service they are rendering. We cannot help but wonder what the outcome would be if those doing the criticizing would find themselves in the same position. Could they take it with the Christian grace and patience of their predecessors? When we are prone to become too critical, it would be well to place ourselves in the same situation as the one we are criticizing.

It is most evident that too many rules of life are based upon the accepted and practised rules of society. When one fails to conform to this pattern, criticism then comes. Let one totally give himself to some field of service and he will be classified as different and unusual, and perhaps even a freak. Longfellow said, "Men of genius are often inert in society; as the blazing meteor, when it descends to earth, is only a stone." Great writers, poets, artists, scientists, doctors, etc., are usually classified as peculiar; therefore, they are faced with the complaints of a world of men who do not understand their position and goal. How many cures and remedies to disease would we have if there had not been those men who were willing to spend sleepless nights and days to discover them? How many great books would we have in our libraries today if there had been no one to sacrifice the demands of society for the sake of others gaining knowledge? Yet, the author's book has been listed as a best-seller because it has stood the test of critics. How many battles would have been lost if there had been those who were willing to die for the cause they believe in. Great dramas do not just happen; they are proven by the critics.

Let us now consider the one who does the criticizing, rather than the one being criticized. There is a grave danger of becoming too critical. When this happens, joy and happiness are destroyed. Too much criticism will lead to a dislike for everyone and therefore does harm. There is a need to be more considerate of others and the things they are doing.

YOUR FEDERAL TAXES

Since this is the annual income tax season, perhaps you would be interested in knowing where your tax money goes. May quote from a recent ERA news release:

"Almost 71 cents out of the federal taxpayer's dollar will go to war, either for military preparation or the cost of past conflicts according to the Friends (Quakers) committee on National Legislation. The committee made a careful analysis of the funds voted the last session of Congress and found that $46,214,000,000 (or 46 billion) was appropriated for military purposes and atomic energy programs based on defense. This was 63½ cents out of the tax dollar. In addition, the cost of veteran's benefits, survivor pensions, maintenance of military cemeteries, etc., amounts to $5,388,000,000 for the year, or almost 7½ cents of the tax dollar. The two figures total 71 cents. And this does not include the interest being paid on the national debt, most of which was incurred during time of war (this will run more than nine billion dollars this year, the committee said).

"By way of contrast, the committee found that only 3 cents of the tax dollar goes for foreign aid of a non-military nature. Nearly 6 cents go to the various programs of the Department of Agriculture, 2 cents to the programs of the Department of the Interior, and about a nickel goes to all of the social security, health, education and welfare expenditures of the U. S. government."

Neo-Orthodoxy-Unscriptural

INTRODUCTION

It may be stated by some that many quotations may be cited from Barth and Brunner that refute the charges made in this article. We readily recognize this to be true, for we have read such quotations. Barth and Brunner believe that a horse can be ridden in opposite directions at the same time, and they insist that this is the only way to ride a horse. We have tried to give the quotations that underline the foundation of the neo-orthodox movement, from the lips of the fathers of this unscriptural theology.

WHAT IS NEO-ORTHODOXY?

Neo-orthodoxy is a revolt against the old liberalism and also the newer liberalism. It has been called, variously, the crisis theology, neo-orthodoxy, dialectical theology, Calvinism, neo-supernaturalism, and sometimes realism and Biblicism. It is a comparatively new movement in theology which is attracting wide attention, in both liberal and conservative theological circles. It is strongly entrenched in Princeton and in Seminaries and influential in many churches.

Neo-orthodoxy is not a return to orthodoxy for it has not abandoned the fundamental principles of liberalism. Neo-orthodoxy does not accept the authority of the Bible as the Word of God. Neo-orthodoxy does not accept the creation account in Genesis as a fact, but prefers the theory of evolution. Neo-orthodoxy follows the liberal method of Biblical interpretation, forsaking the plain meaning and making the scriptures say what they want them to say. Neo-orthodoxy is not orthodoxy!

The new orthodoxy that has swept the universities is now accepted by most of the young men who have been emancipated from their allegiance to 'liberalism,' and will become and more permeate the Christian churches as leadership falls to the young men now being trained in the divinity schools of practically every American denomination."—W. Norman Pittinger, The Crisis Faith and a Changing World, p.

The neo-orthodoxy is a pleasant little Protestant Jesuit. She will temporarily appeal to a large number of those who want to be Christian, and have the expert logic and the determination

Rev. Norman Q. Adams, Timmonsville, to analyze and to understand thoroughly what this neo-orthodoxy truly means."—J. W. Hudson, Religious Liberals Reply, pp. 54, 55.
South Carolina

In 1920, the neo-orthodoxy movement began to make an impression on the field of theology. The men responsible for this movement were Karl Barth and Emil Brunner, both Europeans. They were both disillusioned liberals. "Brunner is not . . . a champion of Protestant orthodoxy; indeed, orthodoxy he singles out as an arch-foe."—Carl F. H. Henry, The Protestant Dilemma, p. 58.

NEO-ORTHODOXY NOT CHRISTIAN!

What does the neo-orthodoxy theory have to say concerning the inspiration of the Bible? Is the Bible and the Word of God the same? (1) They say, that the Bible is not as it is in itself the Word of God. (2) The Bible is, a record of the Word of God. It is a history of God speaking to man. Times when God breaks through and speaks to man are called crisis. The Bible is a record of these crisis. (3) The Bible is a medium through which the word, crisis, may come to an individual. "The Bible itself, it must be understood, is not actually the Word of God."—John McCounachie, The Barthian Theology and the Man of Today, p. 102).

The plenary and verbal inspiration is denied in their theology. Bernard Ramm (Protestant and Biblical Interpretation, Based on An Infallible Bible, p. 43) says, "In opposition to a system of interpretation based on an infallible Bible, or a plenary inspired Bible, neo-orthodox theologians offer a mythological system. By mythological truth is not meant the fanciful, or imaginative, but that the myth is a conveyor of theological truth in historical garb. However, the theological truth is not dependent upon the historicity of the historical garb. That is to say, the Bible is to be symbolically interpreted." Emil Brunner says the fall of Adam was a myth and is not a fact. Since neither Barth nor Brunner consider the Word of God and the Bible identical, the trustworthiness of the Bible is not essential to their faith. Brunner says, "The habit of regarding the written word, the Bible, as the Word of God exclusively . . . is actually a breach of the second commandment: it is the deification of a creature Bibliolatry."—Revelation and Reason, p. 120.

Here are men who say they are Christians, but they deny the Bible as being God's Word. They believe that man can interpret the Bible as he so desires. They claim to be true to true scholarship, but are they? In the Theology and Ethics of the Hebrews, by Dr. Alexander Duff, a believer in the higher criticism scholarship, gives his interpretation of Moses at the burning bush. "He was shepherding his sheep among the red granite mountains . . . The man sat at dawn, by the stream, and watched the fiery rocks. Yonder gleamed the level sunlight across the low growth. Each spine glistened against the rising sun. The man was a poet, one fit for inspiration. He felt that the dream of his soul were the whisperings of his God, the place his sanctuary. He bowed and worshiped." I submit that these pretty words are not scholarship, but plain unbelief! There is nothing in the Bible to support Dr. Duff's rhetorical effusion.

The essential difference between neo-orthodoxy and that of Protestant fundamentalism lies in the fact that for fundamentalism the Bible provides an exhaustive set of answers to all moral and social questions, that being the inspired Word of God. The neo-orthodox believer is ready to supplement its teaching by lessons derived from an empirical study of history and anthropology.

They say, "The Bible contains the Word of God." They set themselves to judge the Bible and decide what is God's Word and what is not. They use much of the language of the old-fashioned Biblical orthodoxy, but the terms they use do not mean what they have meant. They speak of Christ as God, but do not refer to the Christ of Scripture. . . . virgin born, risen bodily from the dead and ascended bodily on high. They are men of deceit and double talk. Can we say that these men are Christians. The Bible says: "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised

Fellowship Church Holds Ground-Breaking Service

On December 13, 1959, the Fellowship Free Will Baptist Church of Bryan, Texas, held a ground-breaking service for the new sanctuary on which construction began shortly after the new year opened. The following pastors of churches in the surrounding area were present: Rev. James A. Evans, First Free Will Baptist Church, Bryan; Rev. A. F. Halbrook, Bright Light Free Will Baptist Church, Harvey; Rev. John Moehlman, North Zulch Free Will Baptist Church, North Zulch; Rev. C. B. Tompson, Cross Free Will Baptist Church, Iola.

The picture on the left (below) shows the entrance to the building which is presently being used, with the schedule of services on the board.

The center picture shows those who took part in the ground-breaking service. They are, from left to right, H. Ray Berry, pastor; Edgar Morris, chairman of building and planning committee; W. O. Withers, chairman of building and ground committee; G. C. Williams, chairman of finance and stewardship committee; Forrest West, chairman of board of trustees; Joe Brotherton, chairman of board of deacons.

The picture on the right shows Mr. Brotherton turning the soil on the site, while Mr. Withers looks on after he has driven the stake.

The church requests that all Christians be much in prayer as it undertakes this building program that it may ever remain in the center of the Lord's will.

Neo-Orthodoxy —Unscriptural!

him from the dead, thou shalt be saved" (Romans 10:9). Neo-orthodoxy does not teach the Christian view of the resurrection of Christ. Brunner, accepting radical New Testament criticism, says, "Whosoever asserts that the New Testament gives us a definite consistent account of the resurrection is either ignorant or unconscientious." Again, Barth, Epistle to the Romans, p. 30, says: "If the resurrection be brought within the context of history, it must share in the obscurity and error and essential questionableness."

The neo-orthodox believer tries to undermine the Christian faith. They deny the inspiration of Scripture, the deity of Christ and His virgin birth. They scoff at His blood and the doctrine that men must be born again. With tongues of deceit, and the poison of asps under their lips, they proclaim that the Bible is not the Word of God.

There are many religious leaders today who object to the Bible being the inspired Word of God. But let me tell you this, it takes an old-time Bible gospel to help people. Neo-orthodoxy, modernism and liberalism offer no salvation from sin. They can't save a drunken bum nor change a sinner into a saint. When a man comes to the end of the way there is only one thing to give him hope, and that is faith in the old-time gospel from an old-fashioned Bible, presenting an old-fashioned Saviour!

The statements of the Scripture regarding inspiration may be summed up as follows: "Holy men of God, qualified by the infusion of the breath of God, wrote in obedience to the divine command, and were kept from all error, whether they revealed truths previously unknown or recorded truths already familiar." In this sense, All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, the Bible is indeed and in truth the very Word of God, and the books of the Bible are of divine origin and authority."

Now, to the reader, we would ask this question, "What should be the attitude of the true Christian toward neo-orthodoxy?"

We prefer the New Testament admonition, "A man that is an heretick after the first and second admonition reject: Knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself" (Titus 3:10, 11). Neo-orthodoxy must be rejected as contrary to the Word of God, contrary to reason, and destructive of the Christian Faith; and, as such, barred from any assembly of true believers. Has this theory entered among our assembly of Free Will Baptists?

A Sure Guide

Jesus says: "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." This plainly infers why some people are walking in darkness. The reason is because they are not following the Lord. Perhaps they are following their own ways, which are sure to lead them wrong. Darkness flows where Jesus is. He is light and therefore where He is it is light. Dear reader, follow Jesus. Trust Him to lead you. He never leads wrong. He is a sure guide.—Select

What If?

by Regina Lambert

IDLY GLANCED at the headlines in the newspaper the other night and my eye caught the headline that proclaimed: WEEK END TAKES TOLL OF EIGHT LIVES." The subtitle read, "Head-on Crash Kills Entire Kennedy Family." As I quickly scanned the article I suddenly felt cold all over. The name of the family glared at me as though it had been printed in red.

I tried to concentrate on reading the details, but it was useless. My mind was too full of the question, "What if I hadn't gone?" I trembled a little and repeated the question, "What if I had just stayed home last night?"

I leaned my head back and closed my eyes and gave a prayer of thanks to God that He hadn't let me relax that night, just five months ago. The memory came back so plain that I could almost hear the rain on the roof again.

It had been a cold and wet February and we'd had a solid week of drenching, soaking rain, that turned to snow at night. This particular night I had settled in this same chair before the fireplace, preparing to give my Sunday school lesson its final study, as I did every Friday night.

That night, for some reason, I couldn't concentrate, I had the nagging feeling that I had left something undone that week. With a weary sigh I admitted to myself that I hadn't made one personal contact that week. I'd phoned, and sent a few cards, but I knew that it was personal visitation that really got results with absentees. I had done no visiting this last week using the terrible weather as an excuse, and that's all it was, too, just an excuse.

I walked to the window and looked at the solid downpour.

"Go out in that?" I argued. "This just isn't visiting weather. It won't hurt to let the week go by without making a contact. Why I might even get a bad cold if I go out in that, then I couldn't be there Sunday; and that'd be worse than not visiting tonight. Besides, I still have some more to do on my lesson."

The arguments were futile, for I was arguing with God, and not myself. I had a visit to make, and I knew who, and I knew that I would have no peace until I made that visit.

With an audible sigh of resignation and surrender I turned from the window. My husband glanced up with a questioning look.

"It's no use," I answered, "I've got to go visit a little."

"In this weather? Honey, you shouldn't be on the road on a night like this. Besides it might make you sick," argued my husband.

But I knew I had to go—I knew it was God's will.

I drove cautiously through the driving rain thinking about the girl I was to visit tonight.

She first came to my class of intermediate girls a few weeks before, unintentionally, I think. Marjorie Kennedy was her name; a remote, shy youngster, exceptionally quiet for a fourteen-year-old. She'd stayed all night with one of my regular attenders that Saturday night and I don't think she knew how to get out of going to Sunday school the next morning, so she went.

I was surprised to find her back the next Sunday, and the next.

She always listened attentively; never said much, hardly ever took part in the discussion, but she seemed to be absorbing everything. I prayed for her a great deal, for I felt that she wanted to make a decision for Christ, but that something was holding her back.

She missed a Sunday now and then, but I'd call her on the telephone and she'd be back, until this last time.

She missed three Sundays in a row. I had called as usual but with no results. The conviction began growing in me then that I had better go visit her. I should have visited in her home long before this, but my time was limited. The class was too large, for lack of another teacher. I didn't get to visit in the girls' homes as much as I should have.

Finally I asked one of the girls about her.

"Oh, Marj probably won't be back," she had answered, "they are moving in a week or so. No sense in bothering with her now."

I felt deeply discouraged at that moment. "Not so soon," I thought, "just when we seemed to be making a little progress. We can't lose her now."

Yes, as a prospect for our Sunday school class it was useless to visit Marjorie, but I still had that conviction that I must see her one more time. As a result, I was driving through the almost flooded streets, praying for this last opportunity.

I drove up before the neat, modest home, thankful that there were lights on signifying that someone was home.

I was greeted cordially enough, although I could feel coldness on the part of Mr. Kennedy. We talked about general things, but of course, the conversation soon turned to religion, for they knew who I was, and what the purpose of my visit was.

Marjorie and her mother seemed willing to listen and I knew that Marj wanted to make a decision then and there, but was afraid to do so because of Mr. Kennedy's attitude.

Mr. Kennedy was nice enough about it, but he was completely uninterested in church, religion, God, or Christ. He was very intelligent and interesting to talk to but very cold and hard.

I was surprised to find he knew much about the Scriptures, and that his hardness was caused by the fact that his mother, although very devout, had had so much hardship and adversity that he doubted that there was even a God.

We talked for a long time that night until suddenly I felt that I had accomplished all that I was going to and that now it was time for me to leave. As I was leaving I told them that I would be praying for them all. I did too.

That's the last time that I ever saw any of them.

Marjorie didn't come to Sunday school the last Sunday that they were in town and I was disappointed. I had had high hopes that she would come and make a public profession of faith. I was quite depressed when she didn't even come. Some day I'll remember that God's ways are not always our ways.

Several weeks later I received a letter from Marjorie. It was filled with joyful news.

Dear Mrs. Harris:

I did want you to know the wonderful news for I know that you have prayed much

Prayer Support Requested for Graham Crusade in Africa

The Rev. Billy Graham and his team begin their crusades in Africa on January 20, continuing through March 10. This will be the most intensive and extensive tour team has ever taken in so short a time.

The crusades are being sponsored by the Christian forces in each area. In fact, all national churches and all but one missionary society in all of Africa are participating. From each country come reports that they are anticipating the largest Christian gatherings in history.

Mr. Graham states: "A full-scale, ten-week crusade will have preceded my arrival in each place. Some of these crusades will be led by our associate evangelists and others by African evangelists. You will be interested to know that in each area committees are led entirely by nationals. The missionaries are staying in the background and giving leadership to the national church everywhere. Our greatest need for prayer interest and prayer support."

The itinerary for the crusades in Africa is as follows:

- January 20-22: Liberia
- January 23-26: Ghana
- January 27—February 10: Nigeria
- February 19-23: South Rhodesia

M. L. Johnson, Business Manager

Dates for Conference Set

Dr. L. C. Johnson, president of Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, has announced that the dates for the annual Bible Conference to be held on campus will be April 3-7. Several hundred out-of-state guests are expected for the five-day meeting. The conference emphasizes Bible preaching, evangelism and missions.

The two-week summer school will be held
 May 24—June 3, according to Dean Charles
 A. Thigpen. Pastors and laymen are especially urged to consider the advantages of the summer session. Out-of-state pastors will be away only one Sunday from their churches. Three credit hours may be earned in the field of Bible, church administration and Bible doctrine. Room and meals may be obtained at the Bible College.

Fifth Sunday Mount Olive College Day

Fifth Sunday is Mount Olive College
 Day. Churches, Sunday schools and leagues are asked to designate their offerings or to make a special contribution to Mount Olive College. Individuals are also urged to send their personal donations. This plan has the endorsement of our state conventions of churches, Sunday schools and leagues; and many churches in other states are also using this plan of support.

It is worthy of note also that February is designated as "Education Month" in the United Program of the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptist Churches.

We feel that it is most fortunate that these dates for special emphasis on Christian higher education should come right at this time. If we will use these opportunities as we feel God would have us use them, it will help us to meet the greatest educational challenge ever to confront Free Will Baptists.

It is possible for Mount Olive College to achieve regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools during 1960.

Preliminary visits by representatives of the Southern Association and our reports to the association have led to the authorization of a formal visit by the Committee on Standards. This visit will be made early next fall. If the report of this committee is favorable, we will be given formal accreditation next December. This investigation will be by far the most thorough we have yet experienced, but with the enthusiastic support of our people we can meet the standards for accreditation.

We feel that Free Will Baptists have everything that is necessary in order to meet this challenge. We feel that our greatest need is to recognize the tremendous value of success and the terrible loss if we fail.

We have a college that has already achieved much in the field of Christian higher education and now stands at the very threshold of the highest academic honor that can come to a junior college in this area.
 We have the students who are going to college somewhere, and a rapidly increasing number of them are looking to Mount Olive College and Free Will Baptists.

We have the money necessary if we are willing to invest it in the lives of those students who trust us.

Regional accreditation is not the end within itself. It is not enough that we should seek accreditation alone, but by meeting the requirements for accreditation, we will be providing for our children and those generations yet unborn the kind of educational program that we have always needed but never had.

Let us keep in mind that our record of concern and interest during the next few months will constitute a very vital part of the record that the committee will examine when they visit our campus next fall. We are fortunate that we have this time to really demonstrate that we do believe our students are entitled to the very best.

The time has come when you, the peo-

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: As a Christian what should be my attitude toward earthly pleasures? I feel far removed from many things my friends participate in freely, because I want all that God has for me in a consecrated life to Him and His cause; but many of my friends think that I am queer and fanatical in some of my views.—Anne Snodgrass, Illinois.

Answer: The Bible is quite clear in its teaching on this very important subject. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty" (2 Corinthians 6:14-18). Again we are warned against falling in love with either the world or worldly things. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17). We are also exhorted to keep our garments unspotted. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world" (James 1:27). These are only a few among many passages of Scripture that either exhort us to keep ourselves apart from worldliness or forbid us to be identified with it in any way.

By "the world" the Holy Spirit means to point out through such passages of Scripture the Christ-rejecting, Spirit-resisting, God-dishonoring world. We should be sane and reasonable as we consider this subject, remembering that we are "in" the world but not "of" it. We are to mingle with unsaved people, having as our purpose for so doing that of leading them into a saving knowledge of our precious Saviour, always loving their souls while we hate their sins. In other words, we should never find satisfaction following them in anything that dishonors that worthy name we, as Christians, now bear but only in seeking to win them for our Saviour.

Then we are exhorted again and again in the Word not to do anything to cause the "weaker brother to stumble." There may be many things that a Christian could do just as the world does them with no personal hurt to his Christian life whatever, except the fact that if some other Christian should do it, it would bring him down in defeat. Paul's idea of eating meat that had been offered to an idol is a good example of this kind of thing. Even though he could eat such meat without bringing to himself personal harm, for those who were weaker and could not, he would forever refrain from eating such meat. "As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one. . . . But take heed lest by any means this liberty of your's become a stumblingblock to them that are weak. For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak be emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols; And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died? But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ. Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend" (1 Corinthians 8:4, 9-13).

The above consideration of your question deals only with its negative side. Now let us take a look at the positive side. If we love the Lord as our profession suggests and, therefore, find joy and satisfaction in His precious Word and will, then such matters will not trouble us. Because He gives us such an abundance of things about which to think and upon which to meditate and so much to do for Him that we shall have no time for or enjoyment in those things which displease and dishonor. As to the attitude of friends, who are either not Christians, perhaps Christians in the sense that they have been born again but not consecrated, such can be, we would better to have the critical attitude than to grieve the Holy Spirit of God and displease our Saviour who died for us. "If the world hate you, know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

Remember the word that I said unto you, My servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also" (John 15:18-20); "The things I have spoken unto you, that in you ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer, for he that overcometh the world" (John 16:33). On the other hand one may invite unnecessary criticism from some who do not understand our position by taking what worldly people call a sanctimonious, holier-than-thou attitude, or by being overzealous or unkindly harsh in criticizing those who fail to conform as we and perhaps as we feel that we should, or by being eccentric in our mannerisms and dress. I feel that we may accomplish more in many cases by the silent testimony of our lives and by thus showing Christ forth in His beauty, holiness and power than we do by harping on the so-called social evils. This does not mean we shall not take a positive stand against wrong. But if we present Christ to people and He takes possession of their lives, then these other questions are generally self-taken care of in a definite and final way. The things of earth "grow strangely dim in the light of His glory and grace."

Concerning dress, I should like to pass some admonition from one of my Christian teachers. "If possible be conational without being extreme." This teacher exhorted his students to make their personalities as attractive as they possibly could in a way so as to call attention to Christ rather than themselves. He thought that, if cultivated in the proper way, a person was endowed with good sense sufficiently to accomplish this feat. Of course this was before many of the so-called fashions of modern attire. This being true some who read this may not agree; again, however, we stand exhorted to be all things to all men for Christ, that we may win some. Letting our conscience, our opinions and thoughts be entirely adjusted to the Word and limited to the exact teaching of the Word.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

THE BIBLE AGAINST ITSELF (Continued from Last Week)

In the editorial which I am quoting from the Christian Century, a magazine to which I do not subscribe, neither as a magazine or a great many of its contents, you will remember that last week I used that part of the article which named several of the so-called Bible pictures we are expected to see in the movies to increase our knowledge of the Bible. Instead of increasing spiritual knowledge, they will only serve to confuse our minds and lead us away from God, and things holy. My advice to all is to stay away from all of them; and, as you read the remainder of the article, I think you will see why.

But now to continue:

We may as well deal with the most obvious example first. Biblical religion grew up in protest against the fertility cults of the ancient Near East. Could it have coped with the subtler perversion of our Far West? We need not be prudish to blanch at the thought of Sunday schools trucking off gaily to see Solomon and Sheba, a film which Esquire and Pageant have termed an "embalming rewrite of the Bible" in which the "colobrigida" "twists and twirls in one of the screen's wildest orgies." Recently we received a hard-bound glossy book promoting The Big Fisherman. Its most dramatic full-page color picture could have been taken from one of the 50-cent pornography magazines: Martha Hyer as "Herodias, one of history's most wicked women," in a non-trimmed nightgown, suggestively extending an invitation into a veiled-and-satined bedroom. Then we have in Ben Hur the recently imported temptress Hya Harasect. and so on.

Biblical religion set itself in opposition to the modest materialism of the ancient Greeks. Must its heirs subsidize modern materialism? The promotion for all three films proudly concentrates on the idol of Mammon—the huge cost of sets that were destroyed a day after use. Vastness and waste are thus equated with cinematographic excellence. One of these films must gross $20 million to break even. Much of the money will come from church people whose religious leaders have urged them to attend. The Big Fisherman's promoter boasts that the Tetrarch's garden set, which cost weeks of labor and $125,000, was "completely destroyed by a howling tempest during a bacchanalian party"—filmed, no doubt, for Sunday school children. Ben Hur makes others look like pikers in this perverse transvaluation which would replace art with gaudy but costly superficialities.

Biblical religion finds its center in God's revelation in Jesus Christ. Promoters of Biblical films want to have their cake and eat it too. They want the distant voice of the Master, with sound effects via echo chamber, . . . but they don't want it or Him to offend anyone, either. The evasions and euphemisms used in The Big Fisherman ballyhoo . . . are fortunately unnecessary in the Old Testament plot of Solomon and Sheba. In deference to the known wishes of General Lew Wallace, the fine print of Ben Hur, say its promoters, will carry the subtitle, "A Tale of the Christ." In the chariot race there is no question as to where this tale is left.

Biblical religion has consistently pointed beyond externalities to the human person. The promotion of most of the spectacular pseudo-Bible films suggests boundless preoccupation with the minutiae of technical perfection. With ersatz authenticity (e. g., rebuilding Palistine in southern California) and with the mere piling up of detail.

TOO LONG!

“Clarence E. Macartney used the illustration of a woman who came to one of the Old Puritan divines of London and complained that the bands on his pulpit gown were altogether too long and that she was exceedingly annoyed by them. She was so confident that he would grant her desire that she brought along a pair of seissors. The minister mildly agreed to her desire, and gave her the offending bands. She shortened them to her taste and gave back to him what was left of them. When he had received them he thanked her and said, ‘Now my good woman, there is something about you that is altogether too long, and I would like permission to shorten it.’

“‘Certainly,’ said the woman. ‘You have my permission to do so. Here are the seissors.’

“Whereupon, the minister said, ‘Very well, madam, put out your tongue!’” —Frederick K. Gordon, quoted by Frank S. Mead in Tarbell's Teachers' Guide.

Clara Lee Smith

Our heavenly Father saw fit to call from this life our dear sister in Christ, Clara I. Smith, on November 11, 1959. She was a faithful member of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church, the Woman's Auxiliary and Sunday school.

She leaves to mourn two sisters and brother, also a host of friends. She was laid to rest in Queen Anne Cemetery Fountain, North Carolina, November 11, 1959, beneath a beautiful blanket of flowers.

“Yes, our sister has departed,
We miss her friendly smile,
She paid the debt we all must pay,
She has traveled that last mile,
And now we know she is at rest,
With God, who loved her best.”

There are so many Sunday Christians nowadays. They serve the devil all week and try to ease their conscience being extra good on Sunday. Jesus Christ spent His Sabbath in doing good—and they kept it up all the week.—Selected.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

I am using this method to express to all many friends our heartfelt thanks for the nice Christmas cards, gifts and the cards during the Christmas and New Year season. It is wonderful to know that so many people are thinking of you. Every card or message brings a real lasting joy. I not only pray for everyone who remembers me during the holiday season. We do not only say to one and all, "God bless you

I would love to write a thank-you note to each one, and still better I would like to visit you; but my age and time will not permit what I would like to do.

I am happy to report to you and to the many readers of The Free Will Baptist that I am back on the job preaching twice on Wednesday and conducting prayer meeting on Wednesday night. Praise the Lord for His mighty power, and for His willingness to listen. He has been so good to us. Praise His name!

I do not have the time necessary to write what I usually do, but I am giving to you, my friends, some very good clippings that I have had from the thinking of others. These were taken from the Western Voice.

SUFFICIENT

The other evening I was riding home after a heavy day's work; I felt very wearied and sore depressed, when swiftly, and suddenly as a lightning flash, that text came to me: "My grace is sufficient for thee." I hurried home and looked it up in the original and at last it came to me in this way, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and I said, "I should think it is, Lord," and burst out laughing. I never fully understood what the holy laughter of Abraham was until now. It seemed to make unbelief so absurd. It was as though some little fish, being thirsty, was troubled about drinking the river dry, and Father Thames said, "Drink away, little fish, my stream is sufficient for thee." Or, it seemed like a little mouse in the granaries of Egypt, after the many years of plenty, fearing it might die of famine; Joseph might say, "Cheer up, little mouse, my granaries are sufficient for thee." Again, I imagined a man away up on a lofty mountain, saying to himself, "I breathe so many cubic feet of air every year, I fear I shall exhaust the oxygen in the atmosphere," but the earth might say, "Breathe away, O man, and fill thy lungs ever, my atmosphere is sufficient for thee." Oh, brethren, be great believers! Little faith will bring your souls to heaven, but great faith will bring heaven to your souls.—C. H. Spurgeon.

HONEST PRIDE IN DAILY WORK

Can you imagine Paul's making a poor tent? Can you imagine his saying, "Anything to finish this tent in a hurry—what matter if it is but half sewed, if I only preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified?" You cannot do it, your imagination is not sufficiently elastic.

Try again; can you imagine Christ's doing a slipshod job of carpenter work? Do you ever think of the patient days, and years when Jesus worked with Joseph in the carpenter shop of Nazareth? Why, it reminds us of what Christ said afterward of God and Himself. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Jesus could no more have left a bit of carpenter work half finished than He could have left the multitude half fed in that never-to-be-forgotten day when He fed five thousand men, women and children.

SWEETER MELODY

Most of us have heard the story (whether it is apocryphal I do not know) of Mendelssohn and the organ in the Freiburg Cathedral. It is told that the great musician once visited the cathedral when the regular organist was practicing. Mendelssohn asked whether he might play a few bars. At first the organist, not knowing the visitor, refused the request but, on second thought, acceded, if somewhat reluctantly.

Mendelssohn began to play. The cathedral's organist listened in ecstasy and then, placing his hand upon Mendelssohn's shoulder, asked: "Who are you?"

"Mendelssohn," was the answer.

"Oh!" the organist exclaimed. "To think that I almost refused to let the great Mendelssohn play for me!"

Whether the account is wholly accurate or not, it teaches a lesson. How foolish it is for Christians to refuse to allow the Lord Jesus to employ them as He will, to let Him have full control of their lives, to yield everything to Him! Our testimony would be more beautiful and melodious if He were given His way.—The Pilgrim.

A man may make mistakes, but he is not a failure until he starts blaming someone else.

Sin may come upon thee by surprise; but do not let it dwell with thee as a guest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROBLEMS

1. After a person has taught Sunday school over a period of years, and knows before requesting it that there are others in the church who could teach, desires and asks for his resignation as a teacher, should not their request be granted without complications; in a spirit of thankfulness for their service which they have rendered to the church and Sunday school? Or must we teachers, upon making such a request, continually be made to feel as a criminal caught trying to escape? What about our free will we pride ourselves on?

2. What about the teacher who, during Sunday school might read the appointed lesson Scripture, but sometimes during the course of the past week, the Lord laid some other lesson upon her heart? So our appointed lesson, which most of the pupils have not studied, goes unheeded and especially for those who have said, "Well, what's the use?"

3. A Sunday school's general secretary has held such position for the past several years, therefore receiving very little or no classroom study. Should not such officers be elected to serve a limited number of years?

4. What can we do when there are those uninterested members in a class of would-be-interested persons, except that the first group is always doing something to distract from the latter group's purpose for being in Sunday school?

5. Usually the adult women's class has a woman as teacher and also a woman as assistant. The men's class also have men for both offices. Is it not logical that we try to have a man for teacher or assistant and a woman for the other in our young married folk's class?

6. Is it not heartless and uncalled for, for any church to elect its pastor for a Sunday school teacher? I feel that his services are needed in places where no one else can fill, am I wrong?

Only he can truly teach who is himself teachable.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

BILL WARD, P. K.

by Margaret N. Freeman

MATTHEW WILLIAM WARD II, better known as Bill or "P.K.," dropped the empty bucket he had been swinging above his head. It clanked to the road and started rolling downward.

"Look, Dad! Do you suppose they're the ones?" he whispered.

"Who, Bill?" inquired his dad.

"Those boys that Mrs. Three Chins told us about."

"If you mean the lady who showed us the house when we came, her name is Mrs. Perkins."

"Yes, sir." Bill's eyes twinkled. "She also said you were lucky to have a strong boy like me to lug water from the neighbor's well until ours is ready. Do you suppose the boys my size around here are as tough as she said, Dad?"

"It's likely, son," Mr. Ward answered soberly. "We know that the Christians here have been praying for a minister for a long time."

"I wish I had my field glasses," said Bill, "so I could see better. Whew! I'm tired and thirsty! Where is that well? We must've walked a mile!"

Mr. Ward smiled. "Mrs. Perkins said the well was about a quarter of a mile from our house."

Bill's feet lagged. "Sure seems longer. Places are so far apart out here in the West. It's—it's pretty rugged, isn't it, Dad?"

His father chuckled. "Why, Bill, where's that old pioneer spirit you've been talking about?"

Bill flushed. He had forgotten his parents' warnings that their new home would be different and less convenient. But he hadn't expected this!

His father put a comradely arm about Bill's shoulders. "This is more rugged country than we left, but you saw nearby cities, as we came through, just as modern as the ones back home. Remember, Bill, it's a real challenge to be a missionary family! There hasn't been an active church here in ten years. It's too soon to size up the situation."

"I suppose so," Bill agreed. "After all, we've only been here two hours." He stopped short. "Look!" He pointed. "That is a well, and some boys are there drinking water!"

Bill and his father hurried forward. Four pairs of curious eyes gazed into theirs. The boys' stiff, wooden expressions made Bill halt uncertainly.

"Hello, boys," Bill's father said heartily.

"Howdy," the biggest boy responded. "You the new parson?"

"I am," answered Mr. Ward with a friendly smile. "This is my son, Bill."

"We don't have no use for PK's!"

"PK's?" Bill asked uncertainly.

"Preacher's kids, bud," the boys' leader sneered, walking away.

"Bill, your face is as red as that bandana you're mopping it with," his dad said with a sigh. "I'm afraid they'll be difficult. But we'll keep our eyes, ears, and hearts open and pray that we can win them to God. In the meantime, perhaps I'd better get the water supply."

"No, sir, Dad," Bill said firmly. "That's my job." He grabbed the pump handle sending a clear stream of water into the bucket. "Mrs. Perkins said the people who live here would soon be back from their vacation, so this place won't be deserted for long."

"Those boys look and talk tough," Mr. Ward said, "but I hope that's as far as they go. Don't antagonize them, for I believe they could be cruel."

"My muscles are in pretty good shape, and I think I can defend myself. I know God has nothing against preacher's kids," Bill grinned.

"Umm! that water is good and cold," he handed his dad a cupful. "Have some before we begin that climb up the hill."

"Mighty refreshing," agreed the minister, "and just another of God's wonderful gifts. If we can only get these boys and the rest of the people around here to see how the Lord can satisfy them with 'living water' for their souls—" he mused.

Next morning, as Bill lugged water uphill, a dirt clod hit him in the back.

"Yah! preacher's kid! Wanta fight?" voices taunted from behind roadside shrubbery.

"Wouldn't be fair—four against one." Bill retorted, walking away fast.

The first Sunday, Bill was the only pupil in his Sunday school class. He choked back a homesick lump of loneliness, thinking of the row of friends gathered back in the Iowa church they had left.

Day after day, the boys pestered, teased, and spied upon him. Sometimes little stones pelted him as they flew from places. Other times he tripped over den wires, spilled the precious water had to return to the well for more.

"I'm sick of those kids," he'd mutter. "If it would solve things, I'd fight them a minute. First, I'll have to find a way to take them on one at a time."

In this mood, he walked into the woods one day just as his father played a graphophone record, "Lord, I Want to Be a Christian in My Heart." Bill found himself humming the singer's prayer the words of the day—the words hammering at his ears.

"I guess that's my answer. Forgive me, Lord," he whispered. "I just haven't found the way at my problem right. Help me from now on to be a Christian in my heart."

Next day Bill explored some of the wooded hills nearby. "Oh, for someone to share these hide-outs," he yearned, as he climbed big boulders and slid down steep trails.

Suddenly a yell shattered the silence. Terror gripped him. He turned and ran as if the thing were on his very heels.

"Help!"

The call came clearly. It wasn't a cry of alarm at least.

Bill paused and listened.

"Help!"

Bill followed the sound, creeping up a rough path that led to an old shack. He turned the door knob, stuck his head in, and quavered, "Who's there?"

Bill's eyes searched the dimly lit room. "Where are you?" he called.

"Down this hole, you dope!"

A trap door gaped in the middle of the floor. Bill advanced cautiously, dropping his hands and knees and peered down. Several pairs of eyes stared back.

"Pull us out," howled four surly voices.

"I'll run for help," Bill promised.

"No you don't. You'll never come back!"

"Do you think I'd leave anyone else like that?" Bill demanded.

"Dunno. Wouldn't be surprised if you would if it was you—" Spud snarled.

"Be quiet!" another shushed fiercely. "You, or don't you, want to get out of here?" In a wheedling tone, he asked. "Look, kid. We brought a good stout. It's over in the corner. Pull us out, you?"

Bill trembled. If he did maybe they'd push him down and forget about him.

The Officers of the State Executive Committee met at Parker's Restaurant, Wilson, North Carolina, Thursday, January 7, 1960. The meeting was opened with a short devotional. After this the following business was cared for.

The officers were urged to encourage the auxiliaries to work toward raising the amount of $1,800 dollars as our national quota for the women of the state of North Carolina. There are 192 auxiliaries reporting in this state. We are asking as many auxiliaries as possible to send ten dollars each to Mrs. M. A. Woodard, Winterville, North Carolina, to meet this quota.

The officers also agreed to place in the Free Will Baptist paper a page of Bible Study for our women. This will appear on the women's page the last week of each month. The first series of studies will be from the book of Ephesians. We would encourage our women to look for these studies, then bring their Free Will Baptist papers and their Bibles to the auxiliary meeting and truly profit from a Bible study at the auxiliary meetings. We trust God will richly bless our women through these studies of His precious Word.

The officers were also reminded that some time ago our women of this state purposed to raise money with which to purchase a washing machine for Mrs. Lee Whaley. To date, much of the needed amount is lacking. Let us not forget our missionaries in Alaska and their needs.

The money from the Life Awards this year will be given to the Children's Home. Let us remember these life awards as they serve to bless many people and honor our loved ones.

The following nominating committee was appointed, Mrs. Edwin Roper, Mrs. Ralph Beaman, Mrs. Kirby Wooten, Mrs. Velma Morris, Mrs. Novella Propst, Mrs. Phipps from Pee Dee, and Mrs. Flora Morgan.

The committee would also like to remind our women to remember Cragmont with a gift of five dollars from each auxiliary if possible. Mrs. L. E. Ballard is the director and Mrs. Carl Dudley is the co-director for Cragmont Women's Conference this year.

The executive committee wishes for the women of our state a blessed year of service as we study and work together in the service of our Lord and Master.

Newton Grove, N. C.—The Annie McPhail Auxiliary of Oak Grove Church met at the church on January 6, at 7:00 p. m., with Mrs. C. I. Godwin presiding. The opening song, "Send the Light," was sung, followed by the reading of the minutes by Mrs. A. L. Rose. Mrs. Godwin conducted the devotional period. During the business session, the ladies voted to have cabinets put in the kitchen. The group also planned to serve dinner for Mount Olive College on February 12 at the church.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Loyd Andrews who has charge of the program. Others participating in the program were Miss Eva Jackson, Mrs. Lee Bass, Mrs. Robert Bass, Mrs. A. L. Rose and Mrs. J. G. Warren. There were thirteen present at the meeting, as the weather was inclement.

Pinetown, N. C.—The Shiloh Junior Auxiliary met at the home of Frankie Waters on January 8, 1960. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Thomas Windley. The group then sang some songs, followed by sentence prayers. Frankie Waters read the Scripture. The secretary, Arlene Harris, called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mrs. Windley presented a flannel-graph story entitled "Johnnie's Apple Tree." The meeting was closed with prayer. The next meeting will be held at the home of Neal and Brenda Boyd on February 12, 1960.

STATE MISSION NEWS INCLUDED AS SUBMITTED FROM THE FIELD

Prayer and Praise Letter

January 5, 1960

Dear Friend of Missions:

Through the grace and mercy of God we were permitted to live to see the beginning of another year. With Paul we can say, "Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, . . ." (Acts 26:22).

We are alive under increased obligations. Too, we should be reminded that this year may bring to an end our earthly journey. The words of Jeremiah 28:16, ". . . this year thou shalt die, . . ." may apply to you or me.

What was Paul continuing to do as stated in Acts 26:22? He was witnessing both to small and great. Our obligation is the same. Let us resolve to be faithful this year in our witnessing both in person and by substitute. By supporting our missionaries financially and with our prayers we too can witness both to small and great.

APPLICATION FOR VISA

Last month an application was made to the India government for visas for the James Davis family to enter India.

Brother Davis is currently pastoring the Donelson Church near Nashville.

It is hoped that Brother Davis will be permitted to enter South India as a replacement for Miss Barnard.

In a recent letter Miss Volena Wilson wrote, "I am sending in the applications for the Davises tomorrow by registered post. We are looking up for God to work out His perfect plan, and He knows best how to accomplish that. He also knows our need out here and He is able to work the miracle. We are praying much with you that the Lord will overrule all obstacles and get the Davis couple out here in His time. He is able."

CALVERYS IN NASHVILLE

We are delighted to have the Calverys in Nashville this week. They returned from Japan recently for their first furlough.

Brother Calvery plans to enter Baylor University in Waco, Texas, for some further training before beginning any extensive itinerant work.

The following is a personal word of greeting from the Calverys:

"It's good to be home! does not even begin to express the joy that we feel in being home again. We are looking forward to lots of good fellowship with Christian friends during our year of furlough. Rebecca and Jonathan are enjoying American ice cream and fried chicken; of course their mommie and daddy are enjoying it with them. We hope to see many of you soon."

EXTRA FUNDS NEEDED!

Bill and Joy Jones will have completed their language study in France by February 1. In addition to the amount currently in their account, several hundred dollars are needed at once to get them into Africa. This need is for passage, baggage duty, transportation on vehicle, etc.

MILEYS ATTENDED CONVENTION

Dr. and Mrs. LaVerne Miley attended the International Convention on Missionary Medicine which was held in Wheaton, Illinois, last week.

This convention was designed to show the many areas of medicine which can be developed to help reach people with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Dr. Miley has finished his internship and upon completion of some specialized training in surgery which he begins this month, he and Mrs. Miley plan to enter language school preparatory to their going to Africa.

PROMOTIONAL SECRETARY IN CUBA

Brother Moulton left December 30 for Cuba, where he plans to spend several days. He will speak at the annual workers' conference. Also he plans to visit several of the churches. In view of the apprehension and unrest in Cuba, our American missionaries and native workers are in special need of your prayers.

KEN EAGLETON REPORTS

The following are excerpts from the report of a survey which was recently made in Brazil:

"We have just completed our first survey trip after having purchased the Volkswagen microbus. We spent nine days traveling through the eastern part of the state of Sao Paulo and the southern and eastern half of the state of Minas Geras. In all, we traveled some 2,420 kilometers, which is the equivalent of about 1,512 miles. Throughout the trip we saw town after town which has not one evangelical witness in it. There are not just small villages as some might think, but towns and cities that range from a few thousand to hundreds of thousands of inhabitants. For example, there is the state capital of Minas Geras, Belo Horizonte, which has between 600,000 and 700,000 population, and there are only some churches there preaching the gospel. Among these, many are small groups and for practical purposes this city has hardly been reached with the message of salvation. We talked to several missionaries in this area and they tell us that there are great areas where there is not any work being done at all.

"We want to carry the gospel of freedom to these people. Will you pray for our physical safety and for the continuation of the liberty which we have here in Brazil to preach the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ? Will you pray also for those dark people who are in darkness now but who want the light?"

THREE STATES MEET QUOTA

As you will note from the financial report, only three states—Georgia, North Carolina and Texas met their quota for 1959. Congratulations to these states!

Although I am disappointed that every state did not meet her quota, I do wish to express my sincere appreciation to every one who has made a contribution to our mission program the past year. Only eternity will reveal the results of your investment in lost souls.

I trust that each of us will do more missions this year than we did last year. We were $32,828.27 short of our goal for 1959. If our 1960 budget of $222,990 is met, we must begin now to accelerate our giving.

Best wishes for a good year

Persistent Evangelism

(Lesson for February 7)

Lesson: Acts 18:1-11; 1 Corinthians 2:1-

Golden Text: 1 Corinthians 15:58.

INTRODUCTION

Persistence has won many a battle for the name of Christ. The preaching of the gospel and the winning of souls to Christ require persistence and perseverance; for persistence proves one's faithfulness to the cause he represents.

It is true there are many things to discourage the Christian. Surely, no one knew any better than these faithful, early disciples. How thankful we should be to God that they were persistent, for many of us have thus been able to hear and receive the gospel.

Corinth was a wicked city. It commanded the trade route between Asia and Rome and gave it great commercial value. This accounts for a large percentage of its wickedness; for many men of varied religious nationalities and languages flocked to it. It is written that the very term, Corinthian, came to mean profligate. Money was freely spent in Corinth. Some of its pagan vice is seen by reading Romans 1:18-32 which was written by Paul in Corinth.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

POINTS THAT HELP

1. God-directed service will be carried on in the place of God's choosing (Acts 18:1).

2. God-directed service will not be restricted to any one tribe or nation (Vs. 4).

3. God-directed service is at home in the home where the Word of God is read (Vs. 8).

4. God-directed service makes all the difference for Jesus Christ that the Word of God does (Vs. 5).

5. God-directed service may meet with opposition, but God will always be able to open other doors (Vs. 6).

6. God-directed service is able to reach the humbler walks of life, but also to the walks of eminence (Vs. 8).

7. God-directed service will be encouraged by the Lord when outward circumstances are discouraging (Vs. 9).

8. God-directed service can always be sure of the presence of the Lord (Vs. 10).

9. God-directed service will continue until it accomplishes the work He planned for it (Vs. 11).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The city of Corinth was filled with immorality, debauchery and shame. One needs but to read the first chapter of Romans to find a clear word picture of the depths to which these people had descended in their moral corruption. G. Campbell Morgan says the immorality of these people was so great and so widely known that, when people of other places wanted to describe the shameful conduct of someone else, they would say, "They live like the people of Corinth."—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

2. In the days of Paul any kind of labor was considered honorable, and not to teach one's son a trade was the same as preparing him to be a robber. The wisdom of this rule became apparent in the case of Paul, when the changes and chances of life compelled him to earn his livelihood.

3. The reason why this was chosen may have been purely local; perhaps his father had been taught the same trade. But though we see how much he felt the burden of the labor by which he determined to earn his own bread rather than trespass on the charity of his converts, yet it had one advantage in being so absolutely mechanical as to leave the thought entirely free.—The Defender.

4. The Corinthian Jews not only rejected the plan of salvation in Jesus Christ, but they also blasphemed the Lord's name in their opposition to Paul. This seemed to be more than Paul could tolerate, and for the first time he made use of the old Hebrew formula of blood guiltiness (1 Samuel 1:16). He shook out his garments declaring that their own blood was upon their own heads, the same request which the Jews had made to Pilate (Matthew 27:25). Immediately, he walked out of the synagogue declaring that he would from that moment preach to the Gentiles.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

5. Self-pity is a corrosive and debilitating vice. The one guilty of this sin becomes its victim, and seldom knows who is at fault. He knows only that his status becomes progressively worse, and that his troubles grow and increase with the nursing he gives them.

At Corinth, Paul was saved from self-pity by the twin necessities of working for a living and preaching and teaching the gospel. The spiritual starvation of those about him was more important to him than the meagerness of his own fare. Necessity was laid upon him to preach the gospel (1 Corinthians 9:16), and it was a necessity that saved both him and those to whom he was privileged to minister.—Standard Commentary.

6. The theme of Paul's gospel at Corinth was, "Jesus Christ and Him crucified." Indeed, this was his theme everywhere, but he placed great emphasis upon it at Corinth. Doubtless, this was due to his experience at Athens where he learned that men cannot be persuaded to believe the gospel by logical reasoning. At Corinth, also, he met with those who placed great emphasis upon the wisdom of men; therefore, he was anxious to avoid the pitfalls of men's wisdom by exalting faith which reaches out beyond the extent of man's understanding. The gospel of the suffering Saviour could not be explained by the wisdom of men. It had to be received by faith.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

7. God spoke to a Chicago minister in reference to going to the unsaved ones in their homes. One day when he knocked at the door of an apartment, a man answered the call. A frightened look of despair was on the man's face. He asked what the caller wanted. The minister replied, "I want to talk to you about the Lord Jesus Christ!" The man burst into tears, and said, "Man, God must have sent you here! Just before you knocked, my wife and I had closed all the doors and windows of our small apartment, intending to turn on the gas and end our lives! You see, we just buried our darling child who was the idol of our hearts. We felt that our sorrow was more than we could bear!"—Selected.

WHAT IF?

for us. Today all three of us went forward to profess Christ as our Saviour and for baptism.

I wanted to make a decision the night you were at the house to see us, but I was afraid of what Mother and Daddy might think.

After we moved here I did start going to Sunday school again, and I started talking to Mother. She told me that after your visit she had thought about it a lot and felt the need in her heart. Together we worked on Daddy. We did get him to go to church occasionally and finally this morning I could not stand it any longer, I had to go forward, regardless of what they thought.

Imagine my joy and surprise when Dad and Mom came and stood beside me.

Thank you so much for taking the time and trouble to come to see us, for if you hadn't bothered to visit us I know that none of us would have been interested enough to go on to church here.

Once again, thank you so much, and may God continue to use you.

Sincerely,

Marjorie Kennedy.

My heart was thrilled by this simple testimony of a fourteen-year-old girl. I was so thankful that God had not allowed me to rest that rainy night until I had followed His will.

This article in the paper ends their story. It frightens me to think that I came so close to dismissing the Holy Spirit's leading that rainy night and saying, "Some other time." What if I hadn't gone that night? What if I had stayed home by the cozy fire as I had wanted to do? What if?—Gospel Herald.

good. On the other hand, wasn't this the chance he'd prayed for?

Hands cold with fear, he bolted the door. "God, help me!" he implored. He threw the rope to the sturdy knob, and pulled it into the hole. "Hoist the pulley at his end of the much straining, pushing, and grunting, the first boy came up.

"Water!" he begged. Bill motioned toward his water jug. "Leave some for the rest."

Finally all were rescued but Spud, the biggest bully. After several jumps, he managed to catch the rope and was tugged up. He drained the water jug. "Got anything to eat?" he asked. Bill provided two small apples.

The boy glared at his rescuer. "Now what'll we do with you? Don't have no use for preacher's kids!"

Bill shivered, but looked at him squarely. "Why don't you?"

"The town decided we're too tough so they called a preacher. Things suited us the way they were before you came and softened everybody up. We can't get away with anything anymore."

"I'm glad," Bill said softly.

"Why you—I'll push you down that hole!" Spud snarled. "Maybe that'll teach your meddling dad something!"

Bill quailed. One of the boys said, "Stop it, Spud! He pulled us outta there!"

The big fellow flushed. "I'm a little forgetful," he said, "but I still don't like preacher's kids!" His eyes glinted.

"Maybe you could learn," Bill grinned.

"Beat it," the other snarled.

Bill didn't see the boys for several days after that. Then one day as he puffed up the hill with water, Spud blocked his path. "Oh, no, he's here to pick a fight," Bill thought.

"Put that bucket down," Spud barked. "I wanta know something. We've tried to scare you—you don't scare. We've tried to make you fighting mad—you won't fight. You're big and strong. First, we thought you were a coward until the day you got us out of that hole. What's the big idea? What makes you so different?"

Bill drew a prayerful breath. If only he could say it right! It was so hard to talk to this rough, sullen-faced boy.

"Come to Sunday school," he said finally. "There you'll find the secret."

He expected Spud to laugh or glower or even hit him. Instead he promised sheepishly, "Okay! We'll give it a try. The whole gang'll be there." He walked away muttering, "I still can't figure you out."

Bill felt like shouting, "It's because I'm a Christian in my heart." But he knew it would take Spud several Sunday school sessions before he could "figure it out."

Suddenly, Spud turned and called, "Long, preacher's kid!"

"See you in church Sunday," Bill grinned.—My Pleasure.

Won't you please do all you can to help make fifth Sunday a great day for Mother Olive College and then continue your interest and support through February and spring and summer months? Remember that we now have the opportunity. Such is ours if we are willing to work for it.

President Raper summarized the significance of regional accreditation in these words: "The greatest educational challenge ever confront Free Will Baptists is now before us. We must now decide what kind of college we want Mount Olive to be. We must not be complacent and let the college become a lukewarm institution that is a dishonor to our church, our God, this community, and the cause of true education. Or, for the first time in the history of our denomination, we can have a college that has achieved the highest in educational proficiency."

Editorial

IS IT FAIR?

C. H. Overman

The subject, which we shall discuss in this and perhaps two or more editorials, is of vital importance to the spiritual welfare of our people, both ministers and laymen. We shall consider some areas in which certain unfair advantages have been taken on the part of those involved.

Let us first remind ourselves of the fact of an awakening on the part of our churches. This awakening has had a profound effect upon every phase of our denominational program. Churches have awakened to their needs and are, therefore, seeking to meet those needs under the leadership of God. This being true, ministers are realizing that their personal qualifications must be raised in order to meet the demands of the church which is seeking a pastor. Such has brought about a revolution in our denomination, and for this we are thankful to God. May we ever pray and work for its continuation.

Now to cite an example. Twelve years ago very few churches in rural areas had parsonages. Now, however, it is not uncommon to pass by any of the smaller rural churches and see new parsonages already built, or being built. This is true in most denominations. The churches that first launched out by faith served as a challenge to other churches. Such meant that there would be more resident ministers, and suddenly the churches who had them began to grow, physically and spiritually. More worship services were held, some began full-time services; others went to half-time services. These factors placed greater and increased demands upon the minister. Suddenly he realized that he could not carry on his secular work and give the church the time and attention which it so rightfully deserves. He found too, that there was a basic need for better and more complete preparation, or he would find himself incapable of leading the people of his pastorate into a deeper relationship with God. Emphasis upon education, missions, church extension, membership increase, etc., rose to an all-time high, and the minister stands at the top of the list so far as personal responsibility and obligations are concerned. Even today this revolution continues, and in order to further advancements, we must as a people deal fairly with one another. We cannot afford to do otherwise.

May we, first of all, consider the good which the church accomplishes upon and for the minister or pastor. Perhaps this is the opposite kind of thinking from that which we are accustomed to, and much different from that which is adopted by many of our younger brethren in the ministry. The usual pattern is for the minister to feel that the church alone benefits from the service, and thus he is not aware of the church's benefits upon him.

Every minister has to have a starting point. We cannot help but feel that the Spirit bestows special favor upon the congregation that endures the first sermons preached by a minister. The patience and concern of such a congregation has made many a minister what he is. The willingness of the church to call him should add to his deep gratitude for God's faithful people. In brief, the church often does more to make the minister, than the minister does to make the church. In spite of this fact, however, the minister often becomes too critical because he doesn't revolutionize the church overnight. Is it fair for the minister to feel that he is the only cog in every activity? Indeed, he is God representative, and a servant of his people; but this does not make him independent of his fellow man. As the church prospers and benefits, so does the minister. If he is ever the loser, something wrong indeed.

It is evident that ministers often bring trouble upon themselves with their church people. When such is the case, he may find it quite difficult to become established in another pastorate. Such trouble seems, in certain instances, to arise out of an unfair advantage taken by the minister in the promotion of ideas. Especially does this seem evident in the realm of supporting denominational ideas. Just because a minister doesn't believe in supporting a particular program doesn't mean that it is entirely wrong for a church, or another person to support it; for supporting the enterprise of our choice is a Christian liberty which no one has the right to take away. Yet, the new pastor will often seek to change the charitable policies of the local church so much that confusion and strife are the result; and this is sometimes done at the very back door of the enterprise which the church has been supporting. Such convictions which may result in serious conflict between either parties should be understood before the call to the pastorate is accepted. Perhaps we have not been as thorough in the matter as we ought to have been.

The minister, in considering a church, should know what it has been doing, its plans and, perhaps most of all, he should know something of its willingness to do more—to launch out into the deep. We would never intend to justify the actions of a cantankerous church member, be he a deacon of long standing or whatever you. Such a person can be a hindrance to the cause of Christ in the local church. On the other hand, it is possible to fight against one who has been the backbone of the local church, one who supported it when others seemed to forget; one who is there each time the church doors open, but he is set stubbornly in his ways and can't be changed. Is it fair to fight him and thus cause division in the church, and among friends and families when there is a way around it?

The Supreme Question

JESUS had gone with His disciples to the district of Caesarea Philippi for a brief retirement. Here He asked this inner circle of friends two questions. The first of these questions had to do with the impression that He had made upon the people during His brief ministry. "Who do men say that I am?" He asked. I dare say that Jesus already knew the answer to His question quite as well as His friends. He was, therefore, not so much seeking information as He was seeking to help these friends to a clear and solid affirmation of their own faith.

In answering His question, His disciples did not tell the whole story. They passed over the ugly criticisms that they had heard. They said nothing of those who had accused Jesus of being a glutton and a friend of publicans and sinners. They told Him only the complimentary things they had heard. They declared that some had been so impressed by Him that they thought He might be John the Baptist come back from the dead. Others had felt the rugged strength of Him and had called Him Elijah. Others had been gripped by His tenderness and had named Him Jeremiah. Others, still feeling that He embodied the very finest qualities of the heroes of the past, said that He was one of the old prophets. Real prophets, while they are alive, generally manage to get themselves hated; but to be likened to one of the great prophets long since dead was praise indeed. We are accustomed to honor all illustrious dead. We celebrate the birthdays of certain select persons whose achievements, character and conduct have been outstanding. Books are written about George Washington and his heroic struggle at Valley Forge; but when life grows hard and we find ourselves in the midst of a bleak winter, we do not seek help from George Washington. So those who thought of Jesus as a great prophet or religious genius are altogether right, but that is not enough. This answer aroused no enthusiasm in Jesus.

Having asked this question about other men's opinions, Jesus asked the disciples to speak for themselves. He put the question to them personally: "Whom say ye that I am?" This is a question of which we might well await the answer in breathless anticipation. Other men spoke from hearsay or from seeing Jesus once or twice, but these men are the star witnesses. They have been with Him constantly. They have heard all His words; they have seen all His deeds. What is their answer?

When they first began to follow Him, they had no clearly defined answer. They found Him exciting. They found Him with the most winsome personality they had ever known. At times He shocked them. At times He thrilled them. At other times He filled them with awe and wonder. He set them whispering to each other, "What manner of man is this?" Whoever He was, they were sure that He was vastly greater than any other they had ever known. Now the Cross was only about six months away. Jesus had taken them for a retreat to Caesarea Philippi. So now He put to them this question. "Whom say ye that I am?"

Simon Peter spoke for them all. In a tremendous answer he affirms their faith.

"Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." And what was the reaction of Jesus? Did He rebuke Simon, as any honest man who was mere man would have done? A few years later Paul and Barnabas had created such enthusiasm in Lystra that the people were on the point of offering them sacrifices, because they thought they were gods. They refused such honor, though it came very near to costing Paul his life. Jesus' reaction was that with wholehearted enthusiasm He said: "... Blessed art thou, Simon, Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven" (Vs. 17).

The certainty of Simon and his fellow disciples that Jesus is God come in the flesh did not weaken with passing of the years, but rather grew stronger. Having witnessed the death and resurrection of their Master, and having experienced Pentecost, those men became absolutely certain that the same Jesus with whom they had walked the roadways of Galilee was alive forevermore. They became certain that He was both with and within them as a living presence.

Is the faith of these disciples our faith? Today Jesus is searching our hearts with this question: "Whom say ye that I am?" This is an abiding question. In every age it is the most important question with which men have to deal. It is, therefore, the most important question that confronts you and me today. This is not simply my conviction; it is the conviction of Jesus Himself. It is so important that if we give it a wrong answer, though if it were possible we might give a right answer to every other question, life must be an adventure of failure and of tragedy. It is so important that if we give it a right answer, though if it were possible we might give a wrong answer to every other question, life would still be an adventure of joy and victory.

"... whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: ... And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which

Planning for Cragmont Youth Conferences

by L. E. Ballard

THE North Carolina Free Will Baptist Sunday School Convention is sponsoring four youth weeks at Cragmont Assembly for the 1960 season—two of them on a state-wide level and two for designated areas.

The two state-wide conferences will be the General Youth Conference the week of June 13-18, and the Youth Bible Conference, the week of August 8-13. Both these conferences have been promoted for a number of years at the same times each year.

This year we are planning many new features for the conferences, and new persons are coming in as workers. In keeping with the action of the executive board of the North Carolina Sunday School Convention in a recent session, a camp supervisor has been selected for each of the conferences. These supervisors will join the general conference director in planning the conferences, and will be in charge of carrying out the program at the assembly.

The Rev. Earl Glenn is to supervise the General Youth Conference in June, and he is well known among our young people as one who certainly knows how to plan good things for young people. Mr. Glenn has been on the staff of a number of the conferences in the past, and his experience will help him in helping to plan and then in supervising the activities at Cragmont.

The Rev. Billy Jackson, who has also had a wide experience in working with young people, will serve as camp supervisor for the Youth Bible Conference in August.

Registrations for both the General Youth Conference and the Youth Bible Conference will be handled through the field work office of the North Carolina State Sunday School Convention, and should be sent to Rev. L. E. Ballard, P. O. Box 338, Scotland Neck, N. C. We are urging all former campers who intend going back this year to write in as soon as possible letting us know of such intention. This will not be an actual registration—this can come later. Just take a postal card and write on it: "I am planning to go back this year for the Conference, the Lord willing." This will give us an idea on how many new registrants we must seek in order to have a good conference. The overall fee has been set again at $30.00 per person.

You are as young as your faith and as old as your doubt.

Church Finance Association, Inc., Reports Progress

THE twentieth annual meeting of the membership of the Church Finance Association, Inc., was held at Pleasant Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Wayne County, North Carolina, on January 12.

This annual meeting was declared the most successful one of the twenty-year history of the association. The attendance was very good, and the interest in the work of the association seemed to be at an all-time high.

For the featured address of the day the members heard Mr. Charles O. Whitley, an attorney of Mount Olive, North Carolina, discuss "The Non-Profit Corporation." He discussed the history of the development of the non-profit corporation as an entity for promoting religious, charitable and educational undertakings. Mr. Whitley's discussion helped the members to understand better our own association and the service it is rendering to our people.

During the program of the afternoon, the association paused to recognize its charter members and those who have served in official capacities. Two deceased charter members who rendered valuable service as members of the Board of Directors were memorialized by a donation of $100 for each to the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation of Mount Olive College. They are the Rev. L. H. Wethington and Mr. Kirby West.

The treasurer's report revealed that 1959 was the most successful year to date: The association has 322 members who hold 541 $25 certificates of membership stock. The total membership stock now held by the members is $15,595.40. The total assets of the association as of December 31, 1959, was $96,362.25. The surplus, or accumulated profit, for 1959 was $1,203.71. During the twenty years of its operation the association has made 72 loans for a total amount of $272,982.45.

The following were re-elected as members of the Board of Directors: R. N. Hinnant, president; J. W. Alford, vice-president; M. L. Johnson, secretary-treasurer; Jesse Gay and Lloyd Vernon, members.

The twenty-first annual meeting will be held at the First Free Will Baptist Church in Smithfield on Tuesday, January 10, 1961.

A man's Sunday self and weekday self are like two halves of a round trip ticket—not good if detached!

An Open Letter to the Editor of "The Free Will Baptist"

Dear Brother Fort:

On the behalf of the National Sunday School Board and on my behalf, I wish to take this opportunity to express to you to your staff, and to the Free Will Baptist Press Board our heartfelt thanks and deepest appreciation for the Christian hospitality and sweet fellowship extended to us while we were in your midst.

We desire to congratulate you on the increased sales of Sunday school literature for the first quarter of 1960 over the sales for the last quarter of 1959. This increase of over seven per cent must have been gratifying to you and your staff, and the Free Will Baptist Press Board as it was a most welcome surprise to us. The between three and four hundred dollars over the estimated amount that the Sunday School Board received from you were most welcomed.

One of the highlights of our visit to Ayden was the arrival of your new $30,000 Offset Press which will enable you to take and print colored pictures which will in turn make it possible to print flannelgraph material, colored pictures in the various Sunday school workbooks, vacation Bible school materials and many other things that will widen and increase the scope of your service to the denomination and to the Sunday schools in particular. Please accept our heartiest felicitations and our most sincere appreciation for this step which must have been the results of unshaken faith in, and a prophetic vision of, increased service to the denomination.

We are also grateful of your acceptance of our declared policy of promoting Sunday school work (increased interest, increased attendance and increased efficiency) throughout our denomination as our primary objective.

Yours in Christ,
Paul Woolsey, Chairman
National Sunday School Board

PERFECTION

Albert M. Ezell, Searcy, Arkansas

IF we pretend to have reached either perfection or satisfaction, we have degraded ourselves and our work. God's work only may express that, but ours may never have that sentence written upon it, "Behold it was very good."—Ruskin.

Many times we find men who would have us believe that any life short of perfection is vain and a failure in the sight of God; I say that the highest form of perfection in man is the ability to see his imperfection. Not that this would license him to do less than his best, for our best is the least that God will accept.

Perfection consists not in doing extraordinary things, but in doing ordinary things extraordinarily well. Do not ever be satisfied with anything less than your most concerted efforts. Whether it be in designing the plans for a great cathedral, or carving a willow whistle for a child, put the very best that you have into it.

The very knowledge that perfection does not exist in this present world should be our greatest incentive to reach for the very highest concepts of morality of which the finite mind of man is capable. The thing one most earnestly strives for is the thing that is most nearly attained. We know that if we pick a certain character in our neighborhood, noted for his high moral standards, his outstanding spiritual life, his love for his fellow man, and self effacement, to the measure of deepest humility; if we take such a one as our pattern and seek by our daily life that these qualities also be portrayed in us, we find ourselves much better than we were in the beginning. But there are some traits of character in that individual that we will never be able to possess, the musings of his mind, the nature of his meditations, or the hopes in his heart. So it is when we pursue perfection; we come ever nearer to it, but never are able to have it fully in our lives.

Some of the greatest Bible characters that we know failed in reaching perfection in this world. Moses, the one whom God knew and talked to face to face, failed to give God the glory. Therefore he fell short in a life of perfection, yet God said of him, that a prophet like unto Moses was not raised up before or since. Likewise, David whom God said was a man after His own heart; but he was willing to commit murder to gain his lustful ends. Hezekiah, whom God had so wondrously blessed in healing and adding more years to his life, fell short of perfection, in that his heart was lifted up when he showed unto the king of Babylon his treasures and gave not glory to God. For this the prophet told him that the judgment of God would come upon his house.

May God grant that no one will think or be led to believe through reading this, that I am advocating that men live on a lower moral or spiritual standard. God forbid. What I am trying to say is this, even though we try our very best and fail, do not let that discourage you. Some, because they have been led to believe in a state of perfection, when they stumble and fall, will give up the fight thinking it is hopeless. The greatest men of all the ages are not the ones that have never had difficulties, but the ones that have learned through trial and error to overcome their difficulties and have placed them as pages of experience in their book of life. Never despair; but if you do, work on in despair.

Perfection is not, as some think, a will-o-the-wisp. It is attainable, as I have said, not in this world, but certainly in the world to come. It will only be for the ones who have struggled unceasingly in a life as nearly perfection as possible, for we are made better in measure with the things we are associated with.

Everyone, whether consciously or subconsciously, is always reaching for something higher than himself. That is why so many of our poets and painters have reached a place of immortality in the hearts of the people. If the capability to believe God had not been placed in their hearts to reach just a little higher, to seek just a little

"If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" (2 Chronicles 7:14).

PRAYER is something that we don't hear much about these days. I think it should be taught and preached more. Just what is prayer? The poet has defined prayer as the earnest desire of the heart, either expressed or unexpressed, uttered in audible words or only expressed in the heart. Webster defines prayer as an earnest entreaty. In my opinion either one or both of the definitions are good. Some great teacher has defined prayer as the key that unlocks heavens door. With these definitions of prayer, it is possible for everyone to pray. Paul had a mind to pray and knew the need of prayer.

Why should we pray? We should pray because the Bible teaches us to pray. Jesus taught His disciples to pray, and He commands us to pray. The Bible tells us to pray without ceasing; it also tells us to pray always. I think if Christians would spend more time in prayer, we would receive more of the blessings God has in store for us.

When should we pray? I think we should pray anytime we feel the need to pray. Where should we pray? In 1 Timothy 2:8 we read, "I will therefore that men pray every where, . . ." We should pray in our home, at work, on the road, on our bed, or in church.

How should we pray? I think we can pray standing or kneeling, sitting or laying—the position does not matter. The main thing is to pray according to the will of God and in faith.

To whom should we pray? The Bible teaches us to pray to the Father. Jesus prayed to the Father in the garden, and He taught His disciples to pray to the Father. The Bible also teaches us to pray closer to the unattainable, then there would have been a dearth of these immortal works of brush and pen with us today.

Just as we seek a nearness to perfection, will be become more, but not completely, perfect. So if we seek a nearness to God's will, we become more Godly, but not completely like God.

He that seeks perfection on earth leaves nothing new for the saints to find in heaven; as long as men teach, there will be mistakes in divinity; and as long as they govern, mistakes in state.—F. Osborn.

The Florida State Association of Free Will Baptists in its annual session in November, 1959, voted to give (without any strings attached) the plot of ground consisting of approximately 15 acres of land on Highway 231, south of Cottdale, Florida.

This land is to be used as the site of a retirement home or homes for ministers, missionaries and full-time Christian workers by the National Board of Superannuation if accepted.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Do you think it is right for a mother who has small children to work outside of the home, hire a baby sitter to care for the baby, do a shoddy job of house work and see that the children attending school come home to only token care? Then often the mother and husband go our several nights a week, leaving the children with one and then another.—T. H. E., Alabama.

ANSWER: In the first place, it is necessary to know several facts which are not certain in your question before I give a definite answer to such a question. When I first read it, I was impressed that probably the woman you have in mind is probably both money and pleasure mad; but a further consideration of the facts and the possibilities behind them caused me to feel rather sympathetic toward the whole family. I sincerely wish that circumstance would make it necessary for no mother in our beloved country to leave her children at all whether or not they be in the hands of the best possible substitute for their mother. But this has not always been possible. I am the fourth child of my parents. My mother found it necessary to leave me with a wonderful elderly, colored lady while she took my older brother and two older sisters to a field, sometimes a mile away and sometimes farther. This woman seemed to love me just as much and was equally as strict with me as was Mother, but she never filled Mother's place. Later, I was among those who followed her to the field while my younger brothers and sisters stayed with someone who in a part-time way acted as nurse. This day's economy should provide better family conditions than the post civil war days in which I was reared, but they do not seem to do so. If any thing, they are worse; which means that in order for some parents to support their children as they send those old enough to go to school and at the same time provide for those who stay home, they must make arrangements for the under school age children in keeping with their needs.

It requires that a couple in such circumstances be real genuine Christians, that they read their Bible and spend a proper time in prayer each day, to know how to meet and solve all the complicated problems of rearing children and attending to the Lord's work. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6). This, with many other passages in God's Word, places the responsibility of parenthood just where it belongs, and if properly assumed, guarantees good results. Just what all is required of parents in training up the child in the way that he should go? They are certainly to furnish him the kind of environment and home conditions that would prevent him from either growing up to be a spoiled, pampered brat or a modern softy. The Bible requires of parents that they discipline their children, causing them to act or behave according to definite rules and regulations and to be the children who will make Christian gentlemen and ladies of themselves, having a purpose in life and exercising every effort needed each day and each hour of that day to accomplish this end. Nothing else on this earth is so important and so rewarding. Now since most children are just children, being short the foresight that several years of experience gives, it is the parents' place to see that the child does not let some fanciful allurements cause distractions that would cause him to turn from his main goal or even give it a secondary place in his progress. The mother who reads and obeys the Bible will not exhibit a know-it-all attitude; she will seek and listen to the matured advice of older Christian mothers. "The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things; That they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed" (Titus 2:3-5). Notice that in the fifth verse a reason given for the elder woman being teachers of the younger is that they are "to be . . . keepers at home." I believe a few Christian women that I know do this quite well, even though they spend part of the day four or five days a week working and even though they attend church services Sunday nights and prayer meeting on Wednesday evenings. I do not think a neighborhood trotting, gossiping woman can "be discreet, chaste keepers at home."

Note some things God has to say about a virtuous woman. "Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life. She seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willing with her hands. She is like the merchant ships; she bringeth her food from afar. She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens. . . . She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff. She stretcheth out her hands to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy. She is not afraid of the snow for her household: for all her household are clothed with scarlet. She maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing is silk and purple. Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land. . . . She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her" (Proverbs 31:10-15, 19-23, 26-28). Contrast that description of a virtuous woman with the following, "But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth" (1 Timothy 5:6).

Women, like men, need to be kept busy doing that which is their duty which is always good that they will have no time to even think of the sinful pleasures of this world. When wise parents must be absent from their children, they should always provide proper companionship for them. Such children should be so well disciplined by their own parents that they would not dare misbehave anymore in the absence than in the presence of their parents. My parents used to punish us children much more severely when they knew of our misconduct in their absence than if they were there. When we went to school, they warned us that any misbehavior in school would bring double punishment. I grant you that it was hard indeed to take it then; but instead of my feeling resentful because of it now after fifty years or so, I am thankful to them, and there goes unto my heavenly Father heartfelt praise and gratitude that He thought enough of me to give me old-fashioned, Bible believing and Bible practicing parents. "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby" (Hebrews 12:11); "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes" (Proverbs 13:24). I would be the very last person to sanction the abuse of a child any misuse of parental authority. I heard of a Christian woman that talked to her daughter kindly about a rather serious offence for a girl so young. The next day she not only repeated the act but in a more daring, defiant attitude; and again the mother talked kindly to her, advising her of the bitter results of such behavior and then spanked her so lightly that the girl paid little attention to either the kind words or the gentle spanking. On the third day the offence was more drastic; this time the mother administered what might be called a half-way decent spanking over which the mother wept all night. The girl skipped the next day, but upon the second day after the spanking she went still further in the offence. The mother this time gave her a real old-time spanking and again cried all night but not in vain this time, for the daughter had also shed some tears and done some thinking. She was now ready to talk; the mother and daughter talked and cried some more, but the daughter was broken and from then on showed both love and respect for her mother. "Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying" (Proverbs 19:18); "Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child; but the rod of correction shall drive him far from him" (22:15); "The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame. When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall. Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul" (29:15-17); "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" (Hebrews 12:6, 7); "And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" (Ephesians 6:4). This is indeed a lot to require of parents, but God knew that with His help we were able before He made parents of us. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13).

Finally may I say that if the husband's salary can be used so as to keep the wife and mother home with her precious children, I believe that it would be to great advantage that she be with them; on the other hand, if God makes it clear that this is His means by helping them over a crisis and teaching a lesson needed, one should be given over completely to this. There is one thing of which I now feel certain, and that is that too many of us Christians try to solve family problems in our own ingenuity rather than consulting God in sincere prayer and then being willing that He answer according to His own good pleasure.

Religiosity is the greatest enemy of Biblical religion. Solomon and Sheba's promoters make little effort at piety, but Ben Hur's men have the nerve to say, after crawling out from under their carload of statistics, that "the picture will emphasize the human story rather than the mere eye-filling pomp and splendor." The Big Fisherman's promotion propaganda is the phoniest of all: twice it hints that providence interfered, that the macrocosm responded to the microcosm's pietizing. For example, when an Arab-tent scene was disrupted by California desert winds, new cloud formations "urgently essential for other scenes" appeared—"as if in compensation."

Inch by inch and second by second one does not always perceive how the Bible is used against itself in this promotion and in these films. When the record as a whole is studied, however, one sees the need for a large-scale indictment. Not the least element in this indictment is that the promoters of anti-Biblical Biblicism in the movies use trophies, awards or orders of thousands of extra copies of publications which advance their game to subvert the sources of information of church people. Protestants need not waste their time in indiscriminate condemnation of the movies. The beginning of a program on which Protestants can act is that they can, first of all, stop letting themselves be used.

... Christianity does not run from the world, does not turn its back on it. But having confronted the world of fertility deities, materialism, evasion of Christ, gadget worship and religiosity, and having exposed its bankruptcy, Christianity points beyond these to the real world, the one God created, in which He was incarnate, and in which His Son was crucified and arose. This means that the Christian's relation to the cultural world of man's devising is always in tension. . . . After the passing of this season's three big-budget

Taking it to God in prayer, trusting Him and leaving it there is the final secret.

Bible travesties, we can hope for the clearing of the air and the chasing away of the phonies with the coming film version of Elmer Gantly, Sinclair Lewis' stinging study of hypocrisy. (End of editorial.)

Dear reader, I hope the reading of this article, in this and the two previous meditations, has been worth your while, and that it has opened your eyes to what the film industry is doing to the Bible and to Christianity. And the sad part of it is, if you attend these so-called Bible movies, you are paying to aid them in their Satanic travesties of simple faith and reverence for the Bible as the true and unchanging Word of God for a lost world. I have given the editorial just as it appeared in The Christian Century, except that I deleted two or three sentences that I thought was better left out.

As I close I want to give a few words of advice to parents. Now, I do not believe that Hollywood is the proper source for Bible instruction for your children, for you or for anyone. The Christian home and the church are the places from which we must learn of God and His love, and the way of salvation and holy living.

For my part, I wish Hollywood, with all its corruption, would stay out of the Bible—until Hollywood becomes fit by the cleansing power of the blood of Jesus Christ to deal with it in its purity and for pure motives instead of purely for pecuniary purposes. We can aid in this cause greatly by staying away from their shows and by teaching our children and others the dangers they pose to our very existence as effective Christians.

Are we not experiencing the warning:

"Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen" (Romans 1:25).

What Is Regional Accreditation?

During 1960 the friends of Mount Olive College will be hearing and reading much about regional accreditation and the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Mount Olive College is working toward membership in the Southern Association and can now become the first educational institution owned by Free Will Baptists to achieve regional accreditation.

WHAT IS THE SOUTHERN ASSOCIATION?

For purposes of academic accreditation, the United States is divided into six regional associations; the Southern Association embraces the following states: North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia. More than 330 colleges in these states are accredited by the Southern Association, and for a junior college regional accreditation represents the highest academic achievement possible.

ADVANTAGES OF REGIONAL ACCREDITATION

Regional accreditation is the hallmark of educational proficiency throughout the nation. A college that holds membership in its regional accrediting association is recognized by every other college or university in America. Credits earned in a regionally-accredited college will transfer throughout the world.

Membership in the Southern Association would say to Free Will Baptist high school graduates everywhere: "Your denomination has a college whose academic standards are approved by the highest accrediting agency in the United States. In attending Mount Olive College you may be assured that your credits will be honored in every state in America."

This achievement will enable Mount Olive College to serve more students and to serve them better. Furthermore, as a Christian college, we are responsible to God to have the best program of education possible. Christian education must be good education.

WILL SOUTHERN ASSOCIATION RESTRICT THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF THE COLLEGE?

This question has been asked by a number of serious people. Mount Olive College seeks first and foremost to be a Christian institution, and it is because that we wish to be thoroughly Christian that we seek to strengthen our academic program.

I have attended the past two annual sessions of the Southern Association and I have studied its requirements for membership carefully. At the associations I have experienced a spirit of brotherhood that I wish prevailed at the National Association of Free Will Baptists and some other denominational meetings.

It is my honest conviction that as we work toward accreditation by the Southern Association we will strengthen the spiritual life of the college. Rather than restrict our spiritual life, Southern Association will examine to see if we are rendering to the Free Will Baptist denomination the services for which the college was established.

The first standard of the association says "Each institution should define and publish its objectives." The objectives of Mount Olive College are published in our catalogue, and the first objective is "To provide educational opportunities in the context of a Christian community and to relate such education to Christian faith and practice in keeping with the responsibility of the college to the denomination which sponsors it."

Mount Olive College is a Free Will Baptist college, and as such has a responsibility to the Free Will Baptist denomination. One point on which we will be evaluated will be how effective we are measuring up to this responsibility.

SUMMARY

The Standards Committee of the Southern Association will visit Mount Olive College in the early fall and will announce its findings at the annual meeting of the association in December in Memphis, Tennessee.

Additional articles will be forthcoming and will explain the requirements which we must meet. Meanwhile, Mount Olive College needs the earnest prayers and generous support of Free Will Baptists everywhere. Let us build a college that will honor God through service to our people.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

FOR CONSCIENCE'S SAKE

The apostle, Paul, said, ". . . herein do exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men" (Acts 24:16). Paul made enemies, but chose to follow his conscience, doing the will of God. George Washington made enemies, but he followed his conscience and gave to us liberty and freedom. Abraham Lincoln followed his conscience and freed the slaves; however, he made some enemies. Jesus Christ followed his conscience and provided salvation for a lost world; however, He made enemies. Paul said that Christ loved us while we were enemies.

Many years ago, I had the privilege of going with a man who was a conscientious believer. At least he claimed that he is honest and conscientious in his unbelief. We argued all day. I preached Christ and His salvation. He preached his unbelief. In the evening when we separated, he said, "I've enjoyed being with you today. Sometimes I get with a fellow who will always agree with me saying, 'Yes,' everything I say." That person who can do such a thing has no conscience of his own.

If you stick to your conscience, you did the apostle, Paul, and our Lord some people will appreciate you, while some will hate you. We must remember that Jesus said, "Woe unto, when all men shall speak well of you! . . ." (Luke 6:26). Of course, most of us rather have applause in what we do and say; but the true test of character is the ability and willingness to adhere strictly to the path of individual integrity regardless of what the popular conception of that might be.

Some people listen to conscience as the monitor which shall guide them from day to day; others are expert in the art of keeping near to the ground in determining what the people would approve of and dictating their course accordingly. Such people search for the popular side or the side at most others are on, and then they conform in the popular or majority congregation. The man who expects to get through life without making enemies might as well realize that when his life is ended, it will be counted blank so far as any positive influence is concerned.

There is a great deal of deification of goodness in the world. Some of it is quite far-fetched. We know good men who are actually good for nothing. They do not participate in those things that are degrading and destructive to the best interest of mankind. They are good in looking out for their own interest, but they are so good that they will not express themselves in an issue. They just agree with those whom they are with. They are afraid to express themselves, so they will drown their conscience to keep in agreement with those who actually are bold in expressing their belief. They will not express a positive opinion concerning any question upon which there is a division of sentiment in the community in which they live.

Some of the best men we have ever known had a choice collection of enemies. They did their own thinking. They reached their own conclusions. They had the courage at all times to declare where they stood.

It was the plain teaching of the Lord Jesus that life's duties seldom lead along the rose-strewn path. He told the disciples before He went away that ". . . In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world" (John 16:33). Yes, at every turn of the road there will be elements with which it will be necessary to fiercely contend; and Jesus, Himself, was the great minority leader of His day. The majority were bitterly and cruelly against Him. It was not for Him to seek the lines of least resistance. He preached what He believed, that which was given Him to preach by His Father, regardless of what men thought. He said, "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak" (John 12:49, 50). He went the way of the Cross to die in order to express His consciousness in preparing the way of life for fallen humanity.

Those who undertake to gauge their conduct by the tone or volume of the world's applause may sometimes find that they have been led astray. Public opinion is fickle, and that which is applauded today may be hissed tomorrow. On the other hand, the fellow whom the mob sought to lynch a year ago may now be the recipient of great applause today with many flowers strewn in his path. We again bring to your attention the words of the Master: "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you." Possibly the danger is that we might get to thinking more of self than we ought. We might feel exalted.

The greatest satisfaction will come at the end of the way when we can say with the apostle, Paul, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Timothy 4:6-8).

Paul had followed his conscience in obeying the Lord. Men, great men, men with authority did not agree with Paul. His path was made hard, but he preached what he believed to be the way of Christ. May we have a pure conscience toward God and toward man. Stand for the right, if we have to stand alone. Believe in and trust Christ conscientiously without any compromise with the enemy of mankind.

THE MAIL BOX

SEEKING CHRISTIAN WORK

"In April, 1957, I was licensed to preach the gospel. Due to my health in the past year, I have not been able to do much studying. At the present time, I am in good health. I really and truly want to use the talent that God has given me; I want a chance to get some experience in this work before I go before the ordaining council sometime this year. It would be greatly appreciated if I could serve in midweek prayer meetings, church services or any kind of evangelistic work within 25 miles of my home which is Kenly, North Carolina. I hope this to be an answer to my prayers."

IN APPRECIATION

"I would like to take this means to express my appreciation for the many cards, money and gifts received for my birthday and also Christ's birthday. Most of all, I thank you for your prayers in behalf of my wife during her illness. If the Lord spares us until January 18, we will observe our 57th wedding anniversary. The Lord has been good to us, whereof we are glad. May God's blessings abide on you all is my prayer."

No Word for a Poor Sinner

In a class in homiletics in a theological school, different students would preach their sermons before the class. Following his sermon, the student would go into the office of the professor who would criticize the sermon, and offer suggestions. One day the saintly professor said to a student, "The sermon you gave yesterday was mighty fine. The truth you dealt with was well-arranged and well-presented. But your sermon had one omission—a grave one, too. There was no word in it for a poor sinner like me!"—Selected.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

"I Can Be One Now"

by Roy Judson Wilkins

MOTHER," Betty Ann began, "you know what I want to be when I'm grown up?"

"No, dear. What do you want to be—a schoolteacher, maybe?"

"No, Mother. I—well, I intend to be a missionary!" Betty Ann declared. "I just read in my Bible where Jesus said, 'Go ye therefore, and teach all nations.' And I'd—I'd—well, really, Mother, I think—I mean, I'm sure—He wants me to go!"

Mother, surprised at Betty Ann's statement, could scarcely speak for a moment.

"My precious Betty Ann!" Mother gathered her in her arms. "You don't know how very happy you've made me! Perhaps you're right; the Lord may be calling you even now, as young as you are, to be a missionary. He called Samuel when he was but a child, I know. We shall wait and see what God shall reveal to you later on."

"Oh, Momsy! How I'd love to go to India and tell those poor brown-skinned boys and girls about Jesus!" Betty Ann exclaimed, her blue eyes shining. "It would be a very thrilling trip to India too, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, I'm sure it would," Mother agreed. "But wouldn't you become very lonesome, away over in India, thousands of miles away from Father and Mother?"

"Yes, I—I s'pose I would," Betty Ann gazed thoughtfully at a picture on the wall of Christ in Gethsemane. "But, Mother, I think Jesus was lonely too, in the garden there, all alone, or just the same as alone. His disciples were asleep, so they weren't any company for Him. He must have been lonely, Mother, for He was away from His heavenly home, you know. He must have missed being with God and the angels."

Mother thought so too. "Well, darling, Father and I would miss you ever so much, should you some day go to India. But if God really calls you to go, we'll be glad indeed that God could use you in His service."

Betty Ann's face beamed. "I can hardly wait! How old will I have to be before I can become a missionary?"

"Well," Mother smiled. "I believe you're old enough right now."

"Now!" Betty Ann gasped. "Why, Mother! Surely I'd have to be at least seventeen or more, wouldn't I?"

"To go to India, yes," Mother stated. "But you see, dear, I meant that you could be a missionary now, right here in Kentonville."

"Here in Kentonville!" Betty Ann echoed. "How could I be a missionary here? Missionaries always travel long distances, don't they? To India, Africa, China, and other foreign lands?"

"Oh, no, dear. There are many places right in our United States where they need missionaries fully as much as in foreign lands. In the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee for instance, there are many people wholly ignorant of what the Bible teaches. In northern Minnesota too, and many other out-of-the-way places, missionaries are needed very much."

Betty Ann could scarcely believe it. "Why, I—I thought everybody in our land knew about the Lord Jesus!" she said, amazed.

Mother shook her head, sadly. "They should, dear, but I'm sure they don't. And I'm afraid there are some folks—some boys and girls of your age too—right in this city who know little or nothing about Christ."

"Really, Mother?" Betty Ann looked greatly shocked and very serious. "Then I guess you're right; they do need missionaries right here at home as well as in heathen lands. I never really thought about that before. Maybe, while I'm waiting to get big enough to go to India, I could be a missionary right here at home!"

"Certainly you can, dear," Mother's face beamed. "And God will be very happy about your decision, I know; even happier than I am. Now is the proper time to prepare for your life's work. If you are faithful in little things now, God will be pleased to allow you to do bigger things later on."

Betty Ann hugged her mother very hard. Happily, she cried, "You know what, Momsy? I'm going to see how many junior girls and boys in this neighborhood I can find who don't go to Sunday school. I'll invite them to come to ours next Sunday. That'll be sort of missionary work, won't it, Mother?"

"Indeed it will," Mother assured the radiant Betty Ann. "A very fine way to begin preparing yourself for God's work in the future."

Betty Ann was serious. "Well, I still think I want to go to India as a missionary some day, Mother. But I'm glad you showed me I can be one now, right here in Kentonville!"—O. P. Boys and Girls.

Christian Education

the Free Will Baptist church and youth tomorrow.

Naturally, we want the very best for our youth. Therefore it is very important that we meet the challenges and take advantage of the opportunities that are placed before us. At the present time we are faced with the challenge of meeting the standards for accreditation with the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The benefits of such accreditation would be far-reaching. It would enable our students to transfer to colleges outside the state to finish their education.

In addition to the challenge of Southern Association accreditation, we always have the challenge of helping our students to grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour and of training our Free Will Baptist youth to take their places in the work of His Kingdom. The week of February 7-12 has been set aside as Spiritual Emphasis Week at Mount Olive College. The Reverend Chester Pelt of Marianna, Florida, will be the principal speaker.

If we are to train the potentiality of our church of tomorrow, we must have sufficient funds to meet the challenges. The Loyalty Fund Campaign will run through February. We hope to raise at least $65,000 during this campaign. However, we must have about $22,000 more to reach this goal.

Won't you urge your church and Sunday school to give a generous offering to the fund on fifth Sunday, January 31?

Sincerely yours,
Miss Leah McGlohon

to the Father in the name of Jesus Christ

Who should pray? All Christians should pray. We can pray as individuals, as churches and as a nation. Sometimes when we fall short of the blessings God has in store for us, it is because we fail to pray as we should.

A Study in Ephesians

Chapter One

In the study of any subject we need to know something of the location, foundation and surroundings, as well as taking into consideration the cause or reason. We know that Ephesus was one of the largest cities of Asia, or at least a chief city. It is noted for the temple of the great gods, Diana, that the people adored and worshiped, as we do or should worship our Lord and King.

Paul, the author, is a well known character, who is at this writing a prisoner of Lord Jesus Christ at Rome. All Bible students are familiar with the conversion and life of Paul and of his imprisonment. His letter to the Ephesians is the first letter sent out after his imprisonment. He is much concerned about the church here, having had a very harrowing experience during his stay in Ephesus. Read Acts 19 for a detailed account of his ordeal and deliverance. He wrote this letter to the church in order to establish them more firmly in faith and to give exalted words of the love of God and of the excellence of Christ. He desired to strengthen and encourage them to stand against the enemies of Christ and to urge them to walk in a manner becoming their profession of faith. It has been suggested that there is a spiritual affinity between Ephesians and the book of Joshua in the Old Testament. (It might be wise to read and compare.) In both we will, at least, find that there was conflict and failures, but also victory. This reminds us that there is often a conflict and failures in our own individual lives; but we can praise the Lord, there is also victory in Him. Paul called himself an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the saints at Ephesus and the faithful in Christ Jesus.

This latter clause embraces all believers in Christ and we should make the application, thereby gaining a greater insight into the will of our Father concerning us. We are so prone to forget or neglect the Christian graces as given to us through the inspired writing of Paul and others. This church at Ephesus either forgot, neglected or drifted into a very unsatisfactory state years later, as recorded in Revelation 2. We would do well to examine ourselves often, to see if we are in the faith; for we have an enemy who is always on our trail, and whose chief desire is to tear down and destroy the works of our Lord and Saviour.

May we notice elements of the believer's position. In Verse 3 Paul acknowledges how God has blessed, by saying "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." We need to take care that we do not presume on God's goodness, for He provides everything for us that will enable us to glorify His blessed name. The heavenly places in Christ He gives to help us to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour. As we study Verses 4-14, we should be very prayerful that God will reveal predestination, adoption, redemption and the dispensation of the fullness of time to us in such a way that we may receive enlightenment and receive the engrafted word that is able to save our souls. We do not have space in which to develop these thoughts, but we are told, and I believe it, that "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Note the condition, however: "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. . . ." (James 1:5, 6). In the study of these elements, or words in accordance to God's will, we will be doing the things that Paul admonished Timothy in 2 Timothy 2:15, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

Paul says again, "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love" (Vs. 4). We find in John 15:16, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: . . ." We know that we are saved by grace, which is unmerited favor and is in contrast to law, because under the law righteousness was demanded of man; whereas under grace, God gives righteousness to man, so we are saved by grace through faith. Paul reminds the church at Ephesus that after they had heard the gospel, believed it, and accepted it, they were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. We too, as believers, have this same relationship to God through the Holy Spirit.

Another concern of Paul's for this church was that through prayer they should gain knowledge and power, so he prayed earnestly for them. He said, "Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love to all the saints, Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers; that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him: The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of his glory of his inheritance in the saints, And what is the exceeding greatness of power to usward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, . . . (Vv. 15-20).

We often ask ourselves, "Why is the church losing its power, and why do not believers do more effective work?" I fear that our prayer life is neglected. The world is in such a state of unrest and even chaos, with all of the evils becoming such a great barrier between us and our Lord, that perhaps we forget that we can do nothing in our own strength but must have the spirit of Paul when he said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13), if we are to bear fruit in the Lord. May we bear in mind that Christ was exalted and made Head of the church, because He loved the church and gave Himself for it. Let us pray one for another that we may be drawn closer to each other in love, that Christ may be exalted through our lives, and that we may become strong in the Lord and in the power of His might.

Charleston, S. C., Church Reports Rapid Progress

Mrs. Paul Leduke, church reporter of the Charleston, South Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church submits the following report of progress for the last part of 1959:

"In the past three months we have had 53 additions to our Sunday school, 25 in the league, 16 in the church, and 4 in the auxiliary. Our finance has doubled. Eight more members have come into the Master's Men organization. God has given us four new Sunday school rooms for which we are very thankful. We hope to start to work on five more rooms as soon as the spring opens.

"In the past four months that our present pastor, the Rev. Noah D. Brown, has been with us, we have received 31 new members into our church. There are a number of candidates waiting to be baptized.

"We want to thank God's people everywhere who have been praying for our church here at Charleston, South Carolina. We want to ask that they continue to pray for us, and to remember our pastor whom we feel God has sent to work with us. He is asking for prayers that he may win 100 souls to Jesus Christ this year. He is a man with a burden for souls. We are so thankful for the blessings of our Father, God Almighty."

Our Fight Against Organized Evil

(Lesson for February 14)

Lesson: Acts 19:1—20:3.

Olden Text: Ephesians 6:12.

INTRODUCTION

When Paul left Corinth, he took with him Aquila and Priscilla and journeyed to Ephesus in Asia Minor. He left them there, but not until he had preached in the synagogue and reasoned with the Jews who urged him to remain with them. Paul, however, said good-by to them and left for Jerusalem, promising—if it were God's will he would return to them. After reporting to the church at Antioch, he visited the churches of Galatia and Phrygia.

Today's lesson is this quarter's temperance lesson. In these days of vicious evils, we need to be reminded anew of our responsibility to be temperate in all things. This lesson gives an account of the opposition which Paul encountered in Ephesus. The opposition was organized to destroy the teaching of the gospel.

Never in the centuries before, has there been such an all-out attack by evil forces against that which is good, than in our day. The brewery industry, several years ago, launched an all-out attack to place beer in every home in America. This campaign was gauged to have its effect upon the housewife. In many sectors of our country, they accomplished their purpose. This is not the only type of attack by evil forces. There are many others organized against that which is good and holy.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Do you not see in that temple of Diana an expression of what the world needs? It wants a God who can provide food and protection.

2. Diana was a huntress. In pictures on any of the coins she held a stag by the horn with one hand and a bundle of arrows in the other. Diana could not give one pound of meat, or one mouthful of food to the millions of her worshippers.

3. Let Diana have her arrows and her pounds; our God has the sunshine and the showers and the harvests, and in proportion as He is worshiped does plenty reign.

4. So also in the temple of Diana the world expressed its need of a refuge. To it from all parts of the land came debtors who could not pay their debts, and the offenders of the law, that they might escape incarceration. But she sheltered them only a little while and, while she kept them from arrest, she could not change their hearts, and the guilty remained guilty.

5. But our God in Jesus Christ is a refuge into which we may fly from all our sins and be safe for eternity, and the nature is transformed.

6. Then, in that temple were deposited treasures from all the earth for safe keeping. Chrysostom says it was the treasure house of nations; they brought gold and silver and precious stones and coronets from across the sea, and put them under the care of Diana.

7. But again and again were those treasures ransacked, captured, or destroyed. Nero robbed them, the Goths burned them.

8. Diana failed those who trusted her with treasures, but our God, to Him we may entrust all our treasures for this world and the next, and He will not fail any one who puts confidence in Him.—The Defender.

9. Idolaters are more concerned with the "profits" than with the prophets of their religion (Vs. 25).

10. Idolatry is bound to decrease wherever the Word of the Lord increases (Vs. 26).

11. False gods cannot speak for themselves, but the rabble raises an insane cry on their behalf (Vs. 28).

—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Paul spent several months, perhaps more than two years, at home before setting out on his third journey. When he did set out, he took the overland route, stopping and strengthening the churches in the cities through which he traveled. Arriving at Ephesus, he found that Aquila and Priscilla had already begun work for Christ there. Apollos, a convert of John the Baptist, had come to Ephesus preaching that Christ had taken him aside and told him that Christ had already come and been crucified. Paul, upon being introduced to some of the converts of Apollos, led them to Christ and baptized them.—The advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

2. According to Matthew 28:1-15, the chief priests and elders of the Jews attempted to destroy the truth of Christ's resurrection by circulating a falsehood to the effect that his disciples had stolen his body from the tomb. The disciples were then trying to deceive the people by falsely claiming their Master had risen from the dead, or so the chief priests said.

3. Were the twelve disciples of Acts 19:1-7 Christians when Paul first met them? Let's examine the first great test of John 8:24. These twelve men had likely believed the lie that the chief priests had put forth, and so were still looking for the Christ to come. So they were still in sin until they believed Paul's preaching that Christ had already come.

4. The second important test is found in Romans 8:9. These twelve disciples of John the Baptist had not received the Holy Spirit so they were not yet disciples of Jesus Christ. It is upon such distortions of the Scriptures that the doctrine of a second work of grace is constructed.

5. "Now was fulfilled that word of Christ to his disciples, Greater works than these shall he do.' We read of one that was cured by the touch of Christ's garment when it was upon Him, and He perceived that virtue went out of Him; but here were people cured by Paul's garments when they were taken from him. Christ gave His apostles power against unclean spirits and against all manner of sickness (Matthew 10:1), and accordingly we find here that those to whom Paul sent relief had it in both those cases; for the diseases departed from them and the evil spirits went out of them, which were both significant of the great design and blessed effect of the gospel, the healing of spiritual disease, and freeing the souls of men from the power and dominion of Satan."—Selected.

6. Influence of bad books (Vs. 18). David Hume was a believer in the Scriptures until he ransacked the works of infidels to prepare for a debate in which he was to take part. When Voltaire was only five years of age he committed to memory an infidel poem, from the influence of which he never recovered. When Captain Burton, the noted traveler and scientist died, he left a book in manuscript which he expected would be his wife's fortune. He often told her so.

After Captain Burton's death, his widow burned the manuscript sheet by sheet because she felt the work, if printed, would do much harm to public morals.

She sacrificed an income of one hundred thousand dollars as a result of her act.

built his house upon the sand" (Matthew 7:24-26). He claims if we survive or perish depends upon our attitude toward Him.

Recently a distinguished minister declared that, in order to be a Christian, it is only necessary to share the faith of Jesus. This faith he summed up as faith in a fatherly God and in the brotherhood of man. He asserted that our attitude toward Jesus Himself is not of prime importance; however, much truth there may be in that statement, such is not the Christianity of the New Testament. The supreme question of the New Testament is not, "What think ye of the faith of Jesus?" but, "What think ye of Christ?" It is, "Whom say ye that I am?"

In some way I hope I have brought this question to your heart and mine. Whom do we say Jesus is? I am happy in the conviction that there are those of us who find in Him just what the early saints found. He is to many of us a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother. He is our Lord and Master, our personal Saviour. We can sing:

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want;
More than all in thee I find."

THE UNFINISHED PRAYER

Down to sleep. "To s'leep," she murmured;
Now I lay me—say it, darling,"
"Lay me," lisped the tiny lips
Of my daughter, kneeling, bending,
O'er her folded finger-tips.

Down to sleep." "To s'leep," she murmured;
And the little head bent low.
I pray the Lord," I gently added—

"You can say it all, I know."

"P'ay de Lord," the words came faintly—
Fainter still, "my soul to teep."
Then the tired head fairly nodded,
And my child was fast asleep.

But the dewy eyes half opened

When I clasped her to my breast,
And the dear voice gently whispered—
"Mamma, Dod knows all de yest."

Oh! the trusting, sweet confiding
Of the child-heart! Would that I
Thus might trust my Heavenly Father,
He who hears my feeblest cry!

ADJUSTING TO CHANGE

What is your reaction toward the changes that are being made around you during these days of rapid-moving developments? If you are fifty years old or older, you have perhaps witnessed more far-reaching changes than people of any other generation in the history of man. The assertion that the last fifty years have seen as much progress in scientific discovery and invention as was made altogether up to that time may be true. Medical science has made marvelous strides in its effort to combat diseases and other physical ailments. The chemical and physical sciences have given man mechanical control over land, sea and air, with reference to transportation and communication; indications are that he may soon have conquered outer space.

During the last fifty years, social conditions have undergone a radical change. We have seen our own country change from a rural nation to a nation of cities—more of our people today are crowded into cities than are living in the rural areas. This multiplies our problems of living together and makes for a higher crime rate, with a sharp climb in all immorality. Some nations of the world have multiplied in population to the point that a population explosion is predicted within a few years. These are some indications of the social changes which have taken place.

In your lifetime, systems of government have undergone drastic changes. Communism has arisen to dominate a large segment of the world. The nations of the world are divided into two camps, with both sides in possession of powerful weapons capable of destroying all life on the earth. Nationalism has invaded the underprivileged countries to practically eliminate colonialism. The political changes which have already occurred, together with threats and possibilities of others to come, have created no little unrest in the world.

With regard to the changes in theology, the skepticism of the last century ripened into deadly liberalism and modernism during the first half of this century. This liberal influence in theology has driven some groups of fundamental believers to become extreme reactionaries. The writer sincerely hopes that liberalism has passed its peak and is receding toward the center of acceptance of the Word of God as the rule and guide for man's faith and practice. One can also truly hope that the wave of reaction which has motivated the intense witch hunt in the ranks of the fundamentals will soon subside. The fight between liberals and conservatives places the person who desires to go to neither extreme in a precarious position. He is labeled modernist by the extreme fundamentals and reactionary by the extreme liberals.

How are you facing the problems created by these changes? There are several patterns of responses into which people fit themselves, the pattern selected usually being dictated by the general outlook on life of the individual. Let us consider some of the types of responses people make to problems which face them:

1. Some individuals become overwhelmed by the enormity of the problem, develop a defeatist attitude, refuse to tackle the task, and sit down to indulge in daydreaming. Almost invariably, these people become embittered toward life. They lash out at everyone else whose actions come before their critical eyes. They are afraid to apply their time and energy in trying to find a solution; at the same time, they are envious and jealous of others, fearing that others may accomplish something that they dared not try. They sit a long for the good old days and imagine themselves as bright and shining heroes in their world of make-believe.

2. A second type of individual faces the problems before him. He attacks with courage and enthusiasm, only to find that the obstacle does not yield in the face of his efforts. Finding that here is an obstacle which will demand dogged determination, sweat and tears, initiative and individual thinking, together with a lifetime which his task may not even be completed, he climbs on a convenient bandwagon of either left-wing liberalism or right-wing action and sets out on a detour that he hopes will eventually lead him around the obstacle. These bandwagons and detours are always handy for those who choose not to face up to life with practical philosophy of faith in God's Word on the one hand and common sense application of it on the other.

3. Finally, there are the relatively few who will not be deterred from the true course; nor will they become discouraged and embittered by the enormity of the task. They refuse to be flushed by the clamor of the crowds. They do not look for the easy way of following a crowd; they keep plugging away with quiet dignity at the obstacle which stands between them and the goal they know to be right.

Why should not all Christians follow this latter course? The God who made and governs them is directing their activities. The Christ who saved them is by their side to help them solve some of their problems and to show them how to live with those that cannot be solved. Above all else, this life is but a fleeting moment when compared with the eternity toward which we are moving.

God give us men with dedicated hearts and enlightened minds who will concentrate their efforts upon the real problems of life, making such adjustments to changing times as will make their work count for most to the glory of God. Lord, help us that we shall not strain at gnats while we are swallowing camels.

Dedication Of Life

rs. C. D. Clark, Greenville, North Carolina
"And they remembered his words" (Luke 1:8).

THE WORD, dedicate, means to set apart for a purpose. They remember his words refers to the words of Jesus. Before words can be remembered, they must be heard. It is not enough to hear the words of Jesus, nor to remember them. The Bible puts it this way: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves" (James 1:22). His word reaches, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God; Not of works, lest any man should boast" (Ephesians 2:8). It also tells us, ". . . Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Romans 10:17). Furthermore it declares, ". . . without faith it is impossible to please him: . . ." (Hebrews 11:6).

Before people can dedicate themselves to the One who speaks, they must have faith in Him and His words. This faith in Him will give them a desire to know more of Him and His words, so that they might remember or obey them. To help us remember His words, we should "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15). The psalmist said, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Psalm 119:11). Again he says, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Psalm 119:105). Christ Himself said, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye may think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39). On another occasion He said, ". . . Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God" (Matthew 22:29). Bible study, with open minds and receptive hearts, will cause us to grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

A person can remember His words without believing or having faith in them. Sometimes, in remembering His words, one becomes convicted of sin, and may or may not repent of them. (Of course this is the Holy Spirit at work, pleading in mercy.) Peter remembered His words when he had denied Him three times; he went out and wept bitterly. The two men with whom He talked on the Emmaus Road remembered His words. The women, who found the tomb of Jesus empty when they went to anoint His body, remembered His words too. I'm sure those He healed or helped in other way remembered His words also. Many remembered His words; but it was on and after the Day of Pentecost that they remembered His words with new meaning. It was on that day the Holy Spirit made His advent into the world to live and dwell in the hearts of those who accept Christ through faith. Without this experience, people cannot present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God nor dedicate themselves. It is by the grace and mercy of God that this Gift is given. Surely it is reasonable for those of us, who have heard of His great love for us and have accepted Him, to present our lives or dedicate ourselves for His cause. The degree of our dedication depends on our obedience to His Word and His will for us.

God did not save us and leave us to fight our battles here alone. He sent the Holy Spirit to comfort, lead, guide and direct us in the ways of the Lord, and convicts of sin. In obedience to His will, we are saved; then He continues to direct us in the right paths. God has made possible the provision for our salvation. If we are not saved, we can blame no one but ourselves; for it is because we have failed to hear the pleadings of the Holy Spirit, have hardened our hearts and have rejected Him. John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The Bible tells us ". . . many are called, but few are chosen" (Matthew 22:14). Perhaps we have different opinions as to what this verse means. I once thought of it as meaning that God called many but few accepted His call. I thought of it in the light of the wide and broad way and the strait and narrow way. Later I decided it meant that many were called and did accept Christ, but few were chosen for a definite work or purpose. If either of the two views is the correct meaning, perhaps it is the latter; for we notice all through the Bible that God chose certain men to lead the people or do some great work for Him. He did this not only before Christ came and dwelt upon the earth, but also after He went back to heaven to be with His Father; and He is continuing to do so, even at the present time. Of all those mentioned in the New Testament, probably Peter, John and Paul are known to be the greatest. We know that those whom God chose were dedicated because of all the trials, persecutions and sufferings they endured, counting it joy to be able to suffer for the cause of Christ. Many were even willing to sacrifice their very life, of whom Stephen was the first.

I think those God has chosen should dedicate themselves to full-time service to their calling and not have to do other work in order to earn a livelihood. The Bible tells us that a laborer is worthy of his hire. If those of us who are called would fully dedicate ourselves to Him and His cause, those who are the chosen would have no need of having to supplement their calling to make ends meet. When Christ was here, He asked this question, ". . . when the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). As we think of this, we might wonder if it could be a lack of faith in God on the part of those who are chosen, when they do this.

When God saved us, whether we were the called or the chosen, He saved us for a purpose—that was for us to show forth His love by making known His plan for our salvation, either by word, deed or act. How can we do this if we do not remember His words and dedicate ourselves to the One who made it possible for us to be brought back into full, complete relationship with God? We have His Spirit and His Word to help us in this great task of evangelizing the world. This is a task that has to be perpetuated. Therefore, each generation has to be evangelized. Those who know Him must make Him known to those who know Him not. This gives all a work to do—not just the chosen but the called as well. If we neglect to do this, soon the people will forget His words and will not know of His power to save. We may think the little we can do won't matter; but if we do it in the right spirit, He is able to bless and multiply it. We are to use the talents He has given us, whether they be small or great, for His cause; in this way we may glorify His name. If we live dedicated lives, we will be His witnesses to a lost and dying world. Our lives will be lights that shine in dark places.

His words are life; they may be used to convict, to cleanse, to heal, to strengthen,

CARPE DIEM

Albert M. Ezell, Searcy, Arkansas

ONE of the greatest, and saddest, conditions of life is to see one so bound and straitened by dogmas and tenets that he becomes insensible to any world outside his own small orbit. The horizons of life are only determined by the belief one has and the horizon of your world will be removed to ever greater distances, and the extent of your accomplishments will reach out to virgin fields.

It is common to overlook what is near by keeping the eye fixed on something remote. In the same manner, present opportunities are neglected; and attainable good is slighted by minds busied in extensive ranges, intent upon future advantages. Life, however short, is made shorter by waste of time.

It is the common characteristic of man to see only the outer appearance and overlook the finer qualities that lie so often below the surface. Unless man had utilized that explorative trend, we would still be repelled by the bur of the chestnut, and look with loathing disdain upon the pearl oyster.

There is nothing so dangerous as to neglect opportunity. I do not agree with the phrase, "Opportunity knocks but once," because it has knocked countless times for each of us, if we could but recognize it for what it is. We fail to see the regal robes that are so often covered by the rags of a beggar.

All Christians know that the greatest opportunity of all—that of forgiveness of sins—is not withdrawn after one visitation, but often returns, again and again, to warn us and to plead with us. Still we can never tell when will be the final visit the Holy Spirit will pay us; it behooves us all not to neglect to lay hold on our opportunities at their first appearance.

As the Latin title of this article states (enjoy, or make use of, the present day; seize the opportunity), we should remember the May of life blooms only once; it would be so much better to take the initiative and seek out our opportunities in the springtime of life, than to wait till the short bleak days of winter when our path of life has grown short, soon to terminate at the deep river which is the end of this life.

If we have lived wisely and well; if we have grasped every opportunity to do good and share the load of our neighbor; if we have let each day of our life be something of an example for good to posterity; if we have prayed that each coming tomorrow might shed just a little more of the light of understanding in our hearts; if we have sought for advent of a universal love and tolerance that will knit more closely together the hearts of all men everywhere; then we have not missed the greatest opportunity of all—that of dedicating ourselves to our God and our fellow men.

Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation

(Number Eight in a Series)

The Reverend L. H. Wethington has been memorialized through the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation of Mount Olive College by a gift of $100 from the Church Finance Association, Inc. The following resolution was passed January 12 at the annual meeting of the association at Pleasant Grove Church, Pikeville, North Carolina:

Whereas: The late Elder L. H. Wethington was one of the incorporators of the Church Finance Association, Inc. and served as secretary of the association until declining health forced him to retire in the fall of 1944, and

Whereas: We desire to express our appreciation for his very useful service and to help perpetuate his memory,

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That, in appreciation for his service, we place his name on the Memorial Plaque of the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation at Mount Olive College by making a donation of $100 to said foundation in his memory.

2. That a copy of this resolution be sent to the family; a copy sent to Mount Olive College with the donation; a copy sent to the Free Will Baptist for publication; and a copy be placed in our minutes.

"Our Father, Stalin!"

When the atheistic program was being introduced in the Russian schools, the Communists employed subtle, Satanic methods to teach the children unbelief in God. The instructor would say, "Now, children, let's imagine we have no bread and are starving. Let's ask God to give us bread. Let's say the prayer, 'Our Father which are in heaven . . . Give us this day our daily bread.' See, children, nothing has happened. We are still hungry and without bread. Now let's change our prayer, and say, 'Our father, Stalin, who are in Moscow, give us this day our daily bread.'" As the children said the words, a trapdoor in the ceiling in the room sprang open and loaves of bread fell in abundance upon the children, the desks, and the floor!

How long will God let arrogant, blatantly-defiant man go on insulting Him?—Gospel Herald.

Report of National Sunday School Board

Paul Woolsey, Chairman

THE National Sunday School Board is now, progressively and aggressively beginning what it deems to be the basic and fundamental work of any such board—the general promotion of Sunday school work throughout the denomination. Rev. Roger Reeds, secretary-treasurer of the Sunday School Board, who along with the chairman of the board has been charged with the promotional and publicity work of the board will direct this work with close consultation with the chairman of the board. The board has designated the month of March as Sunday School Month ("Marching to Sunday School in March"). The goal of your Sunday school board is fourfold: (1) Increasing the efficiency of each and every Sunday school in the denomination; (2) increasing the attendance of each school from the smallest to largest; (3) raising funds to retire the total indebtedness of the National Sunday School Board.

BRINGING UP TO DATE THE FINANCIAL STATUS OF THE BOARD

It was reported at the National Association in July that the liabilities of the Sunday School Board were $29,000 and the assets were $15,000, leaving a deficit of $14,000 after subtracting the assets from the liabilities. The board has decided that it would be unwise to sell the office equipment which was listed among the assets. There were several supplies on hand that are not usable by the board at this time; however, some of this can probably be used later. By February 1, our total indebtedness will not exceed $13,000. By that date all of our indebtedness but $2,542.72 will be covered by four notes, one made for three months, two for six months and one for a year (from the middle of December until the middle of January). Since your board took over in July, every note has been renewed or rather substantial payment been made and new notes for smaller sums negotiated with interest paid in advance. There was one exception. A note for one year without interest was held by Scripture Press for $2,800. We were able to borrow the money and make full payment to Scripture Press.

This slogan has been suggested for our March campaign: "1,300 New Teachers, 13,000 New Members and 13,000 Dollars" to retire debt and release board for promotional work. This drive can and must, by God's help and support of every Free Will Baptist, be a success. Pray for this.

Are You Thinking

by Edwin Raymond Anderson

“. . . What think ye of Christ? . . .”
Matthew 22:42).

WHILE addressing a graduation exercise in a local school some time ago, the principal speaker made this very suggestive and striking remark, “Always remember that while you can go through life with a wooden arm, or with a wooden leg, you can never really go through life, with a wooden head!”

That is quite a significant remark, and one wonders whether the speaker realized the fullest implications of it. For there are very serious implications, and that, in the most important realm of all—spiritual truths, the things marked of eternal consequence. Whether he realized it or not, the speaker, in that remark, pointed up one of the greatest perils in the world today!

For beyond all shadow of doubt, the god of this world (2 Corinthians 4:4) is tremendously busy and alas! highly successful, in the devilish business of so occupying men and women with the things of sight-and-sound, that they are hardly left with any time, or inclination to think!

Our age may well be called, “The Thinkless Times.” You have only to look around for proof—radio and television, so-called comic books and photo magazines, digest periodicals and cheap thrillers. They all add up to what has been aptly said, “They make it so deadly easy not to think!” Even the world recognizes the peril, after a fashion, for one of their own has prophesied in bitter jest, “The next generation will have eyes as big as cantaloupes and brains the size of a split pea.”

A wise man once remarked, “One-half of the ills of life come because men are unwilling to sit down quietly for 30 minutes to think through all the possible consequences of their acts.” And I declare that if that be true for one-half of earths ills, it is tragically true for all of those plagues which press against and poison the soul because of sin (Romans 5:12). Men are unwilling to think. They really do not want to think; they are afraid to think! And the devil is always right at hand to helpfully aid, them in their tragic thoughtlessness, by teasing and tickling and thrilling them with the sights and sounds of this sorry sphere.

It is more than high time for some deep thinking. And how sharply this is pointed up by that horrible human heedlessness in not squarely, honestly facing up to that question-supreme, “. . . What think ye of Christ? . . .” (Matthew 22:42). Here is a question which cannot be evaded, nor excused, nor evaporated, nor emasculated! It is pressing, pregnant, probing, persistent, and simply will not down. It may not forever be dismissed by lightness nor frivolity. Sooner, or later it shall demand its answer. What shall be your response?

It is more than high time to think seriously, truly, deeply about His commanding, yet compassionate call, “Come now, and let us reason together, . . .” (Isaiah 1:18). The Lord calls for definite reasoning, for solemn thinking upon solemn, spiritual vicinities. It is for you to come—and with the welcome, there is attached the warning! You must come now. There is no possible guarantee for any other moment—or second (2 Corinthians 6:2), than this very present one!

The Lord would have you so think, that you might truly turn unto Himself (Romans 10:9, 10). Such thinking and such turning will surely work the great transformation (2 Corinthians 5:17), and by thus being born again (John 3), you will be surely heaven-marked as the wise man, indeed—and that for all eternity.

What think ye of Christ? What a solemn, searching question for each Christless soul in these terrible, thinkless times. Remember that there shall be plenty of thinking time in the terrible blackness of darkness for ever (Jude 1:13)—and alas! but where each remembrance-thought shall but add to the everlasting torment. Far better to close in with Christ (John 5:24), and be truly, gloriously saved (Acts 16:32)! —Gospel Herald.

Attention Cragmont Supporters

Dear Friends of Cragmont:

At the last annual Stockholders' Meeting of Cragmont Assembly, Inc., I was elected president of the Board of Directors. I realize that I will not be able to fill the place of my predecessor, Brother James A. Evans, but by your help, your prayers and financial support, and by God's grace, I will do my best for Cragmont while I serve you and your assembly in this capacity.

I personally want to make an appeal to all the churches of our beloved denomination in our state. Put Cragmont on your list of enterprises, for consistent financial support. I am deeply concerned about your retreat at Cragmont. I long to see it become a beautiful haven of rest for the body and soul, where our people from the various parts of the state may spend their vacations, amidst the beautiful majestic mountains, and be proud of their assembly, and that they are Free Will Baptists.

This dream can become a reality; but, if it is to become a reality, Cragmont must have consistent monthly support. If each church in the state, would send a small monthly check for the support of Cragmont, we could soon have a nice enough assembly for anybody. However, this cannot be so, and will not be so, until all of us begin to give regularly to this worthy cause. I have been told that our church at Swannanoa, is the only church in the state that sends a monthly check for the support of Cragmont. Please don't think that I am boasting about this, God forbid, but I think this can be an example. It is the monthly or regular giving that is a must, if your assembly is to be developed to take care of the new, urgent needs, that it could be serving.

Once your assembly is developed to where it could take care of the now available attendants, it would be self-supporting. As of now, and for the next few years, your consistent support is a must, if your assembly is to be what it should be, and fill the much-needed place in the life of our youth, and the great need of the entire denomination.

Prayerfully your servant for Cragmont,
Wayne W. Smith,
President, Cragmont, Inc.

Attention N. C. League Directors

Dear League Directors:

Would you like to see Cragmont remain closed this summer? If not, we must do something about it right away.

The Reverend Wayne Smith, president of the Board of Stockholders of Cragmont Assembly, says that Cragmont must have $3,000 by March 15 if it is opened this year. The new motel units must be completed and the old building must be repaired.

Since our state league convention is one of the sponsoring bodies and since so many of our leaguers have received blessings from attending the league week each summer, I urge you to receive special offerings in your leagues for Cragmont. Send them directly to me before March 15. I will send them to Mrs. Moye because I have assumed the responsibility of raising a minimum of $100. The leagues should give at least $400 of the above amount.

Prepare now to attend the North Carolina State League Convention, which will meet at the First Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville, North Carolina, April 28, 29, 1960. An interesting program is being planned.

Also, prepare to send a contestant for the Intermediate Sword Drill. Watch The Free Will Baptist for instructions from your State Sword Drill Leader about registering your candidate.

Yours in Christ,
 Miss Leah McGlohon

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Do you think there is anything wrong about a Christian's carrying life insurance? Someone has suggested to me that at the least harm it shows a lack of faith.—Joseph Parker, Starved Rock, Illinois.

Answer: No! Not the carrying of life insurance in itself more than any other business pursuit. There, of course, could be a wrong motive in such an investment, but this may be said of any other, such as investing in real estate, stocks, bonds, or any other kind of assets.

A person usually invests in a life insurance as a method of providing for his loved ones. This is never wrong if a good motive is thus expressed. "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel" (1 Timothy 5:8). This is a modern means by which one may make provision for his household in a legitimate, businesslike manner. I have read of men that were so engrossed in the business pursuit over which they had supervision that they neglected to invest in life insurance who died while comparatively young, leaving debts enough to absorb all their business assets and leaving nothing for their wives and children. This is what I regard as a modern tragedy. Even a small insurance policy to take care of hospital and burial expenses is far better than none. In one case I knew of, such a policy would have prevented suffering and embarrassment.

My feeling about this vital question does not mean that, if there are those who feel differently, they should not settle it with the Lord, because I think they should. Even if such a settlement means that they have no insurance at all in order to maintain a clear conscience, I believe that in such a case, however, the person should not carry any. There are other means by which reasonable provisions may be made for one's family, such as legitimate stocks, bonds and other property purchases. If and when a person decides against insurance, he should use other means to provide for his household. While one is developing a conscience on this, he should search the Scriptures on the subject and be sure that his convictions are in keeping with them. There have been groups of people, including certain Jews of different ages, that would not marry until some sort of a financial arrangement could be made by which to take care of the family a reasonable length of time in case the bread winner suddenly deceased. I am of the opinion that the situation would be greatly enhanced in America were all grooms cautious enough to thus secure their intended family.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.
(PSALM 119:105)

EFFECTUAL PRAYER

"Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16).

Prayer is essential to the Christian. No subject or practice is of greater importance. Prayer coupled with faith forms the channel through which our spiritual power comes, and through which our greatest blessings flow to us from God.

In the following article by Dr. Andrew Murray, we can learn, not only the importance of prayer, but, also, the importance of the continuing in prayer, in accordance to God's will, until we receive the answer:

James knew that a faith which obtains from God is not the fruit of human nature; therefore he adds that the prayer must be fervent. Only such can be efficacious. In this he stands upon the example of Elijah, a man of like nature as we are, drawing the inference that our prayer can and ought to be of the same nature as his. How then did Elijah pray? This will throw some light upon what the prayer of faith should be.

Elijah received from God the promise that rain was about to fall upon the earth (1 Kings 18:1), and he declared this to Ahab. Strong in the promise of his God, he mounts Carmel to pray (1 Kings 18:4; James 5:18). He knows, he believes that God's will is to send rain; nevertheless he must pray, or the rain will not come. His prayer is no empty form; it is a real power, the efficacy of which is about to make itself felt in heaven. God wills that it shall rain, but rain will only come at Elijah's request, a request with faith and perseverance until the appearance of the first cloud in the sky. In order that the will of God shall be accomplished, this will must on one side be expressed by a promise, and on the other must be received and laid hold of by the believer who prays. He, therefore, must persevere in prayer that he may show to God that his faith expects an answer, and will not grow weary until it is obtained.

Jesus Himself teaches us to pray with faith which counts on the answer of God; He says to us; "All things whatsoever ye pray for and ask for, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them" (Mark 11:24, 1 V.). After the prayer of faith which receives beforehand that which God has promised, comes the prayer of perseverance which does not lose sight of that which has been asked until God has fulfilled His promise (1 Kings 18:43). There may be some obstacle which hinders the fulfillment of the promise, whether on the side of God and His righteousness (Deuteronomy 8:18), or on the side of Satan and his constant opposition to the plans of God, something which may still impede the answer to the prayer (Daniel 10:12, 13). It may also be that our faith needs to be purified (Matthew 15:22-28). Whatever it may be, our faith is called to persevere until the answer comes. He who prays six times fervently and stops there, when he ought to have prayed seven times (2 Kings 13:18, 19), deprives himself of the answer to his prayer.

Perseverance in prayer, a perseverance which strengthens the faith of the believer against all which may seem opposed to the answer is a miracle; it is one of the impenetrable mysteries of the life of faith. Does not our Lord say to us that the Saviour's redemption of one is in very deed His friend, a member of His body, and that the government of the world and the gifts of divine grace depend in some sense upon his prayers? Prayer, therefore, is no vain form. It is the work of the Holy Spirit, who intercedes here on earth in us and by us, and as such it is as efficacious, as indispensable as the work of the Son interceding for us before the throne of God. It might seem strange that after having prayed with the certainty of being heard, and having seen therein the will of God, we should still need to continue in prayer. Nevertheless, it is so. In Gethsemane, Jesus prayed three times in succession. On Carmel, Elijah prayed seven times; an if we believe the promise of God without doubting, shall pray until we receive an answer. Both the importunate friend at midnight and the widow who besought the unjust judge are examples of perseverance in seeking the end in view. Faith which ceases to pray, or which is allowed to relax in its fervor, cannot appropriate that which God has nevertheless given. Let not our faith in the promises of Scripture be shaken by those things which are as yet beyond our reach. God's promise remains the same. Let the prayer of Elijah strengthen our faith. Let us remember we have to imitate them who through faith and patience inherit the promises (Hebrews 6:12). If we are to persevere in prayer, its fruit will be ways more abundant, more evident, and we shall obtain that which shall bring glory to God.—Selected.

"I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting" (1 Timothy 2:8).

DID YOU PAY GOD?

by L. Everette Ballard

I MET him on the street and he told me of the prosperous year he had had. "I got out of debt," said he. "I paid a note off my farm that had been running a long time, and I paid a bill that I owed at the hospital, and I paid an old debt at the store."

"Did you pay God?" I asked.

He looked at me in a strange sort of way. "Pay God?" asked he.

"Yes," I said. "You know according to the teachings of the Bible in the eternal law of God, the law of Moses, and according to the words of Christ Himself, we owe God the tenth of all our income. Did you pay Him His tithe?"

"How could I," asked he, "when I owed all these debts, and these people needed their money?"

And I said, "God needed His money mighty bad too. Last year a large number of missionaries had to be withdrawn from the foreign fields where they were badly needed, because there was not money in God's treasury on earth to take care of their needs. In the homeland many churches went without pastors, and many others did not have the services they needed. Also hundreds of little children without parents were turned away from the Christian orphanages because there was not money to provide a place for them. And all this was because many thousands of church members did like you. They paid other people, but they did not pay God."

"Perhaps I should have paid God His tithe first," said he.

"Yes," said I, "God should always come first."

"But if I had paid God first," asked he, "what would the hospital and the merchant have done?"

"Well," I replied, "thousands of people have obeyed God's law and put His claim for the tithe first, and I have never heard of a person who has sincerely and consistently done this but who has been able to testify that he got along better with his earthly obligations as a result. God has promised thirty-eight times in the Bible to bless and prosper those who obey Him in the matter of their substance, and He keeps His promises. He would have made good those promises to you as He has to others."

Then he declared, in a tone that denotes earnestness, "From now on God shall come first. I will bring my tithe to the storehouse of God, and try Him, and see if He will not pour out a blessing upon me."

And I said, "Amen!"

A Time to Praise

One day Gypsy Smith went to visit an old gypsy aunt, who had cared for him after his mother's early death, and who was lying on her deathbed. "Auntie," said he, as he entered the gypsy wagon, "shall I kneel down and ask God to bless you?" But the woman replied, "No, my boy; kneel down and thank God because He has blessed me." —Selected.

IN WHAT WAY DOES GOD LEAD?

(Romans 8:14)

1. God leads today by His Word (2 Peter 1:19).

We have God's complete revelation (1 Samuel 3:1; James 1:21; 2 Timothy 3:15-17).

2. God leads today by prayer (Acts 10:9).

Great doors have been opened by prayer (Acts 9:11; 12:5; 13:2, 3).

3. God leads by closing doors (Acts 16:7).

Paul's thorn in the flesh (2 Corinthians 12:7-9; Acts 8:1-3; Jude 1:3).

4. God leads today by opening doors (Acts 16:9, 10).

At times in an unusual way, and place (Acts 8:26; 10:19).

5. God leads today by giving a vision of the need (Acts 16:9).

Paul says the need of Israel (Romans 10:1; Isaiah 6:1-8; Matthew 9:36; Mark 16:15; Romans 1:14-17).

6. God leads today by opportunities at hand (Acts 16:13).

Paul at Athens made use of his time (Acts 17:16; Ecclesiastes 9:10; Acts 26:8).

7. God leads today by His Holy Spirit (John 16:13).

All that I have mentioned are connected with the Spirit (2 Peter 1:21; Acts 1:1, 2).

Conclusion

Leadings depend upon you being "in the way" (Genesis 24:27).

If God leads you may depend upon the way being right (Psalm 107:7).

Spirit-leading always brings liberty and victory (Galatians 5:18).

NOTE OF THANKS

"We would like to express our thanks and appreciation to the churches, Sunday schools, auxiliaries and all individuals who remembered us in such wonderful ways during the Christmas season and all through the past years. Thanks again, and the Lord bless each one."—Mrs. Martha Braxton and Son (Walter), Winterville, North Carolina.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

"We have been slow in getting around to writing our letter of thanks to Miss Fleta Wood for the nice article she sent in to the paper some time ago. We have known this young lady from childhood, and now she is an outstanding school teacher with splendid results in her line of work.

"We did not know that we have so many precious friends until we celebrated our 'Golden Jubilee.' Fifty years in the ministry is a long time for God to let a minister live and carry His blessed Word to so many parts of the country. We want to thank all that had a part in making the day a success. It was a blessed day that will never be forgotten. We also want to thank the editor for such nice articles in The Free Will Baptist. May God bless all of you dear ones. How we would love to go to your homes in person and thank every one of you, but as we cannot do this, you will have to accept this letter for your very own thank-you note."—Rev. H. M. and Lizzie McAdams, Route 3, Huntsville, Texas.

GOD IS THERE

When your Christian duty calls you
To the sick and to the sad,
And you go to take some sunshine
And to make somebody glad,
You may have the sweet assurance
As you breathe an earnest prayer,
That the place where you are going
God the Father will be there.

If you want to help the offcast
Find the pathway to the goal,
Or the wretched, poor lost sinner
Seek salvation for his soul;
Or someone who seems quite hopeless,
And for whom there's little care,
Go and look for such dear people
And our God will meet you there.

In the prisons of our country
Men are found behind the bars,
Who have fallen from their manhood,
In whose lives are many scars,
So they need someone to help them,
Who some Christian love may share,
Then go forth and help the prisoner
And you'll find the Saviour there.

Or if you are burdened heavy
With the cares of friends and home,
Or temptations, tests and trials
Where you live and where you roam,
Don't surrender faith and courage,
Neither quit the place of prayer,
For the God of earth and heaven
Always meets His children there.

—Rev. Walter E. Isenhour

LETTER OF THANKS

"Will you please run this letter of appreciation in your next issue for our home, due to the fact that we have tried to reach each individual and church by mail that had a part in making our past Christmas one of the nicest that the children have ever enjoyed, for which we are truly grateful, but a number of our letters have been returned for various reasons. Some of the people have moved and left no forwarding address and others were returned for various other reasons.

"Space will not permit me to mention all of those who took part in our Christmas gifts, but we are especially grateful to those who contributed a gift to each child in the home. Among those giving these gifts were Valley Forge Free Will Baptist Church of Elizabethton, Tennessee, of which Rev. C. J. Higgins is pastor, who took the lead for gifts, giving, in addition to a gift to each child, approximately $600.00 worth of new furniture, silverware and cooking utensils. Hillcrest Church of Maryville, Tennessee gave the home a new Maytag washing machine. Others giving a gift to each child were Bear Point League of Sessor, Illinois; Cofer's Chapel of Nashville, Tennessee; Dungannon Free Will Baptist Church of Dungannon, Virginia; Thomas Memorial Free Will Baptist Church of Huntingtor, West Virginia; Newport First of Newport Tennessee. Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Humphreys, American Legion Post, Police and Fireman's Association, Youth Builders, Elk Club, and Lions Club, all of Greeneville Tennessee, gave a gift to each child. Fellowship Free Will Baptist Church and Eastern Star Church of Kingsport, Tennessee; New Harmony Mission of Missouri; and Fairview Church of Knoxville were also among those giving gifts enough for each child of the home.

"There are many others who I would like to mention personally if space would permit; but, since we cannot, I can only say thank you from the depths of our hearts for a wonderful Christmas and pray that God's richest blessings will always be upon each of you in a great way. This does not include cash gifts, but we are also grateful for the total receipts for December which amounted to $7,020.82."—H. C. Burgess, Superintendent, Free Will Baptist Home for Children, Route 9, Greeneville, Tennessee

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

"My address has changed from Micro North Carolina, to 313 Turner Street, Beaufort, North Carolina."—Rev. P. C. Wiggins

Worth Repeating

"I was staying one day at an inn in one of the valleys of northern Italy, where the floor was dreadfully dirty," said Charles H. Spurgeon. "I had it in mind to advise the landlady to scrub it, but when I perceived that it was made of mud I reflected that the more she scrubbed the worse it would be. The man who knows his own heart soon perceives that his corrupt nature admits of no improvement; there must be a new nature implanted, or the man will be only 'washed in deeper stains.' 'Ye must be born again.' Ours is not a case for mending, but for making new."—Gospel Herald.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST

Very often I receive letters from good old-fashioned Free Will Baptists who have moved from North Carolina to other parts of the United States, saying, "Brother Griffin, we cannot find a Free Will Baptist church near by." Then they often go on to say, "We are attending _____ church." Then they open their hearts and let us the low down on what they experience at these churches.

Recently, I received a letter from a dear Christian lady, who was very consecrated and dear in my Sunday school, saying, "We are attending a church where the preacher preaches history and news matters, and says very little about the Bible. My husband has become disgusted and says that the messages are dead. They have no life."

This is not only true in the city where this good lady and her family live, but it is true in many sections and right here in the good old state of North Carolina. I hear it very often said, "We hear but little Bible preaching." Praise the Lord that we do have people in this modernistic age who want to hear the gospel preached as it is given to us in the Word of God.

THE TRUE GOSPEL CONDEMNS

When the true gospel is preached, it condemns the sin of mankind. This condemnation is not received by the natural mind of man. Man rather have some soft peddling, something that will allow man to continue in sin without stirring up the conscience. When we are stirred to the point that we see our sins, we must make a decision one way or the other. There are so many who want to go along without being disturbed. When Jesus cast the evil spirits out of the man who lived among the tombs, the people wanted Jesus to leave their coasts (Matthew 28-34). The preaching and healing power of Christ was getting into their business. They would have rather had their hogs than to see the man saved. They wanted to protect their hogs and let human beings suffer. We have the same class of people in the world today. Yes, I am sure that we have people, who are even professing Christians and belong to some church, that do not really want a revival. That is, they don't want an old-fashioned revival that gets into crooked business and its crooked operations, and cleans up the business. They had rather make money and use it for selfish purposes than to help get people saved from an eternal hell. They sing "O, How I Love Jesus," but in reality they are like those Jesus talked to when He said, "Ye draw nigh unto Me with your mouth, but ye are far away in your heart." Here is what the Master said, "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matthew 15:8, 9).

THE TRUE GOSPEL SAVES WHEN BELIEVED

Paul said, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; . . ." (Romans 1:16). Notice that Paul says the gospel is the power of God. Whenever the power of God is manifested, sinful man is disturbed. When Jonah went through the streets of the city of Nineveh, the people from the king down to the common people were stirred and repented. They called on the Lord, and were saved from physical death. So God saves when His Word is preached and accepted by those who hear the message. However, sadly we say, many hear the Word, are convicted of sin and made to feel uneasy, but fight off the work of the Holy Ghost, refuse to accept it, and go away from Christ and His Word. "He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:11, 12).

SAD REPORTS

We take notice of the reports that are sent to the union meetings, etc., and often we hear the report, "Received, none." Many times a whole year has passed and there has been no converts—none saved and added to the church. What is the cause? Well, there are many things that hinder. One can be the spiritual condition of the church. There may be envy and hatred, or worldliness, or a lack of preaching the Word of God. All these things and many more are used by Satan to keep people from seeking the Lord. We read in the Word of God where the enemies of Christ cried out saying (in speaking of Paul and Silas), ". . . These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also" (Acts 17:6). The gospel of Christ had stirred up the devil's work. Paul and Silas were not afraid to condemn sinfulness and to lift up the Christ who condemned sin in the lives of man. They told them of the peace and rest, and how sweet and dear it was of the Master to say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee."

So Jesus had power here on earth to forgive sins, and He promised that if we would repent, believe on Him, and ask for forgiveness, He would forgive us. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

May God help us who preach that we may follow the admonition of the apostle, Paul, when he said, "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Timothy 4:1-4).

Thousands upon thousands are turning from the gospel of Christ to Modernism, Russellism, Jehovah's Witnesses, and other religions that are contrary to the teachings of Christ. So I exhort all preachers to preach the Bible—there are yet people who will accept it.

"I am so playing fair," yelled Joy. "You girls just aren't turning the rope so I can skip right."

The other girls looked at each other and made a face, then started to turn the rope again. "One hundred two, one hundred four," they counted. Then Joy stumbled and missed a beat.

"I'm next," said Mary Lee.

"Okay, you play that way if you want to," said Joy. "But I'm taking my rope in until Julie and Marie learn to turn right. I'll go and play house with the smaller girls. They'll be glad to see me."

"Whatever is wrong with Joy Smythe?" asked Mary Lee. "She used to be such a nice girl."

"I know," answered Julie, "but now she wants to boss everything. Marie got one hundred fifty-eight in skipping and Joy said we weren't turning right and got three chances to beat that number. She's cross because someone got more than she did. She's a real spoilsport."

"Sure you can play with us, Joy," Diane Nichols sorted out more clothes for her big doll. "You can have the side porch for your house and come to visit us from there."

All went well for awhile. The young mothers were busy with so many things to do. They had to go shopping for their dolls, visit others and then play church.

Joy was enjoying herself very much, until coming around the corner of the house to see the other girls, the stroller she was pushing upset, and Diane's big doll fell out on the walk. The lovely eyes of the doll were knocked back into her head. Diane's eyes filled with tears but Joy just said, "Oh, she wasn't much of a doll, anyway, not nearly as nice as the ones I have in my room." And she started for home.

Not knowing what to do, she walked around until she found her brother Ken playing marbles with some other boys.

"Let me play too, Ken. I know how to play marbles real well."

"Aw, go on. We don't want girls playing with us," said a boy named Bob.

"Ken, you let me play or I'll tell Mother you took the pie that old Mrs. Cook set on the window sill to cool."

Ken tried to smile as he said, "You can have my turn, Joy." This was fun. She'd get in on one of their games more often. For a while she was winning, but soon began to lose interest as the boys started to take her marbles.

"Joy!" It was her mother calling. "Please come and help me."

"Always having to help," grumbled Joy. "I'll just not go for a while. After all, Doris is seven and she can help Mother sometimes. I just don't have much fun."

Joy had soon lost all her marbles to the boys so she went into the house quietly. She hoped to slip unnoticed to her own room.

Mrs. Smythe was talking on the phone and her voice drifted through the hallway.

"I'm very sorry that you've had so much trouble with Joy, Mrs. Brady. I didn't know that she was ripping hymn books and putting gum between pages at Sunday school."

"Here we go again," thought Joy. "Why do I always get the blame for everything?"

Her mother was speaking again. "When our first girl was born we were so happy. She brought such joy into our lives, we thought that 'Joy' was a suitable name for her. I'm sure she doesn't mean to misbehave so badly, Mrs. Brady, but we'll see that she is punished. We pray for her at family altar and do hope the love of our heavenly Father will enter her heart."

Joy slipped upstairs. She had brought joy into her home, so that was why she had been given that name! And to think she had been so selfish—but her parents were praying and God loved her.

She opened the bottom drawer of her dresser and brought forth a plaque her Aunt Enid had sent her two years before. Printed clearly was J for Jesus, O for Others and Y for You. Aunt Enid had penned a little note at the bottom. "May your life always be as your name, Jesus first, others second and yourself last. Then you will know real joy."

Joy pondered over the words for a long time. No, she hadn't been very nice lately, but it wasn't too late now to accept the love of God. She knelt by her bed and asked Jesus to come into her heart and make her a new girl.

A smiling Joy descended the stairway and made her way to the kitchen. "I'll set the table for you Mom," she said. "Then I'll take the baby for a walk."

Mrs. Smythe looked surprised a moment.

Then she understood. This was indeed Joy the heavenly Father had given in their home.—My Pleasure.

to make new, and do many, many other things. They are to be used as a sword and a shield, or a lamp and a light. The good part about remembering His words and dedicating oneself to Him is that it may begin now. His Word tells us, "... behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Corinthians 6:2).

I'm sure this is good news to those whose lives are far spent and who may not have known His words, or who may have remembered them in vain. Better still is it to heed to this Scripture: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them" (Ecclesiastes 12:1). We would do well to remember His words, dedicate ourselves, and, in His Spirit, instill them in the hearts of those who will remember them and do the same after we have departed our reward.

Slighting a Duty

"Here in this back room you have made things look very neat," said the storekeeper to his young clerk.

"Well, I thought it was good enough. The customers seldom come back here," Joe replied.

"That won't do," said Mr. Foss sharply. Then in a softer tone, "You must get ideas like that out of your head, Joe, if you want to be a success in life. That 'good enough' isn't much better than 'bad enough.'"

Mr. Foss had Joe do all the cleaning again.

Some girls are as bad as Joe. They do not sweep in the corners or dust under things. Some boys get their jobs done as quickly as possible. They say things will do even though they are not well done. Such boys and girls will not become the useful men and women God wants them to become.

Now is the time to correct this error if it is one of yours.—Selected.

Davis, N. C.—On Sunday night, January 10, at the regular Sunday evening service, the new officers for 1960 of the Davis Woman's Auxiliary were installed in a very impressive candlelight ceremony.

The altar was covered with greenery. Above was erected an old rugged cross. The officers, to be installed, entered the auditorium from the vestibule of the church, carrying Bibles, and dressed in white choir vestments. Mrs. Florence Davis was acting installation officer.

Mrs. Lessie Mae Smith sang, "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken," just prior to the charge given by Mrs. Davis. As each officer's name was called, she knelt in front of the altar; and after having been given her charge, pledged her loyalty to Christ and her auxiliary.

After each officer had given her pledge, the members of the congregation knelt at the altar, pledging their support and prayers to the Davis Woman's Auxiliary and its new officers.

After a prayer of dedication had been offered, everyone stood as the choir sang, "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone."

The following officers were installed:

- Mrs. Lenora Hill, President
- Mrs. Edna Davis, Vice-President
- Mrs. Pearl Alligood, Corresponding Secretary
- Miss Virginia Willis, Recording Secretary
- Mrs. Eleanor Salter, Treasurer
- Mrs. Virginia VanKluyve, Study Course Chairman
- Mrs. Sarah Styron, Youth Chairman

- Mrs. Virginia Davis, Program-Prayer Chairman

The auxiliary, together with its new officers, would like every Baptist reader to pray for us that God will use us in a great way, and that His name might be honored throughout the coming new year.

World Day of Prayer

"For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matthew 18:20). This one verse of Scripture is sufficient reason for our wholehearted participation in the N.A.E. sponsored World Day of Prayer observance on March 4. There are uncounted other promises, but this one verse is reason enough for our coming together to pray.

As Christians undertake to live for and serve Christ in this age, they must prepare themselves for the battle. No preparation is more needful than prayer. Not only must the Christian prepare for his own strength and defense, but for the bulwarking of all the saints around the world.

Is it too much to expect world revival as a result? Is it too much to expect the iron heel of Romanism and godless Communism to be conquered following this united prayer? Is it too much to expect Christians to re-experience a genuine love for God's Word and its truths?

Prayer is sacrifice. But what a glorious sacrifice! Why are we so reluctant to make it? Christ, the Christ who saved our souls, the One in whom we trust, the Christ that lives in our hearts, set the example of sacrificing Himself to God.

Think of all the saints in the world who are in hard places and pray for them. Think of all the gaps in the hedges and pray God

Dear friend of missions:

History has been made! For the first time the National Home Missions budget has been met. To God be the glory! To all of you who have prayed and worked, thanks. For the first time in history we received more than $8,000.00 in one month (December). Our 1959 budget was $63,720.00; we received $64,466.98 (exceeding the budget by $746.98.) This is an increase from last year of $17,288.52 in receipts. The suggested state quotas for 1960 are listed following this letter. You will notice that most quotas remain the same as the past year, a few have been raised and some have been made less. Every state should be able to meet their quota in 1960!

The following states exceeded their quotas for 1959: North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arizona, Florida, Missouri and Alabama. Income was received from several new states for the first time. Now is the time to determine to meet the quota for your state this year.

I have just returned from Vancouver, Washington, where my mother was buried on January 2. She was called home suddenly on December 29. Mother was a devoted Christian and a member of the Free Will Baptist church. It was my privilege to baptize her some twelve years ago. Missionary Johnny Postlewaite, Wenatchee, had part in the funeral services.

Please send a report of all new churches in your area to our office. We get many letters asking about the location of our churches from people who have moved to new communities and want to attend Free Will Baptist services.

The Walkers are now in Washington, D. C. Their address is: 4471 MacArthur Blvd., Apt. 101. Pray for this new work, which seems to be off to a good start.

Mrs. Helen Sanders, missionary to Hawaii, fell working on the mission, and broke her leg just before Christmas. She is reported doing good.

I will be in Kansas City for a one night missionary rally February 3. Rev. Dickey is the pastor. I will be in Wichita, Kansas, for a week-end revival February 5-7. I hope to meet many of our people in these areas.

There are 40,000 more people on the earth today than there was yesterday. Think! Will we get the gospel to this generation?

Melitino (Spanish missionary in Florida) writes, "We have had a much better year than we had last year. Our Sunday school has increased quite a bit, our evening service attendance is up, too. God has given us some new families. I have begun a new work among the immigrant workers about 50 miles from Miami. Some are Mexicans, some Puerto Ricans, and there are others. Please pray for this work. The thing we need most here is a temple (church house)."

Brother Sanders (missionary in Hawaii) writes, "We had our first baptism last Sunday. It was in the Pacific Ocean. The Lord has been good to us."

Brother Maek Owens (missionary in New England) writes, "We now have a radio program every Sunday morning and have afternoon services at St. Johnsbury, Vermont. Our work in Littleton continues to grow."

Brother Whaley (Alaska) writes, "Our young people are organizing a soul-winning effort among the youth. We are doing more work on our building. Vernon's eyes seem to be good at present."

Miss Barker (Arizona) writes, "I am teaching 3rd and 4th grades in academy, and doing the other usual missionary work. Daddy and Mother came (from North Carolina) and spent Christmas with me. We went down to Guaymas, Sonora (Mexico). Several cities have 8,000 people but have nothing but Catholic churches. Please pray that there will be a means for us to reach some of these for Christ."

Brother Thomas writes, "The church in Louisville, Kentucky, continues to grow and we will have our first revival February 14-21. Please pray for the meeting."

Miss Bessie Yeley (Spanish) writes, "Last Monday I had my Bible Club in a little house which is made of zinc. Looked as if the wind would blow it away any minute. In my Tuesday meeting there were three adults saved. There are men coming to our services now whom seem very interested."

Brother Billows and his family have been in the states visiting recently. They spoke in several churches in Oklahoma.

The Postlewaites in Washington continue to see their work grow in many ways. New people continue to attend the services.

It has been reported to our office that property for a Free Will Baptist church has been purchased in Farmington, New Mexico. Rev. Kenneth Doggett is the minister in charge.

Checks sent to Nashville for our work should be made payable to: National Home Missions. Credit on state quotas will be given for all money which is sent to our department.

May you and yours be blessed abundantly as you serve our Lord in 1960.

Yours for Christ and missions

Self-Giving in Christian Service

(Lesson for February 21)

Lesson: Acts 20:18-35.

Golden Text: Titus 2:11, 12.

INTRODUCTION

Our lesson for today covers the closing incidents of Paul's third missionary journey. It centers attention on Paul's summary of his work in the city of Ephesus.

From Corinth, Paul and his companions traveled by way of Macedonia to Troas and Assos. A most interesting thing takes place at Troas while Paul was preaching. We read (Acts 21:7-12) that Paul's sermon lasted until midnight, at which time a certain man, named Eutychus, fell asleep and tumbled from a third-story window and was taken up dead. "And Paul went down, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him. . . . And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted" (Vv. 10, 11).

From Assos, the company journeyed by way of Samos and Trogyllium to Miletus. It was his plan to sail by Ephesus; but, because of his haste to get to Jerusalem for the feast of Pentecost, he sent to Ephesus the elders to come to him at Miletus where he gave his farewell address to them. It probably took about three days for the elders to reach Miletus from Ephesus, for the journey was about thirty miles. We will note that the apostle's last words to them were more than a simple good-by. So many events had taken place between them, and the fellowship had been too deep-grounded for a sudden parting of the way without a deep feeling of devotion one to the other.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. A Christian worker should always remember that the people among whom he is working are watching his life (Acts 20:18).
2. A Christian worker should be diligent in declaring the whole message of God without fear or favor, both publicly and privately (Vv. 20, 21).
3. The Christian worker will always be found in spirit to do what he recognizes as the will of God for himself (Vs. 22).
4. The Christian worker will not be daunted by the prospect of suffering for the Lord in His service (Vv. 23, 24).

5. The Christian worker may sometimes feel the necessity of giving counsel and admonition to others, especially younger workers (Vs. 28).

6. The Christian worker who knows God's Word cannot help but foresee certain dangers that are or will be confronting the church (Vv. 29, 30).

7. The Christian worker will not refrain from warning with tears, if it is necessary to show his earnestness (Vs. 31).

8. The Christian worker knows he can leave his Christian friends, his converts, in no better hands than the hands of God (Vs. 32).

9. The Christian worker will know how to set the proper example in unselfish service (Vv. 33, 34).

10. The Christian worker will always point beyond himself to the Lord Jesus and His teaching (Vs. 35).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Paul had lived with these people for three years or more so he needed no letters of introduction or references. They knew how he lived and worked. They had seen him endure the hardships of the gospel. There had been tears and trials but he went about preaching and teaching from house to house and in the public halls. Pride had been mastered to the point where he could take the insults of his opponents without losing heart. Many people are gradually worn down by opposition, their convictions dulled, their energies exhausted by it, and they eventually imitate those whom they despise.

2. Paul left the Ephesians with an unforgettable, revolutionary principle from the lips of Jesus: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Every Christian is happier when he, like Paul, spends his days and nights giving—giving what he has and what he is—than he is when, feeling fearful of what the future may bring, he spends his hours hoarding what few things he can get together in anticipation of disaster.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

3. "Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" (Vs. 21). He had told people how to be saved. God does not save men in their sins; He saves them from sin; therefore, those who will be saved must have a Godly sorrow and horror for their sins, must turn from them and turn to God by faith in Jesus as their Saviour.

4. After having refreshed the memory of the elders regarding his conduct among them, and having told them they would see his face no more, Paul then proceeded to deliver a sacred charge to them.

"Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Vs. 28).—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

5. Paul was not lazy, mentally or physically, and he did not make merchandise of his ministry. In fact, he may have leaned too far in the opposite direction. Like the hard-working, self-sacrificing parent who does too much for his children and thus brings up a lazy family, he failed to impress upon the Corinthians, at least, their responsibility for supporting the Lord's work with their finances, and later wrote, "Forgive me this wrong" (2 Corinthians 12:13).

6. Laziness is exceeded only by immorality and dishonesty as a hindrance to the cause of Christ, and the person who works as Paul worked, avoiding laziness, is not likely to become involved in either of the other two. Most important, however, is the fact that Paul served the Lord because he loved Him, and not because he was paid for it. Seeing this, his hearers believed in him and his gospel.—The Standard Commentary.

7. Shortly before his death Dr. F. B. Meyer wrote a letter to a friend, in which he said: "I am now eighty-two years old. I am in a nursing home. I want to tell you what the Spirit of God has been showing me lately: that I have acquired a reputation for sanctity for the way I have written on the inner secrets of the life hidden with God. I see how easily this may grow upon me. It makes me want to creep into heaven unnoticed!" Before this, he wrote: "I used to think that God's gifts were on shelves one above the other, and that the taller we grew in Christian character the easier we could reach them. I now find that God's gifts are on shelves one beneath the other, and that it is not a question of growing taller, but of stooping lower, and that we have to go down, always down, to get His best gifts!"—Selected.

"Hold high the torch!

You did not light its glow—

'Twas given you by other hands, you know.
'Tis yours to keep it burning bright,

Yours to pass on when you no more need light."

to help you fill them. Think of all the financial needs in the Kingdom's work and pray God to enable you to relieve them where and when possible. ". . . in whom (God) we trust that he will yet deliver us; Ye also helping together by prayer for us, . . ." (2 Corinthians 1:10, 11).

What a prospect! Joining hands with God and the saints around the world as we gather in His name to pray unitedly!

ALICE WILLIAM'S BIBLE CLASS

FEB 11 1960

The Alice William's Bible Class of the First Baptist Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, held its first reunion since its organization ten years ago, January 20, 1960, in the Moffett School Cafeteria. There were approximately 80 ladies present.

Mrs. J. A. Alexander, founder of the class, was mistress of ceremonies. She led in the devotional hour, taking her Scripture from Luke 24:46-53, "The Commission to Organize—Go, Preach, Rebuild." That is what these ladies have strived to do. After the meal was served, the photographer took the above picture of the group. Mrs. J. E. Vinsant led a memorial service for the deceased. Mrs. Ritchie Wall read the class history. Out-of-town guests were from Suffolk, Virginia, and Weldon, North Carolina.

The fellowship at the reunion was wonderful, and the Lord's name was exalted. Old friends met and new friends were made. At the end of the gathering, the group joined hands and formed a circle while Mrs. J. P. Hagar, class teacher, closed the meeting in prayer.

Editorial

IS IT FAIR?

C. H. Overman

In the editorial of two weeks ago, we began a series of discussions on various relationships between the pastor and his church. Consideration was given to unfair advantages which exist on the part of minister between laymen and churches. Our discussion two weeks ago ended with reference to the church member who often poses a problem to the pastor. Is it fair to fight against him and thus cause division in the church, and among friends and families, when there is a way around it?

It would be well for the minister to remember that there is often more than one route which may be taken to reach an objective. In spite of this fact, however, he often drives into an immovable object which causes more harm than the precaution of taking another route. Adolph Bedsole, in his book, Pastor in Profile, deals with this matter in the chapter entitled, "Jezebel and Judas on the Trail of a Preacher." This marvelous chapter contains one of the best illustrations which we have ever read in reference to this matter. He states:

"I grew up on a farm in the days when stumps (old tree trunks) dotted the cultivated hillsides. Intelligent men learned to plow around those stumps and make the farms produce, even with a field full of stumps. In due time the stumps were burned out, dug out, blasted out, pulled or rotted out. Their presence on the farm over a long period of years did not kill the productivity of those farms. Some of the modern preachers don't use as much judgment about their problems as farmers used about their stumps a generation ago!"

God's work can go on in spite of the spiritual deadbeats and those who would hinder the cause of Christ in each local church. Even Judas did not prevent the purpose of God being done in the lives of the disciples. Whether a minister is willing to admit it or not, some of the situations which come about between him and laymen could be avoided by remembering that God's purpose and will is to be accomplished, in spite of a cantankerous church member.

Of course, we must recognize that the church can be at fault, just as much (sometimes more) as the pastor. The church may choose to take sides with the troublemaker. This does happen, and only God and His boundless grace can uphold the pastor at such a time; the end is usually inevitable. A spiritual giant may thus be reduced to a spiritual midget. Is it fair for the church to thus wage a warfare against the minister? Nothing can be fair where unfair advantages are the rule and practice.

In the promotion of ideas, such as reorganization of the church board, rules for selecting Sunday school teachers and support and nonsupport of various projects and enterprises, etc., the minister often finds that his position is one of advantage over his people. When such is the case, he may find himself using every possible resource to carry his plan. Let us plainly state, however, that there are some personal convictions which a minister cannot compromise. Intelligence tells us to stand by our convictions, but when personal opinions and prejudice rule, there is danger ahead. May we consider three advantageous realms which the minister may have over his people:

1. He has the advantage of his training and education. This factor should prove to be an advantage to the people, but sometimes it isn't. His training may give him the upper hand in persuasion and influence. It may cause him to preach philosophy, ancient history and world events, thus neglecting the gospel of Jesus Christ and His love which are the basic needs of the man in the pulpit. The church should know whether or not they are calling a preacher instead of a philosopher or historian.

2. He has the position of the pulpit to his advantage. In some instances, ministers seem to use the pulpit as a refuge from which they can lash out at the opposition. The pulpit should never be used to get rid of personal feelings, prejudices, pet peeves, or get even with someone. Neither should it be used to let off steam. Some ministers seem to have the idea that anything which is said from the pulpit has to be gospel truth, whether people like it or not. Is it fair to tell Mr. Jones off from the pulpit, unless it is a situation involving the church? We once heard of a minister who would iron out difficulties between him and the aggrieved in private conversation, but upon entering the pulpit would blast away at him.

The pulpit is to be used for the propagation of the gospel. This is God's divine plan until Jesus comes. Since this is true, the minister is under obligation to Almighty God and the people he stands before to build up the Church of God, and not to tear it down by uprooting and unfair advantage.

3. He has his influence of certain persons to his advantage. It seems that, regardless of how wrong and despiteful a minister may be, he will have some followers. Sometimes it may be those who can't get along with others in the church; therefore, they take sides with the pastor and seek to draft him to carry out their scheme. The influence of a minister cannot be overestimated; therefore, it behooves the minister to use precaution in the promotion of the Kingdom work, to be certain that what is done is for the good of all and not just to certain parties and factions. Is it fair for the minister to take advantage of his people by using key persons unless, of course, it is for the betterment of all concerned? (Next week: Positive or Negative.)

The Highway to Blessing

by Rev. Andrew Telford

IN THE LIFE of the child of God there are certain things that we must consider as the secret of all happiness and blessing; but there are certain causes of unhappiness, and these must be avoided. We must utilize and take advantage of those principles that lead to a life of blessedness and spiritual progress. Some things we must adopt if we are going to know the power of the grace of God in our hearts and lives. Our attitudes must be sincere, our actions must be spiritual, our activities must be Scriptural, and our aggressiveness must be sacred.

But there are certain things that we must avoid if we are going to prosper in our journey of life. Let us then avoid the things that cause unhappiness.

Unhappiness is often caused by:

UNPREPARED HEART

Jesus said, "Let not your heart be troubled: . . ." (John 14:1). He also said to Martha, ". . . thou art careful and troubled about many things" (Luke 10:41). He not saying it to you? The disciples had good cause to be troubled. They were about to lose Him and He said to them, "Let not your heart be troubled." Sure, they would be lost to sight but would become real to faith. Though absent from them, He would be thinking of them. Did they not say, ". . . I go to prepare a place for you" (John 14:2)? He did not forget them in their trouble. ". . . whoso trusteth in the LORD, happy is he" (Proverbs 16:20).

Is your heart prepared for the problems of life? When some saints face problems, especially women, they cry and pout and go into a nervous breakdown. This is an evidence of an unprepared heart. Men fret, lose their temper, and become hard to get along with. This, too, is an evidence of an unprepared heart. In the hour of personal and national trouble ". . . Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, . . ." (Ezra 7:10). We need a prepared heart. Ezra prepared his heart by prayer and confession (Ezra 10:11), and by purpose and confidence (9:9). Oh, the danger of not being prepared in the heart to receive the grace of God and the Word of God!

We need a protected heart too. Our hearts are deceitful; they will go to extremes. Guard your affections, for out of the heart are the issues of life. Do you prepare your heart every morning to meet the duties of the day?

There is something else we should avoid in the Christian life and that is:

AN UNFORGIVING SPIRIT

Jalousy, pride, conceit and self enthroned in the heart rob the soul of the grace of forgiveness. An unforgiving spirit can easily possess one. It may come as an injury, real or fancied, at the hand of a brother or sister. It is hard to get some Christians to be forgiving. They will not forgive unless about three committee meetings are held to straighten it out, two deacons' meetings to clear things up, three or four prayer meetings, a half-dozen attempts to emphasize wrongs that have been done, a couple of struggles at reconciliation, the pastor's continual council and finally the Holy Spirit's constraining influence. Then the culprit will slowly say, "Well, I will forgive."

As long as you nurse a grudge, your prayers will be hindered, your public testimony will be null and void, your spiritual progress will be at a standstill, your soul will be withered up, and your heart will be as empty as a hollow drum. Read Ephesians 4:32 and Colossians 3:13, and then do what God tells you to do.

Unhappiness in the Christian life is often caused by:

AN UNSTABLE MIND

"A double minded man is unstable in all his ways" (James 1:8). A divided mind draws two ways. This man is unsettled. He is like the poor mule that starved to death because he could not choose between the two haystacks. The Bible is a great Book on the mind. The mind is the citadel. Watch your mind. God spare us from a filthy mind, a fickle mind, yes, and a feeble mind. We need a sound and sober mind in the day in which we live. That means that we will have a spiritual mind, as Romans 8:6 says, "To be spiritually minded is life and peace."

Do not allow doubts to creep into your mind. Doubt is the death of desire, devotion and definiteness. Doubts disturb us and debar us from the benefits of God's grace and blessing. "For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord" (James 1:7). Be a stable Christian by having all matters settled between your soul and God.

Unhappiness is often caused by:

UNSETTLED HABITS

"Be . . . Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord" (Romans 12:11). Every Christian must avoid slothful habits. It is easy to become careless in our habits as Christians. Luther translated this verse in this way, "Not lazy in what you ought to do." Careless habits have wrecked many a Christian's testimony until no one wanted him and no one could recommend him. Slothful habits are never conducive to happiness. They lead to the neglect of that which produces happiness.

What about your desire to win souls and your personal witness for the Lord Jesus? What about your interest in church life? So many Christians are slothful about this matter.

Then, what about your public testimony? Are you honest in your service to your master or employer? Are you careless there? Do you do as little as you can for your salary? Are you at your work on time and doing your duty, or are you careless?

Listen to the Lord Jesus on this matter: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them" (John 13:17). Jesus said, "Ye call me master and Lord; and ye say well." This is what they thought of Him. Then Jesus said to them that if He is their Lord and master, and they have listened to His teachings and learned from Him as a teacher, they could only be happy if they would do as they were taught. How much importance is laid today on being deeply taught or knowing the Word, studying the Bible, understanding the mysteries, and yet Jesus says that we are only happy if ye do them. May God make us doers of the Word!—Gospel Herald.

"Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted Word, which is able to save your souls" (James 1:21)

These trying times are the good old days many will be longing for a decade from now.

Starting a New Church

Rev. Rufus Hyman, Slocomb, Alabama

AS A DENOMINATION, we have several ministers and churches and about 200,000 members, we are told. But how many of our pastors and churches have started a new congregation? Very few, we will be safe in saying; but it should not be that way.

Let each church and pastor make plans to start another church in a community that needs a church. Let all ministers who do not have a church to pastor begin a preaching point, Sunday school or community prayer meeting. Then we would see the cause move forward.

As an organizer, I would like to give some pointers to those desiring to start a new church as follows:

1. Secure a place to hold services. This might be a vacant building or someone's home. New Testament churches met in homes, so don't be ashamed to meet in the best place possible. Many churches have started in old stores, school houses and homes. Some have used tents for organizational meetings. At first, start a Sunday school, prayer meeting and preaching services, then work toward organizing. Follow this procedure unless you have enough people to organize a mission or church to begin with.

2. When once you begin, never become discouraged because your number does not grow fast. It will take time to grow into a good congregation. Many of the larger churches started with less than 10 members. Never let discouragement get you or your group down. Hold your head up, and your eyes toward heaven. Look unto the Lord for guidance and help, and He will supply your needs whatever they may be, if you will only trust Him to do so.

3. Secure the best leaders possible; however, remember the ones you have probably have never done any kind of church work. Some may be new converts, anxious but unlearned in the work of the Lord.

4. Since the group will include new converts, therefore, you will need a teaching ministry, as well as a preaching ministry. Teach them the doctrines of the Bible as follows: (1) Ye must be born again: That means the good and the bad—no one can go to heaven who has not been born again. (2) Consecration: Many Christians have never consecrated their lives to the Lord and His services. With many Christians, salvation is only a fire escape. It must be more than that. (3) Tithes and offerings: They are God's plan of support for His Church. (4) Every Christian a soul winner: If a church has only five members and each year each member will win another to Christ, etc., just look how a small church would soon become a large church. Major on soul winning! (5) Prayer life: We must have daily communion with God. Prayer moves the arm that moves the world. Jesus said, "Men ought always to pray." A praying church is a growing church.

There is nothing left now but the task of going to work for Christ. How many will make plans for another church to come into the denomination this year?

Mrs. Ellen Sumner

It was on June 29, 1959, that God, in His infinite mercy, saw fit to call from us our dear friend, Mrs. Ellen Sumner. She had been in declining health for a number of years, but the end came very peacefully. We know that she has just slipped away to a better place.

She was seventy-three years old and a long time member of the Sandy Plain Free Will Baptist Church, Pink Hill, North Carolina. She also was an active member as long as her health permitted. Her funeral was conducted by the Rev. S. A. Smith, and her body was laid to rest in the family cemetery under a mound of flowers. She leaves to mourn two daughters and three grandchildren.

A love so sweet and kind,
No one here we'll ever find.
May God grant her everlasting rest,

Mrs. Louetta Kemple

Friday night, January 15, 1960, God called Mrs. Kemple, age 79, of Route 1, Smithfield, North Carolina, to live with Him in glory. Mrs. Kemple attended Sunday school at Tee's Chapel Church, which she was a member, the Sunday before her death. She was a loving mother and a devoted church worker. Mrs. Kemple was taken sick on Thursday morning and slipped away from her loved ones Friday night at 8:10 o'clock.

She has attended Cragmont Assembly three summers. This last summer she attended and enjoyed it very much.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday, January 17, at 2:00 p. m., at her church. Burial was in the Kemple Cemetery.

Always Preaching Jesus

A missionary of the Christian and Missionary Alliance in South China, told of a native who once came to him and said "Why don't you preach something else? You have been preaching this Jesus for three days." "What do you eat for breakfast?" The Chinaman was asked. "Rice," was the reply. "For dinner?" "Rice." "For supper?" "Why, rice." "What did you eat yesterday?" "Rice." "What have you been eating for years?" the missionary inquired. "Rice," replied the astonished man. "What do you eat rice every day? Why don't you eat something else?" "Because it keeps me alive."

"That is just the reason why we preach Jesus, because He is life to us, and we could not live without Him," explained the missionary.—The Christian Herald.

You do not get far if you only look in a rear-view mirror.

A great many open minds should be closed for repairs.

The Reality of Hell

Tommy Godley
Student, Free Will Baptist
Bible College

THE BIBLE TEACHES that hell is as real as heaven, and people go to hell who reject God. Psalm 9:17 records the future abode of those who leave God at the end of their lives, "The wicked shall be cast into hell, and all the nations that forget God." Today, we are surrounded by several religious groups who deny the existence of hell. Some of these say that the grave is hell, while others say that those who go to hell will be completely annihilated. If these religious cults could talk to the rich man in hell as recorded in Luke 16:19-31, they would change their minds.

We have an introduction to two men's lives. One is rich and the other is a poor beggar. The rich man lived a selfish life and he had an uncharitable, hardhearted feeling toward the poor. It seems as if he ignored everything the prophets had told him concerning eternity. Let us interview the other man; he is a beggar. The beggar lies at the gate of the rich man and desires the crumbs that fall from his table. The rich man's dogs care more for him than their master did; they lick his sores, which is the only relief he receives. Lazarus is the beggar's name. His body is diseased and he is almost dead because of starvation. He is denied of the good things of life and he never knew what it was to have plenty of food, clean clothes and a roof over his head. However, he remains true to God in spite of his suffering.

The next scene of time involves the death angel visiting these two men. Lazarus died first, leaving the rich man to flourish with his wealth a little longer. The rich man died shortly after Lazarus. Notice the contrast of these two men's funerals. Lazarus died lying on the ragged pavement of the street. No one cared for him except God. He cared enough to send a company of angels to carry him to the paradise of God. The rich man died and was buried. His body was washed, anointed and saturated with a mixture of spices. Thousands paraded by to see him. People were hired to mourn for him. The rich man had an expensive funeral, while Lazarus was dumped into an obscure grave.

We have seen the earthly life of these two men, but now let us see them in eternity. Both of these men went to Hades. Hades is a place of departed spirits and is divided into two compartments—the upper and the lower. The upper is for the saints and the lower is for the wicked. Lazarus was carried by the angels to the upper part known as Abraham's bosom. The rich man was buried and lifted his eyes in torment. The lives of these men are reversed now. Lazarus is enjoying the blessings of heaven, while the rich man is suffering the pains of hell. The thought of seeing Lazarus only made his suffering worst. Hell is as real to the rich man as heaven is to Lazarus. His tongue cries for water while his mind cries for mercy, but the door of mercy has been closed. A stone has been rolled at the door of the pit and it cannot be rolled back.

The rich man failed to obey the prophets and he ignored the fact that Abraham was the father of the faithful. When he arrived in hell, he recognized Abraham as his father, but it was too late. He left God out of his earthly life and God left him out of the eternal life. Something has happened to him now that has never happened before. He began to ask for help. During his entire earthly life, he had longed for nothing and cared for no one but himself. The table is turned and he is making a request to Abraham. His request is for Lazarus to bring him one drop of water to cool his suffering tongue. Abraham reminded him of his earthly life, but the rich man, who is now a beggar, cannot bear the thoughts of remembering his earthly life and the way he had treated Lazarus. Abraham told him of the suffering of Lazarus and his failure to help him. Lazarus is no longer suffering.

The rich man cannot understand why Abraham does not pay him any mind. His first request was not granted. Lazarus did not come with that drop of water. He must face reality, there is no request granted in hell.

The denial of Abraham only aggravated his misery. He thought that he would never have any use for Lazarus, but the flames of hell changed his mind. There is coming a day when the wicked will gladly receive kindness from God's people.

It appears that the flames began to leap higher and the heat became hotter. He began to cry harder. The Greek New Testament translates his cry in these words, "I beseech you, Father Abraham, to send Lazarus to my father's house and warn my five brothers." There is no one waiting to welcome people in hell. In fact, the people in hell can hardly bear the thoughts of seeing someone else suffering like they are. If this rich man could telephone his five brothers, he would say words similar of these, "Please repent and to to Abraham's bosom where Lazarus is, I do not want to see you go through the torment I am in." There is no doubt in my mind that his brothers lived in sin and neglected the poor like he had done. The Bible seems to indicate that his brothers lived the same kind of life he lived. His second request is not granted and as far as we know, his brothers never repented and went to be with him.

The most horrible thing of being in hell is the thought of seeing people in heaven and not being able to get out. God has fixed a great gulf to prevent the kindest saint from wanting to leave heaven and go to hell to comfort the wicked. The reason why there is not much hell-fire preaching from our pulpits today is this—people do not want to face the reality of hell.

Someone has asked the question, "What if hell fills up?" That person does not have to worry over his question. Proverbs 27:20 says, "Hell and destruction are never full; . . ." This verse teaches that there is plenty of room in hell for people if they neglect Christ. If anyone denies the reality of hell, he has denied the reality of heaven and the existence of a Supreme Being.

One day Gypsy Smith went to visit an old gypsy aunt, who had cared for him after his mother's early death, and who was lying on her deathbed. "Auntie," said he, as he entered the gypsy wagon, "shall I kneel down and ask God to bless you?" But the woman replied, "No, my boy; kneel down and thank God because He has blessed me."—Selected.

Columbia, N. C., School Has Bible Club

The Bible Club in Columbia, North Carolina, High School in Tyrrell County was organized in the fall of 1959, the first such club to be organized in that county. A group of young people saw the film, "Seventeen," and God laid a burden on their hearts to start a Bible Club in the school. Since this is not a school club, the students have to meet on their free time or lunch period.

Mr. Avory, Youth for Christ director of Norfolk, Virginia, and Mrs. J. A. Alexander secured the bylaws and the constitution for the club. Officers of the club are as fol-

Pillars of Improvement For Your Programs

(Editor's Note: This article includes a message delivered by Mr. Robert Ross, guest speaker at the National Youth Commission which met in Columbus, Ohio, November 10, 1959, and edited by Ray C. Turnage, national league director.)

It is obvious that church programs need improvements today.

One of the greatest needs is prayer. Not just a short prayer before the actual programs are given, but a season of prayer. Prayer is needed in behalf of the leaders. They are charged with important responsibilities and must have the leadership of God. Success is to be realized. More prayer could be exercised by each group. Perhaps pre-prayer groups could meet to pray for needs relative to the group's activities. You have seen the phrase so often, "Prayer changes things." Do you just believe it is possible, or do you know it is true? Business sessions would accomplish much more for God if sincere prayers were offered in behalf of what is called God's business, but often-times it is run completely without His leadership. Failure comes and you wonder why. Just how much did you allow God to contribute, by way of leading, in your business meetings this past year?

Purpose must be realized and revealed to all involved. What do you want to accomplish this year or in the next six months? What do you want to accomplish today in this meeting? Know what you are doing and where you are going.

Preparation is more important than most people, even Christian people, realize. Can you really expect this last minute stuff to turn out good programs? The Bible surely mentions counting the cost, or preparing. It is never ethical to assign tasks requiring heavy study to someone at the last minute. Time is valuable and usually those who excel must have sufficient time for preparation.

Pep helps when presenting thoughts or ideas. Perhaps enthusiasm would have been a better word for this pillar of improvement, but we did not want to take away from the "Bouquet of Sweet P's" message by Mr. Ross.

The type pep you need to exercise should come from your love for Christ. If you believe in what you're saying and trying to do, then convince others by your manner of speaking. Act your feelings, so to speak, and get the message across. No one deserves your energies and enthusiasm more than Christ our Saviour.

Participation is an ideal way to develop one's abilities. In leading a group, do not assume full responsibility. Instead, work others who probably need the training more than you. Learning by doing means remembering. There are always backward, timid persons, who, with the right kind of encouragement and attention, could become valuable leaders.

Productiveness serves as a real source of encouragement to make one more determined. Are you getting results, not just in words, but results which can actually be seen? You want the greatest results possible, so work toward that end. Evaluate your gains to determine your weaknesses.

Progress must be realized if you are to please the Creator. Is your organization better today than it was a year ago? Has the attendance grown or have you only held your own? What is the quality of your programs? As group leader, do you feel the experience you have gained has helped you in any way? Who says you only need to take inventory of your work for God just once per year? Evaluate your work in the light of what it should be for God. Give consideration to these "Pillars of Improvement," remembering, "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord, and not unto men."

Mr. Kirby West, an outstanding Free Will Baptist layman from Shady Grove Church, Sampson County, North Carolina, has been memorialized through the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation of Mount Olive College by a gift of $100 from the Church Finance Association, Inc. The association passed the following resolution at its annual meeting in January:

Whereas: The Lord, in His divine wisdom, saw fit to call from our midst Brother Kirby West on June 5, 1959, and

Whereas: At the time of his death Brother West was vice-president and a member of the Board of Directors of the Church Finance Association, Inc., and

Whereas: We desire to express our sympathy to his family and to help perpetuate his memory,

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we hereby express our sincere sympathy to the family for the loss they have suffered.

2. That we hereby express our deep appreciation for his long and useful life of service through his local church, the district conference, the state convention, and several denominational enterprises, with special appreciation for his great and useful service through the Church Finance Association, Inc.

3. That, in appreciation for his service, we place his name on the Memorial Plaque of the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation at Mount Olive College by making a donation of $100 to said foundation in his memory.

4. That a copy of this resolution be sent to the family; a copy sent to Mount Olive College with the donation; a copy sent to The Free Will Baptist for publication; and a copy be placed in our minutes.

You cannot put things across by getting across.

The best way to understand love is to see it in action.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Riehlard Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: I was brought up to believe that God chooses some for salvation and some for condemnation before the foundation of the world; and that those whom He chooses are saved whether they wish it this way or not; also that regardless to which one desired or wished who was not thus chosen, he had no possibility of being saved just simply because he was not chosen before the foundation of the world. Does the Bible teach this? Is it the correct Biblical doctrine on election?—Margaret Simms, Ohio.

Answer: I have found no such teaching anywhere between the covers of my Bible because this teaching is not to be found there. The Bible teaches that God's predestination is according to His foreknowledge. God wants all men everywhere to come to Him and to be saved. "For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour; Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth" (1 Timothy 2:3, 4). L. Talbut quotes Mr. William Kelly as rendering this passage: "God . . . wishes all men to be saved." "Seek ye the LORD while he may be found, eall ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon" (Isaiah 55:6, 7); "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isaiah 1:18); "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:28-30).

Since God has provided free salvation for all and rings out a challenging invitation to all, how could He from the foundation of the world condemn some to eternal perdition, so that, regardless to their desires, wishes and willingness, they are destitute of all power to accept Christ and be saved? I am so glad that God is not what some represent Him to be.

The gospel itself possesses drawing power.

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. . . . For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse" (Romans 1:16, 20); "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. . . . So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Romans 10:9-11, 17); "God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew. . . ." (Romans 11:2). It is true indeed that God has predestined, but this is according to His foreknowledge. "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren" (Romans 8:29); "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied" (1 Peter 1:2).

God has foreknown from all eternity what was happening and all that had taken place as well as all that would take place throughout all the endless ages to come; therefore, He has prearranged or made plans for according to His foreknowledge. God knew before each person was born whether or not he would accept Christ and be saved, so He has a future home of the saved with capacity sufficient for each saved person, also a place of future retribution with sufficient capacity for those who shall spend eternity barred from the presence of God and with the devil and his angels. Yes, there are those who are chosen from the foundation of the world, but just who are they? All who believe, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36). God gave Christ and Christ died for the whole lost world. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved" (John 3:14-17). If every man in the world were to come to God through Christ for salvation, there would be no exception, all would be saved. "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37).

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORET
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.
(PSALM 119:105)

AM I A CHRISTIAN?

" . . . And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch" (Acts 11:26).

We often ask, and hear asked, the question, "Are you a Christian?" but I wonder how often we ask, "Am I a Christian?" There are those who will immediately protest the necessity or importance of the question in their lives, and if we take the accepted meaning of the word, Christian, taught by the great majority of the churches, and as defined in Webster's New World Dictionary, which says, "A person professing belief in Jesus as the Christ, or in the religion based on the teachings of Jesus," may not, after all, be of much importance. To be a Christian goes much deeper than a mere profession of a belief in Christ, for most people believe in Him as the historical Christ; but to possess Him as Christ, the personal Saviour, live with and for Him daily is another matter entirely.

Dr. E. Schuyler English, writing in The Pilgrim, and using this text and the subject "What Does It Mean," gives the following interesting study on what it means to be a Christian:

"The derivation and history of words is a fascinating study. Those who investigate this profitable science, etymology, discover among other things, the remarkable change that time and usage effect in the meaning of words. For example, everyone knows at today the noun, legend, pertains to something that is considered to be untrue. r that, though presumed to be based on history, is not verifiable. Formerly, however, the word was employed, in the plural, as the title of the commemorations of the faith and patience of God's saints under persecution, even to death. This designation, legends, proclaimed that the records written were worthy of reading. How different now! Should we see such a title in a book-store, we would assume that the contents of the volume related to something fabulous and undeserving of serious consideration.

"We are reminded that there is a word in many lips in our time that seems to have lost a great deal of its meaning, both in the world generally and even among some who claim to bear it—the name, Christian. It has taken on various connotations by common and approved usage which, although their history can be traced and the designations are apparent to most of us, are wide departures from the original signification of the word. Christian is now employed to denote a member of a particular race, i. e., a Gentile in contrast with a Jew. It has also come to mean, in the popular mind, that which is civilized, or decent, or respectable; in fact, it is sometimes used to distinguish between man and brute.

"A Christian, in the true sense of the word, is not necessarily one of these things specifically, but one who belongs to Christ, one who bears His name. The title was first used, as our text reveals, of the disciples of Christ, at Antioch in A. D. 42. Those who applied the name there were not speaking of the race of the men to whom they alluded, or to the state of their civilization, or to their superiority to beasts. The disciples were called Christians because they belonged to Christ. They lived Christ. They preached Christ. They suffered for Christ. They were ready to die for Christ. Above every other person or thing, above race, or family, or position, or ties of any kind, Christ was the object of their affections and theme of their message. To them He was all and in all, the pre-eminent One. They bore His name nobly and unashamed. "How do we bear the name Christian? What do those with whom we come in contact think of the Lord Jesus because of us? Does the title, Christian, when applied to us, denote simply nationality or culture, or does it signify the love of God toward men for whom Christ died, and our love toward the Son of God? Nothing less is adequate. No other attitude of heart should satisfy."—Selected.

Next week I will write on the subject, "How Can I Know I Am a Christian?"

"Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf" (1 Peter 4:16).

When success turns a man's head, it often leaves him looking in the wrong direction.

Very often the chip on an angry man's shoulder is just bark.

Sin is a short word and it often makes short work of its victims.

NOTE OF THANKS

"We would like to express our thanks and appreciation to the churches, Sunday schools, auxiliaries and all individuals who remembered us in such wonderful ways during the Christmas season and all through the past years. Thanks again, and the Lord bless each one."—Mrs. Martha Braxton and Son (Walter), Winterville, North Carolina.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

"We have been slow in getting around to writing our letter of thanks to Miss Fleta Wood for the nice article she sent in to the paper some time ago. We have known this young lady from childhood, and now she is an outstanding school teacher with splendid results in her line of work.

"We did not know that we have so many precious friends until we celebrated our 'Golden Jubilee.' Fifty years in the ministry is a long time for God to let a minister live and carry His blessed Word to so many parts of the country. We want to thank all that had a part in making the day a success. It was a blessed day that will never be forgotten. We also want to thank the editor for such nice articles in The Free Will Baptist. May God bless all of you dear ones. How we would love to go to your homes in person and thank every one of you, but as we cannot do this, you will have to accept this letter for your very own thank-you note."—Rev. H. M. and Lizzie McAdams, Route 3, Huntsville, Texas.

GOD IS THERE

When your Christian duty calls you
To the sick and to the sad,
And you go to take some sunshine
And to make somebody glad,
You may have the sweet assurance
As you breathe an earnest prayer,
That the place where you are going
God the Father will be there.

If you want to help the offcast
Find the pathway to the goal,
Or the wretched, poor lost sinner
Seek salvation for his soul;
Or someone who seems quite hopeless,
And for whom there's little care,
Go and look for such dear people
And our God will meet you there.

In the prisons of our country
Men are found behind the bars,
Who have fallen from their manhood,
In whose lives are many scars,
So they need someone to help them,
Who some Christian love may share,
Then go forth and help the prisoner
And you'll find the Saviour there.

Or if you are burdened heavy
With the cares of friends and home,
Or temptations, tests and trials
Where you live and where you roam,
Don't surrender faith and courage,
Neither quit the place of prayer,
For the God of earth and heaven
Always meets His children there.

—Rev. Walter E. Iscnhour

LETTER OF THANKS

"Will you please run this letter of appreciation in your next issue for our home, due to the fact that we have tried to reach each individual and church by mail that had a part in making our past Christmas one of the nicest that the children have ever enjoyed, for which we are truly grateful, but a number of our letters have been returned for various reasons. Some of the people have moved and left no forwarding address and others were returned for various other reasons.

"Space will not permit me to mention all of those who took part in our Christmas gifts, but we are especially grateful to those who contributed a gift to each child in the home. Among those giving these gifts were Valley Forge Free Will Baptist Church of Elizabethton, Tennessee, of which Rev. C. J. Higgins is pastor, who took the lead for gifts, giving, in addition to a gift to each child, approximately $600.00 worth of new furniture, silverware and cooking utensils; Hillcrest Church of Maryville, Tennessee gave the home a new Maytag washing machine. Others giving a gift to each child were Bear Point League of Sessor, Illinois; Cofer's Chapel of Nashville, Tennessee; Dungannon Free Will Baptist Church of Dungannon, Virginia; Thomas Memorial Free Will Baptist Church of Huntington West Virginia; Newport First of Newport Tennessee. Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Humphreys, American Legion Post, Police and Fireman's Association, Youth Builders, Elk Club, and Lions Club, all of Greeneville Tennessee, gave a gift to each child. Fellowship Free Will Baptist Church and Eastern Star Church of Kingsport, Tennessee; New Harmony Mission of Missouri; and Fairview Church of Knoxville were also among those giving gifts enough for each child of the home.

"There are many others who I would like to mention personally if space would permit; but, since we cannot, I can only say thank you from the depths of our hearts for a wonderful Christmas and pray that God's richest blessings will always be upon each of you in a great way. This does not include cash gifts, but we are also grateful for the total receipts for December which amounted to $7,020.82."—H. C. Burgess, Superintendent, Free Will Baptist Home for Children, Route 9, Greeneville, Tennessee

Worth Repeating

"I was staying one day at an inn in one of the valleys of northern Italy, where the floor was dreadfully dirty," said Charles H. Spurgeon. "I had it in mind to advise the landlady to scrub it, but when I perceived that it was made of mud I reflected that the more she scrubbed the worse it would be. The man who knows his own heart soon perceives that his corrupt nature admits of no improvement; there must be a new nature implanted, or the man will be only 'washed in deeper stains.' 'Ye must be born again.' Ours is not a case for mending, but for making new."—Gospel Herald.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST

Very often I receive letters from good, able, old-fashioned Free Will Baptists who have moved from North Carolina to other parts of the United States, saying, "Brother Griffin, we cannot find a Free Will Baptist church near by." Then they often come to say, "We are attending _____ church." Then they open their hearts and let us the low down on what they experience at these churches.

Recently, I received a letter from a dear Christian lady, who was very consecrated and a member in my Sunday school, saying, "We are attending a church where the preacher teaches history and news matters, and says very little about the Bible. My husband has become disgusted and says that the messages are dead. They have no life."

This is not only true in the city where this good lady and her family live, but it is true in many sections and right here in the good state of North Carolina. I hear it very often said, "We hear but little Bible preaching." Praise the Lord that we do have people in this modernistic age who want to hear the gospel preached as it is given to us in the Word of God.

THE TRUE GOSPEL CONDEMNS

When the true gospel is preached, it condemns the sin of mankind. This condemnation is not received by the natural mind of man. Man rather have some soft peddling, something that will allow man to continue in sin without stirring up the conscience. When we are stirred to the point that we see our sins, we must make a decision one way or the other. There are so many who want to go along without being disturbed. When we cast the evil spirits out of the man who lived among the tombs, the people wanted Jesus to leave their coasts (Matthew 23:34). The preaching and healing power of Christ was getting into their business. They would have rather had their hogs than see the man saved. They wanted to protect their hogs and let human beings suffer. We have the same class of people in the world today. Yes, I am sure that we have people, who are even professing Christians and belong to some church, that do not really want a revival. That is, they don't want an old-fashioned revival that gets into crooked business and its crooked operations, and cleans up the business. They had rather make money and use it for selfish purposes than to help get people saved from an eternal hell. They sing "O, How I Love Jesus," but in reality they are like those Jesus talked to when He said, "Ye draw nigh unto Me with your mouth, but ye are far away in your heart." Here is what the Master said, "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matthew 15:8, 9).

THE TRUE GOSPEL SAVES WHEN BELIEVED

Paul said, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; . . ." (Romans 1:16). Notice that Paul says the gospel is the power of God. Whenever the power of God is manifested, sinful man is disturbed. When Jonah went through the streets of the city of Nineveh, the people from the king down to the common people were stirred and repented. They called on the Lord, and were saved from physical death. So God saves when His Word is preached and accepted by those who hear the message. However, sadly we say, many hear the Word, are convicted of sin and made to feel uneasy, but fight off the work of the Holy Ghost, refuse to accept it, and go away from Christ and His Word. "He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:11, 12).

SAD REPORTS

We take notice of the reports that are sent to the union meetings, etc., and often we hear the report, "Received, none." Many times a whole year has passed and there has been no converts—none saved and added to the church. What is the cause? Well, there are many things that hinder. One can be the spiritual condition of the church. There may be envy and hatred, or worldliness, or a lack of preaching the Word of God. All these things and many more are used by Satan to keep people from seeking the Lord. We read in the Word of God where the enemies of Christ cried out saying (in speaking of Paul and Silas), ". . . These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also" (Acts 17:6). The gospel of Christ had stirred up the devil's work. Paul and Silas were not afraid to condemn sinfulness and to lift up the Christ who condemned sin in the lives of man. They told them of the peace and rest, and how sweet and dear it was of the Master to say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee."

So Jesus had power here on earth to forgive sins, and He promised that if we would repent, believe on Him, and ask for forgiveness, He would forgive us. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

give us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

May God help us who preach that we may follow the admonition of the apostle, Paul, when he said, "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Timothy 4:1-4).

Thousands upon thousands are turning from the gospel of Christ to Modernism, Russellism, Jehovah's Witnesses, and other religions that are contrary to the teachings of Christ. So I exhort all preachers to preach the Bible—there are yet people who will accept it.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

ONE STICK OF GUM

by Blanche Perry Fuhrman

LINDA SUE ROBERTS walked slowly home from school. She crossed over to the other side of the street so she wouldn't have to talk to Nancy and Bob and Joe. Linda didn't want to talk. She wanted to think. She just had to think of a way to win Miss Lowry's trust again.

"Linda looks like she's going to cry!" Bob shouted from across the street.

Linda looked the other way.

Joe heaved a snowball at her. "Ah, come on, Linda, cheer up!"

Linda didn't even raise her eyes. "I told you I don't feel good," she said, struggling to keep the tears back.

"We better let her alone," Nancy said. "Maybe she's got that Asian flu."

Nancy and Bob and Joe chased each other on down the street. Linda Sue was glad. She shuffled slowly along. It was true, she didn't feel well but not in the way they thought. All afternoon she had wanted to cry but there was no place to do it. All the kids in the fourth grade would have seen her. They'd think she was a cry-baby, her being nine years old. Miss Lowry would have seen it, too; and hadn't she already done enough to hurt Miss Lowry?

If only Miss Lowry knew she hadn't meant to steal or be dishonest. If she only knew that it was Nelle who had really spent Miss Lowry's money. All she, Linda Sue, had done was chew one stick of the gum and it didn't even taste good. She wished she'd never seen that gum.

Linda Sue stopped and leaned against a tree. She hurt deep inside. She could still see Miss Lowry's kind face at noon as she handed Linda a quarter and said, "Linda, I need some glue. Would you and Nelle run down to the store and get me some?"

The girls skipped all the way to the store. Linda paid for the glue and the clerk handed her back ten cents. Nelle eyed the money and hurried outside.

When Linda Sue came out, Nelle was all excited. "Hey!" she whispered, "there's ten cents left over! Let's go back and spend it. Five cents for me, and five cents for you."

Linda's eyes grew wide with surprise. "We can't do that. It's not our money to spend."

"We have it, don't we?" Nelle said giggling.

"All the teacher can do is scold. She can't unspend it, can she?"

Linda held on to the money. "I won't spend it, it's Miss Lowry's," she said firmly.

"Oh, you're such a fraidy-cat!" Nelle scoffed. "You know you'd like some gum. Besides Miss Lowry owes us something for running this errand."

Linda hesitated, fingering the coins. I would like some gum, she thought frantically, Maybe if I just gave Nelle—no, it isn't right! "I can't do it," she said finally.

But Nelle saw that she was weakening and she took advantage. "You won't have to spend it; I will," she said brightly. "Give me the money and I'll go back for the gum. All you'll have to do is wait outside. Surely you can do that much, can't you?"

Linda thought about the gum and her mouth watered. If Nelle spends the money, it will be her fault and not mine, she argued with herself. Maybe Miss Lowry wouldn't care, anyway.

Slowly Linda opened her fingers and felt the coins slide out. She felt uneasy as Nelle disappeared into the store, but she kept trying to convince herself that it was Nelle's fault.

Linda felt still more uneasy when Nelle returned with a candy bar and a package of the gum. Nelle tossed Linda a stick of gum. "That's all you deserve," she said. "Since you were scared to do any of the work, you don't get half."

Silently the girls started back to school. Linda chewed the gum but it didn't taste good although it was her favorite kind. She hated the gum and she hated to face Miss Lowry.

Linda Sue didn't look up as she handed Miss Lowry the glue. But she was conscious that Miss Lowry was looking from one of the girls to the other as she said, "Wasn't there some change left over, girls?"

Linda felt terrible. She looked at the floor and ran the toe of her shoe along a crack, waiting for Nelle to speak.

"It cost a quarter," Nelle lied.

Linda still didn't look up. Miss Lowry was silent a long time; then she took Linda's face in both her hands and looked into Linda's eyes. Linda looked away. She wanted to cry out, "We spent it!" but she didn't.

Miss Lowry looked so sad. "I've always trusted you, Linda," she said so kindly that Linda wanted to cry. "In fact, I trusted both you girls but I must say I'm disappointed. Didn't you know that it's wrong to spend someone else's money? Did you know it, Nelle?"

Nelle shrugged but said nothing.

"What about you, Linda?"

Linda wanted so much to say she was sorry but a big lump came up in her throat and almost choked her. She couldn't say anything.

Then school took up again and she hadn't looked at Miss Lowry once all afternoon.

Now as Linda stood leaning against the tree she tried to convince herself that it was Nelle's fault. "Nelle spent the teacher's money when I didn't want to," she said half aloud. "In fact, I wouldn't do it!"

Linda started on home. She wanted to believe it was all Nelle's fault.

Silently Linda opened the door and to off her coat.

"That you, darling?" Mother called from the kitchen.

Linda didn't answer. She couldn't. There was that big lump in her throat again. She could only tell Mother all about it. Mother would know what to do to regain Miss Lowry's confidence. She hung up her coat and started to her room.

"Linda!" Mother exclaimed, coming in the living room, "you're so pale. Are you sick, dear?" She hurried over and put her hand on Linda's forehead.

Linda dug a small fist into a crumpled face. "Oh, Mother, I know you'll be terribly disappointed, but I did an awful thing," she sobbed. And somehow the whole story came tumbling out. "Now Miss Lowry thinks I'm dishonest. I'm not, am I, Mother?"

"Well," Mother began quietly, "Nelle was the one who actually spent the money—"

Linda nodded quick assent. "It was her fault, then; don't you think so? I wouldn't have done it if I'd been alone. She begged me to."

"But you had the money," Mother continued softly. "You didn't have to give it to Nelle, did you?"

Linda's chin trembled. "But she practically took it away from me. She called me fraidy-cat and she begged and begged me."

Mrs. Roberts seemed not to hear. "You chewed some of the gum. Did Nelle make you do that, too?"

"I chewed one stick!" Linda burst out. "And it didn't even taste good. Oh, I wish I'd never seen that gum!" What can I do prove I'm not dishonest?" Mother wiped Linda's eyes. "People will lie in you if you believe in yourself. Go upstairs and think about it and get ready for dinner while I put the buns in the oven. Maybe you can figure it out yourself."

When Linda returned she looked almost happy. "I think I know what to do now," she began hopefully. "Maybe you would go to school with me and tell Miss Lowry I'm sorry and give her back ten cents."

"I wasn't with you when you let Nelle take the money or when you chewed the gum," Mother said gently.

Linda's face fell. She was still a long way from then said, "I shouldn't take your money, either. I should take it out of my own bank. But do I have to pay back the whole dime? Nelle spent—"

Mother lifted a pan of hot buns from the oven. She was about to speak when Linda spoke in, "But it all has to be paid back. Nelle won't pay any back. I had a part in it of it so I suppose I should pay it all back. But I just know I can't tell her myself: I'm ashamed!"

"If you really need me, I'll go with you," Mother said gently. "Only I hoped you'd be strong enough to do it yourself."

For a long time that night Linda couldn't sleep. She kept thinking of that one stick of gum and of how Miss Lowry looked when she said, "I'm so disappointed." She thought of how she had tried to blame it on Nelle, saying Nelle caused her to do it. But she knew no one could make her do wrong. She asked God to forgive her and then wept till she went to sleep.

As Linda slept she dreamed that an angel came and said, "Linda, I'll go with you to pay it all back. I saw you let a friend persuade you to make a wrong choice but now you are very sorry now. I'm going with you to help you tell Miss Lowry the whole truth because I know you'll never do it again. Never again will you let a friend trick you into being, even a little, dishonest." Next morning with shining eyes Linda told her mother, "You won't have to go with me now. God's angel will go with me and I'm going to take my own money and tell Miss Lowry the whole truth."

Miss Lowry listened quietly as Linda told her everything. When Linda came to the part about the angel, Miss Lowry gave her a big squeeze and said, "You're an angel yourself and I'll always trust you especially because you've had the courage to make it right."—Story Trails.

State Convention to Sponsor Workshop

A workshop for district auxiliary officers, sponsored by the North Carolina Woman's Auxiliary Convention, will be conducted, Thursday, February 25, at 10:00 a. m., at the First Free Will Baptist Church in Kinston, located at Lenoir Avenue and College Street. Each person present will be responsible for her own lunch. Numerous restaurants are located uptown.

Please urge your local auxiliary to send $5.00 to Mrs. M. A. Woodard, Winterville, North Carolina, for Cragmont. This is to be used for completion of the new building and improvements so badly needed before conference time. Please send your donations by March 15.

Honor Services

We have at last channels through which we can, at least in a small way, pay tributes of love and appreciation for those who have so faithfully rendered their services for the cause, and who have glorified Christ and blessed our denomination by their faith and efforts.

We want to suggest first the Heritage Foundation Fund of Mount Olive College. We can raise $100 and have the name of some person placed on a name plate on the beautiful plaque which is displayed on the wall at the college. You are to write a sketch of the person's life which will be recorded in the Book of Memories. This indeed will perpetuate their memories through the coming generations.

A second plan is the Life Membership Awards which the North Carolina State Woman's Auxiliary has adopted. This plan serves well also, for each $25 sent to Mrs. M. A. Woodard, earmarked for Life Membership by a local, district or state convention entitles such a group to a certificate. If the person being honored is living, you also receive the Life Award pin. You may present as many as you like. All of this money will be given to Mount Olive College until after the next state convention which meets in May. At this convention, another state institution will be designated to receive this money.

We know each church, Sunday school and auxiliary has some deceased and some living members who have rendered untiring services and who deserve recognition. We fail so many times to stop and show our appreciation for faithful services of others. We cannot honor all at one time, but we can have a founder's day service and take those first, and as these are to be continued through the years, you can continue to add others. Plan a good program, give a sketch of their lives and services rendered. Be sure and invite the members of the families of those whom you honor. Your pastor can help in making this type of service a success. I have had the pleasure of helping in several honor services; everyone present was spiritually blessed. Plan these services to be held in the church and invited everyone to attend.

As the third suggested plan, it is very appropriate to have an honor service and the auxiliary may award a woman's auxiliary pin to a member who has rendered outstanding services to the church and its auxiliary. Plan a church service, have a special program arranged, special music, with life sketch and anything which will add spice. Be sure to invite the families for either service you may choose.

Mrs. H. L. Spivey

Kenly, N. C.—Mrs. Millard Snipes was hostess to the Woman's Auxiliary of Kenly Church at its regular monthly meeting. There were 18 members present and three new members, Mrs. Bobby Pope, Mrs. Thomas Medlin and Mrs. Jesse Bone. Mrs. Felton Watson, program chairman, presented the year books. She called attention to the permanent watchword for the W.N.A.C. and the watchword for the year. Mrs. Watson emphasized this year's theme and chief aims of auxiliary work. Mrs. Richard Oliver gave the monthly program, which was rendered very impressively. Mrs. Watson closed the program by pointing out our responsibility and the auxiliary's responsibility in "Calvary's Call to Brazil," closing with prayer.

Mrs. Millard Snipes, president, welcomed the new members and presided through a

SAFARI FOR SOULS

WITH BILLY GRAHAM IN AFRICA

by Tom McMahan, Religion Editor,
The State, Columbia, S. C.

IT WAS NEARLY TEN O'CLOCK at night in Accra, Ghana. Clusters of window shoppers eyed shirts and lamps in an imposing Accra department store. On the sidewalk nearby sat a woman selling bread. Beside her slept four little children. Unwrapped loaves lay in a tray in the dusty street.

In nearby market areas which would soon bustle with activity, scores of men slept in doorways, on porches, and on the pavement. They had come to Ghana from neighboring countries hoping to earn a meager living by carrying head loads and guarding buildings with their bodies.

A few hours earlier, fifteen thousand Ghanaians, including the Lord Bishop of Accra, had thronged the brand new seaside sports arena to hear an American evangelist proclaim Christ's love as the answer to mankind's hate, greed and frustration. Dressed in strikingly colorful tribal habits and religious garbs, people had come on foot and in hundreds of taxis, modern buses and "mammy trucks" with plank seats and fascinating motto signs.

Magnificent public and commercial buildings rising all over this bustling capital reflect the inflow of foreign capital and a new sense of values centering on education, trade and prestige. Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah's picture is everywhere, even on the tie pins of his followers.

A few miles up the winding Kumasi Road, astride a mountain ridge, nestles the magnificent country house of Nkrumah, who is hailed in government-controlled papers as Africa's Messiah, the symbol of a new religion called Africanism, who, they say "... may well be the second Christ who cometh when the babes in the womb are suffering from Strontium Ninety."

Evangelist Billy Graham called on Nkrumah at the close of his two-day visit here and was cordially received. Graham told the prime minister that every great nation has cherished religious freedom. Nkrumah said that continued freedom of worship is one of Ghana's goals. Churchmen say there is full freedom to propagate Christianity in Ghana but the government frowns on anything that suggests political interference. In front of the Parliament Building a statue of Nkrumah bears this inscription, "Seek ye first the political kingdom and all other things shall be added unto you." Christian leaders protested the obvious paraphrase on Christ's words about seeking first the Kingdom of God, but they were told in effect to mind their own business and let the politicians handle public affairs. Missionaries and even some national leaders are deeply concerned about the future of Christian work in Ghana, especially where Europeans are concerned. Thinking moderates appear to share the apprehension although nearly everyone is cautious about discussing the matter. A student of public opinion said the smiles on Ghanaian faces mask deep worries. An African pastor said, "Christians may have to choose between Christ and the nation," and he added quietly that he himself had seen dictatorship in another country.

On the other hand, some leading churchmen say that the detention and deportation act and ex-post-facto laws are only temporary expedients necessitated by the unrest and violence of the free nation's infancy. One cited the West African tradition under which the chief and his elders are responsible to the people, but once they have spoken, criticism is treason. Others say that Africans can't take criticism gracefully.

If time is short for Europeans helping the African Church, a strategy of careful enlistment and training of key national leaders seems wise. The major significance of Mr. Graham's tour is the potential impact on educated Africans—practically all of whom are educated in mission schools, but comparatively few of whom are all out soldiers of the cross.

Billy Graham had spoken to twenty thousand Ghanaians and was about to address eight thousand others in Kumasi, the capital of the cocoa region, when a violent rainstorm broke up the meeting. Associate evangelist Leighton Ford preached to sixteen thousand others. Overall, three thousand decisions for Christ were recorded, about half representing first time professions of faith in Christ.

Many left the Kumasi service quick when the skies dropped out, but hundreds stood for thirty minutes in the downpour. Others crawled under the platform and bleachers while a doughty band with chairs over their heads marched around singing "God Sent the Rain," and "Stand Up for Jesus." The public address system shorted out and the meeting finally dispersed. A man who had trudged over fifty-four miles of bush trails to attend said it was worth it just to see such a throng gather for worship.

Copies of Time magazine were burned here a few days ago in protest of the magazine's critical barbs. In another recent incident, the ruling party burned a casket to symbolize the burial of the opposition party which lost the election in Kumasi the day Graham was there.

Ghana is on the march. Leaders boast that a formidable navy and air force will join Nkrumah's already sizeable army. Jet runways are being rushed to completion at the airport. Public housing is being pushed. The new twenty-six million dollar university is a showpiece for all Africa.

Frightening indeed are the articles, pictures and cartoons in the government press. But most disturbing to Christians is the prime minister's open encouragement of the fetish priest and the way he is being glorified, recalling the days when Rome deified her rulers.

Meanwhile Graham continues on his way preaching to multitudes of a Christ who belongs to Africa as truly as He belongs to America or Europe or Asia and calling men to surrender totally to Him.

Folly of Being Powerless

If an electric car stands motionless on the tracks, it is nothing against the power of electricity. If an invalid has no appetite and cannot go out of doors at night, it is no argument against things good to eat and the joy of starlit air. If a man does not know a flower by name nor a poem by heart it is no indictment of the beauty of a rose or the charm of some poem. If we bear the name of Christ, but give no other sign of Him; if we go through the forms of godliness, but live powerless lives, it is a thousand reproaches to us. To be powerless when Christ has all power, and we can have all we want, is an arraignment to which we can make no answer that is not self-incriminating.—The Missionary Review of the World

FRANK

by Mina Wiarda

THAT VERY DAY, true to her word, Frank's young wife began an entirely changed life!

She dumped their moonshine, she destroyed the playing cards, she broke with the old, and immediately found and regularly attended a sound church, carrying the two babies on her arms the near mile each Sunday. She went from her dancing toes to aching knees, to become a warrior in intercession, her prayers removing many a mountain!

At first Frank antagonized Edna's drastic mind. But she told him she'd serve God even if it cost her him! And she'd train their boys in Christianity. Over open knees she knelt with those two lads each morning. This continued throughout the years, until they left home for the armed forces and subsequent marriage.

A hard-working truck driver, frugal and industrious, honest and conservative, Frank led his home with a firm hand. But of his religious life he had no part. He'd have nothing with any who might attempt to deal with him, but no one could get him to comb himself in the least in things spiritual.

Rearing in a strict, formal, religious family, forced, he used to say, to attend solemn services three times a Sunday, and detesting he vowed that when he grew up he'd turn his back on church, marry an irreligious girl, and live as he pleased! And he did!

Frank met pretty, slight, intense Edna, who during childhood had been taken to Sunday school a few times by an aunt, and accepted Christ there at the age of nine. In his teens, with Sunday school long forgotten, she became a girl of the world, given especially to dancing, just like the rest of her class, poor farm family. The two lovers parted and went their worldly way.

During his third year, the younger of their two boys, stricken with polio, lay very close to death, with no hope held for recovery. In despair his mother implored the young father, "Frank, our only hope is God! His knees and ask Him to save our baby!" Down they went by the tiny bed, Edna pouring out her heart in supplication and intercession, turning to God with a full heart, asking forgiveness for all her wanderings, and pleading for the life of her son. When she finished, Frank remained silent. He tried to pray, he only groaned, "I can't." On the doctor's return a few hours later, the baby slept peacefully, his temperature normal. "Something has happened here!" he exclaimed. "He is well, and will live!" So little trace of the disease's effect remained that when he grew to manhood he served in the U. S. Navy.

Grateful little Edna plunged deep into the Word, into prayer, into various forms of Christian service, witnessing, and good works. Their home became a church annex, Christ its center and any who did not want Him more or less on the outside, including obstinate Frank, who could only look on in amazement.

During 15 long and difficult years his family and many others bore him up in prayer for salvation. After years of silent devotions at their bedside, Edna felt led, for his soul's sake, to pray audibly each night. Surely that, she thought, should help touch his spirit.

As his sons neared teen-age, frugal Frank conceived the idea of moving to a farm. But Edna, recalling the hardships of her rural childhood, objected. Besides, she loved the people at the infant church across the street, and wanted to continue her many services for Christ there where she had learned so much of the Word and witnessed such working of the Spirit of God.

But Frank's persistence won, under condition that he accompany the family to church twice every Sunday! So greatly did Frank desire the soil, he agreed! For months he went with them and heard the gospel. Wisely, no one attempted to deal with him.

Then came the day when their older son, graduated from high school the previous evening, must leave for military training. Being a Saturday, Frank, having kept his city trucking job, was at home. After breakfast his wife hurried the sometimes reluctant lads into the living room for their devotions before the pressing activities of the day should be undertaken.

Frank, never joining them in worship, dodged into the kitchen, from where the sound of his razor buzzed. But the shave proved a short one! No doubt he, like they, dreaded the prospect of their son's near departure. And could he actually be coming into the room and dropping to his knees at one of the chairs? Could they believe their ears? Was God answering?

After each had prayed, they remained bowed, waiting for him. But not a sound did Frank make.

Finally, Edna asked tenderly, "Dad, do you wanna pray?"

"I—can't!" the big trucker managed to groan.

At that she crept over to him, put an arm around his shoulders, saying, as she did, "You could, Dad, if you knew Jesus as your Saviour!"

"I—do—!" Frank blurted, brokenly.

"You do!" answered the amazed wife. "When did you take Him, dear?"

"Sunday night—at church!" Frank stammered, between sobs.

"Praise God!" cried the little woman, "then you can pray, Dad. Just pour out your heart! It doesn't need to be a long or fancy prayer!"

Frank began, and the ice once broken, rivers of living water poured from his fervent lips, giving evidence that old things were gone and all things had become new! At once he sought identification with God's people, got a fine Bible, and began its study. His language changed, his spirit softened, his cigarettes went, his gambling (no one had known of that) ceased!

"You just can't believe he's the same man!" Edna used to say as she watched him greet people at the church exit, from which he had formerly bolted as soon as the last amen was said. And the church soon had a new officer!

After ten years of consistent Christian living, neat, congenial, upright Frank has a convincing testimony, telling at the same time how that twice in his childhood God spared his life, once from a runaway horse, then from drowning, in order to bring him eventually into His grace in Christ.

As he goes on with God, it is certain that he, like his faithful, pretty wife, will continue an effective tool in the hands of the Lord. His own aged, ailing, religious but lost mother was saved through this son's instrumentality. And how many others Frank has so influenced is hard to tell.—Gospel Herald.

Coming!

by Charlotte E. Arnold

A handful of Christians had been discussing world problems, unmindful of the presence of their little children. The talk ended with the common remark, "Well, the only hope is in the coming of the Lord."

Shortly, one of the children came to her father who had made the remark, "Papa, I think I hear someone coming on the porch. Do you suppose it is Jesus?"

Oh, for as real an expectation in the hearts of Christians! She did not know that the Lord will first come in the air to gather His church to Himself, but she did have in her heart the hope of His imminent and physical return.

Are we truly waiting, hoping for His return at any moment? Would we be ashamed of idleness, of indifference, of worldliness, if He came today?

If you insist on using a hammer—build something!

O GOD, OUR HELP

By Isaac Watts

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home!

Under the shadow of Thy Throne
Still may we dwell secure;
Sufficient is Thine arm alone,
And our defense is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting Thou art God,
To endless years the same.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly, forgotten as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come;
Be Thou our guide while life shall last,
And our eternal home.

Where Do We Stand?

by Rev. Winston Sweeney,
Kingsport, Tennessee

THE WORD OF GOD gives clear and unmistakable directions as to how Christians should stand and act in this day and time. The book of Jude, Verse 3, states that the Christian is "... to contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." I am well aware that the trend today is not to be firm and have real convictions concerning religious matters. In the Bible, we are warned not to have fellowship or bid speed to those who do not proclaim the faith as taught in the Bible. I think as Free Will Baptists, we lose a lot of people, especially young people, because we are not to be positive in our preaching concerning the fundamentals of the Bible.

When ministers and teachers fail to take a clear-cut stand and preach and teach as they ought, then they are doing a great injustice to those who listen. Time and again young people go from our churches to college and many do not know where to turn for what to do when some infidel tries to tear down their faith; yet, ministers are often evasive and refuse to be positive concerning things that really matter. We raise a lot of steam concerning secular things, but are evasive concerning the spiritual. A minister confided to me recently that he never preached a message that would hurt or go against somebody's feelings. Now this kind of preaching is not of the Lord. We look through the Bible and find that the true messengers preached a definite message that touched every phase of life among those who listened. They called sin by its right name. They reproved sinners in Zion. Certainly they suffered! They were cast out for being unfashioned! They were put in jails, dungeons, spit upon, beaten, cast out for dead. They didn't compromise, because they had a message from the Lord. They were hated so by the religious leaders of their day. Many times today, instead of really preaching the message, we compromise for fear of being put on somebody's black list. Sometimes I wonder how far John the Baptist would get in our time. This is an age in which everybody is to co-operate in order to have a standing in the conferences and communities, and to be a buddy with all. Brethren, popularity should not be the concern of God-called men. This life is going to be over one of these days, and we are going to answer to God for the way we have preached and conducted our affairs in this life. God is not going to ask us if we were concerned primarily about the social side, etc. He will want to know whether or not we have stood for the faith and preached the message as found in His Book.

The devil has a lie that many seem to believe; namely, don't be positive about anything, just go along and don't let anyone know your convictions. "Don't be backed into a corner," he says. Many times it seems that preachers are guilty of this so they may be able to get a certain pastorate. Many are one thing with one crowd and something else with another crowd. Such actions are just downright hypocrisy. Many will not declare themselves on anything. People ought to have enough backbone to stand and preach their convictions. If I am ashamed of something I am supposed to believe, I am in the wrong pew. If, when asked concerning my convictions relative to a certain matter, I am evasive and won't give a clear-cut answer, then something is wrong. To openly contend for the faith, we are open and above board; and it doesn't matter if everyone knows that we really believe and preach what the Bible says.

In the church of which I am pastor (Fellowship Free Will Baptist Church, Kingsport, Tennessee), the congregation knows where the pastor stands—no one has to guess or think. We aren't ashamed to believe in the fundamentals and to preach them. These fundamentals include the verbal inspiration of the Scriptures, the virgin birth of Christ, the blood atonement, His substitutionary death, His resurrection, His ascension and His coming again. These fundamentals just mentioned are necessary to salvation by grace. To deny these means that the individual does not know God. God commands that we preach these—declare that there is no other way of salvation.

The question has been asked, "Is it possible that our beloved denomination could become like some of the others of this day—shot full of modernists and liberals?" The answer is yes, and we must be on guard now! This means the local church must be on guard, and right on up to the top of our denominational work. Brethren, I am not a witch hunter, but should we fail to be firm and dogmatic, the devil will certainly take advantage of the opportunity. I want my children to have a church life that will be grounded on the rock. I want their children to sit under a minister who will be true to the Word. I do not have any apology for my convictions, because they are based on the Bible. I preach so, first, because I love Him who gave Himself for me. I could not do otherwise in the light of all He has done for me. Second, I love my denomination. My denomination has been good to me, and to let down the guard would be to betray the trust that she has placed in me as one of her ministers. I want to be faithful at all costs. Many times we lose would-be friends when we really take a stand, but that is the only thing that will really glorify the Lord Jesus Christ—a firm stand based upon the Word. I pray that it may be said in days to come that we, as Free Will Baptists, have stood as we ought.

Mental Garden

Grenville Kleiser

Resentment is an ugly thing,
It crowds the roses out;
Keep your mental garden fair;
Put harmful things to rout.

Seed-thoughts that you cultivate
Within your fertile mind
Bring forth varied blossoms
According to their kind.

Anger, malice, worry, fear,
Are noxious mental seeds;
Quickly rid your mind of them
Before they choke as weeds.

Faith, gentleness, humility,
Truth, patience, unselfish love
Are specimens of seedlings rare.
Approved of God above.

Your mental garden is a place
In which you daily dwell;
Let nothing ugly flourish there:
Safeguard and tend it well.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Mrs. Mary N. Spears

Mrs. Mary N. Spears was born in Calhoun County, Florida, on January 4, 1872, and departed this life January 27, 1960, making her stay on earth 88 years.

"Aunt Polly," as she was affectionately known to her relatives and friends, had a long, useful life. The best that can be said of her is that she lived a beautiful, Christian life, and her goodness overflowed and enriched the lives of others. Fellowship with her was an honor, a joy and a blessing.

She was a lifelong, faithful and loyal member of the Christian Home Free Will Baptist Church, which she loved and cherished. She was also a charter member of the woman's auxiliary, and her passing has left a vacancy in the life of every member. One of the circles in the auxiliary was lovingly named, "The Polly Spears Circle."

In her passing, the church has lost one of its most loved members. She possessed a deep and abiding faith in her God, whom she loved and served.

She was a patient and loving mother, a devoted wife and a kind friend to everyone. She was loved and esteemed by all who knew her. The humble manner in which she bore her afflictions and sufferings without a murmur, always submissive to God's will, was evidence of her faith in a supreme God.

She was married to Mr. W. J. Spears September 19, 1889, who preceded her in death more than 30 years ago. To this happy union was born nine children.

The saintly mother will be sorely missed, but the grieved children will always treasure in their memory the sweet devotion and influence of her life. Truly, she looked well to the ways of her household, and her children rise up and call her blessed. Heaven will be sweeter and more beautiful because she is there.

Funeral services were conducted from the Christian Home Free Will Baptist Church by her pastor, the Rev. Daniel Pelt, assisted by the Rev. W. J. Floyd. Burial was in Nettle Ridge Cemetery with her nephews acting as pallbearers.

She is survived by four sons, Joe and John of Blountstown; Charlie of Port St. Joe, and Decar of Jacksonville; two daughters, Mrs. Laura Lamb of Chattahoochee, and Mrs. Mag Rabon of Blountstown; two brothers, Charlie and Joe Holley of Blountstown; one sister, Mrs. Mollie Barber of Millville; 20 grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren and 1 great-great-granddaughter, besides a host of cherished friends who mourn her passing.

Each survivor holds a treasure chest of rich, precious memories of a loving, devoted mother and an humble Christian. The family, her church, her friends and the community have suffered a great loss in the passing of "Aunt Polly," but we bow reverently to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

May the richest blessings of our heavenly Father rest and abide on all who are near and dear to her.

Written by one who loved her dearly,
Annie Belle Taylor

In Memoriam

(This is written in loving memory of one of our dear members of Christian Home Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. Chellie Braccwell, who departed this life September 27, 1959.)

Just four months ago today,
Chellie gentle slipped away,
To be with Him up above
Where all is peace and joy and love.

No one knows the silent heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief we bore in silence
For the one we loved so well.

No one on earth will ever know,
How it hurt to see her go;
But we must learn to be content
With the 56 years she spent.

Dear Chellie, you were so hard to spare,
But we know you were needed there,
With your humbleness so sweet,
Heaven must be more complete.

The Master's Business

by Floyd B. Cherry

Text: "... what is that to thee? follow thou me" (John 21:22).

PETER and some of the other apostles had gone fishing, but after fishing all night they had caught nothing. Just as day was breaking, Jesus stood on the beach. He told them to cast their net on the right side. As they obeyed, their net was filled. When they got on land, they saw a charcoal fire with fish on it which Jesus had prepared for them.

A DANGEROUS CONCERN

The seaside breakfast had ended, and the apostles were watching the silvery waves along the beach. Surging emotions filled their souls, for they realized that the Stranger who had awaited their incoming boat was the Lord. It must have been wonderful to see Him as He gracefully sat watching the hungry men eating the meal that He had prepared for them.

Tenderly He had spoken to Peter, and the thrice-asked question "Lovest thou Me?" had stirred them deeply. Peter had been moved almost to tears for the denials of a earlier occasion were still in his mind. The after awhile Peter looked at John and said to Jesus, "Lord, and what shall this man do?"

The Lord answered, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Simon Peter, your greatest mistake is that you are often thinking and looking at other people. Do you remember how I sent you to take the money from the mouth of the fish. You were upset then because other people's opinion had overshadowed your outlook. Do you remember how you denied knowledge of Me? That happened because you permitted other people to influence you. Peter, be less concerned about other folk and think more about the Master."

A DELIGHTFUL CORRECTION

"What is that to thee?" If I be the Lord, and you are my servant, your chief aim should be to do my will. If I decide that John should linger till I return, that is no business of yours, is it? "Simon Peter, if you are to feed My lambs, and shepherd My sheep, you will need to look constantly to Me. The days ahead will be difficult and if you lose sight of Me anything can happen. Attend to your own affairs." Thus did Jesus correct Peter who was always getting into trouble because he had not mastered the art of minding his own business.

A DEFINITE COMMAND

"Follow thou Me." When Peter heard this command his thoughts probably went back to the morning when the Lord first called him. After borrowing Peter's boat Christ had said, "Follow Me, and I will make you to become a fisher of men." Now another commission had been given. He has been told to shepherd the flock of God.

The Christian pathway is beset with many dangers, and problems will arise to confound those who are not prepared for emergencies of the way. To follow Christ means to learn of Him and to be taught by Him. By following Christ and learning about Christ and from Christ, Peter, the fearful apostle who had failed before the taunts of a servant girl, eventually reached unprecedented heights of personal loyalty. He followed his Lord to a cross; he was faithful unto death.

Recently, I saw a placard on the office of a businessman which said: "Lord, keep me so busy at my own job that I will not have time to stick my nose in other people's business."

Marylin's Monster

by Jeanette Lockerbie

HAD FAINTED, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living." The pastor finished his reading of the morning lesson, and Marylin found herself pondering over the last phrase, ". . . the land of the living."

It was good to be alive—to be in the land of the living. And especially a pastor's wife; so many nice things happened to her. Oh, there were the occasional annoyances incidental to her husband's profession, but, on the whole this early spring morning, Marylin Goddard, minister's wife, was happy and completely contented with her life.

Then it happened. From her vantage point in the choir loft Marylin had an excellent view of the whole congregation. Could that be—was it? Yes! It was Joanne Landers! Marylin leaned forward to get a better look at that worshiper in the aisle seat, second pew from the back of the church. As if she needed to! There was no mistaking the unbelievably blond hair, that never seemed to darken, and the contrasting deep brown eyes. It was Joanne, all right.

The morning service, the outlook for the pleasant Sunday, was spoiled.

"Geoff will be sure to invite her for dinner. Well, I'll show him. I will invite her first, before he has a chance to speak to her." There was bitterness in Marylin's thoughts. She had thought this was a closed chapter in her life, that she had defeated the demon of jealousy that had plagued the first years of their marriage. But just this one impulse of Joanne and all the old gnawing, the old bitterness came to the surface again.

The service went on. Geoff, all unconscious of the conflict in the heart of his young wife, preached his usual brilliant sermon. Marylin's thoughts were miles away.

They had all been in college together. Geoff and Joanne, from the same small town, had been friends all their lives. Marylin had fallen in love with the tall, crew-cut, red-headed Geoff at first sight. And he, too, had seemed impressed with her. As the weeks had gone by, he had said with his crooked grin that so captivated her, "Marylin, you are just right for me. You just fit for size, not like tall, gangling Joanne. She's too tall for me. And your hair—so straight and dark—must be some Indian in your family, and I like Indians!"

Marylin took off her choir robe, conscious of her last year's dress. With a glance at the smooth dark bangs and a quick dab with her powder, she hurried out of the choir room and maneuvered her way through the congregation.

"What a surprise, Joanne! I thought you were at the other end of the state! You must come home with us for dinner. I'll just slip to the door and tell Geoff."

In a moment they were out on the walk that skirted the church. "Geoff will bring Debby. She is in the nursery. We can start dinner. Geoff is always starved after he preaches." I must be casual and impersonal. I mustn't let her see how much she upsets me. Marylin was angry and ashamed. Why had Joanne come back into their lives? Well, she wasn't going to ask her. Of that she was sure.

"We have company for dinner, Baby." Marylin heard Geoff's cheery voice through the open kitchen door, and watched as he swung three-year-old Debby up the steps. "Say 'Hello' to your Auntie Joanne."

"Oh, I like when we have company for dinner. Hello, are you really my Auntie Joanne?" the childish voice prattled on.

"Honey, I'm going to take Joanne into the den; we have a lot to catch up on. I have to hear all about everybody back home, you know. Let me know if I can help with dinner."

"If I can help! If I can help!" Marylin felt the hot blood in her face, and she clenched her hands. Didn't they always work together on Sundays? "It's a busy day for you, too, Marylin, with teaching Sunday school, singing in the choir and counseling the young people's groups. Why should you do all the kitchen work too?" But that was when there was no Joanne on the scene!

Marylin could hear them; the eagerness in their voices, the interest. She prepared a particularly fine dinner, slamming a few dishes as she did so. The child ran from room to room playing with her white kitten. "Mummie, is she really my Auntie Joanne? Isn't she awfully pretty, Mummie? Her hair is like my best dolly's, all soft and silky. Is she really, truly, my auntie?"

"She was almost your mother!" Marylin was tempted to snap, but checked the impulse. After all, why take it out on the child? It was her father she would like to flay.

They were seated at the dinner table. Why does she not come right out and say it. It's in every look and word. "I knew your husband before you did" the black thoughts intruded, even as she attempted to enter into the conversation.

Geoff was speaking. "Isn't it a shame about Dave? It sure is nice to have Joanne here, but I'm sorry about old Dave. (Vaguely Marylin remembered there had been a "Dave" in those college days.)

"I haven't had a chance to hear what brings Joanne to town," said Marylin.

"It's Dave. He has to have some special medical care and Jo has come to see Dr. Phillips. You know he is from our home town. Well, it seems he is out of the city and not expected back for a few days. I've told Jo she mustn't stay in a room in a tourist home. Not with us here! What do you say, Marylin?"

"Oh, of course not! You must come and stay with us for the few days. You can have Debby's room."

"Debby's room! Not for our guest, Marylin! Why can't she have our room? We can sleep on the sofa in the living room."

"Nothing but the best for Auntie Joanne!" thought the seething Marylin. "By all means, let her have our room."

The next day was Debby's birthday. Marylin could have screamed as she watched the child show off her Auntie Joanne to her little friends—and their mothers! "She's prettier than anybody's auntie. I just love her."

Joanne could do everything. She made the extra-fancy decoration on the cake; she knew all the right childish games; she bandaged the knee when one tot fell off the bike; she named the ancient station wagon the party cart as Geoff toted the children home—while I am left to clean up the mess. She was fit to be tied!

"No minister's wife should feel as I feel—but, then, should any minister cause his

NEWS NOTES

New Church Organized In Alabama

On Sunday, January 31, the Cedar Grove Free Will Baptist Church of Route 2, Wilsonville, Alabama, was organized with 24 charter members. The Rev. W. H. Ryland of Birmingham, Alabama, was in charge of the organizational meeting. He presented the Articles of Faith, explaining fully the Free Will Baptist doctrine; he also read the Church Covenant and presented the Bible. The church members were encouraged to support all of the denominational enterprises, and also to tithe.

One of the members has given the church a one-half acre lot on which to build a sanctuary. The surrounding of cedars led to the name of Cedar Grove Church. Other members have made pledges toward erecting the building in the early spring. The location of the new church is about 38 miles south of Birmingham, Alabama. The clerk of the church is Miss Doris Davis, Route 2, Wilsonville, Alabama.

The Rev. M. C. Isbell of Leeds, Alabama, was elected pastor; he will continue the services every Sunday and Sunday night. The services will be held in the homes of the members until the building can be erected.

A Sunday school of 40 members was organized at the first meeting. The group feels that the church has a promising future since it is miles from the nearest church. All the members pledged their loyalty to the Free Will Baptist faith.

Mr. Ryland states that there are other fields in Alabama open to the establishment of new churches in 1960, under the direction of the Alabama Home Mission Board.

Midway Church Announces Revival

Revival services will begin at the Midway Free Will Baptist Church near Moultrie, Georgia, on February 27, 1960. The Rev. J. E. Wood of Blakely, Georgia, will be the visiting evangelist for these services.

The Rev. Manee Cason, pastor, extends a cordial invitation to everyone to attend this revival.

Hickory Grove Observes National Youth Week

Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church, near Malone, Florida, observed National Youth Week January 24-29. The youth of the church, in conference with the pastor, the Rev. Chester H. Pelt, planned and directed the program.

Bobby Vaughn, sophomore at Chipola Junior College, Marianna, Florida, was general director, and Jimmy Ditty, freshman at Chipola Junior College, was program chairman. Lanell Oswald, graduate of Troy State College and now employed as a teacher in Dothan, Alabama, was music director. Lanell is a member of Hickory Grove and very active as a leader.

Speakers and their subjects were as follows:

Bobby Vaughn, member of Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church, "Under Orders to Believe."

Johnny Chafin, member of Damaseus Free Will Baptist Church and a sophomore at Chipola Junior College, "Under Orders to Yield."

Sara Rich, member of Chipley Free Will Baptist Church and a sophomore at Chipola Junior College, "Under Orders to Witness."

Jimmy Ditty, member of Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church, "Under Orders to Reach Out."

Mary Ruth Oswald, member of Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church, a graduate of Troy State College and now employed as a teacher in Golson Elementary of Marianna, "Under Orders to Prepare."

Lowell Croom, member of Marvin Chapel Free Will Baptist Church and a senior at Florida State University, "Under Orders to Serve."

Refreshments and Christian fellowship were enjoyed each evening by the large group of youth and adults in attendance in Fellowship Hall, a new extension of the educational building of the church.

The membership of the church, both young and old experienced a revival. Some people in the community were reached that had not responded to the efforts of Christians heretofore. Indeed, there are hidden treasures in our Free Will Baptist youth.

Miss Rich brought with her a group of young ladies from the Chipley Free Will Baptist Church on Tuesday night, Flossie and Freda Owens, Mary Rich and their pianist, who brought several appropriate and beautiful messages in song.

Social activities for the youth of Hickory Grove during February will include an informal hymn sing in the home of a member of the church, and a Valentine banquet in Fellowship Hall.

"I feel like I do?" she rationalized, but all the guilt and shame were mixed with anger. She should pray—but somehow God seemed far away.

The telephone rang at dinner time and Geoff rose to answer it. "It's for you, Joanne," he said, "the Doc."

"Oh, he must have come back earlier." Joanne's voice trailed off into the air. "We must pray, Marylin, that this trip of Joanne's will be worthwhile, and that Dr. Phillips will really be able to give her the encouraging news to take back to home," Geoff said thoughtfully.

Marylin found herself clenching her fists under the tablecloth. "I'll pray, if it will mean that Joanne will go home to home," her unkind thoughts appalled her!

M. L. Johnson, Business Mgr.

Was she letting the fact that Joanne was in their home disturb her to such a degree? She had never been unkind, unreasonable, but this—this was something she couldn't seem to fight.

"Dr. Phillips will see me right away. Will you please excuse me? I am so glad. I'll just go right over." Eagerness told in every word as the tall, attractive girl picked up her hat and bag and hurried off down the street.

In an hour she was back. Not the same Joanne—the gay, vibrant, life-of-the-party Joanne. Marylin was alone when she returned. Joanne looked wilted. She slumped into a chair, her head in her hands. After a long moment, she looked up. "Marylin, how could I stand it if you weren't here for me to talk to? I need you. The doctor says that Dave—that Dave . . ." she broke down.

All Marylin really heard was "Marylin

. . . I need you." Joanne, self-sufficient, always calm and composed Joanne, needs me: she needs me!

Her pixy face with its straight dark bangs was tearful as Marylin crossed the rug and bent down over Joanne. "Jo, tell me, what is it? Why are you so upset? What did the doctor say?"

Joanne straightened up in her chair. "It's worse, much worse than we had feared. Dr. Phillips says Dave may never walk again. He studied the X-ray plates I took with me. There's just one thing. If he could have Dave here constantly, there might be some hope, but that is quite impossible for us. You know our circumstances, Marylin. I had thought that this trip would give Dave real hope. I thought—"

Marylin cut in on Joanne's words. "Come on! let's go over to the church. Geoff is there in his study. Tell him—oh, there he is out on the walk. Geoff, take Joanne into your study, please, dear."

"Oh, I'm so glad I can talk to you and Geoff, Marylin. Thank God, I came here."

"I'll see you both in a few minutes," Marylin called as she left them at the study door. "There's some business I have to attend to in the church." A sick feeling had come over her. Here she was, jealous—yes, she let herself admit it—jealous of Joanne. She, Marylin with so much to live for—Geoff, her little girl, a secure happy future ahead of her, and Joanne—what did Joanne have to face in the future?

It was a half hour later. Joanne and Geoff came quietly into the sanctuary. A figure rose from her kneeling position at the front of the church. They were too late to hear her broken words, ". . . and oh, God, please forgive me for being so unkind—and ungrateful for all Your goodness to me in the laud of the living; help me to be more worthy. Amen."

They met halfway up the aisle. "Geoff, can't we arrange to have Joanne and Dave come here and be with us while Dave takes the treatments. We know how good Dr. Phillips is. We can manage and I just know—I feel it inside that Dave will walk again. We'll get him on his feet, won't we, Joanne?"

"Honey, I almost forgot to tell you. I had a call this morning in the study. It was Mrs. Farley. You know she has that wonderful class, the business and professional girls, and she has to give it up. They were pretty cut up about losing her as their teacher, until Mrs. Farley said that you were the very person to take her place. You will, won't you?"

"Yes, Geoff, I will. I—well, I just killed a monster."—Gospel Herald.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Should a Christian support a church that denies the virgin birth, the deity or the finished work of Christ on Calvary?
—R. E. Tyson, North Carolina.

Answer: No, we should pray for such a church and for even one church member that might hold such erroneous views while trying in any way we think possible or feel lead by the Holy Spirit to help him before we denounce or even forsake such a person or such a church. Until we have first lived and witnessed in a Christlike manner before people that have been taught erroneously and have in part committed themselves to the way of error, we have come short of that taught us in the Bible. Remember that each local church is composed of the individual Christians that constitute its membership, and we as Christians have a responsibility to each of these. "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (James 5:19, 20); "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee" (1 Timothy 4:16). We are instructed to exhort each other daily throughout this age. "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. But exhort one another daily, while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end" (Hebrews 3:12-14).

When all that the Bible teaches to do to recover a brother or a church has been done and nothing has helped those in error to come back into fellowship, then and not before, it is time to withdraw membership with the church and fellowship with the individual. However, we should remember that we are called to give the gospel to all creatures of a lost world and not to a few cager souls; therefore, if the withdrawal of membership from a church is done while the Holy Spirit influences us to take the message to certain individuals that are un-saved, it would still remain our duty to obey Him. This might be done without sanctioning the unbelief fostered by the leaders. Sometimes Satan will confuse us, making it hard to know how to act; but we may be sure that while there are lost souls that we may be reasonably sure would take Christ as Saviour were the Word explained to them, it is our duty to see that they get the Word.

Question: Did God predestinate Judas' betrayal of Christ and the end of his life that resulted from it?—James Monague, North Carolina.

Answer: No! Not if by this you mean that God arbitrarily foreordained that Judas could not believe and be saved. Anyone who knows our God as the Bible sets Him forth could not accept such a doctrine of predestination; nor that it was foretold of Judas that he would betray our Lord cannot be denied, neither would a reasonable Christian care at all to argue that anything else is the truth. God foretold this truth because His foreknowledge enables Him to do such. This by no means alters the cast that Judas was a free moral agent, and therefore, what he did he did of his own volition. He could have done differently if he had only willed or chosen to do so.

"Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus. For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry. Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out. And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood. For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and his bishoprick let another take. Wherefore of these men which have accompanied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection. And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew wheth of these two thou hast chose, That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place" (Acts 1:25). Pay special attention to the last three words in this passage of Scripture. They do not say that Judas by predestination fell by foreordination fell, but by transgression fell. This, of course, means that Judas by his own transgression fell. If doubt occurred before giving full consideration to the words, now that you have considered them, none can be left in the answering of your question. Judas by transgression fell.

(PSALM 119:105)

HOW CAN I KNOW I AM A CHRISTIAN?

"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death" (1 John 3:14).

My subject this week is a question that is asked often and by many people of all ages and walks of life. The question cannot be answered in one article, therefore, I will use as many as I think is necessary to give a clear and adequate answer.

In a recent issue of one of the leading religious magazines published in this country, in a question and answer department appeared a question and its answer headed "How to Know":

The question: A class of boys and girls in their teens has asked me, their Sunday school teacher, this question: "How do I know when I am saved?" How would you answer it?

The answer: We know we are saved, and we not, when we meet the conditions that are clearly stated by Jesus Himself. He said "Seek and ye shall find. Ask and ye shall receive. Knock and it shall be opened unto you." It is just as simple as that. If we believe in His truth, which of course we do, and His power to keep a promise, then when in sincerity we have asked, we have received. When with a sincere heart we have sought, then we have found. I could make it much more complex but I do not unt to.

Well, Doctor, I think you have made it complex enough that those who read or hear your answer will possibly be more confused than ever before. I find nothing, at most very little, in the foregoing answer to give assurance to any one who has been made to doubt his conversion. It is the purpose of the devil to make every christian doubt his relationship with God he can. I think that is the reason that the Bible contains so many verses giving us the much needed assurance. It is the purpose of these articles to point some of them out to all who are anxious to know the certainty of their relationship as the children of God.

But before we can continue with satisfaction we need to ask and answer another question. Do we understand what we are saved by? The answer to this question can be stated in a single sentence, but it requires a lifetime for its understanding. We are saved by the grace of God—by the free, gracious, outpouring of God's love upon us and His forgiveness when we repent of our sin, accept Him as personal Saviour and turn to Him for cleansing and strength. We cannot—we cannot—save ourselves; it is God that saves us. But this does not mean that it does not cost anything on our part. God can save us only when we meet His conditions and open our hearts and lives to receive Him and His power.

In considering whether we are Christians or not, we need to learn what it means to be lost—What is a lost soul? To be lost means simply to be out of right relationship with God. This means to be separated from fellowship with Him by sin or through our own indifference and self-will, to be cut off from our own best living because we have cut ourselves off from its sources in God. Jesus told some immortal parables to illustrate this—about a lost sheep, a lost coin, a lost boy who we call the prodigal son. Only as we let God forgive, direct and master us can we find freedom and strength to go forward with assurance.

The forgiveness granted by God to us when we repent and believe is what we understand as conversion. But what do we mean by conversion? To be converted as the derivation suggests, means to turn around, to turn about from a self-centered life to a God-centered life. When this is experienced and anyone comes to Christ and Christ comes into him, and he resolves earnestly by the help of God to live in the future, not for self alone, but for God and for other people, a change takes place that is the most important thing that can ever happen to any soul.

Visitation Pays!

A certain fellow once met a girl. She was very sweet and lovely, so he decided to do some heavy courting. He then bought 365 postal cards, one for every day of the year.

For 12 long months he sent her a lovely note each day. Every day for 365 days she received a lovely note on one of the postal cards. At the end of the year she got married—to the postman. Visitation pays off!

It's the constant visit that counts. Postal cards, letters and other literature are fine, but it the constant, repeated visiting that brings the results!—Selected.

How They Prayed

George Whitfield, the famous English evangelist, said, "O Lord, give me souls, or take my soul!"

Henry Martyn, a missionary, cried as he knelt on India's coral strands, "Here let me burn out for God."

David Brainerd, missionary to the North American Indians, declared—"Lord, to Thee I dedicate myself. Oh, accept of me, and let me be Thine forever. Lord, I desire nothing else; I desire nothing more." The last words in his diary, written seven days before he died, "Oh, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen."

THE SEVEN CHRISTIAN FREEDOMS

(John 8:36)

1. We may have freedom from sin (Romans 6:22).

Christ came to destroy sin; it is your privilege to become free (Romans 6:14; 1 John 3:8, 9; John 3:14-16).

2. We may have freedom from the law (Galatians 5:1).

The Jews had been under law—Gentiles were not; Christ makes free (Galatians 2:11-16; Acts 15:10, 11).

3. We may have freedom from the world (1 John 2:15-17).

We live in the world, but are not of the world, and have no fellowship (John 17:16; Matthew 6:24; James 4:4).

4. We may have freedom from darkness (Colossians 1:13).

When Christ came the world was in spiritual darkness; He brought light (Isaiah 60:1-5; Luke 1:79; 1 Thessalonians 5:4, 5).

5. We may have freedom from worry (Matthew 6:25-34).

"Stop being anxious and worried"; "Be not over anxious" (James 4:13-15; 1 Peter 5:7; Hebrews 13:5; Psalm 37:5).

6. We may have freedom from death (Hebrews 2:14, 15).

The second death, the eternal death, has no power over the believer (Revelations 20:6; John 11:25, 26; Colossians 3:3, 4).

7. We may have freedom from condemnation (Romans 8:1).

There is no adjudging wrong; Christ has freed us (Romans 8:2). The believer stands justified in the sight of God—through Christ (2 Corinthians 3:6; 1 Timothy 5:24; John 8:36).—By Rev. C. C. Maple, Gospel Herald

Delinquency Starts in Homes Like These . . .

Studies of delinquency conducted at Harvard University show:

Six out of every ten juvenile delinquent have fathers who drink to excess.

Many have mothers who drink to excess.

Three out of four are permitted by parents to come and go as they please.

Three out of four are from homes where there is discord between parents.

Seven out of ten are from homes where there is no group or family recreation.

Four out of five have parents who take no interest in the children's friends.

Four out of five delinquent boys say their mothers were indifferent to them.

Three out of five boys say their fathers were indifferent to them.

Many came from broken families.

Few get religious training of any kind.—U. S. News and World Report, Quoted from Western District Education Bulletin.

The Best Exposition

Samuel Bradburn was a co-worker of John Wesley. One time Bradburn was in difficult circumstances. Wesley learned of his situation and sent him a five-pound note, accompanied by the following letter: "Dear Sammy: 'Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.' Yours affectionately, John Wesley." Bradburn replied promptly to the letter. He wrote, "Reverend and Dear Sir: I have often been struck with the beauty of the Scripture quoted in your letter, but I must confess that I never saw such useful expository notes on it before!"

"Go, and do thou likewise."—Gospel Herald.

"I Will Not Lie"

An errand boy quietly entered the office of his employer and said, "Sir, Mr. Carmichel would like to see you." The employer frowned and said, "Tell him I'm out." "But, sir," the boy replied, "he said he had a special reason for wanting to see you." Demanded the employer gruffly, "Do what I tell you to do. Tell him I'm out." The boy thought for a moment and then bravely said, "But, sir, I can't do that!" "Can't do it?" said the employer angrily. The boy replied, "I can't do it because it isn't true. My father and mother taught me to always speak the truth! I may lose my position, but I will not lie!" Bravo!—Gospel Herald.

"I Wiped Away the Blood—I Went Right On"

One day John Wesley preached to a great throng in an outdoor meeting. Wesley preached an evangelistic sermon, pleading with the unsaved ones to flee from the wrath to come. Said Wesley, "Many of the people acted like beasts and did their best to disturb the meeting. They tried to drive a herd of cows into the crowd, but without success. Then they began to throw stones—showers of them. One of them struck me between the eyes. I wiped away the blood, and went right on, declaring that God has given to them that believe, not the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.' By the spirit which now appeared . . . I saw what a blessing it is when it is given us, even in the lowest degree, to suffer for His name's sake!"—Gospel Herald.

SOME CLIPPINGS FROM OTHER PERIODICALS

According to a report given by the Western Voice, J. Edgar Hoover would require children to attend Sunday school. I will agree with Mr. Hoover, however, by law we cannot compel children to go to Sunday school and church. At this time we have the right of freedom in religion, but may I remind you that we are on the road to the denial of religious freedom which is possible by any totalitarian power getting control of our government. It certainly would be a good thing if parents would be honest with God and honest with their children by taking them to Sunday school and church instead of sending them. As long as we have unchristian parents, we will have unchristian children. All Christians will agree that it is a good thing to go to Sunday school and church. Of course, infidels will deny the good in all Christian work. Here is the voice of Mr. Hoover according to the Western Voice:

Require Sunday School; Hoover

"F.B.I. Chief J. Edgar Hoover says every child in the U.S. should be compelled to attend Sunday school.

"He made the statement in an interview with a Roman Catholic priest which appeared in Friday's edition of 'The Pilot,' official diocesan publication.

"Hoover was interviewed by the Rev. Fin Lancaster, who quoted him as saying he would also urge regular attendance at church and re-establishment of religious exercises in the home."

I certainly agree with Mr. Hoover in the spirit, but I say we will have to get hell-bound parents converted to get what he advocates.

Priest Defends Drinking

"The Rev. Hugh Michael Beahan, radio and television director of the Grand Rapids Roman Catholic Diocese, told the nation's tavernkeepers to get rid of their inferiority complex, because they are in an honorable profession. In an address to the tenth annual convention of the National Licensed Beverage Association, he told the delegates: '... stand up and fight the blue-nosed enemies of the liquor industry. You have every right to take your legitimate place in your community as a man who provides a legal and honest service.'

"'Controlled drinking,' he asserted, 'relieves tension and relaxes.'

"As the saying goes, liquor has many defenders but no defense."—Christian Heritage.

What God's Word Says

It makes no difference what this priest says nor any other person on earth in the defense of alcoholic beverages. God's Word stands against the preaching of any good at all in drinking liquors. It was not so long ago that a preacher of one of the oldest and largest denominations in America, in a sermon or address, upheld the use of alcoholic beverages. I would like to quote just a little of what God says; and I may repeat, I believe what God says regardless of the opinion of human beings.

God says in Genesis 9:21, "And he (Noah) drank of the wine, and was drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent." Thus the drinking of wine caused indecent exposure. Often we see drunks brought up in court for indecent exposure. A drunkard will do all kinds of sinful things, and in general swear that he knew not what he was doing.

Again God says in Numbers 6:3, "He (the Nazarite) shall separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried." The Nazarite had to be separated from strong drink. If we are children of God, we are to be separated from all sin and fellowship with sinful usages of life, and drunkenness is sin according to God's Word.

In 2 Corinthians 6:17 it is written, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." God does not demand that we should be good mixers, as some theologians preach, but we are to be separated from evil companions.

Now again let us listen to God, as recorded in Proverbs 20:1. "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." The wisdom of God says wine deceives. I say those who advocate drinking strong drink are not wise.

In Proverbs 23:29-32 we read, "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Millions are suffering the pangs of hunger because strong drink has robbed them of reason, and the woes mentioned in Verse 29 are being realized. Our welfare agencies, our churches and our benevolent societies are being taxed to death in order to keep poor little children from dying of starvation. Homes are broken, prostitutes are made, prisons are filled with criminals, and hell is being enlarged because our nation has turned to the devil of strong drink. We are sold for revenues that come from different alcoholic beverages. What fools we are to drink! Fools that pay the tax on the liquors and then pay for the use of that which they drink. Yes, tax for the purchase and tax to the law for the use. But there is something worse than our government taxation. Galatians 5:21 tells us that drunkenness will keep a man out of the Kingdom of heaven. Thus the final penalty of drunkenness is hell—hell in the home where it is consumed and hell-fire after this life. We are a nation of drunkards! Deny it if you please. Listen to the preachers who advocate its use, and you will soon feel the bite of the serpent and the sting of the adder.

That Wonderful Place Called Heaven

F. W. Davis

There's a wonderful place called heaven,
That Jesus has gone to prepare—
And all the redeemed of all ages
Will live through eternity there.

All sorrow and pain are forgotten,
No clouds to cover the sky;
His saints are transformed in His likeness,
And no one ever shall die.

Oh, wonderful city celestial—
So beautiful and shining with gold!
The inhabitants up there will be happy,
And not one shall ever grow old.

What a thrill it brings to my spirit,
When I think of this wonderful place,
Where we shall be ever with Jesus,
Eternally saved by His grace!

Sociability

Christ knew the value of sociability and took advantage of it, but always in line with His mission. Whether at a marriage in Cana (John 2:1-11), the guest of a self-righteous Pharisee (Luke 7:36-50), a despised publican (Luke 19:1-10), or talking by the wayside with a lone Samaritan woman (John 4:5-26), He allows no interference or criticism of men to hinder Him from witnessing to His divine appointment.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

"A NEW SONG"

by Velma B. McConnell

JIM BENTON was very fond of music, and wherever you saw him, he was whistling, singing or humming. He would stand on the corner, his collar pulled up to protect him from the cold of winter, selling his papers, and whistling a popular melody. Some of the other boys called him "The Songbird of Fourteenth Street" but he did not care. He would flash his broad grin, and whistle louder.

To Jim the fact that his mother could afford neither radio nor record player was a real tragedy. So Jim got into the bad habit of loafing around drugstores or public places where the juke box was always played. He would take a hard-earned nickel or dime and buy himself a drink of something cool, or a dish of ice cream, then sit quietly and listen to the music that others paid for. Jim did not care whether the music was hillbilly music, cowboy, dance music or love songs. To him, it was music. He could sing any piece that he heard once.

One Saturday night Jim was wandering aimlessly down the street. He knew that his mother expected him home to deliver a washing that she had done for a wealthy lady. Still he loitered. The evening was mild, and it seemed as if music tingled through him. What was that—yes, Jim heard real music! He hurried to where the sound came bursting on the air.

On a street corner stood a small group of people. A lady sat before a small portable organ, and about her were several men, blowing musical instruments. One man held a violin. But what odd music this was! It was a march, to be sure, but he had never heard it from a corner juke box. What was it? Jim's feet began to keep time.

"Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war,
With the Cross of Jesus,
Going on before!"

Now the horns and the organ stopped. The leader was speaking. Jim strained his ears against the noise of cars, busses and general noises of a Saturday night.

"My friends, we are now going to our mission on Twelfth Street. If you have enjoyed our music and want to hear more, come with us. We will do you good. If you want to hear more about our Lord and His saving power, come with us. If you are hungry, or thirsty or if you want something that really satisfies, come with us."

The boy's eyes opened wide with wonder? What was this? Did the man mean that he would give away real food, and something to drink? Jim was not hungry. His mother, with her washing and sewing, was able to provide enough to fill a growing lad, even though there were no fancy little salads or desserts. Jim did not care about the food being offered. But to hear more music—ah, that was different! This fellow did not say you had to pay anything to hear the music.

"I'm a-going with them," he decided. "I don't know what it's all about, but I can't lose anything! If it's something free, I'm a-going to get in on it. I can always duck out the door if I don't like it."

So saying, Jim followed the band of people who had started down the street. They were humming the strange new marching song and Jim found himself humming it with them.

The building had been freshly painted inside, too, and was filled with chairs. On the front of the room were painted signs. Jim spelled them out, "Jesus Saves" and "Have You Been Born Again?"

"That's funny," thought Jim. "I have heard lots of people say 'Jesus' but they don't say it only when they are swearing. My mother doesn't allow me to say it, and here it is written in this building!"

He now noticed that the room held a handful of people besides the ones who had stood on the corner. There were people that Jim did not know at all, then there were a couple boys whom he had seen selling papers on a distant street. Back in the last seat was Tipsey Pete. Tipsey Pete was always drunk. Jim wondered why he was here. Perhaps he thought the beer parlor had opened up again and was hoping someone would treat him to a drink. Jim's mother had always told Jim that drink was terrible and that she hoped he would never touch it. She told Jim, too, never to make fun of Tipsey Pete or try to knock him down as other boys did.

Now Jim's attention was drawn to the platform. The leader was standing there, with a book in his hand. Jim noticed that the lady who played the organ on the street had opened the organ and was sitting before it again, and the men with the horns and violin were standing near her. The leader began to speak.

"I am sorry that we haven't our song books yet. The Church is going to give us their old hymn books as soon as their new ones arrive. So this evening you will just sing some of the old songs that you all know."

The lady began to play, and the music instruments began. In a moment everyone was singing a song that Jim thought he remembered hearing his mother sing, long before she began to be so tired. He sat still, just listening:

"So I'll cherish the old rugged Cross,
Till my trophies at last I lay down;
I will cling to the old rugged Cross,
And exchange it, some day for a crown

More songs followed, and Jim sat enraptured with the music. Finally the music stopped, the men laid down their instruments and seated themselves. The speaker rose and began to talk. Perhaps they would play more of it. Perhaps there would have more meetings and he could come again. But what was that man saying now?

"Any heart that has not Jesus living in it cannot be in tune with Him. You do not know the real meaning of music, the real joy of living, until He puts a new song in your heart."

Jim listened unbelievably. "A new song in tune with Him? It sounded so strange! Was this perhaps a music class that he had found?"

Much to his own amazement, Jim raised his hand and when the leader nodded to him, Jim asked timidly, "Please, Sir, will you teach me a new song? I'm powerful fond of music!"

"I certainly will, my lad!" exclaimed the leader. "Just come up front here, and I will show you how you can find a new song!" Then he looked around the room. "If there is anyone else here who wants to find the Lord Jesus as Saviour, come up with this boy. Are you tired of your way of living? Are you sick of sin? Do you want to find forgiveness and peace? Just come to Jesus now—He satisfies."

Jim walked slowly to the front of the building and knelt down by a chair. What an odd way to get a song, he thought. Then he saw that Tipsey Pete was kneeling beside the other chair. Tipsey Pete had tears on his face. Did he want a song, too?

In the next few minutes the leader explained salvation to the boy, told him about the Lord Jesus, who came to earth and died to save sinners, boys and girls, men and women, alike. Told how He had risen from dead that born again souls might rise n and find new life and eternal salva-(. It was all so new to the boy, who had er been inside a Sunday school or church.

found tears running down his face, too.
Please, Mister, I want Jesus in my heart!
didn't know anybody only my mother
d me like that! I want only to belong Jim, too!"
m accepted Jesus right there. The Lord s came into his heart and cleansed it n sin. The shining face of the boy bore mony to that. He rose from his knees exclaimed, "I feel so good! I—I feel f I could sing!"
The lady at the organ started a hymn, began to sing softly, "There's within my heart a melody"; and after a little Jim took up the words too. He heard Tipsey Peter's cracked voice joining in with the others.

There is a little more to this story. Jim had indeed found a new song—and one of the first Bible verses that he learned was
"O sing unto the LORD a new song; for he hath done marvellous things" (Psalm 98:
1). Jim grew in grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ and his shining face and happy singing won others to the Lord.
When he was older, he became a minister of the gospel and a gospel singer. But he never forgot to tell his audiences how he found "a new song" when just a lad.—My

During the business session it was voted to give $10 on sending a child from the church to Cragmont. The treasurer gave a report for the year of 1959. The meeting closed with prayer.

During the social hour the hostess served apple pie with ice cream, and a choice of soft drinks or hot coffee.

Merritt, N. C.—The following officers of the Bethel Woman's Auxiliary were in stalled recently at the church: Mrs. Rosa Deimo, president; Mrs. Mate Lupton, vice-president;
Mrs. Pearl Slade, corresponding and recording secretary; Mrs. Bertha Silverthorn, treasurer; Mrs. Glennie Banks, study course chairman; Mrs. Sara Lupton, program-prayer chairman; Mrs. Grace Whorton, youth chairman; Mrs. Helma Lupton, per-chairman, who was in charge of the service, welcomed the members and visitors pres-

spiring devotional and also read the poem,
"Laborers Together with God." Prayer by Mrs. Bettie Whorton followed, with the group singing "Kneel at the Cross."

Mrs. Glennie Banks, retiring president, served as installing officers. As each new officer came forth to the foot of the cross and knelt, Mrs. Banks charged her with her duties and responsibilities toward her auxiliary as an officer. Each officer remained kneeling with a spotlight focused on her until the next officer was called. At the completion of the service, each new member knelt in sentence prayer and pledged her loyalty to the call of Calvary.

After singing "The Way of the Cross Leads Home," all of the auxiliary members joined hands and prayed the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Stacy, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's Free Will Baptist Church met at the church Friday night, February 5, 1960.
The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Guy Hamilton. The group sang,
"The Touch of His Hand on Mine," after which prayer was offered. The secretary

Plans for Missions and Essay Contests for Cape Fear Conference

Youth chairmen are encouraged to make plans for their G.T.A. and Y.P.A. declamation and essay contests.

Local church declamation contests should be held during March. The G.T.A. and the Y.P.A.'s winners' names should be mailed to Mrs. Chester Phillips, 527 South Third Street, Smithfield, North Carolina, by March 31. The Cape Fear Conference conference will be held at the Raleigh Free Will Baptist Church, Friday, April 8, at 7:30.
The winners will present their declamations the following week at the Cape Fear Conference Woman's Auxiliary Convention.

All essays should be mailed to Mrs.
Chester Phillips by March 31. Rules and regulations for both the declamation and the essay contests can be found in the G.T.A.
and Y.P.A. handbooks.

Workshop Planned for Youth Chairmen of Cape Fear Conference

An informative and inspirational workshop for youth chairmen and interested youth workers of the Cape Fear Conference will be held at the First Free Will Baptist Church of Smithfield, North Carolina, Friday, February 26, at 7:30. The program will cover questions such as: What can we do to help our youth be strong in these days when morals are so low? How can we teach them about courtship and love? What can youth workers do about indecent literature sold to young people today? What can be done about profanity on television? How can youth workers do about indecent literature trend in morals? What can Christians offer the youth in the way of recreation and wholesome fun? What part can G.T.A. and Y.P.A. have in reaching the youth?

New approaches for auxiliary programs will be discussed. Pointers will be given to help with the promotion of earning ranks.
A discussion of these and other problems in a positive light will aid those working with young people.

Those taking part on the program will be Mrs. Herman Hersey, Mrs. Owen Thomas, Miss Juanita Dunn and Mrs. Chester
Phillips. Refreshments will be served.

Madaline Brickhouse, Mrs. Bettie Brick-house, Mrs. Margie Etheridge, Mrs. Kathleen Swain, Mrs. Nancy Sawyer and Mrs.
Illilda Roughten. There were four visitors present.

Hawaiian Free Will Baptist Missions
Rev. Luther Sanders, Director
P. O. Box 1201, Waipahu, Hawaii
January 13, 1960

Dear Friends,

May we take this opportunity to wish each of you a very prosperous New Year, and to thank all of you, who were so thoughtful and kind to us during the Christmas season. We appreciated the many beautiful cards and several gifts that made us realize that you were truly interested in our work.

The Lord has been real good to us during the past month—again we broke our previous attendance record. We had 36 present for one of our services, and we also had our first baptismal service on the last Sunday morning in December. The congregation left from the Sunday morning service and went as a group to a good place by the Pacific Ocean where I baptized a young man whom I had previously won to the Lord.

We are planning to conduct our first service in the basement of our house next Sunday. We have had to purchase fifty used chairs, a piano, paint, lumber and other smaller items necessary to renovate the basement. Perhaps someone or some group is interested in a special project and would like to help with some of these items. If so, you can send your offerings to the National Home Mission Office, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee, earmarked for this purpose. It has also become necessary for us to purchase a new typewriter in order to be able to continue our monthly news letters to you. We are trusting in the Lord for the means to pay for it soon.

Our attendance record was not the only thing that was broken last month, but Helen fell on Saturday before Christmas and broke her leg. Her leg has been in a cast since then; however, with the aid of crutches and a healthy husband she has been able to get around a little. She has not missed any of the services at the church; in fact, she taught her Sunday school class and directed our Christmas program the day after the accident. She is getting along very well and hopes to have the cast removed in about two more weeks. Your prayers for her are appreciated.

God has given us some very fine people, and we have wished many times that each of you could meet them. Since that is impossible, we felt that the next best thing would be to have you meet them by testimony; so each month we hope to include a word of greeting from one of the families of the church which will help you to realize what your money is accomplishing as it is being invested in the work here. The testimony this month is given by the first convert here and also the first one to be baptized:

"My name is Gene Linville. I am married and have a boy two years old. Rev. Sanders has asked me to write a few words telling my friends in Christ what the Free Will Baptist Church of Waipahu means to me. I have been in the Navy four years and the entire four years were terribly miserable, not because of the service, but for the fact that I was living a terribly reproachful life. My father being a Baptist minister, I knew how to be saved, but the more I read the Bible, the more convinced I became that I had waited too long to call upon the Lord. Then by a very strange and long chain of events that could have only been wrought by God, I visited the Waipahu Free Will Baptist Church on the Sunday of September 27, 1959. I met Rev. Sanders and as my faith and respect for this man increased, my burden and realization that I was lost also increased. For a wonderful ending to my letter and an even more wonderful beginning to my life Rev. Sanders explained to me that God had been waiting all these years to save me and there was nothing for me to do but believe and repent. Now my desire is to be as wonderful a witness for my Saviour as the Sanderses. As I pray for you, I request your prayers for my family and myself."—Gene Linville.

Gene and his family left the islands January 7; he is getting his discharge from the Navy and plans to enter college soon. His desire is to do some kind of full-time Christian work for the Lord—perhaps a music and educational director. Our group suffered a great loss when they left, but we are happy to see them go forth for God. Pray much for this family as they decide on a school to attend and as they seek God's will for their lives. Their home is in Greenville, S. C.

May we say, "Thank you again" for your cards, gifts, financial help and most of all for your prayers. As we face the new year of 1960, we are depending upon your continued help and prayers that God may use each of us to accomplish the task He has begun through us here in the islands. Our prayer is that God will "So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." (Psalm 90:12).

Yours in Christ

Successful Conference

The area-wide missionary conference conducted last November in and around Greenville, North Carolina, was a great success. There were twenty-eight churches having one or more services. A total of sixty services were conducted. The total attendance ran up to about 4,000 in all services. The mission offerings totaled about $2,000 and the pledges about $2,000. Best of all, the interest of missions has increased considerably among the churches. Most of the churches indicated that they wanted to take part in a mission conference in the fall of 1960.

The speakers were as follows: Louis Mouton, Wingate Hansley, Kenneth Walke, Mrs. Timyan, Miss Barnard, Tommy Wille and Mack Owens. The Lord used each of them in a wonderful way.

The missionary conference seems to be the best way to promote missions in the local church. We in the Greenville area do appreciate the assistance given to us by the North Carolina, national and foreign mission boards in getting speakers, films and literature. These mission boards, I'm sure, are willing to assist any other church or group of churches in arranging missionary conferences.

Mission News from Cuba

February, 1960

Our dear friends:

How good it is to be able to greet you again from Cuba and to be back at work in the place of the Lord's choosing. First, however, may we take this opportunity to express our very sincere appreciation to each church, family and individual with whom we visited for every expression of thoughtfulness, for the opportunity of presenting the cause of missions in services, and for the wonderful hospitality in your homes. Courage for Christian Witnessing

(Lesson for February 28)

Lesson: Acts 21:27-39.

Golden Text: 2 Timothy 2:3.

INTRODUCTION

What was the reason for Paul's journey to Jerusalem? He had spent a year gathering an offering for the Jewish Christians at Jerusalem, now he wanted to personally deliver it. However, he had been warned time and time again as he passed through the cities of Asia that if he went to Jerusalem he would mean imprisonment for him (Acts 21:23). While at Tyre this warning came to Paul, "And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days: who said to Paul through the spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem" (Acts 21:4). At Caesarea, Luke recorded how he tried to urge Paul not to go to Jerusalem (Acts 21:12). However, it was settled, as Paul was concerned, that it was the will of God even though it meant death (Acts 21:13, 14). Why did God send these warnings? Could Paul have been mistaken about this being the will of God? Was God just testing Paul? Was God preparing Paul for the danger at Jerusalem? Regardless, Paul was determined to go through with it. A year ago Paul had made a promise to go and now he planned to keep his promise. He also considered this an opportunity to demonstrate the unity of the church. Paul had given himself to the task of revealing God's grace to the Gentiles; if it is, they could be Christians without becoming Jewish proselytes. Because of this many of the Jewish brethren hated him bitterly. Now Paul hoped to crown his work with a worthwhile gesture of Christian brotherliness on the part of his Gentile converts as a final and everlasting sign of brotherly love between Jew and Gentile. So, it is very possible that Paul never had been able to forget the trouble and agony which himself had brought on the Christians through his zealous persecution and as far as he was able he was determined to make restitution to them for the suffering which he had caused them to bear.—Even-Age Teacher (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. It is possible for people to have hatred stirred up in their hearts even in the place of worship (Acts 21:27).

2. There are people who think more about customs and sacred places than about the value of human souls (Vs. 28).

3. It is very easy to jump at false conclusions when we do not know all the facts of a case (Vs. 29).

4. They closed the doors of the temple to keep Paul out, but did not close the doors of their hearts against evil (Vs. 30).

5. God can use rough soldiers and their officers to protect His children if it suits His purpose (Vv. 31, 32).

6. Men may bind the hands of a servant of God with chains, but they cannot bind his heart and mind (Vs. 33).

7. We wonder if the violent attitude of a mob ever wrought any good thing (Vv. 34, 35).

8. The unbelieving world will readily join in the cry against the Christians: "Away with (them)" (Vs. 36).

9. The ability of Paul to speak in the Greek language was a factor in arousing the attention of the Roman captain (Vv. 37, 38).—The Bible Expositor.

10. The Old Testament did not teach the Jews to hate the Gentiles. The devil who led them to crucify Jesus must have taught them to hate the Gentiles also (22:21).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. With such feelings again Paul regarding Jewish laws and practices, James and his associates proposed that he enter the temple for a seven-day period of purification. This involved the taking of a Nazarite vow and the subjection of himself to great discipline. Paul agreed to do this, although he placed little meaning upon practices of this sort. He was willing and anxious to satisfy the feelings of such men as James. He was quite willing to carry out the request, since it did not mean a compromise of principle, but only an accommodation which might improve relationships with the Jews.

Paul made five trips to Jerusalem, and each one was marked by bitter opposition on the part of the Jews, with the exception of his fourth trip which was a brief visit after his second missionary journey. "And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him" (Vs. 27). From the meaning of this verse, we gather that it was likely some of the same Jews causing trouble in Jerusalem who had caused him much trouble in Asia. (See Acts 17 and 18).—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

2. Adam Clarke says the reason the captain asked Paul if he could speak Greek was that the captain, Claudius Lysias, was himself a Greek, who could understand very little Latin or Hebrew. Because of his difficulty in understanding what the mob had said, he had concluded that Paul was an Egyptian who had not long before led a group of people in an attack upon Jerusalem. This Egyptian had convinced his followers that he was a prophet. He had promised them that, if they would follow him in attacking the city, the walls would fall down and they could kill the hated Roman overlords with their knives.

He and his followers had attacked the city, only to have the Roman soldiers defeat them, killing some, taking some prisoners and seeing the Egyptian leader flee into the wilderness with the remnant of his forces. The captain thought that Paul was this Egyptian who had returned to the city and had been recognized.—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

3. Through the ages men who would take the time to look have been permitted to observe the depth to which humanity can sink when the emotions are allowed to go unbridled and undisciplined. It was an emotional mob who condemned Jesus to die, stoned Stephen to death in the streets, and purposed to take the life of Paul.

There is hardly an American adult who did not read the bold, dramatic missionary adventure called "Operation Auca."

"Nothing in modern literature has dramatized so strikingly the collision of old and new, of darkness and light, as this saga of five missionary martyrs. These men were the first in centuries to penetrate the dread land of the Auca Indians in Ecuador with the message of Christ's redemption, only to be ambushed and slain. . . .

"Operation Auca utilized in the service of God all the instruments of modern science: airplanes, two-way radios, miracle drugs, public address systems, tape recorders, modern psychology. Still its efforts were defeated by primal fear and hatred. Yet transcending this tragedy were the five's unquenchable faith in the ultimate purposes of God and their devotion to Christ and His cause."—Selected. For a marvelous example of physical courage demonstrated in this Christian witness read Through Gates Of Splendor by Elizabeth Elliot.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

seven months of furlough in the States were of great blessing in many ways. Though the change was good for us, one can readily see that there was little rest to be had (with some 22,000 miles of itinerate work to be done)! Yet, the Lord was faithful in giving added strength and a very precious Christmas season at home with the family.

We left North Carolina on December 28, sailing on the New Grand Haven from West Palm Beach, Florida, on December 30. It was a special joy to have with us on our trip Rev. and Mrs. Leroy Cutler and Rev. and Mrs. James Earl Raper. Upon arrival in Havana, we were joined by Brothers Louis Moulton and Seldom Bullard. On January 1 our annual New Year's Day convention was held at the mission, followed by a full week of classes and services with our American brethren and Cuban pastors. These were days of real refreshing in seeing answered prayer to the end that many came to know our lovely Lord.

Throughout the work here, God is blessing in many ways. In so very many fields there still exists the problem of a tremendous need for adequate meeting places; and, though this burdens our hearts, we are still made to rejoice in knowing that He is calling out for Himself the true church—souls of many dear Cuban people.

Within the next few weeks we hope to begin repair and construction work here at the mission, so as to reopen our Bible school at the earliest possible date. In the meantime, we have begun a training program in our local churches for the laymen, for we feel that in training them in church organization, emphasizing their responsibility to give and, above, all faithfulness in witness that we are working toward a stronger, self-sustaining national church in the future.

In visiting your churches, our main challenge has been that you pray. May we add double emphasis now and ask that you keep this dear island before the Lord daily as never before. Of course the news sounds alarming and could become very disillusioning to us, but our Saviour reassures us daily in the knowledge that He holds all of this in the palm of His hand; we are to quietly trust and work while it is yet day.

PRAYER

Dear Lord, for all in pain,
We pray to Thee:
Come and smite again
Thine enemy.

Give to Thy Servants skill
To soothe and bless,
And, to the tired and ill,
Give quietness.

And Lord, to those who fear
Come near that even so,
Pain may not cease,
They, too, find peace.

Editorial

IS IT FAIR?

C. H. Overman

Suppose the minister, upon accepting work in a new pastorate, was required to sign a contract with the church as in many business transactions? Of course, no name signing is required, but more and more each year there is an increase in the demands of an unwritten and unsigned contract. In other words, the churches are realizing that the minister they call is under definite obligations to them. As someone has said, "The Master's business is the greatest in the world." In behooves the minister, therefore, as God's chosen messenger, to conduct himself accordingly.

In this editorial, we shall consider some factors which enter in regarding the pastor's acceptance among his people, and also the degree of success in his pastorate. We shall think of these facts as pastoral reflections and images. It is not our intention to be critical of our fellow ministers to the extent of unjust accusation or criticisms. No one, however, is above taking a look at himself and thus readjusting himself accordingly. Again, we shall note that unfair advantages often exist which mar an otherwise perfect relationship between the church and the minister. May we consider him in the light of the following:

1. The traveling pastor. We once heard the speaker of a civic club remark that a member of the particular club had to possess three characteristics in order to be a successful member. One of them was that he had to be a traveling man. In some organizations, this may be true, but the pastor has too little time to spend on the road, simply in travel. Specifically, a pastor may spend too much of his time visiting relations. He may hold too many offices and thus have to attend too many conventions, etc. He may be a sportsman and spend too much time hunting or fishing.

Most churches are very considerate regarding these matters. They cannot afford to deny him the right to visit relatives occasionally, or to hold positions in his denomination, or to have some form of relaxation, but this can be overdone to the extent that he may be absent when he is truly needed. Most any pastorate, in these days, will have some member or members who are fond of hunting or fishing, and may often insist that the minister go with them. He should, however, guard against going on such sports activities too frequently. It doesn't take his members long to figure out where his true interests are if this is the case. Who can rightfully blame the church when it wants to be able to locate its pastor when he is needed? Perhaps it would be well for the minister to practice moderation in these things as preached to his people, and also remember that he is under personal obligation and commitment to God and those he agrees to serve.

2. The evangelistic pastor. Let it be understood that every minister should be evangelistic. God expects it, but the greater part of that evangelistic zeal should be exercised toward those in his own pastorate and not to scores of other churches to the neglect of his own. It is always good for a pastor to be able to conduct revivals in churches other than his own; but, when such revivals consistently call him away from his own church and services, he is harming effectiveness to his people. Many churches have placed a limit on the number of revivals which their pastor can conduct per year. This seems to be a just requirement, for who can blame the church when it demands the service of its pastor, as based upon their need. As usual, however, there are exceptions in the matter; for sometimes it is necessary for a pastor to supplement his income through revival and evangelistic work.

3. The half-time pastor. Most churches now have services at least two Sundays a month. Often the minister will move into parsonage at one church, and commute in serving the other. In such cases, a rather odd situation sometimes develops. In the first place, the church with the parsonage may be getting full-time services from its pastor at the expense of the other church. On the other hand, is it fair for the minister, who resides in a parsonage at one church, to deliberately accept a call from a church a good distance away in order that he might give all his time to the church where he lives? It seems unfair to the other church, yet, we have heard of this plan.

4. The commuting pastor. Perhaps in the truest sense of the word, such a one is not truly a pastor. The reference here is to the minister who doesn't live at either of the churches which he is serving. Instead, he may live a good distance from either one. There are instances where ministers have served their church faithfully, even in view of the distance. There are other instances when ministers never go into the communities of their church except for worship services, funerals or weddings. The churches are the ones that usually suffer, while the minister fares sumptuously.

Space will not allow us to include other realms of unfair advantages which the minister may have over the church, but there are others; therefore, let us be careful to execute our duties according to the responsibilities laid upon us that the Kingdom of God may soon come. May we seek to be honest and fair in all things. (Next week, Independent Movements.)

My Hobby Has Been a Blessing

by L. Everette Ballard

RECENTLY I was asked, "Should a preacher have a hobby?" My answer was that he should—and be sure that it should become an aid to his work, either by contributing to his work, or by helping to keep him strong in body, mind and spirit.

It just happens that my hobby has been printing—that I have been able to use, I trust, to the glory of God, and to contribute to whatever success I may have had in the work of the Lord.

My hobby has been printing—any and all kinds—but particularly it has had to be done through the various forms of duplicating without the use of type.

However, I started out with type. My first printing equipment was a rubber stamp, four line, printing outfit, ordered from Sears when I was about ten years of age. On it my chum and I produced a weekly newspaper, usually about twelve pages, printed on any kind of scrap paper available. Laboriously, we set up the type, our lines at the time, printed enough copies to put one in each mail box in the little community, then tore down the form and printed another four lines. This was just a little too much for us. So after a few weeks we settled with a larger sheet, printed out by hand with pencil, which my grandfather allowed us to post at the little community store and post office which he ran. That was some newspaper! My chum, and co-editor, developed a talent for making some drawings to illustrate it. Most of the time they provoked only laughs, but now and then when he undertook to do photographs of people who figured in the news it resulted in messages to the editors—not too complementary!

The years rolled by. I passed fifteen, became saved, and got interested in youth work in the church. A young Methodist preacher had tried to get an Epworth League going in the Methodist church, but there were not many Methodists and it soon died. Then we organized a union young people's society with Free Will Baptists, Methodists and a sprinkling of Presbyterians. I managed to purchase a much worn, but still usable, old Oliver typewriter, and started a Sunday paper for the league, making about five copies at the time by use of carbon paper. I made enough each week for each member. It was called "The Young People's Friend"—the same name that was used later for the first publication of the Free Will Baptist league, of which I was the sole editor for the three years it existed. Still later the name was given to the paper of the Free Will Baptist Children's Home at Middlesex, North Carolina.

Then came the time when I finished the school in my home community and got a job in the city to work out money to go further in school. When I was around seventeen, the Rev. Luke Weatherington and some others came to the western part of the state and told us about the Free Will Baptist league. At this time I was attending church at Cedar Hill in West Asheville. The French Broad Association appointed me and Miss Terrie Pettit as field workers, and we organized the first Free Will Baptist league in the west at Cedar Hill. Then we succeeded in getting about four others organized in the vicinity. We had no literature, so I proceeded to publish some! Yes, it was the old Oliver for the first few numbers—enough copies of a three page edition of "The Young People's Friend" (now converted from unionism!) laboriously prepared by use of carbon, one copy for each league. It contained ideas for a program, and news items about the youthful movement.

Then came the proud day when I bought my first mimeograph—an old second-hand machine, discarded by a store in Asheville and sold to me for five dollars. It made copies that could be read, and the circulation of "The Young People's Friend" was increased.

No need to bother you with it all. The General Conference of 1921 set up the Free Will Baptist league work, and I was asked to get out a twelve-page paper to be printed by the Free Will Baptist Press at Ayden. By this time I was in the ministry, had managed to finish high school and attend the old Free Will Baptist Seminary. A call came from Greenville and I moved, hobby and all, to that eastern North Carolina town. There I started what may have been the first church bulletin in the state. The old mimeograph was finally replaced with a better machine, and from then until now I have owned and operated at least a dozen duplicators, one multigraph and one printing press. I have duplicated bulletins for many churches, papers for schools, for the first East Carolina College Student Fellowship, for the Children's Home, and many other agencies of our church with which I have been associated. During the past five years I have duplicated over a quarter of a million pieces of publicity matter, workshop outlines, etc., for the N. C. Free Will Baptist Sunday School Convention. I'm sure I'm not the biggest preacher in our denomination, but I might just be the most duplicating one!

Has it been work? No, brother, I have really hated to take money for any of it! I have loved it! It has been my hobby, and I am just thankful that the good Lord let me make a hobby of something that I have been able to use for Him.

Got any duplicatin' needs doin'?

Happiness

Rev. Walter E. Isenhour

It's not so much the things without—

The things you may possess—
As money, riches, houses, land,

That make for happiness;
Although the world may think it so
And seek to thus attain,
Or strive for other outward things—
At last to find them vain.

A mind that's filled with noble thought,
A heart that's fixed on God;
A will to do the honest things
And walk where Jesus trod;
A purpose great, an aim that's high,
A soul that's clear of sin—
This brings a happiness so sweet,
And springs up from within.

What may be done at any time is usually done at no time.

Springtime of Life

by Albert M. Ezell, Searcy, Arkansas

THE MOST convincing words of wisdom, directed to the youth of our day was spoken by Solomon more than nine centuries before the coming of Christ: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, . . ." (Ecclesiastes 12:1).

Sad, indeed, is the lot of that one, who having reached the winter of life finds on every side only the void of emptiness, through which race the chill winds of hopelessness, bearing the faint echo of long dead hopes and dreams.

He who spends his younger days in dissipation is mortgaging himself to disease and poverty, two inexorable creditors, who are certain to foreclose at last and take possession of the premises.

Sad is the spectacle of the youth idling away the springtime of his existence, and not only losing the sweet benefit of time, but wasting, in the formation of evil habits, those hours in which he might clothe himself with angel-like perfection.

"Bestow thy youth so that thou mayest have comfort to remember it when it hath forsaken thee, and not sigh and grieve at the account thereof. While thou art young thou wilt think it will never have an end; but the longest day hath its evening, and thou shalt enjoy it but once; it never turns again; use it therefore as the springtime, which soon departeth, and wherein thou oughtest plant and sow all provisions for a long and happy life."—Sir Walter Raleigh.

A tree that fails to blossom in the springtime will, in the autumn of harvest, also be found barren and unfruitful. So is he who cares only for himself in his youth. In the autumn and approaching winter of life he can hope for nothing better than a miserly and wretched existence, meriting no love or sympathy, and offering no experience of wisdom or loving admonition.

There is no adage truer than this: "Shun delays; they bring remorse." Our time is not our own; it is only lent us by the heavenly Father, who is ever watching to see what we will make of the portion He has entrusted us with.

As I sit by my window writing, I see the little children at play. It seems such a short while since I was as one of them; but many seasons have come and gone, and time since then is measured in decades. According to God's providence and the laws of nature, the sands of life are far over half run out of my hourglass of life. And as I look backward, I see too many wasted years, too much waiting for a better opportunity.

I am sure that many times we allow our environment to be a criterion by which we measure the possibility of our achievements.

If this were to be the rule and everyone had felt this way, think of the many blessings we would be without today. Both Edison and Ford were less than average students. Abraham Lincoln, in the complete aggregation of his schooling, received less than a year. Napoleon, because of his diminutive size, was the butt of jokes and ridicule by his classmates. Socrates, one of the greatest of the Greek philosophers, was said to be so homely that his appearance was almost ludicrous. Gypsy Smith, one of the past century's most powerful evangelists, was called from a most unpromising environment—life in a gypsy camp.

If you feel that you are completely devoid of talent, remember that talent is a thing that must be cultivated. Many people confuse talent with genius; there is a vast difference. Talent is voluntary while genius is involuntary. Talent is that part of our character which we can ever raise to higher levels by continual practice and application. Genius is an extra measure of capability bestowed on only a few, for which they have not labored, but which is given as a kind of extra measure of inheritance.

Those who realize our own weakness, and are willing to be led, are the ones God can use most efficiently in His work. Moses felt that he was very inadequate for the work God called him to do. God felt he was the man He needed, and so, added strength for weakness, fluency for stumbling and halting speech, courage for faint-heartedness, faith for doubt, and a complete and unselfish resignation to God's will.

I wish I might be able to tell our young people that there will always be smooth and happy sailing when they embark for God, but it would be a gross misrepresentation of facts. There will be many difficulties in your path. Be thankful for them; they will test your capabilities of resistance. You will be impelled to persevere from the very energy of the opposition. You will be given strength for life. The weak sinews will become strong by their conflict with difficulties. Hope is born in the long night of watching and tears. In your hour of temptation, let your prayer ever be, not God deliver me from this trouble, but God strengthen me for it.

A Good Way

If you're told to do a thing,
And mean to do it, really,
Never let it be by halves:
Do it fully, freely.

Do not make a poor excuse,
Waiting, weak, unsteady.
All obedience worth the name
Must be prompt and ready.

Progress in the Atlanta Church

Rev. J. R. Davidson

SUNDRY have been our experience in the Atlanta, Georgia, work since we made the last report to our many friends. Our movement has been steadily, though slowly, developing with time. At present we have 21 church members, 11 children who are under age for membership, several young people who can be counted as regulars, with many of our adults who are really enthusiastic and dependable. Yes, we also have that group which may be described as casuals. We do have listed several hundred as prospects, but we realize that many of them will not prove to be good prospects. We have not yet discovered the proper method for enlistment that will bring all of them in, but we are still working at it.

Our regular services are being carried on consistently; and, according to figures which have been placed on our register, we have reached highs in two categories since 196 came in—attendance and offering. For the past two weeks we have had our league work set in motion, and the ladies have held a organizational meeting to get the auxiliary work going for strengthening our cause. Contact has also been made with the Master's Men headquarters for the purpose of securing materials for direction in functions in this field of endeavor.

Our plans are for stepping up our regular endeavors for increasing healthful growth during February, with particular emphasis on personal visitation service for reaching our Free Will Baptists who have moved in to the area, as well as in specific soul-winning effort.

Special prayers on the part of our friends throughout the Free Will Baptist territory make up a great need. Among the special objects is prayer that our people here may find the proper location for a church home such as God can use to greatest fruition for developing a really spiritual church here which will be a great power in winning the lost to Christ. We acknowledge the fact that ours is a stupendous task; but, if all our friends will pray properly with us, write to their loved ones and friends who have moved into Atlanta urging them to fall in line with this movement, and keep us posted on new prospects who are moving into Atlanta, the job will be done in a creditable way.

Some Christians are living ON Christ but are not so anxious to live FOR Christ.

Who Hath Woes?

by Rev. R. W. Neighbour

A TYPICAL American girl about twenty years of age said recently, "Beer is good for you." She had seen so many television ads that she actually believed that.

A cartoonist pictured a national baseball team playing baseball in beer up to their knees. With the advent of television, liquor is now advertised in Christian homes.

Like the old patent medicines that were good for everything from corns to rheumatism, alcohol has become a panacea of ills.

Beer makes people humorous and happy, they say. But the Bible tells us, "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder" (Proverbs 23:29-32).

Some people use a cold as an excuse for drinking. I have met a number of alcoholics who started out that way! Alcohol doesn't help a cold. We are reminded of the teacher who took some worms and dropped them in whisky. The worms curled up and died. "What lesson do we learn from this?" she asked the children. One little boy snapped his finger and answered, "If you have worms, drink whiskey."

Nursing mothers have been told that drinking beer is good for them. Now, they even wash their hair in beer.

Then, some people have been fooled into drinking alcohol for friendship's sake. More friendships have been broken up through beer and liquor than through any other one cause.

Others point out the amount of tax that is paid into the government by the liquor industry. In 1949 the Federal Government received $2,200,000,000 in taxes from the liquor industry. But remember, my friend, that for every dollar tax money paid in, ten dollars tax money was spent to curb the crime caused by liquor. And even if it were a profitable business, it is a nefarious, immoral business. It is too bad our government profits thereby. Tax money that is the result of broken homes, broken health, broken lives, and poverty is not legitimate tax money.

One man came up with the bright idea that God would not have made alcohol if He did not want us to drink it. Babies put everything they see into their mouths. They use that same theory. They even swallow safety pins. God didn't intend for us to eat and drink everything on this earth. The God who made lettuce made skunk cabbage, but I've never heard of anyone eating skunk cabbage for breakfast. The God who made alcohol also made lakes in the West with poison water. But people do not drink the water.

One of the most ridiculous ideas is the the person who can drink and hold the most liquor without getting unconscious or dead drunk is the biggest man of all. Drink destroys character and manhood. It does not create it. . . .

We have often heard the theory, "Drink, but be moderate in all things." Alcohol deadens the nerve center of the brain, destroying man's will power to be temperate. The more one drinks, the less will power one has to stop drinking.

The most ridiculous and common argument in favor of alcohol is, the Bible tells us to drink wine. Did not Paul write to Timothy, "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake," they ask? And did not Jesus change water to wine so that everyone at the marriage feast at Cana of Galilee could drink wine? Then surely it is all right to drink wine. And did not the Lord give His disciples wine at the Passover and institute the communion service with wine?

Such ignorance is the result of a lack of education. The Greek language has only one word to describe all fruit juices—oinos. It does not designate the difference between fermented juice and non-fermented juice in the world, oinos. The only way the New Testament can distinguish between fermented wine and non-fermented wine or juice is to say new wine and old wine. The wine that Jesus made was new wine. It typified His blood. Fermentation was a type of sin. Jesus was without sin.

Mrs. Mattie Thigpen

On September 29, 1959, the death angel came and took away Mrs. Mattie Thigpen. She was sixty-nine years of age. She had been in declining health for several weeks, but she bore her afflictions with patience. She was a member of Sandy Plain Free Will Baptist Church, Duplin County, North Carolina, and the wife of Mr. Joe Thigpen. She was very active in her community and church work.

All was done for her that loving hands could do, but to no avail. Her funeral was preached in the church sanctuary by the Rev. S. A. Smith of Beulaville, North Carolina. The body was laid to rest in the family cemetery under a beautiful mound of flowers.

"Aunt Mat" leaves to mourn one son, one daughter and seven grandchildren.

Her life trials are over,
The victory has been won;
Though 'twas hard to part
We say, "God's will be done."

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Please explain, "In your patience possess ye your souls" (Luke 21:19). The part I am particular about it, In your patience possess yourself.

Answer: In this Scripture the Lord is talking about the great tribulation that will immediately precede His return to this earth. He is here giving the Jewish remnant instructions how to conduct itself in that time of trouble. Together with other instructions He is exhorting them to be patient and faithful and to continue in His Word that will be a means of rest to their weary souls, even in such a time as they may expect that to be. This is the kind of instructions that God's people of most ages have needed, and especially can we of today, the day of grace, see the need of it even though it was spoken directly to Jews and concerns Jews in particular. We should always remember that all Scriptures have application to all people of any age. God's warning to the ante diluvial people as well as those to Sodom and Gomorrah are used in the New Testament to illustrate the manner of Jesus' second coming. (See Matthew 10:15; Luke 17:29.)

Question: Please explain, "Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them" (John 12:39, 40). It seems to me that fatalism is taught here in this passage of Scripture. Would not a person deduct from this Scripture that God is the author of man's destruction? It seems to me that the people had no choice in the whole affair, that the unbelief was absolutely necessary, otherwise prophecies could not have been fulfilled, and that God predestinated the whole affair to be as it occurred.—A. M., California.

Answer: We neither find fatalism nor extreme predestination in these verses. God has perfect and complete foreknowledge, and therefore, knew that Israel would not believe, and therefore, Israel spake this. However, a great while before the Lord spake such words through the prophecy, the Jews had deliberately hardened their hearts and therefore turned away from God. Our Lord Jesus wept over Jerusalem. "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matthew 23:37-39). It was only because that the nation of Israel persisted in the sin of unbelief that Judicial blindness fell upon her.

We must not forget the sovereignty of God and therefore His right to punish and to mete out punishment according to His own judgment and will. Whereas, he might suddenly check one person in his youth with destruction the moment he commits a sin; on the other hand, another person might be allowed to continue in the evil way until old age claims his life. Judicial blindness came to the Jews whom He allowed to reside in their land over a hundred years after Northern Israel was carried into Assyrian captivity, but finally the prophecy concerning their national destruction was fulfilled when Nebuchadnezzar destroyed much of Jerusalem in their overthrow.

Something like that will befall professing Christendom after the true church has been translated. God will allow her to be deceived in her unbelief. (See 2 Thessalonians 2:1-12.) In Verse 2 we are exhorted against being deceived concerning the day of Christ and assured that this day will come to us unannounced except for what has already been said concerning it in the Scriptures. As seen in Verse 5, in Verses 7 and 8 we learn that the Holy Spirit that (let)eth hinders will continue to hinder this wicked person until the Holy Spirit is taken away. Then this unlawful person will be revealed. We further learn from Verses 9 and 10 that this coming evil one is after Satan bringing lying wonders so as to further deceive the unbelievers for not having received the truth in love. Verses 11 and 12 give us to understand that strong delusions are sent to keep them from believing so as to assure the damnation of the whole lot of them. Notice strong delusions will be sent because they did not receive the love of the truth because their pleasure was in unrighteousness. This subject is of such a solemn nature it should arouse each of us that professes Christ self-examination and a true concrete appropriation of God's Word to his own life. It could be that, like Judah, not only is the nation growing soft, complacent and unsatisfied, but we who profess to be Christians are refusing to cry aloud against the sins of the church as well as those committed to the life of the nation.

The Lighter Pathway

Last week as we closed we were thinking about the importance of conversion, and your further study I want to quote from the teaching of Jesus on the subject. If we turn to Matthew 18:2-6 we will find a clear statement on the subject that no one can misunderstand. It reads, "And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become like little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea. These verses not only tell us how to know whether we are Christians or not, but they tell others whether we are Christians or not by the way we act toward each other. Offense is a very serious sin and is condemned by Jesus in the very strongest terms. I believe His words apply especially to you young people, to young Christians, and to all who are struggling to live for, and serve, Christ.

There are so many of us today who set ourselves up as judges of others every day and act. We have not learned, or have forgotten, the clear Bible doctrine as regards dealing with the faults of others. Paul's instructions to the Galatian Church are to be found in Galatians 6:1, in which he says Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." And the second verse reads, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." An important question to ask ourselves is, Are we bearers of other's burdens, or heapers of burdens upon others?

All this leads me to another very important matter, which might be better considered later, but for encouragement I give it here. When we become Christians we may expect many who we feel should help us along the way to hinder us all they can by placing stumbling blocks before us. Paul knew well what this means for he wrote to Timothy, a young Christian, "For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day" (2 Timothy 1:12). Then we may know that we are Christians if we are willing and able to suffer for Christ. Many of us have experienced suffering at the hands of others just as Christ, Paul, Peter and others, but Paul's assurance to Timothy again was, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: . . ." (2 Timothy 2:12). And God's assurance to us as to Paul, "And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me" (2 Corinthians 12:9).

Regeneration is another word that is no longer heard very often. By talking with many professing Christians I have found that a surprising number confess that they don't know what I am talking about. It means to be born again, to come to a new life through the power of God in Christ. This may seem to us too mysterious to grasp, as it did to Nicodemus, who came to Jesus by night, when He said to him, ". . . Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of heaven" (John 3:3). To experience the new birth was of no greater importance to Nicodemus than to you and me.

THE MAIL BOX

FAITHFUL READER

"My mother, Mrs. Amanda DuVall, departed this life January 28, at 8:50 a. m. She read 'The Free Will Baptist' for years and years. The oldest copy I have found in her possession is dated February 23, 1929; however, I remember having 'The Free Will Baptist' before then, maybe 20 years prior to that.

"Mother enjoyed this paper and looked forward to each week's issue. She read her Bible almost continuously during the 63 years that I remember her. She was 89 years old when she passed away, and she attended church the Sunday before. She lived a long and happy life. Mother was buried at St. Joe, Arkansas, the church of which she was a charter member."—A Daughter, Fort Smith, Arkansas.

NOTE OF THANKS

"Please grant me a small space in your paper to express my gratitude to the ladies of the different auxiliaries who remembered me on my 76th birthday, and also at Christmas, with cards and gifts. I pray God's blessings on each one."—Mrs. Duffy Toler, 131 N. Eastern Street, Greenville, North Carolina.

NOTE OF THANKS

"I would like space to express my appreciation to the many friends and auxiliaries for their thoughtfulness in remember-

Gladden the Circle

Let us remember by earnest endeavor to gladden the human circle in which we live; to open our hearts to the gospel of life and nature, seizing each moment and the good which it brings, be it friendly glance, spring breeze, or flower, extracting from every moment a drop of the honey of eternal life.—J. WHY SOME PEOPLE REJECT CHRIST

Text: "He is despised and rejected of men; . . ." (Isaiah 53:3); "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: . . ." (John 12:48).

SOME REJECT CHRIST BECAUSE:

1. Of their love of sinful pleasures (2 Timothy 3:4; Hebrews 11:25).
2. Of the enmity of their natural heart (Isaiah 53:6; Ezekiel 36:25).
3. They do not realize that they are lost (John 8:24; 3:18, 23).
4. They receive not the love of truth, but believe a lie (John 8:44; 2 Thessalonians 2:10-12).
5. They are dull of hearing (Matthew 13:15).
6. They love the praise of men more than praise of God (John 12:42, 43).
7. They think themselves good enough as they are (Matthew 7:21-23; Romans 3:23).
8. They are influenced by family and friends (Matthew 10:37-39).
9. They are influenced by ungodly church members (Galatians 5:19, 20; Romans 14:12; Matthew 5:13-16).
10. They are unwilling to pay the price (Luke 9:23-26).
11. They are waiting for more convenient season (Acts 24:25; 2 Peter 3:10; 2 Corinthians 6:2).

ship. The goal is fifty or more by Easter Sunday. The side with the best attendance will be treated to a picnic and a trip to Middlesex.

The superintendent, Mr. Griggs, states: "Our pastor, the Rev. Roland C. Cherry, has been with us for just a few months, and is doing a wonderful job working for God and our church. We appreciate him and his wonderful family, and pray God's richest blessings upon them."

A party was recently given at the Ruth's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church parsonage by Mrs. A. L. Hines, in honor of the Bible Club members with perfect attendance for three months. They are, left to right: First row—Betty Ricks, Linda Boyette; second row—Tammy Hines, Helen Evans, Myrtie Toler; third row—Carol Horne, Marion Jo Harris, Ellen Purifoy, Glenda Waters, Mike Waters, Evelyn Smith, Robert Smith, David Franks, M. Ringgold, Ruby Franks, Ella Franks, Joy Toler and Donald Toler also had perfect attendance but were unable to attend due to bad weather and sickness.

Myrtie Toler led the group in prayer. Those present played games, and the w ners of the Bible quiz were awarded New Testaments. The hostess served refreshments consisting of ice cream and cookies.

The church sponsors five Bible clubs weekly. The clubs are for children of all churches. The enrollment is 115, with members ranging from three years of age to 13. Mrs. A. L. Hines, instructor, is assisted by Miss Joy Rice, Mrs. Lee Gurganus, Mrs. White and other members of the church. Parents of the children often serve refreshments. The motto of the club is: "... suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven" (Matthew 19:14).

Beaufort, N. C., Minister Resigns Pastorate

The Rev. W. A. Hales, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church, Beaufort, North Carolina, has accepted the pastorate of the Richmond, Virginia, Free Will Baptist Church. Mr. Hales turned in his resignation to the Beaufort Church Sunday night, February 15. It was accepted with many good wishes for Mr. Hales' future success and happiness. A new pastor has not been secured as yet, but the deacons board is serving as a pulpit committee to locate one. Mr. Hales will be leaving on April 3.

The church reporter states: "In the case of our outgoing pastor, let us say that we, his people, fully realize that he has done what he could for us. He never considered stopping with just his duties, but went far beyond. We know that he would be the very first to give all honor and praise

12. They allow the devil to remove the Word (Matthew 13:4, 19).

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN PEOPLE REJECT CHRIST AS FRIEND, SAVIOUR, LORD AND MASTER?

1. Men will die in their sins and will be unable to go where He is (John 8:24).
2. Men are condemned and lost (John 3:18; Luke 19:10).
3. Men shut the door to their highest possibilities.
4. Men put themselves in the way of others—children, etc.
5. Men put themselves on the devil's side (Matthew 12:30).
6. Men reject the testimony of the world's greatest men as to what is the best life to live and die in.
7. Men seal their doom forever in hell, the lake of fire (Mark 9:43-48; Revelation 20:14, 15; Luke 16:23-26; 2 Thessalonians 1:6-9; Hebrews 10:27-29).

CONCLUSION

1. Before one can be saved, Godly sorrow must work repentance (2 Corinthians 7:9, 10); must confess (Romans 10:9, 10); have faith in Christ as Saviour (Luke 7:47-50).
2. The Lord is not willing for you to be lost (Luke 19:10; John 5:40; 2 Peter 3:9; Titus 2:11).
3. How can one reject such a friend as the Lord Jesus Christ?

SEVEN PROBLEMS OF THE CHURCH

1. The unbended knee.
2. The unread Book.
3. The unattended service.
4. The unpaid tithes.
5. The unrealized Cross of Christ.
6. The unpassionate heart.
7. The unconcern for lost souls.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

UNEQUALLY YOKED

God's Word warns us against being yoked with unbelievers. To be yoked with unbelievers means disagreement. Disagreement often leads to certain defeat in many pursuits of life. For instance a real Christian girl falls in love with a young man who is not a Christian; however, the young man is not a low-down character according to the judgment of man. He is nice so far as treating people right, but he is an unbeliever. He does not care for the church or Sunday school. He is a good businessman and practices an honorable profession. This Christian girl, if she is a real Christian, wants to attend church and Sunday school. She has been brought up to believe in church and the work of the Lord; and, somewhere along the way, she has made a finite decision to be a child of God by meeting the requirements as given in the Bible. However, that husband she has married ties her down at home; she must stay at home at every turn of the home life to meet the desires of the one she is yoked to. He wants to stay out late Saturday night and sleep late Sunday morning—too late to get up and prepare for Sunday school and church. Thus she compromises her duty and love for God with the wishes and desires of that unbelieving husband. She loses the joy of her Sunday school and church attendance; she has soon developed the disease of Sunday sickness and can never be contented. The church bell has lost its appeal.

ALL KINDS OF EXCUSES

In Godly interest, the pastor or Sunday school teacher can visit that girl described above, now a married lady and the wife of an unbelieving husband, and this one-time Christian girl begins to make her excuses. God has blessed her with a fine baby so she says, "I have planned to go back to Sunday school and church as soon as the baby gets where he understands what it's all about and I can keep him still."

May I ask, "Is this excuse in keeping with God's Word?" We do not keep our children away from public school until they know what it's all about. We are proud to start them as early as possible that they may learn what it's all about. That one-time Christian girl, now the mother of one and often two, grows more and more like her husband in the worldly affairs. She has compromised with that unbelieving husband until she has adopted his way of life. She becomes so much adopted to the world that she has lost her love for her Bible. She is more interested in the comics, crossword puzzles, fashion sheets, and the card party or club that she always has time for even if she has to leave the children with a maid or baby sitter. She cannot miss her club; she also has to attend the show, but there is no time for God and her church. Why? Because she was so foolish as to become yoked with an unbeliever. She absolutely disobeyed the Word of God.

Her life has been one of disappointment. I know what she thought, because so many have told me. She thought she could change his life; she thought that her sweetness and goodness would cause that unbeliever she loved to become a Christian. It works that way in some cases, but in most cases it fails—and what a miserable failure! However, sometime after a long fight of suffering and agonizing, when shame and physical and spiritual suffering has been met, when often poverty has been experienced, even in old age, she wins; but, even though she wins, she has had a rugged life of suffering.

God says ". . . whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Galatians 6:7). This verse also says, "Be not deceived . . ." Many a Christian girl has been deceived by soft talk of an unbeliever, and reaped a life of suffering and defeat because deception yoked her with an unbeliever.

A FURTHER STUDY

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord . . ." (2 Corinthians 6:14-17).

GOD DEMANDS SEPARATION

Back under the ruling of God ages before the Lord Jesus was born, God demanded that the righteous be separated from the unrighteous. God commanded the Israelites not to marry among the nations whose people were heathens. "Neither shall thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son" (Deuteronomy 7:13). The Jews in a large measure have been obedient to this law of God. Of course, in some cases the law has been broken, but they dearly paid for breaking that law. Why did God command His chosen people not to marry heathens? The answer is in Verse 4 of Deuteronomy 7: "For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you." As it was then, Christians are in danger of kindling the anger of God against them when they disobey. There is a danger of being led from God when people are unequally yoked together. As said before, often a strong righteous person will be able to win their lost, sinful, unbelieving partner to the Lord; but in many cases the sinner wins over his weak Christian partner. Therefore God warns us not to be unequally yoked with unbelievers.

WHAT IS THE DANGER?

One of the most unhappy Christians I ever saw, or have ever been acquainted with, was a Methodist lady who was married to a Roman Catholic. She was a fine woman, faithful to her church, as far as she could be. She was one of the best neighbors that we ever had, but that husband of hers was everything else. He made it as hard as he could for her. He desecrated the Lord's Day, and did everything possible to aggravate her about her religion. They had two or three children who were taught against their mother's faith, and there was another child on the way. During this period, he was continually nagging her to go with him to the local priest and be remarried. He told her his reason was ". . . that they would have one legal child, for all the rest were bastards." He worried her to death, for the child was not born—she died in childbirth. However, she told my wife all about her trials before this happened. She said, "Mrs. Griffin, I know that I am right with the Lord, and I am satisfied with my Lord and my church. I am ready to meet my Lord."

In many instances, it is not good for a Methodist to marry a Baptist, or to mix unequally with the faith of another. However, it is never good for a Protestant to marry a Catholic. In the average case, the Protestant has to completely yield his faith and that of the unborn children, or else he has trouble. However, I have known a few Catholics to be saved after marrying a Protestant and become good Christian workers. I have won two Catholics to the Lord. Dr. Joseph Zaccelo, who was an ordained priest, was saved under the preaching of Dr. William Ward Ayer, and he too is a Baptist minister.

No two people are alike and both of them are glad of it.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

A WONDERFUL DAY FOR LIFIAPU

IN A VILLAGE in the Solomon Islands, quite near a mission station, lived a girl named Lifiapu.

Lifiapu, who was eleven years old, longed to go to the mission school. But her father, who did not believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and who worshiped heathen gods, would not allow her to attend.

However, the girl was very determined and, whenever possible, she stole across to the school. It had no windows or doors, and all she had to do was to stand outside and listen. In this way, she learned many Christian songs and sayings.

Returning to her home, Lifiapu could not help but sing the glad songs she knew. Solomon, her father, recognized these songs as songs the Christians had been singing.

"Stop that, Lifiapu!" he shouted in his native tongue. "Stop it, or you shall be punished!"

Lifiapu stopped singing, but she did not cease wanting to learn more about Jesus. Risking a beating, she went back to the mission to listen whenever she could safely do so.

Then one day her father called her. She approached him trembling. Had he found out that she had gone to the mission again? Would he punish her? But a great surprise was in store for brave little Lifiapu.

"I want you to take me over to the Jesus school," her father said.

Of course Lifiapu was very glad to obey, and soon she had taken her father to the lady in charge of the mission. Solomon said he wanted to give his heart to the Jesus about whom his daughter sang.

It was a wonderful day for Lifiapu. It meant that in the future she and all her brothers and sisters could attend the mission school.

Not long after this, Lifiapu was stricken with a severe sickness. For days she lay near death.

Her father went to the lady at the mission. In his broken English he tried to tell her about his sorrow.

"Lifiapu sick for much long night," he said. "Me too fellow pray. Might the good Lord savey good feller long us yet." He meant, "We are such young Christians that the Lord does not know us yet.")

The missionary explained that when he called upon Jesus He would hear at once. That night she prayed with them and they believed that the Lord Jesus would heal Lifiapu.

The nurses had doubts in their minds, but Solomon said, "You have prayed."

Lifiapu called the missionary lady to her bedside. "I want to give my heart to Jesus," she said.

"Why do you want to do it? Is it because you think Jesus will heal you?"

"No! I want Jesus to come into my heart. If I die I want to go to heaven to be with Jesus."

So Lifiapu accepted Jesus Christ as her Saviour.

That night she suffered terribly. It was the worst night she had had since her illness. Everyone at the mission feared she would die.

"If I die I will go to be with Jesus," Lifiapu whispered.

Solomon, her father, continued to utter, "She will be all right; you have prayed for her."

In her own room, the missionary spent a long time in earnest prayer for the success of the faith of Lifiapu's parents, who trusted absolutely in Jesus, their newfound Friend and Saviour. They were sure their daughter would be healed.

Jesus heard their prayers and during that night the fever left Lifiapu. She started to get well again.

Through her illness many other girls and boys gave their hearts to Jesus, and Lifiapu lived to tell many children about Jesus, their wonderful Friend.—Young Soldier.

Study in Ephesians Chapter 2

Chapter 2 of Paul's letter to the Ephesians presents the darkness of their life as worshipers of the goddess, Diana (dead); the brightness and wonder of their Releaser, Christ (life); and the beauty and goal of their life in Him (created unto good works in Him).

In Verse 1, as worshipers of Diana or of anything other than Christ, ye were dead in trespasses and sins. This statement is interpreted in Verses 2 and 3:

1. Ye walked according to the course of this world.
2. According to the prince of the power of the air.
3. According to the spirit of disobedience.
4. Conversing in the lust of the flesh and the mind.
5. Fulfilling the desires of the flesh and the mind.

The darkness in their lives is because of the absence of light and life (1 John 1:6). No spiritual light can dwell where death through sin abides.

If the Ephesians had read only this part of Paul's letter without reading the first part of this verse, they would have been most disheartened and the full purpose of the letter would have been lost. Let's look at the first part, and you hath he quickened. This is short but holds a wealth of information to lift the heart and cause it to sing the song of victory. It was a personal message, and you. God is and always has been interested in the individual. Then the positive side is expressed in hath, not maybe or might. Positive assurance is for every believer in the Lord Jesus. The one who touched the hearts of the Ephesians, bringing quickening power, is the source of all power in heaven and earth for each person who today is dead in trespasses and sin. This thought continues in Verses 4, 5: "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, . . ." (Read the miracle of the message of Jesus' resurrection (Matthew 28: 6, 7).) He raised us that we might sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Redemption gives us royal privileges and blessings. When Christ saved us, He filled our new heart with new joys and new desires. We are saved that now we may sit in heavenly places as we commune with God through prayer, worship and study. The new-found joy in salvation is enlarged as we constantly practice the presence of Christ in our lives through praying without ceasing (1 Thessalonians 5:17).

Not only are we saved to enjoy the present blessings in Christ, but "That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus" (Verse 7). God is not only the God of now but of forever.

In Verse 8 we are shown the miracle of God's love for man, who merits only death and destruction. We deserve nothing, but God through Christ gives us all things; not through works of man, but through God-given faith. It was not man's work that brought salvation, but God's work through Christ, who loved us and gave Himself for us.

Man is not saved just to enjoy Christ in his heart, but Verse 10 gives us the purpose of salvation: ". . . we are . . . created in Christ Jesus unto good works, . . ." There is no place in the church for a sluggard. The love that prompted our salvation merits a dedication of our all to Him.

Remember that prior to the coming of Christ to redeem a lost world, Gentiles were dogs and undesirables in the eyes of the Jews, who were God's chosen people. Gentiles were a type of all sinners, aliens from God by sin. They were ". . . strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Verse 12). Just as the Gentiles had no right to the promises of God made to His people, so sinners cannot claim the promises of God until they become citizens of the commonwealth of the Lord through Jesus.

To the Ephesians, Verse 13 stood out like a lamp in the midst of great darkness: "But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." "And hath made of one blood all nations of men . . ." (Acts 17:26). It is Christ's blood that makes all men akin in the light of eternal values. In the shedding of His blood upon Calvary, Christ became our peace, removing the enmity between the Jew and the Gentile, the sinner and the saints. He abolished in His flesh the law of commandments contained in ordinances that all men might have access to the Father through one spirit (Verses 11-18).

Now let's look again at Verse 10, along with Verses 19-22. To become a citizen of any country a person must comply with laws, regulations and customs of that country. So, when through faith in the Lord Jesus as our Saviour, we become citizens with the saints and household of God; we must accept the pattern of His life as our example. Hence, we must be filled with love for Him, the saints, and compassion for the lost. The Word will be our plumb line. Our citizenship does not depend upon our ability to conform to an empty code of ethics but our ability to follow Christ in death (Galatians 2:20). Remember we are an integral part of ". . . an holy temple in the Lord: In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit" (Verses 21, 22). We cannot expect to fit in the place God has chosen for us, unless we let the Holy Spirit fit us for that place through humbly submitting to the perfect will of God.

Through the study of this chapter, the wonder of the grace of God overwhelms us as we are challenged to follow Christ, not only in death, but in life, love and service to a world that is dead in trespasses and sin and for whom Christ died. This

January 30, 1960

Dear Friend:

As a result of the high birth rate and advances in medical science, the world's population is increasing at the rate of 100,000 per day. Thus there are three million more people living on this earth now than were living one month ago.

This phenomenal growth presents a tremendous challenge to Christians everywhere. If the millions who are now untold hear of Jesus Christ, and if the millions being born every year are to hear of Him, it is very evident that missionary effort must be greatly increased.

The words of our Lord as recorded in John 4:35 were never more timely than they are today: "Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest."

Will you be among the reapers who gather fruit unto life eternal?

I trust that the following prayer and praise items will challenge you to increased missionary concern and support:

SPECIAL MEETINGS IN SOUTH INDIA

Miss Wilson writes: "Please inform all who prayed for our special meetings January 4 through 8, that God graciously worked, and thank them for their prayers. The Missionary Prayer Band was praying and others there. Just exactly how many put their trust in the Lord I am not sure. However, I can safely say 5 or 6, and much blessing came to many of the members, pastor and myself. The Bible studies in the morning were rich and such food to us. There were about 50 members here in Kotagiri and 15 in Gopalapuram who were especially moved upon by the Lord and blessed anew. One of our deacons was so broken up that if no one else had been met the meetings would have been worthwhile. He confessed to going to the shows, smoking, great anger, disobedience, etc. Said he, 'I am ashamed of all these years I have given place to Satan. I wanted to do right but I just could not. Satan was down in my heart. Thank God for forgiving me and making me right. I have spent hundreds of rupees for my health but could not get better. Since I have made things right with God, I am already better, etc.' Praise God for the work of grace in this deacon's heart. He'll need much prayer as Satan will attack him. His name is Absalom. Please pray for him. I just could not begin to tell you all the ways the Lord worked in our midst during the meetings. We have been so encouraged. Again praise Him."

WILKINSONS ARRIVE IN BRAZIL

The following are excerpts from a letter dated January 8.

"We are well and happy here in Campinaas. Since our safe arrival December 17, we have been very busy trying to get settled and trying to find out what everyone is saying.

"Our trip was good but a bit trying and tiring. The children did fine but Kevin was so happy when I told him we were getting off the plane and wouldn't get back on. He keeps saying, 'No more plane rides.'

"We are about to get into the activities of the church. I must admit that they go to church more than I have been accustomed. They have a service every night. Even though we can't understand what is going on we receive a blessing by just watching them. They get so much out of their work. The church is their life. Usually time not spent at work or home is spent at church."

JONESES LEFT PARIS

Bill and Joy Jones were scheduled to leave France on January 29. They plan to arrive in Abidjan on February 23.

On behalf of the Joneses, sincere thanks is expressed to each one who sent in a special offering for their account to pay for passage, baggage, etc.

PRAYER REQUESTS FROM SPAIN

The following requests came to my desk from Brother Cignoni this week:

1. Pray for Barcelona that God might send us a revival.
3. Pray for Cornella in order that soon they be given a hall for gospel preaching, and that souls be saved by the Lord before it will be too late.
3. Pray for Somorrostra, small mission center among half-savage people living in hovels.

4. Pray for Valencia that God might keep that assembly under His protection, and that sufficient funds may be found so to have a gospel hall of their own.

5. Pray the Lord that He might meet needs for supporting a Free Will Baptist evangelist, to assist us in this vast mission field. Pray, pray!

FROM THE SPARKS

"Last week, we had a short term Bible school. Most of the week, we had four students. One boy missed the last day because his young son was sick. Anita and I felt that it was one of the most profitable weeks we have had since arriving in Africa. The students, who were young men in their twenties, were very attentive. We had classes all day and therefore we were able to cover a great deal of ground. They expressed their desire to return in the future for longer periods of study. Pray that God will call some of our young Christian men such as these to the ministry. We must have trained nationalists if we expect to build a strong church. We hope this small beginning will grow into a full term Bible school. Pray with us to the end."

MISSIONARY CONFERENCES AND ITINERARIES

The promotional secretary, Brother Moulton, was in a conference January 17-24 at the Liberty Association in northwest Florida. Mrs. Edwards represented the woman's auxiliary department in that conference.

Brother Moulton was in several churches in the Birmingham, Alabama, area the last week in January. He will begin a conference February 1 in Slocomb, Alabama, where Rev. Rufus Hyman is pastor.

Bobby Poole, missionary candidate, will be in the Central Florida Association for a conference February 1-7.

God's Help Is Sure

(Lesson for March 6)

Lesson: Acts 23:6-11, 16-24.

Old Testament: Psalm 46:1.

INTRODUCTION

The Sadducees were the sect of the Jews which would compare with the liberal theologians of our day. They were the intelligentsia among the Jews and were composed mostly of the priests and well educated men. They had become so wise in their own eyes that they denied the inspiration of the portions of the Old Testament, particularly those portions which they could not understand by rationalization. Those portions of the Scriptures which had to be accepted by faith were denied as authentic by the Sadducees, "For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: . . ." (Vs. 8).

Space will not permit us to mention the numerous passages in the Old Testament which refer to the resurrection of the dead, the appearances of angels to the servants of God, and the fact that man is a spiritual being with a physical body. It is just as conceivable to see how this sect of the Jews could deny the clear teachings of the Bible as it is to understand why some so-called Christian leaders of today are denying the clear teachings of both the Old and New Testaments.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul's nephew could do nothing to help him. He was therefore told to hold his tongue—a very necessary duty sometimes.
2. There is a time to speak, and we did not see a young man use his opportunity; but there is a time to keep silence, and he discharged this duty no less well.
3. Had he, inflated with his success, or in his interview with the great man, insisted even in a whisper, all might have been upset, and himself dishonored.
4. So many gifted men spoil all their good service by some momentary indiscretion of speech. Be content that you have done a good work and do not talk about it. Be content also to see others work sometimes without complaining that you have no part in it, or criticizing them and it.

5. The Chief Captain could do something for Paul. He could provide for his safety and give him a recommendation; but he could not set him at liberty. Even had he possessed the power, it would have been unwise to exercise it for Paul's sake.

6. Learn the limitations of human ability and respect them. Do not try to do too much or you will spoil what you can do. Be content to do what you can do well, and leave it to be said about you, "He hath done what he could."

7. Felix could do everything for Paul. He could give the apostle a fair trial and set him at liberty. But we see from his case that men with the greatest abilities sometimes do next to nothing or worse than nothing.

8. Christ manifests Himself with words of cheer for His followers, but He does not assure them that their troubles are yet over. Paul has testified in Jerusalem, and must go on to bear witness at Rome.

9. Christ gives no furloughs here, but offers the assurance of a final honorable discharge to those who fight the battle out. Paul testified for Christ in Jerusalem and Rome; Christ testified for Paul in the New Jerusalem of God!—The Defender.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. From last Sunday's lesson, we learned how Paul had been saved by Roman soldiers from being beaten to death in the outer court of the temple in Jerusalem by a mob made up of his enemies. He had come to Jerusalem to plead the cause of unity between the Gentile and Jewish Christian brethren. While he was in the act of meeting the demands of the Apostolic Council so that he might appear before them with his plea, he was attacked by the non-Christian Jews in the temple and, therefore, was never permitted to appear again before the Apostolic Council. On the contrary, he was arrested by the Romans, and while in their protection, he was permitted to make his defense and give his testimony before the Sanhedrin Court of the Jews and many Gentile courts, for the Lord had said to him, ". . . Be of good cheer, Paul, for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome" (Acts 23:11). Thus, he began the long series of events toward Rome.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

2. In Acts 22:17-21, Paul states that God had warned him earlier in his ministry that also to prove to the unbelieving Jews that Jerusalem would preclude any chance of a successful ministry there. In Acts 21:4, the warning is repeated. But Paul was determined to go to Jerusalem, hoping to bring about a greater degree of unity between Jewish and Gentile Christians, and also to prove to the unbelieving Jews that he had not become an enemy to his nation, the temple, and the Old Testament Scriptures. Yet we see that Paul's efforts to help matters failed at every point and made matters much worse. We do not read that James or any of the apostles ever visited Paul while he was in prison. Whenever any Christian insists on going his own way in spite of the declared will of God, he is inviting failure.

3. Paul, knowing the marked difference between the Sadducees and Pharisees, declared to the council, ". . . I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question" (Vs. 6). Paul perceived what this might do to the council, and what he thought would happen did happen. They were divided by their differences. The Pharisees joined together in defense of Paul, ". . . saying, We find no evil in this man; but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God" (Vs. 9). However, the Sadducees would not agree to this; they wanted Paul put to death. The Pharisees were pulling to have him set at liberty and the Sadducees were pulling to have him put to death. Between his friends and his enemies, he was almost pulled to pieces, the one hugging him to death, the other crushing him to death. As a result of this great dissension, the chief captain was forced again to save the life of Paul. He ordered the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle. The chief captain could readily see that they would not come to any understanding about Paul's case.—The Teen-Age Teacher (F. W. B.).

4. All the above and many other experiences of Paul show that Satan hates the gospel and will fight it wherever it is preached. It is still so today, though not to the extent of being killed or physically mutilated in our nation. But there never fails to be persecution and abuse of some kind to those who preach the gospel today. There are all kinds of preaching today, but very little of the gospel that Paul preached. A gospel preacher is not promised immunity from abuse or even death if he preaches the gospel, but he is always taken care of and will always come out on top, even though he may have to wait till the next world to realize it.—Selected.

ATTENTION YOUTH CHAIRMEN OF N. C. CENTRAL CONFERENCE

As you know, the time is already here for your young people to be working on their declamations or essays. I am hoping that we will have many to enter this time. I would like very much to know the names of those from your own local church who are entering; so please have those in your church write me if possible. Those entering will give their declamations on the morning program at the Central Conference Woman's Auxiliary Convention, March 30, 1960, at Daniel's Chapel Church near Wilson, North Carolina.

Newton Grove, N. C.—The Annie McPhail Woman's Auxiliary of Oak Grove Church met at the church on February 10, at 7:00 p. m., with Mrs. C. I. Godwin presiding. Following the opening song, Mrs. Godwin conducted the devotional period. Mrs. A. L. Rose read the minutes of the last meeting and called the roll. At the January meeting the group decided to sponsor the building of cabinets in the church kitchen. These cabinets have been installed, so now the auxiliary plans to have a shower for the kitchen.

Mrs. Leo Bass had charge of the program. Mrs. N. C. Lee read a poem for the introduction. Others who took part on the program were Mesdames Leo Bass, Arlon Jones and Kermit West. There were 15 present at the meeting.

The Oak Grove Church entertained the faculty and students of Mount Olive College on Friday, February 12, with dinner in the fellowship room. This was the last service of the Spiritual Emphasis Week at the college. The Rev. Chester Pelt of Marian Florida, and the Rev. C. F. Bowen conducted the services at Oak Grove.

to our Lord for what has been accomplished. During the two and a half years Mr. Hales has been pastor, our church has made more progress than at any other time in our church history. The total collections have been over $36,000; debts have been brought down from $7,000 to $2,000; a $1,700 organ has been purchased; several new carpets have been purchased; a new room built and furnished on the parsonage, plus a carpet; the church has been painted inside and outside; and all phases of the denominational work have been supported. Two revivals were held each year. Mr. Hales has baptized 140, and the church membership has increased from 196 to 356.

"Our prayer is that God's richest blessings will go with our pastor and Mrs. Hales as they leave us. May the saying, 'All that we send into the lives of others comes back into our own,' prove very true in the remaining years of their service for Him."

FIRST FREE WILL BAPTIST CHURCH

Auburndale, Florida

The First Free Will Baptist Church of Auburndale, Florida, will observe its home-coming on March 6, 1960. The church, which is a member of the Central Association of Florida, was started as a mission in November, 1953, under the leadership of the Rev. Elvie Johnston. The mission was organized into a Free Will Baptist church on July 2, 1954, with 19 charter members. Mr. Johnston resigned the church on August 1, 1957, and the Rev. Robert Owen was called as pastor.

The church membership has grown to 134, and the Sunday school at the present time has an average attendance of 60.

All members, and former members who have moved away, are invited to attend the home coming services on March 6. The church has set 200 as the goal for the Sunday school attendance on this date. The Rev. Elvie Johnston, the first pastor, will deliver the morning message. Following the morning services, an old-fashioned basket lunch will be served on the church grounds.

The auditorium was built in 1954-55, and the educational building was built in 1956, while the Rev. Elvie Johnston was pastor of the church. In the past year, the church has bought four more lots. Two of the lots are joining to the church and two are on Poinsettia Road. The parsonage, located at 610 Poinsettia Road, was built in 1959. The building is valued at $14,000, and is a three bedroom home with a Florida room and two baths.

The pastor, Mr. Owens, states: "This is a new work here in central Florida, and the association is new along with the churches. Ten years ago there was only one Free Will Baptist church in this part of Florida, and today we have twelve that I know of. The possibilities are great, and I believe there is a great future for Free Will Baptists here. We desire the prayers of all Free Will Baptists."

Editorial

IS IT FAIR?

C. H. Overman

From what we read in past history about our Free Will Baptist denomination, we note that we have left our guard down in the matter of protecting our heritage and even the property which is ours. History records that there have been two major onslaughts from other denominational groups. These groups (one of them did not classify itself as a denomination) gained a foothold in the local churches and, before long, it became an easy matter for them to accomplish their purpose. Free Will Baptists are not the only ones to have suffered from such attacks, for several denominations have suffered the same fate. Often, from the moment the proselyting group has reached a larger number than the original group. It is indeed interesting to note that those who begin their work through small organized denominations often consider themselves independent. Is it true that, as the present time, Free Will Baptists are subject to lose some of their churches to these independent groups? We do know of an instance, several years ago, in which a minister of one of the independent groups was given charge of a youth organization. At the time he took charge, he was a member of a local Free Will Baptist church. Soon after taking it, however, he went back to the independent group and was not long in organizing an independent church from the group which had been originally organized by one of our own ministerial students.

There may be those who are inclined to believe that such movements are unimportant and really do no damage to our cause, but we are inclined to believe differently. Consider the fact that at least one of our church members will rush to a revival conducted by one of the so-called independent fellows, to the neglect of their own church. Why does this happen? and why are independent churches organized? May we consider the following circumstances which we believe often trigger these movements:

1. There are those who want the controls for themselves. "This is my church," say these in every denomination who have an unimpaired mind for power, both in the ministry and out of the ministry. This may be because they think they could do a better job than the other man, or it may stem from some personal grudge against him. They may thus decide to organize their own group and call it independent, so they can gain the power and control which they desire.

2. There are those who can't meet the qualifications in their own denomination. This is especially applicable to some ministers. In many instances, Free Will Baptist conferences and associations have high moral qualifications in the ordination of ministers. There is an indication of deep concern for the betterment of our denomination, and we should be proud of this. However, our independent friends and ministers often find those who are not willing to meet these standards. Usually, these standards pertain to the personal qualifications. Often these ministers feel they are being treated unfairly and they begin to think in terms of setting up. "What has happened, the independent bodies stand ready to receive me from..."

Regarding the matter of lack of appreciation for a denomination, we should mention, Adolph B. Davis, in Pastor in Profile, speaks of those who go to the various sources of action to accomplish their purpose. One of them, he lists as the fifth-column tactic. "They patiently and quietly seek to undermine the faith of members in their denomination. When the big day arrives, they will come out into the open and rescue churches from 'the clutches of the denomination,' or they organize independent, semi-independent churches and steal numbers of people from the denomination. There is as much honor in a man who will steal a dollar or an automobile as there is in a man who will steal a member or a church from his rightful place."

3. Some ministers and churches never become grounded in Free Will Baptist principles and doctrines. We claim to believe in Arminian theology as opposed to Calvinistic doctrine. Yet, in spite of this doctrinal stand, we hear of officers and deacons in some of our churches which are Free Will Baptist in name on, therefore, if an independent movement should be triggered, they would be the first to go. Apparently, some of our ministers do not value our doctrinal stand too highly. We also hear of churches which do not carry out our church ordinances as set forth in our Treatise; namely, the omitting of the feet washing service. Jesus said that we ought to do this, and our Treatise sets it forth as a church ordinance; therefore, there is no legitimate excuse for omission.

4. Some of our church members are drifters at heart. In other words, we mean they have never settled down to conscientious activity. They look for something they are not finding in their own church and sometimes they do not find it in another. Let it be said, however, that sometimes a member may at last find the church which satisfies; thus he becomes active for the cause of the Kingdom.

Mr. Bedsole suggests that ministers stay with the ship, and not leave when faults and failures exist in their denomination. We would suggest the same thing regarding the church member who constantly changes. Why can't the conscientious minister and his man be a constructive critic rather than a chronic griper? Why not put out his energy and interest in his own church and thus seek to improve it? Often such movements are unfair; therefore, may we pray with the psalmist, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me" (Psalm 51:10).

The Prodigal's Picture

by Grace Cash

CECIL ARNOLD folded the first letter and slowly replaced it in the envelope bearing the return address of Claude Wilder, virtually the owner of Wildertown, including the church in the valley. The letter requested, in only one sentence, that Cecil resign as pastor of Wildertown church. He then opened the second letter, written on dainty blue-edged stationery and bearing the address of Marigold Wilder. "If you resign because of a feud over an old man's picture, I shall never see you again," Marigold had written.

Cecil crumpled the letter to his breast and leaned against the door, his eyes closed. Usually in his study on the second floor of Mrs. Blanton's great house where he had a spacious apartment, he could find solitude which he had needed dreadfully all the days he had been here. But today the people and the cares—and the sudden conflict that had evolved when he removed from the pulpit the picture of John Wilder, under of Wildertown—had pressed upon him until God seemed remote, a stranger to him.

"If you resign, if you resign," came that accusation and suddenly it was not Marigold but a still small voice whispering in his ear and he knew in that moment that he could not resign.

Cecil dialed the Wilder telephone and felt relieved when Marigold answered. "Marigold, this is Cecil," he said hurriedly. "I have decided not to resign." "You don't have to whisper," she remarked. "Father is out with all his business, making more money. Cecil, I have another stipulation. You must win Father for the Lord."

"Claude Wilder!" he blurted and amended his remark by saying "Your father? Win him to the Lord?" That had not occurred to him. Partly because his name headed the membership list and mainly because Claude Wilder ran the church. Was not that the root of it all? Because Cecil suggested removing John Wilder's picture from the pulpit wall, Claude Wilder had backfired. "Why isn't he already?" He stopped. Granted it was his first mistake, Cecil should know that church rolls are filled with the unrepentant.

"Cecil, Father has given me everything—a lovely home, luxuries, college money," she said. "Somehow above all that, or in spite of it, I found the Lord. Father hasn't and it is the one thing I can try to give back to him. You must help me."

"I'll help you," he promised worriedly. "But remember, I am only an instrument of God. Any miracles will be from Him and you know as well as I that only a miracle will save—" He started to say "Claude Wilder" but he finished cautiously, "your father."

"I know," she answered, and her voice sounded torn with uncertainty and fear.

Cecil went to the window and looked absently over the valley. Before his views stretched the Wilder Road, paved now and winding like a neat serpent through the hills and valleys, because Claude had influence with state officials. Folks did what a Wilder said although other communities suffered the same lack, and continued to suffer.

Suddenly a mule-drawn wagon emerged from behind the Cow's Tooth curve at the Wilder Store, and Cecil recognized the driver as Sam Goodwin. In spite of himself, Cecil smiled. Sam was the only person in Wildertown, the only member of Wildertown Church that had not seemed upset over the church feud. Cecil, puzzled that anyone had remained neutral in such a stir, hurried down the stairs and halted Sam.

"You be up early," Sam said, "for it not to be a Sunday. Preachers just have one work day and that's the day the Lord said for nobody a'tall to work."

A frown creased Cecil's brow. "Sam, why're you so calm in all this business about the John Wilder picture?" he asked. "Do you or do you not think it is time for church-cleaning in the valley? Do you not think the church would be better named Valley Missionary Church?"

Sam tightened the reins on his perfectly obedient mule and smacked his lips together in a half-laugh. "There you go too fast for the likes of me," he said. "Name the church what you will but learn the secret of the picture and you might yourself just let it hang there, right back of the preacher to kind of prod him on when his sermons get lukewarm and God a'right minded to spew us all out of His mouth."

Cecil leaned intently over the wagon wheel. Throughout the ages God had worked His miracles through humble people such as Sam Goodwin, and it was no miracle such as no preacher or preacher would select as the center piece. "What is the secret of John Wilder's picture?" he asked, remembering well that it was this type of man who had bargained and cheated and underpaid his employees until the Wilder fortunes came into being. At the time of his death, he had repented and he died with the assurance of eternal life.

Would God again work a miracle to save another Wilder who had sinned the same, and now that he had it, grow to now, ten greater gift because his daughter denied it for him? Cecil brooded darkly. Was it too much to ask? Should he ask it at all, knowing the circumstances? "Who put that picture in the pulpit?" he asked.

Sam shook his head slowly. "The people" he said. "The people."

Cecil was taken completely aback. He had impulsively assumed that the Wilders had placed the picture there to mark the church as another of their various properties.

Sam glared at Cecil with his hawk-like eyes. "I can take you perzactly to the studio where that picture was painted up," he said. "At White's on Bank Street in Culver City."

"Drive in and hitch your mule," Cecil answered. "We'll go in my car."

Cecil stopped at the church and picked up (continued on page four)

Standing at the Crossroad

The following article appeared as an editorial written by Cletus E. Brock in a January issue of the Mount Olive Tribune, Mount Olive, North Carolina. It is reprinted here because it helps to point out to Free Will Baptists everywhere the significant role that Mount Olive Junior College is filling in Christian higher education.

We Free Will Baptists must now decide what kind of college we want Mount Olive to be. We can be complacent and let the college become a lukewarm institution that is a dishonor to our church, our God, this community, and the cause of true education. Or, for the first time in the history of our denomination, we can have a college that has achieved the highest in educational proficiency."

The above words are from a letter written by W. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive Junior College to members of the college's Board of Directors, and they significantly point out the crossroads at which the college finds itself.

Everyone in this area interested in the college one little bit knows of the record-setting speed with which it achieved accreditation by the North Carolina education authorities. Not only knows it, but is proud of it! With almost the same swiftness the college under the dedicated leadership of President Raper, Dean Michael Lee and every other faculty member, has moved toward regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

One of the highest official approvals that any junior college can receive, is not only to come by, and, in effect, is a guarantee that all standards by which such an institution can be judged, have been met and/or surpassed. Many such colleges, many years older than our college, have not yet reached the position where they feel an application for such approval is in order.

Our college has made such application, at the recent annual meeting of the southern group in Louisville, Kentucky, and on the basis of evidence presented at that time, its request for a visit by the association's examining group was approved. These investigators, for such they are, will visit the local campus sometime early next fall.

We hopefully join our prayers with those of the college family for unanimous approval by the accreditation visitors. Such accreditation, however, is not an end in itself. A plateau, maybe, where new energy and strength can be mustered for even greater efforts, but certainly not a stopping place.

To fulfill its destiny Mount Olive Junior College, owned and operated by North Carolina Free Will Baptists, must train minds and spirits of all young people who come under its influence. And that's where all non-Free Will Baptist supporters of the college come in. When an institution contributes as much to the welfare of a community as Mount Olive Junior College has contributed to this area, and when its potential for molding the tomorrows of today's youth is so great, it deserves whole-hearted support from every citizen of our area.

While written to his Board of Directors, we believe another paragraph in President Raper's letter might well be taken to heart by us all:

"To meet this challenge, a generosity and sacrifice beyond anything we have yet experienced is required. I believe God will give us a regionally-accredited college if we are willing to sacrifice for it, but not otherwise. . . ."

Upon such faith and sacrifices have all great and good movements been built. But there is always the opportune time, and for Mount Olive College, this is it.

Have you done anything about it?

up the two-by-four foot likeness of John Wilder, lying disconsolately in the discard heap at the back of the church, and put in on the back seat. "Did you know him?" Cecil asked, nodding toward the black-whiskered, bushy-browed man who looked like an imitation of a Smith cough drops advertisement.

"Lived here all my life, reckon I did," Sam answered knowingly. "But I guess folks really knowed Warren better. Warren was John's brotner."

Silence ensued and no further mention was made of the Wilders. Within an hour Cecil and Sam reached White's studio and a very obliging elderly man verified Sam's statement. Mr. White remembered reproducing the picture from a tintype at the request of the Rev. Frank Shore.

"I still have the tintype," he said and produced it from a pile of old negatives. The same black square bore on the backside the name of Warren Wilder.

"May I have the tintype?" Cecil asked. "Glad to oblige," Mr. White replied kindly.

Outside Cecil asked for an explanation of the mistaken identity and Sam reluctantly volunteered the information.

"Warren Wilder was a black sheep when he come back to God the Rev'red Shore wanted his picture to hang in the church to jostle him when he forgot that God still gets around with His miracle," Sam said. "'Course, the Wilder generations ain't so proud for the black sheep story to be aired and taking down the picture started tongues wagging agin."

"I understand," Cecil said, but a heavy sigh indicated that the Wilder topic had closed. He needed to lay this matter open before God—at once.

The following Sunday morning Cecil stood in the pulpit at Wildertown Church with the picture of Warren Wilder in the old familiar place. He glanced over the congregation, noting that Marigold was present, sitting alone on a middle row seat. On the very back pew sat Claude, squirming uncomfortably.

Very calmly Cecil delivered his first sermon on the Prodigal Son. Looking directly at Marigold's father he said, "After the Prodigal Son returned to God his face was as dear hanging on the wall in a glass frame as that of the other son. Indeed, God may have richer blessings for repentant prodigals than for the seemingly upright who seek salvation on their deathbeds."

Quietly then the invitation was given and in the middle of the first stanza Claude came down the aisle.

Claude arose at the end of the song and made his confession openly. "I'm not accepting anything," he concluded. "I am accepting God's offer of salvation. It is sufficient."

Cecil looked toward the middle pew and his eyes met those of Marigold's. She smiled and her lips shaped the words, "God still performs miracles."—Gospel Herald.

Many fathers are willing to give the children everything—except themselves!

The Secret of Peace with God

by Colonel Pendleton
Nashville, Tennessee

In Romans 5:1 we read, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." We find that so many of the children of God are robbed of their peace because they do not have the assurance of their salvation. I fully believe that there are several reasons for this uncertainty.

First, they may be relying on what they have done instead of what Christ has done. When Jesus, the Son of God, our Redeemer, said, "It is finished," as He died upon the Cross, He meant that full atonement had been made for all the sins of all who accept Him as their Saviour. I say, all the sins, past and present and future, not by the record before your acceptance of Him, but all that may ever be committed by you in weakness afterward. For we read, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9); see also Chapter 2.

Many do not act as though they believe in God when they fail in their Christian life, but they begin to do penance, or many other things that savor of self-crucifixion and legalism, to make atonement themselves. This is beyond their power, the lost assurance does not come with the peace that penance brings. Only going back to the Cross and believing and accepting what God has done will bring back the peace of God's part. Beloved, Jesus paid it all, all! The song expressed it thus: "Nothing can atone for sin atone, nothing but the blood of Jesus; naught of good that I have done, nothing but the blood of Jesus." (See Hebrews 9:22.)

Again, I believe some people do not have assurance because they are looking for it in the wrong place. It must be in the mind and not in the emotions. Mr.

Webster defines assurance as, "freedom from doubt, firmness of mind," and this is dependent upon what we know.

I believe that when your eyes get happy, you will shed tears of joy, when your mouth gets happy, you will shout and sing praises to God; and when our hands get happy, you will clap them; and when your feet get happy, you will pat them for real joy. (See Psalm 150; Philippians 4:4; Acts 2.)

Assurance only comes by believing what is written in the Book of books. "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God" (1 John 5:13). Many are looking at their feelings to find the assurance that brings peace, and there this assurance will never be found. Feelings are dependent upon so many things, such as the weather, sickness, the attitude of unbelievers, distrusting minds, the condemnation of the evil one, which he is ever trying to put upon our feelings, when there is no condemnation for God's children. Read Romans 8:1. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." The condemnation of others is not for us either, "Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth" (Romans 8:33). This is so well expressed in this song, "Though Satan should buffet, though trials should come, let this blest assurance control. That Christ hath regarded my helpless estate, and hath shed His own blood for my soul."

"It is well . . . it is well, with my soul." All these things will change our emotions, but they need not cause us to doubt what God has said, or what Christ has done for us. Remember, Christian assurance comes when we empty our minds of all our own thoughts and opinions and choose to accept what God has done and said.

As we hold firm to this position, feelings or no feelings, there will be three that bear record to us in heaven and three that bear witness for us on earth against everything that men and devils may do to overthrow us. "To, there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood, and these three agree in one" (1 John 5:7, 8).

We might say, in heaven the Father writes our name in the Book of Life, gives us a record. The Word, Christ, intercedes for us, witnessing that all is forgiven us for His sake, because He paid all our debt on Calvary. The Holy Ghost brings the assurance down to our minds and hearts. On earth, the Spirit gives us the new mind, the water (Word) assures us what to believe; the blood gives us the right to believe and to be assured, because it has cleansed us from sin.

Then let us believe God and not man, and enter into the secret peace which comes with this blessed assurance, for, "If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which He hath testified of his son" (1 John 5:9). The secret of peace is so wonderfully expressed in this song: "I am resting tonight in this wonderful peace, resting sweetly in Jesus' control, for I'm kept from all danger by night and by day and His glory is flooding my soul!"

"And me-thinks when I rise to that city of peace, where the Author of Peace I shall see, that one strain of the song which the ransomed will sing, in that heavenly Kingdom shall be: Peace! Peace! Wonderful peace, coming down from the Father above, sweep over my spirit forever, I pray, in fathomless billows of love."

Dear Sunday School Workers,

The Sunday school should and can be one of, if not the greatest, forces for good in any community. Pray and work with us to make "Sunday School Month," the month of March, the greatest ever for your Sunday school and church, but most of all for the Kingdom of our Christ. Not atomic missiles, not intercontinental weapons, not knowledge of outer space, but the knowledge of God's eternal Word of truth taught to young and old alike is the only thing that stands between our people and utter destruction. Sunday school is the only place—the only hope.

Your National Sunday School Board suggests three goals for all the Sunday schools of Free Will Baptists everywhere.

1. 13,000 new Sunday school students during the month of March.

2. 1,300 new God-called and God-qualified teachers.

3. $13,000 not only to liquidate the National Sunday School debt of $13,000 but to liberate the National Sunday School Board for its real task—the promotion of larger and better Sunday schools throughout the denomination.

Within the next week or so, you hope to work out with the Reverend Roger Reeds, secretary of Sunday school board, who is in charge of the Sunday school drive for March, a plan by which special recognition can be given to those taking part in the drive and token rewards to the leaders, on a percentage basis, in each of the three divisions: new students, additional teaching position, offerings to retire debt (all on per cent).

We would like for every Sunday school in the denomination to make a report for your Sunday school for the month of March. Send all reports and donations, if any, to the Nashville office. Free literature for conducting drive can also be obtained. Posters and other publicity materials can be obtained at nominal cost, from the Sunday School Department, National Association of Free Will Baptists, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee. Please take this matter up with your Sunday school at once.

May God get all the glory.

Paul Woolsey, Chairman

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question Will there actually come a time on this earth when 'the lion and lamb will lie down together' in Christ's Kingdom on earth or is this to be regarded as figurative language?—Willie Pearson, Illinois.

Answer Yes, such a time I believe is to come. Such was evidently true of the relations of the animals in the Garden of Eden. Peace again, each will be realized. All ferocity will be taken from the beast of the field and judge like, and peace will be restored to the animal kingdom. No birds of prey will take over the fields and forest again; the peace-loving dove and his kind will dwell. Men will know of war no more.

But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth, and he shall smite the proud into the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his anger shall he lay the wicked, and will scatter them as the chaff of the threshing floor, and will dash in pieces the proud as he dashes in pieces the ear of corn, and will sweep away the chaff as the chaff is swept away, and will scatter the chaff as the chaff is scattered, and will scatter the chaff as the chaff is scattered. And the lion shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion shall be bit together, and a little child shall lead them, and the cow and the bear shall feed as one, and the lion shall eat straw like the ox, and the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weanling child shall put his hand on the cockatrice den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD's glory, as the waters cover the sea. And in that day there shall be a fountain of the water of life freely unto the people: for it shall be given unto him that thirsteth, and he shall never thirst again: and he that will take the water of life freely shall never thirst again. (Isaiah 11:3-11)

And I will assemble the heathen of the land, and I will give the house of Jacob, and I will cause them again to walk there, and I will cause them again to walk there, and I will cause them again to walk there, and I will cause them again to walk there. (Isaiah 11:12-13)

a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the LORD. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people, and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their church, and turn again. I will bring them again out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria, and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon, and their place shall not be found for them' (Zechariah 10:1-10).

You will note that the above are not isolated passages, but those giving sufficient detail that we may have no doubt as to their meaning and at what time to expect their literal fulfillment. When Jesus comes to reign and this is after the judgment of nations, a time when all will be under His direct and perfect control. There will be no wars and thistles in Eden and man will be found in the earth when a time is restored to its original state of productivity and peace. The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose' (Isaiah 65:1), "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people, and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Isaiah 2:4), "Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Romans 8:21).

The fly that buzzes loudest usually gets swatted first.

The only people you should want to get even with are those who have helped you.

When a man concludes that he is utterly useless, he probably is.

One evidence of the value of the Bible is the character of those who oppose it.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORET

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.
(PSALM 119:105)

In the two previous articles we have considered the necessity of repentance, faith, acceptance, conversion and regeneration on our part as absolute essentials to becoming Christians, and grace, mercy and love from God to make us His children. Now I want to proceed with more of the plain teaching of the Bible on the subject, "How Can I Know I Am a Christian."

Redemption is another great word necessary for Christian salvation. It sounds fashioned and meaningless to many people. It means literally to be bought back, and came into use originally from the idea that a person who had become a slave to sin could be restored to freedom only when a price was paid. However, it means to know the whole great process of the salvation of the world through the yearning, merciful God. Redemption is God's supreme gift—His Son by which He bought us back. Take this important doctrine recorded in the Bible: "For ye are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's" (1 Corinthians 6:20); and, "Ye are bought with a price, be not ye the servants of men" (1 Corinthians 7:23). These verses teach that the purchase price has been made, that the Christian belongs to God, both body and spirit, and that Christians are not to be the servants of men. But are we not experiencing the teaching of Peter when he said, "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction" (2 Peter 2:1)? Many are trying to make the way to heaven to their own liking, but remember, the way to heaven was made and given to us by Christ, and we must go in His way if we are to arrive there.

What must we do to be saved? There is no more searching question that anyone can ask than that which the Philippian jailer put to Paul, and no more direct answer ver than Paul's: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house" (Acts 16:30, 31).

There are certain steps we must take if we are to have the full assurance of salvation:

1. First of all there must be an awareness of our need to be saved.
2. The second step is acceptance and faith, which is the surrender of the will to God.
3. Deliverance, the third step, like all the others, is one in which openness of spirit must be joined with active effort. God delivers, but He delivers only those who will accept what is offered. God saves the person who is lost, but only him who is willing to find the way.
4. The next step is to seek God's will and do it.
5. The fifth step is spiritual growth.

These steps suggest the route over which the great Christian spirits have always followed. These are the steps which need to be taken today, if we are to find power in God to grapple with the problems of our time and reach at last the place Christ has gone to prepare for us.

In closing this study, it is my sincere hope and prayer that it has been of help to many who have doubts about their relationship to God. God is very real to all His children. He loves us and desires that we love Him and obey Him.

"These things have I written unto you that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God" (1 John 5:13).

"And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him" (1 John 3:19).

ments. On January 27 I will want the services at South Branch Hospital in Columbus, Georgia. I am doing — at the moment — and looking forward to resuming my church work in the near future.

I would like to acknowledge my appreciation to my faithful church, Macedonia and Traveler's Rest for their prayers and financial support. Words are insufficient to express my appreciation to my faithful brethren and co-laborers in Christ, namely the Reverends Eugene Irwin, Dennis Irwin and S. T. Shutes, who carried on our work.

"Our thanks go to all churches and individuals who are continuing to remember us with their gifts and prayers. May the love of God and the commanding of the Holy Spirit rest upon each of you and be near in heaven." — C. R. Houston, Goffcott, Georgia.

REQUEST FOR PRAYER

Continuing in the greatest need of prayer, I am on my knees, I have a tremendous burden. Sometime I feel very lonely and motherless. My dear family, do you think God has forgiven me, I am —

I have received an invite from Brother Houston to minister again. This would have been great, but I will not do so because of the way I feel. I am leaving it up to you to decide. We have preaching Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights at 7:00 o'clock. I cannot go with you. Our next year February 27. I have been praying the Lord restore all freedom and grace to my brethren and friends who continue in the faith.

God bless you all and make them more faithful and the world an abode of peace and heaven's Father — G. W. J. Padgett, 270 1/2 West Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee.

PERFECT PEACE

I LOOK NOT BACK: God knows the fruitless efforts,
The wasted hours, the sinning, the regrets;
I leave them all with Him, who blots the record,
And graciously forgives and then forgets.

I LOOK NOT FORWARD: God sees all the future,
The road, that short or long, will lead me home,
And He will face with me its every trial,
And bear with me the burdens that may come.

I LOOK NOT INWARD: That would make me wretched,
For I have naught on which to stay my trust;
Nothing I see save failure and shortcomings,
And weak endeavors crumbling into dust.

BUT I LOOK UP: Up into the face of Jesus,
For there my heart can rest, my fears are stilled,
And there is joy, and love, and light for darkness,
And perfect peace, and every hope fulfilled.

—Annie Johnson Flint.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

JACK'S GOOD NEWS

by Mary Alice Boss

RUBY was having a tea party out under a big maple tree. She was just pouring the milk from a little tea pot into the tiny cups when she heard a noise behind her. She turned around just in time to see Annabel, her best doll, disappear through a hole in the hedge. Running to the hedge and looking over the top of it, she saw a little boy crawl under a large bush.

"Hello there! I saw you go under the bush," she called to him. "Please don't hurt Annabel! Won't you come over and play with me?"

The boy crawled from under the bush, dragging the doll by one foot, and grinning.

"I don't play with dolls," he scoffed. "Here's your old doll," and he tossed her high in the air.

Ruby ran to where Annabel had fallen in a crumpled heap. Picking her up and smoothing her dress, she found that the only damage was a smudge of dirt on the end of her nose. Going to the hedge, she repeated her invitation for him to come over and play.

"I didn't mean to play with dolls," she explained. "I thought we could play tag or maybe you would bring your puppy over and we could play ball with him. I was glad when I saw you move into that house yesterday, 'cause, you see, I had a brother just your size, but he got sick and died last winter. I miss him so very much," and Ruby sighed wistfully. "But, of course, I am glad he is living with God and the angels in such a nice place, but I get so lonely without him," and a tear slipped down her cheek.

"I thought you said he was dead," said Jack, "and now you say he is living with someone in some nice place. Didn't they have a funeral and bury him in the graveyard?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, "but God made him alive again, and now he is living in heaven with God and the angels . . ."

"Aw, there aren't really any fairies or wizards or angels, who can make people alive again. That's all just make believe stories."

"Why, Jack! Don't you know about God?" exclaimed Ruby.

"God? No. Who is He?"

"He is the one who lives away above the clouds," and she pointed up at the bright clouds floating overhead. "He is the one who made you and me and all the people. He made the flowers and the trees and all the animals and even the whole world. Why, He made everything."

Jack looked all about him thoughtfully. Finally he spoke. "Well, I guess that, probably, someone did make those things, but I just s'posed they were always here."

"No," said Ruby. "They are awfully old, but only God was always and always here."

"Where is He?" the boy asked.

"He lives in heaven, but He is here too," she answered. "He is everywhere all the time, but you can't see Him. He is invisible. He watches over us all the time so that nothing or no one can hurt us, 'cause He loves us so very much."

"What does God do to people who hurt someone?" asked Jack.

"I don't know what He does every time," said Ruby, "but, a long time ago, God made some bears come out of a woods and they clawed and tore some children, who mocked a preacher, named Elisha, calling him an old bald head; and another time the ground opened up and swallowed some people who were making some trouble for Moses."

"But what would God do to us if we hurt someone?" cried Jack in alarm. "I've hurt people and mocked them too. I've done lots of bad things, but nothing ever happened to me. Maybe God was busy and didn't see me," and the boy sighed with relief.

"Oh, yes. He did see you. God is everywhere and sees everything."

"Then why didn't He punish me?" the boy challenged.

Ruby was puzzled. She couldn't answer him. "Let's go ask Mother," she suggested.

Jack jumped over the fence, and hand in hand they walked up the path to the house. Mother was baking cookies, but she stopped long enough to listen to the children's question. She gave them each a glass of milk and some cookies, while she pondered the question.

She pulled a chair up to the table beside them and began to explain. "God does see all that we do. He even sees the things we do in the dark. God said, 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.'" Seeing the boy's eyes grow wide with fear, she hastened to help him to understand. "Although God is powerful, He is also loving and forgiving. He pities us, who are so weak and sinful, so He doesn't punish us right away, but He gives us time to be sorry for our sins and repent. God made the plan whereby we could be cleaned up and fit for heaven. Jesus, God's only Son, was willing to take our punishment for us, so He died in our stead.

"My little boy, Tommy, went to a children's meeting one day and learned all about this. He kneeled down and told God that he was sorry for all his badness, and God forgave him and carried his sins away, as far as the east is from the west, never to be remembered against him anymore. Then Tommy came home and told us the good news. Now we all love God too."

"I'm sorry for my badness too. Would God forgive me?" Jack cried out.

"Yes, He said, 'Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out,' and, 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness,' and God always keeps His promises."

Jack kneeled down and confessed his sin and was immediately forgiven. When he arose from his knees, his face shone with happiness, but he seemed anxious to leave.

"Won't you stay and have more cookie and milk?" asked Mrs. Carter.

"No, thank you," he refused politely. "I want to go home and tell Mother and Daddy about Jesus. I don't think they know anything about Him, 'cause I have never heard them talk about Him," and Jack hurried home to tell his good news.—Gospel Herald.

Cragmont Woman's Conference

by Mrs. L. E. Ballard

To those who attended the 1959 session of the Woman's Conference, the picture of our group will bring precious memories of wonderful fellowship in the Lord at our loved assembly near Black Mountain, North Carolina. (The man in group was Mr. Roy Rouse, LaGrange, North Carolina, bus operator.) To those of you, who have never attended one of these conferences, we trust that the testimony of these smiling faces may give you a real hunger to know such fellowship with the Lord and with His children.

We were most fortunate to have served on the staff last year Mrs. Carl Dudley, Mrs. Marvin Moore, Mrs. Robert Peele and Mrs. Ethel Whaley. Our house guest or house mother Mrs. Alice E. Lupton, proved a real blessing. Mrs. Leslie Wall of Raleigh, who could not see with her natural eyes, had such keen soul eyesight that she made more real to each heart the beauty of Christ in His forgiving and satisfying power. It was truly a rich privilege to touch her life in such a real way. There was no gloom where she went, for her countenance was ever radiant because of the inner light of the Lord Jesus.

Mrs. Ethel Whaley, home from Alaska, brought dynamic messages. She took us on a journey to Alaska via colored slides, not only of the country but of the Christian and our work there. Her messages were climaxed on the last day with a planelt writ-ter and directed by Mrs. Mildred Pendergrass of Norfolk, Virginia. Those participating were Little Rodner Whaley, Sandra Davis of New Bern, North Carolina and Mrs. Pendergrass.

Not only did we experience meaningful spiritual blessings, but each day we were on a new and fun trip that brought us close to God through the beauty of the life which He created for His glory. Miss Faye Dade of Smith Cove College, LaGrange, Ga. did an excellent job of making the women forget all about their diets. The food was wonderful!

Oh, yes, there's one more thing. The group of women devoted to doing a good thing in something about the needed bathroom facilities. We are asking you, women who have attended a woman's conference or have been to Cragmont to please give us $2.00 or more to Mrs. Carl Dudley, 114 East St., Fuqua Springs, North Carolina, by March 15. Remember this is most urgent even with the new building, for we are hoping to have a capacity crowd this time, August 15-20, 1960.

Days long ago, the Missionary Auxiliary of Oak Branch Church met Tuesday night, January 16, at 7:00 o'clock. The meeting was opened with the usual prayer "Editor," Prayer was offered by Mrs. Ernest Gault. The Scripture reading was also from Ephesians. Mr. Larry Brantley introduced the program.

The program consisted of a group of 100 children's messages. Old and new songs were well received. There were 75 members present for the evening. Ladies' Home Aid will cooperate with $1.00 from the

New England and Canada Missions

Littleton, New Hampshire
February, 1960

Dear Friends in Christ:

We greet you in the name of Christ, our Saviour. We want to thank you for your support for New England and Canada Missions. The Lord has been good to us and we want to thank Him for His goodness. There have been souls saved. The first Free Will Baptist Church was organized in Littleton, New Hampshire, August 9, 1959, with twelve members and property was purchased on Main Street. The church is coming along fine with about thirty-five or forty in the morning worship service and many new people are coming under the sound of the gospel for the first time. We are expecting within three years the church will be self-supporting if progress continues.

The need of the gospel here is great, and I know if each one of you could make a trip up here it wouldn't take you long to find out. The Free Will Baptist church here is the only Baptist church with about 6,000 population. It is going to take time and lots of hard work, but it will be worth it all to see souls come to know Christ. This is the hour God has called upon Free Will Baptists to come back to New England with the truth of the gospel. This area is considered by the evangelicals as the most needed area in the United States, and we have never seen such a need of gospel preaching anywhere as here in New England.

The Mack Owens

Sunday Morning Services

What will you do to help get this gospel into New England? Mrs. Owens and I have given our lives for this cause and we thank those who have given to our support for the past year. It is because you have helped that we were able to stay on the field. We are at the battle front, and believe me we need your supply us with the ammunition if you will pray and give. Many folks do not realize the great expense involved in living in this area. The cold weather brings much added expense; for instance forty to fifty dollars a month fuel bill, snow tires for the car. You must have your car fixed every forty below zero weather, and storm windows and doors, just to mention some of the added expense we have here. The food is very high. We only bring these out to let you know what really is involved in trying to bring the gospel to this forgotten area. The Lord has blessed, and we feel He will continue to bless if each of us takes his part in carrying out his duty.

I am sure that many of you do not know how we came here, but we are here on faith as all other Free Will Baptist missionaries. There is an account set up at Nashville, Tennessee, for "New England and Canada Missions." If the money does not come in, the board is not responsible to send us anything. The Owens' account is in the red and will not receive their salary unless the money comes in. This past month only $39.81 came into our account. What will you do to help out in this great work? Please Free Will Baptists pray and give for New England and Canada Missions; be sure to earmark your home mission funds to the Owens' account.

Please send your offering for the Owens' account so they will receive a full check by March 1. Thank you!

Yours in Christ,
Rev. Mack C. Owens

Mission Work in Mexico

Monterrey, N. L.
February, 1960

Dear Friends:

Greetings once again in the lovely name of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Many have written asking why they did not hear from us in January. I really don't know. I mailed our regular newsletter on the 10th of January. If you did not receive yours, we are very, very sorry. I don't know what happened.

January was a month of joy and sorrow yet we saw the mighty hand of God work in a marvelous way. On Friday, January 8, Danny took sick with what we thought was a cold. By Saturday, he had a very high temperature so we called the doctor. He said it was just a cold and enlarged adenoids, and gave him some medicine. By Monday he was much better, so Arthur left for Nuevo Roc iguez to help build the church there. Tuesday morning Danny had a high temperature again. He was like this for 2 weeks—2 or 3 days better, then suddenly sick again. Finally we had to call in another baby specialist. On January 26, we had Danny X-rayed. When the X-rays came back they showed his right lung completely dry, it was just like a dry sponge. The doctor said he would have to hospitalize him and maybe operate. This was Wednesday evening. Arthur called the church to pray for Danny. God surely worked a miracle. Danny slept that night for the first time in 2 weeks. Arthur had to leave again Thursday morning. The afternoon I took Danny to the Monterrey Clinic where the doctor we had and another doctor were to give him more tests. The doctors were both shocked. They couldn't believe he was so much better. They made test after test; they all came back negative. They just couldn't understand. I began to witness to these two doctors. I told them how we had prayed for Danny the night before, and how God had surely answered our prayer. For nearly two hours they asked questions and listened. God works in ways we do not understand. If Danny had not been sick, we would never have had the opportunity to witness to these doctors. Danny's lungs are fine; how we praise God for His mighty work! He will have to have his adenoids removed; we ask you to remember us when you pray.

About 1:00 a. m. February 3, we experienced the most terrible windstorm Monterrey has ever known; by 8:00 a. m. houses all over town were falling. Through this too, God gave more opportunities to witness to them about God. Danny and I were home alone when two of our windows came flying through the house. I was afraid they were all going to come out. By 4:00 p. m. the wind had ceased, leaving the mountains all in flames, and thousands homeless. Everyone else is still trying to dig out of the sand.

We still lack a little having our church here in Monterrey finished. This is not the project of the W. N. A. C. This is separate from the national project. We had to have a place to go at once, and God provided. Also the church in Nuevo Rodriguez is completed, with a small house for the pastor to live in. The native Christians did all the work and furnished some of the material. The lot was also donated by one of the members.

Trusting everything is well with you and yours. We ask your continued prayer support. Your letters and every thought of kindness mean so much. We can feel the effects of your prayers here on the field. May God richly bless you is our prayer, as we labor together for the salvation of lost souls.

secret pal for her birthday. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Clarice Merritt. The hostess, Mrs. Adell Deaver, served refreshments during the social hour.

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Piney Grove Church held its February meeting on February 16, in the home of Mrs. Winston Crumpler, with 13 members present. The meeting was opened by singing "Jesus Never Fails." Mrs. Charles Ray Pope read the Scripture and two very inspiring poems. Mrs. Frank Waddell led in prayer, remembering the sick and asking God's guidance in the program.

Mrs. Ray Stanford and Mrs. Frank Waddell rendered a duet, "My Desire," accompanied by Mrs. Charles Ray Pope at the piano. Mrs. Stanford, program chairman, gave the introduction to the program. Others participating in the program were Eloise Pope, Mrs. Theibert Wall and Mrs. Jimmy Barnes. Reports were given on the youth auxiliary and G. T. A. Minutes were read, the roll was called, and the treasurers' reports were given and accepted.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, March 15, in the home of Mrs. Theibert Wall. The president, Mrs. Pope, closed the meeting by leading the group in the Lord's Prayer. Refreshments were served buffet style by the hostess.

Goldsboro, N. C.—The women of St. John's Church met at the church Sunday night, January 17, and reorganized the woman's auxiliary. The meeting was opened with Scripture and prayer by Mrs. Edward McKeel. Twenty members enrolled, and the following officers were elected: Mrs. Benjamin Dawson, president; Mrs. J. B.

Daly, vice-president; Mrs. Leonard Rouse, recording secretary, corresponding secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Edward McKeel, program chairman; Mrs. Donald Edwards, youth leader; Rev. Cecil E. Rose, pastor, student course chairman; Mrs. George Daly, phanage chairman; Mrs. Norwood Gray, benevolence chairman. Mrs. Benjamin Dawson dismissed the organizational meeting with prayer.

A CHILD CAN PRAY

Prayer is a thought
With hope and love
Which is sent to God
In heaven above.

Prayer is a wish
In the heart of a child,
Directed to Jesus
So tender and mild.

Prayer is so simple
A child can pray,
It's talking to God
At the close of the day.

FAIRNESS TO ALL

C. H. Overman

The greatest channel of expression in our day is the medium of writing. The spoken word is often misunderstood and even misused and distorted. The written word, however, stands clear and permanent. The printed page is the greatest source of expression in America and practically all nations of the world. Organizations of every sort recognize the importance of this channel of expression and the influence of it over other people. Never before has there been such a circulation of the printed page. Our country grants this privilege to all its citizens. It is a principle upon which our country was founded and we believe it is a God-given privilege and one which we should deeply cherish.

The writer finds satisfaction in his work. It is a deep and abiding satisfaction if done in fairness to his fellow man. It is this realization which has led to the policy of the editor of The Free Will Baptist, and those associated with this weekly publication. The Free Will Baptist has been a voice for the denomination for many years and its effectiveness has been proven time and time again.

May we refer to an editorial which appeared four years ago in The Free Will Baptist which the present editor wrote. We quote in part:

"It is the editor's desire that this generation express itself in writing. The printed page has proven itself, throughout the years, to be one of the most effective means of spreading the truth. It has also served as a means of preserving the thinking of the people of one generation for the benefit of others who have come after. Our generation should not deprive posterity of a permanent account of what we believe, what we do, and what we hope for generations yet unborn, if the Lord tarries.

"The editor's responsibility regarding that which is to be published is tremendous. What should he accept for publication, and what should he reject? Realizing that what he publishes now will have its effect upon present readers and will reveal to posterity the beliefs of this people, he must strive to see that the articles published are true to the faith. At the same time, he must be careful not to exercise censorship to the point of stifling the thinking of our people. He must also decide whether he will publish only those manuscripts which he can personally endorse in detail, or whether he will give others the benefits of possibly being right and publish something which he does not altogether believe. If he permits articles with which he does not agree, to what extent should he go in this practice?

"Realizing the sacredness of his position, the editor has formulated a definite policy regarding articles which he accepts for publication. He recognizes that The Free Will Baptist is a denominational publication; therefore, he must keep the periodical true to the faith. He strives to see what is published is not in violation of the Treatise of Faith and Practices of the Original Free Will Baptists. Since the treatise does not cover in detail all fine points of doctrine, there is considerable leeway for differences of opinions and beliefs within the framework of the treatise. Therefore, some articles will appear with which an individual reader may not agree;

however, he may be sure that the ideas expressed are believed by some group of our people. The editor exercises no hesitancy rejecting articles which are in violation of the treatise or which are not common to the faith of a segment of our people. . . .

"What should you do with regard to a public statement with which you disagree? You should write an article, or enlist the services of someone else, stating positively and objectively what you believe, substantiating your points by the Word of God; then you should submit the article to the editor for possible publication. Be careful not to deal in personalities, nor to deal in rebuttal of an article previously published, nor to cast insinuations upon any persons who do not believe as you do. Positive, objective truth should defend itself. It is our editorial policy to publish only positive objective articles which fall within the framework of our treatise and the faith and practice of our people.

"We shall not permit controversies to develop in our columns. . . ."

Instances can be cited in which both sides of an issue have been published in The Free Will Baptist, for it is a voice of our people. There have also been times when an editorial stand has been taken in certain issues, but where this has been done, it was done objectively and positively and it did not, and will not, presuppose the readers the right to express themselves. We thus believe that The Free Will Baptist will maintain its integrity among the people it is serving.

We shall never cast an unfair reflection or doubt in the direction of our fellow ministers and fellow Christians; nor shall we allow others to do so through our columns. It is a sincere prayer and earnest hope that all who submit articles for publication in The Free Will Baptist will recognize our policy and thus judge their writings accordingly. We believe this to be a fair proposition to all. We believe it is Christ honoring, and if Christ honoring, it will do honor to our denomination.

Unparalleled Progress

by W. Burkette Raper
President, Mount Olive College

"The Lord hath done great things for whereof we are glad" (Psalm 126:3).

THESE words of the psalmist express the true sentiments of every friend Mount Olive College. What God has for us exceeds the fondest dream of the most optimistic advocator of the college when it was chartered in 1951. Let look at the unique and marvelous manner in which God has blessed this ministry of Christian higher education.

WHAT GOD HATH WROUGHT

In the early days of Mount Olive College, an editorial in The Free Will Baptist declared that the college presented unparalleled opportunities to our people in Christian higher education. The opportunities we now have converted into unparalleled progress.

Enrollment: Mount Olive College began its first year of operation in September, 1952, under the name of Mount Allen at Agmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, with an enrollment of thirty-two students. Each year since, the student body has grown; registration for the 1959-60 school year reached 175 students.
In eight years the enrollment increased fifteen times over the original registration.
How many other colleges do you know that show such growth?

Support: The first year the college was chartered (1951-1952), total contributions amounted to $3,712.41; during the 1958-1959 fiscal year Mount Olive College received $68,364.60 in gifts, or eighteen times the amount given the first year. As of January 1, 1960, Free Will Baptists have invested a quarter of a million dollars in Mount Olive College. As the college grows and enlarges its services to the denomination, we believe that Free Will Baptists will continue to increase their giving. We have learned that our people will sustain those programs that demonstrate dedicated leadership and offer effective service.

Library: The first effort to develop a library at Mount Olive College began in the fall of 1954, and a full-time librarian was added to the faculty in 1955. Today the library contains 7,000 volumes, modern steel shelves, possibly the most extensive collection of Free Will Baptist historical materials anywhere in the denomination, a fire-proof file for valuable papers, a well-chosen library of musical recordings, and a listening room with hi-fidelity equipment.
The college subscribes to eight newspapers and sixty-five magazines and periodicals.
The library alone is worth more than the entire purchase price of the college property in 1953. Furthermore, the J. C. Moye Trust Fund, soon to reach $12,500, provides a guaranteed annual income for the continued growth and development of the library.

Laboratory: One of the most interesting points for visitors to our campus is the modern science laboratory made possible through the generous gifts of a local physician, Dr. C. C. Henderson. Apparatus and supplies in this department alone are valued at $12,000.

Assets: From $6.17, which the North Carolina State Convention had to apply on Mount Olive College in September, 1953, when it voted to purchase property in Mount Olive, the college has increased its assets to approximately $225,000. Included in this amount is the value of fifty acres of land acquired for future growth and expansion, $35,000 in endowment and $10,- 000 in student loan funds. In addition, however, six persons are known to have named the college the beneficiary of insurance policies ranging up to $10,000, and others are including the college in their wills.

Academic Recognition: Mount Olive College has brought dignity and prestige to the Free Will Baptist denomination through its achievements in the educational world.
If it had not been for Mount Olive College, the name of Free Will Baptists would not have appeared in a national publication of a recent survey of more than 2,000 colleges and universities in America by the Beta Club.

Today Mount Olive College is accredited by the North Carolina College Conference and State Department of Education; it holds membership in the American Association of Junior Colleges, Southern Association of Junior Colleges, North Carolina Council of Church-Related Colleges, and the Collegiate Academy of the North Carolina Academy of Science. Moreover, the college is approved by the United States
Office of Education; Veterans Administration; and the United States Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, for foreign student training.

The college has also been approved by the Committee on Admission to Membership of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for a formal visit during the fall of 1960. If the findings of the Standards Committee are favorable, Mount Olive College will become the first college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination to obtain regional accreditation, the highest academic recognition given by accrediting agencies.

New Church: The growth of Mount Olive College has concentrated in the city of Mount Olive a number of Free Will Baptists who were organized into a Free Will Baptist church in November, 1958. The church now holds full-time services in the auditorium of Mount Olive College, has a Sunday school, woman's auxiliary, weekly prayer meeting, and has begun a building fund.

Adversaries Overcome: The foregoing progress is unparalleled in the two hundred and thirty-three years of history of the Free Will Baptist denomination. But these advancements have not come easily.

Paul described his ministry at Ephesus in these words: "For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries" (1 Corinthians 16:9). These words also describe the ministry of Mount Olive College. This institution is the first academically-accredited liberal arts college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination as we know it today, and a lack of understanding of this approach to Christian higher education has sometimes

Called Home

THE SUDDEN homegoing of Howard Grevenitz, by what seemed an untimely death, has caused many to ask the usual question, "Why?"

At the early age of twenty-three, with all the vigor of youth, carefully and adequately prepared both academically and spiritually for a happy and useful life, he was suddenly called home to be with the Lord Jesus.

It might occur to all who shall read this brief account of Howard's death, that they, like him, should be prepared for such an abundant entrance into the Lord's presence. Howard's readiness was abundantly evident, by the way he lived, and by certain things he had expressed in his personal diary.

Obviously there came a time in his life, when he accepted the fact that he was a sinner, and realizing that there was no escape from the guilt of sin or its penalty, except by appropriating the gift of salvation by grace, through simple faith in the atoning death of the Lord Jesus Christ, he bowed the knee and in simple faith acknowledged Jesus as Lord, and believed in his heart that God hath raised Him [Jesus] from the dead. (See Romans 10:9, 10.) This act of faith brought him into conscious relationship with God, and as we also read, made him, "... a new creature in Christ Jesus, old things passing away; and behold all things becoming new" (2 Corinthians 5:17). When this change took place, Howard's life and all his purposes in life changed. After a careful reading of his diary, we are sure he would like to share some of his experiences with you, and we can say, "He being dead, yet speaks." Here are some of the things he experienced or wanted to be seen in his life:

"May my life ever be a challenge, and never a compromise."

"Only one life, 'twill soon be past, only what's done for Christ will last."

"God always gives the best to those who leave the choice with Him."

"After all He's done for me, how can I do less than give Him my best, after all He's done for me?"

"Nothing lies beyond the reach of prayer, except that which lies outside the will of God."

"The things that are impossible with men, are possible with God."

"Be not afraid, only believe. Believing implies repentance, and repentance implies obedience."

"Two things without which life would not be worth living, are faith and love."

"When you have nothing left but God, then for the first time you become aware that God is enough."

"Information about God is no substitute for obedience to God. May God keep us from always taking in, and never giving out."

"Help us so to live, that the things of heaven may not be crowded out by the things of earth."

"Lord, if there's some job left undone that you want me to do, count on me, count on me."

Then there is also Howard's personal evaluation of the blood of Jesus Christ, when he states, "It is the great dividing line down through humanity, allowing for no neutral or middle ground."

The experiences of others also impressed him, and Howard recognized the value of them, quoting in particular something that was expressed by Wesley who said, "If I had three hundred men who feared nothing but God, hated nothing but sin, and were determined to know nothing among men but Jesus Christ, and Him crucified, I would set the world on fire."

To know Howard, was to realize that the foregoing quotations meant something to him, and they actually became a part of his new life in Christ. He could say with Paul, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Galatians 2:20).

In his last years, he became increasingly useful and helpful, especially as a leader among young people, making good use of whatever opportunities were given him to touch the lives of others with the message of God's redeeming grace and love. This was expressed very definitely by still another quotation in his diary:

"Reach out your right hand and lift it up to God, let Him hold it, then take your left hand and reach it out to a dying human. Then pull your hands together with all your might, and with the power of the Holy Spirit seek to bring that dying human to the Lord Jesus Christ."

Thus Howard's life on earth came to an end, but the influence of it still continues. Here are the words of the last quotation in his diary:

"Thou hast made us for Thyself, oh Lord, and our hearts are restless, 'till we rest in Thee."

He has taken his leave from this world, and is now at home in heaven with his precious Lord. Are you, who read the lines, ready for such an event? Can you say, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain" (Philippians 1:21)? In behalf of Howard Grevenitz, in whose memory this tract has been written, may we urge you to do NOW, what he did; "... confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus, and believe in your heart that God raised Him from the dead, and thou shalt be saved" (Romans 10:9). Or, as Jesus said in another place "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24).—American Tract Society.

Can't Afford to Tithe

by Rev. Roy Rikard

I want my breakfast served at eight
With ham and eggs upon the plate;
A well-broiled steak I'll eat at one,
And dine again when day is done.
(But I can't afford to tithe.)

I want an ultra modern home,
And in each room a telephone;
Soft carpets, too, upon the floors,
And pretty drapes to grace the doors.
(But I can't afford to tithe.)

A cozy place of lovely things,
Like easy chairs with innersprings.
And then I'll get a small T.V.—
Of course, I'm careful what I see.
(But I can't afford to tithe.)

I want my wardrobe, too, to be
Of neatest, finest quality,
With latest styles in suit and vest.
Why shouldn't Christians have the best?
(But I can't afford to tithe.)

I want a car and boat in which to ride
My wife and children by my side.
I want a job that pays me good;
A bank account as all men should.
(But I can't afford to tithe.)

Cuba--1960

by Louis H. Moulton

"YANKEE, GO HOME!" "Down with American imperialism!" These are the things that the average American would expect to hear if he went to Cuba, because what he reads in the newspapers. The American newspapers are presenting a distorted view of conditions as they actually exist in Cuba. I know because I have just returned from having spent three weeks there.

When I boarded the Cuban plane at the Miami airport, I left behind a brother who told me that he wanted to come to Cuba while I was there. He wanted me to let him know when I arrived if there was room for him at our mission station in Pinar del Rio so that he might come over later. I wrote to him giving him explicit directions as how to get to Pinar from Havana, but during the whole three weeks he did not come. When I landed back in Miami, I asked him why he didn't come on over and he answered, "I was scared because of what I read in the papers."

I walked up and down the streets of Pinar del Rio, Havana, Matanzas, San Juan, and Jose, and many other towns and cities. I went into the shops, the restaurants, the churches. I saw no anti-American feeling manifested; there was no spitting, no jeering, no demonstrations of any kind. The people were as friendly and cordial as they are in my home town in the States. This is how it was everywhere I went.

Night after night, as we visited in the various Free Will Baptist churches holding services and preaching the gospel, the people were responsive as I have never seen people responsive to the preaching of the Word. At nearly every service there were souls that came to the Lord and were saved.

It was our privilege to visit in the very court where many of the recent trials took place which resulted in the firing squad or numbers of those found guilty. About thirty men were on trial the day we visited the court in Pinar del Rio. They were accused of counter-revolutionary activities. We found it very interesting to find that all these men were represented by counsel. They were given a fair hearing, were allowed to present any evidence, and their hearing was open to the public. We talked with some of the defense lawyers and learned that contrary to what we had read, that all the military trials were conducted just this way.

During the time of these military trials, our missionaries, Rev. Thomas H. Willey Sr., and Rev. Thomas H. Willey Jr., were kept busy visiting the condemned men, giving them the gospel, trying to reach them for Jesus. Many of them were brought to the saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ before they were taken out and placed before a firing squad. When I returned from Cuba I brought Brother Willey back with me for a series of treatments from a doctor in Savannah, Georgia. Brother Willey told me that he had butterflies in his stomach. To go day after day, week after week, to pray and deal with condemned men and then walk with them to the courtyard, listen as the shots of the firing squad would ring out and then a final shot, I could understand how a man would have butterflies in his stomach.

During these weeks in Cuba, I discovered that Cuba is open to the gospel as it has never been before. I discovered also that there are vast unevangelized sections of the island where no gospel witness has ever gone. This discovery came through talking with Dr. Molena, head of the American Bible Society in Cuba and in the entire Caribbean area. Dr. Molena pointed out areas on the map of Cuba, great swamp and marshy areas where thousands of people live without a single church or even an evangelical witness.

Dr. Molena was high in his praise of Free Will Baptist foreign missions in Cuba. While talking to me, he pointed to Brother Willey and said that the whole of the Pinar Province and the northwest end of the island owed its evangelization to Thomas H. Willey. We later visited the Union Theo-

Your Part

Larry once tried to count all the wrong things he had ever done. He could not remember half of them, but he counted until it frightened him. Then he said, "Oh, Mother, they make a great bundle—so big that it tires me to have them in my heart. What shall I do?"

His mother told him Jesus said, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"; but the boy said, "Maybe He doesn't mean me, Mother."

"Why," said his mother, "aren't you tired of carrying your load of naughty things? Aren't they heavy?"

"Oh, yes," he said, "they are heavy."

"Then listen." Again she repeated: "All ye that labor and are heavy laden."

Larry said, "But, Mother, how will He do it? How can He do it? How can He take my sins away?"

His mother replied, "My boy, that is God's part; your part is to come."—Selected.

logical Seminary in Matanzas and found this institution and its president very optimistic over the future of Cuba and particularly as it concerns the furtherance of the gospel.

There is much to be desired in seeing better relations develop between our nation and that of Cuba. There are some very definite communistic trends in Cuba today. Fidel Castro has placed at the head of the country's banking system a man with known communist leanings. Fidel's brother Raul is quite outspoken about his communist affiliation. Topped off by the very recent visit by Russia's Mikoyan, all of these things give cause for concern over future relations of our two countries.

Surely these are perilous days for Cuba—days of transition, days of change, days of uncertainty. Cuba and the evangelicals of Cuba, and Free Will Baptists in Cuba particularly, should occupy a very prominent place on our prayer list.

Mr. Connie Wilder

On February 5, 1960, our loving heavenly Father saw fit to call from this life of suffering our dear brother in Christ, Uncle Connie Wilder, Age 83. He was a faithful member of Friendship Free Will Baptist Church, Johnston County, North Carolina. He attended church and Sunday school as long as his health permitted. All who knew him will miss him and feel the vacancy he left very deeply. To know him was to love him.

Therefore, we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father who doeth all things well. We would like to express our deepest appreciation of his devotion and faithful service to his church and Sunday school. He was always willing to serve when asked to do any task, as long as he was able. We commend our deepest sympathy to those who knew and loved him. He left to mourn his passing six daughters, one son, several grandchildren, and a host of friends. May they find comfort and peace in Him who said, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

A sister in Christ,

Mr. Freeman Bryan

The death angel visited the home of Mr. Freeman Bryan on August 2, 1959, and took away one of our beloved members of the Sandy Plain Free Will Baptist Church. He was born June 18, 1904, making his stay on earth fifty-five years.

He united with the church in 1952 and was held in high esteem by every member of the church. We loved him very dearly.

We as a church extend our deepest sympathy to the family.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Riehlend Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Please explain, "And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape" (John 5:37). Did not the Jews at Jesus' baptism and the three disciples with Jesus on the mount of transfiguration hear God's voice?—James Peacock, Illinois.

Answer: There is a sense in which this is true, yet when Jesus told the Jews they had not heard the Father's voice, He doubtless was using the term and meant this in the sense of other similar Scriptural uses of the term: "Hear and your souls shall live," and "He that hath an ear let him hear." The Jews did not accept the witness of God that came from heaven at Jesus' baptism; that in the Scriptural use was the same as not hearing even in the sense in which Christ used it several times mentioned above. And as for the scene at which Peter, James and John heard, though they did not heed at once, they responded later giving full recognition to its demand. "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount" (2 Peter 1:16-18). There is also a sense in which sinful people may not see the face of God and live. "And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live" (Exodus 33:20). When Jesus came to earth, He was veiled in a fleshly or human body; therefore, in or through Him men saw God. "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Colossians 2:9).

Question: In what way are we, who are believers, in Christ?—Rose Smith, Illinois.

Answer: This is a spiritual relationship of the believer and his Lord. (1) We are the righteousness of God as a result of Christ's becoming sin for us. "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (2 Corinthians 5:21). (2) Because of this we act according to our faith rather than by sight. "For we walk by faith, not by sight" (2 Corinthians 5:7). This makes us regard ourselves as being dead or in a state of non-existence regarding sin but in a living state of action unto God. "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof" (Romans 6:11, 12). Now we are indeed justified. "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh" (Romans 8:11, 12); "But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart" (2 Corinthians 3:15); "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Galatians 2:20). Finally, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad" (2 Corinthians 5:10). With this in mind, the following Scriptures make sense when applied to any of us who are Christians. "For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring" (Acts 17:28). This position assures us of answered prayers and of our lives being fruitful. "I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples" (John 15:5-8). Christ's true disciple stands in the world as His representative and witness bearer. The disciple's own salvation is no longer that which most concerns him.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples indeed" (John 8:31).

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:35).

The question asked in the subject of this meditation has many answers, most of which are partly correct, but there is only one true answer to it. However, that answer has a number of different parts. For example the two texts above give two of those parts, each introduced by the word, if. If ye continue in my word. If ye have love one to another.

Dr. W. R. Matthews, of England, writing on the subject, "The Essence of Christianity," has observed that there are three answers which are so important that they deserve our careful consideration. These answers are: "A Christian is one who believes the Christian faith. A Christian is one who belongs to the Christian Church. A Christian is one who joins in Christian worship."

A Christian is one who believes in the Christian faith. That is, I think, he accepts God's Word as it is and continues to live according to its teachings, and he rejects all theories and doctrines which are contrary to it. Thus, certainly a Christian

He must exemplify Christ's holding himself up before a lost world so as to attract lost souls to Him. Christ told us He Himself was the light of the world but did not stop there, but also said that His followers were the light of the world. We are those light bearers through whom He shines forth in all the dark places of the whole world. We live the Christlike life and thereby are the mediums by which He comes into each sin darkened heart to light it up with His own precious self. That one who lives the Christlike life has in himself the mind of Christ; therefore, he exerts the influence of Christ conveying the hope of Christ and working as a co-laborer in His vineyard. One thus guided by Christ can truly regard himself as in Christ.

ne who believes in God, and who strives ive by the teachings of His Word. The le teaches that we should "Hold fast the m of sound words, which thou hast heard me, in faith and love which is in Christ as" (2 Timothy 1:13).

A Christian is one who belongs to the urch and is in fellowship with it and its
rk. No one can deny that this, no less n that of believing the Christian faith, s necessary quality of the Christian. The ly Spirit is promised, not to those who ell in isolation, but to those who are in owship with the church.

n the New Testament, the Pharisee om Jesus denounced was the man who s too full of his own status in the church, l of his accurate performance of its rerements. Today the Pharisee is more en the man who is too proud, too well ormed, and often too spiritual to beg to, and fellowship with, the church.
ny find too many hypocrites in the urch to belong in it, forgetting that there o greater form of hypocrisy than that of fessing to be a Christian and refusing to ite, work with and enjoy the fellowship those making up the body of Christ here the world!

It is no less important to realize the truth t a Christian is one who shares in the ristian worship of God. To the Chris-n the only genuine end and fulfillment the human life is communion with God.
nothing lower can the soul of the human ature find complete satisfaction.

Certainly it was one of the chief purposes the teaching and life of Jesus to reveal us the true God and to show us how to rship Him in spirit and in truth.

But Dr. Matthews continues, "We have n that the three descriptions of what ing a Christian means has each a justifica-n and represents an important element the Christian life. We have now to tice that they do not contain the whole th of the matter. It is only too easy to get that the New Testament emphasizes requirement which is not precisely con-ned in any of the three descriptions—
Christian is one who tries to follow hrist." To be a follower of Christ was e earliest meaning of being a Christian.
To follow Christ is not easy. No one s ever supposed that it was. He Himlf, though He said that His yoke was easy d his burden light, promised hardship d difficulty to those who took it upon emselves. The following of Christ be-ns with an internal revolution, for that what repentance really means. There eeded a change of life—a new life in hrist—by turning to God.

"Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any an will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" Matthew 16:24).

Hawaii's Rapid Growth Gets Attention

Latest report of the Bureau of the Census shows Hawaii with an estimated total population of 656,000—larger than any one of seven states.

The same report lists Hawaii as the nation's seventh fastest growing state since the last decennial census in 1950. The rate of growth in our Aloha State is 31.2 per cent, compared with the national average of 16.7 per cent.

The figures given in this report are only up to July 1, 1959; by now Hawaii may have passed another state, Idaho, which was about 8,000 ahead and growing less than half as fast.

It should be noted, too, that Hawaii's growth has been predominantly in civilian population.

The next decennial census—to be taken during 1960-61—will undoubtedly confirm Hawaii's right to one more Representative in the Congress of the United States.

This consideration—on the basis of population comparison with other states that have two representatives—was justified at the time the statehood bill was passed.

However, Hawaii did not press the point at that time for the obvious reason that to do so might have impeded or jeopardized the more important matter of immediate statehood.

MY PRAYER

When I'm tempted to do wrong,
Make me steadfast, wise, and strong;
Help me, God, to Thee be true
In my thinking, all I do;
Help me walk in Thy Word's light,
Always doing what is right;
Helping others do that, too;
'Tis my prayer, sincere and true.

—Young Soldier.

My Duty to My Church

Text: "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Hebrews 10:24, 25).

MY DUTY IS TO ATTEND THE CHURCH WORSHIP SERVICES

- A. Live members go to church.
- B. Dead ones are hauled there (Revelation 3:1).

MY DUTY IS TO EXTEND THE CHURCH IN ITS FIELD

- A. By visitation and invitation.
- B. By friendliness and caring for new converts.
- C. By cultivating a missionary vision at home and abroad.
- D. By stimulating a Christian education atmosphere.

MY DUTY IS TO DEFEND THE CHURCH IN FUNDAMENTALS FOR WHICH SHE IS IDENTIFIED

- A. There is the danger of infiltration of error (2 Timothy 4:3, 4).
- B. There is danger of wrong leadership (2 John 9).
- C. There is danger of the snare of worldliness (2 Timothy 4:10).
- D. There is the peril of complacency (Revelation 3:15, 16).
- E. There is the treat of paralysis of pride (1 Peter 5:5, 6).
- F. There is the danger of disaffection (1 John 3:15).

MY DUTY IS TO COMMEND THE CHURCH

- A. We may do this by what we are.
- B. We may do this by consistent Christian lives.
- C. We must practice what we preach.

OUR COLLEGE IS HERE TO STAY

Recently I received an article entitled, "Prints from the Mount Olive Tribune," under the caption, "From the Mouth of," I read the following: "Doesn't it do your heart good to learn that our college is so interested in the spiritual development of its students, as well as their total growth, that an entire week would set aside to emphasize this development? In an amateur can realize that as long as officials exercise such concern for students entrusted to their care, the college is built upon solid foundations. No other mind can support a long and continuous path."

The Mount Olive Tribune printed the following on the editorial page under the caption, "Our College Is Here to Stay":

If there has been any question in the mind of folks in this area about the eventual success of Mount Olive Junior College, a recent report released by Business Manager L. Johnson recently should fully answer it. Mr. Johnson revealed that Free Will Baptists and friends of the college have contributed more than $300,000 to the institution since it was chartered in September of 1951. The balance of its $100,000 income has been derived from tuition fees and other sources.

More important than the amount of money involved is the spirit behind the gifts, and the needs met in the lives of these students who came here seeking an education. They point up both the support which the college has had from its denomination and friends, and the services it is performing.

These things guarantee its success more fully than does the dedication of its faculty or the plans of its future. Faculties may change and plans may be altered; but, as long as support and services characterize the relations between the college and the community, we need not fear for the college's future.

To those so closely connected with the college that they cannot see the forest for the trees, we'd like to offer a word of encouragement by pointing out one or two things evident to others:

"First, all growth, to be sound and strong, must come against opposing forces. Many times, no doubt, college officials have wondered whether the school could operate another year, and became the stronger for it.

"Second, most growth designed to endure and support heavy loads is slow. It is so in nature, in human beings, in business and in institutions of learning. By slow process, the growth has time to benefit from experience, to assimilate new ideas and methods into its own operation.

"Third, slow growth allows time for changes necessary to adapt successfully to environment, without upheavels which frequently accompany violent or hasty alterations.

"And on we could go. It is sufficient to point out that we believe in the college; so does the faculty; and so does its denomination and its student body—at least $680,000 worth."

THANKS TO EDITOR

The writer of "Notes and Quotes," an old-timer, has fought for the righteousness of the Lord Jesus for a half century, and along with the fight has stood for Christian education and advocated it even years ago when it was not popular among Free Will Baptists. I want to thank the editor of the Mount Olive Tribune for his timely and encouraging editorial.

A WORD OF HISTORY

After I quit playing Jonah and yielded my life to the Lord Jesus as a witness for Him to carry the message of salvation to as many as I could reach, I saw the need of more education. I had not accumulated but very little of this world's goods. Having a wife and one child and a little humble place that we called home, my dear companion and I agreed to sell that home and move to Ayden, North Carolina, where I could attend the Ayden Seminary. I was called a fool for such procedure. One of the leading ministers in the conference where I was a member said, "I'm through with you." This was said in opposition to an educated ministry. But thank God there were some of the ministers who said, "Go on." This I did with faith in the Lord Jesus.

God blessed as I learned more about the Lord Jesus and His sufferings for lost humanity, and the more zealous I became toward the calling. God arranged for me to have four quarter-time churches, which with the price of my home on the altar made it possible for me to study at the seminary. The gray matter was not so alert to grasp such learning at my age, but somehow we were blessed to stay through and leave with all bills paid.

Those of us who wanted and praised the work of the Ayden Seminary were criticized for our religious fervor. I am still thankful for that old seminary. I loved the faculty; I loved the students; and when some fellow, for the lack of vision, criticized the school, resentment would rise in my heart against the unethical destructive criticism. A good Christian lady, none other than Sister Alice Lupton, told me one time that it was righteous indignation. Well, I will not argue that, but it was something that I did not appreciate.

EUREKA COLLEGE

The old seminary grew into Eureka College, which was opposed by many of the people of that day. Yes, it had its opposition; and its opposition was, in many instances, by those who were religious. These are facts that I know to be true. So eventually it failed, and perhaps some people were glad while others wept. Then for years we were like sheep going astray; we had no institution of learning, but I still believed in it.

MOUNT OLIVE JUNIOR COLLEGE

Mount Olive Junior College was chartered in the year of 1951, and has grown in a wonderful way; however, it has had its enemies from the very first. There were some who thought we did not need it; there were others who refused to support it on various grounds. However, in spite of its opposition, God has blessed the efforts of the consecrated faculty members from year to year. I have visited the institution on several occasions and found a spirit of devotion that could hardly be surpassed by any institution of its kind anywhere. I am back of it with my prayers, and what little I can help otherwise.

CONCLUSION

How long will it be before Free Will Baptists will be united in all-around Christian education for our youth? We should have not only Bible schools, exclusively, but we should have Christian liberal arts schools where young men and women may be trained in business and taught the sciences—the right to know between right and wrong and be prepared to take their places in the religious, social, political, domestic and educational life of mankind in the world about us. I long to see the day when there will be at least one college in every state of the union that has as many as ten thousand Free Will Baptists. We can do it if we will pull together and see the need for Christian education. May God bless our colleges.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

A GOOD WAY

by Elva M. Johnson

MARY and Mike had been saved in vacation Bible school, and they wanted to do something for the Lord. "But I don't see how we can do anything. We can't preach, and we sure can't sing," Mike said.

"It seems to me that about all we can do is try to tell somebody else about Jesus," Gary put in.

"Aw, who'd listen to us?"

"Wait a minute!" Gary interrupted. "I've got an idea. Let's ask Mr. Erickson if he can give us some suggestions. He usually comes up with a good answer."

They found the teacher and told him what they wanted to do. Mr. Erickson scratched his head and looked at them for a minute without answering. Then he said, "Well, fellows, I think you have a wonderful idea. Real Christians ought to want to work for Jesus. And He has something for every one of us to do. I think I know a good job for you."

He picked up a big brown envelope and opened it. He pulled out a lot of brightly colored papers.

"I just got these tracts this week and stamped them with the name and address of our church. You can help me get them out to some unsaved people."

"But what are tracts?" Mike asked.

"They are little gospel messages written up in easy-to-read form," replied Mr. Erickson. "I like to give them to people I meet on the street, in the stores, and anywhere I happen to be. I always pray, too, that they will be read and that those who read them will be saved."

"Who would we give them to?" Gary asked.

"Well, I suggest that if you really want to work for the Lord, you take about a dozen apiece and give one to each person you meet on your way home from vacation Bible school today."

Mike looked skeptical. "I wonder if anyone would take them and read them," he said.

"Sure they will," Mr. Erickson answered. "You'd be surprised at the number of people who will even thank you for them. Of course, they won't all be read, but God knows how to make a tract effective in unusual ways. And if only one person out of the twenty-four who will receive your tracts reads his and is saved, it will be worth the effort.

"One time a tract was thrown into the ocean and forgotten about by the person who first received it. But God guided it to an oyster shell which clamped down on it. It was found by an unsaved man who was hunting oysters. He gave it a very careful reading and was saved as a result.

"And I remember reading that a man who didn't even believe in God was saved through a torn-up tract. He picked up the pieces as he was out walking one day, and put them together out of curiosity. When he read the message, God spoke to his heart and he began to pray and was saved.

"What are we waiting for?" demanded Mike. "If they're all that powerful, let's get going. I'd like to give out a lot of them."

Mr. Erickson handed each of the boys a supply of the tracts. "Now let's pray that God will use these tracts for His glory," he said.

When they had prayed together, they started out. They walked the first two blocks together and between them gave out about half of their tracts.

"See you tomorrow," Mike said as they separated to go to their own homes. "I'm going to do my best to give out these tracts today. But do you really think somebody might get saved through reading them?"

"I sure don't know," Gary answered, "but it's worth a try. And remember, we did pray about it."

Mike had walked only half a block when he overtook a lady carrying two bags of groceries. He offered her a tract and she just glared at him. Suddenly he had an idea.

"That's a pretty big load," he said. "Could I carry one of the bags for you?"

The woman looked surprised, but she handed him one of the bags. He carried it to her house, which was about a block further. And as they walked up the steps together the lady took the bag and said, "Now what was it you were trying to give me?"

"Just this tract," Mike answered. The woman reached for it and smiled. "Thanks a lot for helping with the groceries," she said.

Before he got home, Mike had given away all his tracts. He called Gary a lunch. "I gave out all my tracts. Did you like them?" he asked.

"Sure did," Gary replied. "I had one and didn't see anyone to give it to, but as I got almost home I saw a man painting a fence. He was really busy, but I offered him the tract anyway. He grumbled something about kids. But he took the tract and stuffed it into his pocket. Then he turned around to get something and dropped his paint brush—in my hair! It would have fallen on the ground but I caught it and got more paint on my hair. I was a mess. But you know, Mike, it was funny, but I didn't get mad like I usually do. I think the Lord helped me. I wonder if he'll read that tract."

The next day Mr. Erickson asked the boys about the tracts and they told him what had happened.

"I'm proud of you boys," he said. "I know, it's not enough just to give out tracts. You have to be tracts too—showing the Lord to the people by the way you live. Now let's keep on praying that the tracts you gave out will be read and that the people will be saved."

It was several weeks later in Sunday school that Gary and Mike suddenly nudged each other. "See that man?" Gary whispered excitedly.

"Yeah, and see that woman?" Mike replied.

"That's the one—" they both said once.

"You don't mean—" Mike looked at Gary.

"Yes, that's the man that dropped his paint brush in my hair," Gary replied. "He must have read the tract and found our church address."

"And that's the woman that I helped with the groceries," Gary said. "At least one of them read the tract."

Just then they saw Mr. Erickson, who was ushering, shake hands with the couple and seat them. Before he left them, the man took a piece of paper from his pocket and showed it to Mr. Erickson.

"That's a tract," Gary said.

"Now let's pray that they will get saved," Mike replied. "And let's ask Mr. Erickson for more tracts. It looks like a good way to work for the Lord."—The Pentecost Evangel.

Women Sponsor Erection Of Building

Last year the Woman's Auxiliary of the township Free Will Baptist Church in Ham, North Carolina, voted to sponsor the erection of a Fellowship House at the church as their special project for the four nice metal tables. An electric stove was donated by one of the members. This was a large project for these ladies and was greatly needed by the church. God has richly blessed and the members thank Him

r. We thank God for having completed the project.

The building is 20 by 40 feet, and has a large open fireplace. The men of the church finished the labor, and the ladies raised the funds for the material.

Already the building has proved to be a blessing to the church. The young people have their meetings, parties and banquets in the building and the women use it for their monthly meetings. It is also used for Sunday school classroom and for any social activities of different groups in the church. On a visitation night at the church, supper was served to those going on visitation in the Fellowship House, which has proved to be a great convenience for many.

The ladies have also furnished the building with draperies for the windows and for His blessings and pray that He will continue to bless the auxiliary.

Above is a picture of the auxiliary members in front of the Fellowship House.

Those taking part in the program were Mrs. Sawyer, Mrs. Etta Harrell, Mrs. Margie Pittman and Mrs. Rena Wood. The group was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Rose. There were 17 members present and two visitors. During the social hour, the hostess served cherry pie with ice cream, potato chips and coffee.

Northport, Ala.—On Thursday night, February 18, a covered dish supper was enjoyed in connection with a study course workshop held in the new educational building of the First Free Will Baptist Church. This workshop was sponsored by the Sarah Crawford Auxiliary of the church.

Mrs. James Davis, local study course chairman, planned the program with Mrs. Sebron Kuykendal, state study course chairman, as principal speaker. Mrs. Kuykendal gave a very good talk on the duties of the local study course chairman and showed slides depicting these duties. A general discussion period followed her talk. Everyone

What Constitutes A Missionary Call?

by Laura B. Barnard

(Senior Free Will Baptist Missionary)

The Great Commission is the call to the church. No individual Christian can escape the responsibility which it imposes. It includes every believer, and is the call to witness, and to make that witness felt to the ends of the earth.

The business of the church in every age is world-wide missions. Missions is not one of the many departments of the church. Missions is the church about its one business. "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me," is not that special word to those separated for a special ministry, but it is the general call that comes by reason of being baptized by one Spirit into one body.

If the business of the church is missions, it follows that the business of each Christian is missions. The individual member of the church must go a step beyond the general call, and ascertain the will of God for His own particular place within the body.

As a member of the body, his lifework must make a definite and specific contribution to the objective of the corporate group. Basis to the understanding of the missionary call is the recognition that God has a definite plan for every life, and that every Christian must seek to know that plan for his own life.

There are those who feel that, in view of the Great Commission, every Christian should aim to go as a separated missionary unless the Lord gives special instructions to remain at home. Even if this be held in question, it must at least be acknowledged that every Christian must face the possibility of receiving a special call to go. "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" in the matter of the Great Commission, is the only attitude that can satisfy God's heart. He obligates Himself to reveal His will and plan for the life of one who comes in this spirit of submission.

The few thousand called-out missionaries on mission fields today are not nearly enough for the task, and it is unreasonable to charge God with failure to have called sufficient laborers to do the work He commanded to be done.

However, there is a failure somewhere, for the situation is inconsistent. It must be that many whom God would call out are not attentive to His voice. In view of this, it almost seems safer to agree with those who say that every Christian should aim to go unless shown definitely that he should remain at home.

The call to be a missionary, like the call to any lifework, must be preceded by the yielding of the life to God. ". . . present your bodies (Weymouth: all your faculties) a living sacrifice . . . unto God, . . . that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:1, 2).

An unsundered life is not in position to find out God's will. But no Christian should be lacking in this surrender, for all of God's instructions and provisions are for yielded instruments. He makes no allowance for the incongruity of an unsundered life. When an individual lays the life upon the altar and seeks to know God's will, He obligates Himself to give light and guidance. "If any man will do his will, he shall know . . ." (John 7:17).

Then there will come that mystic call which defies all definition, a divine communication from God's heart to the believer's heart. It will not require circumstances to interpret it, and yet God will usually give confirmation and illumination through circumstances. He will often give a clear word of Scripture which the Spirit will etch into the heart of the enquirer.

Thus, with the voice within (the Holy Spirit witnessing with the believer's spirit), the outward circumstances focusing upon the same leading, and the word of Scripture giving verbal expression to the guidance, one may safely say he has received a specific call.

Getting mad will never get you anything else.

Faith is not believing that God can; it is believing that He will.

Through Storm and Shipwreck

(Lesson for March 20)

Text: Acts 27:1—28:15.

Lesson Text: Philippians 4:13.

INTRODUCTION

In spite of Paul's proof of his innocence on every occasion when he was called upon to defend himself, he was still kept in prison. The Roman rulers had done this because they were afraid of an insurrection among the Jews over whom they ruled. They knew that these Jews were so determined to destroy Paul that they would not permit him to live if he were freed; they knew also that the Jews would despise a ruler who should turn Paul loose. When Festus had suggested to Paul that he return to Jerusalem to be tried by the Jews, thinking that this would be one way to rid him of the pestering problem, Paul had decided to let those who were so determined to kill him that they would not listen to them try him and condemn him to death; instead, he had made an appeal to be tried in Rome in the supreme court of Caesar. At length, Festus agreed to send him to Rome, seeing this as the best way to get the problem off his hands.—The Advanced Learner (F. W. B.).

I. HINTS THAT HELP

1. When God wants to move His children, He always has means and methods at hand to accomplish His purpose (Acts 27:1).

2. If unbelievers fail to heed the warning of God's servant they must suffer the consequences (Vs. 21).

3. The real hero is the man who can trust God even when there seems to be no hope (Vv. 22, 23).

4. It is one thing to know the promise of God, it is quite another thing to believe it (Vv. 24, 25).

5. There is an isle of safety even in the roughest storm for the man who takes God at His Word (Vs. 26).

6. The moment a man who was lost is found he will know where he is (28:1).

7. The Lord is able and willing to raise up a friendly people for us after we have weathered the severest storms (Vs. 2).

8. The stops as well as the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord (Vv. 11, 12; Psalm 37:23).

9. The south wind which had once been so deceptive now brought the ship to its desired haven (Vs. 13).

10. It is always encouraging to a Christian to find brethren, even in unexpected places (Vs. 14).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

Paul was a source of comfort to the two hundred and seventy-six men on that storm-tossed ship. His faith in God was his source of confidence, and the peace of mind which he exhibited kept the ship's crew from total despair. Altogether, they were driven by the storm a total of fourteen days and nights and toward the end of this period, the Lord appeared to him in the form of an angelic messenger. Doubtless, he expected this message from the Lord as a child expects a Christmas visit from Santa Claus, and he was not surprised when it came. He knew that the Lord willed for him to stand before Caesar, but what he did not know was that the ship was being driven all the time in the general direction of Italy.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

2. Paul's service to the natives brought kindness to the people from the ship. The natives were made to stand in awe of Paul because, as he was gathering sticks to make a fire, a poisonous serpent bit him on the hand and clung there. The natives, who knew that the bite of this serpent would bring sudden death ordinarily, were amazed when he shook the serpent off into the fire with no harm to himself. During three months while the shipwrecked people remained on the island of Melita, today known as Malta, Paul healed all the sick who were brought to him, including the father of the governor of the island. The natives, in turn, supplied the needs of the shipwrecked party throughout their stay.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

Caring for nearly three hundred persons for three months entailed considerable expense, but they evidently felt that Paul's ministry of preaching and healing amply repaid all this for they were generous in their farewell gifts also.

3. One might have expected that, after the divine promise to Paul, the apostle would have sat back to watch God keep

His word. Instead, Paul's hands were among the busiest of the many through which God worked. He labored on shipboard alongside the others; he warned of the sailors' plot to escape; he brought wood for the seaside fire; and he ministered to the sick in the island. Like Paul, we may confidently expect God to keep His promises, but we must not expect Him to work without tools; and people are the most important tools He has.—Standard Commentary.

4. Years ago a fishing fleet went out from a small harbor on the east coast of Newfoundland. In the afternoon there came a great storm. When night settled, not a single vessel of all the fleet had made its way into port. All night long the wives, mothers, children and sweethearts paced up and down the beach, wringing their hands and calling on God to save their loved ones. To add to the horror of the situation, one of the cottages was found aflame! Since the men were away, it was impossible to save the house. When the morning broke, to the joy of all, the entire fleet was seen safely anchored in the bay! There was one face which was a picture of despair—that of the wife whose home had been destroyed. Meeting her husband as he landed, she said, "Oh, husband, we are ruined! Our home and all its contents were destroyed by the fire!" Joyously exclaimed the husband: "Thank God for the fire! It was the light of our burning cottage that guided the whole fleet into port!"—Selected.

Meditation Verse

"It seemed good to me . . . to write unto thee . . . that thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed" (Luke 1:3, 4).

"Have not I written to thee excellent things in counsels and knowledge, that I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth" (Proverbs 22:20).

A colporteur in Java sold a Gospel of St. Luke to a Javanese who was later brought before the authorities, and the following dialogue ensued: "You have been taught the Christian gospel?" "Yes, sir." "Who taught you?" "Nobody." "How is that? I suppose you had a Javanese teacher?" "No, sir, my only teacher was Luke." "Who is Luke?" "The writer of a Gospel I bought some years ago."—Choice Gleanings.

resulted in criticism. We appreciate those Christian friends, however, who have helped us with constructive criticism and who have borne our burdens with us.

Experience has also taught us the meaning of Jesus' words, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake" (Matthew 5:11). In His infinite wisdom, God has used each hindrance to strengthen Mount Olive College spiritually and educationally. Our college today is better and stronger because of the obstacles it has overcome. Our unparalleled progress would have been impossible without sacrificial leadership sustained by the confidence and generosity of our people. But, above all, we give thanks to our heavenly Father and join the psalmist in saying, "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad" (Psalm 126:3).

INTO THE FUTURE

Our sons and daughters are going to college in ever-increasing numbers, and we want them to know that their church believes in them and desires to help them prepare to do the work to which God has called them. Today our youth need us, but tomorrow we shall need them.

The only way we can save our faith is to teach it, and it was for this purpose that Mount Olive College was called into being. The founding fathers chartered the college upon three fundamental principles:

1. The college should be Christian in its philosophy, personnel and program;
2. The college should be loyal to the faith and heritage of Free Will Baptists; and
3. The college should be academically sound.

It was upon these principles that Mount Olive College was established; and by them it is still guided; and in fidelity to them it faces the future unafraid.

RECOMMENDATION

"The Rev. Chadwick B. Russ was ordained to the gospel ministry on March 3. He was born in Bladen County and resided there until about five years ago. He is now making his home in Guyman, Oklahoma. Mr. Russ is the son of the Rev.

Evander H. Russ of Bladenboro, North Carolina, who is now deceased. His father held many successful pastorates in the Piedmont Association of North Carolina.

"We recommend the Rev. Chadwick B. Russ to any church desiring a pastor."—Rev. Carey Cheshire, Guyman, Oklahoma.

SERIOUS EXCEPTION

"I have just read your editorial and would I like to take serious exception to your second point which deals with the evangelistic pastor. . . .

"Personally, I would take not a church that placed a limit on the number of revivals which I could conduct. If the church could trust me in the matter of being led by the Holy Spirit in what to preach, programs to recommend and to have general oversight of the church and could trust me to be led by the Holy Spirit in the number of revivals to conduct, I would not want their church. A good pastor, led by the Holy Spirit, would know how many to conduct. Some men can conduct a dozen a year and still push a stronger local program than others who conduct no revivals at all. Some pastors begin working at 5:30 or 6:00 in the morning and work until 11:00 at night, or past, at the job of building a strong local church. Other who may conduct no revivals at all, may sleep until 8:00 or 9:00 in the morning. So, it seems to me the only sensible approach to this problem is to let the Holy Spirit of God lead the pastor in how much to be away. If a church wants to make this stipulation, they should certainly notify the prospective pastor with whom they confer. I would not accept such a church personally. . . ."—Rev. Ronald Creed, Durham, North Carolina.

USED CHURCH PEWS WANTED

"Calvary Free Will Baptist Church, Wilson, North Carolina, is in need of eighteen or twenty good used church pews. Any church replacing their old pews with new ones, or anyone who can supply helpful information, please call Wilson 72916 or write to the following address."—Rev. Cecil E. Rose, Box 48, Wilson, North Carolina.

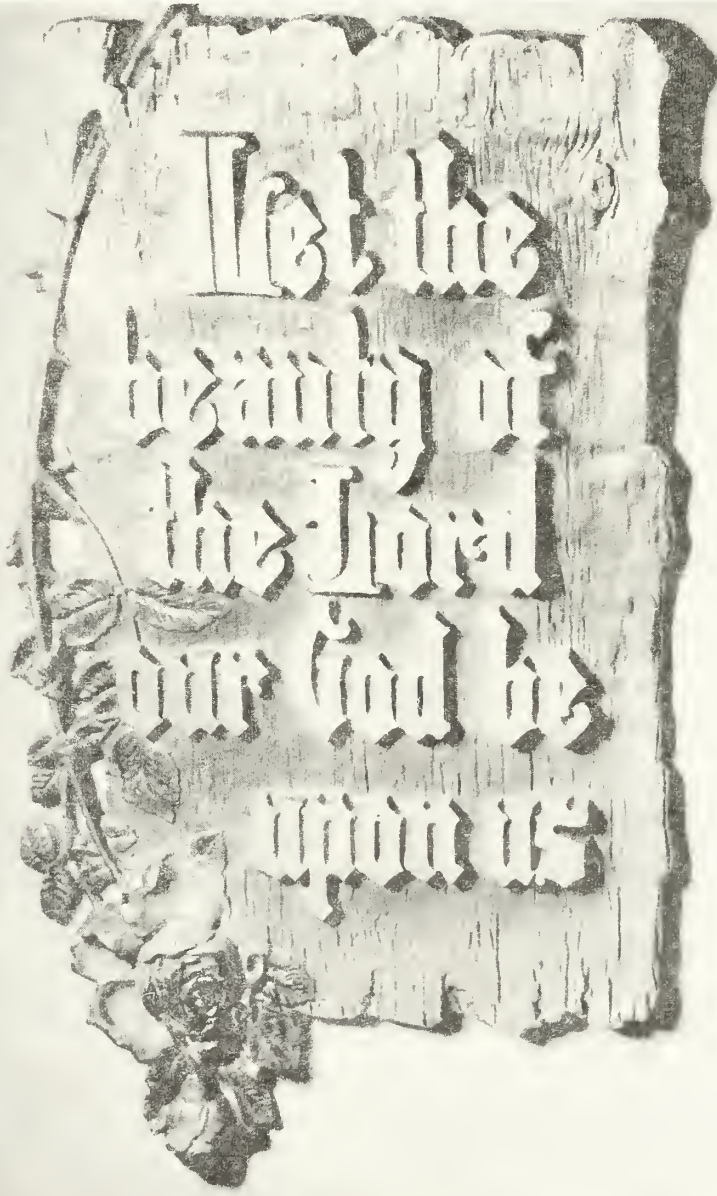

CHILDREN'S HOME NEEDS HOUSE MOTHER

"We are in bad need of a good house mother or cook and thought perhaps you might run a small ad in the paper for me this week, with the hope that some good woman would be interested in coming to the Free Will Baptist Home for Children at Greeneville, Tennessee, as a cook. The only requirement is that she be a Christian woman with a health card or be able to obtain one, a good cook, and willing to work."—H. C. Burgess, Superintendent, Free Will Baptist Home for Children, Route 9, Greeneville, Tennessee.

HOW MANY COMMUNISTS?

C. H. Overman

Those who seem to be in a position to know something about the situation are not hesitant to inform the people of America that Communists are infiltrating many branches of our government, as well as civic and religious organizations. We can rest assured that they are doing all they can to overrun our country; therefore, we would be safe to assume that they would seek to do so in those areas which the American people would least expect.

A few weeks ago quite a stir came about when an Air Force manual was released which charged that Communism had infiltrated churches in the United States. Editorial Research Associates of Stony Brook, New York, on February 14, gave the following information relative to the matter from which we quote in part:

"Charges and countercharges are being aired in the controversy provoked by the recent apology to the National Council of Churches by the United States Secretary of Defense for the Air Force publication of charges that council members had been infiltrated by Communism. Dr. Carl McIntire, president of the International Council of Christian Churches branded the charges as true, while the National Council of Churches declared that their publication was 'irresponsibility at its worst.' The Air Force Secretary issued a statement 'categorically repudiating' the original accusations and announcing the withdrawal of the offending manual. Where all these conflicting views will lead remains a matter of speculation."

Additional developments in the controversy were listed by E. R. A. as follows:

"1. Edgar C. Bundy, general chairman of the Church League of America, said he would testify under oath that 'the National Council of Churches is one of the greatest enemies in regard to national security.' He said his organization would offer documentary evidence to support some of the manual's statements. Mr. Bundy and his organization fights Communist infiltration of Protestant churches.

"2. Dr. Carl McIntire, president of the International Council of Christian Churches, said the statements in the manual 'are true.' He said that a full-scale investigation of Communist infiltration of American churches was long overdue. He protested any reprisal against those preparing the publication.

"3. The American Council of Christian Churches released a statement which said the Council was shocked by the Pentagon's repudiation of the manual 'merely to satisfy and shield the National Council of Churches. . . .'

"4. The General Council executive committee of the Evangelical and Reformed Church protested the Air Force manual. It asked for a Congressional investigation into its authorship. . . ."

Editorial Research Associates states that the controversy was provoked when an alert layman, an Army Reserve soldier in Trenton, New Jersey, complained to his pastor that the Air Corps had issued a training manual which charged that Communism had infiltrated churches in the United States. In turn, the New Jersey pastor informed the general secretary of the National Council of Churches, James W. Wine, that the official manual accused pastors of certain churches affiliated with the National Council of Churches of being card-carrying Communists and that thirty of the ninety-five revisers of the Revised Standard Version of the Bible sponsored by the National Council of Churches had been affiliated with known subversive organizations.

There are at least two sources claimed to have originated the basic facts upon which the controversy revolved. We again quote in part:

"1. The executive secretary of Circuit Riders, Inc., an organization within the Methodist Church, declared that much of the material in the Air Force manual . . . was taken from his organization's literature.

"2. A Tulsa evangelist, Billy James Hargis, declared that he was the author of much of the controversial material used in the Air Force training manual. He said that the Air Force used his tracts written by him as authority for its statements. He also challenged the president of National Council of Churches, the Rev. Edwin T. Dahlberg of St. Louis, to a debate on the subject. . . ."

"The manual said that the House Committee on Un-American Activities listed the names of two Communist ministers. And it quoted former President Herbert Hoover as saying, 'I confess to a real apprehension, so long as Communists are able to secure ministers of the gospel to promote their evil work and espouse a cause that is alien to the religion of Christ and Judaism.'"

It would be well for the Christian citizen to remember the following when confronted with such a controversy as this: (1) There are always alarmists present who find great satisfaction in scaring people. There will be some who will get their two-cent worth in on this controversy. (2) Have faith in our government until definite proof comes to doubt it. (3) There are liberal modernistic bodies (the N. C. C. is one) which will be open to Communistic infiltration more readily than others. (4) Communists know they can better promote Communism when the church is weakened and finally destroyed. (5) Pray that something can be done to combat this evil in America.

Temptation

by Colonel Pendleton
Nashville, Tennessee

IN James 1:2, 3 we read: "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." (Let us notice that James was a servant of God of the Lord Jesus Christ, and he was giving the above greetings to the twelve apostles that were scattered abroad.)

Concerning the word, divers, Webster says, "Divers means various, many, several." It is used only with plurals. We might ask, "What are temptations?" Someone has said, "Temptation is the state, quality, or condition of being enticed to evil; the drawing toward the presence of allurements that are pleasant to the senses, but fatal to our salvation." Also someone has said, "It is not sin to be tempted; but it is sin to yield." That is very true, for we read, "For ye have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted, like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore boldly go unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help us in every time of need" (Hebrews 4:15, 16).

We are tempted through our senses, and the lusts of the flesh. If put into practice, they will bring forth sin, and sin will bring forth death. However, there are many blessings received through our many temptations. Let us read the words of admonition in James 1:12, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive a crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." To love God is to keep His commandments (1 John 5:3), but we are tempted from where temptation comes. Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man: for every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:13-15). Again a loving admonition: "Do not err, my beloved brethren" (James 1:16).

Again we read: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world" (1 John 2:15, 16). Here we have three things which cause practically all the temptations common to man. They are the lust of the flesh, lust of the eyes, and the pride of life.

As a true example of this, we will go to the very origin and beginning of sin which was brought about by temptation in the Garden of Eden. Here we see allurements that were pleasant to the senses, but fatal to the salvation of our foreparents. Please notice, this temptation was presented to the woman (Eve) by the serpent (devil) through the three ways mentioned in 1 John 2:15. Genesis 3:6 reads, "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat." Here we have the lust of the flesh (good for food); the lust of the eyes (pleasant to the eyes); and a tree to be desired to make one wise (the pride of life).

We see that lust conceived and brought forth sin and death. However, God has set the bounds and the limitations of man, for He remembereth our frame that we are dust. "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer (permit) you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way of escape; that ye may be able to bear it. Wherefore, . . . flee idolatry" (lust of the flesh) (1 Corinthians 10:13, 14).

"If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another" (Galatians 5:25, 26).

Another great temptation of the Christian is for young Christians to build their lives upon the false notion that they are a little more important than the average (big 1, little you). They are thus destined to make shipwreck, for such a prop has to go if they are to ever become useful servants of Christ. Another great temptation is ". . . lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God" (2 Timothy 3:4).

We can never find true satisfaction if we are interested only in retaining our own salvation. We must bear fruit or else we will die spiritually. In fact, we can help retain our experience of salvation if we are interested in helping win others to Christ.

The parable of the Lost Sheep reminds us of this important fact. "How think ye if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray? And if so be that he findeth it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more over that sheep, than over the ninety and nine which went not astray. Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish" (Matthew 18:12-14).

As I see it, the first significant fact which this parable points out is this: each sheep is equal to the other. Jesus did not say that one of the more valuable sheep became lost. He simply said that a sheep was lost. It could have been a very young or a very old sheep. It may have been a sickly or healthy sheep. Perhaps it was an unruly sheep. The shepherd was not concerned about which sheep was lost; he became alarmed because one of his sheep had become lost.

That is the way God looks at us, ". . . man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart" (1 Samuel 16:7). In the sight of our heavenly Father, all of us are equal. Race, age, class, and education do not influence God.

Someone has said, "Walter Damrosch once stopped his orchestra when everything was going along smoothly and asked, 'Where is the seventh flute?' " He didn't ask for the first or second flute, but for the seventh. You, dear reader, may feel inferior, untalented, unlearned, poor, ugly, but you have a part to play and you should play it well. A preacher once told me, "You can win people to God that I cannot." Yes, it is our duty, yea, privilege, to win the lost.

I am reminded here of an article I once read. I pass it on hoping it will express my thoughts better than I can.

The Lady Who Got Snubbed: Recently

in a Chicago newspaper there was the story of a mother of three children who was being snubbed by her neighbors because she offered to give away her unborn child. She said, "One or two neighbors have turned their backs and given black looks. My husband says that colleagues at work are a bit hostile, but it is only to be expected; one of them has eight children." The writer then says, "When I read this article, my mind jumped back to a passage of Scripture which I had read a long time ago. . . . for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children" (Isaiah 66:8).

I could not help wondering if some churches might not be snubbed because they have offered to give away their unborn children of God. I could not help wondering if there isn't a little justice in this, just as there is justice in the situation where a mother reaps the reward of her lack of love for her unborn child. There is the church which is more interested in building a beautiful building for her own enjoyment than in caring for the unborn children (spiritual) of China, Japan, Africa, or even at home. There is the church which is more interested in having comfortable pews for itself with her unborn children right in her own neighborhood.

There might be a sermon there for some preacher to preach, a sermon about the children who have been ignored, the children who constantly upset the comfortable life of a church fellowship, the children who are unloved, unwanted, a nuisance, and added responsibility to an already overloaded budget.

Now I, Colonel Pendleton, after reading this am led to say that I cannot help wondering if our blessed Lord Jesus Christ Himself does not occasionally snub the church that is not interested in anyone but herself. Do the people of God care enough for the sinners to weep for them?

Let us not allow the devil to tempt us to be idle. A tree is known by its fruit, likewise a person is known by his good or bad deeds, manner of life and conversation. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them" (Matthew 7:20). Envy, strife, and backbitings are evil fruits of a corrupt tree (person). "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Matthew 7:19). These things speak for themselves. "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace" (Romans 8: 5, 6).

Now, do not let the devil tempt you to

Subscription Plans

Subscription plans to The Free Will Baptist are as follows:

1. The Every Family Plan: Under this arrangement the local church votes to place The Free Will Baptist in each home in its membership. The church clerk sends us the names and correct mailing addresses of the families in the church. Upon receipt of the list of names and addresses, we send The Free Will Baptist to these people and bill the church quarterly for the entire subscription price for the quarter less 10 per cent. If any families in the church are already subscribers, we subtract the amount of their credit from the quarterly bill. Names can be added to or subtracted from the church list at any time, upon notification from the church clerk.

2. The Church Group Plan: This arrangement is designed for organizations in churches which do not adopt the Every Family Plan. If any church group such as a Sunday school class, the woman's auxiliary, a league or other group wishes to solicit subscriptions for us, we ask that they send us five subscriptions in the first lot, deducting ten per cent from their total subscription price ($2 per year), keep the ten per cent for their treasury and send us the remainder of their collection together with the names and correct mailing addresses of the subscriptions solicited. For instance: if a church group solicits five subscriptions to The Free Will Baptist in its first lot, its total collection for these subscriptions will be $10. The group keeps $1 for its treasury and sends us $9, together with the names and addresses of the people to whom The Free Will Baptist is to be sent for one year. The plan starts anew at the beginning of each fiscal year, July 1, and no credits given in any one year may be carried over and credited on the new year.

3. Individual Solicitations: In any church which is not following Plan 1 or 2, we offer an individual an avenue of outstanding service to the Lord. Any individual who will believe some people are too mean and lowly to be saved. There is no person so ruined that he is undeserving of giving a chance to be saved. God sees a spark of goodness in the lowest of the lowly. God will guide us in the work of restoring that which was lost and in giving life to what was spiritually dead.

Remember that God is not willing that any should perish but wants all to come to repentance. God is searching for you if you are not living for Him. You can be restored to the fold if you are willing to surrender to Him.

solicit five one-year subscriptions to The Free Will Baptist and send us the subscription collection ($2 per year per subscriber), we shall place his name on our honor roll of solicitors to appear monthly in The Free Will Baptist. When we have solicited 10 one-year subscriptions any fiscal year, we shall allocate a bonus subscription to his credit; he may use the bonus to renew his own subscription one year or he may send us the name and mailing address of some other person whom we will send The Free Will Baptist for one year without charge.

Any church group or individual interested in soliciting subscriptions under Plan 1 or Plan 2 should contact us and let us send receipt books and subscription blanks for their convenience in administering the service.

Star Returns

by Louis H. Moulton

by Edna James Kayser

NAN SLAMMED the receiver back on the telephone. She felt panic sweep over her.

The dam had broken! The bridge was gone. The flood waters were rising higher the minutes—making islands all over the river bottoms. Where was Joan? Not at the neighbor's—nor at home.

Nan unclenched her fingers and went to the window. It was still raining.

Nan had been talking to her husband on the telephone. He told her about the edge and of Joan who left the neighbor's the time ago on her riding pony. She left before the storm began and should have been here by now. Joan was their 14-year-old daughter—with the laughing heart and the free way. With her curls pinned back and her face against the wind, she rode through the valley the summer time long. She loved excitement and adventure. She was a level-headed, quick-thinking girl.

But now this was in the springtime break-up of ice and snow. Today, on Saturday, Joan had left on her horse, Star, for a ride through the pines and to the home of Judy, her high school friend.

Star was a beautiful horse—the pet of the family. They had raised her from a colt. She followed them about in the pastures. In the early mornings of spring she would come up to the fence, when Joan would come out calling, "Star—come Star." Then Joan would stroke her silky sides.

But what of Nan—Joan's mother? There was a quiet peace coming over her face. She dropped to her knees. She was talking with God. With all of her heart she was calling Him, "O Father, do help us! Please . . . if Joan is still alive—take—take special care of her. You have never failed us. Nan is Yours too. She has always loved You. Remember how she gave her precious life to You, how she went to the altar that night . . . her eager face . . . and . . ." There was a semblance of a sob in Nan's voice. "Lord, You know she gave her life to You for the mission field, for China." Nan was so still now before God. "Father, just talking with You quiets me. It always does."

A deep sigh and then just the pounding of the rain on the roof.

But what of Joan who gaily left the house at dawn? Where was she now?

She had left Judy's house for one more run in the woods before going back home. The trees had shielded her from the quick down-pour—that came upon her in the woods. Now heading back, she made it over the bridge and was on the road home. Suddenly, she saw little seven-year-old Tommie Custers, whose home was around the bend of the road. He was on one of the islands made by the flood. At times he was stepping in the water and then pulling back again. In places the water was deep. He was rubbing his eyes and crying along the water's edge. Quickly, Joan headed Star to the spot.

Tommie's curls were damp and his face was flushed. Lifting him to the saddle, Joan was turning back. At times the water was swift. They were nearing the other side, when suddenly there was a swirling of water coming at them—charged with great chunks of ice.

"Oh," the words were wrenched from her lips, "the ice jam—the dam has broken." Fear was upon Joan's face.

Tommie, in sudden panic, was screaming and struggling to get away from the groaning ice.

The waters were widening as the ice came thundering in. Block upon block of it was piling up under the impact of the waters and then rumbling back into the icy flow. Jagged edges were grating past. A swirling mass hit Star and Joan and Tommie were in the river of ice.

Tense sweet words were coming from Joan's blue lips, "O Father—Father, help me . . . Jesus, Mother said You always would."

Then a great cake of ice was going over Joan. Tommie was not to be seen.

With head up again and tense, chattering lips, Joan was crying, "O, Father, You did tell me. I will call Star."

The horse was swimming away from them and was nearing the bank.

With faith in her heart and only that—Joan's voice was loud and clear, "O, Star—Star, come back!"

The horse heard. Star turned back. She was swimming desperately toward Joan. Little Tommie was clutching to a piece of ice. Joan grabbed him and by the mercy and help of God he was on the horse's back. He was sobbing aloud.

"Hold tight, Tommie," Joan cried.

Joan only had time to grab the horse's tail as it swam away from a fresh gush of ice and muddy water.

Star pulled them safely to the bank.

Joan climbed to the saddle and rode swiftly away with Tommie clinging to her. Star carried them through the valley.

Nan heard the sound of hoof beats on the ground. Rushing to the door, she looked in wonder as Joan and Tommie came to meet her.

"O, Mother, God heard me. He told me to call Star and she came back through the icy waters. Just like she always did in the pasture. I rescued Tommie from an island made by the flood. The ice jam broke and hit us. O Mother!"

Nan led her shivering daughter and Tommie into the warm, bright living room. She whispered softly to God, "Thank You, dear Lord. You never fail."—Gospel Herald.

Yielded—Willing

The greatest force God has set loose on earth today is the power of prayer. No special schooling is required to learn the technique of this power, only yielded hearts, willing to be burdened that they might invoke it.

Do you find yourself pressed in on all sides with no time to be alone with the Lord?

Take an hour anyway and see how He can multiply the minutes needed for other duties.

Many things we may regret in our lives, but never shall we regret the hours spent in prayer. They are vital to our growth in Christ; and without them we cannot hope to serve God aright, no matter how full our days may be with Christian labor.

If we could learn this truth, and set ourselves to use the power of prayer that God has placed at our disposal, we should see mighty changes in the church of Christ and great advance in the work committed to the church.—Selected by Mrs. G. F. McGowan.

College Receives Gift From Bank

President W. Burkette Raper announced today a gift of $500 from Wachovia Bank and Trust Company of Goldsboro.

The gift will be applied to the library in preparation for inspection by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools this fall. President Raper said that Miss Marie Barnett, a 1957 graduate of Mount Olive College, and now a teacher at Selma High School, will return to the campus to assist Mrs. Mildred S. Councill, librarian, in cataloguing books.

The college expects to have more than 7,000 approved and catalogued volumes by September. The minimum requirement of the Southern Association is 6,000 volumes, but President Raper declared that "our purpose is not simply to meet the minimum specifications for accreditation, but to build the best educational program possible for our students."

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Mr. Arthur Bass

On Friday morning, December 25, 1959, the death angel visited the home of Mr. Arthur Bass and took him from this life to be with God in heaven. He leaves to mourn a wife, three children, two grandchildren, three sisters, four brothers and many friends.

Mr. Bass had been a life-long member and deacon of Mt. Zion Free Will Baptist Church, Nash County, North Carolina.

The funeral was conducted at the church by a former pastor, the Rev. R. N. Hinnant, assisted by his pastor, the Rev. Albert Coates. His body was laid to rest in the Spring Hope Cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers.

His life trials are over,
 The victory has been won;
 Though 'twas hard to part,
 We say, "God's will be done."

Mount Olive College Announces April 24 As Challenge Day

Mount Olive College has made unparalleled progress since it was chartered in 1951, and our greatest educational challenge is before us. This college can become the first college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination to achieve regional accreditation.

To give Free Will Baptists everywhere an opportunity to share with us in reaching this goal, we are asking our churches and Sunday schools to observe Sunday, April 24, as "Challenge Day" for Mount Olive College. We ask that our people do three things in this observance:

(1) Offer special prayers for God's guidance for the administration, faculty and students of Mount Olive College;

(2) Make a gift to help us prepare for regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Mount Olive College already enjoys state accreditation, and with the achievement of regional accreditation this year we will have attained the highest standard of academic recognition. It is now within our reach to give the kind of college Free Will Baptists have always wanted and needed. "Challenge Day" is your opportunity to share in this historic accomplishment.

The only way we can save our faith is to cherish it, and it was for this purpose that Mount Olive College was called into being. The college was established upon three fundamental principles:

1. It should be Christian in its philosophy, personnel and program;
 2. It should be loyal to the faith and heritage of Free Will Baptists;
 3. It should be academically sound.
- Based upon this foundation, Mount Olive College has enjoyed the rich blessings of God and the liberal support of our people. We challenge you to help us strengthen and enlarge this vital ministry of Christian higher education. Please announce "Challenge Day" to your people next Sunday, and begin now to prepare for this observance. . . there remaineth yet very much land to be possessed" (Joshua 3:1).

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: What may we who are Christians do to overcome unkindness, envy and strife? It seems that we have enough of this on the outside of the church so that Christians would welcome fellowship with each other apart from things that are unpleasant, but just the opposite is true in our church.—Wanda Jones, Illinois.

Answer: The best way I know of preventing a social atmosphere that we do not like is to take the initiative in creating the kind we do like. This may be done in a church group by following the Old Testament teaching concerning the Word of God. "Therefore shall ye lay up these words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes. And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates: . . . Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse; A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day: And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known" (Deuteronomy 10:18-20, 26-28).

A local church group should be bound together as a means of fulfilling one purpose and that purpose is to follow God's orders in carrying out the great commission. In order to carry this out, one must know what the Bible says concerning this commission; so a thorough study of the Word is needed in order for one to act correctly in the all important task. "But exhort one another daily, while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin" (Hebrews 3:13). We have to know the Word so as to do this correctly, so we have here another command that takes us away from any time consuming bickering. "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15). The Bible suggests that God's Word should be hidden in the heart of the believer. "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Psalm 119:11). It also suggests that we need to meditate on that which is hidden, not that only, but that this law is a delight to the kind of person a local church member should be. "But his delight is in the law of the LORD; and in his law doth he meditate day and night" (Psalm 1:2). Generally those from a church group who kill time saying unkind things about each other either have not been regenerated and therefore are imposters or they do not know their Bible and therefore are backsliders.

The Bible has another basic teaching which when followed by church members will thereby keep from any such pastime as your question suggests that your friends engage in viz., "Pray without ceasing" (1 Thessalonians 5:17); "Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him" (Acts 12:5). Prayers and Bible study, as taught in the Bible, require believers to do this and leave no time whatever to support a gossip circle.

George H. Sandison gives the following discussion on a similar question as seen on Page 148 in his book, 1,000 Difficult Bible Questions Answered: "You need to pray to be strengthened in temptation, and to be given power to overcome those feelings. Envy and unkindness and worldliness are loath to loose their hold on the heart, but they will go if you ask for divine help in repelling them. We would advise you to connect yourself with some form of Christian work, either in the church organization or out of it. Visit the poor and the sick and do what you can to help them. Contrast your lot with theirs. Count your blessings and share them with others. You will find happiness and spiritual help in such a course. No matter how little you can do, do it gladly and with a joyful spirit. Do not allow yourself to moan and bemoan your own condition and shortcomings. Leave it all in God's hands, 'who knoweth all our infirmities.' Hold fast to the great fact that Jesus 'saves to the uttermost' and that means you, since you have accepted him. Confess him before men and go on in his service and the blessing will not fail to come. Forget yourself and he will take care of you, as he has promised."

"And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you" (Ephesians 4:30-32). Such instruction if followed, will be a sure anodyne to every time-killing unkindness in a group of time-killers.

The Lighted Pathway

unto my path (PSALM 119:105).*

FOLLOWING JESUS

"Then answered Peter and said unto him, Lord, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" (Matthew 19:27).

Last week we closed our meditation with the thought of the importance of following Jesus in our thinking on the subject, What Does Being a Christian Mean. I want to write one or two more devotional meditations on the subject of Following Jesus, but before I do I want to pass on to you a beautiful poem on the subject that I recently read, because it has an important message for all.

LEAVING ALL

As, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee;
Racked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou, from hence, my all shalt be:
I wish every fond ambition,
All I've sought, and hoped, and known;
Yet how rich is my condition,
God and heaven are still my own!
Let the world despise and leave me,
They have left my Saviour too;
Human hearts and looks deceive me;
Thou art not, like man, untrue;
And while thou shalt smile upon me,
God of wisdom, love, and might,
Enemies may hate, and friends may shun me;
Show thy face, and all is bright.
O, then, earthly fame and treasure!
Come, disaster, scorn and pain!
In Thy service, pain is pleasure;
With Thy favor, loss is gain.
I have called Thee, "Abba Father";
I have stayed my heart on thee:
Thunder may howl, and clouds may gather,
All must work for good to me.

Evil may trouble and distress me,
'Twill but drive me to Thy breast;
Life with trials hard may press me,
Heaven will bring me sweeter rest.
'Tis not in grief to harm me,
While Thy love is left to me;
'Twere not in joy to charm me,
Were that joy unmixed with thee.

Know, my soul, thy full salvation;
Rise o'er sin, and fear, and care;
Joy to find in every station
Something still to do or bear.
Think what Spirit dwells within thee;
What a Father's smile is thine;
What a Saviour died to win thee;
Child of heaven, shouldst thou repine?
Haste thee on from grace to glory,
Armed by faith, and winged by prayer;
Heaven's eternal day's before thee,
God's own hand shall guide thee there.
Soon shall close thy earthly mission,
Swift shall pass thy pilgrim days,
Hope shall change to glad fruition,
Faith to sight, and prayer to praise.

—Henry F. Lyte.

"And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones. . . . And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life" (Matthew 19:28, 29).

"It is not possible for any of us to live in the church, but every believer may continually dwell in God."

LIVING THE CHRIST LIFE

You may know about the life of Christ and yet not know the Christ life.

1. It will be a life of meditation (1 Timothy 4:13-15).

Meditation on God's Word, and the things of God (Psalms 119:97, 148; 1:2).

2. It will be a life of prayer (Acts 6:4).

Continually, not occasionally. Daniel as an example (Acts 2:42; Isaiah 40:29-31).

3. It will be a life of peace (Philippians 4:7).

Trials, tribulation, but peace (John 16:33; Ephesians 2:14, 15; 4:3; Colossians 3:15).

4. It will be a life of service (Romans 12:11).

Christ gave us an example (Mark 10:45; Philippians 2:5-8; Luke 22:26, 27).

5. It will be a life of victory (1 John 5:4).

The Christian life never intended to be one of defeat (Romans 12:21; 2 Timothy 4:7, 8).

6. It will be a life of love (Romans 5:5).

A mark of the Spirit (Galatians 5:19, 22; 5:13; 1 Corinthians 13:1, 13).

Dr. Parker Speaker at Bible Conference, April 3-7

An emphasis on evangelism will be given by two speakers at the seventeenth annual Bible Conference, April 3-7, at Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee. Dr. Monroe Parker, president of Pillsbury Conservative Baptist Bible College, Owatonna, Minnesota, and Rev. John Gamble, Lynchburg, Virginia, will be preaching from more than 20 years experience in holding evangelistic campaigns throughout the United States.

DR. MONROE PARKER

Other speakers include Rev. Wesley Calvery, missionary from Japan, and Rev. Dale Burden, East Nashville Free Will Baptist pastor.

Dr. Parker is an outstanding educator, evangelist, and Bible teacher, having served for years as an administrator and pastor at Bob Jones College, Greenville, S. C., before going to the presidency of Pillsbury.

An outstanding Christian leader, Dr. Parker has studied in a number of the nation's leading universities and theological seminaries and holds the Ph. D. degree from Bob Jones University. He has taught in several Bible colleges and theological seminaries and has had a wide experience in the field of evangelism, having conducted more than 400 evangelistic campaigns.

Ministers, Christian workers and laymen are invited to attend the conference.

7. It will be a life of expectation (Titus 2:12, 13).

We are watching for the Master (Mark 13:37; 1 Thessalonians 1:9, 10; Luke 19:13; Mark 13:34).

MEDITATION VERSE

"Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life" (Romans 6:4).

Suppose for some reason it was impossible for you to stay on one side of a river. Perhaps you wanted a boat to take you across to the other side where there was high ground that could not be flooded. There you would be safe. In such a case you would make use of the very thing (water) that meant death to you to save you from it. I have chosen the illustration of a boat because the Bible does. Noah built an ark to save him from a flood and take him safely to the other side. Christ has gone through death and we can appropriate this in faith as a means to take us over and away from judgment and corruption of the world that is around. We accept the death of the Lord Jesus as our own. It is a way of breaking my links with this world and all that appeals to it in myself.—G. H. M., in Choice Gleanings.

USEFUL UNTO DEATH

John Eliot who translated the Bible into the language of the Massachusetts tribe two hundred and fifty years ago, and who was called the "apostle of the Indians," was found on the day of his death, in his eightieth year, teaching the alphabet to an Indian child at his bedside.

"Why not rest from your labors?" said a friend.

"Because," said the good man, "I have prayed to God to make me useful in my sphere, and He has heard my prayer; for, now that I can no longer preach, He leaves me strength enough to teach this poor child his alphabet."—Selected.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, It has pleased an all wise Father to call to his reward our brother, Billy Vandiford, we the members of Piney Grove Church, Pitt County, submit the following resolutions:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, Second, That we extend to his family our deepest sympathy, and point them to God and the church for comfort and consolation, and Third, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on our church records, a copy sent to his family, and a copy sent to the Baptist paper for publication.

NOTES

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffith

DEPARTING FROM THE FAITH

The apostle, Paul, predicted that there would be departure from the faith and warning against the apostasy that would come in the last days. In the First Epistle to Timothy, he warned against things that would be in which we are seeing today as we look about us at the fulfillment of those things which he said would come. May we receive:

Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, doctrines of devils; Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth. For every creature of God is good, nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving: For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer" (1 Timothy 4:1-5).

THE SPIRIT SPEAKS

We believe that the Spirit, the Holy Spirit, is more than an influence; we believe that He is a person, who is the third person of the Godhead. We believe that He is an intelligent Being. May I say that the religion that discounts the personality of the Holy Spirit has departed from the truth as described by the apostle, Paul, and several of the writers of sacred writings.

Paul says, "In latter times some shall depart from the faith." And further he says that they are giving heed to seducing spirits. You will find if you search around that there are people who are members of some of our most prominent and oldest churches that have departed from the faith. Faith that was preached by the apostle, Paul, and others of the early church; faith which our predecessors preached, even here in the early days of our United States.

THE TRINITY

Among the many cults that deny the Holy Spirit and claim that there is no trinity is the so called Jehovah Witnesses. And yet William J. Schnell, the author of Thirty Years a Watch Tower Slave," says as written by Mr. Ray W. Johnson, editor of "Another Gospel," which is based on the aforesaid book written by Mr. William J. Schnell, "This writer baptized 465 Jehovah's Witnesses using this formula (In the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit)." He further states that over 1,000,000 Jehovah's Witnesses have already been baptized.

Why should a person be so ignorant as to say that there is no Holy Spirit and then allow himself to be baptized in the name of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Spirit? The King James version of the Bible says, "Holy Ghost." Yes, they deny the being of the Holy Spirit, as their forerunner did, the well known Pastor Russell, who is the originator of the Watch Tower religion which is now known as Jehovah's Witnesses. So these witnesses have departed from the faith as given to us by the Holy Spirit as the writers of Holy Writ were moved upon. I rather take the Word of God than to risk the Watch Tower version of the Scriptures. Peter says, "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (2 Peter 1:21). How did the prophecy come? Not by men but by the Holy Ghost. Certainly to deny the Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit is to preach another gospel. May I take time here to tell you that it will pay to write to The Life Messengers, Box 1967, Seattle 11, Washington, and get the booklet, "Another Gospel," a booklet arranged and edited by Mr. Ray W. Johnson, which has to do with the Jehovah's Witness doctrine. Also you can purchase from most any good bookstore the book, "Thirty Years a Watch Tower Slave"; I have both. I ordered the booklet, "Another Gospel," from the publishers, and bought the book, "Thirty Years a Watch Tower Slave" from the Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, North Carolina. These books are eye openers.

NOT THE ONLY DENIAL

Jehovah's Witnesses do not only deny the Trinity, but they deny that there is a future punishment for those who reject the Lord Jesus. They deny that there is a hell-fire and this is good news to millions. They have many ways of twisting truth and taking Scripture out of its true setting and applying it to their own way of thinking; but if a person will deny the personality of the Holy Spirit he is in a position to deny most any other part of the Bible.

After talking with a man many years ago, I preached on the following Sunday morning a sermon on, "Hell, or the Endless Punishment of the Wicked"; that booklet, or sermon, is on sale at the Free Will Baptist Press in Ayden, at the low cost of 10 cents per copy, or special price on quantities. Several years ago, a man who was reached by reading that sermon which was in book form, confessed to me that the book convinced him that there was a hell-fire, and he attended an evangelistic meeting that I was conducting in his town and openly confessed Jesus Christ as his Lord and Saviour. The next night his wife said, at the close of the service, "This has been a happy day with me." Continuing she said, "Last night after we went home from church, my husband got the Bible and read a chapter and called the children to kneel down and we all got down and my husband prayed." Yes, I preach hell-fire hot and long. To disbelieve that there is a hell for the wicked, is to preach another gospel other than that which Paul preached. It is a perversion of the truth as set forth in the Bible. It was begun in the days of the apostle, Paul.

REMOVED FROM CHRIST

Paul, in writing to the church at Galatia, said, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though ye, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you . . . let him be accursed" Galatians 1:6-9. So the curse is upon all who pervert the gospel. To preach that there is no Holy Ghost and that there is no eternal hell for the sinful, Christ-rejecting man, is to preach another gospel from that which Paul preached and further from what Christ preached. To believe any other is to say that Paul and Christ did not preach the truth; that is what Jehovah's Witnesses say. I will tell you some more in next issue about false doctrine, even some that have crept into many churches. Read Notes and Quotes and learn things that we have found to be true in false teaching.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

MARGIE'S QUILT

by Mabel C. Stewart

MARGIE spread out the pieces from her grandmother's rag bag.

"Look, Grandmother!" she said. "Here is some of that pretty cloth with the little pink rosebuds! I remember this."

"Yes, dear, I made pajamas for you out of that material when you were a very little girl."

"And here is some with bluebirds," Margie went on, "and some more with pink and blue stripes."

"Yes, that is right. Find all the pieces of outing flannel, and we can make a nice quilt of them."

Soon there was a big pile of scraps—plain, figured and striped.

"That will be enough, I am sure," said Grandmother. "I will cut out the patches, and you can help me sew them together."

Margie really enjoyed sewing the patches, with Grandmother's help, because Grandmother told her so many interesting stories as they worked together.

"You see," Grandmother told her, "our missionary society is getting a box ready to send to some of our missionaries in India. We want to send several quilts for the children there."

"But I thought India was hot," said Margie. "What would the people there do with warm quilts?"

"Yes, India is very hot in the summer," replied Grandmother. "In the northern part of the country, however, the winters are cold, and people are glad to have quilts and blankets. We have heard, too, that just now many people are in need of clothing. When they need so much, we ought to do what we can for them, don't you think so?"

"Oh, yes, I want to help. I can make a little quilt, can't I, Grandmother?"

"I am sure you can. I will help you," said Grandmother.

"India is where they worship idols, isn't it?" Margie asked. "Do all the people worship idols?"

"A great many of them do—not all. Some are followers of the false prophet, Mohammed, who they think can save them."

"Don't any of the children in India know about Jesus?" asked Margie.

"Yes, some of them do," answered Grandmother. "That is why missionaries have gone so far away from home—to tell men and women and children about our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Some of the people in India have learned to love Him, too. Perhaps your quilt will go to a little Christian child in India."

"I would like that," said Margie. After awhile all the patches were sewed together.

"Now we will have to buy some material for lining," suggested Grandmother. "Would you like to go to the store with me to help choose it?"

"Oh, yes," said Margie. "Let's go now."

The store had ever so many pretty patterns in outing flannel.

"I like this best; it is funny," Margie finally decided, choosing material with little lambs skipping and jumping and turning somersaults all over a blue background.

At last the little quilt was all finished, and packed with others in a parcel to send on its far off journey to North India.

While Margie's quilt was on its way, a Christian family in the city of Novshera was in great distress.

"It is so cold," whimpered little Sabir Masih. "When will my mother come back?"

"Yes, Son," replied his father, "we are all cold. It is a sad time for us, but remember, many others, too, are suffering from the cold. We are not the only ones whose houses and beds, and bedding, and clothes got caught in the flood. Look at our neighbors and friends. They are cold, too, and hungry, and miserable. Try to sleep, and tomorrow when the sun shines again you will be warm. Your mother will be with us again soon."

Sabir Masih's father sighed. It was hard to sleep when there were so few covers for the bed. There was one thing to be thankful for, however. Sabir Masih's mother was safe in the mission hospital, where she would be warm, and well cared for, along with Sabir Masih's new little brother.

There was great excitement at the hospital. Boxes had arrived from America—boxes of clothing, and bedding, and soap, and powdered milk. The faces of the missionary doctor and her nurses just shone.

"Bless those dear American friends!" the doctor exclaimed. "Nothing could be more welcomed for the poor suffering people."

"Our supply of powdered milk is nearly finished," said one of the nurses. "This is just what is needed by those who are nearly starving."

"And the soap! Won't the poor women in the refugee camp be happy now! They have not been able to wash their hair or their clothes for so long."

"Just look at the quilts, and blankets and clothing! I know just where some of those will go. Our poor Christians from the village of Nidala, who lost everything in the flood, will make good use of these," said the doctor.

"Oh, Doctor, Miss Sahiba, look at this dear little quilt!" said Nurse Ruth, holding up a pretty patchwork quilt. "This is something special. May I give it to one of my patients?"

"I know who that will be," laughed the doctor. "You want to give it to your newest little patient. Yes, certainly the baby will need a warm quilt at home."

Nurse Ruth took the quilt and ran happily to the ward where Sabir Masih's new brother and his mother were. Yes, it was Margie's pretty, warm quilt that she spread over him. The baby blinked sleepily. He did not see the pretty patches carefully sewed together, and the little lambs skipping and jumping and turning somersaults all over the blue background. But the eyes of the baby's mother were alight with happiness.

"Is it really for my baby?" she asked.

"Yes, you may take it with you when you go home today. Some kind Christian friends in America sent it for just such a sweet baby as this," Nurse Ruth answered.

"May our Lord Jesus bless them!" said the baby's mother.

Before nightfall the doctor and nurse had distributed powdered milk and soap, clothing and bedding to many grateful people. Some of them were not Christians and were very surprised to receive so much from those they had never known.

"Why do you do this for us?" the doctor asked.

"These gifts were sent by Christian people in America," was the answer, "people who are serving the Lord Jesus Christ. He teaches us to have compassion on the suffering, to feed the hungry, and clothe the naked, and help all in need, especially all those who, first of all, need Him."

The gifts found their way, too, into Sabir Masih's home.

"I'll not be cold tonight, Father," he

The Sanderses Write

Waipahu, Hawaii
P. O. Box 1201
February, 1960

To our Friends on the Mainland:

It has been a month since you last heard from us and there has been so very much happened during the month that it is hard to put it all on paper. We have been meeting in the renovated basement of our residence for the past month and already we have almost outgrown our facilities. We had thirty-eight in service last Sunday and the place was almost filled. We have seen three of our young people accept Christ as their personal Saviour and there have been other signs of spiritual growth and dedication among those who attend our services. Since we have moved to our new meeting place, we have seen a definite increase in attendance at all of our services. Also we are having much better services because as someone has put it, "It seems so much more like a church." Even though it was most difficult, as well as a terrible strain, to get the basement in its present condition we are grateful to have it and have been rewarded by the new interest that has been shown among our group.

Something else new added this month is our church paper, "The Link." This paper gives us a means of follow up as well as a constant contact with our members and those who visit our services. Please pray that the paper will be used by God to reach the people for Him.

The Lord is opening up new and challenging opportunities for us—perhaps we will be able to report more definite on these opportunities next month. In the meanwhile we urge you to be much in prayer for us.

Our average Sunday school attendance for January was 25, and our enrollment now stands at 47. When we consider that it was only five months ago that we began our work without even a nucleus of people, we are made to realize more the great need for fundamental, gospel preaching churches here in the Islands. The people that come to our services do not come because it is convenient, because they all drive from five to twenty-five miles to the church, neither do they come because they are Free Will Baptist because we only have three Free Will Baptist families coming; but they come because they are looking for a place where they can worship God and hear the gospel preached.

This month we would like to have you meet Mrs. George Lanvermeier by word of testimony:

"I am Edna Lanvermeier from Deep Run and Jacksonville, North Carolina. I'm living here in Hawaii with my husband George, who is stationed here with the Marine Corps, and our two sons George Jr. and Gary. It was awfully hard to leave our home, friends and loved ones behind and come to a land where we knew no one, but now I am so glad we did. I'm so thankful I was here to greet the Sanders when they arrived and to be able to help in some small way to get our Free Will Baptist church established here in the Hawaiian Islands.

"I thank the Lord for sending the Sanders to Hawaii, they are truly wonderful people and doing a great work for the Lord. I love our little church and look forward to each service."

Mrs. Lanvermeier

The Lanvermeier family has been a great help to us in our work here. We can count on them to be at every service. Mrs. Lanvermeier is one of our Sunday school teachers and also our church treasurer and help with our music. Her husband is faithful to attend all of our services and helps in any way we call on him for his services. They will be here until May of 1961.

If it were not for God's blessings upon our work here, the definite assurance that we are in His will, and the divine promise in Philippians 4:19, "But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus"; we, perhaps would have reasons to be discouraged, because many of our friends have failed to support the work here. The home mission office at Nashville, Tennessee, sends us a list of our contributors each month and many of our friends, at least 75% who pledged to the support of the work here have never contributed financially since we have been on the field. Last month the check to Hawaii Free Will Baptist Missions from the National Home Missions office was $240.00 and the Home Missions Board had to contribute a few dollars from the general fund to bring the account up to this amount. I don't need to tell you that this is below operating cost. With house rent and church rent, $95.00; utilities $25.00; radio broadcast $30.00; payment on typewriter $50.00; news letters and other necessary mailing, $15.00; church advertisement $6.91 (this is so necessary over here and we need to do so much more than what we are able to do); mimeographing material $24.13. This totals $246.04 and I haven't mentioned many other personal bills such as gas (which costs 41c to 47c per gallon), and our personal living expense. We only ask that you pray about this with us and ask God what He would have you to do about it. Send offerings earmarked for Hawaii to the National Home Missions Office, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee. This is not intended to be critical but informative; we have confidence enough in our people to believe that when they know they care and when they care they will pray and act.

"Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified, even as it is with you" (1 Thessalonians 3:1).

For Christ in Hawaii,
Luther Sanders

May I take this opportunity to thank all of you who were so thoughtful and considerate to send such beautiful Get-Well cards while I was recuperating from my accident. They were such a blessing and comfort. May God bless you each and every one.

Chained But Not Silent

(Lesson for March 27)

Lesson: Acts 28:16-31.

Golden Text: Romans 8:37.

I. INTRODUCTION

The thing which was most remarkable on the entire journey was the respect which was paid Paul by all the people associated with him. The rough captain of the ship would not listen to his advice at first, but was glad to be associated with him when trouble arose and Paul was the man to whom all turned for comfort and hope. The centurion who was deputized to guard Paul on the journey gave him the consideration of a friend instead of a prisoner in chains.

It is altogether reasonable to believe that the centurion who delivered him made a special plea for Paul, telling the captain that Paul was not an ordinary prisoner, and possibly recounting the blessings which God had bestowed on the entire personnel of the ship which was sunk on the journey. In any rate, the chief captain in Rome saw fit to make special concessions in Paul's case and assign a soldier to guard him while he lived apart and not as a regular prisoner. We are told that Paul rented his own house in Rome and used it as the gathering place for those who desired to come to hear him preach the gospel.—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. God can soften the hearts of the enemies of His children so they will deal gently with them (Acts 28:16).
2. The messenger of Christ does not come to bring charges against anyone, but to proclaim Christ (Vs. 17).
3. If a careful examination is made, even the world will have to admit that there is no legitimate charge against the faithful of Christ (Vs. 18).
4. There are times when the earthly government of a nation will be used to protect God's children (Vs. 19).
5. The hope of Israel was the coming of the Messiah, and the hope of the Christian was the second coming of the Lord (Vs. 20).
6. It is a splendid trait when people are willing to listen to the gospel message even when they know it is spoken against (Vs. 21, 22).

7. The faithful servant of the Lord is always willing to give extra hours to the proclamation of the gospel (Vs. 23).

8. The Word of God will always be a divider among people: some will believe, and some will not believe its message (Vs. 24).

9. If a man is the prisoner of the Lord, God sometimes sees to it that he receives special favors (Vs. 30).

10. The unbelieving Jews may have thought they were rid of Paul, but God overruled their evil plans and gave the apostle a fruitful ministry in the city of Rome.

11. Paul was chained to a Roman soldier all these two years, but at least the Christ-hating Jews had no opportunity to beat, stone or murder him. All praises to our God.

12. The book of Acts closes with a very remarkable statement, for it states that Paul preached with, "no man forbidding him." The world was open for the gospel, so far as the Roman empire was concerned, but now Communism is moving to stop the preaching of the gospel.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Paul's coming to Rome was in many ways different from his approach to any other phase of his long ministry.

He came as a prisoner, having already been kept in custody for approximately two and a half years without a charge against him, and facing an indefinite delay before his case might be heard before Caesar. Whatever papers had been sent from Caesarea to expedite his case were probably lost in the shipwreck off Malta. There were no witnesses to bring charges against him.—The Standard Commentary.

2. Paul had learned, through his acquaintance and association with Priscilla and Aquila, of the church in Rome. In fact it met in their house (Romans 16:3-5). He had written a letter to this church (book of Romans) before he set off for Jerusalem. Since there were Jews in the congregation and Paul had asserted salvation by grace with such emphasis in his letter, he was not exactly sure what the attitude of the Roman Christians would be. However, we read in Verse 15 that when the Roman brethren heard that Paul was coming to Rome, a delegation was sent to Appia Forum, about forty miles from Rome, and still another to Three Taverns, about thirty miles from the city, to meet and welcome him. Thus we read that Paul thanked God and took courage.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

3. The hope of Israel was the center of Paul's preaching, and on it he spent his interest and strength. This is the Word the world needs to hear. This is the preaching the Jews need to know. A resurrected Saviour is the heart of the gospel. A resurrection power is promised to Jew and Gentile. It sets the prisoner free.

4. The coming of Messiah is at the door. Miracles of restoration are happening in Israel. Mines which have not produced for over 2500 years are now yielding their treasures to the sons of Jacob. Rainfalls withheld for two millenniums are now yielding their life-giving moisture to make the land fruitful. Oil wells are being drilled at Sodom and Gomorrah near the Dead Sea. Channels of fresh water have been discovered in the Dead Sea itself. Scientists are finding new ways of growing crops in the desert by washing the salt under the soil. Plants that have short roots are able to grow where this is done. Many of the best brains of Europe are centered in the land reclaiming it from the spell of death and desolation.—Selected.

5. Paul was a privileged prisoner, even though of the Roman Empire. He had the right to preach in his own hired house and received all that came to him. But no matter how favored he was, his execution was not far off. Before Nero's axe cut off his head he gave a wonderful testimony in his letter to Timothy in 2 Timothy 4:5-8.

6. We cannot be sure, as tradition claims, that Paul was released from prison and visited Spain and England before his execution. But it is quite likely that some of the Roman soldiers who guarded Paul and heard his teachings were converted to Christianity, and afterwards were sent to England on military duty where they witnessed for Christ. So we may be sure that the gospel came to England and then to the United States as a result of Paul's ministry in Rome, even if he did not visit England himself.

“Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven . . . whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12).

Jesus is coming soon. Oh, what a comfort to the true child of God! His coming is the Hope of the Church.—Selected.

Sabir Masih's father was looking at his new son, wrapped warmly in a little quilt over which lambs were skipping and jumping and somersaulting.

"No, Son, we will not be cold tonight. Let us give thanks to our heavenly Father who has given us so many wonderful gifts," he said.

"I think that the baby wants to say 'Thank you,' too, for his nice warm quilt," said Sabir Masih. —The Gospel for the Youth.

our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

The Struggle of a Soul

I HEARD HIM TALKING to the minister in a clear penetrating voice before they invited me into the room. The old man asked if he would like to have the Bible read to him:

"I'd just as leave ye'd read the Almanac," responded, curtly. Then he continued the conversation, telling the minister how expected to change his will; he had five children—had supported and educated them except one, now the one whom he had educated was the only one who had not forsaken him, but was caring for him in his sickness and old age. To this boy he had now decided to will his property.

He told all this with so much conciseness and decision, that in spite of his crude language I formed a mental picture of a tall, stately man with a broad, intelligent forehead, deep-set eyes, clear-cut features, and a great personal appearance. I was therefore shocked and disappointed when I entered the room and beheld a weird, withered old man all doubled up in bed, lying on his side, his head thrown back so that only a mat of white beard was visible above a roll of dirty red quilts.

When the minister introduced me, I extended my hand; the old man turned his head, glittering eyes upon us and with some difficulty, extricated his arms from the bedclothes, and stretched forth two long claw-like hands all bent and twisted, saying distinctly in his clear tones,

"Them's my hands; ye can't say how d'ye like 'em with them."

I shrank back, glad to be excused from shaking hands; the next moment I was informed of my weakness and drew nearer the bedside.

"Do you suffer much?" I asked.

"Of course, I suffer," was the laconic reply still with his little keen eyes fixed on me, and in a cool finality of tone that seemed to discourage any expression of sympathy, I asked him other conventional questions relating to his illness. I had to be very circumspect, for they had told me he was an infidel, and hard to approach on the subject of religion. He answered my question in a brief, business-like way, regarding the while with sharp attention, as though he were answering the professional questions of his attending physician.

"I've just been visiting your cousin," I said at last. "She tells me that her brother, sixty-two years old, who is dying of tuberculosis, was converted about a month ago, and that he is very happy. Did you know it?"

"Yes, I know it; he was converted two months ago," he answered severely, as though reproving my inaccuracy.

"Two months ago? So much the better. Did they tell you, too, how happy he is?"

Evidently he did not hear my question, though I had previously thought his hearing very acute. "Him and me was always together," he said by way of diverting the conversation; "we played together when we was boys and when we grewed up, nobody ever see one without the other. Lou was always a good feller."

"And now, wouldn't it be beautiful for you to go to heaven together?"

"Hey?" he queried; his hearing very bad again.

"Don't you think you had better plan to go to heaven with him?" I said a little louder.

"Who says I shan't go to heaven?" he responded sharply.

"Nobody says you shan't. You may if you will. Will you?"

"Who knows who'll go to heaven?" still in the same clear, ringing tones, though I thought I discovered a little note of anxiety underneath.

"God knows," I answered, "and He tells us in the Bible, if thou shalt believe with thy heart, and confess with thy mouth, thou shalt be saved. Do you believe and confess?"

"I never made no profession," he answered distinctly.

"Wouldn't you like to make a profession? You've lain here eight years without God; with Him, even this sickness would be bearable."

Glad of an avenue of escape, he began to tell of his illness.

"It is for some good purpose." I made the trite suggestion while collecting my thought.

"Yes," was the snappy reply, "it's to test the faithfulness of my children; to see if they'll do as much for me as I've done for them."

"Brother, there is a parable in that last remark of yours. God is your heavenly father. Think what He has done for you. It was He who gave you the money to send your children to school, gave you all that you have ever enjoyed. He wanted you to show Him some gratitude and love in prosperity, but you would not hear His voice: so He permitted this eight years' illness to compel you to think. Are you still determined to be unfaithful to your Father, and to turn against Him?"

He moved restlessly, complaining a little of his hip hurting him.

"Won't you answer?" I persisted.

He regarded me quizzically for a moment, then said deliberately, "You remind me of old Parson Weston."

I submissively inquired in what way I reminded him of the old parson.

"Well," he replied, a little twinkle in the eye relieving the stoicism of his face, "old Parson Weston was walking one day with an old skeptic over on his farm. 'Brother G——, God, has been very good to give you all this,' says the preacher. 'Yes,' squeaked the old skeptic, 'but I had to work hard fer it.'"

"So he considered it hellish to work?" I replied quite calmly, "and do you, too? Now I think it is heavenly to work—that is the difference when one has God in his life."

Again he relapsed into silence. "Do you pray?" I inquired.

"I never made no profession," he repeated, bearing patiently with my stupidity.

"Do you believe in prayer?"

"I've knowed lots of my professors," he volunteered, ignoring my question, "and I've seen errors in them."

"Yes?" I acquiesced, "we all make errors. we are all human."

"My mother was a professor; she never made an error." Again he seemed to be reproving a want of veracity in me.

"Would you like us to hold a cottage prayer meeting here? Then you may confess Christ to your neighbors, tell them you're sorry you've rejected Him so long, and even at this late day start on your way to heaven. May we come?"

"I never interfere with nobody."

"Nor do we wish to interfere with you; do you want us to come?"

"Ye can if ye want to; I won't ask my neighbors to leave off their work fer to pray with me."

"They'll consider that a privilege. Good-by, sir."

"Good-by," and then as I reached the door, he added, with a little jerk, as though it cost him an effort, "Come back again." And I thought there were signs of yielding in his tone.

Three days later I went back again, about a dozen of the neighbors with me. The old man was sitting on the edge of his bed with a table before him, and a pillow on the table to rest his head; he looked more crooked, and twisted, and uncanny than ever, but tidier than when I last saw him. We sang, and prayed, and sang; his flinty heart melted but would not yield. The tears coursed down his withered cheeks.

"I hope I'll meet ye all in heaven," he wept, in response to our earnest exhortations.

"But, sir, you are in the wrong path to reach heaven," I urged, "you must turn right around and go the other way. Will you not do it now?"

There was no obstinacy in his tone—on the contrary, his eyes seemed to appeal mutely for help, as he answered: "It wouldn't be right fer me to change now, after I've lived this way so long."

"It certainly is not right for you to continue another day in rebellion against God. Even if you had no hope of His saving you at this late day, you ought to repent, and plead for His forgiveness. But He will forgive you; He saved your cousin who had lived sixty-two years in sin—will He not, then, forgive your sixty-five sinful years?"

"He ought to," he answered, wistfully; "my cousin was a tougher colt than I be."

"Then ask Him; say, 'God be merciful to me a sinner.'"

"I can't pray," he groaned, dropping his poor old gray head in the pillow.

"Yes, you can; try it." He shook his head, his face still buried in the pillow. "I can't seem to give up the world."

I was amazed. Here was a little, bent, twisted, dependent old man, just a bunch of disease, with death staring him in the face, and he knew it; yet he could not give up the world—surely, there is a personal devil so to deceive men.

"But you must give up the world," I pleaded, "you have no other choice; the world is slipping away from you—only God is left, God or—or hell," with difficulty I pronounced the last dread word, so pitifully helpless he looked. "Won't you lay hold on God?"

He raised his head, looked at me hopelessly, and while the room was so quiet you could have heard a pin drop, he spoke:

"One time I was stopping over night in a tavern at N———. The tavern keeper and his son had been rough, hard-drinking men; they bragged that they both drank enough liquor to swim in. The son had just come back from a trip to the West. He could sing like a nightingale, and his father says in front of all the men a settin' around in the bar, 'Ned, I want ye to sing fer us.'

"I don't sing the kind of songs I used to sing, Father,' says Ned.

"Well,' says his father, 'I don't keer a snap what ye sing—sing!'

"I can't never forgit how that young feller's face looked as he pushed his chair back again the wall, and begin to sing,

" 'Twas heaven below my Rcdemmer to know,

And the angels could do nothing more,
But to fall at His feet, and the story repeat,
And the Lover of sinners adore.'

"The tavern keeper's girl was sick in the next room; she heard it and called to her father. 'Father,' she says, 'ye must pray for me.'

"I can't pray,' says the father.

"Father, ye must pray.'

"Nell, I tell ye I can't pray.'

"Father, I'm dying; ye must pray if it's only two words.'

"Nell, I can't — I can't pray!'"

And as old Mr. B——— closed his story, with tears flowing fast, he wailed out the words, "I can't pray," like the moan of a lost soul, and dropped his face again in the pillow.

We had already spent two hours with him. After a few more entreaties, I said, "We must say good-by now. These men have their chores to do."

"Will ye come back again?" The invitation was given wistfully—even pleadingly.

"Can we come back again?" I asked of the stalwart farmers grouped about the sick man; each hardy, sunburned face was stained with tears.

"Yes," they responded, with hearty accord.

The experience of our last visit I cannot describe. To me, it was a tragedy—a scene to make angels weep.

Again and again he repeated plaintively:

"It is my desire to be a Christian. I hope the good Lord will forgive me."

He prayed: the hard stubborn will yielded at last, pleaded through lips that had never formed words of holy petition since he knelt, an innocent child, at his mother's knee.

He sang: never in his life before had he sung a line, he declared; had never been able to carry a tune. And indeed, he was not now able to carry a tune, but in some peculiar fashion, his quavering voice joined with ours while we sang,

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that Thy blood, was shed for me,
And that Thou bid'st me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!"

It was hard for him to believe that God could forgive him.

"I've lived sixty-five years," he tearful said, "and I've never done nothin' fer Him.

"But God has yet a mission for you perform," I encouraged.

"I'm a poor, wretched sinner," he moaned, "to be takin' on much mission."

"When God first found me," I confessed, "I, too, felt that I was the chief of sinner. Did you, also, Mr. S———?"

"Aye, didn't I?" responded Farmer S———, wiping his glasses.

"And you, Mr. A———, did not ye also feel that you were the chief of sinner when God called you?"

Farmer A——— looked steadily out of the window; his voice came huskily from away down in his chest: "Sure! I felt jist so," was the emphatic rejoinder.

"And Saint Paul felt jist so," I continued, turning to I Timothy 1:15, and pointing him to the words, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners of whom I am chief."

Slowly and in measured tones, as though the recording angel were urging him to confession, the old man told of a time long ago when God had convicted him. He was but twenty years old then. He attended revival meeting. "If someone had jist teched me on the arm that night, I'd a gone for'ard," he said, "but nobody did, and the next night I was that hard, I could a danced on the altar; I've never been the least milt convicted since then, 'till now."

We continued to pray, and sing, and witness; the convicted man meanwhile prayed and wept, and confessed. Gray was the sky overhead, when at last we wended our way down the orchard path to the little gate—only a single patch of hazy light where the sun bravely struggled to show his face; gray also was the lonely heart of the penitent the Son of Righteousness, seeking to banish the mist of sin and doubt.

Still praying, our souls entered into the conflict with this awakened one; ere long we believed, the struggle would conclude in victory—the soul of him, responding to the love of his Creator.—Deaconess Evangelist

"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses . . . let us run with patience the race that is set before us" (Hebrews 12:1).

Big Bed

by Edwin Raymond Anderson

A QUEER SORT OF TWIST of tale, I'll be the first to admit, but I'm bringing it to you straight just as big Bill Bennett told it to me after church the other morning. And if it's queer . . . well, it's one of the Lord's "queer" ways of bringing tired sheep back home to heart rest.

It all began, as big Bill told it, about thirty years ago when he was a boy once again, spending a happy summer on Uncle Willard's farm, back in the plains region of western Illinois. It was of a Sunday evening, as he would recall, and the folks were gathered about the old organ in the living room, singing some of the old songs of Zion. He lay on the floor, kicking his feet skyward, leaning hard on his elbows, lazily looking through the pages of a magazine—

Then he saw it—could not forget it—stopped him on the spot with one of those wily wild ideas. He stared hard at the printed over page, and it seemed that his eyes were riveted to the spot—

First of all, it was unusual to say the least. It was an advertisement from a well-known Chicago furniture firm; just a picture in the center of the ad, and below, the price and sundry information.

But what a picture! It was really the biggest, the hugest, the largest bed in the whole of this wide world—at least that's what it said there! The measurements were something out of this world—how many feet long and wide did it really say? And the mattress! Why, one could just lose oneself in the swim of all that beddy luxury—just nestle down—deep, deep down—into the softness of those wonderful pillows, and dream—dream—dream—one's life clear away. With a bed like that, with clear comfort like that, you wouldn't have a care or a worry in the world. Whatever came—well, you could just dream it away like a soft whisper, a gentle whisper, of a breeze.

Then that wild idea came into his head while staring at that advertisement. Why couldn't he have a big downy bed like that when he was big? It didn't cost too much, and when he grew up, settled down, made his mark in the business world, he could easily afford a bed like that.

Well, the Lord was real good to him, even while he was bad to the Lord. Big Bill grew up, stacked out into business, no time for the Lord, of course, found the going good, and with the money rolling in. Things were sure going his way, and he was on top of the heap o' living.

He carried his wild idea through all those years. He would have a bed just like the one in the Chicago ad, and he would lay down at the end of a busy day and dream—dream—sweet dreams—

But it didn't work out that way as big Bill told me the rest of that Sunday morning. The Lord had other ideas. Yes, he reached the top, but somehow—somehow—he wasn't happy, wasn't satisfied. It didn't turn out as he thought. Something deep down in his old heart was gnawing away like some restless, hungry thing, and while there was plenty of money in the pocket, underneath, there was plenty of bankruptcy in the heart. He tried not to think of it, tried to brush it aside, but those far away Sunday school days scudded fast back upon him.

You ask how things went with the big, big bed? Yes, Bill had it, just like that ad, Bill bought it, Bill laid down in it—but he couldn't rest, he couldn't sleep, he couldn't dream sweet, peaceful dreams. Something in his heart kept him turning and tossing right in the middle of all that luxury.

At first, it seemed so strange, so—foolish. Wasn't money the big answer? Here was a real luxury, and poor chap, he couldn't enjoy a bit of it! Then he began to think, think of some of the things he half-heard in the little old Sunday school, about the real rest of a real Lord Jesus, and only in Him. Then it didn't seem so strange, after all, and after a while, big Bill began to look at things the Lord's way. Then he finally saw it!

The Lord Himself had planted the wild, young idea in his head, had carried it through all these years, just to show him, to finally teach him that He could not be left out of the life picture for the sake of big money. He finally saw, and with a smitten heart, that one can be on the top of the heap, and still be on real rock bottom where real, true living with a capital "L" is concerned.

Yes, sir, it surely was a heart happy day when big Bill saw that bed in its true light—an invitation from the dear Lord to close in tight and fast with Himself and really begin to live as the Lord intended that it should be.

I'm thinking of some of the fellows in the class. They've got big ideas. And some of them are going to hit pay dirt; they're going to make it clear to the top of the life ladder, well able to enjoy the luxuries of this old world. But let's all remember, big or little, to really take the Lord along for real heart ease—and pleasant dreams.

Big Bill hasn't got the bed any more; sold it when he became a Christian, turned the money over to the Lord's work. As he said, it did its work, and in its own "queer" way showed him the need of a saving link with the life-giving Lord.—Gospel Herald.

Thank God for My Christian Mother

After a hard-fought battle in the late war, a chaplain moved among the seriously wounded soldiers. "Can I do anything for you, soldier?" asked the chaplain of one of whose life was rapidly ebbing away. "I want you, chaplain, to return thanks for me." "What shall I thank God for?" asked the chaplain. "Thank Him for giving to me a devout Christian mother, whose life and teaching brought me to the Saviour!"—Selected.

Our Echo

A little boy ran to his mother and said, "Mother, there is a bad boy in the woods. He mocked everything I said. When I said, 'Hello,' she said 'Hello.' When I said, 'Who are you?' he said, 'Who are you?' When I said, 'What is your name?' he said, 'What is your name?' When I said, 'You are a mean boy, and I'm going to punch you in the nose,' he said, 'You are a mean boy and I'm going to punch you in the nose.'" The wise mother said, "My boy, go again to the woods and say, 'You are a good boy. Let's be friends!'" The boy did as he was told to do. The boy in the woods answered back, "You are a good boy. Let's be friends!"—Selected.

Mr. Turnage Directed League Workshop

The Albemarle League Convention of North Carolina sponsored a league study course and workshop on February 8-12. It was directed by Mr. Ray C. Turnage, promotional secretary of the National League Board. The attendance was good with many of the churches in the district participating. The event proved to be very helpful to league work in the area.

Here are some of the ways that the study course proved to be helpful:

1. It made known and renewed the purpose of league. Many leaguers have never fully understood its purpose. If the purpose is not defined and emphasized it is slip away for those who have known it to let slip away.
2. It helped the officers and leaguers to understand their responsibilities and opportunities. Often times in league and other organizations as well officers serve without really understanding what they are supposed to do.
3. It created interest in league work. League took on a new meaning for many. The revival of interest is one of the crying needs in our work today.
4. It helped leaguers to realize that league work is being carried on in churches other than their own. It was a step to help leaguers to realize they are a part of the national League program. It is hard it seems for local churches to catch the vision of national work.

Mr. Turnage did a wonderful job. He was certainly excellent in this work. The study course and workshop accomplished much, but they were conscious of its limitations when spread over such a large area. The best possibility is to have such a study course in each local church. Has your church had one lately? If not you are missing something.

Bible College Enlarges Educational Program

The Bible College faculty, in a special meeting March 1, voted unanimously to adopt the recommendations of the curriculum committee to add several courses and curricula to the present College offerings.

The additions, which are only the beginning of a series of expansions to be studied and recommended by the committee and the administration, include the following as listed by Robert Picirilli, chairman.

SECRETARIAL COURSE ADDED

The first addition is that of a one-year secretarial course. So many of our young people seem to desire such a course of study to be received in a warmly spiritual atmosphere. The course will include the college's regular freshman Bible, English, Evangelism and Christian Service, plus Typing, Short-hand or Accounting, Office Procedure and Business Filing. A certificate will be awarded at the end of the year.

In listing this course of study, the curriculum committee's report gave as the purpose of the new addition to provide secretarial training for two types of people: (1) those who are planning to enter full-time Christian service as church secretaries, etc.; (2) those not called of God to enter such service, but interested in being of more effective service to Christ in the secular business world.

HISTORY MINOR OFFERED

The second addition is that of a History minor, added to our present three minors of Christian Education, English and Music. The individual courses to make up this minor will include Medieval History, U. S. History, Modern European History and the Renaissance, in addition to the regular freshman Ancient History. The addition to the faculty this year of T. L. Burch with a master's degree in Social Studies, makes this possible.

MAJOR IN ENGLISH

The third addition represents a historic step. For the first time the Bible College will be offering other majors in addition to Bible.

One major that will be offered in a double-major program will be English. The awarding of master's degrees in English to two faculty members this summer will provide competent teachers in this department. For these additions of the English major and the History minor, the committee listed the purpose to provide strong academic programs for potential transfer students who are not entering full-time Christian service, and for pre-seminary students.

B. S. IN NURSING ADDED

Another double-major program being added is in a five-year course of study leading to a R. N. and B. S. in Nursing. Details are being worked out with a local hospital so that the student may spend the regular time of three years in nurse's training and two years at the Bible College to attain these two awards.

The proposed plan is for the student to attend the first year at the college, the next three years in the nurse's school, and the fifth year at the college. The purpose of this addition is to offer training for two groups of students: (1) Those who plan to enter nursing as a church-related profession, such as missionary nursing; (2) those who do not plan to enter full-time Christian service but are interested in making their lives count for God as Christians and nurses in the medical profession.

OTHER AREAS BEING CONSIDERED

Other than these four definite additions, various areas are being prayerfully considered. Among them are the possibility of a five-year Th.B. program for ministers and state-department approval to offer certificates for teachers in public schools.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: What is meant by the expression, "We shall know as we are known"? Is it to be found in the Scriptures or do we only find the expression in an old song?—Amanda Duvall, Comarche, Oklahoma.

Answer: There is to be found in the Bible the following Scripture verse that means about what your expression says and is as follows: "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known" (1 Corinthians 13:12). There is also a gospel song with the above or a similar expression in it that means virtually the same thing. I am of the opinion that the above verse of Scripture indicates that when we who are saved shall have our new and glorified bodies like that in which Christ appears at the right hand of God and on His throne, we shall have taken from us that limitation which came to Adam and therefore to the whole human race the instant it became involved in sin through the transgression of our first parents. "So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit" (1 Corinthians 15:42-45).

Adam and Eve were made in the image and after the likeness of God. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Genesis 1:26-28). This image was marred when sin came in, and the whole race has been destitute of that righteousness ever since, except that when each person believes in Christ and thereby is saved, he has appropriated to himself the righteousness. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (1 Corinthians 15:20-23).

The present body which had the sentence of death passed on it has retained its likeness to the devil ever since and shall continue to be identified with death until it dies and is resurrected. The new body in which we are to be resurrected will be different. "But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another" (1 Corinthians 15:35-40). It will be a spiritual body: that is, instead of being a body of flesh and blood as that we now have and are confined to in this natural life's activities, it will be a resurrected body conditioned to spiritual operations. Christ went in and out the doors as did His disciples before His resurrection; but afterwards, He appeared in their midst when the disciples were in a room with the doors barred against the Jews whom they feared and secured them against intruders.

Our bodies will be conditioned to ascend through the air as Jesus did when making His ascension into heaven. No oxygen needs to be provided by human hands as would be necessary today were we contemplating an ascension into outer space, because our new bodies shall be like unto Christ's present body rather than being similar to that

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

FOLLOWING JESUS

"Yea, he loved the people; and his saviour are in thy hand: and they sat down at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy word (Deuteronomy 33:3).

"And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands commend my spirit: . . ." (Luke 23:46)

As you have noticed, I have quoted one verse from the Old Testament and one from the New. The purpose of this is to point out the fact that God's protecting and guiding hand is ever about those who follow Him. The words of Christ on the Cross are all the more significant when we realize that not only His every act of life was under the guiding hand of His Father, but, when His life was over for Him and He was giving His life in death for all the world, He seemed not only willing but anxious to commend His spirit into the hands of God. And you must remember that Christ's life was an example for us to follow after we have received Him as Saviour and Lord.

The following poem will illustrate what I am trying to say:

INTO THY HANDS

Into Thy guiding hands:
Along a way Thy love and care forever,
Gladly I fare, or rough or smooth my way,
The longest road that leads at life's far end,
Into Thy hands.

Into Thy chastening hands:
If e'er I yield to weakness or to sin,
Blind to the guerdon Thou dost bid me win,
Bring Thou me back, by love's sweet discipline,
Into Thy hands.

in which He was crucified. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself" (Philippians 3:20, 21).

To Thy healing hands:
 The hurt of soul or body long enthralled,
 The bruised heart that for Thy succor calls
 When, far from doubting as from fear, it falls
 To Thy hands.
 To Thy hands:
 Despite assail, infirmity, mistake
 A life a perfect whole Thy power can make,

Thou my shards of broken purpose take
 To Thy hands.

To Thy keeping hands:
 As safe as heaven kept the guarded grail—
 As safe, so pure, so compassed as with mail;

My soul committed, e'en through death's dark vale,
 To Thy hands.

To Thy loving hands:
 Who made my heart to love made Thee
 my guest;
 Who made the world to tire made Thee
 my rest;
 My joyful heart I give, at Thy behest,
 To Thy hands.

—Louise Manning Hodgkins.

To be a follower of Christ is a mark of discipleship. He said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: And I give unto them eternal life; . . ." (John 10:27, 28). And David said in the Shepherd Psalm, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever" (Psalm 23:6).

The blessings of God are in abundance for every one who with all the power of His being daily walks with his God, not only in this life, but in the life to come.

And now we only ask to serve,
 We do not ask to rest;
 We would give all without reserve,
 Our life, our love, our best.

We only ask to see His face,
 It is enough for us;
 We only ask the lowest place,
 So He may smile on us.

—Mary E. Townsend.

"For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps"
 (1 Peter 2:21).

MEDITATION VERSE

"The LORD . . . hath . . . respect unto the lowly: but the proud he knoweth afar off" (Psalm 138:6).

Pride is always represented in the Bible as among the most heinous of offenses against God. Greeks and Romans alike magnified a haughty disposition and regarded humility as a mark of weakness. Christianity has reversed the ancient order. Not only have we the example of Him whose life was one whereby He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, we have in His teaching continuous emphasis on the value of humility.—R. J. S.

The saint that wears heaven's brightest crown
In deepest adoration bends;
The weight of glory bows him down
The most when most his soul ascends;
Nearest the throne itself must be
The footstool of humility.

—Choice Gleanings.

TRUE PEACE

True peace of mind does not depend, as some persons seem to suppose, on the external incidents of riches and poverty, of health and sickness, of friendship and enemies. It has no necessary dependence upon society or seclusion; upon dwelling in cities or in the desert . . . Let the heart be right, let it daily be united with the will of God, and we shall be entirely contented with those circumstances in which providence has seen fit to place us, however unpropitious they may be in worldly point of view. He who gains the victory over himself gains victory over all his enemies.—T. C. Upham.

QUOTES

MORE ABOUT THE TELEVISION

I am using more of the tract, "What Is Television Doing to Our Youth?" by Oswald J. Smith, Litt. D. I used part of this tract in a former treatise of the subject. Dr. Smith says: "I do not think that the television can be controlled. If it is in the home, it will be used. Children have been known to use knives on their parents, when their parents insisted on turning it off. Your child will see what he wants to see in spite of what you do. I have never had a set in my home; and if my children were still with me, I would never dream of having one. I think that is the only safe policy.

"These are the last days and we are going to the bottom. Soon we will be on the lowest rung of the ladder and judgment will come. Alcoholism has doubled since television began to feature liquor ads. Robbery and violence is increasing by leaps and bounds. Thirty killings a day have been shown on television in one city, and in another forty-eight; and twenty scenes of violence in a single hour according to Readers Digest. What kind of harvest can we expect."

I certainly agree with Dr. Smith: in fact, I think that we can go further and say that the television reaches those in the age bracket that the theater never reaches. The most vile parent would not think of taking the baby, who is not able to walk, to the theater; however, this baby as soon as it can walk alone is privileged to sit and drink in the scenes that come on the television. These little ones are drinking in the vile grading pictures at a very tender age. I have heard them crying for the entertainment; cry for it to be turned on and cry when it is turned off; thus they get an earlier start to crime and the love of the world than home with the television than in the theater.

So to my mind the television is worse than the so-called movie. As already quoted, Dr. Smith says, "I have never owned a set." Thank God, I can say, I never have owned a set. As stated in a former treatise on this subject: I related the fact that when I was pastor of Ruth's Chapel, that some of my friends planned to give me a set, but I learned of their plan, and refused to accept. I thought that the money could be used for a better purpose, so I was happy to decline and say, "No please."

If you own a television that is your business. I dare not be like some radicals that I have known and heard of, who declare that you are not a Christian if you have a television. These fellows that denounce you and set themselves up as judges and as examples of goodness un-Christianize every one who thinks in different terms from what they think. No I certainly would not judge the owners of television, nor either any other believer who differs in their thinking with me. I desire to let Jesus and His word do the judging.

Paul says, "... God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified to me, and I unto the world" (Galatians 6:14). I do not claim to be good, but I am crucified to both the television and the theater; I have no love for either.

CRITICISMS

I have not written the foregoing just to be criticizing. I am only warning that there is danger in the way which we are traveling. If I owned a television, I certainly would not condemn and cuss Hollywood, for in a large measure the shows on the television are those that are hatched out at Hollywood, according to what I have been told and heard. These are warnings that we will do well to think over and over and do something about the matter.

LOVE NOT THE WORLD

God, through John, says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17).

As said before, "There are good pictures, perhaps, but children rather see the sensational things; therefore, they will seek to see what they like most.

I am afraid that if I owned a television set that I might put more time in watching the shows than in reading my Bible, visiting the sick and in writing for the glory of God.

I often visit homes where they have learned the program pretty well, so well that they know the hour when it will appear. They are ready and do not like to be disturbed during the time of that show. While there are homes where they will turn off and talk about those things that are vitally necessary to our relationship with God the Father. When the television is on I try to turn my face in another direction so as to not see any scene that would detract my mind from that which is holy and good. If it happens to be a worthwhile show I can look on.

THE FLESH AGAINST THE SPIRIT

Paul says, "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace" (Romans 8:2-6).

CONCLUSION

As said before, I do not un-Christianize the man who is able to have a television set; especially if he will not let that television get between him and God, and if he pays his tithes to God and make offerings for the work of the Lord.

I am not the judge of anyone. If you desire to find what we shall be judged by, get your Bible and turn to St. John, twelfth chapter, and read Verses 48-50. Then you might turn to Romans, Chapter 8, and read Verse 12-14.

If anyone differ with me on the subject, I will love you just the same. I will not say that you are not a Christian. I have only expressed what my soul feels. But in reality, if one is more corrupt and more dangerous to our children, I say that the television is worse than the movies. Why? As the danger starts in an earlier age of the child.

The Sinner's Parade

On a Monday morning, some years ago, two young men were sitting together on an interurban train going to New York City. How tired they were. Said one, "I drove my new car to the seashore yesterday. Never will I do it again! You know, when I returned home Sunday night, the traffic was so heavy that we inched along, bumper to bumper, for many miles. Somebody said, 'This is the sinner's parade.' This jeering outburst of disgust stuck in my mind. Of course, we were not all sinners. But I can't get away from the thought of the gayety and frivolity and worldliness of the Lord's-Day-desecrating, God-forgetting and church-forsaking multitude."—Selected.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

THE HAPPY WAY

by Inna Hegel

NEIL MARSH straightened up from weeding the flower bed beside the house. Mom's roses certainly looked a whole lot neater now.

"Neil! Neil!" he heard his brother Dennis' excited voice. Arms and legs swinging wildly, Dennis came running toward him. His red hair tumbled over his forehead. His scrubby face was damp with perspiration. "Know something?" Dennis burst out breathlessly. "Miss Demuth is taking the junior class to Schoenbrunn Thursday. It's the place where the first Christian Indians lived. You can see their arrows and Bibles and everything. The fare is two-fifty round trip on the bus—that's what Jimmy says. Can we go? You got five dollars for taking over Bobby Weinland's paper route when he was sick last week."

"I haven't got five dollars now," said Neil.

"You mean you spent it all?"

"Only 50 cents," said Neil. "Yesterday was Sunday."

"What's Sunday got to do with it?"

"Fifty cents went to God," Neil explained. "Mom and Dad always tithe. We should too."

The quick tears sprang into Dennis' eyes. "That's not fair."

"Look," Neil said. "I can give you two-fifty. You can go with the class if Mom and Dad say you may."

"Aw, it wouldn't be any fun without you." Dennis kicked at a pebble on the ground. He looked up. "S'pose Mom would give us the extra fifty cents?"

Neil shook his head. "I wouldn't ask Mom. Dad only got back to work today after being laid off a month. Besides, I was going to make a payment on my bike."

Dennis sat down on the grass, his shoulders hunched, his face glum. "What's the sense of giving to God? God doesn't give anything to us."

"Don't say that," Neil said, "God's given us a good Mom and Dad, plenty to eat and a nice home. Why, we've got everything!"

"Boys!" Mother called from the back porch. "Uncle Ralph is here. He wants to take you to his farm for a few days."

"Wow!" Neil picked up his weeder and trowel in a hurry.

Dennis rose slowly from the grass. "What's so good about that? Betcha we'll pick berries in the hot sun just like we did last year."

Neil laughed, hugging his arm about his brother's shoulders. "That's fun. Shortcake tastes mighty good, you know. So does jam."

In the kitchen their Uncle Ralph greeted them boisterously. "Pack your duds, youngsters. Just jeans, shirts and pajamas, mind you. The truck's outside. We'll be at the farm long before sun-down."

The boys packed their battered suitcase quickly. Mom saw them to the truck. "Be good, you two. Help Uncle Ralph and Aunt Janice all you can."

Neil leaned back to enjoy the ride in the rumbling farm truck. The fresh summer air blew in at their faces. Soon they'd be at the farm with the sheep, the white-faced Herefords, the chickens and the long rolling acres of wheat, soybeans and corn.

At four o'clock they reached the white clapboard farmhouse. Aunt Janice, plump and redcheeked as an apple, met them at the door. "My favorite nephews," she exclaimed. "How glad I am to see you! Wearing your jeans, I see. That's good. There's a whole two hours before supper. How would you boys like to pick strawberries for tonight's shortcake?"

"What'd I tell you?" Dennis whispered.

Neil nudged his brother into silence. "Sure, Aunt Janice. Where are the pails?"

The pails on their arms, the boys trudged through the sweet-smelling clover to the berry patch. Dennis lost his sour mood when he saw the ripe red fruit. They were about the biggest, sweetest berries ever. Their pails were almost full when they heard a thundering motor overhead. They looked up and saw a plane dipping lower and lower until it landed in the field back of the barn.

"A plane!" Dennis yelled. "Let's go see it."

The pails clutched in their hands, they ran toward the barn. Uncle Ralph was already greeting the pilot climbing from the cockpit. "Jack Woods! Right on the nose, as usual. Meet our nephews, Neil and Dennis."

"Hi, boys," said the pilot. "Going to watch me spray tomorrow?"

"Spray? From a plane?" Dennis asked.

"Farmers are getting modern, Dennis. You'll have to get up early to see it though. Cooler in the morning and more moisture on the plants. Less spray is wasted."

"I wish we could fly with you when you spray," said Dennis.

Uncle Ralph laughed. "A spraying operation would hardly be a pleasant trip, Dennis. To spray, Jack will wear a waterproof suit, helmet and gloves. A mask and respirator will protect his face and lungs."

"Oh!" said Dennis in a disappointed voice.

Jack Woods bent down. "No reason why you two can't take a flight with me now. I'm bound for New Philadelphia with a shipment of your uncle's eggs. Come along. I'll have you back in an hour."

"Here, I'll take your pails and tell Aunt Janice to start dinner a little later," said Uncle Ralph.

Dennis and Neil climbed eagerly into the cockpit beside the pilot. Jack Woods said "Fasten your seat belts." He was already busy with the controls. The motor turned over in a resounding roar. Off they bumped across the pasture. Soon they were airborne. Fields became neat checkerboards of brown and green below them. Houses looked like toys. Roads resembled strips of yellow.

Jack Woods shouted above the roar of the motor, "Great, isn't it?"

The boys nodded eagerly. Neil was wishing the trip would never end. He felt like a bird with wings.

Once Jack Woods banked sharply and pointed to a settlement of small log cabins below. "That's the Schoenbrunn State Memorial Park," he said. "First settlement in Ohio of Christian Indians."

Dennis and Neil glanced curiously down. They could see the cabins, a church, a schoolhouse, a tall monument. It was a real bird's-eye view. Miss Demuth's class would walk around the settlement on Thursday but they were seeing Schoenbrunn from the air. They landed at New Philadelphia where Uncle Ralph's eggs were delivered. A boy waved to them from his perch on a fence. Again they roared up into the sky. Soon the plane was speeding toward Uncle Ralph's fields to bump along the ground and stop right back of the barn. The boys unfastened their safety belts.

"Thank you, Mr. Woods," said Dennis.

"We'll never forget that ride," Neil added gratefully.

Uncle Ralph walked to meet them. He shook his hat at the pilot already preparing to take off. "Planes certainly help a farmer," he said, replacing his hat on his head.

Whortonsville, S. C.—"As Bound with Them" was the theme used the World Day of Prayer services held at Concord Church, Florence, South Carolina, Friday afternoon, March 4. The service was sponsored by the Bethel Woman's Auxiliary of Whortonsville, South Carolina, with Merritt and Florence communities taking part.

Mrs. Mate Lupton gave the devotional taken from Matthew 6:1-13. Mrs. Sara Lupton, program-prayer chairman, led the call to prayer and gave a talk on the meaning of prayer and its importance of everyday living.

Mrs. Grace Whorton of Bethel Auxiliary led Topic 1, "Understanding the Opposition," with Scripture, John 15:18-25, being read responsively. Topic 2, "Sharing the Burdens," was led by Mrs. Beulah Williams of Florence, whose responsive Scripture reading was Galatians 6:2-10. Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Williams of Merritt brought Topic 3, "Helping to Bring the Victory." Acts 12:1-11 was her Scripture reading which was read responsively also. Mrs. Bertha Siverthorn of Bethel Auxiliary was the leader of Topic 4, "Trusting for Triumph." Her topic was based on Scripture reading, Revelation 7:9-17.

Following each topic prayers were offered for those in Russia, China and in Moslem lands who do not have freedom of worship and are suffering for the gospel's sake. Prayer of petition was also offered for Christians that they may be more compassionate to non-Christians and may understand the motive and feelings that underlie the hatred of the world.

Only Talking About It

Some years ago a convention was held in Indianapolis to discuss the topic, "How to Reach the Masses." After listening for hours to discussions about methods of reaching sin-sick souls, a young man, filled with zeal to reach the multitudes, could take it no longer. He dashed from the auditorium, stood on a street corner where the milling multitudes passed by, and began to proclaim the glorious gospel of Christ! A crowd gathered. Spiritually hungry people listened intently as the young man spoke of the mightiness and ready willingness of Christ to transform lives, and give peace to troubled hearts.—Selected.

Home Missions Newsletter

Dear Friend of Missions:

"For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man buildeth on the foundation gold, silver, costly stones, wood, hay, stubble; Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it. . . ." (1 Corinthians 3:11-13).

The church's one foundation is Jesus Christ, her Lord, not a modernized Christ, stripped of His deity and atoning work, but the true Christ, who died for the sins of the people and was raised again for their justification. There are those today who would lay a new foundation for the church. Christ crucified to them is foolishness, as it was to the Greeks of Paul's day. Thank God for those who still believe and preach that the only way is the blood-bought way. It is sadly true that some who build on the true foundation use shoddy materials: wood, hay and stubble. They seem to think that cheap sensationalism, and bombastic preaching will take the place for a real Bible ministry—preaching the whole counsel.

Vacation Bible school time is here. Many churches will be giving their offering again this year for National Home Missions. Write us for tree material for use in your school. Last year, scores of churches were blessed as they taught mission classes and gave offerings for our missionaries in all parts of North America.

Our mission conferences and week-end mission revivals are proving real blessings. If you would like to sponsor such a meeting in your area write for details and dates.

You will notice that gifts to National Home Missions has been very low the past two months. Have you written? Please don't fail our men, women and children who are on the fields preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Will you write today and send your missionary gift?

Yours for Christ and Missions,

Attention, Free Will Baptists of South Carolina

The state Home Mission Board of South Carolina would appreciate the names and addresses of Free Will Baptists in the state of South Carolina who are living in areas where there are not Free Will Baptist churches for them to attend. We are very much interested in assisting in organizing new Free Will Baptist churches in these places. We believe that there are many areas in South Carolina where there are enough Free Will Baptist people to organize new churches for the glory of God and the salvation of precious souls. But it is necessary that we know where they are and who to contact to carry on the work successfully. Please mail these names and addresses to Rev. Clarence E. Lambert, Home Mission Director, for the state of South Carolina, at 104 Fleming Street, Darlington, South Carolina.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, it has pleased an all-wise Providence to call to his reward our brother Jim Langely, we the members of Piney Grove Church, Pitt County, North Carolina, realizing our loss, submit the following resolutions:

First, that though we are saddened by his passing, we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father.

Second, that we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathy, and point them to God and the church for consolation and comfort in their bereavement.

Third, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the family, a copy to the Free Will Baptist Press at Ayden and a copy for the minutes of the church.

Jesus, The Master Teacher

(Lesson for April 3)

on: Matthew 5:1, 2, 17-20; 9:14-17.

den Text: Matthew 4:23.

INTRODUCTION

Careful reading of these verses reveals Jesus went up in the mountain to separate Himself from the multitude. The sermon on the Mount was given not to the multitude but to the disciples. Although we feel sure that there were many beside the disciples who heard the sermon.

"He went up into a mountain." The mountain played an important part in the life of Jesus and all Scripture. Jesus was crucified on a mountain, crucified on a mountain, and ascended back to heaven from a mountain. Can you think of other important incidents in Scripture that took place on a mountain?

Go through the Beatitudes and try to think of a person who exemplifies the various traits listed there. We may single out Frances of Assisi, who 'poor in spirit'; George Washington Carver, the great Negro agriculturist, who was 'meek'; Joan of Arc, who was pure in heart; the mediator of the Jew-Arab problem, Ralph Bunche, who is a modern peacemaker; the great numbers of Christians who are today being persecuted for righteousness sake in China and behind the Iron Curtain. He was condemned before them, for he was their living embodiment."—Selected.

—The Bible Student 1952 (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. Often Jesus was in the midst of throngs of people. His heart went out to the hungry, shepherdless multitudes (cf. Matthew 9:6-13; 15:32). His concern for the multitudes, however, didn't lessen His concern for the individual (cf. John 3:2, 3; 4:7-13; 8:11).

2. The Iron Curtain. Seek as we may, we find it impossible to find one person who perfectly symbolizes the Beatitudes. There was one and only one, He who spoke the Beatitudes. Both the law and the prophets pointed to Christ, and for this reason they could not be broken (Vs. 17).

3. The law was fulfilled to the smallest detail by the only One who was able to do so—the Lord Jesus (Vs. 18).

4. To teach a proper understanding of the law will lead to an appreciation of it and not to disrespect for it (Vs. 19).

5. The righteousness which is acceptable before God is not produced by an attempt to keep the law, but by faith in Christ (Vs. 20).

6. It is possible to do frequent fasting and yet to be as self-righteous as the Pharisees were (9:14).

7. The Bridegroom has been taken away and there are times when the church is in need of fasting (Vs. 15).

8. The attempt to patch up an old and worn-out life with the patch of a noble resolution will only make matters worse (Vs. 16).

9. It is a serious mistake to attempt to live under the law when we have been saved by grace (Vs. 17).

10. It takes the presence and the power of the Lord Jesus to bring healing and deliverance from sin (4:23). — The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The older classes will readily acknowledge, at the opening of this lesson, that all men have certain standards in life, and given ideals. These standards may be low or high; they may be derived from a knowledge of some other noble person, or some instruction that has been given, some code that has been passed on in business circles, or, best of all, they may be taken from the One who lived that perfect life, the Lord Jesus. Christ came, however, to save us from (out of) our sins; hence the Christian life comes not in terms of an attainment, but as an obtainment. Peter declares that we are to follow Christ's steps (footprints), not in His steps, for the preposition is not found in the original since this would represent an impossibility, for none ever walked as He walked (1 Peter 2:21). The apostle, Paul, said that for him to live was Christ, and the life which he lived, he lived by the indwelling Saviour (Galatians 2:20). Millions of people in Germany, idolizing Hitler, committed unspeakable crimes at his behest. It makes a difference from whom we get our ideals. The ideal life for a child of God is set forth here by the Son of God.—Peloubet's Select Notes.

The truths stated in the paragraph above are applicable to every lesson in this quarter. Please keep them in mind.

2. Jesus, therefore, said that our righteousness must be greater than that of the scribes and Pharisees or else we shall not get to heaven. Our righteousness must be greater in real faith in Christ and His Word, in sincere love for God and one another, in true repentance of sin, in the assurance of the forgiveness of sins and salvation by grace through faith, and in moral goodness as evidence of the reality of our profession. But unless our religion is more than mere religious activities, however great and numerous they may be, we are no better and no nearer the will of God and heaven than were those scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites whom Jesus condemned. What we must have to find His favor is Christ in us, the hope of glory!—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

3. Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

This was what the Pharisees were charging against Jesus. They thought He was not the kind of a Messiah the Old Testament had predicted. Instead of pomp and circumstance, He was unbelievably humble. Instead of armies and military might, He resorted to teaching and healing. Thus, they felt, He was destroying the prophets. Furthermore, He was not keeping the traditions of the Pharisees who claimed the sole prerogative of teaching and demonstrating the law. They charged that this destroyed the law. They overlooked the fact that the Old Testament had predicted that the Messiah would bring God's final revelation.—The Standard Commentary.

4. All that was needed, on the part of the hearer, to understand Jesus' teachings was practical reasoning. Many times His truths were so plain and simple that the people failed to see them. He taught and spoke to the common, average man.

It is not practical to put new patches on an old garment. Christ was not building a new principle upon an old foundation. When He ended the Sermon on the Mount, He referred to the wise man who builds his house upon the sure foundation: namely, Christ Jesus. "No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment, for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse" (Vs. 16). In essence, things which do not harmonize should not be put together. The thoughtful hearer could know that He was claiming authority over the Old Testament law. The gospel was not a patch sewed onto the law.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

Stories for Boys and Girls

"All of us pitched together and bought this plane. We share it for quick express service, for spraying, for seeding, spreading fertilizer and inspecting our crops and soil erosion."

"I want to be a farmer," Dennis said.

Uncle Ralph smiled. "You've made a good start," he declared. "Aunt Janice says that you and your brother are the speediest berrypickers on the farm. You picked six quarts in no time at all."

In the big kitchen, Aunt Janice had dinner waiting. There was shortcake on the table, topped by ripe red berries and smothered under heavy cream. A dollar lay at each boy's plate.

"What's this for?" Dennis asked.

Aunt Janice patted his wind-blown hair. "I sold one pail of your berries to a customer who happened by. She wanted strawberries in a hurry and she paid two dollars. You boys did the picking and if you pick more tomorrow, maybe we can sell some more."

Neil shoved the dollar toward his aunt. She picked it up and tucked the money firmly in his shirt pocket. "We pay berrypickers, why not our own nephews? Eat, boys, you must be hungry from your work and the ride."—My Pleasure.

ST. CLAIRE BIBLE CLASS

5. When Jesus speaks of the law, He is referring to the ceremonial law God gave to Moses, which came to an end when John the Baptist began his ministry. Acts 15 records an attempt to put the old patch of ceremonialism on the new garment of Christianity.

6. To further emphasize this important point, He spoke of putting new wine into old bottles. When new wineskins were filled with new or unfermented wine, they would stretch as the wine fermented. Afterwards they hardened, and if used again for new wine, since they could stretch no more, they would crack and burst open. The message of Jesus that salvation is obtained by grace through faith, and not as a result of works, was a new doctrine and the old ways of life and worship could not contain nor express it. The new message would be lost and wasted if His disciples tried to live in the old ways.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

Mr. Kelly Pait

On September 10, 1959, as the day was coming to a close, Brother Kelly Pait of near Bladenboro, North Carolina, made ready to attend church at White Oak Free Will Baptist Church about three miles away. He was riding his wheel, as was his custom part of the time. As he approached the suburb of Bladenboro, not far from the church, he was struck down by a passing car whose driver failed to give Mr. Pait his right of way, and as a result he was fatally injured. He was rushed to the hospital where all was done for him that doctors and loving friends could do. He lingered until September 14, enduring with so much patience, thanking everyone for even the smallest kindness shown and with bitterness toward no one, said, "Let the Lord's will be done." Then just past midday he gently slipped away.

It was a shock to his relatives and friends, but we know the Lord makes no mistakes. So we look forward to meeting him again where pain is unknown.

Kelly, as he was known to most of us, was a faithful member of White Oak Church for many years. He was the type of person who really enjoyed helping others when the opportunity presented itself, and his friendly smile and helping hand will be sorely missed.

A wife and two children are left behind: Kathy, seven years old, and John Kelly Jr., three years old. Also surviving are two brothers, David and Stanley.

Funeral services were conducted in his home church and interment followed in the Oak Grove Cemetery.

Kelly, we think of you
Not as dead today,
But that you have
Gently slipped away.

We feel that one day
In that heavenly land,
We shall see you again
And clasp your hand.

We like Him shall be
In that marvelous clime,
As we sing His praise
Around the throne divine.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas our heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom and mercy has seen fit to call from our midst our sister and co-laborer Mrs. Irene Jackson, on December 3, 1959,

We, the members of the Lela Noble Circle of the Winterville, North Carolina Woman's Auxiliary, desire to submit the following resolutions:

First, we pray God's richest blessings on each of her family; that while we grieve with the family in their loss we can commend them to our heavenly Father for comfort and consolation.

Second, we desire to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved sister. She was loyal and faithful member and was always present whenever her health would permit. We shall miss her presence and her cheerful smile and shall always cherish her memory.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Free Will Baptist for publication, a copy be sent to the family and a copy for the minutes of our woman's auxiliary.

God Will Be There!

The phone rang in the office of the church where President Franklin D. Roosevelt usually attended. "Are you expecting the President in church Sunday?" "That, cannot promise," replied the rector, "but we expect God to be there, and that should be incentive enough for you to be there!"—Selected.

D.V.B.S. MATERIALS

C. H. Overman

We are happy to announce that the "Flame of the Spirit" series of daily vacation Bible school materials, for 1960, will be available on or near April 1. This is the fourth in a series of daily vacation Bible school materials which will cover the entire Bible. "Flame of the Spirit" is a continuation of the overall theme of Light. The first series was "Rising Sun"; the second series was "Bright and Morning Star"; the third series was "Lamp of Faith."

As in the three previous years, extreme care has been taken this year to see that all materials are true to the Bible from the fundamental point of view.

"FLAME OF THE SPIRIT" SUBJECT MATERIAL

The series for 1960 goes to the New Testament for a study in the book of Acts. The pupils will study the lives of the early apostles and the work they did for God in the Early Church. A great deal of the writings is concerned with the miracles which they performed. The pupils will study about Peter, John, James, Stephen, Philip, Saul, Silas, Barnabas and others.

"FLAME OF THE SPIRIT" WRITERS

Much credit and recognition should go to the writers of the "Flame of the Spirit" series of daily vacation Bible school literature. These writers are actually responsible for bringing the materials into being. We introduce them as follows:

Nursery: Mrs. Aliee Barrow, wife of the Reverend N. Bruce Barrow, Ayden, North Carolina.

Beginners: Mrs. Dorothy Phillips, wife of the Reverend Chester Phillips, Smithfield, North Carolina.

Primaries: Mrs. Helen T. Beaman, elementary public school teacher, Snow Hill, North Carolina.

Juniors: The Reverend Earl Glenn, pastor of Wilson Free Will Baptist Church, Wilson, North Carolina.

Intermediates: The Reverend Durward Long, Wheaton, Illinois.

Illustrators: Elwood Kennedy, employed as illustrator at the Free Will Baptist Press; Mrs. Carolyn B. Elliott, Greensboro, North Carolina, a former employee; Tommy Manning, Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, a former employee.

Special recognition must also be given to Mrs. Annette Braxton, Winterville, North Carolina, for the faithful work which she has done in arranging the music for this series. Again this year, we are offering a separate song book to go along with the general theme.

"FLAME OF THE SPIRIT" MATERIALS

Materials are provided for five departments: Nursery, Ages 2, 3; beginners, Ages 4, 5 and preschool 6; primaries, Ages 6-8; juniors, Ages 9-11; intermediates, Ages 12-15. Study course books are recommended for adult groups.

Teacher's Manuals: Prepared for each department which carry specific directions for the activities of each group throughout the daily session. Some of the things given are: Suggestions for conducting and teaching, materials needed, daily schedule, closing exercises, etc.

Director's Manual: Designed to give specific instructions, every phase of daily vacation Bible school administration, beginning with the initial phase of planning and continuing through evaluation at the close of the school. It also contains the daily schedule of each department, so that the director can know the activities each during any hour of the school. A list of materials and their prices are also given for each department.

Work Packets: The beginner and nursery departments will have only the work packet for the pupils. The packets contain cutouts and take-home projects for the children. Complete instructions for using them are given in the teacher's manuals.

Take-Home Packets: The primary and junior departments will have a packet containing a take-home project for each day.

Workbooks: The primary, junior and intermediate departments will have a workbook for each pupil. They contain work which will require the pupils to search the Scriptures for answers.

Projects: All projects and suggested activities are based on and related to the Acts of the Apostles.

Introductory Kit: The introductory kit for this series will be ready for sale around April 1. The kit will include one copy of each manual, work packet and workbook described above and an order blank for materials needed by your school. The price of the kit is $3.15.

Publicity Materials: The publicity items include (1) a publicity poster for advertising the school; (2) handbills to be distributed in homes; (3) post cards to be mailed to prospective pupils; (4) headbands to be worn by pupils in the parade; (5) buttons to be worn by pupils; (6) name tags for pupils during school.

We believe that every Free Will Baptist church which has a daily vacation Bible school should use these materials. We believe they will serve as a challenge to the pupils and we believe if properly used they will be a blessing to your church.

"I Am Too Wicked"

DON'T DESERVE to be saved!"

This was the reaction of a man powerfully convinced of his personal depravity. He had heard the plan of salvation explained but misunderstood the extent of available pardon. "I'm too wicked for God to forgive," he complained at his parting from the person who sought to introduce him to the Saviour.

The man returned home in great distress of mind. If only he could believe that God would save the likes of him. But he was too unworthy.

With those thoughts in mind he fell on his bunk. After a period of restlessness he fell asleep and dreamed. He beheld himself standing outside heaven watching various companies of the saints march in. A glorious host approached singing triumphantly and waving banners of victory. When they entered the celestial city the dreamer and them welcomed with a joyous ovation.

"Who were those people?" the dreamer asked of an angel at the gate.

"Those are the goodly fellowship of prophets. They have gone to be with God." Sorrowfully the man muttered, "I am not a prophet. I can never be a prophet. Alas, I cannot enter heaven."

Shortly afterward another host appeared and passed through Paradise's pearly portals. They, too, were greeted with shouts of welcome.

"Who are they?" the man inquired.

The angel answered, "Those are the goodly fellowship of the apostles."

Again the dreamer sighed, "I can never go on to their fellowship. I cannot enter in."

The next multitude was identified to the dreamer as the noble army of the martyrs. His despondency grew as he whined, "I cannot go in with them. I cannot wave their banners of victory."

Another host approached. "These," explained the angel, "are the Godly ministers and workers of the churches." Again the dreamer recognized he did not belong among them. As the echo of the latter hosts' welcome was abating the dreamer beheld himself about to depart. Then he saw a larger company than all the others put together. They approached, marching victoriously and singing gloriously. And the dreamer marvelled that he could recognize some in the company. There in the forefront came the dying thief who grasped a prayer as he hung next to Christ on the cross. Beside him marched the woman taken in the very act of sin whose stoning the Saviour stopped, and others with equally unsavory pasts.

by Raymond L. Cox

"There will be no shouting for this crowd," thought the dreamer, "when they enter heaven." But to his amazement the ovation greeting this last company's arrival was sevenfold more thunderous and jubilant than the shouts which welcomed those who preceded.

The angel then addressed the dreamer, "This last multitude comprises the mighty sinners saved by mighty grace."

The dreamer awoke exclaiming confidently, "Blessed be God. I can go into heaven with them!"

The world is full of sinners who do not deserve to be saved. But no one is too wicked for God to forgive.

No one deserves to be saved. All are unworthy of pardon. But where sin abounds, there does grace much more abound (Romans 5:20). What is grace? The stereotyped answer defines it as "God's unmerited favor." A more complete definition would be "God's unmerited favor operating in spite of demerit." God will save to the uttermost. And God does save from the guttermost. Some of heaven's most renowned citizens have been dredged from the muck and mire of the sewer of sin. John Newton was a slave trader. John Bunyan was a blasphemer. Augustine was a profligate. A man whose unsavory past may be etched with indelible ink on the police records of earth can testify upon his conversion, "I am a man without a past." God not only forgives, he also forgets. Of the redeemed he has announced, ". . . their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more" (Hebrews 8:12). The redeemed believer is a man without a past, but a man with a marvelous future.

Christian witnesses even in apostolic times must have encountered a hesitation on the part of some inquirers to embrace the gospel on the grounds of overwhelming personal unworthiness. For Paul wrote to Timothy, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief. Howbeit, for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting" (1 Timothy 1:15, 16).

Paul here claims for himself the dishonorable designation as the world's worst sinner. He remembered his past persecution of the church, his complicity in the stoning of Stephen, his brutal inquisition against Christians. He acknowledges himself to be the chief of sinners. Yet, exults Paul, God saved me. He saved the chief sinner. Therefore, he will save any sinner. My conversion, implies the apostle, is a pattern to furnish hope to the most degraded wretch on the lowest rung of the ladder of depravity.

Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners! A man may never be a prophet, never be an apostle, never be an ecclesiastical leader, never be a martyr. But any individual can enter heaven in the company of the monuments to mighty grace! Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance.

One day Anderson was tortured and tormented by recollections of his ungodly past. "How unworthy I am," he sighed. "How sinful I am."

As he brooded, however, a happier thought invaded his mind. He spoke to himself aloud, "Anderson, make yourself as black as you may. Still you cannot make yourself more than a sinner. And the gospel is for such as you are—for sinners!"

The invitation to salvation is extended to all men. Some sinners are down and out. Others are up and out. Some have descended to the depths of depravity. Others' iniquities appear quite respectable. The offer of the gospel includes the high and the low and everybody in between. Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28). He invited all men. The last appeal of the Bible is likewise universally addressed. "And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say,

Starting Over

by Raymond Riggs

IT WAS A VERY COLD Sunday morning with flying clouds and a biting wind as we approached the gray shingled Veteran's Hall on Cromwell Road in Norfolk, Virginia, for our first service in the official capacity as pastor. About the only indication that this building was being used for church purposes was the church sign in front of the building. Already a few cars were parked on the ground. It was kinda nice to be going to church with my family on this day. For over six years I had been traveling in the interest of our foreign mission work, and actually it was a treat for all of us to be together.

What would it be like? We all wondered. Would we like the people? Would they like us? My wife and I agreed that it was like starting over, and we remembered some twenty years ago when a very small group in Highland Park, Michigan, met in a rented store building and began what is today the largest church in our denomination. We also remembered the many who found Christ, and have entered into full-time Christian service and especially those who are on the foreign mission field. We admit, we also thought of the other opportunities we had before coming to Norfolk, especially the one with a big brick church and parsonage. But, this seemed to be God's will for us now, so here we are.

Well, we had fifty-three in Sunday school that first Sunday, and about sixty-five for the preaching service. That was about four months ago, and last Sunday, March 6, we held our first service in the small church building located at 4014 Little Creek Road with whom we have merged, and in spite of severe cold weather and snow, we had one hundred and nine in Sunday school and one hundred and twenty-eight for the morning worship. I believe that we could double our attendance in thirty days if we had the space. We are making payments on a church lot, and we are so grateful to those dear friends who have sent contributions to help pay for the land. We have paid almost one thousand dollars in the last two months. Just as soon as possible, we would like to start our building. We have been praying about selling bonds to finance the new building. Please pray with us regarding this matter. We do not expect a mushroom growth, but, we are trusting for a steady, healthy growth, both numerically and spiritually.

God has given us souls, but, the harvest at large lies waiting. Not only here in Norfolk, Virginia, but, throughout the world. Let us pray for laborers.

Beginning March 1, our church will give 10% of our regular income to denominational enterprises as a minimum of our giving.

THE MAIL BOX

REQUEST FOR PRAYER

"I would like for you to announce in The Free Will Baptist about my husband's illness, the Rev. J. T. Quick. He suffered a heart attack on Saturday night, February 27, then three days later he suffered the second attack. We rushed him the hospital where he stayed eleven days. We have him at home now but he is still in a dangerous condition. He has to stay in bed for six to eight weeks and is not to talk or worry.

"We ask everyone that reads our paper and hears about our needs, to pray much for his recovery and our needs. We need the prayers of God's children to help us carry our load, but God is able to walk beside us in every trying moment.

"I would like for all that feels led to send him get-well cards and write to him; that will cheer him so much and me too. Pray for us."—Mrs. J. T. Quick, Route 3, Hartselle, Alabama.

DESIRES CHRISTIAN WORK

"Sometime ago you printed my plea in The Free Will Baptist for Christian work. It has been a great blessing to me, but I still want more work to do. Will you please print this plea again for me?"

"In 1957 the Lord called me to preach the gospel, and in April, 1958, I was licensed to preach; but due to illness I have not been ordained. At the present time my health is good and I am thinking about going before the ordaining council this year. I am seeking Christian work, such as prayer meetings, auxiliary meetings, evangelist work, etc. I need this work and love it with all my heart. There is nothing else I had rather do than to work for the up-building of God's Kingdom. I am open for service except April 11-15. My home church is Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church, Kenly, North Carolina. I will go anywhere within miles of Kenly."—Talmage Nichols, Route 1, Kenly, North Carolina.

FREE WILL BAPTIST SCRAPBOOK

"I have been taking The Free Will Baptist for some time. I enjoy reading it very much. I look forward each week to a new paper. I am starting a Free Will Baptist scrapbook with all the worthwhile things from each paper. That way I have them in one big book. In years to come the book will be a comfort to me and others. I just can't destroy all of those wonderful blessings. I am also saving each story to make a book for my granddaughter. It will make real good reading for her when she is older. She is only four now. May God help you to keep The Free Will Baptist rolling each week."—Mrs. James R. Baker, Route 1, Box 258, Fountain, North Carolina.

RESIGNS PASTORATE

"The Rev. James Lupton has resigned after six fruitful years, the pastorate of Spring Hope Free Will Baptist Church, Craven County, North Carolina. During the time he has served as pastor, the church has added three new Sunday school rooms, renovated the old building and added a vestibule. The church has gone from quarter-time to half-time service. We recommend him to any church desiring his services. Brother Lupton may be contacted at his home address, Route 3, Box 190, Vanceboro, North Carolina."—Spring Hope Church.

CHURCH NEEDS PASTOR

"Will you please place an article in the Free Will Baptist paper for me, as I am clerk of Liberty Free Will Baptist Church, Jacksonville, Florida. Our pastor has resigned and we are looking for another. We need a man that is a good leader as the church has gone down so low in attendance. The church is full time, but the pastor will have to work for a while, until the church builds up. You may contact me at the address given."—Mrs. Edna Pinkson, 3005 W. Fifth Street, Jacksonville, Florida.

Serving Others

Unselfishness is reactionary. No man can spend his life in helping others without being helped himself. There are no more miserable people on earth than those who are continually thinking of and planning for self. And the opposite is just as true. The happiest ones are those who are continually seeking opportunities to serve others.—Selected.

History of

Mount Olive Junior College

OUT OF THE PAST

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH in North Carolina, founded in Chowan County in 1727 by Paul Palmer, was a pioneer or "freewill" in belief.

Despite that early appearance in the state, however, Free Will Baptists in North Carolina had no program of education until 1896 when a seminary was founded in Ayden, North Carolina. The Ayden Seminary later grew into Eureka College, an institution which provided training for many leaders of the denomination until its destruction by fire in 1931.

After that disastrous loss, a small band of pioneers continued to urge in the Free Will Baptist State Convention the necessity for an institution of higher learning in North Carolina. In 1951 the convention authorized a board of Christian education to obtain a charter for a junior college. Out of that movement, there grew in 1952 an institute located at Cragmont—the Free Will Baptist Assembly grounds near Asheville—under the direction of the Reverend Lloyd Vernon. The school was called Mount Allen College, taking its name from the mountain under the shadow of which it was founded.

However, in September, 1953, the institute was moved to Mount Olive, North Carolina, where buildings were available nearer the center of Free Will Baptist strength in the state. Under the leadership of an enthusiastic board of directors elected by the State Convention and led by chairman, David W. Hansley, plans were made to develop a junior college offering liberal arts and business education.

The Reverend W. Burkette Raper of Snow Hill was elected president in the summer of 1954. The buildings were renovated and made suitable for the temporary needs of a small college, and in September the first collegiate year began with an enrollment of twenty-two students.

In 1956 the name, Mount Allen College, gave way to the less confusing Mount Olive Junior College, in recognition of the permanent settlement of the college in the Mount Olive community. In that same year plans for an enlarged campus and more permanent buildings were launched. A new fifty-acre campus near the present one was purchased and an experienced architectural firm was retained to assist in the orderly development of this property.

The administration of the college, however, wisely decided that the academic development of the college should receive priority over buildings. In the fall of 1956, a bid for accreditation was received favorably by the North Carolina College Conference. The following year the conference, upon recommendation of its committee on standards, approved the college; and after the required year of observation, the college was accredited in November, 1958.

THROUGH THE PRESENT

In December, 1959, Mount Olive Junior College was approved by the committee on admission to membership of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for a formal visit from the association during 1960. The entire program of the college has been carefully studied and developed to meet the standards of the Southern Association.

The administration and board of directors have continued to study plans for the development of the new campus. The present campus, now utilized to its fullest capacity, is serving as an excellent education laboratory for the crystallization of a philosophy and curricula which will find expression in future buildings. The development of adequate endowment funds is also a matter of vital concern to the administration, and progress in this direction is being realized.

INTO THE FUTURE

The stated long-range goals of the college include expansion to senior status as rapidly as is consistent with financial progress and sound educational practice. It is the deepest desire of the college to serve educationally and vocationally both the churches to which it owes its existence and the community which has received it with generosity. However, the college aspires to operate only in those areas in which it can offer instruction of a quality sufficient to make it an ornament to its state and an eternal blessing to those whom it serves.

The only way we can save our faith is to teach it, and it was for this purpose that Mount Olive Junior College was called into being. The founding fathers chartered the college upon three fundamental principles:

1. The college should be Christian in its philosophy, personnel, and program;
2. The college should be true to the faith and heritage of Free Will Baptists;
3. The college should be academically sound.

It was upon these principles that Mount Olive Junior College was established; and by them it is still guided; and in fidelity to them it faces the future with confidence.

Do You Read The Scriptures?

"Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39).

In speaking of the Scriptures Jesus could not include the New Testament, for that was not yet written. Jesus tells the Jews, who would not believe His Word, that the Old Testament, which they accept as the Word of eternal life, testifies of Him. They are to search the Scriptures to see whether He speaks the truth.

We still have the Old Testament with its testimony of the Messiah who was to come. But the testimony of Jesus has been greatly enriched by the word of the apostles in the New Testament.

The people of the church generally accept this whole testimony of Christ, both that of the Old Testament and that of the New. In it they think they have eternal life. Yet we might imagine the Lord speaking to us and saying: "Ye believe that the Scriptures testify of Me, that they are the words of eternal life; but you do not search them as you ought to do. You spend too little time reading them. You do not become familiar with them. Of many books of the Bible you know almost nothing. That is why you do not know Me better than you do and why your joy in Me is not full." Does this apply to me?—Selected.

College Objectives Clarified

A special committee of the faculty of the Bible College recently recommended some public clarification of its objectives.

The recommendation, adopted by unanimous vote of the faculty February 29, reads: "Recommend that it be made part of the policy of Free Will Baptist Bible College to offer courses and curricula to attract young people interested in more efficient service for Christ in areas of life not generally considered as professional Christian work.

"We wish it understood that this policy in no way considered by us as being contrary to our charter. We feel it to be merely a broadening of interpretation. We do want it understood that we feel our Bible-centered emphasis can be preserved with such a broadened curriculum. We feel nothing should be done to counteract that emphasis, and that the implementation of such courses of study as might be added will be contingent on getting personnel qualified to maintain our emphasis."

Robert Picirilli, committee chairman, explained that this formal clarification was needed because of the impression which is often gained that the Bible College is only for preachers and missionaries. It is perhaps possible that the college has contributed to that impression in a lack of a wide variety of offerings to attract young people who are not led into full-time Christian service.

The committee and administration feel that the college should increase and expand its curriculum so as to offer courses of study which will also appeal to Christian young people who are interested in being above-average usefulness in making their lives count for Christ but who have not been called into the ministry.

College Progressing Toward Accreditation

The Board of Directors of Mount Olive College, in a special session, have been brought up to date by President W. Burkette Raper on the progress of the college toward meeting the standards for accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools this fall.

"Mount Olive College can become the first college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination to achieve regional accreditation, the highest academic recognition awarded by accrediting agencies," President Raper told the board. "The faculty has devoted much time and study toward this goal, and I am sure we can meet the requirements during 1960," he said.

President Raper predicted that gifts to the college, which have already exceeded $50,000 since July 1, will set a new record during the present fiscal year which ends June 30. Then the president challenged the board by saying: "Without decreasing income to the general fund, we must find money for new buildings. We only need two million dollars for a new campus, fully equipped for 500 students, 300 of whom would be resident! We need not be staggered by this figure," he said, "but instead we need to be challenged by it."

The college has land for a new fifty-acre campus, which the board was told was large enough for 500 students: 300 resident and 200 commuting.

The board set Sunday, April 24, as "Challenge Day" for Mount Olive College in Free Will Baptist churches. The purpose of this observance is to focus attention of the denomination on the importance of regional accreditation for its only liberal arts college. The churches will be asked to make special gifts to Mount Olive College on this date to assist it in its drive for regional accreditation.

The board voted to give President Raper a ten-weeks leave of absence this summer for further studies in higher education. Additional leaves were also granted for the spring semester of 1961 and one other term to be chosen later.

1960-1961 Catalog Being Printed

President W. Burkette Raper has given advanced announcement of information contained in the 1960-1961 catalog of Mount Olive College, now in the process of being printed.

The bulletin lists sixty-six courses offered by the college which includes the first two years of study for students preparing for vocations in primary, grammar and secondary education, business, the Christian ministry and missions, medicine, law, science, industry and general education. One-year curricula are outlined for terminal students in secretarial science and accounting.

There will be no increase in tuition, room, and general fees; however, the cost of board will be raised for resident students from $125 to $150 per semester.

The creation of the Mary Z. and James E. Bryan Student Loan Fund will bring to twelve the number of funds at Mount Olive College from which worthy and needy students may borrow without interest during the time they are in college.

Two new scholarship funds are listed in the new catalog: the Stroud Memorial Fund established by Miss Leurah Stroud of Kinston, and the McWhorter Scholarship sponsored by the family and former students of Professor Zack D. McWhorter, first principal of the Mount Olive Graded Schools, 1901-1909.

The creation of three new endowment funds and additional gifts to the six existing ones increased the endowment of the college by $13,000 during the past year. Mount Olive College now has an endowment of approximately $40,000.

The Askew Endowment

The establishing of a new endowment fund at Mount Olive College has been announced by President W. Burkette Raper.

The Askew Endowment has been created by an initial gift of $500 by Mrs. Ruth Askew of Snow Hill, North Carolina.

Mrs. Askew is a member of Hull Road Free Will Baptist Church in Greene County, and attended the Ayden Seminary, a former educational institution operated by the Free Will Baptist denomination and a predecessor of Mount Olive College.

I Never Think of Myself Here

"Are you not afraid to live here?" asked a visitor of the keeper of a lighthouse. "This is a dreadful place to be during a bad storm." "No," replied the man, "I am not afraid. I never think of myself here!" "Never think of yourself! How can that be?" "I only think of having the lamp burning brightly and keeping the reflectors clear, so those in danger may be saved!" replied the intrepid keeper of the lighthouse.—Selected.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: What is meant by, "And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them" (Revelation 9: 6)? I have been told that this was fulfilled in the 1929 stock crash when so many wealthy people such as Edward Swift committed suicide. Is this true or do we look for a future fulfillment of such prophecies as seems to be taught in other Scriptures?—J. R. Armstrong, Illinois.

Answer: I think that the whole of Revelation 9 is a part of the Biblical description of what the Bible calls the great tribulation and that this terrible period is all future. There is, however, a sense in which Jesus spoke of this entire period of time between His first coming and His second coming to this earth. "For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matthew 24:5-14).

In a limited sense, these verses tell about the kind of time that is to blight the whole of the church period. Jesus taught His disciples that beginning with His arrest on the night of His crucifixion a time of trial would set in against His followers and that even Peter would deny Him. "Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad. But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee. Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended. Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples" (Matthew 26:31-35). Peter did just exactly what Christ had predicted; "Now Peter sat without in the palae: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee. But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth. And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man. And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech betrayeth thee. Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew. And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out, and wept bitterly" (Matthew 26:69-75).

Jude reminds his readers of a condition yet to come when sin shall abound to the uttermost in the lives of men; "But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ; How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts" (Jude 17, 18). Timothy is exhorted by Paul to keep a vigilant watch for such; "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron" (1 Timothy 4:1, 2); "But shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness" (2 Timothy 2:16); "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Timothy 3:1-5).

It seems that in that awful time known to us as the great tribulation is to be preceded by a long period consisting of much trouble and many wars, but that the period itself will so exceed the other periods of evil that mental, physical and spiritual anguish will be almost unbearable. "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie" (2 Thessalonians 2:11). There will be probably a greater number wanting to commit suicide than ever before.

"And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power. And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree, but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads. And to them it was given that they should not kill them; but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man. And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them" (Revelation 9:3-6).

William Benton Quillin

On March 10, 1960, God called William Benton Quillin, Age 86, of Gate City, Virginia, to live with Him in glory. He was known to me, as well as to his many friends in Christ, as "Uncle Bent." "Uncle Bent" was born April 1, 1873, in Scott County, Virginia, the son of Joseph and Melissa Quillin. He was a lifetime member of the Free Will Baptist church.

Survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Cecil Mann and Mrs. Clarence Blair; two sons, Clinton and Allen Quillin; two brothers, Carl and Robert Quillin; eleven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The Rev. Tom Blackburn and the Rev. Hermon Underwood conducted the funeral March 13, 1960, at Blair's Chapel, with burial following in the Strong Cemetery. His body was laid to rest under a beautiful mound of flowers.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

My word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light
unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

FOLLOWING JESUS

And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him" (Mark 1:17, 18).

... Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when they had caught their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed him" (Luke 5:10, 11).

Not long ago someone asked Billy Graham a very interesting question as follows:
"I read in the New Testament that the disciples left all to follow Jesus—their nets, their vocations, their families and everything. Are we required to make that kind of a sacrifice today in order to be a Christian?"

Dr. Graham's answer is just as interesting.
It follows in full: "Our discipleship must always be in the context of the society in which we live. If everyone who became a Christian were to leave their jobs and their families, it would be bedlam, not Christianity.
Remember a lady in England who had the impression that she must leave her family and go to the mission field. I told her to be a missionary indeed but that her field of service was in her own home.

"The need today is not for Christians to be lifted out of society but to live for Christ within the social structure. The situation of the days of the early disciples was a bit different. There was an urgent need to preach the gospel throughout the world, and there was just a handful of men qualified to do it. It was expedient that they should put their family responsibilities aside and tell everyone everywhere what they had seen and heard.

"Now, as then, we should be willing to leave our all if we are called to specific Christian service. But the real need is not for Christians to leave their business, but to be Christians in their business. The need is not for fathers to forsake their families, but to be Christian fathers.

"However, the cost of following Christ has never changed. There must be an inward detachment from the world and Christ must be Lord of all!"

There has never been a time when it was not heading for trouble. As we look about so important for all the activities of the world to be in the hands of real followers of Christ than now. When we leave Christ out of our lives, our homes, our businesses, our vocations and our government, we are our world today we can see the results of forsaking Christ. The words of David as he charged Solomon upon his assumption of his duties as king of Israel and of the responsibilities of building the temple are just as important today, and to us, as then, and to Solomon. Here they are, "And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind: for the LORD searcheth all hearts, and under-standeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever. Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it" (1 Chronicles 28:9, 10). Today as then sin will separate us from God, and only Christ can keep sin out of our lives after

He has taken it out.

When Christ spoke of forsaking all to follow Him, He was evidently speaking of making Himself the biggest thing in our lives—letting nothing come between ourselves and Himself, but Christ is all, and in all to us.

"So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14:33).

SEEKING TO SERVE CHRIST

(John 12:26)

1. To serve Christ we must be a follower of Christ (John 12:26).

Could anyone expect to serve Him without following Him (Luke 9:23; Romans 10:9, 10)?

2. To serve Christ you must be faithful to Christ (1 Corinthians 4:1, 2).

Good, faithful service versus occasional service; loyal; dependable (Numbers 14:24; 2 Timothy 2:2).

3. To serve Christ you must have no other master (Matthew 6:24).

Not only fail, but you will have a miserable existence trying (Galatians 1:10; 2 Timothy 4:10).

4. To serve Christ you must be motivated by love (1 John 4:19).

Some serve for fear; some for popularity; some for loaves and fishes (John 21:15; Galatians 5:13).

5. To serve Christ you must be led by the Holy Spirit (Romans 7:6).

A Spirit-filled life will not only serve, but find joy in serving (Romans 6:22; 8:14).

6. To serve Christ you must serve with zeal and fervor (Romans 12:11).

Christ does not accept halfhearted service (Titus 2:14; Romans 10:2).

7. To serve Christ you must serve with humility (Acts 20:19).

No other service can be pleasing unto Him (1 Peter 5:5, 6; Luke 18:14; James 4:6).—Gospel Herald.

MEDITATION VERSE

"Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you" (1 Peter 5:7).

"He careth." He, whose love is as great as His power, and knows neither measure nor end. He careth. Precious word, in which all the tenderness of the most devoted mother, all the skill of the most expert physician, all the attention of the most accomplished nurse are compressed, and all according to the perfection of deity. He careth for you. For you, as though in all the worlds He sustains, you were His special and peculiar charge—as indeed you are.

ARE YOU GROWING?

The well-known preacher, Sam Jones, was once riding with the engineer on a train. Looking at the steam gauge he said to the engineer, "Why, man, you haven't enough steam to take you to Chattanooga!"

"That's true," replied the engineer, "but we have enough to start on. If we had enough for the whole trip now it would blow us to kingdom come. As that we have is used, more will be supplied."

So with the Christian life. If we will use the faith or power we have, more will be supplied. It is thus that we grow, or make progress in our spiritual living—in wisdom, faith, power and love. Knowing this the apostle, Paul, prayed for the Ephesians that they might "... grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ" (Ephesians 4:15).—Selected.

COME, CHAIN AND ALL

"I would like to come to Jesus Christ," said a man in a meeting, "but I am chained to sinful habits. I cannot break the chain!" A Scotsman said, "Aye, man, why don't you come to Him, chain and all?" "I never thought of that," said the man, "and I will come to Him!" He did come, and Christ spoke His liberating words, "Loose him, and let him go!"—Selected.

NOTES AND QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE 144,000

Jehovah's Witnesses claim that the 144,000 as recorded in Revelation 7:4-8, means a sect. (They do not accept the term sect.) However, if you will read Revelation 7:4-8, you will see that the 144,000 are composed of the twelve tribes of Israel—12,000 from each tribe. John says, ". . . I counted the number of them which were sealed and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel" (Vs. 4).

This same Scripture continues as follows: "Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthaliim were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand" (Vv. 5-8). This makes the 144,000. Hence the above Scripture plainly states that the 144,000 are of the twelve tribes of Israel, how can the Jehovah's Witnesses claim that the 144,000 will be taken out of a great number? Then the Jehovah's Witnesses say that after the 144,000 are taken, there will be thousands who will remain on earth; according to their doctrine, the 144,000 can go to heaven. Here again I quote Mr. Ray Johnson, the editor of The Gospel, who says, "What a curse the other gospel has brought to its believers! Over 1,000,000 Jehovah's believers being robbed, according to their own book, of the greatest blessing of the Gospel of Christ—the prospect of going to heaven." So, according to Mr. Johnson, his use of the yearbook in showing the falsity of the doctrine of Jehovah's Witnesses, we are bound to believe in the truth set forth in the Bible that the 144,000 are not Jehovah's Witnesses. Let us be loyal to God and not Pastor Russell, Judge Rutherford or any other teacher of the Watch Tower clan.

Recently we have heard of another clan, or religious sect, claiming to be the 144,000. They are called, we believe, the Davidites. We do not believe they are Jews either. Oh my, there are hundreds of false doctrines! Again we quote Paul, the great apostle, who says, "As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed" (Galatians 1:9).

CHRIST PREACHED HELL-FIRE

Christ said, ". . . if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and east it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be east into hell fire" (Matthew 18:9). Christ said it; I believe it. Again Jesus tells us that there is a hell where torment abounds; it is a flame. Listen to Jesus Christ: "There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores. And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame" (Luke 16:19-24). So I prefer to believe the gospel of Jesus Christ, rather than that of the Watch Tower which is born in the mind of Pastor Russell and heralded across the earth by Judge Rutherford and his followers.

This is all for the poor deluded, misguided people who follow man and his gospel. This experience I pass on as a good plan to get the book sellers out of your house with little trouble. A few Sunday afternoons back, I was taking it easy, trying to rest in my easy chair, when a knock sounded on my door. I arose and invited the visitor in (they usually press their way in without an invitation). I had never seen the lady, so after the introduction I began to talk to her. I am so made that I do not let anyone do all the talking. So when my turn came, I butted in and said, "Well, let us pray." She said, "I'd rather not," and she left in a hurry. She has not returned. We ought to pray for these people, and get them to be agreeable to prayer if possible.

SOVIET HATRED OF CHRISTIANITY

"Soviet Education Commissar Lunacharsky said: 'We hate Christianity and Christians; even the best of them must be regarded as our worst enemies. They preach love for one's neighbor; what we want is hatred. We must know how to hate, for only at this price can we conquer the world.' Hatred of Christianity is not a Russian characteristic. It is a characteristic of the invader. Soviet Prosecutor Krylenko remarked at the trial of a Christian Archbishop: 'I spit on your religion.' My friends, we are living in perilous times."—Copied from The Church Herald, Edited by Rev. Seldon Bulard, Pastor, First Free Will Baptist Church, Morehead City, North Carolina.

SPEAKING OF PERILOUS TIMES

The apostle, Paul, said, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God" (2 Timothy 3:1-4). Every characteristic mentioned in this Scripture is found in Communism. Just read the traits and actions of the Communists and compare them with the foregoing Scripture. You will find much to make you believe that the apostle, Paul, knew what he was talking about when he warned us of the perilous times in the last days.

ADVISED TO TURN AWAY

"Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Timothy 3:5). Instead of turning away from them, we invite the head hater of all that is good. A man possessed with the spirit of antichrist may actually become the antichrist and set himself up as the man of sin. God only knows.

OUR LAST WORD

America had better turn away from the haters of God and the haters of Christianity, and turn to God. Yes, America had better do this in a hurry if she is to be saved. There's no use to sing "God Bless America," when we have done nothing worthy of His blessings. We had better sing "God Save America." Before God can save America, however, those who profess to be Christians will have to repent and turn back to God; and those who are sinners will have to accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour.

"Oh, use me, Lord, use even me,

Just as Thou wilt, and how, and where;
Until Thy blessed face I see,

Thy rest, Thy joy, Thy glory share."

"By the time Christians enumerate all their likes and dislikes, the enemy has made sufficient inroad to gain the victory."

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

WHAT DO YOU EXPECT?

by Ellis Martin

“NAOMI GILMORE,” Miss Evans called as she held out the test paper.

Naomi jumped up and hurried forward to get the paper. She could hardly wait to see what her grade was. She was sure it would be good, she just wanted to see how good. You see, this year the teacher was living at her house, and Naomi felt as if she had a special claim on a good grade because she and Miss Evans were such good friends.

Naomi smiled brightly as she took the paper from Miss Evans. Eagerly she looked for the big red pencil mark that told her what her grade was. B minus! The smile faded from her face. How terrible!

Naomi was trembling when she sat down. To think that Miss Evans would do something like that! B minus when she had been expecting A plus! What a terrible disappointment! And after she'd been so nice to Miss Evans!

Naomi pouted the rest of the afternoon. She decided she wouldn't wait to walk home with Miss Evans when the bell rang at three o'clock. But she need not have worried about that, for there was a strange man waiting to see Miss Evans after school. He was not the kind of person you would have expected Miss Evans to be friends with. He really looked like a bum or a hobo from the railroad tracks. His clothes were old and dirty and he was badly in need of a shave.

Naomi felt sort of disappointed as she walked home, for she had been in a hurry to show Miss Evans how angry she was. Of course, she would get a chance to show her how angry she was at the supper table. She simply wouldn't answer Miss Evans when she spoke to her. In fact, she wouldn't talk at all. But at the supper table that evening Miss Evans herself was very quiet. She seemed very worried about something.

The next morning Miss Evans was gone already by the time Naomi was ready to leave for school. Naomi frowned impatiently when her mother told her Miss Evans had left early because of an appointment. Was she going to have to wait until noon to display her anger?

Miss Evans was just arriving at school when Naomi got there. Naomi was surprised to see that the same dirty looking man was walking along beside her. Again

Naomi noticed how sad and worried Miss Evans looked. And she didn't seem to notice it at all when Naomi passed her right by without even saying good morning.

Naomi sat at her desk all morning thinking that she surely would get to snub Miss Evans at noon. But when the bell rang Miss Evans said, “Naomi, I won't be going home this noon.”

All the way home Naomi kept reminding herself about the bad grade Miss Evans had given her. But she was really so curious about the things that seemed to be happening to Miss Evans that she was having a hard time staying angry. She kept wondering who the strange man was and why Miss Evans was looking so sad and worried.

The afternoon went slowly, but at last the three o'clock bell rang. Again the strange man was waiting for Miss Evans. And when evening came she did not even come home to supper.

Later when she had finished her homework, Naomi started up to her room. She was surprised to see a light on in Miss Evans' room. Naomi decided she must have come home while they were eating supper.

Naomi paused for a moment in the hall. She could hear a sniffling sound as if Miss Evans were crying. She thought about it for a moment and then decided it was none of her business. But when she got to her room, she could still hear Miss Evans crying. Maybe she was sick and needed help. Naomi tiptoed down the hall and knocked gently on the door of Miss Evans' room.

There was a long silence before Miss Evans finally said, “Come in.”

“I thought I heard you crying and that you might be sick. Is there something I can do for you?” Miss Evans looked so sad Naomi was sorry she had ever thought about being angry with her.

“You were sweet to be concerned about me, Naomi. I was a little worried that you were angry with me since you did not say good morning when you saw me this morning.”

Naomi did not know what to say. Right now she did not feel like saying she was angry. She could feel her face getting awfully red. “Are you sick?” she asked.

“No, not really, Naomi. A little heart-sick perhaps, but that's all.”

“Does it have anything to do with that awful man who has been coming to you?”

“That man is my brother,” Miss Evans said, looking sadder than ever.

“Your brother! Oh, I'm sorry.”

“My, he looks wonderful!” Naomi said, hardly able to believe it was the same man. “What happened to him?”

“He was the youngest of my brothers, and we all babied him quite a bit. As he grew older he was always looking for something for nothing. He expected a whole lot from everyone, but he did not want to work for it. He still wanted to be petted and babied, and would get very angry when people would not do for him the things he expected. It's always a very bad sign when people begin to think they deserve things they do not work for. He finally it came a bum. He was here to ask for money. You see, he never works.”

“I guess a person shouldn't expect to get something they didn't work for—even from the best friend, should they? Say for instance, I shouldn't expect you to give me a grade I don't deserve just because you live here and we are good friends?”

“Of course not. I think too much of you to give you a grade you do not deserve. That would hardly be the Christian thing to do. It would be as bad as cheating on a test.”

Naomi's eyes were wet with tears. “I know I never saw it that way until you told me about your brother? I'm going to work much harder in the future to be sure I deserve every grade I get.”—Junior Trainee

The Tomb's Real Treasure Wasn't There

How thrilling was the news of the capture of Jerusalem by General Allenby during World War I. Before the Turks evacuated the Holy City, they hastened to the famous tomb of Jesus. They, according to a pre-dispatch, “robbed it of all its treasures.” God's children said, “Not so! That tomb was divested of its real treasure some two thousand years previously when the glorified Christ emerged triumphantly therefrom!”—Selected.

Study in Ephesians Chapter 3

PAUL, APOSTLE TO THE GENTILES
(Vv. 1-6)

Because Paul has preached union of Jews and Gentiles in the foregoing chapter, he begins Chapter 3 with "For this cause . . ." Paul is the prisoner of Jesus Christ for the Gentiles. We are led to believe that though he was persecuted and imprisoned by Jews, that he regards being bound by the Lord an honor. According to Romans 8, "For I reckon that the sufferings of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed to us." The indignity of confinement in an earthly prison was lost in the feeling of being in the will of the Lord. Paul avows that the Holy Spirit is the source of the fellowship which has been conferred upon

It was surprising to the Jew and Gentile alike that the gospel which Paul preached was an enlarged gospel; a gospel of the dispensation of grace. Until this time the Jews had been the sole recipients of God's promises, therefore it was inconceivable to them that the heathenish Gentile could be fellow heirs, the same body, and partakers of the promise (Vs. 6). Only hearts with the attributes of Christ could accept this new life into the family and fold of God without jealousy. Paul had received this Spirit of Christ in his heart and life, subsequently his life completely changed course. Is it so in our lives today?

A GOD-CALLED MINISTER (Vv. 7-13)

Paul says that he was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God bestowed upon him by the effectual working of God's power (Vs. 7). I do not recall hearing of another conversion or call to the ministry in the same manner as Paul's, but the same authority and power must call men today, lest human efforts be ineffectual. Paul considered himself the least of all apostles, rather less than the least (Vs. 8). With Paul's intellectual ability and spiritual attainments (witnessed by many on the journey to Damascus), it seems strange from a human viewpoint that Paul esteemed other apostles as his superiors. The love of a living Christ in a person's heart has a way of reducing that person in his own sight; surely this was the reason for Paul's humility.

Paul counted himself unworthy to reveal the mysteries of God, which so recently had been unveiled by the Holy Spirit; however, this revelation came to Paul that he might dispense it to those whom God chose rather than men. Could we, as auxiliary women, say that as Christ has been revealed to us, we will share in sending the revelation to others? The work of the church is the sharing of the manifold wisdom of God. The desire of Paul for those to whom he wrote was that they might make the manifold wisdom of God known, and that they might recognize Christ as the personage by whom redemption came. Paul desired that his sufferings for the gospel's sake encourage rather than hinder the progress of the church. The church of today must rise above society organizing and presenting Jesus as the Author and Finisher of our faith to the world.

III. PAUL'S PRAYER (Vv. 14-21)

"For this cause . . ." here in Verse 14, Paul uses the same words as at the outset of the chapter; meaning for the sake of the promulgation of the gospel, he bows his knees before the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. He comes in behalf of his people; this should challenge our hearts to pray for those whom God has entrusted to our care. He asks for spiritual strength for the inner man, knowing that it was man's great need. Too many of us are more concerned with outward appearances than the soul of man. Material things are needful, but will soon vanish away. Let's pray as Paul for the mighty spiritual infilling of our lives.

They say that as a tree grows upward to the sky, though ever so high, that even so the roots are probing that depth into the earth. Paul prays that the church may be rooted and grounded in love by the faith which dwells in their hearts (Vs. 17). As the tree must have its roots in the earth, that she may reach new heights, likewise must the church be ever going deeper into the heart of God, that new spiritual heights are attained.

Paul prays that they might know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fullness of God (Vs. 19). This expression from God most certainly would require complete conformity to His will. We desire His blessings but often, on our terms, not God's. Surely, we should want to know the immeasurable love of Christ in its fullness that Christ might extend it to others through us.

The chapter closes with a doxology. It is always proper to close our prayers with praise to the one who has so manifested his love to usward. "Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen" (Vs. 21).

Prayer and Praise Letter

March 7, 1960

Dear Friend:

"Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ."

I believe that you will be interested in the following news notes relative to the Free Will Baptist Foreign Missions activities:

NEW SUPPORT

In response to the challenge of foreign missions during the recent missionary conference in the Central Florida Association, over $1,800.00 in pledges was received.

The association has pledged to underwrite the support of Rev. Bobby Poole who plans to go to Brazil within the next few months.

In view of the fact that all of the Free Will Baptist churches in that area are relatively new, the response was indeed gratifying.

Pastors of the churches which participated in the conference were: Rev. Robert Owen, Rev. Robert Wilfong, Rev. Elvie Johnston, Rev. Fred Bradshaw, Rev. Curtis Briley and Rev. Wayne Brown.

ARRIVE IN AFRICA

The following is a quote from a letter written February 24, by Rev. Lonnie Sparks:

"Greetings from Abidjan. The Joneses arrived safely yesterday at 6:00 p. m. The entire missionary family was on hand to greet them. We are certainly enjoying the fellowship."

TO BE IN INDIA

Miss Wilson recently wrote, "Mr. and Mrs. Allan Redpath will be in Kotagiri in May for the missionary convention. Mr. Redpath is pastor of The Moody Church in Chicago."

THE FURLOUGH WAGON

The Wesley Calverys are the first missionaries to use the new Rambler station wagon which was recently purchased for the use of missionaries on furlough.

The raising of funds with which to purchase the wagon has been the national project of the Go-Tell and Young People's Auxiliaries for the past two years.

On behalf of all our missionary families

—A big thank you—to every C. T. A. and Y.P.A. member who made a contribution.

Just a glimpse of the sparkle in little Jonothan's eyes will assure you that he is grateful for the convenience which you have provided them.

MISSIONARY SERVICES, CONFERENCES, ETC.

En route to Texas to present the station wagon to the Calverys, I had services in Memphis, Tennessee, and Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

While in Texas, I had services in Waco, First Church of Bryan, and North Zulch.

Also I was privileged to visit in the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Goode, parents of Mrs. Sammy Wilkinson; the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Anderson, parents of Mrs. Ken Eagleton; and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Calvery, parents of Wesley Calvery.

Brother Moulton was in a conference in the Greenville, North Carolina, area March 2-6. He will be in the Glennville, Georgia, area March 7-13 and in Cove City, North Carolina, March 27-April 2.

Rev. Tom Willey Sr. and Mrs. Willey will be in a conference in Savannah, Georgia, March 6-8. Rev. Damon C. Dodd is the pastor.

The Willeys will be with me in a conference in Philadelphia Church in Detroit, Michigan, March 16-20. Rev. Mark M. Lewis is pastor.

The Willeys will also be with me in a conference in St. Louis, Missouri, March 25-27. South Side Church and Third Church will be host to this conference. Rev. Roger C. Reeds is pastor of South Side Church and Rev. Russell B. Spurgeon is pastor of Third Church.

EASTER POSTERS AND OFFERING ENVELOPES

New 13 x 22 inch Easter missionary posters in color together with special offering envelopes are now ready for distribution. Every Free Will Baptist church should have at least one poster and a sufficient number of the envelopes.

One poster and some envelopes are being sent to each pastor on our mailing list. Additional posters and envelopes will be available upon request.

COMING NEXT MONTH

The April issue of Contact, the national publication of Free Will Baptists, will have a special foreign missions issue.

Instead of receiving the usual letter monthly, each person on our mailing list (16,000) will receive Contact.

This unique issue will feature articles written by missionaries on the field, a challenging message by a member of the foreign mission board, information from the various fields, and other articles of missionary interest.

The Strength of Humility

(Lesson for April 10)

Lesson: Matthew 5:3-5; Luke 14:7-14.

Devotional Text: Luke 14:11.

INTRODUCTION

Meekness and humility are basic Christian virtues. The two go hand-in-hand. The word, humility, comes from the Latin word, humus, which means earth. In short, humility means getting down to earth. To do this means being humble in spirit, free from pride and arrogance, or lowly in mind.

The halls of history are filled with records of the lives of great and noble men. Some have been made famous because of their contributions to mankind; others because they possessed the humbleness to be a part of humility, in spite of their greatness. They are great, in God's sight, are the humble. (The Bible Student (F.W.B.).)

HINTS THAT HELP

1. If we recognize our own poverty of spirit, the Holy Spirit will make us rich in the things of Christ (Matthew 5:3).

2. The Saviour Himself will comfort those who have entered with Him into mourning because of the sins of the world (Vs. 4).

3. The proud may possess the earth today, but in the Kingdom the meek shall inherit it (Vs. 5).

4. It is well to be properly ambitious, but not to the extent of self-seeking (Luke 14:11).

5. A spirit of self-importance may impress others for a while, but a spirit of humility makes longer impressions (Vv. 8, 9).

6. It is a far more agreeable experience to be promoted than to be demoted (Vv. 9, 10).

7. The exaltation that comes from the world and no man will be able to take away from you (Vs. 11).

8. Both in his social and spiritual life the Christian should not despise or neglect those who are less favorably situated than he himself is (Vs. 12).

9. There are many spiritually poor, maimed, lame, and blind who should be invited to the gospel feast (Vs. 13).

10. Kindnesses unrewarded, or unrewarded in this world, are sure to be rewarded in the resurrection of the just (Vs. 14).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. It would be well to consider the use of the word, blessed, as used here in this first beatitude and in all the other seven. Earl L. Douglass states: "The word, blessed, is a distinctively New Testament word. Happiness is something of which the world makes much. Happiness is something which comes about as the result of good fortune, of the possession of things. The word, hap, from which it is derived, means a circumstance. Happiness, therefore, is the satisfaction which people get out of things, circumstances, good fortune.

"The word, blessed, is derived from a word which means sacrificed in blood, or smearred with blood. The basic quality of happiness comes from possessing something; the basic quality of blessedness comes from renouncing something."—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

2. Our Saviour was undoubtedly surrounded by poor folks during most of His ministry, but when He spoke here of the poor in spirit He was speaking of a deeper poverty than any lack of material resources. He was speaking of a want in the inmost soul. There is a vast difference between this and material poverty. There is no virtue, nor is there necessarily any disgrace, in financial want. Poverty does not of itself produce humility of heart. There is just as much pride among the poor as there is among the well-to-do. The Lord is here speaking of poverty of spirit, and it is most important that we understand what He means, for this quality of life is fundamental.—Selected.

3. No doubt that many of those to whom Jesus spoke as He went about doing good were mourning because of their troubles and sorrows. Some were sick, some were heavy hearted, some were suffering from want, and others for lack of someone to love and comfort them. Besides these earthly troubles, there were those who mourned because of their sins. They were laboring under the burden of sin which, of all burdens, is the sorest and hardest to bear; therefore, it was to them that Jesus spoke directly, and to whom He speaks today, saying, Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. Yes, they shall be comforted here and now, even in the midst of their other troubles, and in the life to come. Moreover, Jesus includes those who mourn with others, for He wept with those who wept, and those who mourn because of their burden for those who are still in their sins and lost.—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

4. To inherit the earth is a most surprising promise extended to the meek who find themselves in constant competition with the greedy, the selfish, the proud, the cruel. But the best things in this world are usually overlooked or missed by the wicked. Even when they see them and realize faintly their desirability, they are not willing to pay the price to gain them. The earth is more than mere terrain or treasures of gold and silver. Perhaps a person is best prepared to realize just what things are most precious when he comes to the hour of departure from this world and looks back on all that he has possessed or failed to gain. Meekness sharpens the vision of the follower of Christ that he may comprehend what things of earth are most worthwhile. Seeking these, he finds God's help in obtaining them.—The Standard Commentary.

5. Who can read the history of such men as Moses, Joshua, Caleb or Paul and not conclude that they were richer by far than the Pharaohs, the Caesars, the Hitlers and the Stalins? Just a few days ago we read a magazine article about the richest man in the United States, a billionaire oil producer, and we could only feel sorry for him, for he had sacrificed the things that bring happiness for wealth which he cannot take with him when he leaves this world.

6. In the Kingdom of God the way to greatness is by way of humility and service. It does not matter how gifted a Christian may be, or how far reaching his influence, he is just one of the brethren. When the disciples were arguing about who would be the greatest in the Kingdom, Jesus gave them an example of true humility. He took a towel and girded Himself, got a basin of water and began to wash their feet (John 13:14-17). "It would be a good thing for all Christians to obey literally the Master's words in this chapter of John, and in sincere humility bathe the feet of our brethren. This, if done at least once a year, would be a reminder to the whole church that we are all brethren and one is our Master, Christ."—Kempin.

We are just the instruments which the Lord uses in building the Kingdom of God on earth; so let us be humble.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

7. "Much of our spiritual life has a great deal of the leaven of self corrupting it," said Dr. A. T. Pierson. "We seek self-advantage and self-glory on a higher level, and of a more refined sort. Nothing is so hard to kill as pride and selfishness. Man Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (Revelation 22:17).

No man, regardless of how reprehensible a reprobate he may be, can make himself more than a sinner. No man, regardless of how respectable his reputation is, can deny his personal demerit. But Christ came to save sinners. And He will never cast out one who comes unto Him for grace and mercy.—Gospel Herald.

is like an onion—layer after layer, and each layer of self in some form. Strip off self-righteousness, and you will come to self-trust. Get beneath this, and you will come to self-seeking, and self-pleasing. Even when we think these are abandoned, self-will betrays its presence. When this is stripped off, we come to self-defense, and last of all, self-glory. When this seems to be abandoned, the heart of the human onion discloses pride that boasts of being truly humble!"—Selected.

Suppose we study again Numbers 20:1-12. The few hasty words of Moses reveals self. The old carnal nature can never be trusted, but the new life in Christ Jesus is free from this sin.

with 14 members and one visitor present.

On entering, part of the members were given numbers by the program chairman, Mrs. Alma Gay Stanford, to indicate the part they were to have on the program. The program on missionary work in Africa was opened with Mrs. Rachel Hinnant leading the group in singing "Jesus Saves." Mrs. Dorothy Waddell led in prayer. Mrs. Roy Stanford gave the introduction with Mrs. Beatrice Crumpler, Mrs. Rena Mae Barnes, Mrs. Esther Scott and Mrs. Fannie Edwards presenting the topics and leading discussion on each.

Mrs. Eloise Pope, president, opened the business session. Minutes were read, roll called, general treasury and building treasury reports were given and approved. Corresponding secretary, Mrs. Rachel Hinnant, gave a report on cards and flowers sent in the community. The treasurer, Mrs. Dorothy Waddell, reported receipt had been received for money sent to Children's Home for clothing.

The pre-Easter program was planned for April 14, at 7:30 p. m., and parts were assigned. Mrs. Betty Lou Pope and Mrs. Rachel Hinnant agreed to be delegates to the Woman's Auxiliary Convention of the Western Conference in April. Mrs. Rena Mae Barnes dismissed with prayer, after which the group went to the home of Mrs. Atlas Pittman, who has returned home from the hospital, to visit, and refreshment were served by her daughter, Mrs. Alma Gay Stanford.

Vanceboro, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Juniper Chapel Church sponsored a week of study on prayer in different homes of the community, March 14-18. The speaker each evening was Mrs. Corbitt Morris. She brought some interesting thoughts on prayer. It was a wonderful week in the Lord and everyone present could feel the presence of the Holy Spirit. Each one was made to realize the need of the power of the Holy Spirit in their lives and in the church. There were a good number present each night and the Christian fellowship was wonderful.

The auxiliary praises the Lord for His goodness and asks each Christian to pray that each of its members will be a soul winner for the Lord and will be burdened for the lost as never before.

Pikeville, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Pleasant Grove Church met at the home of Mrs. Agnes Bedford Tuesday night, March 15. The president, Mrs. George Aycock, presided, assisted by the secretary, Mrs. Hugh Hinnant, and the treasurer, Miss Marie Howell. Mrs. Zacky Jones was in charge of the program. The hostesses, Mrs. Agnes Bedford and Mrs. Guy Bedford, served pecan pie with ice cream and coffee to the 14 members and 2 visitors present.

Newton Grove, N. C. The Annie McPhail Woman's Auxiliary of Oak Grove Church met at the church March 16, with the president, Mrs. C. I. Godwin, presiding. After the singing of "Jesus Saves," Mrs. Godwin conducted the devotional. Mrs. Emma Rose read the minutes of the last meeting and called the roll. Mrs. Joyce

Bass gave the financial report. During business session, it was voted to send to Cragmont and $5 to the Children's Home. Mrs. Godwin and a few other ladies will attend a workshop meeting Johnson's Union Church on March 17. Mrs. Godwin read the introduction on conditions in Africa. Others of the program were: Mrs. Lollie Holland, Mrs. Mu Swinger, Mrs. Emma Rose, Mrs. Joyce B and Mrs. Katie Lec. Benediction was given by Mrs. Ellen Warren. There were 18 present.

A handful of jonquils, waving in the breeze,
Their golden heads uplifted beneath the leafing trees,
Like a breath of sunshine across the patterned lace
The leaf-shadows are making in this grassy place.
It makes the heart soar upward, like a bird on wing—
It is all so lovely! The overture to spring!

GETTING BY

Millions of persons in this corrupt world still ask, "Is it right?" They are the ones who seldom get into the papers. We must admit, however, the frequency of the questions, "Can I get by with it? and, Will it work?"

The desire to get by with what we shouldn't do or with failing to do what we should do is innately human. The baby with a hand on the gas stove button, and his eyes on his mother, is making one more attempt to get by. The grandmother or even the great-grandmother who climbs on a ladder to wash the kitchen walls is trying to prove to herself and her family that she can get by with something she has been warned against.

From kindergarten to college commencement, many students work harder just to get by than they would have to work to learn; for the habit of learning makes learning easier as time goes on, while the habit of limiting learning to barely enough to get by breeds difficulties and complications that trap the student in his own net.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaking recently to a ninth-grade English class in Brooklyn, admonished them: "Don't try to just get by. The future will require all to develop ourselves to the best quality, the best capacity," she said.

"Nobody can do this for you," the ex-teacher pointed out, adding, "Do your best, do it wherever you are, and you will find your influence will grow."

Mrs. Roosevelt said the love of life is too strong for us to destroy the world, although we know how. But, she admitted, young people face a difficult as well as an exciting time. Then she flung her challenge: "I think we have an opportunity to do for the world what the early people who established America did for this country. If we can show that we are able to live here with our differences of race and religion, we can demonstrate that the world can live together too."

The gigantic job can never be accomplished on mere "get by" knowledge: it is going to demand the wisdom of the ages. And the beginning of wisdom is the realization that we do not learn a thing just to answer today's question or to pass next month's test. Whatever we actually learn can be used over and over all through life.

When the question of getting by applies to education it means doing the very least possible. Applied to crime it means doing the most as fast as possible. The number of unsolved murders, thefts, fires and other crimes prove that many do get by in escaping the law. Some for only a short time, some for life; but they cannot escape from fear of being caught, and they cannot escape from themselves.

More pathetic than the prisoner behind bars is the retired gangster fighting for respectability for himself and his children. He moves into a palatial home in an exclusive neighborhood and tries to buy friends by giving lavish parties, but his high fences equipped with electric alarms, and the vicious dogs patrolling the grounds, reveal his constant fear that some person he has wronged will try to retaliate. He has reached his goal; he has everything money can buy, but his elaborate home is pointed out as the home of a famous gangster. His children are designated as gangster's children. The apartment houses he builds—to bury his past under a legitimate business—are identified as the gangster's building program. He cannot buy freedom from himself.

Some criminals, after escaping the law for years, find peace for self-torture by surrendering themselves. Others take the suicidal way, as did Lady Macbeth who warned us long ago: "Nought's but all's spent, where our desire is got without content."

The home, where education really begins, must take the first step in proving that merely getting by doesn't work. The task of education is to help each individual find his own purpose in life and to inspire him with the feeling of responsibility necessary to accomplish that purpose, without sacrificing others on the way to his goal.—Emma Kidd Hulbert in The Union Signal.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE FALLING

Church attendance in the United States, after an all-time high in 1958, is now leveling off according to a recent Gallup Poll. An estimated 49,000,000 adults attended church and synagogue services during a typical week of 1959—or 47 per cent of the adult civilian population. . . . "By way of comparison, during an average week of 1958, 49 per cent of the population, or an estimated 50,500,000 adults attended church," the report, issued by the American Institute of Public Opinion, said.

Surveys of representative samples of the adult civilian population were made during selected weeks in the months of March, June and December, 1959. The survey attempted to measure only the average number of adults attending worship during the same weeks. A special survey of attendance during Easter week of 1959 found that 61,200,000 adults went to church or synagogue. That was 59 per cent of the adult population. In 1940, slightly more than one-third of the adult population went to worship regularly. By 1955, the number had risen to 49 per cent. It hit 49 per cent again in 1958 when 50,500,000—the highest number on record—went at least once a week.

Previous polls have revealed that more women attended worship than men; that attendance is highest in the Midwest compared with the East, South and Far West; and that those aged 30 to 49 attend more regularly than those in other age groups.—Editorial Research Associates.

Springtime

Charles J. Noble
East Wenatchee, Washington

LAST the long cold winter is over; once again the sun's golden rays smile on Mother Earth. The snow begins to melt down the hillsides. The flowers begin to come up; the birds begin to sing. All that was made dormant by winter's cold breath is now made alive by spring's sunshine.

Springtime brings a wonderful change to the world, but this physical change in nature is limited to things that are affected by sun rays. Man may be gladdened by springtime, but his immortal soul cannot be changed by sun rays.

MAN'S NATURAL STATE

Man, in his natural state, is not only dormant and unproductive in the spiritual sense, but he is dead and lost without God. His physical body is much alive, but death reigns over his soul; and whatever good he may do cannot change the sentence death has passed upon him, until he receives the inner cleansing from past sins.

In this unregenerated state, man is inclined to evil. He is dominated by an ungodly power, and oftentimes does not realize the power of sin's binding chains until he breaks in the opposite direction. Man is not tolerant toward that which is religious; deep within his soul, he is unyielding to his Maker. He lives in a tomb of death, wrapped in graveclothes of his own unrighteousness. His sepulcher is sealed with the excuse, too busy—in other words, no time for God.

HINDERING STONES

There are often many hindering stones that lie in the path of man's spiritual rejection. We often hear people say, "There are too many hypocrites in the church" or "There are so many churches, I don't know where to go; I don't know what to believe."

We all know too well that much of the criticism directed toward the church is justified, but this does not alter the fact that there is a heaven to gain and a hell to shun. Why do we refuse to eat bread because it is in the midst of thistles? Should we choose to use a genuine dollar just because someone makes a counterfeit now and then? Be sure, there is much confusion in the religious world. However, those who sincerely seek Christ with all their hearts need not be confused or deceived, for the way of salvation is made plain and simple. There is no hindering stone big enough to keep any soul out of the Kingdom of God if one truly desires to enter in.

GOLD TO BE REFINED

We mentioned before that man in his natural state is lost and cannot bear good fruit. Let it be remembered, however, that every man, no matter how bad he is, has gold in him if it can only be discovered and refined. No man likes to think of himself as being worthless. If he discovers that God can make his barren fig tree produce and bear good fruit, he is certainly on his way to spiritual recovery. Man cannot make himself bear good fruit any more than a tree can make itself bear good fruit. The tree needs the husbandman to water it and dig about its roots that it might bear good fruit. Spiritually speaking, a man is like a tree—he needs God to dig around the roots of his soul, and break through his sealed tomb of death.

SPRINGS OF LIVING WATER

In the work of regeneration, man witnesses a resurrection from death to life. This resurrection turns the bars of death into eternal life and makes his barren desert blossom as a rose. It will truly be springtime in his soul. His life will take on a new song, for he has discovered the secret of real living—he has discovered God.

The stone of death has been rolled away from the door of his sepulcher; he comes forth in newness of life. Truly a spring has broken out in the desert; a well of living water has sprung up within his soul. He has been awakened from his dormant sleep as the tree is awakened in the springtime.

PRAISE

How fortunate we are to have a God who still remembers us when we have gone astray. Surely His mercy is enduring; surely He is a great God, for He hath redeemed us and brought us back from a far country. He is like precious ointment upon our heads. He is like the dew that descended upon Mount Zion. God has watered our souls with His love; the sun rays of His Holy Spirit have warmed our hearts. He hath quickened our spirits, blotted out our sins, tamed our tongue, and taken away the sting of death. He hath become our rock, our strong tower, our defense, our counselor and peacegiver. He is our strength and satisfying portion.

The psalmist has well said, "Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God, in the mountain of his holiness" (Psalm 48:1).

Are We Drifting from the Shore with Our Free Will Baptist League Programs?

by L. E. Ballard

AS one who has had some connection with program planning for the Free Will Baptist leagues most of the time since the first program material was printed in The Young People's Friend for September, 1922, I want to use the columns of The Free Will Baptist to discuss some trends I have noticed in recent years away from the intended use of program material now published in our five league quarterlies.

The first danger trend is in the inclination of many to consider the material simply as lessons, to be taught much as the Sunday school lesson is taught. Some of our leagues have even gotten away from having a number of leaguers assigned topics, and have one teacher—yes, that's what they often call him—teach the whole lesson to the league. Perhaps there are places where this is best, but it is not in keeping with the plan of the literature. From the very beginning, the idea was for the comments on the topics in the quarterlies to be used simply to guide the leaguer in making a talk (using the same thoughts, but in his own words) on the topic assigned to him.

Then there is the danger of making the league a mere reading circle, with each one reading his part (often without having read it previously). This I prefer to call the Lazy Leaguer Method. Of course, there are parts of most every program which should be read, such as poems, direct quotations, etc., but when it is all read, and poorly at that, who is either trained or very

The Rev. L. E. Ballard, Box 338, Scotland Neck, North Carolina, field secretary, is asking pastors and others to send him copies of bulletins, special letters, announcements, etc. printed during the past year on any kind of duplicator (stencil or spirit) for display. We have many items already, but would like for the display to cover as wide an area of publicity as possible.

well informed? In fact every leaguer is supposed to have already not only read the material, but studied it.

Finally, there are those who overdo the whole business—on the first two or three topics, leaving no time for the last topics, which may be the most important of all the topics. Some not only read it all, but ad-lib twice as much as the reading on each paragraph. May I let you in on a little secret? Those of us who plan and write the programs usually prepare just about the right amount of material to take up the time generally allowed for the discussions if it were memorized and recited exactly as it is written. This means that if you study an illustration or an argument and then present it in your own words, there is no need to also read it in the words of the writer. A few months ago we counted the words used by one of the speakers in a senior league in commenting "this tells us that, etcetera, etcetera," on a passage he had just read, and he used one hundred and forty-two words to retell what the Rev. Clarence Bowen had put into sixty-four words. If a speaker gives in his own words a discussion used in the program material (which is exactly what he ought to do), he should try to keep what he says to approximately the same number of words used by the writer. In this way the program as a whole will come out about right as to the time element.

Please let us remember that the Free Will Baptist league meeting is not a Sunday evening edition of the Sunday school, "the teaching service of the church," but a meeting of the league, "the training service of the church." Let us stop the drifting away from the shore in our league programs!

Rev. Joseph Ange

HE LOVES ME

Jessie H. Kennedy

I worship One who sits enthroned
In majesty on high,
Who ever proves His love to me
As passing moments fly.

He loves me with His first glad rays
That gild the rosy dawn;
He loves me with His sunset hues
As evening sun goes down.

He loves me with each bird's sweet song
That floats upon the air
And bids me look to heights above
And trust His promised care.

His fragrant breath is on the breeze
He loves me with His showers;
He loves me with His summer fruits
And with a million flowers.

He loves me with each star that shines
From out His fields of blue,
Though I am deep in peaceful sleep
After my work is through.

But oh, His love, such mighty love—
He gave His Son to die
That I might be redeemed from sin
And live with Him on high.

Oh, glory, glory be to God
And glory to His Lamb
For such a wondrous love as this
And for redemption's plan.

Christian Writers' Contest

Held at Bible College

CHRIStIAN WRITERS' Contest was sponsored on the Bible College campus, Nashville, Tennessee, February 29 to March 18, by the Christina Rosetti Literary Society. The purpose of this emphasis was to encourage student interest in the field of Christian literature.

The society used various chapel skits and plays to challenge students to write gos- pels, tracts, sermons, magazine articles, short stories, poetry, drama and other types of Christian literature. The great need all over the world was emphasized by showing the skits and displays that what an In- dian native once said was true, that "... missionaries have taught us to read but the Communists have supplied the litera- ture."

Students entering the contest were: Judy Brock, Bobby Abrams, Florine Faulkner, Gene Kennedy, Genevieve Johnson, Thomas Manning and Wanda Watson, North Carolina; Ronald Niebruegge and Betty Rowlett, Tennessee; Ann Bailey, North Carolina; Carla Dunham, Ohio; Phil Gilbert, Alabama; Ann Hahn, California; and Dorothy Robertson, Missouri.

The Rev. Billy Melvin, national executive secretary, spoke on Friday night, March 18, 7:30, in Memorial Auditorium on "The Power of the Printed Page." At the same time the faculty judging committee announced the winners of the contest, as judged by the following criteria: What is the writer trying to do? How well did he do it? Was it worth doing? Did it contribute something definite to Christian literature?

Florine Faulkner, freshman, from Marshall, North Carolina, was awarded first place for her essay, "What Do You Think?" Betty Rowlett of Bristol, Tennessee, freshman, won second place with a poem; and her short story; Dorothy Robertson of Missouri, freshman, received honorable mention.

Following is the essay which won first place:

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

"For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." (Proverbs 23:7).

What do you most often think about?

How does your thinking affect you? Do you control your thoughts or do they control you, your decisions, and your actions? It has become an established fact that we are, to a large extent, what we think.

The mind has been likened to the room of a house where visitors are entertained. All visitors to a person's threefold being come in through the mind. Thoughts first enter the mind, then drop down into the heart and take root, then possess the entire person.

Thoughts are bold and daring things; they are strong and persistent. Like armed men they force themselves into the mind. They come enticingly. They come insinuatingly. They come threateningly. They come in a thousand ways. They come one at a time; they come in droves. Some wait at the door of the mind and push and crowd to get in while the room is full. They keep up a din and chatter and strain the nerves and chill the heart. Fear dashes into the mind and captures us and holds us fast.

A thought will knock at the door of the mind. It is admitted and entertained. Passion then enters the mind and we look at it for awhile. Then it possesses the whole being and leads to premeditated action.

Anxiety and nervousness appear and drive off rest and keep a person sleepless all night for nothing. Trouble that is many-faced, many-handed, big and squatty, will fill the mind and stay all day, and return in the morning by the time you open your eyes. Cares, weighing a thousand pounds each, come to unload in the room of your mind.

Friends, foes, husbands, wives, children, houses, lands, tomorrow, the work on hand of whatever nature, what it was, what is to be, this, that, and the other—real and imaginary—demon impressions and suggestions, and the thoughts of foes and friends toward you come in dreams and while you are awake as swift messengers. All these things in the different shapes, sizes, and sounds will harass, possess, occupy, and claim all the attention of the mind if they are allowed to do so.

Thousands are in the madhouse and the grave and other thousands are in physical suffering and mental sickness and torments because of a mind thus occupied. These visitors to the mind are strong and smart. They have no shame or feeling. Thoughts are tough customers but if you are to know the real happiness and peace of mind you must exercise your greatest power to control your thoughts. You cannot help what thoughts enter your mind but you can determine which ones you will keep and entertain. Remember this, you are primarily what you think.

N. C. State Convention Executive Committee Meets

The Rev. Michael Pelt, secretary of the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists, reports the following action taken by the executive committee in a meeting in Mount Olive where the committee transacted interim business for the convention.

The Rev. R. H. Jackson, pastor of the Pine Level Free Will Baptist Church, was elected vice-president of the convention to succeed the Rev. J. A. Evans, formerly of Fremont, who resigned his office in the convention upon assuming the pastorate of the First Free Will Baptist Church in Bryan, Texas.

A special resolution was passed by the executive committee commending Mount Olive College for the progress it has made toward achieving regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The resolution also expressed the confidence of the committee in the administration of the college, approved Sunday, April 24, as "Challenge Day" for the college, and called upon Free Will Baptist churches to make special gifts on this day to assist the college in its accreditation drive. An appropriation of $500 was made to the State Convention Student Loan Fund at Mount Olive College in keeping with a motion passed at the 1959 session of the convention.

Davis Church in Carteret County was approved as the site for the 1960 convention, and a program committee was appointed consisting of Michael Pelt of Mount Olive, E. E. Edwards of Chocowinity, and R. H. Jackson.

The committee allocated $100 to Cragmont Assembly, the denomination's summer encampment at Black Mountain, North Carolina.

The Rev. N. B. Barrow of Ayden, president of the convention, presided over the meeting.

Recognition Granted Bible College by A. A. C. R. A. O.

An importance advance in the academic recognition of the Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, has been recently gained. That advance has been set forth for the educational world to see in the new edition of College Blue Book. It will be noticed on Page 176 that the college now has official A. A. C. R. A. O. (American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers) approval for the transfer of two years of work done at Free Will Baptist Bible College.

The section of the book is that in which A. A. C. R. A. O. lists their recommendations for the granting of credit from various colleges. Free Will Baptist Bible College is listed under the heading of colleges in Tennessee which are "... accredited by the Southern Association for 2 years work."

While this does not mean formal membership in the association, it does mean that the college has what is as good as regional or college accreditation for transfer credit. (Naturally, the Bible College could obtain formal junior college membership since it is not a junior college.)

The obtaining of this recognition was contingent upon receiving the approval of the state university, the University of Tennessee. Such U. T. approval in the state of Tennessee is the same as state accreditation in some few states that have a state accreditation board (as in North Carolina, for example.) It will be remembered that the Bible College announced publicly about a year ago that it was seeking such U. T. approval. An official letter from the University in 1959 granted that approval for the transfer of two years' work to the university. Shortly thereafter that status was given a national standing by the listing in the A. A. C. R. A. O. bulletin referred to above. This new advance in academic recognition crowns and climaxes the good transfer policy of two years' work the college has had some time now, through George Peabody Teacher's College here in Nashville, which often has accepted up to three years' work.

The Bible College will not stop at this point, but is moving as rapidly as possible toward obtaining the type of approval (or accreditation) that will guarantee the safe transfer of all four years of work. The school is also considering the possibility of obtaining state department approval for the training of public school teachers. The college already has full four-year accreditation in the field of Bible College education through the Accrediting Association of Bible Colleges, gained over a year ago.

Mount Olive College Announces First Phase Of Development Program

The Board of Directors of Mount Olive College has authorized the administration to proceed with plans for an extensive development program. Hardy Talton, of Goldsboro and chairman of the finance committee of the board, has announced that the college will seek $500,000 during the next five years for expansion on the new fifty-acre campus, located just outside the city limits of Mount Olive.

Initial plans for this development were laid in 1956 when the college decided that future buildings should be new ones designed and built for college use rather than to purchase old buildings in the residential area surrounding the present campus. At the same time, the college purchased a new campus site of fifty acres, which has just been given highway frontage by the rerouting of U. S. 117 around Mount Olive.

College officials estimate that the new campus will accommodate approximately 500 students, 300 of whom will be resident, and that the total cost of developing the campus will be two million dollars. The campaign to raise $500,000 is but the first phase of the new development program.

The present campus, which is being utilized to near capacity this year with an enrollment of 175 students, is located four-tenths of a mile from the new property, and will continue to be used as long as needed.

In releasing this news, President W. Burkette Raper said, "Our development program is the result of years of serious study and sincere prayer for God's guidance. If we are to meet the needs of our Free Will Baptist young people for a sound program of Christian higher education, we must attempt great things and expect great things from God and our people. The words of Isaiah have been ringing in our hearts for a long time: 'Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes . . . And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord,' (Isaiah 54.2, 13)."

THE MAIL BOX

AVAILABLE FOR SERVICES

"I would appreciate it if you would run a notice in the paper that I am open for singing and preaching services. I would like to be in charge of a permanent choir or serve as an assistant pastor and choir director."—Rev. L. M. Dean, 1116 North Highland, Atlanta 6, Georgia.

APPRECIATES INTEREST

"I had an ad put in the paper in regards to good used church pews. Now I would like to notify the public that Calvary Free Will Baptist Church of Wilson, North Carolina, has purchased the pews and we appreciate the interest each one shown in this matter."—Rev. Cecil E. Rose, Route 1, Box 48, Wilson, North Carolina.

REQUEST FOR HELP

"We are not going to beat around the bush or use any long drawn out phrases to tell you what this letter is about. We want you to help us build a house of worship for the Free Will Baptist church of Princess Anne, Virginia. As you perhaps know or have heard, we have been renting a schoolhouse for over five years. We have made some substantial progress and have about 35 members, mostly women and children. There are about 8 or 10 male adult members to carry the financial responsibility of the church. This includes a high monthly rent on the school, and we have had a full time pastor for over 20 months. This expense and the fact that you cannot get people to attend church service in a school building is hindering the progress we should be making.

"We have our lot clear of any indebtedness and a small amount in a building fund. We have had some help from one of our churches in the city of Norfolk. But all our churches in this area have their own financial problems. Also we have had some help from the State Mission Board of Virginia; but, as some of you know, this mission board is weak financially. We need $2,000 with what we have and can raise among our members to enable us to get in a building of our own during this year.

"Any amount the Lord leads you to give will be appreciated. Make all checks payable to Princess Anne Free Will Baptist Mission and send to D. R. Harris, Route 1, Princess Anne, Virginia."—D. R. Harris, Chairman of Building Committee.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: I have heard it said that rather than for their sins, men are to be judged for their works. Is this correct?—James Manley, Illinois.

Answer: Surely it is true that we are to be judged for our works, but in a definite sense men's sins are included in their works. Sins are works but they are indeed bad works. "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Revelation 20:11-15).

When the great white throne judgment is carried out some may be judged more severely than others for the same evil work, simply because that they did the wrong in a more complete knowledge of the truth than the less informed. It is a very serious thing that an individual should disobey God contrary to the light he has or to the light available to him that he has refused to acquire and acknowledge. "And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more" (Luke 12:47, 48).

Revelation 21:15 quoted above should serve as a warning to those that have regarded the future with a careless attitude, and I am afraid that such an attitude is too common both among church members and those that have never made any profession of salvation. It was too late for the rich man of Luke 16:19-31 who most likely, both knew the law and professed to obey it. No one gets his name written in the book of life in an empty profession. We must believe in Jesus as the Bible depicts Him. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36). He is there presented as "the lamb slain before the foundation of the world"; hence we need to accept His atoning work on Calvary's Cross as the sure but only means to cleanse our sins.

There are many Scriptures in the Holy Bible that present our precious Lord and Saviour as the only way we may be saved. We must accept and appropriate these personally. In such we learn that all men are without excuse. God has caused to be left in fallen man a sufficient fear for Himself that when appropriated, man may find God. "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves: Which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another: In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel" (Romans 2:14-16); "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil" (Ecclesiastes 12:14). (See Luke 8:17; Romans 1:19, 20.)

I have heard the testimonies of two African Negroes that God in a vision directed them to those who gave them the gospel and were thus saved. "And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart" (Jerusalem 29:13). Of course, the few that have found the Lord in this kind of seeking are few compared with those to whom missionaries have gone to in a day by day sacrificial dedicated life search. And because that a few have sought out missionaries does not mean that God will not hold you and me personally responsible for each soul that is lost and might have been saved by our efforts. This leaves us who belong to the church shouldering a tremendous responsibility while we literally stand in the gap. (See Jeremiah 23:1, 10, 23.

24.) "Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel; Thus ye speak, saying, our transgressions and our sins be upon us and we pine away in them, how should we then live?" (Ezekiel 33:9, 10); "Verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24). (See John 1:29, 3:16; Romans 3:23; 6:23; Acts 16:31; compare Romans 10:8-21.) Thus we may see that a knowledge of, and obedience to the Word of God, and this alone change one's life and works from evil to that which is Godly and fruitful.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

This word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

FOLLOWING JESUS

"And Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And he said unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they straightway left their nets, and followed him" (Matthew 4:18-20).

"Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee? Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me" (John 21:20-22).

We begin this last meditation on the subject, "Following Jesus," by asking the most important and fundamental question: Why follow Christ? These two passages of Scripture, taken together as directives of the Christian's daily life, give us the answer to our question. The first is taken from the beginning of His ministry, as He began to select His disciples, and shows the expects those who follow Him to let ing come between us and our duty to li, for they straightway left their nets, followed him.

was important in those early days of Christianity that those who were to carry the work of the Kingdom of God in the world be prepared for the work. They not follow close to Jesus in order to learn will for their lives after He had gone to His Father. So it is with follow-Him today. We should not expect all He has to say to us will be simple easy from the moment we first hear call. There will be many things which not only be hard to do but hard to understand; however, if we go on with Teacher and Guide, we shall come to a re when these hard sayings will be clear.
We continue in this way, we may confidently believe that the Holy Spirit will lead us into all the truth that is in Christ Jesus.

Now, turning to the last passage of the Gospel, we find Christ at the last of His ministry giving instructions to Peter for the remainder of his life on earth. Read the verses just preceding those of the text, beginning with the fifteenth. Jesus asked Peter three times if he loved Him. Three times Peter confessed that he loved Christ, and three times Christ assigned a certain responsibility to Peter's responsibility, with the final command, Follow me.

There is something more in this than we are able to see or acknowledge. Are we not as faithful as was Peter? Peter seeing him (John) said to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?
I suppose that it is natural that we want to regulate the lives of others, but that is not the Christ way. Jesus saith unto Peter, If I will that he tarry till I come, what doest thou to thee? follow thou me. It seems to me that Christ is telling Peter that John's work and work are no concern of his; that Peter should make sure that his own life is right and that his own work is done by himself; and that John, dedicated to the will of his Master, will have to live his own life and be responsible for it.

That is possibly the most important lesson for each follower of Christ to learn.
Paul learned the importance of it in his own life and gave it to the Corinthians in uncertain terms, "But I keep under my flesh and bring it into subjection: lest
I be tempted by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway"
(1 Corinthians 9:27).

"Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children; And walk in love, as Christ also loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God . . ."
(Ephesians 5:1, 2).

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Mrs. Veva T. Renfrow

It is with regret and deep sympathy that we mention the unexpected passing of Mrs.
Veva Tucker Renfrow on February 7, 1960.

She was a loyal member of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Little Rock Free Will Baptist Church of Lucama, North Carolina. Her willingness to serve in any capacity in the auxiliary work will long be remembered by those who worked with her.

All those who knew her, loved her and will deeply feel the vacancy left by her passing.

We, the members of the auxiliary, humbly bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

We express our deepest sympathy to her family and may they find peace and comfort in Him who said, "Come unto Me all ye who labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

(John 20)

Introduction: The resurrection itself no eye beheld; His disciples knew it only as a fact accomplished. How could it be proved? The proof of the empty tomb, the graveclothes and the napkin, the testimony of the angels, all this was not wholly convincing and the disciples continued to doubt. He Himself must be seen alive; this alone was a testimony not to be doubted. Thus,
He appeared nine times before His ascension. Notice that it was to a woman first. It was a woman that bore Him first, before brothers came. It was a woman that beheld Him first after His resurrection. And, when He shall appear again, He shall appear to His bride!

I. SHE WAITED

She arrived early in the morning and realized that He was not there, yet she waited. Oh, that we might wait patiently upon Him and for Him (Lamentations 3:25, 26).

II. SHE WEPT

Was it not enough that they had crowned Him with thorns, nailed Him to the tree, etc.? Now must they steal His body? She

Dear Friends in Christ:

We would like to share with you some of the things that have happened since we sent out our November newsletter. First of all, we want to praise God and to thank each of you for gifts, Christmas cards and wept, not over herself, but over her Lord. How often do Christians weep over Him? over a lost one? If more Christians would shed tears, then more sinners would shed tears!

III. SHE WOULD NOT QUIT

She was not a quitter. Nothing had gone right; the worst of all calamities had taken place, and let she stuck with it in childlike faith, waiting upon Him. In our darkest hour, when all seems hopeless, when souls we have been working with seem not to respond, do not quit! “. . . he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not” (Galatians 6:8, 9).

IV. SHE WITNESSED

She witnessed immediately with no hesitation. She was obedient to Him. When Jesus Christ reveals Himself, it should automatically result in witnessing. “. . . Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you” (John 20:21).

—Rev. Malcolm C. Fry, Pastor, First Free Will Baptist Church, Lake Charles, Louisiana.

letters we received during the past Christmas season. We also thank you for your prayers, for “. . . The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much” (James 5:16).

The Waid family was with us for two weeks during the holiday season. They had a vacation from language school. Perhaps we were not very good entertainers as we were so busy going to Christmas and New Year's services at our various places of worship here in Hokkaido. We were happy though in all our business and enjoyed having them with us. Their four children and our two boys seemed to enjoy being able to play together and to use English.

We were pleased with our special Christmas services this year, and trust that God was glorified through them even though no visible results have been seen. As we went caroling for the first time here in Bihoro. We handed out a large number of tracts as we went from place to place singing and have a short street meeting.

New Year's Day is Japan's biggest holiday. Stores close, work stops, and just about everyone celebrates. They like to celebrate about the first four days of the New Year by drinking, going to the shrines and visiting. Because of this, we like to have special prayer services at the church during this time. Even though only a few come, we feel the services are worthwhile.

Although it snowed a big snow in November, it melted after a week or so and then it began to look like no more snow in Bihoro. Everyone was talking about how unusual it was and then on January 17th it happened! When we woke up, we found it had snowed during the night and was still coming down with a strong wind blowing it in big drifts. Fred walked to church going through snow waist deep in many places. Only one young fellow came to church besides Fred and our helper. It snowed all day, and by night it was next to impossible to go anywhere. We still had plenty of snow on the ground although it has not snowed much since.

In this year of 1960, we trust that the precious name of Jesus might truly be praised and exalted throughout the islands of Japan. Our work here is still very small, but we are thankful for the progress that is being made. In this New Year, the start of the second century of Protestant missions in Japan, we dedicate ourselves afresh to the task of spreading the gospel in Japan. We desire your prayers in our behalf.

Yours in Christ,

Fred and Evelyn Hershey

ALL THINGS THROUGH CHRIST

My earthly father used to say, "An idle man is the devil's workshop," so he managed to keep his boys busy, both mentally and physically. He could figure pretty accurately what a boy could and ought to do. I knew pretty well how long it would take a boy with one mule to plow a certain plot of ground. If more than one mule was used, the father still knew when we should be ploughing.

When I think of the accuracy of my earthly father who was limited in knowledge, and then of my heavenly Father who knows all things, I praise the Lord for being able to say, "Father, I thank Thee for the satisfaction that comes to me in the assurance that Thou knowest what a fellow can do, and what is expected of those who have accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. Not a single thing hast Thou requested that is beyond the powers Thy children with Thy help."

Now there are many things we cannot do in ourselves. Every Christian will confess there are many things beyond his reach, as it is written, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13).

THINK ON THESE THINGS

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you" (Philippians 4:8, 9). These are the things we can do through Christ which strengtheneth us. No man can do for Christ, only by the strength of Christ. We can do anything that is right when Christ is with us and in us, and we in Him. He said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you" (John 14:13-14). Notice the Master said unto you and not for you. Whatever we need to overcome, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, or the pride of life (1 John 2:15, 16), we are able to do so in Christ.

A WAY TO ESCAPE

"There has no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Corinthians 10:13). Thus God makes it possible through Christ to do all things. Often we human beings reach the point where we say, "I cannot help it"; but may we remember God, through Jesus Christ, can help us to the extent that we can overcome every temptation. There are many things Christ cannot do for us because of our little faith.

TRUE WITNESSES

No person is prepared to be a true witness in or about anything that he knows nothing about. I have seen witnesses on the stand being questioned by a lawyer when they wanted to tell the truth; however, the lawyer kept them headed off. They seemed to be at a loss, but this is not true in witnessing for Christ.

THE HOLY GHOST GIVES US STRENGTH

Jesus said, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8). We are powerless to witness for Christ unless we have been baptized in to Christ.

NOT ONLY BAPTIZED BUT FILLED

The apostle, Paul, says, "And be not drunk with wine, wherein there is excess; but be filled with the Spirit" (Ephesians 5:18). It is a sin not to be filled with the Holy Spirit. It is a command—but be filled. Yes, it is a command, and it is a sin to refuse to obey any command that comes to us from God. We might just as well refuse to pray or to confess our sins, as to refuse to let God fill us with the Holy Spirit. Very likely, some people will not agree with me on this, but I write what God leads me to write. I cannot believe that when we refuse to be led by the Holy Spirit in one thing, God will hear and answer our prayer unless we confess our sin first. Jonah was swallowed by a prepared fish because he would not obey God. However, he was glad when he reached dry land again, and he was willing to be obedient and obey the voice of God.

Sometimes we are swallowed in our selfishness; sometimes we are swallowed by our enemies because we refuse to obey the voice of the Lord Jesus Christ. Usually, however, when we come to ourself, like the prodigal son, we are ready and anxious to obey the voice of the Lord, to go back to Him in true repentance and ask forgiveness. God is watching to fulfill that gloriously satisfying promise, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

Well did William Cowper write the following:

There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners, plunged beneath that flood
Lose all their guilty stains.

Notice that William Cowper said that sinners come to Christ, they lose all their guilty stains. That is right; when we confess and accept Christ as our personal Saviour, we lose all our guilty stains.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

Becky Loring Solves A Mystery

by Betty Swinford

DARKNESS had come to Rancho del Sol—the ranch of the sun.

Becky Loring stood at the corral gate rubbing the sleek neck of her paint, Robin. Her thoughts, however, were not upon the mare. Indeed, her thoughts seemed to be just drifting. There was something about the nights that brought a certain loneliness to Becky's heart, a hunger that she could not understand. Oh, it was there in the daytime too! Only then she could keep busy so that the feeling was held back . . .

Her dark eyes roamed from star to star, studying each one. "God, are You there? What are You like?" Becky cocked her head thoughtfully. "Is it possible to really know You?"

Oh, how many times, when the ranch was quiet, Becky walked out here. And always it ended the same way, with her pleading with God to show her His love, to prove to her that He was real, and that she could truly know Him!

At last she turned and went back into the house. In her room once more, she went to the chest and took out a long flat box. Day after tomorrow was her mother's birthday and she still had to wrap the gift she had bought in Tucson today. Carefully she took the string of imitation pearls from the cotton.

"They are beautiful!" she breathed. "Mother will love them!"

Working carefully, Becky tore the tag free. That was when she saw it for the first time. The price on the tag read $1,500!

She blinked a few times as the truth dawned on her. The girl in the jewelry store had said that it was her first day to work there, and she hadn't seemed too sure of herself. Somehow—somehow that salesgirl had given her the wrong pearls!

"If I kept them, no one would ever know," she told herself. "Real pearls—$1,500!"

There was little sleep for Becky that night. The temptation to keep the pearls was almost more than she could bear. Yet some inner voice urged her to return them and get the two dollar string.

The next morning after breakfast she saddled Robin and rode over to the Davis Ranch. Her best friends lived there—Penny and her brother Johnny. They had known each other since childhood and often talked over their problems together.

As Becky entered the big, old-fashioned kitchen at the Davis home, she smelled the fragrant aroma of peanut butter cookies. Becky took a deep breath and headed for the table.

"I may as well pitch in," she said. "I'll get roped into it sooner or later anyhow!"

Penny laughed and her bright golden head nodded toward the oven. "Then you can start with taking that batch out of the oven."

Johnny sauntered in about then, and folded his long frame about a chair. He looked a lot like his sister—blonde and tanned and always laughing.

"Hi, Becky! Saw Robin out by the corral so I figured you were around somewhere. How about going into town with us this afternoon? I can call your mother and ask if it's—"

"You're going into Tucson?" Becky asked quickly. She placed the hot cookie sheets on the table and thoughtfully began to stir the thick batter in the big yellow bowl. Maybe this was the answer about those pearls.

"What if you bought something and the saleswoman gave you something much better than what you paid for?" Becky asked suddenly. "What would you do?"

"You mean, if you pay for something and they give you something better by mistake?" Johnny's laugh rang out. "Who'd do a think like that?"

Becky slid another sheet of cookies into the oven. "But if someone did, what would you do?"

Penny's blue eyes snapped. "I'd be awfully tempted to keep it!"

Johnny bit the side of his jaw. "I dunno. I believe you should take it back—that is, if that happened to you, Becky."

Becky struggled with the problem until that afternoon, and at last she decided she must return the pearls. So, accepting the offer of a ride into town, she paid another visit to the jewelry store where she had bought the lovely string of pearls. To her surprise, there was a police detective inside examining a huge glass case.

"I cannot understand it," the owner cried anxiously. "We had just received a new shipment and the salesgirl must have reached into the wrong case for the pearls. Otherwise, you see, it would have been looted. We were getting ready to display the new shipment. Then, suddenly, this string of pearls was gone!"

Quietly, Becky went to the girl who had waited on her the day before. "I have the pearls they're looking for. You gave them to me by mistake."

For a moment the salesgirl turned white. Then, eagerly, she reached out her hands. "Thank you more than I can say. If they hadn't turned up, I would have lost my job!"

Becky felt a heavy load drop from her heart as the pearls were given back to their rightful owner. Soon the detective was gone and all was quiet once more.

"Here is the string of pearls you really bought yesterday," the salesgirl, Miss Grant told Becky. "A thousand thanks to you for bringing the other back!" Miss Grant studied Becky silently for a moment. Then she said, "It must have been a great temptation to give the expensive ones to your mother."

"It was, Miss Grant; but I kept hearing a voice telling me to bring them back."

"A voice?"

"Yes," Becky said thoughtfully, her dark eyes going a little sad. "It must have been God's voice."

"Are you a Christian?" Miss Grant asked suddenly.

"N-no. But I—I've been wondering about so many things."

Miss Grant hesitated. "God's voice does speak to us, you know. He has a way of putting a searching hunger in our hearts to know Him. Do you know this verse, Becky, 'Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him, and he with me?'"

Becky felt a lump form in her throat. How very beautiful those words were! But how strange they made her feel! "Please," she said, "tell me more."

"It is Jesus, God's Son, Becky. He is standing at your heart's door, asking to let inside. He wants to forgive your sins and be your Saviour. He wants to make you happy. He wants to walk always at your side!"

Jesus! He was the One her heart had longed for! He was the One who had urged her to bring back those pearls just so He could show her His love through them.

Convention Notes

And they remembered His words, and turned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest (Luke 24:8, 9).

These were words of Jesus which were used to challenge the ladies of the Eastern Auxiliary Convention of North Carolina to live their lives in fuller service for the Lord day by day serve Him in the home, the church, and in the community. Mrs. O. Terry, the president, and each chairman challenged the ladies to serve the Lord more wholeheartedly in the coming six months than they had in the past.

Each person was made to rejoice for the work which has been done among our youth when they heard the declamation contest winners and those who were the runners-up. The declamations challenged young and old to hear God's call for workers and to respond with Isaiah of old, "Here am I send me." The Central Auxiliary Convention of North Carolina had the privilege of having Mrs. Eunice Edwards attend their convention. Mrs. T. E. Tyndall, the president, urged upon each lady to do the following things: Look in faith, search the Scriptures, and do in love, as she spoke words of greeting to the women.

Later Mrs. Edwards used the words from Corinthians to remind the ladies that they are "Laborers Together with God." She compared the work to a wheel. The various departments of the ladies work form the spokes of the wheel. Each one must put her shoulder to the wheel and push so that each spoke of the wheel will be strong and the wheel will be of the fullest service for the Lord. She called upon the ladies to study, to learn, and then to grow.

Mrs. Edwards showed the great need of our young men and women by winning our youth to the Lord; by training them for service; and then using them in the work of the Lord. It is our prayer that as the various conventions are held throughout this state and other states, we may remember Jesus' parting words, "Go ye therefore, . . . Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. . . ." (Matthew 28:19, 20).

The meeting was dismissed with prayer.

Children of the Resurrection

(Lesson for April 17)

Lesson: Colossians 3:1-15.

Golden Text: 2 Corinthians 5:17.

INTRODUCTION

In today's lesson, a departure is made from the Sermon on the Mount to bring emphasis upon the resurrection life—the Christian life. The lesson will be concerned with the characteristics of the risen life which, in reality, are closely associated with the Beatitudes. Let us never forget that the resurrection life is made possible only through and because of Christ's resurrection. We should realize that the glory of His resurrection rises out of the mystery of His death for the sins of the world.

Although this is Easter Sunday, this lesson is not about Christ's resurrection. It is not, however, as you read and study it, will you realize more fully the significance of Easter. Few, it seems have a satisfactory conception of it. To many it is just one of the one or four great days of the year, or it commemorates a great miracle; but it is more than these things. It affects man's degenerate heart, for it is the truth of the Gospel; that Jesus Christ, by His death, freed man from sin and that by His resurrection He sustains us if we open our hearts to His presence.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. The life of the Christian is the resurrection life of the Lord Jesus Christ (Colossians 3:1).

2. The affections we have will correspond to the nature of the life that is in us (Vs. 3).

3. The hidden life of the Christian will be gloriously manifested when Christ returns (Vs. 4).

4. The real life of the Christian is a life that is hidden with Christ in God (Vs. 3).

5. The real Christian life strikes the death-blow to the sins of the flesh (Vv. 5-7).

6. The real Christian life relieves itself of cumbersome and hindering baggage (Vv. 8, 9).

7. The Christian is a new creature made anew in the image and likeness of God (Vs. 10).

8. Racial, cultural, and religious differences all disappear in Christ (Vs. 11).

9. He who is a true Christian wears garments of beauty and glory (Vv. 12-15).

10. Is there anything that is not included in the great word, "Whatsoever"? (Vs. 17).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. While Paul was situated at Ephesus (about 53-56 A. D.), and when he was conducting his school for the training of young men for the ministry, he sent out one young man by the name of Epaphras who went to the town of Colosse about one hundred miles east of the city of Ephesus. In response to his evangelistic effort, a small church was founded and for some time enjoyed much growth and prosperity. However, in the region about Colosse and intermingled with his congregation were those who worshiped idols and followed the practices of pagan religions. Some of those pagan religions continued to influence the converts to the Christian faith, and thus brought confusion and division among the members of Epaphras' congregation. Apparently, he was an effective evangelist, but was lacking in ability to do constructive pastoral work, or to know how to handle the problem of confusion and division in his church. Therefore, he set out to go by Rome where Paul was in prison, and the letter to the church at Colosse was the result. It was written sometime during the two years Paul was in prison in Rome (about 60-62 A. D.).—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

2. "Children of the Resurrection" is a great title for the lesson. This chapter deals with clothing, but not the kind designed by the Paris shops. We are risen with Christ and should dress and act as a Christian.

We are dead to sin and our new life is hid with Christ. That is truly a comforting thought. An old saint was to be martyred, but he said, "You cannot find me for my life is hid with Christ in God."

Christians wear clothing of mercy, kindness, humility, mildness, patience, forgiveness, and love toward God and man. Love is the belt that keeps the garments in place.—Standard Commentary.

3. To put off the old man with his deeds is to mortify the members of our carnal body. In other words, to mortify our physical members is to bring into subjection the carnal appetites, affections, tastes, tempers and worldly desires of the old man who is our own natural self. "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry" (Vs. 5).

4. ". . . ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds" (Vv. 8, 9). To mortify the bigger and greater sins, as we think of them, is not enough for those who would live the resurrection life. For the average person it is more important to put off the sins which are more common and thought to be smaller and less harmful and dangerous. Oftentimes, however, it is the little foxes, that spoil the vines, such as anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy (irreverence toward anything regarded as sacred), filthy language, and such like. All these belong to and characterize the old man whom we are to put off with his deeds.—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

5. How thrilling was the news of the capture of Jerusalem by General Allenby during World War I. Before the Turks evacuated the Holy City, they hastened to the famous tomb of Jesus. They, according to a news dispatch, "robbed it of all its treasures." God's children said, "Not so! That tomb was divested of its real Treasure some two thousand years previously when the glorified Christ emerged triumphantly therefrom!"

6. Set your affection . . . not on things on the earth. God's children are in the world but not of the world. Said Dr. V. Raymond Edman, "The world is a spirit, and is expressed in things. It defies exact definition, because it is a spirit. The closest working definition I have found is that of John Wesley, 'Whatever cools my affection toward Christ is the world.'"—Selectcd.

7. "He Rose Again." There is an old story and doubtless a true story, of a Christian gentleman who stood before the window of an art store looking at the picture of the crucifixion. A dirty, ragged lad came and gazed also at the picture. The man turned to the boy and asked, "Do you know who it is?" "Ycs," was the quick reply, "that is Jesus, our Saviour." Then with a mingled look of pity and surprise that the man was so ignorant, and with a desire to enlighten him further, he continued: "Them's the soldiers, and that woman crying is His mother." He waited a moment for further questioning and then thrust his hands in his

Bible College Choir to Make Seventh Annual Spring Tour

The 32-voice Free Will Baptist Bible College choir will make its seventh annual spring tour April 25—May 1, under the direction of R. Rose Dowden, Music Department head, President L. C. Johnson has announced.

In previous years, the choir has presented its musical program in Free Will Baptist churches in Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Michigan, Arkansas and Missouri.

Of last year's tour, a vacationing journalist, Spilman, of the News-Virginian, had this to say:

"... Vivid is the memory of the group of thirty or more young men and young women encountered in Big Springs State Park in the Missouri Ozarks. They poured out of a bus and onto the rocks where we stood watching and listening to the clear, cool water gushing forth from the springs.

"From the friendly conversation with Mr. Ross Dowden and Mrs. J. E. Simpson, accompanying them, we learned that this was the College Choir from the Free Will Baptist Bible College of Nashville, Tennessee, on their sixth annual choir tour. St. Louis was their terminal objective.

"Mr. Dowden, director of music, and Mrs. Simpson, dean of women, asked us to join them in a brief devotional, which we did.

"There in the open the choir sang two hymns, beautifully and brilliantly; there one of the young men stepped forth to read from the Bible, and speak briefly; there another young man prayed fervently with the churning waters as a reverent background, free and unafraid and much less disturbed by the orge of juvenile delinquency . . ."

This year, the group will leave Nashville by chartered bus, Monday morning, April 25, and will visit two churches in Alabama, three in Florida, and four in Georgia before returning to Nashville a week later.

The choir program will include special choir selections as well as solos, trios and octet numbers. Barbara McGahey, sophomore, will bring the devotional thoughts, and a message will be brought about the Bible College.

The choir tour climaxes the year for the music students. They look forward to visiting old friends and making new ones in the various churches. This year the choir will be wearing new robes made possible through gifts from churches and friends.

Services will be held at the following churches at 7:30 each evening except where indicated otherwise:

- April 25—Cordova, Alabama
- April 26—Colquitt, Georgia
- April 27—Chipley, Florida
- April 28—Dothan, Alabama

pockets and said with a reverent, subdued voice, "They killed Him, Mister, they killed Him!"

The gentleman asked the ragged boy where he learned all that. "At the mission school," was his reply. The man resumed his walk, leaving the lad still looking at the picture. He had not gone a block when he heard a childish voice calling, "Mister Mister!" As the man turned, the boy raised his hand and in a triumphant tone shouted, "I wanted to tell you that He rose again! Yes, Mister, He rose again!" Then, smiling and with a farewell wave of his hand, he ran down the street.—Selected.

NOW "upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, ¹bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them. 2 And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. 3 ²And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Je'sus. 4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, ³behold, two men stood by them in shining garments:

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye ⁴the living among the dead? 6 He is not here, but is risen: ⁵remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Gal'i-lee, 7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

LOOK UNTO ME!

C. H. Overman

The love of life is a driving force in all men's lives, and this is as it should be. God expects man to live a full, joyous and radiant life; but there are multitudes who have never found this life in Christ. Certainly, they love and are loved in return, but full and complete love is found in Christ alone. He who loves much without Christ, loves much more with Christ.

We live in a busy world—a world of toil and confusion. We are busy making a living, busy with making a name, concerned with our social standings; therefore, our generation is inclined to forget that the day will come when we'll take time to die. It is imperative that man consider something other than the material and earthly. There is something for which man must make preparation—eternity and God.

God says, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else" (Isaiah 45:22). How do we, as finite human beings, look unto God? Can we see Him upon looking? What would He have us see? To begin with, He has only one medium or plan of salvation. There is no alternate selection. God is still saying to man, "Look unto Me," and we look unto Him through Christ Jesus. Even then, however, we do not see God through the physical eye. Instead, we see Him through the eye of faith, and faith alone. Thomas, one of the disciples, refused to believe that Christ was risen, until he saw Him. Christ thus said to Thomas, ". . . because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

To see, or perceive, the plan of redemption in Christ, we must see the complete picture. The Cross always reminds us of suffering, pain and death; and it was God's Son who suffered there for us. We see, however far, more than the physical suffering. We see God reconciling us unto Himself through Christ Jesus. We see Jesus who was ". . . wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and by his stripes we are healed" (Isaiah 53:5).

Seeing Christ, however, does not stop or end with the Cross. As we approach this Easter Sunday, we once again remind our hearts and souls that not only did Christ die, but He also arose from the grave and thus won the victory over death and the grave. His victory assures us of the same victory which He won. Even before His death He said to His disciples: ". . . because I live, ye shall live also" (John 14:19). The disciples could not understand the words of Jesus relative to His death and resurrection, and they did not understand until He ascended back to His Father and the Holy Spirit came on the Day of Pentecost. His betrayal, trial, crucifixion and death were mysteries to them. His mother, and the other women who loved Him dearly, stood by the Cross in shrouded sorrow and tears; for to them hope was vanishing. The promised Messiah was suffering the defeat of the Cross and their loss was great, but God had not forsaken them. Instead, He was simply saying through the trials, "Look unto Me." They looked and hoped until the third morning after His death, and then their despair was turned to hope and then reality; for Christ had come forth out of the tomb. The days that followed were days of joy and long awaited power. He appeared unto many, and each in turn testified the truth of His resurrection. Soon there were many believers and finally the Early Church arose, bearing witness that He is alive for evermore. With God, the invitation is the same, "Look unto Me."

God is saying to our nation this Easter season, "Turn to Me and be saved." Many do not have time for God, but still He invites and pleads with man. Look to the Cross, and in thus looking, we see Christ and in seeing Christ, we see God. When we see Him and realize what he has done for us, we cannot help but desire Him. In desiring Him, we seek Him, and in seeking Him we find Him. In finding Him we have life—the spiritual life—and we are saved from the condemnation of sin. In Him there is life for a look.

Victory through Our Lord Jesus Christ

THE CHRISTIAN world today recognizes the fact that Jesus died an un- and shameful death on the Cross. It shows also that it was a voluntary, as well as a victorious death. Christ died of His own free will—no man could take it from Him. It was not a death of defeat, as He hung there on the Cross, for He did not die until He had finished the work that His Father had given Him to do. He came out of the tomb alive, and He is living actively among us today. His resurrection is a guarantee that we, too, who live and move and have our being in Him, will also triumph over death.

What we all too frequently forget is that we assumed the entire responsibility for our sins, when He shed His blood for our redemption, for “. . . without the shedding of blood is no remission” (Hebrews 9:22).

It was the greatest manifestation of God's love for us, in that He sacrificed His own most precious treasure that salvation might come to all who would believe. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us” (Romans 5:8).

With the death of Christ, hope also died; for the blow to all who loved Him and had been associated with Him was too great for them to comprehend. They were stunned, and evidently believed that all their bright hopes were blasted forever. Their understanding of all that Jesus had taught them, concerning His purpose for coming into the world and of His Kingdom and being of this world, was darkened. When He died, everything worthwhile was dead, too; but in that hour of their darkest despair came joyous news of the empty tomb and the risen Lord. We find that hope revived, faith was rekindled, and new assurance was created by the words, “He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come,

Alice E. Lupton, New Bern, North Carolina

see the place where the Lord lay” (Matthew 28:6).

The resurrection of their Lord became their ground of faith and the motivating power of Christianity. Only a short time later we find His disciples launching out upon the work that Christ had assigned to them—“Go ye.”

The empty tomb of the resurrected Christ is the guarantee of the believer's salvation today, as it has ever been. Jesus said to Martha, in John 11:25, “. . . I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.”

In the spring, when we see all nature clothed in green and flowers and all of God's creation in nature taking on new life, we know that the winter is past, and we have awakened to a new life. This is so with the believer in Christ's life and His death, resurrection and ascension. It should mean a time of revival, new hope and aspirations, stronger faith in Him, for He said, “. . . because I live, ye shall live also” (John 14:19). Death should not be a monster to be feared. We should feel that it is the open door to that brighter, better life in Christ Jesus, our Lord, because He told His disciples, “Where I am, there ye may be also.”

Someone has said, “The resurrection not only placed divine approval upon the life and teachings of Jesus, but His empty tomb also became the birthplace of the Christian religion.”

Since the organization of the Christian Church, more than 1900 years ago, it has stood as the greatest monument to the life, death and resurrection of Christ. Preaching, teaching and the rendering of Christian service have spread among the nations, and some of the results were seen and appreciated in the last world war, when many of our sons fell into the hands of island natives, thought of by many of us, as barbarians or savages. However, the gospel of Christ had been carried to them, and they had become new creatures in Christ Jesus. Our boys were in safe hands, and we were glad. What are we doing to show our gratitude for this gospel? How are we living that we may convince the world that we worship a risen Saviour? Despite the fact that the Church of Christ has suffered many persecutions down through the centuries, and many precious lives have been sacrificed in devotion to the risen Saviour, the church and its influence is felt the world over. Everything points to the fact that the Church is on the forward move, which bears witness to the sincerity and loyalty of believers who have lived and labored in each succeeding generation. The enthusiasm and determination of those who believe in the once crucified and risen Christ has been, and still is, being manifested by the rapid growth of the various departments of our church life, for which we are very grateful. We rejoice in the fact that we are laborers together with God for the promulgation of His gospel through our Lord Jesus Christ. Yet there are, perhaps, many professed Christians who are spiritually dead, and who need the resurrection power applied. Jesus said to His disciples, “Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: . . . If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; . . .” (John 15:2-6).

We are enjoined to “. . . Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and

The Easter Message

Dr. Paul S. James

AMID all the question marks, Easter is a glorious exclamation mark! It declares that there is a living Saviour, there is life after death.

Our Lord Jesus Christ partook of our flesh and blood "... that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; And deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Hebrews 2:14, 15). His identification with us was complete. We have a High Priest who was tested in all points as we are.

When He was born, the glory of the Lord turned night into day. When He died on the Cross, the sin of man turned day into night; but a glorious morning followed.

He appeared to Mary Magdalene and she said, "Master!" He appeared to the disciples on the Emmaus road and they had burning hearts. He appeared to doubting Thomas and he said, "My Lord and my God!" He appeared to Peter and he said, "Thou knowest that I love Thee!" He appeared to Saul of Tarsus and he said, "What wilt thou have me to do?" He appeared to John and he fell at His feet as dead. At one time He appeared to more than five hundred.

This living Saviour is the only way to God. "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). Because of Him there is salvation for all who will trust Him. He saves to the uttermost all who come to God by Him, for He ever liveth. The hub of the Christian world is the empty tomb of Jesus Christ.

Jesus Christ stands on the other side of the grave, for "Death could not keep its prey, He tore the bars away!"

"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death" (Revelation 1:18). Our Saviour, Jesus Christ, has "... abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Timothy 1:10). All men are immortal, which means that the soul is deathless: we go on living after the body returns to the ground. But it is a terrible thought to go on living apart from Him who is life and light and love.

Jesus said, "... I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die..." (John 11:25, 26). This means that those who are Christ's, though they experience the first death (separation of the soul from the body), shall never experience the second death (separation of the soul from God).

It is our risen Saviour and living Lord who has opened to us the shining possibilities of the life that is eternal. Easter morn finds the Christian contemplating the heavenly shore, reunion with loved ones who have gone before, the invigoration of celestial air and the everlasting joys of the home Jesus has gone to prepare for us. His resurrection verifies what He said, vindicates what He claimed, and validates what He did.

Christ's resurrection changed Mary from a mourner into a messenger; it changed Thomas from a doubter into a believer; it changed Peter from a denier into a preacher; and it changed Paul from a persecutor into a missionary. The early Christians went forth preaching Jesus, and the resurrection (Acts 17:18). Some mocked, some procrastinated and some believed. For those who believed, the Easter event became an Easter experience—a cleansing, life-changing, transforming experience!

"What do you know about God?" one man asked another. The Christian replied, "There is much I don't know about God, but what I do know has changed my life." From the empty tomb of our Lord Jesus Christ has flowed the warm gulf stream of salvation which has changed the lives of millions of people.

Thank God for that day: the first day of the week; the declaration: "He is not here: for he is risen, as he said..." (Matthew 28:6); the dedication of those who went out quickly to tell the glad tidings; the demon-

Christ shall give thee life" (Ephesians 1:4).

He has promised because I live, ye shall live also. Let us then rejoice in the Lord because "... Christ is risen from the dead and become the firstfruits of them that sleep" (1 Corinthians 15:20).

May we take new hope, new courage, new faith and new inspiration, through our risen Lord, and go forth with new zeal to conquer in His name. God will raise our corruptible bodies and make them incorruptible, and change our vile bodies and make them like unto His glorious body, fit for kingdom in the life beyond. Then we say, "... thanks be to God, which gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 15:57).

The Cross Unifies Joseph and Us

by Robert W. Olewiler

TWO COLLEGE MEN went to a movie theater one afternoon. The man was a salacious one, as clearly advertised. They could have made much better use of their time.

While they were there, a fire broke out. They happened to be sitting near a fire escape, they started to step to safety. Then they looked back to see the theater goers begin to riot. Women and children were trampled and a tragedy was inevitable.

The young men deliberately stood on each side of the fire escape door. They held back the struggling crowd. They handed women and children to safety. Then one of them was pushed off the landing by the mob. The other caught fire from the encompassing flames.

"Don't cry," he said to his mother before his death three days later. "I have no regrets . . . I think I was the last to leave the theater alive."

This incident points up the strangeness of human nature. Think what those college students went for. Then, think what they did.

There's a dual personality in the Bible who faced a personal crisis the day Jesus was crucified. He was Joseph of Arimathea, a wealthy member of Jerusalem's City Council.

If you know folks who accept the pleasant things in life and try hard to evade the unpleasant, then you know Joseph. To him the unpleasant was anything that disrupted his world of wealth and comfort. He resisted new ideas because they might make him unpopular. His primary goal was to be on everybody's list of favorite people. Such a disposition brings about flabby character. It deadens will power. It leaves a person fearful and nervous, robs him of freedom and happiness. Living like this doesn't work.

Joseph's big problem arose when he discovered that he was attracted to Jesus Christ. If he chose to follow Christ, his political colleagues would disapprove and his other friends would cross him off their lists.

He tried to solve his difficulty by compromise, became a secret disciple of Jesus.

He guarded his secret well. When the City Council considered matters relating to Christ, Joseph maintained neutrality. He failed to attend many of these meetings. If he happened to be present, he refused to vote. He simply wouldn't go on public record either for or against Jesus.

Joseph soon recognized that he was a dual personality. He loved Christ on the one hand; he feared his fellow Jews on the other. The conflict and tension mounting within him landed him in an unhappy predicament.

Things came to a head on Good Friday, after Jesus breathed his last. All the sightseers left the scene of the crucifixion, except Joseph. He remained with his thoughts.

"I have a burial place for Jesus in my own garden," he remembered. "I'll go to the Roman governor, Pontius Pilate, and ask for Christ's body." So he decided; so he did.

Here was a public act of identification. Everyone would now know where Joseph stood. He threw in his lot with the Crucified and lodged his protest against the crucifiers.

"He took courage and went," is the way the Gospel writer, Mark, describes his action.

Some interesting facts about human nature come to light in Joseph's character. For instance, he was scared into secrecy. He was no Andrew, Peter or Matthew. He hid his faith because he feared public hostility.

A writer on New Testament themes once spoke about some people he met in Cyprus. Outwardly they were Moslems, but secretly they were Christians. They bore Christian names, received Christian Baptism and Holy Communion—all in secret. Afraid of persecution by the Turks, they pretended to be Moslems.

There are folks who wouldn't object to being Christian if Christianity were a secret society. Here's a man, for example, who lives in a small town. He knows everybody; everybody knows him. He goes to church occasionally with his wife. She's a member; he doesn't belong anywhere. Church members are marked individuals because the community recognizes they stand for something. They have committed themselves publicly to Jesus Christ.

We can be sure this man gives some consent to the religious faith in his wife's church. Nevertheless, he desires to maintain a certain aloofness. He'd rather not stand up and be counted. Maybe it's because that way he needn't take on any Christian responsibility.

Yet there are church members you can classify as secret disciples. They identify themselves with the Christian community, but stop there. They may attend Sunday school and church, pray during the week; but they fear doing more than this because they might be regarded as peculiar, different from other people. So they tread easy the hard path Jesus makes through the wilderness of life. Their conduct, speech, business, home and other relationships are much too outward for a manifestation of their faith. At heart they are Christians, but their social environment beats them into secrecy.

The day Jesus was crucified Joseph's fear yielded to self-reproach. He was shamed to

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Can a man that was once saved go out, get drunk, commit adultery and kill some person and yet be saved without repenting?—C. B. Nelson, Washington, North Carolina.

ANSWER: It is better to go to the Bible for a correct answer of this kind of question than to seek the opinion or theological view of some person, however good the opinion and regardless to what our respect for the person or his theological view may be. "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God" (1 Corinthians 6:9-11). Those about whom the above passage of Scripture was written had repented allowing the Holy Spirit to do His office work in their hearts and thereby change them from the very kind of sinners that your question includes. Without repentance these, apparently, could not have been saved. Of course, you may say that these had not been saved before they engaged in the terrible sins of dissipation mentioned in the passage; however, the passage still indicates that "... neither ... adulterers, nor ... drunkards ... shall inherit the kingdom of God." There are many possibilities here when we try to answer this so as to satisfy the different theological views; but rather than offer any kind of a discussion of these here, I prefer pointing up the unmistakable teaching of Scripture that no one of this class may ever hope as such to leave the scene of action here to awake in the blissful presence of a loving Saviour having Him pronounce His well done upon him, for the Bible teaches just the opposite: "... if the tree falleth toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be" (Ecclesiastes 11:3).

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Galatians 6:7, 8). In what condition and unto what will one who lives and dies here be resurrected? "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (Galatians 5:19-21); "For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God" (Ephesians 5:5); "Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled: but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge" (Hebrews 13:4). In these Scriptures one sees no more hope for the person who lives here in sin and never repents of it. I have heard some sermons that in a sense of the word might be theologically correct for the extreme Calvinist but in the light of all the Bible teaches would probably be misleading to some.

The thing for each of us Christians to do is obey all the teachings of the Bible: but of course, first of all we need to heed the teaching found in John 3:3, 5, 36; Isaiah 1:18; Matthew 11:28-30; etc., and be absolutely sure beyond a doubt that our sins have been forgiven and that we are saved and retaining an obedient walk in the light of God's Word. "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). This professing and not possessing Christ is a dangerous practice, for those who thus do are in danger of suffering from the terrible deception of the devil. "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us" (1 John 1:8). I heard someone who seems to know present day church conditions quite well say recently that he felt sure that less than five per cent of Protestant church members have ever been born again and that less than ten per cent of those born again are being obedient in Bible reading and maintaining a regular habitual prayer life. If this is true it is quite possible that when one knows church members that practice excessive drinking alcohol, engage at all in immorality and even think willful thoughts in a plan to murder someone, he knows of church members that have never experienced the saving grace of God's love in his heart; on the other hand, it seems from the Scriptures that there are such who have been saved and have apostatized. When this is true it is not likely that the Christian arrived in his state of apostasy in one single act of sin brought on by a sudden outburst of temper in the case of murder being the particular sin for which he shows weakness, or of drunkenness when immorality is the sin, or if it is drunkenness. It is not likely that one who was living a clean, quiet, chaste life would all of a sudden be swept from his chastity to rush to the liquor joint, guzzle down enough booze to get drunk and thereby lose his sense of sobriety. Generally Satan gets the Christian to take a social drink, but before that entices him to not condemn the drinking habit nor those who over indulge but rather to act neighborly to those enslaved in the peril of drunkenness. Or he will win the first phase of the battle by telling the person it is no use to try to support prohibition in politics because, says he, it is a losing battle.

"He, that being often reprov'd hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy" (Proverbs 29:1). "Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereon in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth. When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, his righteousnesses shall not be remembered but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it. . . . When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby" (Ezekiel 33:12, 13, 18). These verses seem to indicate that God warns His children by reprovng in one way or another; but that when they refuse to benefit by such repeated warnings, He gives them up. "And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity, whisperers" (Romans 1:28, 29). I realize that in Paul's day, the Gentile nations were completely given over to sin with only all exception as probably might be found here and there such as Cornelius was; this passage points back to a time when under the Noachian covenant who obeyed as Job had obeyed before calamity came in this obedience were considered righteous. Job offered seven bullocks each to the members of his family. This number of offerings appears to have gone over to some heathen forms of worship and practiced by Baal when called upon by king of Moab to curse Israel.

From here, we take a look at some of the Scriptures that, no doubt, warn believers against continuing in sin or returning to a practice of habitual sin, such sin as one who is not regenerated commits. "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we were buried with him by baptism into death: just like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life" (Romans 6:1-4); "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, shall we renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Hebrews 6:4-6); "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Hebrews 10:26-31).

There are many other Scriptures that seem to point toward the same facts for which one may use a concordance or good chain reference Bible to find and compare. These indicate that now we who are Christians and saved should recognize ourselves as being dead to sin and its old way that we freely walked in before we were regenerated. When that one that is saved deliberately turns back and insists on practicing that which was indulged in while in the old walk, and which only those who oppose God walk, again establishes himself in this way, he cannot be saved from it because by so doing he commits and acts comparable with that of crucifying Jesus again and bringing Him out into open shame. I surely do not want to be numbered with this group, for they must pass out of this life into their eternal doom with no further opportunity to be renewed to fellowship with the God of love who shaped them after His own likeness.

THE WILL OF GOD

1. Suffering. Gethsemane and Calvary were part of the will.
2. Submission. Christ was not forced to submit. He willingly drank the dread cup of agony.
3. Surrender. "Delivered Him to Pilate." By Roman standards Pilate was the greater. By Jewish standards Jesus was an outcast. How do we estimate Christ?
4. Authority and accusation. Christ's kingship was challenged, but false accusations prevailed. Conflicting testimony was treated with dignified silence. Christ's silence was infinitely more eloquent than any speech of defense. Was He not suffering according to the will of God?

CHRIST THE SAVIOUR

There has never been a preacher like the dying Christ; a pulpit like the Cross; no congregation like those present at Calvary; no sermon like the seven sayings of Jesus in the hours of His anguish. It is impossible to recall these seven cries without emotion. Seven, the mystic number, suggesting perfection, indicates the completeness of redemption.

1. How to forgive—"Father, forgive them."
2. How to comfort—"Today shalt thou be with Me in paradise."
3. How to sympathize—"Behold thy mother."
4. How to endure—"My God, My God."
5. How to suffer—"I thirst."
6. How to accomplish—"It is finished."
7. How to die—"Into Thy hands I commend My spirit."

REQUEST FOR HELP

"Since we have only 17 members and are located in a place where our denomination is not well known, we are requesting help from interested Free Will Baptists for a building program. We pray that those who read this, who love the Lord, and who want to see His work prosper through the Free Will Baptist denomination, will help in this building program. Any and all help will be received humbly and thankfully."—Rev. Fred Dellinger, Rockport, Washington.

Are Your Plans in Order?

We trust that by the time you read this, your plans will have already been made to attend the North Carolina State Sunday School Convention-Institute, April 21, at Edgemont Free Will Baptist Church, Durham. Let's hurry and appoint those delegates. Mr. Superintendent and ministers, be sure to be present.

The Rev. L. E. Ballard, field secretary states: "We are hoping to have at least 150 Sunday schools represented in the 1960 convention. If we have 149, and your school isn't represented . . . well, who would be causing us to fall one short of the goal. Superintendents and pastors are urged to begin now having special prayers for the convention."

Convention highlights have been listed by Mr. Ballard in The Sunday School Reporter. They are:

Workshops: There will be workshops on most all phases of Sunday school activity, conducted by a staff of leaders carefully selected because of their knowledge and experience in the fields they will cover. The workshops will offer a source of real training for those who will attend.

Guest Speaker: Perhaps we should not refer to the Reverend Joe Ange, who will bring the convention sermon as a guest. He is really one of our very own—loaned for a period to Michigan. Brother Ange is a real Sunday school enthusiast, and bring us a most inspiring message.

Exhibits: There will be various exhibits based upon Sunday school work. Upon special request, the central exhibit is to be on the subject, "Duplicating Machines and Church Publicity."

We hope to see you at Edgemont April 21.

The Cross Unifies Joseph And Us

decision. Seeing such heroic endurance that displayed by Jesus on the Cross, Joseph made a complete turn-about-face. He could no longer sit on the fence.

It's hard to understand how any person who thinks seriously about our Lord's voluntary suffering for others can remain satisfied with a concealed Christian faith. The Cross draws us into the open. It fires the heart with love; it fills the mind with shame.

The Cross made Joseph take sides. He ended forever his uneasy and unsatisfactory pattern of behavior; and, finally, we see him driven to a great act of courage.

We can hardly measure the depth of the courageous action until we take into account these several facts: When Joseph threw in his lot with Jesus, our Lord was dead. His lifeless body hung upon the Cross, left there to waste away. Our Lord's cause seemed doomed. His closest disciples had broken and scattered. At a moment when it was a most difficult thing to do, Joseph came out into the open to let everyone know that his love and loyalty were in Jesus Christ.

His decision influenced another person, a fellow member of the City Council. He was Nicodemus, who once had gone to see Jesus by night. He brought an offering of spices as a memorial tribute to Christ. Taking his stand with Joseph, Nicodemus also no longer feared public hostility.

What tremendous inspiration there is in such daring action, indifferent to consequences. It brings clarity and firmness to life. It gives a man freedom and power. It unifies his whole personality.

Joseph has followers everywhere today. They are the ones who right some wrong relationship, refuse to do that which involves sub-Christian conduct, and enlist in some form of public service for Christ. Like Joseph of Arimathea, they take courage and go forward. The Cross of Christ inspires them.

THE THREE INSCRIPTIONS

The three inscriptions over Christ's thorn-crowned head were significant of the universality of His mission among men (Luke 23:38). George Herbert says, "God held their hands while they did write." The title was a little gospel, told out in the three great languages of the earth.

Greeks lived in a world of culture. They prized beauty and wisdom above everything else. Christ is for the Greek, for He alone can create beauty within the soul, and banish its ugliness.

Latins lived in a world of power. They prized law and government and empire most of all. Christ is for the Latin, nay, for us all seeing He brings us under the law the best, the most salutary, the most generous. No empire is comparable to His.

Hebrews lived in the world of morals. They prized righteousness far above every other boon. Christ is for the Hebrew and all others for our hideous guilt can only be clothed in His spotless righteousness.

Love's Transformation

Three gaunt shadows,
Stark against the sky,
And on the center Cross
The Christ of God
Upthrust to die!

Two beams—
The clutching arms of hate—
Become the symbol
Of the crying heart of God
Outstretched in love.

One awful moment
On that dark, unnatural night,
By alchemy divine,
Wrought life eternal
For this heart of mine.

in Canadian Baptist.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THREE SAD, DARK DAYS

For three years the disciples of Jesus Christ had lived with high hopes of the setting up of the Kingdom of heaven with Jesus Christ as the King. However, after the crucifixion had been witnessed and the body of the Lord Jesus deposited in the tomb, all hopes had vanished from the mind of ever seeing their Master again on earth. Yes, these were sad days; they were days of darkness. All had been done that could be, as seen by those who loved the Master. They had listened to Him say many things about His coming again; however, they did not understand.

They did not understand when He said, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up" (John 2:19). This was a foreign language to those who knew Him best and saw Him daily. They were puzzled by the statement, "But he spake of the temple of his body" (John 2:21). They did not understand, but after the resurrection their eyes were opened. "When Jesus arose from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said" (John 2:22).

Let us remember that those days were days of darkness. They had left their occupations and followed Jesus, hoping to see Him enthroned, possibly with a little selfish motive, in hopes for a very prominent position in the King's court. The disciples of Zebedee, James and John, approached the Master one day and said, ". . . Master, we would that thou shouldst do for us whatsoever we shall desire. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in glory" (Mark 10:35-37). Thus Christ's twelve disciples, even those chosen to be apostles, had a selfish motive in following Jesus. Truly they loved Christ, but these disciples wanted to be more prominent than the others.

When Jesus was crucified and buried, their hopes had flown away; so they decided to go back to their former work. "Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing" (John 21:3). Yes, they had lost all hopes of seeing the desire of their souls work. They had lost their expected Kingdom and their King. They toiled all night and caught nothing. When we lose our faith and hope in Christ and His Kingdom, we will toil and catch nothing. They were in spiritual darkness. A long toilsome night had been spent fruitlessly.

THE WOMEN WERE INTERESTED

While the men had given up, there were a few women who were seeking to do something for the body of their Master. They gathered and sought out how they might show their love for the Master—by anointing His dead body. "The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre. Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they laid him" (John 21:1, 2).

This sight of an empty tomb did not bring joy or light; it made the scene more cloudy. Mary was distressed over the fact that she did not find the body of her Lord. The day was breaking when she should see the morning sun and the risen Son of Almighty God. She did not give up, for she kept staying near the sepulchre. "But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: (Her poor heart was broken. Spiritually it was so dark, but the darkness was not for always.) And as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, and seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other where the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain. And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away. Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master" (John 20:11-16). Thus while she was looking for a dead Christ, with all her heart and mind, suffering under the darkness of disappointment, but not giving up in despair, the Lord revealed Himself as the living, conquering Lord. Mary was overjoyed; the three days of darkness were removed and the eternal light was shining. Now she had seen the living Son of God. She was in the act of embracing her Lord as it seems; but Jesus said unto her, ". . . Touch me not; for I have not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God" (John 20:17). Full daybreak had come to the sad heart of Mary Magdalene, and now she was so thrilled that she goes and tells the disciples. She told them she had seen the Lord and that He had spoken these things to her. When she had met the living Christ, she was prepared and ready to tell others. How about you, my dear reader?

THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK

"Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples had assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you" (John 20:19). The darkness had now faded and the true light of the risen Lord was shining, but they were not all there; Thomas was missing.

The Word says, "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas was with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. Then said he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God" (John 20:26-28). The darkness of the miserable days of mourning had gone forever; the living, conquering Christ was alive forevermore. What a glorious light! The Lord that was dead, the One who died on the Cross of Calvary and was buried in Joseph's new tomb, had risen from the dead to ascend to the right hand of God the Father to make intercession for all believers. This is our light.

HE LIVES!

"Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed" (John 20:29).

Thank God I believe in a crucified, buried, risen and living Christ. He lives in heaven; He also lives in my heart. I know that He lives. Do you know that He lives, my dear reader?

Christ arose on the first day of the week; eight days from then He met with the disciples again. From one Sunday through the next Sunday is eight days—that is why we Christians observe the first day of the week; it is our Lord's resurrection day.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

WHAT EASTER MEANS

Olive W. Mumert

SALLY was nearly asleep snuggled between Father and Mother in the front seat of the car. The spring sunshine was warm, shining in through the car windows. And she was tired from their early start.

Tomorrow would be Easter Sunday and they were going to spend the holiday with Grandma and Grandpa in Edmonton. They would go to the Easter services on Sunday. Perhaps, they would go downtown later in the week to spend the money they had saved up. It was going to be lots of fun Sally thought, sighing contentedly.

But the car stopped now and Daddy was getting out. She stretched herself awake and put her head out the open window to see what things looked like. The soft, cool breeze felt good as it blew across her face and tickled her with her own hair. She laughed as she brushed her hair back off of her face. The garage man who had come to fill up their gas tank looked up and smiled at her. "Hello, there!" he said. "Where are you going?"

"To Grandma and Grandpa's for Easter," she answered.

"Oh? What is Easter?" he asked in a strange voice.

"That's the day that the Lord Jesus Christ rose again after He had died," she answered softly. "Didn't everyone know that?"

"Then is this Jesus still living?"

Didn't he really know? She wondered, but she said, "Yes, He's still living."

"How do you know He is?" asked the man.

Sally thought about it for a minute, then said, "I know He's still living because He's in my heart. I asked Him to come in and He did."

"How do you know he's there? Did you ever see Him?"

"No. I never saw Him." Sally answered truthfully, "but I did feel Him come in. He took away that cold, hard lump I had inside and made me feel clean and glad instead."

"Then you must be one of those good, little girls." He sounded sad as he spoke. "This Lord Jesus wouldn't want to have anything to do with an old sinner like me."

"But that's not true!" Sally exclaimed.

"The Lord Jesus Christ died for my sins so He could make me His little girl. He died for yours, too, and He wants you to belong to Him just the same as I do. It's sinners He loves so He loves you too."

"Are you sure? Who said so?" he asked.

"It's in the Bible," she explained. "Jesus said, 'I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners.'"

Daddy had come back by now and he said, "That's right, young man. The Lord Jesus Christ, God's Son, died on the Cross for your sins because He loved you and wanted you for His own. Wouldn't you like to belong to Him right now?"

"I sure would," answered the young man. "I always thought it was only for good people, but I see it all now. I'd like to have Him as my Saviour right now."

"And you can, my friend," explained Daddy. "Just say, 'yes' to Him and He will receive you."

The man bent his head and Sally closed her eyes when she saw him do so. Then she heard him say, "Yes, Lord Jesus. I need you and I want to be yours now."

He had spoken softly, but when Sally looked up again she knew he had meant the words because he looked so happy. Sally smiled. Now he will really know what Easter means, she thought.—My Pleasure.

son, one son, three daughters, two sisters and a host of friends.

She was a faithful worker in her home church and community. She was always concerned for others, not only for their physical needs, but also for their spiritual welfare. "Others" was her motto. Even in her last days she could smile and see others who needed her help. The life she lived taught us a great lesson, this we shall always cherish.

Yes, she labored for Jesus day after day, She's just gone to heaven where she will receive her pay;

We can vision a crown placed on her head But we can't vision her as one of the dead

She just stepped out of a world of trouble and sadness

Into a world of joy and gladness; May all of us follow and meet her in the land

Where there will be no parting hand.

Can't you almost hear her say, "Loved one do not weep,

I am resting on my Saviour's brow, asleep. The many flowers placed on her grave will decay,

But her love will never fade away.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the family.

Easter Lillies

Alice E. Lupton

O Easter lillies so fragrant and fair,
Growing in gardens and tended with care,
Bringing a message of hope and good cheer
To souls that are burdened and living in fear.

O Easter lillies so stately and rare,
The story you tell us removes every care.
The air is laden with sweet-smelling breath,
Our thoughts are not of sadness or death.

Our Saviour is risen, the once crucified,
Triumphant He comes with us to abide,
If we only believe that He died for our sin,
Paid the full price our lost souls to win.

Easter lillies, how we love and admire
Each dainty petal—our eyes never tire.
The message you bear lifts our spirits on high,
Brings joy to the weary, with never a sigh.

Christ, our Redeemer, arose from the grave
Triumphant, glorious and mighty to save!
The tomb could not hold Him—
"Hallelujah!" we say,
"The hope of the world is with us today."

Easter lillies bring hope to the sad,
Quicken and bless and make our hearts glad,
For Jesus, our Saviour, Redeemer and Friend
Lives today and evermore without end!

Mount Olive College Challenge Day Draws Near

Sunday, April 24, will be "Challenge Day" for Mount Olive College in Free Will Baptist churches and Sunday schools. The purpose of this observance is to focus the attention of Free Will Baptists everywhere upon the importance of regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Mount Olive College achieved academic accreditation by the North Carolina College Conference in 1958, but regional accreditation will bring to the college the highest recognition offered by accrediting agencies. Such recognition will open the door for credits earned at Mount Olive College to be accepted by leading colleges and universities in every state in the nation and even in foreign countries. Mount Olive can be the first college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination to achieve this distinction.

In observing "Challenge Day," churches, Sunday schools, leagues, and individuals are asked to offer special prayer for the college and to make gifts that will assist in preparation for a visit from the Committee on Standards of the Association.

Christian education must be good education, and Mount Olive College is dedicated to the task of providing for Free Will Baptists the best program of Christian higher education possible. What we do for our youth today may determine what they will do for us tomorrow.

J. C. Griffin Addresses Ministerial Students At Mount Olive College

Sound words of wisdom, born out of fifty years of experience in the Free Will Baptist ministry, were given Mount Olive College ministerial students recently by the Rev. J. C. Griffin of Bridgeton.

In a chapel assembly of students and faculty, Mr. Griffin warmed the hearts of his entire audience as he recounted his call and experience as a pastor and evangelist. He told about selling his home in Nash County so he could move his family to Ayden and attend the Free Will Baptist Seminary. One minister, he said, who was opposed to an educated ministry, told him he was a fool to seek an education if God had called him to preach. Mr. Griffin told the students that his experience had included sorrow, suffering and a cross, but he also said the ministry had given him unspeakable joy and happiness which far outweighed the hardships.

Ministerial students at the college arranged a special meeting in order to hear Mr. Griffin speak directly to them about their preparation for Christian service.

The visit to the Mount Olive College campus was a busy day for the beloved and esteemed minister, and perhaps his contribution was best summarized by a student who said to him: "I shall never forget you and what you said today. My life can never be the same again. God bless you."

MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS AVAILABLE FOR SUPPLY WORK

Pastors and churches who need ministers for special services or supply work are invited to contact the college. Some of the ministerial students will also be available for pastoral services next year. Interested persons should write, call or visit: W. Burkette Raper, President, Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

College Receives Gift

A gift of $500 has been made to Mount Olive College by Mrs. Ernest Dewey of Dewey Brothers, Inc., of Goldsboro. In presenting his check to President W. Burkette Raper, Mr. Dewey said, "It is a pleasure to give to an institution that is doing as much good in our community as is Mount Olive College. I wish for you continued success in the good work you are doing."

This check brought to a total of $3,000 Mr. Dewey has given Mount Olive College since 1956.

"Some people do not appear beautiful and there may be nothing attractive about them, but there is an invincible 'something' about them that compels you to love them—they are of an excellent spirit. This all can have by accepting Jesus into the life. He is meek and tender."—Selected.

Righteousness And Mercy

(Lesson for April 24)

Lesson: Matthew 5:6, 7; 13:44-46; 18:33.

Golden Text: Matthew 5:6.

INTRODUCTION

Hunger and thirst are world-wide desires. They are part of man's natural desires. Man will go to just about any lengths when he is really hungry and thirsty. He will often steal and rob. This has often happened in war-torn countries of the world. In other words, there is a basic drive to be satisfied. This is also true in the spiritual realm, for man also has a basic drive to satisfy the hunger of his soul, although he often is not aware of that need and where to go to have it met.

The desire for righteousness and the practice of mercy determines our depth of Christian experiences. How wonderful it would be to know that our nation truly hungered and thirsted after righteousness. This is not, however, the picture which we see today. Instead, masses are turning to other things—hungering and thirsting for things which do not and cannot satisfy the hunger of the soul. Surely there are many righteous and noble deeds performed in this world, but many of them are superficial. In this lesson, we shall give attention to the real value of seeking after righteousness as found in Christ Jesus, the promise is to be filled, not refilled or filled over and over.

—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. In all men there is a universal tendency to "hunger and thirst." We do not refer to physical cravings but to the longings of the human soul. Men are always reaching and grasping. They are never satisfied. The hunger and thirst are always there.

2. No cigarette can satisfy. No intoxicating beverage can bring lasting appeasement to the hellish thirst. The devil has no product that can grant rest and peace to the soul of man.

3. Watch the people of the world. Caught in the mad vortex of sin, they whirl from tavern to dance, to theater, to gambling, to sex, to sports, to banqueting, to tavern—and so the crazy pattern goes on and on. There is no peace to the wicked. Always there remains that insatiable hunger and thirst.

4. Have we as great a craving for God's righteousness and purity? Can we testify with the psalmist: "More to be desired are they than gold: yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honey-comb" (Psalm 19:10). "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God" (Psalm 42:1, 2).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The Hebrew talent was a large sum of money, even in silver, and in gold it was much larger. According to the dictionary a Hebrew talent of gold amounted to $32,640, while a talent of silver amounted to $2,176. But this great debtor of whom the Lord spoke owed his master 10,000 talents, which if it was silver, made a sum of $21,760,000, but in gold the debt was $326,400,000. However, suppose we assume that the debt of 10,000 talents was in silver, and that this man owed only $21,760,000. And to make it even more distressing and amazing, the poor old debtor had nothing with which to pay that enormous debt. But he did have a family, and in those times a man's family might be sold as slaves and the proceeds applied on his debts. And that is exactly what this man's creditor demanded when he learned that his debtor had nothing with which to pay even a small part of the huge debt.—The Advanced Quarterly.

2. The wages of sin is death. Those wages are never lowered in times of depression. Sinners are insolvent debtors. Justice demands satisfaction. Regardless of how honest a man may be, if he does not have the money, he cannot pay.

3. The man became humble, submissive and importunate. He cared little about the debt until asked to pay up. How quickly God can bring a proud sinner to his knees.

4. The king was moved with pity at the sight of the man on his knees. God has pity on sinners when they are on their knees before him. The account was marked, Paid in Full. That is the gospel story pure and plain. Jesus settled the old bills. We were helpless, but Jesus paid it all. That is atonement.

5. This man forgot the king's mercy. How soon we do forget. This ingrate threw a poor man in jail, who owed him a few pennies.—The Standard Commentary.

6. It may seem strange that a man who had been forgiven a debt running into the millions, should manifest such cruelty to another man who owed him only a small debt.

The truth is that the unforgiving servant had not had a change of heart. He was only badly frightened, and when the scare was lifted he was his own unmerciful self again.

A minister stated that in his ministry he had prayed with more than one hundred persons who were seriously ill but later recovered. These people professed to accept Christ as Saviour when sick, but on recovering only one or two proved by their Godly lives that they had been genuinely saved. God knows whether a death bed repentance is real or just the results of a bad scare.

7. When Children Forgave. Miss Marie S. Banker tells how she took charge of forty Armenian orphans who were being sent to Constantinople in a freight train at the close of the First World War. For five days they traveled in a terribly crowded condition in hot weather. One evening the train stopped for the night at a place where the Armenians were allowed to sleep on the sidewalk of the station. But the Turks there poisoned the drinking water that these innocent children might be killed. This fact became known, and their lives were saved, but the children were wailing and crying for water in the scorching heat. Some fainted before they could reach water the next day. Their suffering was great.

The next evening, when the train again stopped in a Turkish city, pitiful Turkish children surrounded them and begged for food. And those Armenian orphans, whose parents had been butchered by Turks, and who had suffered the agonies of thirst the night before when Turks tried to kill them, opened their lunches and gave to those Turkish children very generously.—Selected.

Why?

"We mutter and sputter,
We fume and we spurt,
We mumble and grumble,
Our feelings get hurt!
We cannot understand things,
Our vision grows dim,
When all that we need is,
More time with Him!"

Editorial

A REMNANT FOR GOD

C. H. Overman

No sincere Christian can look about him today without realizing that we are living in perilous times. Never before has the world known such a time as this. Yet, God has warned us of such a time. The apostle, Paul, wrote to Timothy almost 2,000 years ago and said, ". . . in the last days perilous times shall come" (2 Timothy 3:1). Paul then described something of the condition of the last days which are marked by evil on every hand. In Chapter 4, he mentions a time when men would not endure sound doctrine, but would heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears. There are many other passages of Scripture which speak of the conditions preceding the end of time, or end of this age. Therefore, more than ever before, the Christian must beware of these evil days; for Paul was surely speaking of perilous times from the spiritual standpoint.

All is not gloomy, however, for God has a remnant who serve Him faithfully. Little does the world realize the eternal value of them. Perhaps God's wrath and judgment would have already fallen if it were not for the remnant. The apostle, Paul, wrote to the believers in Rome, "Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace" (Romans 11:5).

The word, remnant, means: "That which remains after a part is removed . . . a small remaining part, group, etc."—Webster. God has this small group (compared to the millions of earth who do not know Him) today who, like the 7,000 of Israel in Elijah's day, have not bowed a knee to Baal. Yet, the Christian may often feel as Elijah when he fled to Mount Horeb from the threats of Queen Jezebel. There he nearly succumbed to self-pity as he complained to God that he was the only one left who had not bowed a knee to Baal. God, however, reminded Elijah that he had 7,000 who had remained faithful. In other words, God had preserved a remnant. This remnant consisted of those who were willing to become separated from the world and dedicated unto God.

God is calling forth a remnant today, and as in the days of the apostles, it is being made up from among those who are willing to be saved and follow Christ. In spite of the wickedness and yearly increase in crime and immorality of our day, God is calling forth and separating many souls unto Himself. God wants those who will dare to be different in this world of social pressures and temptations. He requires separation from the world, and with this separation, there must not be, neither is there room for, conformity. There must be non-conformity on the part of the remnant.

The Christian cannot afford to compromise the convictions of his heart and soul, for with every compromise the cause of Christ is weakened in the world and the Holy Spirit is quenched in the heart.

The pressure of the world system is great in our day, and conformity and compromise regarding it is quite simple and easy. God is saying to Christians today, ". . . be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, . . ." (Romans 12:1). Conformity in this sense means to accept and fashion one's self according to the pattern of this world. To keep this from happening, we must be transformed—lifted above this present world system—to the purposes of God in our lives. How is this done? The apostle says, "Through the renewing of the mind." This is the secret to pleasing service to God. Man comes what he thinks. Worldliness and all things pertaining to it is retained in the heart so long as the mind thinks and acts upon them. When the mind becomes transformed, or renewed, we become of true service to God.

Few are willing to pay the price of personal and selfless sacrifice to be among the remnant. In this day of modernistic and liberal trends, Free Will Baptists are faced with a great challenge: namely to hold forth the sound gospel of truth to the world. We are a part of God's remnant and may it ever be so. We cannot afford to compromise with the world. We must not conform to it. To be among the remnant, we must be different.

COMMUNISTS MEET

We quote in part from the recent issue of N. A. E. Action magazine:

"One of the results of the Khrushchev visit last year is that the U. S. Communist party feels that in this period of relaxed tensions they have the opportunity of a lifetime to sell Americans on socialism and the Soviet Union.

"Informed Washington sources say this is one of the decisions taken at the top-secret 17th national convention of the Communist party in this country. 'We must learn now to sell socialism across to the people,' the delegates were told . . .

"Some other decisions taken at the secret meeting included (1) Recruiting 1,000 new members by May Day, 1960, to bring the party membership strength to between 11,000 and 12,000; (2) appointment of a youth affairs director and a national commission for youth to establish a strong youth group; (3) infiltrate Negro, Jewish and various nationality groups; (4) conduct a drive on U. S. labor; (5) avoid supporting either Democrats, Republicans or third party in 1960, but concentrate on candidates whose views are closest to the Communist party's."

What are you doing for your League?

Rev. Gene Outland
Vice-President, State League Convention

REV. HENRY J. VAN KLUYVE

TRUST THAT AS YOU read this article you will stop and personally consider what you are doing for your league. You might say, "We don't have a league." That may be true, then there is something that you can do. You can help get a league organized in your church, and may I encourage you to do so real soon. Perhaps some might say, "I'm not doing anything for my league." Oh, but yes you are! You are either hindering or helping your league. Don't hinder the work of your league, but organize today to help make your league a better league.

The first thing that you can do is to hold your league regularly. Don't go only when it is convenient and there is nothing especially that you have to do the week preceding the evening service, rather be present for every league program.

When do your part to help make the program interesting. A lot of our leagues are accused of being Sunday school classes meeting in the evening rather than in the morning. This accusation cannot justly be made. All members of every league will make better preparation before coming to league. Be able to give your part on the program in an interesting manner. If you will do your part every time, then when visitors come to your league they will want to come back. Naturally, co-operate at all times. When you are asked to take a part on the program, whether it is the part you wanted or something you will willingly accept the part and do your best. Remember, the Lord expects our best in all that we do for Him.

We say that our league is the training school of our church; then to a great extent the quality of our leagues of today will determine what quality of churches we will have tomorrow. Let's put our shoulders to the wheel and make our league more effective in fulfilling its purpose.

For more information about our league, and ways whereby you can work more efficiently in your league, come to the State League Convention in Greenville, North Carolina.

ONWARD CHRISTIAN LEAGUERS

by Henry J. Van Kluyve

ALL ROADS POINT to Greenville, North Carolina, on April 29, 30 for the annual North Carolina State League Convention. In this issue of The Free Will Baptist you will catch a glimpse of the spiritual treat that is in store for you during these services.

The emphasis this year will be on soul winning—a vital part of the Christian work that too many neglect. When Christ gave the orders to go into all the world and preach, He meant all of us—not just a few. No matter what field of service the young people of our day enter, they must be trained to witness for Jesus in order to win the lost to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus, our Lord.

We are looking for a good representation from the pastors throughout the state. Our leagues will only grow in quality and quantity as the individual pastor exerts his influence toward making his league count for Christ, and at the same time render to his young people the training they need. So round up your young people, preachers, and come our way for this convention!

It is our prayer that this year's convention will challenge you to realize the need of putting your training into practice by going out into the highways and byways of life, telling the good news of salvation. Christ promised the enabling power for telling this good news in Acts 1:8—"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Personal magnetism, eloquence and learning alone will not do the job. God's Holy Spirit must keep you alive for this task of winning souls. The spiritual power spoken of in Acts 1:8 means a dynamite kind of power.

So come to the league convention and allow the truths of the messages to set you aflame in order that through your life the strongholds of Satan might be blasted by the dynamite from on high—and that in turn the lost may be won to the Lord Jesus Christ.

See you in Greenville on April 29, 30!

Our human life makes us understand human things like music, reading, playing and working. To understand God, we need divine life from Him.

Mr. Levi J. Jones

On October 10, 1959, our dear heavenly Father saw fit to call Mr. Levi J. Jones, Route 1, Richton, Mississippi, to his well-desired eternal reward. He was born August 12, 1888, making his stay on earth 71 years, 5 months and 28 days. The last 13 months of his life were spent confined to his bed and a wheelchair. In the final months of his life suffering was intense. One of his brightest testimonies was a prayer that he was perfectly ready and wanted to go on to be with the Lord. This testimony was made from the same spot where death came to him quietly shortly thereafter. While he was permitted, the Lord's word was uppermost in his heart and mind, and his encouragement to his fellow men and loved ones faithfully do our task at hand will remain with us.

He was survived by his wife, three daughters, one son-in-law, two grandchildren and three brothers (one of which has since joined him in death) and one sister.

His body was laid to rest in Union Cemetery beneath a mound of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection. The funeral

What I Observed at

Mount Olive Junior College

ESTER H. PELT
Marianna, Florida

HAVE RECENTLY returned from Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, where I was privileged to conduct a Religious Emphasis Week program. This was my second visit to Mount Olive College in two years for this purpose. From the report in The Free Will Baptist, you will remember that the training programs emphasized the idea of personal commitment to Christ on the part of our young people at the college, and that the evening program was a study of the traditional faith and doctrine of Free Will Baptists, with special emphasis upon the principle of the freedom of the will. The talent and faculty response to both themes was most gratifying and rewarding to all who took part in the week's program. The climax of the week was on Friday when the entire faculty and student body, with their families, moved away from the campus to the setting of one of the local churches, where we were privileged to hear the young people themselves express their own feelings and thinking on the question of "How can I Best Commit My Life to the Service of Christ." At this session, we were inspired by the talent, ability and faith of the Free Will Baptist youth. These are the young people who will be leaders of our denomination of the future; and I may say, with full confidence and for all who were present, that we need not fear for the future of the Free Will Baptists, and we may rest assured of the progress and growth of our denomination.

As to what I observed at Mount Olive Junior College, I think I would be justified to close this article with what I have already said, but there is much more—all of which cannot be contained in just one short article. Therefore, I will touch upon some of those factors which I consider to be of greatest interest to the minds and hearts of those of the traditional Free Will Baptist faith.

First, although we have not always been able to have it, Free Will Baptists have believed in liberal arts education. If for no other reason, this assumption is justified on the grounds that liberal arts education is the only curriculum that can be logically consistent with the philosophy of the freedom of the will. Therefore, it is most gratifying to me to know that Mount Olive Junior College was established on the principle of liberal arts, and that it is maintaining such a philosophy of education. Furthermore, according to the purposes set forth by the founders of the college, we may expect it to remain a liberal arts college, a fact which is a delight to those who have visualized such a need for our denomination and who are so enthusiastically supporting Mount Olive Junior College.

Second, Free Will Baptists will be pleased to know also about the emphasis placed by the college program on the cultural and social training of our youth. By this emphasis, the college is filling a great need of leadership in our denomination—a leadership which is characterized by cultural poise and acceptable social ethics. This is the kind of leadership which is being taught and emphasized there by being integrated into the entire educational program of the college.

Third, there is a kind of spiritual atmosphere characteristic of our traditional faith which permeates the entire campus life. It is recognized by a deep and abiding awareness of the Holy Spirit; a spirit of brotherly kindness and love which is more often found among more seasoned Christians; and most of all there is an obvious mingling of faith and perspective with a strong sense of the need to be prepared for whatever service the Lord has called them. These are factors which are obvious in every class, whether it is the science, history or Bible class, and it applies to both the young women and men regardless of what their lifework will be, whether medicine, ministry, teaching, etc. In other words, Mount Olive Junior College accepts as sacred all of the professions in which a Christian may be engaged. There is no such thing as the sacred and secular calling, for all occupations of service to humanity can be sacred, provided only if they are done by a Christian whose life is committed to the service of Christ. This philosophy of life is based on the principle that it is not his job that makes one's life sacred, but it is the committed Christian that makes his job sacred in Christ's Kingdom.

Finally, I think that we should all be thankful for the quality of administrative and teacher personnel which the board of the college has been able to obtain. By the term quality, I mean both their training, experience and devotion to the college and the cause of Christ. It is the result of these qualities that Mount Olive College expects in the near future to be accepted as a member of the Southern Association of Accredited Colleges, an achievement for which all Free Will Baptists should be thankful and proud.

These are the things which I observed at Mount Olive College that inspire me, and give me reason to be glad that I have stood by the denomination and traditional faith that have spiritually nurtured me from my youth.

NOBLE POVERTY

by James R. Miller

"... Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15).

THIS is one of the red flags our Lord hung out which most people nowadays do not seem much to regard. Christ said a great deal about the danger of riches; but not many persons are afraid of riches. Covetousness is not practically considered a sin in these times. If a man breaks the sixth or eighth commandment, (continued on page nine)

Emmanuel Church Reports Revival

The Rev. Floyd Dalton conducted revival services at the Emmanuel Free Will Baptist Church of Lakeland, Florida, February 29—March 6. During the revival, two young girls were saved, and the church was revived. The meeting officially closed March 6; however, on March 13, five people united with the church (three by letter and two by conversion). Baptismal services were held on Sunday afternoon, March 20, at Lake Lena near Auburndale, Florida.

This church was organized in December, 1959, with 19 charter members. The revival mentioned above was the first revival the church has conducted. The members desire the prayers of all Christians everywhere that this small church might do much to carry the gospel to lost souls.

Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation

(Number 10 in a Series)

Mrs. Addie Grubbs has been memorialized through the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation of Mount Olive College by gift of $100 from the Mt. Carmel Free Will Baptist Church of Perry, Florida. The following resolution was passed by the church:

Whereas the late Sister Addie Grubbs was often known as the mother of our church, having been a faithful member of Mt. Carmel—she walked a distance of one and a quarter miles for day and night services—and a very active member and president of the Woman's Auxiliary; and

Whereas her faithful prayers, services and attendance held Mt. Carmel together over a period of time from the late 20's until 1934 when the church was reorganized with eight members; and

Whereas through her devoted life and service we feel that she has left us an example to follow; and

Whereas there are those in her family at Mt. Carmel still carrying on the work, namely, a son, Homer Grubbs, a trustee; a son, Lanzy A. Grubbs, a deacon; a daughter, Bertha McDaniel, a deaconess; a grandson, Kenneth Grubbs, a minister; and grandson, Herman A. Grubbs, a minister of Mount Olive, North Carolina; therefore be it

Resolved that we express our deepest appreciation for her devoted life and faithful service to her Lord and church by placing her name on the Memorial Plaque of the Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation of Mount Olive College; and be it further

Resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Free Will Baptist Press to be printed in The Free Will Baptist and that a copy be included in the minutes of the Mt. Carmel Church.

Challenge Day for Mount Olive College

MOUNT OLIVE, NORTH CAROLINA

Sunday, April 24, to Be Observed by Churches, Sunday Schools, Leagues
And Individuals

Senior College Authorities Visit Mount Olive College: Dr. C. C. Colvert, (left) University of Texas, and Miss Bonnie Cone, president of Charlotte College, North Carolina, consult with President W. Burkette Raper of Mount Olive College about the forthcoming visit of the Standards Committee of the Southern Association.

The Greatest Educational Challenge Ever Confront Free Will Baptists

Mount Olive College can become the first college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination to achieve regional accreditation, the highest recognition given by accrediting agencies.

This achievement will enable Mount Olive College to provide Christian higher education for Free Will Baptists everywhere in preparation for vocations in teaching, the Christian ministry and missions, business, medicine, law, secretarial science, accounting, music, industry and related vocations.

Mount Olive College is a co-educational, liberal arts, Christian college, chartered in 1881 and sponsored by the North Carolina Convention of Free Will Baptists.

On Challenge Day, churches, Sunday schools, leagues, and individuals are urged to:

- 1) Offer special prayers for God's guidance for the administration, faculty, and students of Mount Olive College.
- 2) Make a gift to help the college prepare for regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

RESIGNS PASTORATE

"I have resigned the pastorate of the Free Will Baptist Temple. Having organized this church and having served as pastor for the past seventeen years, I believe that time was overdue for a change. The Rev. George E. Butler of the Metropolitan Association was chosen for this post of duty, effective the fifth Sunday in January. I have not retired from the service, but rather devoted my time to evangelism and to the medium of song and teaching in the fields of opportunity."—Rev. N. P. What a Fool I've Been!

A rich man lay dying. His little daughter couldn't understand why her big daddy was so helpless now. The little girl asked, "Daddy, are you going away?" "Yes, dear, I am going away, and I am afraid you won't see me again!" Asked the little girl, "Daddy, have you got a nice house to go to?" The rich man was silent for a moment, and then began to cry. He lamented, "What a fool I have been! I have built a great business here, and have amassed riches here, but I shall be a pauper there!"—Selected.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: I know folk who say that the church began with Abraham and others who say it goes back to Adam's day. These speak of the Old Testament people as Christians. Could you tell me why?—I. R. Johnson, Georgia.

Answer: It appears to me that they do not rightly divide the word of truth. There is a sense in which the church began on the Day of Pentecost. There are those, however, that say the church was in existence in embryo form when Jesus called out His first disciples, and they point out the Greek word from which our word, church, is translated which means the called out.

When it comes to the use of the term Christians, we read, ". . . and the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch" (Acts 11:26). There are some people that I have heard of who are accused of spiritualizing the meaning of all God's definite promises to Abraham and thereby making many prophecies mean what they were never intended to say. Some of these by so doing pay no attention to many prophecies that have long since been fulfilled. Those prophecies that pointed to certain specific events that have been definitely fulfilled in God's dealings with the Jews, and that there are no later prophecies pointing to them have most likely had their final fulfillment in the particular incident in which they are identified with Jews. Such people as these who wrongly interpret prophecy may themselves be saved, and in some cases they may be honest; but having read the teachings of Seventh Day Adventists, Jehovah's Witnesses, Millennial Dawnists and such propagandists, they are confused. Such misled people are missing the great joys that doubters counter. Instead of being confused as they follow date-setters, they ought to read the Scriptures and see that Christ may come at any time and that He has left His saints as workers to be carrying on in His stead while He is away. No one on this earth may hasten the day of Christ's return. He has the day set by His Father and the very day in which God has set the time, the Son of Man will return and not before. Christians hope this to be soon, but He alone knows how many faithful Christians are to suffer martyrdom, how many renowned Christian schools, local churches and other institutions of Christian renown are to sell out to the devil, who will be appealing to them in the form of catholicism, liberalism or some other cult. These are indeed terrible days when men's hearts are failing. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth" (1 Timothy 4:1-3); "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Timothy 3:1-5).

There might be said much more than what we have above concerning the beginning of the church, however, in speaking of the Old Testament saints there is no indication that they even knew that such a thing as the church, the bride of Christ, was ever to be found upon the earth or that it was ever in the mind of God. This was revealed to Paul as a mystery and having its beginning in the New Testament. Jesus, it is true, had told Peter, "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matthew 16:18). The birthday of the church has from away back been regarded as Pentecost. It will continue on this earth until its last member has been won to Him and God alone knows when that time is to come; but when it does come then will His church be translated where it will ever be with Him. "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child: and they shall not escape" (1 Thessalonians 5:2, 3); "Way therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh" (Matthew 25:13); "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father" (Mark 13:32).

Since Jesus in the Bible has given such forewarnings, it is double folly to pay any attention to those who style themselves as prophets in this day that either claim to be Christ or to know the time of coming; and those claiming to be either probably multiply into the thousands before some that are now living decease.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

OUR RISEN LORD

". . . The Lord is risen indeed, (Luke 24:34).

The doctrine of the resurrection is one of the great fundamentals of Christianity, a one of its most vital points, for without the resurrection there can be no hope of a life beyond this one. The importance of Christ's resurrection is so great that Paul in instructing his young preacher friend Timothy, what to do and teach, gives him the following advice, "Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel" (2 Timothy 2:8). Almost two thousand years later it is no less important that we remember and preach the same blessed truth, now as then, the salvation of the world, the comfort of the followers of Christ and the hope of the life to come depend upon this vital doctrine.

Someone has said, "The fact of our Lord's resurrection implies two things: (1) That He was actually dead; and (2) that He was alive again after having died." Paul summed it up in Romans 4:23-25 where he said "Now it was not written for his sake alone that it was imputed to him; But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification."

"The Lord is risen indeed." This statement presents two very important facthe first one is the Cross, with all its horrors, suffering and dead, could destroy the plan of God, as His enemies intended. His triumph He proclaimed, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death" (Revelation 1:18). Then, why do some insist on continuing to worship Christ on the Cross? Thank God for a bare Cross and an empty tomb. A living Christ can be neither on the Cross nor in the tomb; but as He lives in the hearts of His redeemed people the world is made to know of Him and of His power to save all who will accept Him.

Again, when we read, "The Lord is risen indeed," we find the second important fact—that no tomb, however securely sealed and guarded, could hold the Son of God. When the first visitor came to the tomb on that first Easter morning and found not the body of the Lord Jesus, the angels asked a very important question, ". . . Why seek ye the living among the dead?" (Luke 24:5). They did not wait for the perplexed followers to answer. It is very possible that they could not have given a satisfactory answer, but the angels gave an answer that seemed to satisfy those to whom they spoke and still satisfies multitudes of His true followers today. They said, "He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again" (Luke 24:6, 7).

It seems to me that this message would fulfill its purpose if I did not point to what I believe is the very heart of the resurrection teaching. It is to be found in the words of Christ Himself in His last words to the disciples as recorded by Luke. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and it thus behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things" (Luke 24:45-48). As we remember that He rose from the dead we must not forget that we are expected by Him to preach repentance and remission of sin which can be found in Him only.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God" (Colossians 3:1).

Noble Poverty

is branded as a criminal and covered with shame; but he may break the tenth, and he is only enterprising. The Bible says the love of money is a root of all evil; but every man who quotes the saying puts a terrific emphasis on the word, love, explaining that it is not money, but only the love of it, that is such a prolific root.

To look about one, one would think a man's life did consist in the abundance of the things he possesses. Men think they become great just in proportion as they gather wealth. So it seems, too; for the world measures men by their bank account. Yet there never was a more fatal error. A man is really measured by what he is, and not by what he has. You may find a shrivelled soul in the midst of a great fortune, and a grand, noble soul in the barest poverty.

The first thing is to gather into our life all the truly great and noble things of character. Here are two texts to ponder, because they settle this question: " whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report . . . think on these things"; "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity."—E. WORDS OF COMFORT From the Gospel of John

(John 1:11, 12)

1. The believer shall not come into judgment (John 5:24).
Not into judgment with the world—his works judged (2 Corinthians 5:10; Romans 8:1; 1 Corinthians 11:31, 32; 1 Timothy 5:24).
2. The believer shall never walk in darkness (John 8:12).
There are two classes of people in the world—one of darkness, one of light (Matthew 7:13; Proverbs 4:18, 19; John 1:4, 5, 9; 1 Peter 2:9; Romans 13:12).
3. The believer shall never hunger (John 6:35).
He has Christ, the bread of life, his wants are well supplied (Philippians 4:12, 13, 19; 2 Corinthians 9:10-12).
4. The believer shall never thirst (John 6:35).
He will be filled with all things for his spiritual good (Romans 8:28; John 4:13, 14; 7:37-39; Isaiah 55:1).
5. The believer shall never perish (John 3:15).
At the end of the journey he shall be taken away by the Lord (1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17; Romans 6:23; John 10:27; Revelations 20:6).
6. The believer shall never be separated (Romans 8:35-39).
He has given the assurance that He is able to keep, and will keep (John 10:27-29; 2 Timothy 1:12; 1 Peter 1:5; John 17:12; 2 Thessalonians 2:13-16).
7. The believer shall never taste death (John 8:31).
If he shall die it is not eternal—he shall rise again (John 5:24, 25; 11:25, 26; Colossians 3:3, 4).

Graham Returns from African Tour

A green carpet was rolled across the railroad tracks as Billy Graham returned from his African tour to his home town, Charlotte, North Carolina, where he used to milk cows and dream of a baseball career.

The famous evangelist, tanned and rested after a voyage across the Atlantic, was met by his 70-year-old father and several dozen well wishers, among them an old Negro who wept as Graham clasped his hand.

A brief, informal press conference was held in a roped off area of the station platform. Then Graham drove to his boyhood home to see his mother who was unable to meet the train because of a foot ailment.

Later in the day, Graham and his lovely wife, Ruth, who had met him in New York three days earlier, motored 100 miles to their mountaintop home where he saw their children for the first time in three months.

Graham told newsmen he hopes to rest a bit after one of his most strenuous campaigns; but he has consented to write articles this month for two of the nation's largest magazines. He also plans to prepare a statement for a major wire service on the new anti-segregation movements in the South.

Questions about the racial situation dominated several well-attended news conferences in New York and Washington. Graham condemned South Africa's apartheid policies as unchristian and unworkable. He declined comment on the wave of southern lunch counter sit-ins until he has had time to learn about the situation at first hand. He also said he would wait until he returned to his native southland before speaking to the South on her problems.

In Washington, Graham saw President Eisenhower, lunched with Vice-President Nixon and went to the State Department where Secretary of State Herter assembled several of his top aides for an informal briefing that lasted several hours.

The president expressed interest in Graham's suggestion that he visit Nigeria next October when that most populous African nation will receive its independence. Such a gesture would demonstrate America's solidarity with the new African Nationalism, Graham said.

In New York, Graham gave impressions of his African tour at a luncheon given in his honor by the Chairman of his 1959 New York Crusade, Roger Hull, an insurance executive.

One of the guests, an investment broker who has long been a leading lay Bible teacher, said he wished every Christian leader in the nation could have heard Graham's report. "I was never challenged so much in my whole life," he explained.

As Graham spoke, two hotel waiters stood at one side and listened intently. Here are some highlights of his talk:

1. "The race problem has not hurt America in Africa materially as yet, but if it continues unsolved, it will hurt us badly. Soon how we've got to set an example or we will

FAITH

I wish that I could understand
How God could take into His hand
A bit of dust and make a man
To fit into His future plan.

And just to know what makes the sun
Set in the west when day is done;
To understand that magic sight
When first the stars pierced thro' the night.

I cannot understand at all
How God can see a sparrow fall;
How He has numbered ev'ry hair
On people here and ev'rywhere.

It seems so hard to understand
How God divided sea from land;
The fleecy clouds amaze me so,
How God has made them white as snow.

I wonder how the birds know when
To southward fly 'till spring again?
How do they know there's lots to eat
Deep in the grass beneath my feet?

The more I think the more I see
That most of life's a mystery;
And so by faith we comprehend
What life shall be when this shall end.

Though here on earth for years we've trod,
If we knew all, then we'd be God;
By faith we take Him at His word
Assured at last we'll meet our Lord.

He says that He'll appear someday
To catch His waiting bride away;
He said it; that's enough for me,
I'll trust Him through eternity.

—Hope Evangeline.

NOTES AND QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE FATHER'S PLEASURE

When Jesus Christ presented Himself to me in the Baptist for baptism, John said, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and thou comest thou to me?" And Jesus answered and said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased" (Matthew 3:14-17). May we notice two things here: The assurance of God and the fact of the Trinity. The following things make us very aware of the Trinity: Jesus Christ in the water; the Spirit in the form of a dove lighting upon him; and the voice of God speaking from heaven, "This is My beloved Son"—God the Father, Christ in the river, the Holy Spirit resting upon Jesus; thus God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit. Who can be so far from God and so much plunged into darkness as to say there is no Trinity?

God was pleased with the act of His Son and witnessed thereunto. At the Mount of Transfiguration, God said, ". . . This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him" (Matthew 17:5). So the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ was well pleased at the baptism of His Son, and also at His transfiguration. Thus God is the greatest witness to the divinity of the Lord Jesus; but we have several others who are witnesses as to the deity of the Lord Jesus. Simon Peter said, ". . . Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matthew 16:16). This answer of Peter's to Jesus's question asked by Jesus was not absolved by Peter's own knowledge. Jesus said, ". . . flesh and blood hath not revealed unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven" (Vs. 17).

Thus three times did the Father reveal His Son: First at His baptism, second at the transfiguration, and to Peter; but may we go further. These revelations were while Jesus lived in the flesh here among men.

One day when Saul of Tarsus was on his way to arrest, bind and take the believers to Jerusalem for punishment and death, Jesus revealed Himself to Saul. Let's look at this account as given in Chapter 9 of Acts. Saul was on his way to Damascus to bind all the believers he found and take them to Jerusalem. "And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven: And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul why persecutest thou me? And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks. And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise and go into the city, and it will be told thee what thou must do" (Acts 9:3-6).

After that the scales fell from Saul's eyes, and he gave this witness, "And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God" (Acts 9:20). So as soon as Saul was converted, his eyes being opened, he gave testimony that Jesus was Christ.

Blinded Eyes Cannot See

All unbelievers are blind to the reality of Christ. Saul of Tarsus was so spiritually blind that when he persecuted the saints, he thought he was doing the services of God. He was just as sincere when persecuting the saints as his religion could make him. May we note that when he was Saul, he was blind; but when he became Paul, instead of having Judaism and the law, he had Christ and grace. Let us observe what he says about blindness and the gospel: "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, shine unto them. For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake" (2 Corinthians 4:3, 4).

Thus again with no uncertain sound, the apostle, Paul, witnesses to the Lordship and the deity of Jesus Christ. May we notice that Paul did not preach self; he preached Christ. It is possible that a preacher can get so much of self in his message that a very little of Christ is manifested. Not so with Paul for we hear him saying to the Corinthian Christians, "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (1 Corinthians 2:2).

Paul was one of, if not the greatest witnesses to the deity of Christ and the salvation as taught by Christ. He warned against any other gospel. Is it not wonderful to hear him say, "But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory" (1 Corinthians 2:7). One of the greatest verses of Scripture ever written by the apostle, Paul, is "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation: to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Romans 1:16).

Not bragging at all, but I have preached for a half century now. From experience I know that if we can get the heart in right relationship with God so as to be filled with the Holy Spirit, dress, habits and pleasure will fall in line. Peter preached Christ; Paul preached Christ, and they both got results. I have noticed evangelists who preach Christ and Him crucified that get men and women saved. Let us hear Peter when he says, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

lose the friendship of one of the strategic parts of the world.

2. "Many have criticized Mr. Nkrumah (Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana). I'm not one of his critics. Africa has tradition of tribes and chiefs. Mr. Nkrumah has held his country together by building himself up as a new chief. . . . African leaders would be leaders in any country.

3. "What we saw and experienced gave me a tremendous new appreciation for missions. Every dollar we have invested in missions has paid off many times over.

4. "The African church is warmly evangelical in its message. The closer to the frontier you get, the warmer your message has to be.

5. "In all my travels I never saw people more eager to learn. The students almost rebel against vacations. Many walk seven to ten miles to school.

6. "Africans want social acceptance and equality as much as political freedom. They respond to a smile and a simple exhibition of courtesy and friendship."

CAUTION

A cat belonging to Mrs. Jones had caused great annoyance to the small boys of the neighborhood by killing some of their pets; so they decided to set a trap for it. Dwight, a little boy of seven years, with a very tender heart, was much afraid some innocent cat would suffer, so he printed the following notice and pinned it on the trap, "This is for Jones' cat only."—Young People.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

RUTH TAKES A DARE

by Hannah Moor

*"Jesus loves me! This I know
For the Bible tells me so,
Little ones to Him belong . . ."*

THE VOICES of the Millerest Sunday school pupils blended well. That is, all but one.

Ruth Toby sat, listening and thinking to herself, "Why do they sing that piece nearly every Sunday? It's all right for the little ones but I'm eleven years old now, and I'm not going to sing it any more."

*"Jesus loves me! Loves me still.
Though I'm very weak and ill . . ."*

The others sang joyfully. "It's really kid stuff and no more of it for me. I guess I'm getting too big for Sunday school anyway."

What was the superintendent saying? "Now as we sing the last verse let all the classes go to their own rooms."

Everyone started to move and Ruth slipped quietly out the door. As she walked along the sidewalk the words came to her:

*"Jesus loves me! He will stay,
Close beside me all the way."*

"Yes," she thought, "it's all right for children. But . . ."

"Hello, Ruth, how about coming with us?" Josie Lewis and Margaret Lee were walking arm in arm. "We're going down to the river for a walk."

Ruth's mother had warned her of these girls before. They never went to Sunday school and were well-known for speaking roughly.

"Sure, I guess I can for an hour. Have to be back at the church before noon though or my folks will be worried."

"Oh, yes!" You are still tied to your mother's apron strings, aren't you, dear?" sneered Josie.

"I'm not!" Ruth hardly knew what to say. "I'm too big for Sunday school now and I'm not tied to my mother's apron strings at all."

"We'll see," said Margaret. "I'll bet you still are too much of a 'fraidy cat to go down the side of old Drumbo."

Ruth's heart beat fast. She wanted so badly to make an impression on these girls, but old Drumbo! It was steep—just like the side of a cliff—and straight down.

"If you want to be a friend of ours, you've got to grow up a little more, and a way to grow up quickly is to go down the cliff," said Josie.

"Okay, I'll show you I'm not afraid." Ruth hoped the others wouldn't notice the shaking in her voice. She tried to walk slowly hoping something would happen so she would never reach the river bank.

After a few minutes of foolish talking Josie said, "Here we are, Ruth. It's time now to prove how grown-up you are."

"Yes, over you go," said Margaret. "We'll go to the other slope and meet you at the bottom."

Ruth dug the toes of her shoes into the steep side and very slowly she started down. She felt almost numb. But she just had to keep going now. She inched along slowly, carefully and then—in a sandy place her foot slipped. She felt herself going and tried to dig her fingers in. Her hand hit something hard and she grabbed tightly a little shrub. She held on.

Down below the other girls watched, not knowing what to do. They had never gone down that place on old Drumbo themselves. They thought that Ruth would never try it or they wouldn't have said what they did.

"Hold on, Ruth," called Josie. "We'll get a rope somewhere."

Ruth held so tightly her fingernails made marks in the palms of her hands and her knuckles were white. It seemed like hours. Oh! If only she hadn't come. What were the last words she had heard from the open window of the church?

*"Jesus loves me! He will stay,
Close beside me all the way."*

"I'll never leave Sunday school again," vowed Ruth. "Even if I live to be a hundred. Why don't they come? I can't hold on much longer."

Soon three men appeared at the top. They tied a rope firmly to a tree and one man was lowered over the edge. Down, down he came until he got hold of Ruth. He held her tightly as the other men pulled up on the rope.

Ruth lay on the grass awhile before making her way back to the car at the church. She huddled into a corner of the back seat hoping her dad and mom wouldn't notice her torn clothes, her bruised arms and legs, and her dirty face.

Mr. and Mrs. Toby sat in the car and listened to the pathetic story. They felt their daughter had learned her lesson well enough without any scolding.

At home Mrs. Toby went to the kitchen to prepare dinner. Ruth followed close behind.

"Whatever are you doing, Ruth?" Her mother asked.

"Just tying myself to your apron string, Mom," grinned Ruth. She started setting the table, humming softly—

"Yes, Jesus loves me!"—My Pleasure.

Thomas R. Watson

On March 7, 1960, the death angel came and took away Thomas R. Watson. Mr. Watson was 70 years old, and had been declining health for several years; however, he bore his afflictions with patience. He was a member of Milbourne Free Will Baptist Church in Wilson County, North Carolina.

All was done for him that loving hands could do, but to no avail. His funeral was conducted in the church sanctuary by the Rev. Dewey C. Boling of Clayton, North Carolina. The body was laid to rest in the Upper Black Creek Cemetery under a beautiful mound of flowers.

Mr. Watson leaves to mourn his wife Mrs. Nora Marlowe Watson; four sons, three daughters; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Foundations of the Christian Home

(Lesson for May 1)

Lesson: Matthew 5:8, 27-37; Luke 9:61,

Golden Text: Matthew 5:8.

INTRODUCTION

Our study of today's lesson will help us see the value of guarding the homes of America from some of the onslaughts of modern men and practices of this modern day. Happiness and success in the home, just in personal hearts, is dependent upon purity.

Many of the problems of our modern society can be attributed to evils which war against the home. The overemphasis upon pleasure has had a profound damaging effect on our generation. We are told that approximately one out of four marriages ends in divorce; and we know that divorce only means the destruction of family life. When homes are destroyed, we can only expect a crumbling of our society.

The sixth beatitude serves as the center of this lesson. We shall study Jesus' teaching regarding adultery; that it can be avoided by purity of heart, and by honesty in forms, as opposed to hypocrisy. Finally, we shall study more of the meaning of what it costs to follow Jesus.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

Only the pure heart is acceptable before God, and only God can make it so (Matthew 5:8).

The very first step in the direction of committing any sin is in entertaining a desire for it (Vv. 27, 28).

The member that is regarded as having been severed from the body is incapable of committing any evil act (Vv. 29, 30).

God tolerated divorce under the law to give rules to regulate it, but it was not in His plan from the beginning (Vs. 31).

If the marriage vow has already been broken through adultery, divorce is permissible (Vs. 32).

Judicial oaths are administered today to insure that the witness will speak the truth; oaths of office pledge the ones taking them to be faithful in their duties, and both call on God as a witness (Vs. 33).

7. There are times when the taking of an oath in the name of the Lord is proper (2 Corinthians 1:23; Hebrews 6:16). The Lord utterly condemns the taking of His name in vain, a very common practice today. You hear His name used in blasphemy constantly by adults and children.

8. The word of the Christian should be so reliable that it does not need the support of an oath (Vs. 37).

9. There are some who would follow the Lord Jesus if it did not require separation from those who do not follow Him (Luke 9:61).

10. A lingering, longing look at the world before one starts following Christ indicates his unfitness for discipleship (Vs. 62).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. A boy, who wanted to be helpful to his mother, would stand by her as she prepared the evening meal. In his eager desire to lighten her work, he would ask, "Mother, may I put the bread on the table?" Mother would always reply, "My son, are your hands clean?" Years later, he was desirous to give to others God's Bread of Life—His Word. His mother's voice, though long stilled in death, came to him, "My son, are your hands clean?" (cf. Isaiah 52:11).—Selected.

2. Figuratively speaking, the lustful eye, the sticky fingers, the bloody feet, the deceitful tongue, the proud heart and covetous desire must be conquered or the whole body will suffer the consequences. Judgment is the sure reward of those whose bodily members and senses they cannot control; and if they are allowed to run their natural courses to the end, the whole body will be cast into hell, ". . . into the fire that never shall be quenched" (Mark 9:43). You may not think that sin can damn the regenerated soul to hell, but it will be far better to go to heaven believing what Jesus says than to go to hell doubting it.—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

3. Jesus gave some sweeping observations concerning the Old Testament law. This ruling on divorce is one of the parts of the law which He deliberately revoked in the Sermon on the Mount. The law did not command, but permitted, freedom of divorce for any cause (Deuteronomy 24:1, 3). On another occasion Jesus explained that this was done because of the hardness of heart of the people: it was the best ruling which God could give in that primitive age. Gradually man came up to the state where he could receive this final ruling (Matthew 19:3-9).—The Standard Commentary.

4. Our God is all-wise and we may be sure He has a good reason for every "thou shalt not" that He has spoken, and the injunction against adultery is no exception.

In a nearby small city lived a husband who was totally blind. His wife was unfaithful, contracted a social disease, and the unsuspecting husband paid with the loss of both his eyes.

When a small boy, we knew a fine Christian young woman who made the mistake of marrying a young man whose moral character was very doubtful. This young wife and mother died at the age of thirty years after an operation caused by a social disease contracted from her unprincipled husband.

But it is in the insane asylums that the awful results of immorality are found. There was the case of a wealthy young man who was at death's door, unable to speak or swallow any food, except a little milk, and all the result of immoral acts plus a social disease.

5. The request in Luke 9:61, 62, on the face of things seems a most reasonable one, for the ties of home are strong. In the East, however, such a farewell party might have taken days, if not weeks, and pressure might have been brought to bear upon the young man to remain in the family circle, and not do anything so risky as join forces with this unknown Preacher. How different He was to Paul who was not disobedient to the heavenly vision!

6. Undoubtedly there have been many persons who have felt they were called to full-time work for Christ, but who have been persuaded by relatives and friends to give up what the latter called a foolish idea. Our belief is that the man in Verse 61 rejected the Master's call and went back to his home and stayed there. This man had good intentions probably but not much backbone, and Jesus knew it.

Despondent soul, listen! "He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life." Not "shall have" when death comes, but hath, now, today, this hour, this very minute, hath life, everlasting life! Glory! Hallelujah! Do you believe it?—Selected.

MAY—FREE WILL BAPTIST CHILDREN'S HOME MONTH

The Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, celebrates its fortieth anniversary during the year 1960. In observance of this anniversary, the home is sponsoring the presentation of an anniversary program in various sections of the state of North Carolina. The group of children pictured above will participate in this program.

The anniversary program will consist of news from the home, songs, a historical summary of the past forty years, and two high school graduates will speak briefly on what the home has meant to them. The purpose for these programs will be to challenge Free Will Baptists to do more in the field of child care.

(See the feature articles in this issue, entitled "Forty Fruitful Years" and "Children's Home Presents Anniversary Program," for further information concerning the home and the plans for observing its fortieth anniversary.)

Editorial

OUR PRICELESS POSSESSION

J. O. Fort

How much definite praying and concrete planning have you done to insure the safety and security of the most valuable possession which can ever be intrusted into your care? When a little child is born into your home, you become the steward of a gem which is worth more than all the material wealth of the whole world. In great measure, you hold in your hands the destiny of a life in this world and that of an immortal soul in the world to come. We place this great responsibility upon the parents for the destiny of the child because of the following premises:

1. The child will become essentially the product of the environment in which he is reared. We recognize that there are exceptions to this rule because of hereditary factors, over which environment has very little control, that are also exerting their influence upon the child, such as innate tendencies, aptitudes and abilities. However, it is evident that the home and the other social institutions are too prone to cover their shortcomings by saying that the person who went to the dogs did so because it was beyond their power to help him. Parents, schools, churches and all organizations for community betterment should conduct a continuing evaluation of their activities and standards in the light of the influence they are exerting upon the children growing up under their care. Those activities which are contributing to good citizenship, sound moral character and normal spiritual growth of children should be strengthened and expanded. Whatever influences are contributing toward delinquency should be vigorously opposed and driven out.

2. The Bible says, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22: 6). This injunction from the Lord is applicable primarily to parents, although it is binding upon the school, the church and other environmental agencies. Parents have the greater responsibility because they are more closely related to the child by both blood and association. They are also responsible for the influence of the other social, moral and religious agencies for they should take an active part in forming and administering the services of these agencies. This statement from God's Word is true, despite the fact that some have been disappointed in the lives of their children. Where then is the answer to the problem? The obvious conclusion to which sincere parents come is that they have failed as parents. This may or may not be wholly true. Perhaps the more nearly correct answer is that all the community agencies designed to influence the child for good contributed their bit to the overall failure with respect to these disappointing children.

Parents and others who work with children should understand certain facts about them. When children are born into this world they are: (1) biologically helpless and dependent upon others for everything; (2) mentally they are a complete blank with an enormous capacity for learning; (3) spiritually they have an innate nature which tends toward disobedience, sin and evil; (4) emotionally they respond readily to the influence of those they love.

Parents, being aware of the physical dependence of their children, do not have to be reminded of their responsibility in this respect. On the other hand, they are too often careless and thoughtless about what they say and do in the presence of their child. If parents have a disagreement, they should never discuss their differences in the presence of children—this is but an instance of such carelessness. They must remember that their child learns attitudes and responses from examples set by parents. Furthermore, do not let your love for your child blind you to your child's innate tendencies toward wrong and sin. It will take the spiritual guidance that both you and your church can give to counteract these tendencies toward sin which dwell in the nature of every human being because all nature is fallen nature. The only ally you have in dealing with the especially small child is your emotional tendency to be influenced by those he loves and trusts.

3. Jesus teaches that all people must be born again to escape hell and enter heaven. Jesus told Nicodemus, "... Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3: 3). You must know that children who have reached the age of accountability are lost and in need of the Saviour. There is great danger in neglecting to teach older children that Jesus loves them and wants to save them. We firmly believe there is equally great danger in overinfluencing the child and getting him into the church under the false assumption that he has been saved when, in reality, the Holy Spirit has never regenerated his soul. For this reason, we are not enthusiastic about the present popular wave of cheap evangelism.

We sincerely believe that parents and teachers should utilize every available means to teach the child the Word of God, urge him to study the Bible, teach him to pray and to enter rightfully into the worship services of the church. This will bend his mind and heart toward Christ so that he will respond when the Holy Spirit comes to him for regeneration.

Will We Win Them?

Rev. Winston Sweeney,
Kingsport, Tennessee

TEXT: "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him" (Psalm 126:6).

HERE is no argument concerning the fact that the winning of souls to the Lord Jesus Christ is the most important business there is in the world today. Now many people will admit that this is certainly true, but they themselves do not do anything about it. This is a picture of the church today—a lack of soul winners. No doubt there are many who are concerned but lack the knowledge know-how as to the way to get the job done. I believe our text gives a clear way to win souls. Notice first, "He that goeth forth . . ." The first thing of soul winning is to go. It is important to pray; it is important to live a clean, Godly life but these things themselves are not soul winning. There is no going forth. Many people would like to win souls if it was confined to the religious auditorium during services, but they don't know what it takes to go where the sinner is—in his home, in the store, on the job, in the factory. I enjoy seeing people come forward in church after having preached a gospel message to them. However, some of the latest experiences have been when I have been unable to win people in the factory, in the home, or in the store. Look in the Bible; the people that won souls were those that were willing and did go after them. Somewhere along the line we have gotten the impression that sinners are supposed to come to the house of God and then we would win them there. I grant you a goodly number are won in the church; but, instead of them coming, we are commanded to go in the highways and hedges and compel them to come—taking the message of salvation to them, telling them about Christ. Someone asks, "But does that mean me?" I can't find in the Bible where anyone is excused. We are all ministers of the reconciliation that is found in Christ. We are all His ambassadors.

The next part of the text says, ". . . and weepeth. . . ." We will never be able to win souls unless our hearts are broken by the fact that the lost are going to hell. Our souls need to be bathed in prayer to such an extent that we will be able to shed tears over those outside of Christ. Our salvation should make us concerned about those that are not right with God. I simply do not understand how professing Christians can proclaim their love for Christ and seemingly not be concerned the least for lost men and women. Our text says that those who are able to weep over the lost will win some of them. Read it for yourself. When a sinner sees the tears of the person who is trying to win him, he knows that the individual is interested in him. The tears will be able to melt his heart. I think that the Lord is a good example of someone weeping over the lost and having compassion for them. See Him as He laments over Jerusalem! See Him as He weeps near Lazarus' tomb, because of the unbelief of the people. Apostle Paul is another example of one who had compassion for the lost. Read the first three verses of the ninth chapter of Romans and there you will find what real concern is. How long has it been since you wept real tears of compassion for someone that is lost? How long has it been since your soul has been bathed in real intercessory prayer for those who are away from Him?

The next part of our text reads, ". . . bearing precious seed, . . ." Certainly the soul winner will be one that carries the Word of God, visibly and most of all hid away in his heart. Many think that living a good life is the most important thing. It is important; the soul winner must be Godly, but nothing takes place of the Word of God. There must be the taking of the Word of God. The Bible tells us the Word is sharper than any two-edged sword, being able to pierce to the depth of the hardest heart. Good gospel singing is fine. I like to hear singing that is in the spirit, none of this dead stuff. I like good gospel music, none of jazz and so on. I appreciate someone that can really get hold of God in prayer, but these things do not take the place of the Word of God. The one who would win souls must carry the good seed. The soul winner should have a good number of Scriptures relating to the plan of salvation memorized, so that he will be more assured as he begins to talk to the sinner. Having the Word thus will certainly give confidence and will show to the sinner that the would-be soul winner knows and has experienced what he is talking about. The Word shows us the condition of lost mankind. The Word tells us how a person is saved. Many times I'm afraid that we rely upon our logic, our own persuasion and such to get men and women saved, but that will never suffice. The Holy Spirit does not use such. He uses the Word of God as proclaimed by the soul winner. Certainly everyone preached or witnessed to is not saved; but, as the Bible says, a number will receive the Word, be converted and come to know the Lord Jesus Christ.

Our text further describes the soul winner with these words, ". . . shall doubtless come again rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Look with me, please, at this statement from the Word of God. The Bible says we will have results. That is the most glorious part about this business of winning souls; God says we will have results! God has promised we will win souls when we do it His way. But we must do it His way! The devil says it can't be done; God says it can. Some think because the coming of the Lord is near that we can't win souls, but that is a lie of Satan. Satan likes to get Christians lulled to sleep and complacent about this matter of winning souls for Christ. Brother, the devil is on the job. Instead of trying to win souls, he tries to get us to substitute a lot of other things to get the lost in. Having soup suppers and pink lemonade feasts and turning the house of God into a social gathering place will not take the place of God's way. God has a way, and we can't win souls by staying at home. We can't do it by waiting for them to come to church, hoping to get an opportunity to witness to them possibly after the pastor has preached the mes-

Children's Home Presents Anniversary Program

by Rev. J. W. Everton

THIS year, 1960, marks the fortieth anniversary for North Carolina Free Will Baptist Children's Home. During the month of May, we will present our anniversary program in various sections of the state. We sincerely wish we could visit every conference of North Carolina. However, I am sure you can see the great difficulty of traveling a long distance with a large group of children. Because of the problems that would arise, we are confining our visits to the areas that are nearer the home. These programs will be given in conjunction with our May fund-raising campaign.

The program will consist of news from the home, songs, two high school graduates will speak briefly on what the home has meant to them, and a historical summary of the past forty years. There will be a challenge to do more in the field of child care. An offering will be received for the home. I believe this program will prove to be of interest to you. We urge everyone to attend.

Forty Fruitful Years

by Rev. J. W. Everton

THE Free Will Baptist Children's Home of North Carolina had its inception several years prior to its opening. In the years of 1910 through 1915, some of our leading Free Will Baptist became interested in providing a home for homeless boys and girls of our state. We had men and women from various conferences and associations, which embraced the entire state, that saw this great need. They began to advocate the building of a home where we could provide care for children who needed help.

In the year 1915, interest became so great that the state convention voted to assume the responsibility of providing for those helpless boys and girls. At that annual session, held at the Shady Grove Church in Sampson County, it was decided to elect a board of trustees to make the necessary arrangements to provide this home. The trustees elected were: Elders J. F. Casey, W. R. Coats, M. C. Prescott, J. E. Davis, and Brother W. J. Braxton. This board of trustees soon began their work and on January 1, 1916, they accepted a gift of fifty acres of land about two miles north of the town of Middlesex. Since then, there has been three hundred and forty-two acres purchased.

The first building was begun in the latter part of the year of 1916; this was a three-story building with a basement. It was used for both boys and girls. This building was opened for the admission of children on May 23, 1920.

The first application was passed on February 11, 1920. The first children admitted were Nellie, Helen, Dorothy and Carl Whitley on May 23, 1920. In just a few years it became necessary to erect another dormitory for boys, which was built in 1921, consisting of a two-story building containing 16 rooms, and was known as the boys' dormitory.

In 1940, another building was erected consisting of an adequate dining room, kitchen, storage rooms and office.

The past decade has been a period which the Children's Home campus has experienced a real face lifting. The old boys' dormitory was condemned and a new building completed in 1951. The church building completed in 1952. A new girls' dormitory was finished in 1953. A laundry building was started in 1956 and was completed in the first part of 1957. The new superintendent's home made its appearance in 1957. Added to the campus was an office building in 1958. In 1959 an upright water tank was erected. The present value of our plant is $391,632.19.

The following have served as superintendents of the home during the forty years of operation:

Mr. L. B. Dunn from November 5, 1907 to March 23, 1920.

Elder L. H. Wetherington from March 23, 1920, to July 1, 1921.

Mr. C. G. Pope from July 1, 1921, to June 3, 1929.

Elder J. R. Bennett from June 3, 1929, to December 20, 1934.

Elder J. W. Alford from December 20, 1934, to January 17, 1935.

Rev. M. E. Tyson from January 17, 1935, to May 15, 1941.

Rev. J. A. Evans from May 15, 1941, to 1949.

Mr. Walter McD. Croom from 1949 to 1951.

Rev. S. A. Smith from 1951 to 1955.

Rev. R. H. Jackson from 1955 to 1956.

Rev. S. A. Smith from 1956 to 1958.

Rev. J. W. Everton began 1958, and is now serving.

During forty years of operation, our home has cared for 481 children. We are in contact with every child which has left the home. However, as we look out over the field we are justified in being proud that God has given us the opportunity of this kind of service. I call your attention to just a few who, we feel, were influenced by the work of this home.

Wilbert Flemming is a mail carrier. James Earl Raper is a Free Will Baptist minister. Haywood Howell is teaching school. Robert Brewer is dean of men at Florida State University. Lillie Faye Harrell is teaching school. Charles Harrell graduated from East Carolina College with a major in accounting and is now working with the state revenue department. Bu-

Free Will Baptists in Atlanta, Georgia

by J. R. Davidson

INTEREST and encouragement are added relative to our work in Atlanta when we are privileged to be in assemblies of our people (such as we enjoyed in the annual Bible Conference at the Bible College recently), and to have so many of them say, "We've been reading about your work in the papers, but we've not seen anything recently. We've been praying for you and the work there, and, we want you to show us how we are deeply concerned. We'll be checking the papers for further news." So, as we are, as difficult as it may be to conform to the caption, "Free Will Baptists in Atlanta, Georgia." As you may imagine, our topics would of necessity be broken down into sundry parts were I to attempt to describe all who are Free Will Baptists here in name. The status reminds me of the necessity to suggest that our people in the churches back home (wherever it may be) begin inculcating principles into the minds of the constituency of our churches which will develop an attitude of loyalty to this cause for which our fathers suffered so severely.

Truly we are grateful for the privilege of coming to you with another installment in reporting progress being made in the work here. Mrs. Davidson and I came for this beginning a bit over seven months ago, and have been consistently on the job in sundry ways. Thanksgivings are in order for the blessings of our wonderful Lord in giving returns for our labors; although our growth has not been phenomenal, it has been rather steady. Names of new prospects are brought to our attention frequently of Free Will Baptists who have moved to the Atlanta area from different sections of the country. Response of these for an effective service would of necessity count on the small per cent side of the scale, but God has given us some of the real salt of the earth for our fellowship and labors together. Excerpts from our report filed with the Progressive Quarterly Meeting of the Chattahoochee Association last Saturday bear some figures which should be of interest to our people in general: 25 members are enrolled on the church roster, several of whom were received during the recent quarter, including 3 for baptism. The Sunday school enrollment stood at 34, the leagues at 22, Woman's Auxiliary at 11 and Master's Men at 7. The quarter's offerings amounted to almost $750, and the records showed that $1,250 had been offered in one check in making a proposition for the purchase of a house and some ground. Our real estate representative called recently to say that we should get ready for executing the final official papers, at which time we will take possession of a nine-room house (plus 2 baths and a hall and screened front porch) with a plot of ground 100 by 200 feet. The purchase price is $12,500. We are aware of the fact that this sounds small, however it is a beginning of which our people have talked for a half century, and we are truly grateful. There are prospects for development for a period of several years, and, at the present the minister and his wife will have living quarters in the building, and we will carry on our plan of work there. At present we are continuing to assemble for week-end services in downtown Atlanta, and the mid-week services are held in homes of co-operating friends. We expect our address to be 29 Clay Street, S. E., Atlanta, by May 1, 1960.

We are still aware of the fact that the task is stupendous, and that it cannot be accomplished without the spirit which moved the psalmist's heart to express the following: "Except the LORD build the house, they labour in vain that build it: . . ." (Psalm 127:1). We urge upon every soul in our fellowships in various places the importance of their prayers with ours that we may know and do the will of the Lord. Our gratitude having already been expressed for the wonderful people God has given us here in this fellowship, we wish to further express our deep thanks for the wonderful job being done by the Georgia State Mission Board in this connection and for the beautiful way in which our friends throughout this state, together with some in other states, have co-ordinated effort to make possible the on-going of this cause. God bless all of you.

There will be many needs, which will prove very strenuous on this group in a financial way. Should there be those who wish to assist in the efforts being made by the mission board, you may make contact by addressing Rev. Mance R. Cason, Route 4, Moultrie, Georgia. Should some wish to have a part in these efforts directly, you may address Mrs. Johnnie W. Lang, 1886 Pinedale Drive, Decatur, Georgia. Further, should there be any who are interested in taking some of the needed facilities as projects, your inquiry should be directed to Rev. J. R. Davidson, 52 Vinson Drive, S. E., Atlanta 17, Georgia.

Communications from interested friends are always highly appreciated. Don't forget to pray.

My Week at Missionary Youth Camp

Rev. Kirby J. Godwin

For some years the Lord had spoken to my heart about working in youth camp. I had prayed that the door of opportunity would be opened. Then last June God did open the door, and the blessing was truly one that I shall never forget.

Each day as the Word of God was taught and preached, you could feel the Holy Spirit at work in the lives of all. Then when we had our evening worship services, the Holy Spirit would complete His work of conviction. Each young person there who was lost was saved, and those who were saved rededicated their lives. What better way can God reward a person than giving him the deep joy of seeing youth saved?

At the close of my first week at Missionary Youth Camp, Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, I thanked God over again for what He had done for me. Maybe God has spoken to your heart to go to camp. If you will let Him have His way in your life, He will bless you richly.

“. . . How much owest thou unto my Lord?" (Luke 16:15).

Board of Associates Organized for C.N.A.

A board of associates, designed to serve as a representative and advisory unit, has been organized for Christian News Associates, according to an announcement by the Rev. Jerry Ballard, director.

The sixteen-man board includes the following ministers: Joseph Ange, Dale Burden, Forest Chamberlain, Randy Cox, Ronald Creech, Robert L. Edwards, Herman Heisey, Bobby Jackson, A. J. Lambert, Jack Paramore, James E. Raper, Raymond Riggs, Bob M. Rogers, Ben Scott, Robert L. Shockey and Henry Van Kluyve. Others are expected to be added in the near future.

The step was announced as a part of a plan to make the ministry of C.N.A. more valuable to the denomination in line with its established purpose. Primary activities of the group at the present are the publishing of Perception, a periodical for ministers and lay leaders sent free of charge to Free Will Baptists throughout the denomination and a public relations consultant service to churches and ministers desiring to increase the scope of their influence in their respective communities through well-organized church publicity. In addition, C.N.A. supplies news and articles of denominational interest to established church organs.

In defining the purpose of C.N.A., organized in 1959, Mr. Ballard quoted from the group's "Statement of Purpose": "C.N.A. was set up 'for the twofold purpose of (1) promoting the cause of Christ at home and abroad by dissemination of news concerning Free Will Baptist activities to denominational organs, publishing helps and ideas for the minister and keeping readers aware of responsibilities to spread the saving message of the gospel to those who are lost, and of (2) upholding the Word and work of God in these days by keeping ministers and lay leaders of the denomination in-

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Please explain, "Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many" (Matthew 20:28). How may we interpret this Scripture?—H. G. Jones, Illinois.

Answer: That is exactly why Jesus came, to minister to the needs of every person in this lost world. Their greatest needs were spiritual; therefore, His greatest effort was spent in that direction. "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). These are also Jesus' own words. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:28-30); compare Psalm 119:176. No one ever became the yoke-fellow with Christ that did not have Christ to take his burden, bear it away and bear him into the very presence and favor of God. "Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them" (Luke 4:40); "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses" (Matthew 8:17); "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed. For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls" (1 Peter 2:21-25). Where else may we find servitude so lowly or so rewarding as this rendered us by our Precious One? "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. . . . He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. . . . Yet it pleased the LORD to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand" (Isaiah 53:3-5, 7, 10); "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:18, 19); and finally, "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Revelation 13:8). There is as we see here a sense in which since before this world assumed its present form, He gave Himself for us. Therefore, He is our eternal Redeemer.

Question: What will happen to the nation of Israel when the millennium has passed?

Answer: They are to dwell in the new earth. "For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD, so shall your seed and your name remain" (Isaiah 66:22). The Bible seems quite clear in its teaching that national distinction among the saved nations will not continue after the millennium but that Israel will be as a memorial nation upon the new earth.

Kept Bright by Using

"Dreadfully tarnished," exclaimed a woman as she showed a massive piece of family silver to a friend. "I cannot keep it bright unless I use it!" Said the friend, "That is just the way with faith. You cannot keep faith bright unless you use it!"

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed. Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Resolutions of Respect

MR. MILTON DURHAM

Whereas our heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call from this world unto Himself the spirit of our dear brother and friend, Milton Durham, of the members of the Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church, Carteret County, North Carolina, desire to express in these resolutions our sympathy to those who feel most keenly our common loss, and to pay tribute to the memory of our faithful brother, and God's servant.

Brother Durham passed to his reward March 25, 1950, having served as a faithful member of our church for a number of years. Surviving are his wife, Katherine Boyd Durham; one daughter, Mrs. Peppie Price; and three sons, Carl Durham, Kenneth Durham and Colon Durham.

We shall miss him, but we feel that his mission here has been courageously fulfilled.

Mrs. Dora Lee Cahoon

On March 23, 1960, the Lord saw fit to call one of our neighbors and a very dear friend, Mrs. Dora Lee Cahoon, making her stay on earth 66 years. Mrs. Cahoon was a member of the Gum Neck Free Will Baptist Church, Columbia, North Carolina, and was a loyal and faithful worker in the church activities as long as her health permitted. She will be missed by all, but we feel that our loss is her gain.

She leaves to mourn their loss five children: Mrs. Louise Ausborn of Hampton, Virginia; Mrs. Vivian Cahoon of South Norfolk, Virginia; Mrs. Lucille Spruill of Norfolk, Virginia; Mr. Royce Weatherly of Winston Salem, North Carolina; and Mr. Herman Weatherly of Camden, North Carolina.

She is gone but not forgotten—
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in her home
That never can be filled.

THE RESURRECTION AND US

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25).

We have recently commemorated the resurrection of Christ. Easter is a wonder-day in the life of every Christian, and the resurrection should be remembered every day with thanksgiving to God.

Last week our meditation was on the subject, "The Risen Christ." This week we think in terms of the resurrection as it relates to you and me in our daily experiences. In a recent issue of The Sunday School Times there appeared a very timely article under the caption, "Resurrection Week." Even though Easter is almost two weeks past, I believe that there are thoughts contained in it upon which we can feast ourselves:

Resurrection life is the normal life of every Christian. Just as Christ, having completed His work of sacrificial offering, rose from the dead and ascended to the Father and now is seated at the right hand of God (Colossians 3:1), so the believer, crucified with Christ and risen with Him, has his life hidden with Him in God. Although we are still in the world and surrounded by the influences and temptations of a world that knows not God, he is nevertheless to be not of the world. Having been transported positionally into the heavenlies, we are admonished to conduct ourselves in keeping with his new state. "Seek those things which are above," writes Paul, "set your affection (mind) on things above" (Colossians 3:1, 2). Like Abraham, we are to fix our hearts not on the strange country in which for the time being we have our physical existence—a world that will crumble and pass away—but we are to fix our hearts upon the real habitation which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God" (Hebrews 11:9, 10). It is not that we are to be impractical or unhardy, or neglectful concerning the duties and responsibilities of everyday life. But our whole drive and all our desires, by God's grace, are to be focused on heavenly things.

Heavenly, not earthly, standards are to determine our choices. Whereas the unbeliever is absorbed in earthly cares or pleasures, and occupied with earthly aims and programs, and beset by earthly discouragements and disappointments, the Christian's eyes and heart are to be fixed on Christ who is our life here and now, and we are to look forward with joy and anticipation to the time when He shall appear. Therefore, as we commemorate, at this season, the glorious resurrection of our Lord and Saviour, let us make certain that we are reckoning on the rightful position in the heavenlies that is ours through Christ, and let us continue to walk day by day in the newness of the resurrection life of victory that He supplies.—Copyrighted by the Sunday School Times and Used by Permission.

"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead" (Philippians 3:10, 11).

"Woe to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the power of evil!" (Habakkuk 2:9).

WHAT FREE WILL BAPTISTS BELIEVE

1. We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God, inerrant in the original writings, and the only sufficient rule of faith and practice (2 Peter 1:18-21; 2 Timothy 3:16, 17).
2. We believe in one God, eternally existing in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Spirit (Hebrews 1:1, 2; Deuteronomy 6:4; John 4:24).
3. We believe that God created the universe as described in the Scriptures, and that natural law is the orderly expression of the divine will, but not so rigid in its operation as to preclude transcendence by miracles, designed to effect the beneficent and moral purposes of God (Genesis 1:1; Colossians 1:16; Hebrews 11:3).
4. We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ was begotten by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, and is true God and true man; that He died for our sins, according to the Scriptures, as a representative and substitutionary sacrifice; that He arose from the dead and ascended into heaven in the same body in which He was resurrected; that He is now present for us at the right hand of the Father as High Priest and Advocate; and that He will come again personally and visibly as promised in the Scriptures (Luke 1:35; Ephesians 1:7; 1 Thessalonians 4:14-18).
5. We believe in the personality and deity of the Holy Spirit; that He came to regenerate and indwell all believers, to be administrator in the true church, and "to reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16:8-13; 1 Corinthians 2:11).

THE CALLOUS HEART

by James R. Miller

"And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side, . . ." (Matthew 13:4).

HOW ARE HUMAN HEARTS beaten into a highway? A child's heart is sensitive to every impression. But as it grows older, the thousand influences, feelings, emotions, imaginations, treading over it continuously, trample it into hardness. Every time a young man feels conviction of sin and does not turn from the sin, his heart is left a little less tender. Every time he feels that he ought to do a certain thing and does not do it, allowing the good impulse to pass, he is left a little less sensitive to good impressions afterward.

The same effect is produced by the common experiences of life. The wheels and carts of business go lumbering over the heart. We ought to have our hearts fenced in, and allow none of these heavy wagons to pass over them. A businessman ought to keep his heart soft and warm in the midst of all his business, tender as a little child's, humble, teachable, loving, trusting. He ought to have a sanctuary in his inner life into which no unhallowed foot, none but the priestly feet of heavenly guests, should ever pass. But too many make their hearts an open common, till they are beaten into a callousness that nothing can impress.

Another way is by the feet of sinful habits. There was an old legend of a goblin horseman that galloped over men's fields at night; and wherever his foot struck, the soil was so blasted that nothing would ever grow on it again. So is it with the heart over which the beastly feet of lust, of sensuality, of greed, of selfishness, of passion are allowed to tread. There is an impression that it does young people no harm to indulge in sin for a time, if they afterward repent. No more fatal falsehood was ever whispered by the tempter into any ear. The heart that is trodden over by vile lust or indulgences of any kind is never the same again.—E.R.A.

The Terror of the Wicked

by James R. Miller

"Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" (Luke 3:7).

THERE ARE A GOOD many people who want to flee from wrath, but are not willing to give up that which draws down the wrath upon them. When a godless man becomes sick, and it seems as though he may die, straightway he begins to look about for some way of flight from the wrath that he feels hangs over him. He sends for a minister or for some good man. He has his long-neglected Bible brought and laid beside his bed. He will find refuge from his peril, if he can. He wants to have the Bible read to him: perhaps there is some virtue in that which will shield him. He wants the minister to pray for him: he has heard that a good man's prayers will save a soul. He wants to be baptized and to receive the Lord's Supper; he hopes that these holy ordinances may somehow shelter him from the wrath. All the while he has not really thought of trying to unload the burden which is crushing him. He is carrying his sins unconfessed and unforgiven. He has no true sense of sinfulness, no realization of God's holiness or of his own debt to Him; he is simply terrified, and is trying to flee from the impending wrath. If he gets well again, he will very likely return to his old life and live on in sin as before, proving the insincerity and worthlessness of his repentance. If he were asked, "Who warned you to flee?" his answer could not be "Love for Christ," or "A sense of my guilt," but "Fear, the terrors of death and eternity."

It was a very proper question, therefore, which John asked the multitudes who came to him desiring to be baptized. The only flight that saves is away from sin, to Christ. No man is saved who carries his sins with him in his flight. The door of the refuge is wide enough to admit the worst penitent sinner, but not wide enough to admit any cherished sin.—Copyright ERA, 1959.

6. We believe that man was created in the image of God; that he sinned and thereby incurred, not only physical death, but also that spiritual death which is separation from God; that all human beings inherit a fallen nature of such tendencies that those who reach moral responsibility become sinners in thought, word and deed (Genesis 2:7; Psalm 51:5; Ephesians 2:5; 1 Corinthians 2:14).
7. We believe that the call of the gospel is co-extensive with the atonement to all men; that the primary mission of the church is to proclaim the good news of salvation to the whole world; and that all who receive by faith the Lord Jesus Christ are born of the Holy Spirit, and thereby become the children of God (Matthew 28:19; 1 Timothy 2:4; John 3:6; 1:12; 3:16).
8. We believe that the church is composed of persevering believers in the Lord Jesus Christ who have been called out from the world by the preaching of the gospel and associated under the Holy Spirit in worship, love and service (Romans 8:38, 39; 1 Corinthians 10:13; 2 Chronicles 15:2).
9. We believe in the baptism of believers by immersion as a symbol of their previous experience of regeneration, the free observance of the Lord's Supper as a symbol of Christ's atoning sacrifice, and the washing of the saints' feet as a symbol of Christian fellowship and service (Matthew 28:19; Colossians 3:3; 2:12; Matthew 26; John 13).
10. We believe in the bodily resurrection of the just and the unjust, the everlasting blessedness of the saved, and the everlasting punishment of the lost (John 5:28, 29; Revelation 20:12-15; Matthew 25:46).

SOME RECENT HIGHLIGHTS

Sunday evening, March 20, I preached "Repentance," and at the close made an altar call and three first-time decisions were made, which made our hearts rejoice.

Monday, March 21, I attended a study course given by one of the ladies of my church, at 7:30 in the evening.

Tuesday, I showed a film, "The Crimson Shadow," having good attendance. If you really want information about the conditions of the world, visibly, just sit right down and write to the Foreign Mission Board of Free Will Baptists, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee, and get a booklet on "The Crimson Shadow." This booklet will very likely make you want to get closer to Christ and be prepared for anything that might come your way.

Wednesday, with my wife and other women, I attended the Eastern District Women's Auxiliary Convention which concluded at Bethlehem Church in Onslow County, where we witnessed one of the best conventions that we have seen anywhere. These women really had a program that would stir your soul. These women really know how. They have the Holy Spirit's anointing of doing things.

Thursday, I spoke to the student body of Mount Olive Junior College at the Chapel, 10:00 o'clock. The student body really showed that they were happy. May I say that I never saw a finer group of young people, and it seemed that all were happy. They were from South Carolina, one from Georgia, one from Florida, one from Tennessee, and from north and south, east and west. I met several who would say, "Brother Griffin, I have heard my father and mother speak of you so much." I feel like I have known you all my life.

Friday, I remained over from the morning chapel service and spoke to the ministerial students at 3:30 p. m. It was an extraordinary opportunity to talk from my heart to the hearts of these young people. It made me think of those days when I sat in class and drank in the messages from Godly teachers who knew something about what we stood in need of and drilled us in the work of a minister.

I believe that if you are really interested in the Free Will Baptist denomination that it would stir your heart, as it did mine, to spend a day at Mount Olive College.

Always when there I was tied to services, in a convention or some special service. I was shown through the library by Mrs. Council, who explained the method of index and the way of preserving the great selection of books and the various periodicals. I am a great lover of history, and I learned some things even in one day that I did not know about our history, even though I have searched many records.

Brother Raper took us through the building as I had not been taken before. Brother Johnson took me out to the fine plot of land on which the new buildings are to be built. This is one of the finest sites that I know of for an institution of learning like ours. The location seems to me to be the best that could have been found. It is in a good county and a good growing city.

We, as Free Will Baptists, ought to be proud, not scornful pride, but a Godly pride, that God has blessed us so much in the few short years to reach the heights that we have attained. This thought comes to me, as said by the man of God, "If God be for us who can be against us," and again, "We can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us."

I cannot name all the ministerial students to whom I spoke, but there was one in particular that reminded me of myself, in age and work, when I went off to school, the old Seminary at Ayden, North Carolina. Not boasting, but it takes a lot of want to get off from home and attend school with a family; but the God that I serve will empower that want to when we do our best. The man in mind is Brother Fred Powers for Pamplico, South Carolina, who is serving as pastor the church at Saratoga, North Carolina. Yes, God gave him a church to help him on the way. God gave me four quarter-time churches. That made it lighter on me as I could do like many did and have done, get a sermon and preach it all around, which gave me more time on assignments. Perhaps some preachers will call to mind some of their own work.

Since we do not have space to mention everyone of those fine young people, I want to say that it did encourage my heart and made rejoicing to my soul to see and have the pleasure of speaking to them out of my heart and past experiences. If you love your denomination and the work given to us as ministers, it certainly is a happy experience to look to the future and see a group of young men and women who are preparing for the greatest calling on earth—that of preaching the Word of God. There has been a time, just after our Eurcka College in Ayden was burned, when it looked mighty dark as to the future efficiency of an educated ministry, but the Free Will Baptist Bible College was born, almost out of dry ground, and then came our Mount Olive Junior College, and our hopes are growing all the time for a better educated ministry, with higher standards and greater efficiency.

Those who came along when I did had but little educational advantages as we had lost all that we ever had by the merger of our church with the Northern Baptist. The only thing was our high school with a Bible course attached at Ayden. There were no loan funds from which a poor fellow could get help. This made it very hard for many to get what was offered at Ayden; but now with loan funds and more interest manifested by our folk as a whole, it is much easier for a fellow to get through. Since we have two good colleges, and with the hope that in the near future, if Jesus tarries, of having more colleges in the United States, let us put our shoulders to the wheel, as the old saying goes, and push for the glory of God for more and better colleges. United we can do it. It will take working together; praying together; paying together; fellowshiping together, and God will give the increase. Therefore, let us "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thy habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes" (Isaiah 54:2). This procedure was given to Israel by inspiration of God through the prophet, but Israel would not obey God; they would not cooperate with God and one another and they lost out. God says, that is Christ said, and He was God manifested in the flesh (John 1:14), "... if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand: ..." (1 Corinthians 3:9), to put over the job. Someone has said, "God had held us back for this hour to take over when others have gone modern and left off the truth." I disagree with the statement. We held ourselves back because we would not put missions and Christian education in the place that God designed for His Church, together with tithing and offerings. God wants our money as well as our faith.

Good Listeners

Sit still and listen to your minister and teachers. Don't imagine you are wiser than they. They can direct you to lamps which you will need in the dark places of life. Collect strength now to use it by and by. Jesus Himself was an example in this. He went from the temple to Nazareth and was obedient to His parents for 20 years.—Adapted.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

"The Lord's Ten Cents"

by Violet Hunter

"BYE, Mom," Joey called from the kitchen door. "I'm going to see if Wayne can go with me to the dime store. I'm going to spend the dollar Granddad gave me for my birthday."

"Ninety cents, dear," mother corrected. "Ten cents belongs to the Lord, you know."

"That's what I meant," Joey said. "Bye, Mom."

A minute later he was standing in the Metcalf kitchen. "Hurry and get done, Wayne. Here I'll help. Let's get to the store early so we can go fishing. Can you go? I'm going to spend the dollar Granddad gave me for my birthday. It's today, you know." Joey's tongue could travel fast and his words tumbled out so quickly Wayne still hadn't said a word except "hello."

"I'll go ask my mom," Wayne said and disappeared into the other part of the house. He was soon back. "O. K., Joe. Let's go," he grinned.

Not many shoppers were in the dime store when the boys arrived, so it wasn't long before Joey had purchased the things he wanted. With his new belongings tucked away in his various pockets, Joey found he still had 30 cents. Enough for an ice-cream cone each and the 10 cents which belonged to the Lord.

The day was getting warmer so Wayne and Joey walked slowly while they ate their ice cream. As they passed the corner bakery, they stopped to inspect the goods. Cream puffs, cakes, pies, chocolate eclairs were exclaimed over one by one, accompanied by various sounds meaning, "That looks good."

"Wayne, look at those gingerbread boys. Don't they look good? Ten-cents special today! Sure wish I had a dime."

"But you do have a dime," Wayne replied.

"That's right, I have," Joey looked thoughtful. "It isn't enough to really help in the Lord's work anyway, is it?" After a moment of hesitation, the boys entered the bakery.

Five minutes later the dime and the gingerbread boy were both gone. The latter hadn't tasted nearly as good as it looked, and Joey wished for a minute he hadn't yielded to temptation.

"Let's go catch those fish," Wayne said, and he took Joey's arm to hurry him along. "Time's a 'wastin'."

The park was cool. Although the fish didn't seem to want any special treats today, it felt good just to sit with one's back against a tree, feet dangling in the cool water.

Joel yawned and closed his eyes to rest them from the sun. Such a warm drowsy day. The gingerbread boy hadn't tasted very good and it cost 10 cents. Little brown boy, 10 cents.

"Why hello, Rev. Smith," said Joey, "I thought you were in Brazil." The missionary didn't answer and continued walking slowly by. I must be dreaming, thought Joey and, of course, he was. He watched the missionary walk past and then he saw a little brown boy run up and take hold of his hand. Joey couldn't hear what was said. He probably couldn't have understood if he had. The missionary looked down at the brown boy's foot and Joey saw that it was bleeding. "He will put a bandage on it," thought Joey, "and then he won't get infection like I did once." But no, the missionary shook his head. This time Joey heard.

"I am sorry, little brown boy, I have no more bandage. I am sorry but I cannot help you."

"You've got a bite there. Pull it in." Wayne was tugging excitedly at Joey's line. "Oh, it got away. What's the matter? Are you asleep or something?" Wayne sounded a bit cross.

"Guess I don't feel so well, Wayne. Think I'll go home," Joey said as he stood up. "Do you want to come, too?"

"I think I'll stay and try to catch that fish. I'll bet it is a big one," Wayne replied and settled himself on the grassy bank.

Joey couldn't forget the little brown boy with the hurt foot nor could he forget the gingerbread boy he had bought with the Lord's money. He walked home slowly, wondering what he should tell mother.

When he got home, mother was sitting in the front room with her mending basket on her lap.

"Hello, dear," mother said, "did you have a nice morning?"

Instead of answering mother's question, Joey asked one of his own. "How much does a bandage cost, Mom?"

"What a strange question," mother answered. "I suppose it depends on the size, Joey. A Band-Aid to cover a cutger probably cost 2 cents.

"What about a bandage to cover a foot, Mom. How much would that cost?" Mother looked puzzled and after a moment of thought said, "That's hard to say. Depends on how bad the hurt and how the foot. I don't know really. Maybe cents."

"I'll never again think the money I have for the Lord is too little to do any good," Joey said. Then he told his mother about the little brown boy and the Lord's 10 cents.—My Pleasure.

How Far Can We Go Without Jesus?

by Mrs. Wade Bottom

How far can we go without Jesus?
How far can we go without Him?
When our soul is in despair, our Comforter is there.

He will be our loving Friend, if we'll just invite Him in.

How far can we go without Him?

How far can we go without Jesus?

How far can we go without Him?

If we take the time to pray, He will wash our cares away.

We should thank Him for His love sent from heaven above.

Have we told Him how much we care?

How much do we know about Jesus?

How much do we know about Him?

He died upon the tree to save you and me.

He paid the cruel cost that we might not be lost.

How much do we know about Him?

How much can we do for Jesus?

How much can we do for Him?

We can spread the gospel story, giving Him all the glory.

We can read our Bibles too, to learn just what to do.

That's what we can do for Him.

"When we are wrong, O God, make easy to change; when we are right, make easy to live with!"

Study in Ephesians

CHAPTER 4

Verse 1: "I therefore the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation where with ye are called." Here Paul is pleading with the Christians at Ephesus to walk in a worthy manner where Christ had called them. This advice is being practiced in our day.

Verse 2: He tells them how to walk. (Ephesians 5:2.)

Verses 3-6: He begins his discourse on the work of the spirit and the oneness of God and His Church.

Verse 7: He shows how the different members of the body of Christ are given gifts according to the measures of the gift of Christ.

Verses 8-10: He reminds us that Christ died after He descended for mankind's redemption and gave gifts unto men.

Verse 11: He gave some apostles, and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and some teachers. (See Romans 12:6-8; 1 Corinthians 4:7.)

Verse 12: "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."

Verse 13: "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the glory of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." Here we see the purpose in this chapter, perfecting man for God's glory. Verse 13 is the key verse to Ephesians.

Verses 14, 15: He warns the believers that they should not remain as babies in Christ, but should have maturity, grown up, rooted and grounded, ever depending on and holding fast to the head of the body even Christ.

Verse 16: ". . . the whole body knit together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, making increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." (See Colossians 3:1, 2.)

Verses 17-22: He warns believers not to be slothful in the world and the best thereof. (See Galatians 5:16, 17.)

Verses 23, 24: He challenges believers to put off the old man which the righteousness of Christ disallows in Verses 25-28. But rather live in brotherly love, ministering to one another as unto Christ. (See 1 Thessalonians 4:9.)

Verse 29: He exhorts the believer to avoid unclean talk. This is one of the weaknesses of mankind. Since the tongue is the hardest member of our body to control, it is very necessary that we seek to dedicate this member of our body to Christ. James 3:6-8 shows us the dangers. We practice sin in any form it grieves the Holy Spirit as it is shown farther in Verse 30.

Verses 31, 32: Let all uncleanness be put away that the works of evil have no part in our lives, that we may have complete victory through Christ. (See Romans 12:1-3.) This can be accomplished through prayer and Bible study, and yielding to the Holy Spirit of God.

Recent Report From Alaska

Dear Friends,

Once again I want to share with you the blessings of the Lord and His wonder-working power in our work here in the land of the midnight sun. We are approaching the season of the year when the sun doesn't set for several weeks in the area north of the Arctic Circle. Here in the Anchorage area, however, the sun does go down beyond the horizon for about three hours each night during the summer months. Even then it does not get totally dark, but it is the spiritual darkness in Alaska that lays so heavy upon our hearts.

We have come through our second long winter here. The winters here are so cold and with only a few hours of daylight in December and January. We have had an unusual amount of illness in our family this year but, praise the Lord, "... we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28); so we accept it in that way. In the extreme winter months, Vernon's health became very bad and he was suffering many physical handicaps. One of these was the recurrence of the trouble in his eye. Our doctor here suggested sending him to a warmer climate, so we sent him to Miami, Florida, to live with his aunt. Our last report concerning his general health is very encouraging. However, it appears that the difficulty with his eyes is coming from an incurable disease. The doctors are not certain of this yet and are continuing their tests and examinations. Your prayers for their guidance and Vernon's health are sincerely requested at this time.

Now let us take a look at our mission work as God has blessed us in a material way. The Lord opened the door for us to move in our present property on June 1, 1959. At that time, the building consisted of a three bedroom apartment wing and a 25 x 60 foot open room in the main building which was originally planned for a store. During the ten month period since we moved here we have built a 14 x 25 foot extension on the front which provides us with a vestibule, nursery, t rest rooms and a parka and boot room. In this area a parka and boot room is essential during the winter season. We have completed the installation of our rostrum that will seat eighteen choir members. In addition, we have been blessed with acquiring a 40 x 20 foot building which is back of the original building. This has been made into four classrooms for our Sunday school and is now connected to the main building by a passageway. We have a small steeple atop our main building and the steeple is topped by a four-foot electric cross. We are quite proud of this cross as it sends out its testimony into the dark Alaskan night for all those passing to see. The church is located on the International Airport Road and is in a strategic location for many to see it. We hope to get a heating plant and baptistry installed this year. To sum it up in grateful acknowledgement to Him who has enabled us, we have a church that is a credit to our Lord and to our denomination.

Looking now to our spiritual progress, we again see the blessing of the Holy Spirit.

Working for Peace

(Lesson for May 8)

Lesson: Matthew 5:9, 21, 22, 38-48.

Golden Text: Matthew 5:9.

I. INTRODUCTION

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God" (Vs. 9). When the angel announced the birth of Jesus to the faithful shepherds as they stood with their sheep on the hills of Judea, a multitude of the heavenly host shouted a chorus of praise to God in the highest for Him whose birth meant ultimate peace upon the earth and good will among men. Jesus is the great Peacemaker between sinful men and an offended God, and to be like Him we must be peacemakers also. If we are to be makers of peace between and among disturbed and distressed men, we must first know the great Peacemaker and have His peace in our own hearts and minds. The Lord Jesus is our peace, and just before He went home to His Father's throne, He promised that He would leave His peace with His unhappy disciples, saying, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27).—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The rise of anger may be the first rung on the ladder of the gallows (Matthew 5:22).
2. Anger is dangerous because hatred develops from anger, and hatred is the same as murder in God's sight (Vs. 22).
3. "An eye for an eye," not in retaliation but in sacrifice, is the law of Christ (Vs. 38).
4. It is not craven cowardice but a high degree of courage that enables a man to turn . . . the other (cheek)" (Vs. 39).
5. The law of love will always do more than what is required by any other law (Vs. 40, 41).
6. The law of love is able to see a neighbor even in the one who is an enemy (Vs. 44).
7. The Spirit of God in the children of God makes it possible to love even one's enemies (Vs. 44).

8. A Christian's dealings with his fellows should always be on a higher plane than that of other people (Vs. 46).

9. A Christian may be known by the kind of enemies he has.

10. The good works of a Christian may be used to put to shame the evil designs of his enemies.—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. One does not need to be an ardent student of diplomacy, sociology or the Bible to recognize the dire need of peacemakers in these trying times. The entire world would breathe a sigh of relief if definite assurance could be given that man, in his lust for power and his hatred for his fellow man, would not let loose powerful forces at his command and destroy the human race. How much heartache and anxiety would be removed if brutality of people toward other people were eradicated? Yea, how many earnest and devout pastors would rejoice exceedingly if they knew that petty prejudices, unholy rivalries, domineering attitudes and other elements of dissension were permanently removed from among their congregations? Furthermore, what individual does not long for a life of serenity in which there is no conflict, discouragement, anxiety and worry in his experience?—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

2. A great deal of shallow talk has been broadcast about peace. In the shadow of an atomic age which threatens the extinction of life itself, many extravagant statements have been made by politicians and news broadcasters.

It has become commonplace to declare: "The most desirable thing in the world is peace." Such a reckless exaggeration needs to be countered by an equally extravagant overstatement: "The most undesirable thing in the world is peace."

Everything depends upon those with whom you would make peace and upon what terms.

The most undesirable thing in the world is peace with the devil. It is a wild dream for man to imagine that he can make peace with the devil upon anything less than the devil's terms. This is the will-o-the-wisp which the devil uses to lure man to his destruction.—The Standard Commentary.

3. The most desirable thing in the world is peace with God. But this peace often brings the Christian into fierce conflict with evil men. The apostle, Paul, desired peace with all men but the Christ haters answered with persecution.

4. Resist not evil. Some do this to their own injury. They become retaliative, vindictive and embittered. Even some of God's children allow a "root of bitterness" to rankle in their hearts.

A minister visited an old man as he lay on his deathbed. The old man was friendless. He was a sullen and gloomy man. If anyone spoke to him on the street, he would grunt sulkily and pass on. He spoke to nobody. Here's the story back of his sad life: When he was a young man, somebody did him a great wrong. Said he then, "I'll remember the evil that one has done to me to my dying day." When that day came, his past miserable life seemed to unfold before his glazing eyes. Said he remorsefully to the minister, "The rankling memory of the evil done me in my youthful years has soured and darkened by whole life. I've gone over it every morning. I've thought of it every night. I've cursed the one who wronged me thousands of times. I see now that my curses have eaten out my soul. My hate has hurt nobody but me. God knows it has turned my life into hell!"—Selected.

5. All our quarterlies have splendid comments on Verses 38 to 48 and we urge everyone to study them carefully. Verse 42, for example, must agree with Verse 9. We certainly could not loan a gun to a man who wanted to use it to shoot a neighbor, and it is not wrong to refuse to loan a man money to get intoxicated.

in our midst. During these ten months at our new location our attendance for church and Sunday school has doubled. Thirteen have been added to our church roll in 1960. Since the beginning of this year, there has been a spirit of revival existing in and among our people. Several have rededicated their lives to the Lord and there have been many first-time decisions for Christ. We have had two successful revivals during these ten months. The first was in September with the Reverend Johnnie Postlewaite of Wenatchee, Washington, and the second was in March of this year with the Reverend Roy Rikard and the Reverend Travis Huffman of Cramerton, North Carolina. The Lord blessed mightily in both of these meetings. I might add here that we will observe the second anniversary of our church on Sunday, May 15, 1960. It was on May 17, 1958, that we held our first service in Alaska.

Will We Win Them?

sage. No! we should go where they are with the Word of God. Do you have any sheaves to present to the Lord?

Our text also says that the person who wins souls will have Scriptural grounds for rejoicing. Being able to enjoy a good service in the church is a wonderful experience; being able to see the saints of God rejoice is another wonderful experience; but the greatest joy that can come to anyone is to be able to lead someone to Christ, realizing that the individual has passed out of darkness into light, lost but now found, was a child of the devil, but now a child of God. I pray that these few words will be able to motivate someone to do that which they know is the right thing—that of going after the lost. They are loved ones; they are next door; they are beside you on the job; they can be found almost anywhere.

Our Father, may we truly be soul winners. Help us to win those that are around us, and then Lord help us to reach out to others who need Thy Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. In His name. Amen.

Forty Fruitful Years

Kette Raper is president of our own Mount Olive College. John Linton is working with the employment commission. Ralph Pate is a merchant. Bruce Hawkins is a dentist. Frank Hawkins is teaching. I am sure that you realize it would be impossible to name each person who has passed through our home. These are just a few that came to my mind as I write this. There are many more, who consider themselves as products of the Children's Home that are making a worthy contribution to society. We can truthfully say this has been "Forty Fruitful Years."

May for many years has been designated as Children's Home month. During May of this year, we are planning a campaign to raise enough money for our operating expenses and enough to pay for the much needed remodeling of our kitchen. We are sending anniversary coin folders, which will hold forty dimes, to every church.

We believe that each church has forty members that will solioit or will give forty dimes for "Forty Fruitful Years" of service. We urge you to put forth a special effort to raise as much as possible for your May anniversary offering.

I challenge you to be one of those loyal Free Will Baptists who will give an anniversary gift of at least forty dimes.

Remember Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Greenville, N. C.—The Whaley Circle of the Woman's Auxiliary of Gum Swamp Church held its monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon, April 13, at the home of Mrs. R. S. Pollard, with twelve members and four visitors present.

The program chairman, Mrs. Henry Ayers, read Luke's account of the Easter story while Mrs. Nannie Dunn played softly on the piano. Following the singing of "Christ Arose," the group offered a chain of prayers. Mrs. R. B. Crawford of the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church was the guest speaker. She read 1 Corinthians 15:12-26 and brought the Easter message in a very inspiring and impressive manner.

Due to the absence of the chairman, Mrs. A. L. Morris, and the vice-chairman, Mrs. R. F. Clark, the business session was presided over by the program chairman. The program chairman also dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Pollard during the fellowship period which followed the meeting. Mrs. Crawford showed slides of scenes in Alaska pertaining to the work of our missionaries there, for whom the circle is named (the Whaleys).

Convention Notes

This has been a month of ladies' conventions and we had the privilege of attending most of these. Each speaker challenged our women to attempt greater things for God in their various fields of auxiliary work. The need for greater support for the work of home and foreign missions was stressed. The challenge to do even more for the children at our Children's Home was given. Nor should we forget our aged ministers.

One need not ask for more work to be done among our youth because each woman present realized anew the great privilege she has of working with them as she listened to the excellent declamations which were given by the youth of the various districts. They were wonderful.

May we, as women, attempt even greater things in the various fields of work for the Lord who gave His all that we might have eternal life by accepting the salvation which He so freely has provided.

The Lord has added the Reverend Mrs. Robert F. Breeden and their son, Wade Franklin, to our mission. Brother Breeden is an ordained Free Will Baptist minister and a captain in the U. S. Army Signal Corps. He will be stationed at Ft. Richardson, near here, and they will be here for three years. Mrs. Breeden is former Miss Zalene Lloyd, who served one of our Free Will Baptist missionaries in India for almost five years (1948-53). The coming to Anchorage is just another answer to prayer.

The First Free Will Baptist Church in Anchorage is just one project under the direction of the Alaska Free Will Baptist Missions. We also have a fifteen-minute weekly broadcast over a local radio station. This broadcast reaches out into many of the villages and isolated places that we could never go in person. We also have a fifteen-minute weekly broadcast over WFTC in Kinston, North Carolina, called "The Alaska Report." This serves in giving people in that area a first-hand report on our work here. We are laying plans to open a work in another town or city in late summer or early fall of 1960. We need your prayers and financial support to reach these objectives for Christ.

May God bless you richly as we labor together for missions in Alaska. Remember the work the centuries might have done must crowd the hour of setting sun. Looking forward to seeing you at the National Association meeting in July, we remain,

Yours for a harvest of souls in Alaska

SIN IS THE BLOODHOUND OF HELL

It tracts down every sinner, and it doth the sains. There is no place, here or hereafter, where one can successfully hide from sin, except as he finds refuge in Christ. "Be sure your sin will find you out" (Numbers 32:23). "Our sins testify against us" (Isaiah 59:12). "Our iniquities testify against us" (Jeremiah 14:7).—Selected.

MOTHER

The noblest thoughts my soul can claim,
The holiest words my tongue can frame,
Unworthy are to praise the name
More sacred than all other.

And infant, when her love first came—
A man, I find it just the same;
Reverently I breathe her name,
The blessed name of Mother.

NOT JUST A JOB

C. H. Overman

"It has been my sincere desire to give to my Lord and denomination, the very best I have in service through whatever doors He might open for me." These words were written and published in the December 18, 1957, issue of The Free Will Baptist upon my assuming the position as assistant editor. The decision to resign a growing church, which we had come to love, was not easy. Once it was made, things truly worked out for good as promised in Romans 8:28. Since beginning the work here, assurance as to God's leadership has been definite.

It is not just a job. It is an opportunity which is unique and challenging. It has been so from the very beginning. To begin with, the field of journalism, especially in the realm of Christian writing, is of vast importance today. The printed page is of great significance; therefore, the work here is not just something that happened by chance. Indeed it was different than anything which had presented itself before. It is a ministry within itself which embraces Christ's commission to go and teach.

After working in this capacity for more than two and one-half years, we are more convinced than ever that this is the Lord's work. He is in it. Should it fail, He will not be to blame, but it will be because we have failed as a people. It has its shortcomings and failures, as any institution where finite human instruments are responsible. God, however, has blessed in spite of these shortcomings. How thankful we are that His infinite grace does not require weak men to reach a position of perfectness before He can use them. He blesses His purposes through yielded human instrumentalities in spite of weaknesses and failures. Adolph Bedsole wrote in the foreword to The Pastor in Profile, "Even with all their mistakes and blunders, God's ministers remain the most noble group of men in human society today." The minister, as well as the layman, must claim the promise of 1 John 1:9; for He will forgive those who confess their sins.

One Christian's task may differ with that of another's, as surely they do, but each has his place in the Kingdom work. Things are seldom perfect for anyone, but we work toward betterment and improvement. Therefore, we have no right to speak destructively of another's position and rank in life.

Suffice us to say that we are proud to be a part of the Free Will Baptist Press. Let it be understood that we personally believe in its editorial policies and purposes. We will stand by them as long as they remain sane and sound. We shall not allow petty whims and biased opinions to hinder our Christian duty here. The opportunities in writing are too great to allow this to happen. For instance, in writing one Sunday school lesson, we may reach as many as 12,000 persons per Sunday. In writing one editorial, we may reach several other thousands. This is to say nothing of the other duties and responsibilities which enable us to be of service to our people.

For these reasons, we shall endeavor to be faithful in all things, both to God and our fellow man. It is not just a job. It is an opportunity which God has given.

Let's Worship Together

Next Sunday is Mother's Day. The significance of this special day in the year has grown with the American people. Many families are able to be together on this day, and it seems that family love is being expressed in a special way.

What would be more appropriate on Mother's Day than having the family all together in the church worship service? Your pastor would appreciate your efforts, and it would mean a lot to him to see your family sitting together. Let's not just stop at making it Mother's Day. Let's make it family worship day, with special honor going to Mother.

Tributes to Mothers

There are many tributes to Mother which emphasize her important role. May we note:

Napoleon declared that the future destiny of a child is always the work of the mother. He also said that if France could have good mothers she would have good sons.

John Quincy Adams said all that he was his mother made him. Abraham Lincoln said all that he was or hoped to be he owed to his angel mother.

A Spanish proverb states that an ounce of Mother is worth a pound of clergy.

Henry Ward Beecher said the mother's heart is the child's schoolroom.

Washington Irving declared that though everyone else in the world turned his back on an individual, a mother loved on, remembering only those qualities which give her joy when her child is small.

Dickens said, "I think it must somewhere be written, that the virtues of mothers shall be visited on their children, as well as the sins of the father."

De Witt Talmage said, "The dignity, the grandeur, the tenderness, the everlasting and divine significance of motherhood."

Do You Care?

by Ronnie Peele, LaGrange, North Carolina

AS Free Will Baptists, we accept the Word of God as our rule of faith and practice. We agree, according to our Church Covenant, ". . . to labor for the promotion of educational and denominational enterprises, the support of missions, the success of Sunday schools, and evangelistic efforts for the salvation of the world."

The purpose of this article is to help us realize how we have failed our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in the work that He did and we would do in John 14:12: ". . . He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father." I would like to challenge every reader to examine himself, to see if he is faithfully doing as Christ commissioned him.

As followers of Christ, we are to be soul winners. We are to lead sinners to Christ. Jesus went out into the highways and hedges and compelled men to follow Him. As a result of His journeys, many believed. As followers of Christ, we are to go out into our communities and compel the people to come to Christ. If the ministers were earnest in their pastoral work, and if they had the compassion for lost souls as Christ had, the churches would constantly be growing and souls added to God's Kingdom.

Now where is the hold back? Why are we not having heart-searching, soul-winning revivals in our churches today, as during Billy Sunday and Jonathan Edwards' days? We are serving the same Christ they served, and we are preaching the same message they preached; but the Spirit is not here to have His way now, as then. Why? Do we not know all the reasons, but we can consider some.

Have you noticed how politics is beginning to creep into our conferences, associations and union meetings? Have you noticed any certain group of men in your conference or association who want to have the say-so of everything that happens? Have you noticed how much power they try to get so they can have their way about things? Have you noticed their intentions of only supporting certain Free Will Baptist enterprises and neglecting the others? These are some questions for you to think and pray about.

Our conferences and union meetings should hang their heads in shame because of the way they have pushed the Free Will Baptist Bible College out of their meetings. The churches should be ashamed for the way they have cut the Free Will Baptist Bible College out of their budgets. How can we expect to have trained missionaries on the foreign field, if we neglect to help provide the training they need? How can our denomination expect to have well-trained ministers, if they neglect to support the institution that can give them that training? There is one interesting thing to note: that is, the churches look to the Free Will Baptist Bible College for pastors; but when the Bible College looks to the churches for their support, the churches seem to neglect its plea.

The Bible College offers only one major, and that is the Bible. The Bible is the main textbook that every student uses.

Do you think God is pleased with the slow progress we are making in getting missionaries out on the field? The reason why we do not have hundreds of missionaries on the fields is because we will not send them. We are stingy with our money when it comes to giving it back to God.

When you receive your payroll each week and when your church prepares its budget again, you remember that God is holding us responsible for everything we do and how we do it.

Do you want to be as Pilate and wash your hands throughout eternity because of indifference? Christ has left His work in our hands. Please do not fail your Saviour, your denomination or your church. Allow Him to use you as His instrument in praying, giving of your money or giving of yourselves and your children.

Are we going to live true to the Covenant of Free Will Baptists in the support of all denominational enterprises?

The Obituary of Elder R. Gaskins

Elder R. Gaskins departed this life January 8, 1893. He was born in Craven County, North Carolina, August 24, 1824, and united with the Free Will Baptist church at Kitt Swamp, Craven County, in 1846, and was baptized by Elder Thos. Moore. He remained a useful and consistent member until October 9, 1858; he then being impressed to proclaim the gospel to sinful and dying men, and point them to the lamb of God. He was ordained to the ministry in which sphere of life he stood as a bold watchman on the walls of Zion, and proclaimed aloud the warning to his fellow man to flee the wrath to come. He was ever zealous to his profession; he never failed to declare the whole council of God. The good brother, after a tedious affliction, quietly passed over the river.

His funeral was preached by Elder J. Bennett. He has laid aside this earthly robe; he has taken his peaceful abode in that promised land, to await the resurrection morn, when mortal shall put on immortality, and soar away to meet Jesus (our Redeemer) in the air, and sing the song of Moses and the Lamb, and forever be with our Lord in glory. Farewell from earth, dear brother, you have fought the good fight, and victory is thine. Alas, may we all meet thee in that heavenly land and strike hands in endless praise to Jesus' name for our redemption there.

Sleep on, dear brother, sleep until the resurrection morn, then thou shall rise with psalms of victory to the skies, and sing praise to the Lamb that bore the Cross for poor fallen man; there we will view His head, feet and hands, that sacrifice for fallen man.

The Old Armchair

by Eliza Cook

I love it, I love it! and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old armchair?
I've treasured it long as a sainted prize,
I've bedewed it with tears, I've embalmed it with sighs,

'Tis bound by a thousand bands to my heart;
Not a tie will break, not a link will start.
Would you know the spell—a mother sat there!
And a sacred thing is that old armchair.

In childhood's hour I lingered near
The hallowed seat with listening ear;
And gentle words that Mother would give
To fit me to die and teach me to live.
She told me that shame would never betide,
With truth for my creed, and God for my guide;
She taught me to lisp my earliest prayer,
As I knelt beside that old armchair.

I sat and watched her many a day.
When her eyes grew dim, and her locks were gray;
And almost worshiped her when she smiled,
And turned from her Bible to bless her child.
Years rolled on, but the last one sped,—
My idol was shattered, my earth-star fled!
I learned how much the heart can bear.
When I saw her die in her old armchair.

'Tis past, 'tis past! but I gaze on it now,
With quivering breath and throbbing brow;
'Twas there she nursed me, 'Twas there she died,
And memory flows with a lava tide.
Say it is folly, and deem me weak,
Whilst scalding drops start down my cheek;
But I love it, I love it, and cannot tear
My soul from a mother's old armchair.

This Is the First

Resurrection

by Rev. N. P. Gates, Detroit, Michigan

"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, . . ." (Revclation 20:6).

HERE it not for the spiritual significance of the topic used for the theme of this subject, I believe that the proclamation of the gospel would be fruitless; thus rendering the purpose of the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord meaningless. That we may know, and appreciate the full value of the subject matter, we must first consider what the first resurrection really is. Is not the essence of that it is efficacious to our salvation, or is it not a spectacular time, a notable day which we are to look for its coming?

Briefly, I think the believer has the answer and the experience thereof. Lest some would make definite conclusions otherwise, let us consider what occasioned the above caption, "This Is the First Resurrection," when our Lord came forth from the tomb:

"And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent; And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many" (Matthew 27:51-53). "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection" (Revclation 20:5).

Could it not be that the saints referred to are the martyrs of old, but the wicked dead were not resurrected, and will not be, until the time of retribution? The duration of time mentioned is not so important. . . . one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Peter 3:8). What we believe and do concerns the Lord's Day, and most especially the day of His resurrection which we commemorate each year, certainly is of greatest importance to the salvation of the souls of mankind.

I believe it is a foregone conclusion, that all people in faith of Christ, though faint it may be, accept the teachings concerning the resurrection of our Lord. Do we, however, really believe it in a practical way, or is it just taken for granted? The first resurrection means everything to us all, for, if there were not the first, certainly there could not be the second; and, the sad plight of it all is that we would be still in our sins. "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. . . . But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (1 Corinthians 15:17-23). (To continue in this sequence, you will observe that the end of earthly habitation has come, and the Lord Jesus Christ has delivered the Kingdom to the Father.)

Martha could not understand that Lazarus would rise immediately when the Lord said, "Thy brother shall rise again." "Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day. Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John II: 23-25).

To be sure, portions of the above Scripture deal with the resurrection of the body. Even as it was when the martyrs of old were in the resurrection, even we ourselves have part in the first resurrection in that we are born again. This, of course, is spiritual resurrection. ". . . for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life" (2 Corinthians 3:6).

"And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins, . . . Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus" (Ephesians 2:1, 5, 6). "And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places" (Ephesians I:19, 20).

That there are two resurrections taught in the Word of God, we believe there can be no question—one, which must be first, or there could be no hope in the second: First, from sin to a newness of life in Christ (Romans 6:4); second, from mortality to immortality (I Corinthians 15:53). There is nothing said about a third resurrection, notwithstanding, we believe that every truly born-again believer is living a new, resurrected life. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Galatians 2:20). "And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power: In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ: Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses; Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross" (Colossians 2:10-14).

Of course baptism is not the theme of our subject, but it certainly has its place in such transformation "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, . . ." (1 Corinthians 12:13). We are baptized in water to represent the burial and resurrection. Burial, of course, applies to those who have died, after the resurrection. Dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. "Know ye not, that many of us were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For

I Love You, Mother!

by Thelma Allinder

"I love you, Mother!" This is ever fraught
 With timeless, universal eloquence.
 The distant echelons of stars have caught
 The echo of a child's sweet confidence.
 The Lord, His holy angels, too, have heard
 It lisped, while Mother found full recompense

For daily care, within each precious word!

Ev'ry joy or trial
 Falleth from above,
 Traced upon our dial
 By the sun of love.
 We may trust Him fully
 All for us to do,
 They who trust Him wholly
 Find Him wholly true.

"A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband: . . ." (Proverbs 12:4).

"Be not wise in thine own eyes: . . ." (Proverbs 3:7)

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Will the sinners that are not saved and living on the earth when the church is raptured know of the event when it takes place?—J. R., Michigan.

Answer: There is no Scripture of which I know to indicate that the unsaved will know what has taken place when Christ comes to meet His church in the air. It is a sure thing that those who have close friends and relatives will miss them. To many of the unsaved the translation will no doubt be a great wonder. But remember that at this time the antichrist will be revealed and that his strange behavior is to so occupy the thinking of those left behind that there will probably be little time to consider the sudden disappearing of loved ones that have acted so strangely as will the comparatively few Christians seem to act in the overwhelming and increasing ungodliness that is to be rampant in the minds and behavior of all the unsaved world. "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober" (1 Thessalonians 5:1-6). The warning here is to the saved lest they enter a spell in spiritual lethargy or unawareness regarding prophecies that are being fulfilled in their midst day by day until the event catches them in unawareness as it will do the whole unsaved world of men. Many Christian people have paid but little attention to the changed policies of America, England and other so-called Christian nations toward ungodly nations and their ruthless, unethical tactics in dealing with Christians. We mildly protested Russia's ruthless massacre of the Hungarians and said a few things in a mild protest but rewarded the ungodly nation whose national symbol is the bear by inviting her blood thirsty, power seeking, at any price, premier, Khrushchev, to visit us and sightsee in some of the most important parts of our land. We showed in this whether or not we are asleep. Then what of the cry of the church council to give Red China a seat in the United Nations when she has scarcely had her hands dry from the shedding of the blood of some innocent nation long enough to attend a session since she has assumed the leadership of China's mainland. What would an outlaw nation need to do in order for us to brand her an outlaw if Russia was not thus branded in her treatment of Hungary and Red China in her treatment of Tibet, and, more recent, treatment of India when she invaded her borders fifty miles or so? It would seem that America is asleep as others are.

Let us not forget, however, the remnant of martyrs that shall be saved during the great tribulation in response to the message of the 144,000 Jews taken from the twelve tribes of Israel and sealed at the beginning of the tribulation period to preach during that terrible time when bandits reign and outlaws under antichrist have a free hand. (See Revelation 14:1-4; 7:4-11.) "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be" (Matthew 24:36-39). In the days of Noah, just before the flood, all were having a gay time; so that in their unusual merriment in eating and drinking, they were caught in the flood before they gave serious thought. So in Christ's coming marriage, eating and drinking will occupy them until judgment overtakes them all, this being probably a while after the rapture. Perhaps the consternation will arouse the orthodox Jews three and one-half years following the rapture and the apostate unraptured church at a later date possibly seven years or a little less. Only the born again church members and not all professing Christians will be raptured and that before the tribulation begins.

Question: Is it possible for a murderer to be saved?—Joseph Argile, Memphis, Tennessee.

Answer: No! Not as a murderer. "Whoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him" (1 John 3:15). The murderer that repents and confesses his sins is a Christian and no longer a murderer. "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isaiah 1:18).

The thief on the cross was a murderer but repented and became companion to Jesus in paradise the day he repented. "And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise" (Luke 23:43). We must not in any way minimize the fact that murder is a terrible sin, but so is that of theft or adultery, but God has forgiven people for such terrible sins. Again we must not put a distinction between one kind of sin and another except as we may find such in God's Word. David was both a murderer and an adulterer, yet Christ spoke of him as being a saved person. Remember, "All ye like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isaiah 53:6); "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). You and I are covered in the whether or not we are in any of the above mentioned sins; therefore, we must have the same mercy and grace shown or else there is no hope for us. We are saved by faith in Christ and washed in His precious blood. And that is just how each and every other sinner will be saved regardless to his or anyone else's opinion of himself and his own goodness.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

My word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

THE FAMILY AND THE BIBLE

"Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that ye may be as frontlets between your eyes. And ye shall teach them your children, talking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest. And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates: That your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth" (Deuteronomy 11:18-21).

If anyone has any doubts concerning the importance of the Bible regarding the conduct of the family life, I believe that the above verses will, if considered honestly and reverently, remove those doubts. The family is one of the greatest institutions on earth. It was instituted by God for our happiness and for His glory; and, when the family fails in either of these purposes, it is short of the divine aim.

It is my conviction that many families are failing to measure up to their great privileges, principally, because of a lack of building their future upon the teaching of God's Word. The other day I read the following very good short article which I believe is worthy of our thought:

"America needs to take down the old family Bible, and, with father as the prophet and mother as the prophetess, gather the children around its pages for a feast of truth and a hearing of the voice of God. Every home in America needs a voice from heaven—it is to be found in the family Bible.

"Every home in America needs light from heaven—it is to be found in the family Bible.

"Every home in America needs bread from heaven—it is to be found in the family Bible.

"Every home in America needs the Christ from heaven—He, too, is found in the family Bible."—Selected.

"And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD. And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods" (Joshua 24:15, 16).

"I love the LORD, because he hath heard my voice and my supplications. Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him as long as I live" (Psalm 116:1, 2).

Prayer for Mother

"Dear Father, keep my mother in
The stillness of the night,
And let her sleep refreshingly
Until the morning light.

"God bless her as she goes about
Her loving, working day,
Just doing things for all of us
In her own precious way.

"Please make her happy, as she makes Us time and time again,
And bless her always, please, dear God,
For Jcsus' sake, Amen."

ROCK ME TO SLEEP

by Elizabeth Akers Allen

Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,
Make me a child again just for tonight!
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your heart, as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair;
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep,
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!
I am so weary of toil and of tears—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain—
Take them and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay—
Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away;
Weary of sowing for others to reap;
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue,
Mother, O Mother, my heart calls for you!
Many a summer the grass has grown green
Blossomed and faded, our faces between;
Yet, with strong yearning and passionate pain,
Long I tonight for your presence again.
Come from the silence so long and so deep;
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Mr. William E. Warren

On November 6, 1959, God called William Edgar Warren, Greenville, North Carolina, to his eternal reward. Mr. Warren was born December 13, 1880. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nina Warren; two daughters, Mr. R. S. Pollard and Mrs. Paul Hunsucker; three sons, Willie, John and Norman Warren; eleven grandchildren; and two half brothers, Edgar and Jack Warren.

Brother Warren was a Christian for 56 years. He was a deacon in the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church for 36 years. He was a loving and faithful husband, father and friend. He was patient in his sufferings. He loved the Word and the work of the Lord, and He enjoyed talking of God's great goodness and mercy. He shall long be remembered and missed by those who knew and loved him.

Written by his pastor,
Robert B. Crawford

Over my heart in the days that are flown
No love like mother-love ever has shone;
No other worship abides and endures—
Faithful, unselfish and patient like yours,
None like a mother can charm away pain,
From the sick soul and the world-weary brain.
Slumber's soft calm o'er my heavy lids creep;
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

Come, let your brown hair, just lighted with gold,
Fall on your shoulders again, as of old;
Let it drop over my forehead tonight,
Shading my faint eyes away from the light;
For with its sunny-edged shadows once more
Haply will throng the sweet visions of yore;
Lovingly, softly, its bright billows sweep—
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep!

Mother, dear Mother, the years have been long Since I last listened to your lullaby song.
Sing, then, and unto my soul it shall seem Womanhood's years have been only a dream.
Clasped to your breast in a loving embrace,
With your light lashes just sweeping my face,
Never hereafter to wake or to weep—
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

Lillie Dale

Whereas, our loving heavenly Father, His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from this earth our sister, Lillie Dale, a member of Piney Grove Church, Iredell County, North Carolina, be it resolved:

First that we humbly submit to the will of our heavenly Father;

Second, that we extend our deepest sympathy to her family and trust they will turn to God and the church for consolation; and

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be recorded in our church records, a copy be sent to her family and a copy be sent to "The Free Will Baptist" for publication.

FOR YEARS I HAVE GONE STRAIGHT

"I have had a very unsavory past," admitted a woman to the authorities in San Francisco, "but for years I have gone straight." With tears in her eyes, she commented, "How can people get away from their yesterdays if others shove their past into their todays? I've tried to let the dead past bury the dead. But the state of California wants to make my past my present." How differently does God deal with those who penitently seek His mercy and forgiveness: "For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more"—Selected.

ETERNAL SECURITY

A few years ago, the moderator of our 10th Eastern Union Meeting (out West would say quarterly meeting) invited a visiting preacher of another denomination to preach at the union. This preacher was like a lot of preachers—he preached more of self than of Christ, more of what he thought than what God says. Aside from explaining the Scripture, this minister told of his success in evangelistic activities and how that in the early thirties he went bankrupt. He told of how he went into the streets of the world and actually engaged in drunkenness, gambling and even committed adultery; but he said that all the time he was living in sin, he was saved.

Plainly this eternal securitist repeatedly stated that he was never lost even though he was engaged in all of these sins that God forbids under the penalty of death. “. . . the wages of sin is death; . . .” (Romans 6:23). Jude says, “. . . twice dead, plucked up by the roots” (Vs. 12). Before we are born again (born of the water and of the Spirit), we are dead. Every born-again child of God admits the new birth and the new life. Paul says in Ephesians 2:1, “And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins.” A born-again person is alive—living in fellowship with Christ. As long as he is faithful, he is secure. We often say as long as you believe it and live it you are going right. No man can be lost living in Christ, believing in Christ, and working in Christ.

I cannot believe that the preacher referred to above was saved, even though he said, “I was saved all the time that I was living in sin.” I believe that if he had died while on a drunk that he would have been eternally lost. Why? Because Paul says, recorded in Galatians 5:21, “Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.” What will he inherit? There are only two kingdoms—one of God and one of Satan. If we are not in the kingdom of God, we are in the kingdom of Satan. If that preacher spoken of had died while committing adultery, according to the Word of God, I do not see how he could have gone to heaven and sit down with the clean, holy and righteous saints; especially since we are told that nothing unclean can enter therein.

One strong doctrine set forth by the eternal securitist is John 10:29, which says, “My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father’s hand.” I agree that no man can take a man away from God, for God is able to keep that which is committed unto Him.

I am married to my wife by the laws of God and the laws of the state of North Carolina. I dare any man to take her away from me by either law; but, if my wife falls in love with another man and walks off with him, I cannot help it. He did not take her away by law or might; she walked off of her own accord. She left her first love and took up with another. It was her own will. She also married me with her own free will and accord. When God saves us, He does not take away from us our will power. It is by our own free will that we are to worship God.

THE DANGER OF FALLING

The writer of Hebrews says, “For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame” (Hebrews 6:4-6). Notice that the writer says fall away. This looks to me like there is danger of falling away. However, it is said by some, “Once in grace, always in grace.”

A fellow servant of the Lord and a friend of mine said to me, “Do you believe the doctrine of once in grace, always in grace?” I said to him, “Yes.” He said, “Explain it then.” I said, “If you are not in saving grace, you are in disgrace.” When a person disgraces or brings shame on the name of Jesus Christ, that is a disgrace to his one-time confession. Let us examine another Scripture. Paul wrote, “Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage” (Galatians 5:1). Paul also said, “Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace” (Galatians 5:4). So Paul warns of the danger of falling from grace.

Again Paul writes, “For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses’ law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God” (Hebrews 10:26-31).

Peter writes, “Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall” (2 Peter 1:4-10).

Notice that Peter said, “If ye do these things, ye shall never fall.” This implies that if we fail to do these things, there is a danger of falling. I cannot see how anyone, who has really been born again and fully tasted the blessing of salvation, could have any desire to go back under the bondage of sin and death. We really want to go on to perfection. There is too much satisfaction in fellowship with Christ to want to return to sinful things. There is too much pleasure in going to church and worshipping our Lord to desire the fellowship of darkness.

In concluding I would like to give the following illustration. A young man who was baptized one week prior began to curse and use ugly language. When asked about his salvation, he said, “The preacher said I was saved.” He made the mistake of thinking that he was saved eternally regardless of how he lived.

“Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days” (Ecclesiastes 11:1).

“The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want” (Psalm 23:1).

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

A Gift for Grandmother

by Olivia Murray Nicholls

BY stretching herself tall on her tiptoes, Alice slid the Mother's Day package to the back of her closet shelf, hiding even the fluffy red bow. Surely it would be safe there until in the morning, she thought.

Well-pleased with her trip to the shopping center, she tossed her purse on the bed and headed toward the kitchen to see what was cooking for supper. Down the hall, Grandmother's door was open. Alice stopped. Grandmother! She had not bought a gift for Grandmother—and tomorrow was Mother's Day. She ran quickly back to her room and grabbed her purse. Yes, there were some coins left inside. And Mother might let her go back to the shopping center before the store closed. But what could she buy?

Perhaps Mother would have an idea. Quickly but quietly she slipped down the hall to the kitchen. Her mother was setting the table.

"Here you are, Alice," she said. "Will you put the silver on for me?"

Alice opened a cabinet drawer and took our knives, forks and spoons. "Mother," she said, "I don't have a present for Grandmother for Mother's Day. What can I get?"

Mother thought as she folded paper napkins. "What about hankies or hose?" she suggested. "A lady never has too many of them."

"Grandmother docs," Alice sighed, remembering packages sent by her aunts at Christmas time.

She heard Daddy whistling in the yard and put her last spoon in place before running outside.

"Oh, Alice," smiled Daddy, "have you seen the new roses?"

Alice nodded, but her mind was not on roses.

"Daddy," she asked, "what can I give Grandmother for Mother's Day?"

"How about a box of candy?" Daddy said, smacking his lips.

Alice shook her head. "She isn't supposed to eat sweets, except maybe dessert at mealtime," she told him. "That's what she said when I offered her some of my Easter candy."

Daddy had no more suggestions, and Alice walked back to the house.

"I'll just have to ask Grandmother what she would like," she decided, and once again went into the hall.

"Knock-knock," she sang out at Grandmother's door.

"Who's there, as if I didn't know?" laughed Grandmother. "Come in here, Alice-girl."

Alice loved her grandmother's room. The bedspread was bright with pink flowers, and the thin white curtains let in the light from outside. Pots of ivy sat on the windowsill, a big Bible lay open on the corner of the dresser, and pictures of Alice, her mother, daddy and all her aunts were scattered over the wall.

Grandmother sat in a wheelchair in the center of the room, her sewing spread across her lap, smiling cheerfully. Alice pulled a footstool up beside the wheelchair and sat on it.

"Grandmother," she said, "I have a problem."

"Problem?" Grandmother asked, her smile fading. "Is it one I can help you with?"

"Yes," Alice told her, "you can. You can tell me what you would like for Mother's Day."

Grandmother's eyes brightened and she laughed out loud. "Is that a problem, dear?" she asked. "Well, forget all about it. You don't have to give me a thing for Mother's Day."

"Oh, but I want to," Alice explained quickly. "You see, I already have something for Mother, and I don't want to leave you out."

Grandmother reached down to pat Alice's cheek. Her hands were soft and small, with blue veins like cobwebs tracing over the tops. With her own strong hand Alice pressed Grandmother's closer to her face, lovingly.

"I'm never left out," Grandmother told her, "as long as I have a granddaughter as thoughtful as you." Her face became serious again. "I have you, Alice, and your mother and daddy. That is all a grandmother really wants."

She picked up her sewing again. "Oh dear," she said, "my needle is out of thread."

"Let me thread it," offered Alice, and found a spool of thread in the bright sewing box on the table at Grandma's elbow.

"Thank you, dear," said Grandmother. "These old eyes of mine have the hard time seeing a needle's eye!"

Alice snipped off a long piece of thread and in a twinkling had the needle ready to stitch again.

"I wonder if your mother needs any help with supper?" Grandmother suggested.

Alice hopped up. "I'll go and ask her," she said. "But you know, Grandmother, you have not helped me at all with problem."

"My advice about problems," said Grandmother, "is to forget them. They usually work out. You keep your allowance to buy something you want. It makes me happy just to see you happy."

Alice bent to kiss her cheek and skipped out of the room. Now what was she to do? she wondered. Here was Grandmother, who never leaves her wheelchair, who could not have very much fun always staying at home, doing nothing but sewing. Letting down hems in Alice's dresses, sewing buttons for Alice's mother, embroidering when she finished the "chore" sewing, and still she did not want anything but a needle threaded. It did make a problem!

And then the idea came to Alice. She had a good idea that she wondered why it had not taken so long to think of it. She dashed into the kitchen. "Mother," she said, "may I go back to the shopping center? I finally have an idea for Grandmother's present."

"Yes," said Mother, "if you won't be long. Supper is almost ready."

"I won't be long," Alice promised. "It is such a little present."

Alice was up early the next morning and had the table set before her mother started cooking breakfast. At Mother's place she put the big box tied with the fluffy red bow from the gift shop. At Grandmother's place she put a smaller box, covered with white tissue paper and tied with her own yellow hair ribbon. It was not as pretty as Mother's but Alice did not think Grandmother would mind.

And she did not mind at all! In fact she was so surprised to find the package when Daddy wheeled her in for breakfast that she clapped her hands like a little girl. "For me?" she asked, her eyes twinkling. "But Alice, dear, I told you not to spend your money on me."

Alice laughed. "I didn't spend my money on me."

King and Queen Crowned at Youth Rally

A State Youth Rally was held at Wilson, North Carolina, March 5, 1960, and proved to be a tremendous success. Approximately 100 young people from all sections of the State were present and were challenged by a missionary emphasis program.

By means of the program, those present took a tour of our Free Will Baptist mission stations. All participants on the program were young people under the direction of their district youth sponsor. The program climaxed by a banquet at which the King and Queen were crowned. They were chosen by the Y. P. A. or G. T. A. which received in the most money for the national project which was to buy a station wagon for missionaries to use while home on furlough. The Saratoga Y. P. A.'s candidates were crowned. Their Y. P. A. turned in $153 on the project. The next highest amount was $162 by the Wilson Y. P. A. The total amount from all groups was $60.25.

Two attendants for the King and Queen were chosen from the auxiliary with the largest percentage of their members present at the rally. This was the Grace Y. P. A.'s from Greenville, North Carolina, with 32 of their 33 members present. The other two attendants were the candidates from the auxiliary with the largest number of members present at the rally. This was Malabar's Chapel, Columbia, North Carolina, with ten visitors.

The banquet was closed by the showing of the film, "Contrary Winds." Seven young people responded to the invitation for full surrender to the service of Jesus.

The Y. P. A. of the Saratoga Free Will Baptist Church, is an active group consisting of eleven members. In addition to their various monthly activities that stimulate the young and challenge the woman's auxiliary, Faith White and Joe Boswell were crowned State King and Queen at the State youth banquet. Last year a member, Alice Saunders, was winner of the national page contest. The Y. P. A. is under the leadership of Mrs. Fred Pittman, and Rev. Fred Powers is the pastor.

At 11:00 p. m., the Rev. Floyd Hartley brought a very inspiring message on "Talents," using Matthew 25:14-24 as a Scripture reference.

At the noon hour, a pot luck lunch was served in the dining hall of the church, with nine auxiliaries represented.

We were happy to have as guests the Revs. Hartley, Moulton, Childers and Thompson.

At 1:00 p. m. we were called together again with singing and prayer. Devotions were conducted by Claudia Britton from Rescue Church, using as her theme, "Tell."

Sixteen members and nine visitors were present.

A visiting member from the local Y. P. A., Miss Margie Hinton, led a special prayer for missions and taught a study course lesson on missions. Following dismissal, a social hour of fellowship and an Easter egg hunt with soft drinks was directed by the hostesses, Mesdames Magdalene Issette, Cleo Patterson and Daisy Ferrell. Serving Christ In the Crossroad of the Pacific

P. O. Box 1201
Waipahu, Hawaii
April 6, 1960

Aloha from your missionaries in Hawaii:

During this season of the year our hearts are challenged anew by the words the angel spoke to the women on that first resurrection morning—"He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay and go quickly and tell . . . that he is risen from the dead: . . . and they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word" (Matthew 28: 6-8). As we daily look at these people about us with so many worshiping idols and gods which are dead we are thrilled with the message that we can give them; however, we too wonder, as did these women, ". . . Who shall roll us away the stone . . ." (Mark 16:3). There seem to be many stones that need to be rolled away that are hindering the message of the risen Christ. God sent an angel from heaven to roll away the stone for the women (Matthew 28:2), and perhaps you are the one God can and desires to use to help roll away some of the stones that today are hindering the message and the work of Free Will Baptists in the Hawaiian Islands.

Our newsletter was omitted last month and I shall not attempt to explain all the reasons why. The past weeks have been busy ones to say the least. I had hoped to have something to report about a temporary location and a building for our church, but it just didn't materialize. It is difficult for us to explain to you the acute land situation as it exists here—with ninety per cent of the land being controlled by about six large estates and the military and governmental agencies. I think that I have mentioned before that land is not sold by the acre here but by the square foot. I have written, called or visited numerous real estate agents and have run down advertisements galore, but so far we have nothing that we can report. Our need is made more acute because of the continued rapid growth of Hawaii (especially the Island of Oahu) since statehood. Daily available land is becoming more scarce; therefore, our desire and need to obtain property soon for Free Will Baptist missions becomes more demanding and urgent. I am convinced that if Free Will Baptists ever get established in these islands it is going to cost more than we have been willing to give thus far.

Only recently the Seventh Day Adventists announced plans to build a $6,000,000 (six million dollar) hospital on the Island of Oahu and it will be just one of the responsibilities of their Western Conference. When we see these various religious cults moving in with such force, it makes us realize our responsibility in this mission field to preach the true gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Since you heard from us last, we have seen three more of our young people accept the Lord as their personal Saviour. Our attendance is growing steadily and the interest is at its best. In January our average Sunday school attendance was 25, in February it was 30, and in March it averaged 35. We have also seen an increase in our morning and evening worship services, prayer services, and league. We enjoyed a short visit and a very interesting message by Rev. Travis Huffman from Gastonia, North Carolina, on Sunday, March 20. We also enjoyed a visit from Rev. Stewart McQuirter, a Nazarene minister friend from Cordova, Alabama.

Some of you have written and told us how much you appreciated meeting our people through a personal testimony each month. This month we would like for you to meet Mrs. Betty Wall. Betty is our church clerk and sponsor of our junior league and is very active in the music department. Betty and her husband, N. A., and their 10-month-old son have been a real blessing to us and a big help to the church. Mr. Wall is our song leader.

"My name is Betty Wall and I am from Portsmouth, Virginia. When I first came to Hawaii, I had my mind set on not liking it, but since then I have been reminded so many times that the Lord has a plan for every life. I am so thrilled to be a part of the Free Will Baptist work on this island. There are hundreds of thousands who need the gospel and I count it an honor to be an ambassador for the Lord Jesus. My husband is serving with the U. S. Army at Schofield Barracks and need I say both get very homesick at times. If we were not for Rev. and Mrs. Sanders, I suppose we would be homesick more times than we are. The Lord has been good to us and our church. It's been amazing to watch it grow from the ground up. It was wonderful to know when we got here that there would be a Free Will Baptist church to attend. The Lord was gracious to send the Sanders to pave the way. I'm so glad He did."

Continue to pray much for us and we would enjoy hearing from you.

HIS MASTER'S PASSION FOR SOULS

John Wesley was a small, tubercular man. He weighed only 120 pounds. Of Wesley Samuel Johnson said, "His conversation was good, but he is never at leisure. He always has to go at a certain hour. This is very disagreeable to a man who loves to fold his legs and have his talk out as I do." Wesley's legs were "unfolded" most of his 60 years. He had his Master's passion for souls. He virtually lived in the saddle, riding horseback far and near to tell others of his Saviour.

INTRODUCTION

As far as we know, Jesus never promised his disciples that they would find the way to heaven easy, popular and free from care. Instead, He laid the plain facts before those who dared to take up the cross and follow Him. They were to expect the worst that heaven could bring upon them in the way of persecution, slander, imprisonment and even death. But the greater their persecutions, the greater their reward of joy and happiness, for great is your reward in heaven. Even in the midst of their sorrow and suffering, the Lord assured them that they had a reward to rejoice and to be exceedingly happy for their reward would be great, both now and hereafter. For example, after certain of the apostles had been beaten for preaching the gospel in Jerusalem, ". . . they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name. And every day in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ" (Acts 5:41, 42).—Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

I. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The Christian's presence in the world insured its preservation until now (Matthew 5:13).
2. All the intellectual illumination given to the world is insufficient to lead one out of the darkness of sin (Vs. 14).
3. Intellectual illumination is bringing the world to the brink of self-destruction.
4. Even the good works of the Christian could not attract attention to him, but God who enabled him to do them (Vs. 16).

5. The Seed of the Word need only be as large as a mustard seed, if it is alive and genuine, to accomplish great results (13:31, 32).

6. We once saw a woman who weighed more than five hundred pounds, surely an abnormal size. When we realize that tens of millions of church members have never been born again, can we escape the conclusion that the church is abnormal in size also?

7. Abnormal, outward increase is almost certain to have some evil lodging in its branches (Vs. 32).

8. Hundreds of pastors would find themselves without a congregation if they would preach salvation through the shed blood of the Lord Jesus Christ.

9. Leaven works quietly but very persuasively, and so does also all false doctrine (Vs. 33).—The Bible Expositor.

10. Leaven, the dictionary tells us, is "anything which makes a general assimilating change in a mass or aggregate." There are many leavens in this world. What are some of them? The pupils will explain that there is the leaven of evil, constantly tempting men to do that which is wrong; the leaven of indifference, leading us to drift along without trying to improve society; the leaven of good citizenship, which limits itself to living this life; the leaven of Christianity, which influences for good this life and the life to come.—The Standard Commentary.

11. A vast number of people believe they will have a thousand years after death in which to repent. A church that has a membership of nearly a million members believes God gave Joe Smith a new Bible. Millions of modernists in many churches reject the doctrines of the virgin birth and the new birth. Surely the leaven of evil works fast.

12. The Lord reserves the interpretation of His Word to those who ask for it (Vv. 34, 36).

13. The Lord has made known to us many things that were not revealed in the Old Testament (Vs. 35).

14. The Author of the Scriptures is the One who can teach them with full authority (Vv. 34, 35).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The Christian must let the light of Christ shine unto all with whom he comes into contact, unto all that are in the house. He must make his faith and loyalty visible and show his dedication to Christ unto all his associates. By word and deed, he must reflect the righteousness of His Lord, for mere words are not enough; he must be a doer of the Word also. He must live his faith, not for vainglory and self-praise, but for the glory of the Father in heaven.—The Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

2. "Are they ministers of Christ? . . . I am more; in labours more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness" (2 Corinthians 11:23-27).

Paul did not find all men willing to accept the gospel any more than the Lord Jesus did. Those who claim the parable of the leaven teaches that all will be won to Christ must be wrong in their interpretation, or else Paul was wrong when he wrote 1 Timothy 3:1-13.

money, Grandmother. But I hope you like what I'm giving you."

They all watched Mother open her present. It was a vase, a fat yellow vase, and just what Mother had wanted for an ivy bowl.

"It's your turn now, Grandmother," Alice said. "Open your present."

Grandmother's fingers worked slowly untying the ribbon and Alice wiggled impatiently. Grandmother took the paper off the box and folded it neatly. Then she opened the box. "What have we here?" she asked. "A book of needles?"

"Open it," Alice told her. "Open the book."

Grandmother held the cardboard folder in both hands and opened it slowly. "Needles," she said, "Dozens of needles, and all of them threaded! What a lovely, lovely gift." Grandmother made a kiss across the table at Alice.

"There's a note too," Alice said. "Look in the bottom of the box."

Grandmother found the note and read it aloud. "'Happy Mother's Day to my Grandmother,'" she read. "'Every afternoon after school I will thread 25 needles for you, and then you can sew all the next day. Love, Alice.'"

"What a clever idea," exclaimed Daddy.

"And so useful," added Mother.

"Come here," Grandmother said to Alice, who scampered around the table. Grandmother hugged her tight. "I told you I did not want anything, because I have your daddy and your mother and you," she said. "And now with twenty-five needles of thread every day, I surely don't need another thing! Thank you, my dear, for such a thoughtful gift."

"Happy stitching!" said Daddy—Story Trails.

This Is the First Resurrection

if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection: Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin. Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him: Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him. For in that he died, he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:3-11).

Truly, this is the faith that produces salvation. We must not only believe in our Lord's death, but we must also believe in His resurrection (the firstfruits unto our salvation), for this is needful to establish us in Christ. Without it, none could be saved.

"But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach; That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Romans 10:8-10).

In the fifth chapter of John, the Lord Himself gives us this knowledge, so clearly spoken concerning these two resurrections. First in Verse 25, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is (anytime one will heed the voice of God), when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live."

In Verses 28, 29, it is quite a different story, in that it is not a preparation to a new life in Christ in this present world; but applies to all, both saint and sinner from a life of mortality to immortality. The apostle, Paul, says, ". . . we shall all be changed, In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality" (1 Corinthians 15:51-53).

Jesus says we should not be surprised at His statement, "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming (still to come), in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice (all shall hear, none will escape), And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (Vv. 28, 29).

There is much more concerning this subject, but we will conclude with this benediction: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Colossians 3:1-4).

Behind each lovely blossom is God's creative hand;
All of nature's beauties appear at His command.
Flowers, trees and grass—in all is God concealed.
In every form of nature, God's goodness is revealed.
We search for God, but still we're not aware
If we look close enough, we'll see His image there.

IS THE LORD BUILDING?

C. H. Overman

"Except the LORD build the house, they labour in vain that build it: . . ." (Psalm 127:1).

In a recent message, one of our ministers placed special emphasis upon the fact that God is interested in number or multitudes. He is interested in as great a number as possible turning to Him and following Him by faith. God's plan of redemption is all-inclusive to whosoever will.

If God is so interested in numbers, then have not we as Free Will Baptists failed to show the same interest? The remark was made some years ago that Free Will Baptists have not grown in number because God was perhaps preserving us as a small remnant who had remained true to His doctrines. When one thinks upon this statement, it becomes quite absurd. Our doctrine is sound, but does this fact excuse us from taking part in the evangelization of the world? Something is wrong, and can't we conclude that something has been wrong for a long time? Let us remember, also, that the wrong is not always in the other person. When we point one finger at another person, there are three fingers pointing back at us.

For some reason, we have failed to become united as a denomination, so the Lord could really use us. Our history bears out that each time we really begin to show some gain, we have internal trouble. In the editorial of August 19, 1959, we said: "Something is missing. Somewhere down the historical trail we have left something out. That something has resulted in the loss of many of our people to other denominations. Some of these losses have been with good reason, others for insignificant and petty reasons." We then proceeded to list some of the things which, from all evidence, seemed wrong with our denomination.

Perhaps we can now see the basic, underlying reason as to why we have constantly been tossed to and fro with troubles and failed to grow more in number. Could not the answer be found in the verse of Scripture given at the beginning of this editorial? Have we been letting the Lord do the building for us? Have we, as a people, allowed Him to lead us in matters of denominational enterprises as based upon our need? How is it that men who say they are following God's leadership, find so many points of disagreement? Is it not because someone is failing to let the Lord build the house?

It is sad indeed to realize that men will often seek to tear down that which the Lord has built. For instance, He has built for us a heritage to be proud of, and He has given us foreparents who were willing to pave the way for us. There are some, it seems, who do not value this heritage and the work of our foreparents. In essence, they have little or no ties to the old landmarks that should be serving as a guide, thus making the way a little better for us.

Just how would the Lord build the house? May we prayerfully considering the following which bear out very clearly some of the essential ways, or things involved, when the Lord builds the house.

1. Any house must be built upon a foundation. For Christian building there is only one foundation, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 3:11). This is the only foundation upon which we build. If our motives, plans, actions and deeds are not built upon this foundation, then we labor in vain. His is the foundation upon which Christian services are built. In building, we seek to meet His requirements in supplying the needs of our people. Our denominational enterprises are seeking to do this; yet, they are being buffeted from most every angle, and from those who should be building upon the foundation already laid.

2. God would have us build a house of unity. The old saying, "United we stand, divided we fall," becomes more real in these perilous times. We, as Free Will Baptists, must possess a united front. We must work together, or finally, division will again tear us asunder. If this does happen, can we say it was done in the name of the Lord? Can we say it was God's will? Can we say it was disorder and unrest over God's will? Is it ever right to destroy or to criticize anyone or anything good? Unity is essential, and Christians ought to be able to unite; for unification does not mean sacrificing principles. Someone has said, "Men's hearts ought to be set against one another, but set with one another, and against evil only."

3. God would have us build a house of love. When Christians truly love one another, they can work together and overcome their differences of opinion. In fact, love is the key to success in this earthly journey. If this were not so, then why would Jesus prescribe the new commandment of love for God and man? Many of our problems would solve themselves if we possessed Christian love.

There is a dire need today to work along with our denominational leaders, and not against them. We hear much today about the need for better understanding between the peoples of the world, but we can have this understanding only if we understand our own leadership. How unchristian it must seem to the outsider when he hears about our internal problems and knows there is turmoil within our camp. The Lord has built us a house, but have we let Him build as He has wished? If we have been negligent in trusting Him to build, then we shall be as those who build the tower of Babel; all will have been done in vain—to no avail.

Prodigal Parents Peopling the Earth with Prodigal Children

IN Luke 15:11, 12, 25, we have the account of the prodigal parent: "And he said, A certain man had two sons: And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that is mine. And he divided unto them his living. . . . Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard musick and dancing."

In Verses 13, 29, 30, we also have the account of the prodigal children: "And not many days after the younger son gathered together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance in riotous living. . . . And he answering said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment: and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends: But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy substance with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf."

I'm sure the father, after the consent of the mother, practiced parental indulgence, ". . . he divided unto them his living" (vs. 12). No doubt, the mother was the musician at the feast of reveling where there was music and dancing. The younger son wasted his substance with riotous living, and devoured his living with harlots. The elder son showed himself by being angry, grating and fussing at his father (Vv. 25-29).

In 1 Samuel 3:11-14, Eli showed himself to be a prodigal parent when he knew his son's iniquity ". . . the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them from it." His sons died a premature death, and when he received the news, he fell and broke his neck. "The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame. When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth: but the righteous shall prevent their fall. Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul. Where there is no vision, the people perish: but he that keeps the law, happy is he" (Proverbs 29:15-17).

Communism has become the burning issue of our time. We read such headlines as the following:

"Communism is conquering the world."

"Nine hundred million people are now being scientifically trained, brainwashed, and equipped to destroy western civilization."

J. P. Richards, former chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, warns: "America is waging a war to the death against the international Colossus of Communism. America has never before been in so much danger. We can be destroyed by this international monster if we do not wake up."

A writer in the Methodist Challenge declares: "In the days of the prophet, Isaiah, and Hezekiah, king of Judah, Sennacherib, King of Assyria, besieged Jerusalem and boasted he would capture the city, but he had overlooked an important detail—that the God of Jerusalem was the infinite, omnipotent, eternal God."

Sennacherib's threats failed to materialize, for in answer to the prayer of Isaiah and Hezekiah, God sent an angel from heaven and destroyed 185,000 of Sennacherib's army, and later, two of his own sons slew him.

Likewise, atheistic Communism has not considered God. None of the guided, ballistic missiles can touch Him. Nor have they any means of defense against Him, and we know the Lord is just as able to stop Communism today as he was to stop the Assyrians twenty-six hundred years ago. What we need is more prayer warriors like Isaiah and Hezekiah.

Prodigal parents are those who run from God by ignorance of Him, by ignoring Him, by neglecting Him or by denying Him through their modernistic, socialistic, atheistic, Godless philosophy and ungodly living. Prodigal parents are parents who ignore and neglect the church by their busy (too busy), covetous, business practices. Prodigal parents are those who ignore and neglect the church by their selfish pleasure, mad rush into sports, boating, camping, gambling, dancing, racing, and many other things which rob God of their souls and the souls of their children and the time and money which belong to Him. Prodigal parents are those who let television, radio, movies, pleasure reading and pleasure riding keep them from Sunday school and church. Prodigal parents are lost. Prodigal parents are on their road to hell. They need to be born again—saved by grace through faith in Christ.

As they people the earth with their prodigal children, they themselves are peopling hell. May we consider the following example of prodigal parents:

Max Jukes lived in the state of New York. He did not believe in Christian training. He married a girl of like character. From this union a study has been made of 1,026 descendants. Three hundred of them died prematurely. One hundred were sent to the penitentiary for an average of 13 years each. One hundred and ninety were public prostitutes. There were 100 drunkards, and the family cost the state $1,200,000. They made no contribution to society. This kind of life opens hell wide open and turns the children into it.

Prodigal parents are peopling the earth. Until the fifteenth century, there were less than one-half billion in the world. From the fifteenth century until now, the population has grown to over two and one-half billion. Therefore, 5,000 are born every hour; 120,000 born every day; 44,000,000 born each year. The death rate is decreasing and the birth rate is increasing. There is more poverty-stricken people today, in proportion, than 50 years ago. The jails are filled. The asylums are filled. Alcoholic institutions are filled. While our nation has gone into the liquor business for the taxes, we now have to tax everything else to pay the crime bill.

We paid $15,000,000,000 last year for crime. This equals $120 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Washington now lists 3,500,000 criminals in the making. This would say there are 5,000,000 prodigal parents. Our young criminals committed 1,500,000 major crimes last year. We had better start a few more Bible teaching Sunday schools!

President Roosevelt was a great president, but he betrayed us when he put America in the liquor business. He betrayed us when he glorified dancing to raise money for polio. He betrayed us when he allowed dancing to become a part of our public school training. Now, all over the nation, our prodigal parents raise money even for a good cause by dancing it out. A few weeks ago here in Greenville, North Carolina, a dance was staged to raise money for crippled children. Of course, these prodigal parents say there is nothing wrong with it. This did not get into the news, but it got out that when one of the high school dances was over some of the boys and girls were found in the ears outside in a too familiar fashion. The police broke up the party. These were prodigal children of prodigal parents. The prodigal parents of yesterday helped to set up these things by their vote or sanction. Prodigal parents of today are following in the rut.

This is election year. We had better be prayerful and careful about our votes, lest we betray our country into the hands of a foreign dictator. After prayerful and careful consideration, we should vote only for honest, upright Americans. We should pray a hundred times and then not vote for John F. Kennedy.

Prodigal parents are peopling the earth with prodigal children. Prodigal children are delinquent children. If there is anything wrong with the younger generation, the adults of this country have only themselves to blame. This sentiment, expressed by speaker after speaker, set the tone a few weeks ago as 7,000 delegates to the White House Conference on children and youth swung into their first full day's work. "The cure for what ails youth," they said, "must be found by treating the moral sickness of their elders, their prodigal parents." Elder Hanks said, "We, the grownups, have delegated our moral responsibility to the schools, the social agencies, or the community funds. We have time for hobbies, for watching baseball. We have no time to help the needy, to sustain the sick, to offer companionship to the lonely, and no time to offer guidance to our children. We need, not only more school buildings and more playgrounds, but also the restoration of the home, the resurrection of the parent as a person worthy of being revered as an example of devotion to responsibility."

President Eisenhower, formally opening the conference, told the delegates to beware of the tendency to be generally pessimistic about the youth of our country. He said, "I have an unshakable faith in the overwhelming majority of fine, earnest, high-spirited youngsters who comprise the rising generation of Americans."

Justice Edwards said, "Thirty per cent of the mothers with children under 18 are now employed, and I don't think there is a single juvenile court judge in the country who doesn't shudder at that figure. Every working mother who leaves children below high school age continually unsupervised is practicing brinkmanship with delinquency." He further said, "In the dangerous world in which we live, America will need sons and daughters deeply dedicated to belief in God. Instead, we are turning out too many young people trained to seek personal belongings, personal security and personal ease. The hard, lean youths with the questioning minds, who will provide this country's future leadership, demand a better inheritance than municipal corruption, political filibustering, payola, and advertising of sex and crime by television, radio, magazines and newspapers."

Robert H. MacRae, executive director of the Welfare Council of Metropolitan Chicago, told the conference, "It is no wonder that so many of the younger generation have discarded the principles and ideals this country has long held so dear. For an entire generation, we have been surrounded by violence. The media of mass communication glorify that violence daily. Human life and personality have been cheapened. Bribery of policemen, political and industrial chicanery, trade union corruption, and glorification of the violence of war—all these speak louder than Fourth of July orations."

Prodigal children are lost children. May we note why they are lost:

1. In many cases, their health is lost. What do they have to live for when their health is lost?
2. In most cases, their character is lost. What good are they to themselves, their families, their communities and their nation when their character is lost?
3. In most cases, their soul is lost forever. They live an unhappy life; they die a premature death; and they go to an eternal hell.

"And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels. (Mark 8:34-38).

We need to save our children. In saving our children, we are made happy and may save our nation.

Hope for Young People

by Norman Godbey

A much discussed question is, "What's wrong with young people?" To this may imply that young people are worse than their elders. Is that so? Lest the older generation become self-righteous, may be well for us to remember what someone else has said, "It isn't so much that a man becomes wiser and better as he grows older. It is just that he is too tired to be a fool." When we do try to act like teenagers, people are often reminded of the saying, "There's no fool like an old fool." That doesn't make a man better. Only the grace of God can do that. Young people may not be worse than their elders, but they aren't saying much for them. That leaves them sinners in need of the redeeming grace of God. There is much that's wrong with the new generation just as there has been with previous generations.

But that isn't the whole truth. The truth is that because of the grace of God there is hope for, and in, and through our young people. First, there is hope for them.

Launch Out

(Scripture Text: Luke 5:1-11)

by Mr. Walter Carson, Instructor in Mathematics, Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina

In this passage we find Jesus having come upon a group of fishermen at what was to them, a very distressing moment. They had just returned empty-handed from a long night of fishing. This was to them a true calamity, since their livelihood depended on the fish which they were able to catch. They were undoubtedly quite tired and very discouraged. There are a number of things which Christ might have done in these circumstances. He might have sympathized with them in their misfortune, as perhaps you would have done. Christ, however, often did what might seem to us to be the unexpected. In this case, He told the men to launch out into the deep. In other words, He bade them go out immediately and try again.

Surely, there are times when all of us are troubled by a feeling of futility. We all have moments when we feel that we have labored and put forth great effort, but have accomplished nothing. We may have worked hard and diligently at a task which we are convinced is worthwhile and desirable, only to find that the results fall far short of our hopes and our expectations. Consequently, we find ourselves in a mood of helplessness and despair.

Christ has an answer for that sort of condition. His answer is a practical one. "Launch out into the deep," He said to Peter and the others. These words have a deeper meaning than merely going back to the task at hand. They suggest the solution for much of our futility. Can it perhaps be true that we have not been living for anything big enough and deep enough to satisfy our hearts? There is a real danger of our being content with our ordinary day-to-day activities. Our days and evenings are filled with a multitude of details. Much of this activity is, without doubt, worthwhile. The important question is whether anything really vital is happening. There is something in all of us that will not be content with merely carrying on the routine activities of life. There must be something more in life than that. God has plans in which He wants us to share. He is seeking to change men and women. He wants to fill the world with love instead of hatred, to build bridges of fellowship, and to bring in His Kingdom. Anyone, wherever he is or whatever his occupation may be, can share in these plans.

However, in order for us to share in His plans, it is necessary for each of us to see beyond the end of his own nose. There is a story concerning these three men who were at work on the construction of a cathedral. Each was asked what he was doing. One replied, "I am cutting a stone." The second said, "I am earning a living for myself and my family." The third man said, "I am helping to build a cathedral." This last man saw the building rising to the glory of God and its usefulness in advancing God's cause in the many days and years which lay ahead. This man had indeed launched out into the deep.

The task of Christians is not merely to keep people decent or to make them a little better, but to bring about a revolution in their hearts. It is also to be the means of setting up God's rule on a world-wide scale. Are we truly seeking these things today? Nothing less than the purposes of Almighty God can truly satisfy our hearts.

First and foremost, we need to seek the deeper rule of Christ in our own lives. There is another story which concerns something which happened to a farmer in South Africa. He had worked a small farm for thirty years and had made very little success of it. One day he dug a little deeper in his plowing and discovered that underneath the shallow soil in which all his work had been done was a strain of gold-bearing ore. When the rock was exposed, he found a reward that put all his former earnings in the shade. We can see in this true incident a parable of many lives.

We spend our toil on the surface and gain almost nothing; but under the surface, in a deeper fellowship with Christ, there is a treasure that might well fill our lives with joy and power.

When we become weary and frustrated because of failures and disappointments, Christ has a message for us. It is to go back to the place where we have failed—but it is to go back with Him and at His command. That is what will make the difference. It takes the management of our work and our life from our own shoulders. It sends us out with the knowledge of His voice in our souls and the assurance of His presence. A company of soldiers sent out on a task may get into a difficult place. They may get lost in the dust and the conflict, and their courage may ebb away; but, at that moment their trusted captain appears, the entire picture is changed. He knows the objective. He knows the way to it. He takes command. He brings the reinforcement of his own spirit.

This is very much like what happens when we face life with Christ in command. Often our temptation is to lose sight of Him. We become entangled in our difficulties, our failures, and our fears. Our need is to get Him back at the center and take our orders from Him. These orders will sometimes be surprising. They may even seem to contradict all of our reasoning. He may take us into new paths of adventure. He may bid us tackle what we thought was the impossible, but the results may well be astounding, and our doubts and fears confounded.

Like Peter, we may feel that we are not worthy of so great a Master, for surely that was the real meaning of his self-reproachful cry. In the shame of his doubts and hesitations, he fell at Jesus' knees and said, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." It is indeed true that Christ is too big and too wondrous for our small minds to fully understand; but, if we trust Him in utter obedience, He will make us equal to what He asks of us.

WE'RE FUNNY PEOPLE!

I say to you, with deliberate weighing of my words and without fear that any thoughtful man will question the truth of my assertion, that if any foreign power attempted to inflict upon the American people a tenth of the evils that we suffer at the hands of the whiskey lords and beer barons, we would fight our last battleship to the sea bottom, spend our national wealth by billions and whiten every hillside and prairie with the bones of the slaughtered before we would submit.—Wm. P. Ferguson, in The Bible Friend.

Recommendation and Expression of Gratitude

We, the Superannuation Board of the National Association of Free Will Baptists, in view of the action of the National Association while in session at Asheville, North Carolina, July 16, 1959, with reference to the offer by the Florida State Association of Free Will Baptists of property known as the Florida Free Will Baptist Youth Camp, located four miles south of Cottondale, Florida, on Highway 231, and as the National Association, by majority vote, requested the Superannuation Board to continue the investigation of the said property and other involvements, and to make recommendations to the National Association at its annual session in 1960:

Resolved, that the Superannuation Board offer to the Florida State Association of Free Will Baptists the following recommendation to be presented to the National Association at the 1960 session relative to the above mentioned property;

Whereas, each member of the National Superannuation Board has appraised the property under consideration and finds that it can be used in helping to provide housing facilities for our retired ministers, missionaries and other full-time Christian workers.

The Superannuation Board recommends that the National Association consider the wisdom of accepting the proposed property and give the board directive as to the same.

Spring Branch Church Reports Progress

The people of Spring Branch Church in Wayne County, North Carolina, feel that God has called them to fill a rather unique niche in His Universal Church. This church is the only one in the country, but the members believe it would have them fill the need of both city church and a country church. Therefore, they are making a special effort to reach all classes of people. During the past few years, the attendance at Sunday school has more than doubled and the attendance at worship service has increased. Unselfishly, they give God the credit for the increase.

The pastor, the Rev. Ed Miles, states, "The people of our church have a willing mind to work and an humble spirit in thanking God. They are just great to work with in the Lord's work."

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Please explain, "If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14:26).
—Jane Reed, Texas.

Answer: There is a parallel passage which in part at least explains this verse of Scripture. "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven. Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me" (Matthew 10:32-38).

Note with special attention Verse 37, "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." This verse indicates that the Lord is not talking about hate as we are accustomed to speak of it today but rather what could be regarded as hate by way of comparison. (Compare Deuteronomy 21:15, 16 with Hebrews 9:13.) In the case of Esau, of whom it is said God hated, the fact is that God did not give Edom to the Israelites when they approached its borders en route from Egypt to the Promised Land, but reminded them of His favor to Esau in giving that land to his descendants. Here it may be seen then that in reference to the Abrahamic covenant, God exercises special love to Jacob, making his descendants the happy recipients thereof while Esau (the hated) is sent to Edom to propagate and replenish it. In reference to Canaan, however, he is hated, rejected or cast aside, or at the best given a secondary inheritance. (See Genesis 9:25-29.) So must the born-again Christian place all his fleshly kin, including his own blood descendants compared with his esteem for God and his loyalty to Him; and more especially is this applicable if the blood descendants are not Christians. He, as a soldier of the cross of Christ, must set himself in military array against that for which they stand and practice, for they are in a definite way at enmity with God.

I once heard a converted Seventh Day Adventist speak who said that for eighteen years he was a missionary of that cult in India. His wife and children, who were Seventh Day Adventists, disowned him and refused to go with him in the acceptance of Christ and therefore the rejection of Seventh Day Adventism. The result—he became a great exponent of the Christian faith, exposing the errors of Helen G. White, the big mogul of Seventh Day Adventism and the errors of the cult in general. He did not hate his own blood as we are to hate the devil, but rather he gave them up with all their erroneous beliefs for Christ and His way of righteousness. When a man from a non-Christian family is converted, he gives up his loved ones and their practices; and his love for Christ, the way of peace, compared with his filial affections for his unsaved relatives compares favorably with the difference between hate for one's enemies and the natural love he has for his family.

I once heard Dr. and Mrs. Howard Taylor tell about being kidnapped by Chinese bandits. One gang of bandits took Mrs. Taylor one way, another took Dr. Taylor the other way; but fate had them to come together again in a few days. All this time had been spent in prayer by both. Both gave themselves into God's hands as they had never been able to do before. She had told the Lord that if He could get greater glory to Himself in the execution of either and allow the other to live she was perfectly willing for that to be done; because, even though she loved Dr. Taylor more than anyone else on earth, her love for Him who had redeemed both their souls from hell was far greater. When they came together he said, "Oh! Dear, I am so glad to see you, but must confess that I love Jesus far more than you and much more than I had ever before realized." Then she told of her experience, so God allowed them to live a number of years after this experience, not loving each other less than formerly but much more. However, compared with the love each had and showed for the Saviour, it was hate.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

*My word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light
unto my path (PSALM 119:105).*

THE MODEL CHURCH

"They helped every one his neighbour; and every one said to his brother, Be of good courage. So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and he that smootheth with the hammer him that smote the anvil, saying, It is ready for the sodring: and he fastened it with nails, that it should not be moved" (Isaiah 41:6, 7).

Here is a picture of united church activity from the Old Testament.

We all enjoy the activity of the forces of nature that go to make the world a place of beauty and blessings. Life is a scene of activity in the physical universe and in the business world. So it is with intellectual activity. Still more it must be the case if the spiritual life of the church is to be at its highest point. When there is a spirit of unity and helpfulness among the members of a church there is usually spiritual growth, and everybody is happy and striving to get closer to God and closer together.

These verses give us a scene of cheerful, unceasing toil. The prophet pictures the carpenter encouraging the goldsmith. Too many people discourage instead of encouraging. There is no better way to encourage a man or woman than to earnestly pray for them, even when they make mistakes—and who of us are free of mistakes? That man is a great man who knows how to encourage the person who has become neglectful of his duty to God and the church. It is a Christian obligation to help those who need our help. The Bible says, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted" (Galatians 6:1). Christ taught His disciples, "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother" (Matthew 18:15). It has been my experience and observation that most men will readily reason with those who approach them in a Christian manner.' It has also been my observation that many are driven away farther when approached in a critical, "holier than thou" attitude.

In these verses, Isaiah gives us a scene of prompt and thorough work. When a man acts in such a way that he gets the reputation of dilatoriness, if he does not soon snap out of it, his fate is sealed. It is just as true of a church. The model church does its work with thoroughness, and does it promptly, because it knows that delay means death and destruction.

In the model church, all are working for one common end. The church has but one aim. In the model church, everyone finds his work and does it. Some are to sing; others teach. Still others visit the sick and speak words of encouragement to the downhearted. Somebody must attend to this, that, and the other, but all are working for one end—to glorify God. The model church is a unity—a unity in spirit, in effort, in aim, in end.

"And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Ephesians 4:11-13).

Shipwrecks on the Ocean of Time

(1 Timothy 1:19)

The Bible records these failures that they may be a warning to mankind.

1. The shipwreck of Cain (Genesis 4:3-7).

A lack of faith in the Word of God. Results may be the same today (Hebrews 11:4-6; Luke 17:5).

2. The shipwreck of Lot (Genesis 19:22-26).

In his greed for earthly gain he failed to remember his duty to God (Genesis 13:10, 11; Psalm 62:10).

3. The shipwreck of King Saul (1 Samuel 13:13, 14).

Pride brought a disregard for the commands of God (1 Samuel 15:9, 18, 22, 23; 15:17; 1 Peter 5:5, 6).

4. The shipwreck of Jehoshaphat (2 Chronicles 18:1).

Caused by forming an alliance with the enemies of God (2 Chronicles 19:2; 2 Corinthians 6:14-18).

5. The shipwreck of Gehazi (2 Kings 5:20-22).

Greed and deception were at the root of the whole matter (2 Kings 5:26, 27; Philippians 4:11; Hebrews 13:5).

6. The shipwreck of the ruler (Mark 10:21).

Reminding us of Lot—love and worship of riches (Mark 10:22; Luke 12:15-21; 1 Timothy 6:6-12—note Verse 10).

7. The shipwreck of Demas (2 Timothy 4:10).

Love for the present world with its many attractions (1 John 2:15-17; Matthew 16:26; 1 Peter 1:24).

Organizing a Mission Sunday School

(Matthew 28:18-20)
by Frank Davenport

IN the very beginning, I would like to say that I believe in the Sunday school being an auxiliary to the church. I do not believe in organizing a Sunday school before the parent body is started. Therefore, a mission should be organized before a mission Sunday school is brought into existence. Because of my convictions in this manner, we will approach our subject, "Organizing a Mission Sunday School," from this viewpoint.

FIRST—THE LOCATION

The success of a mission depends largely, if not entirely, on the location. Much prayer and study should go into the planning of a location for a mission. There are some who would think of only the better sections of towns or communities, and would forget the slums or poorer sections. I believe Jesus would have us minister to all classes. In some communities the people across the tracks have been neglected, and in other communities the need might be in the better section. Therefore, any board or church thinking of starting a mission would need to ask the question, "What would Jesus do?" Much praying should be done before the decision is made.

SECOND—THE PREACHING SERVICES

When the location has been decided then plans should be made for the preaching services to begin. In the book of Acts you will notice that churches had their beginning in the homes of the Christians. I like this plan, and I do not believe it can be beat. By the time a mission board or church have decided on a location, they will know of a few families in that area who are Christians and are in sympathy with the work. Preaching services should be started in these homes on one particular night to the week. This night should be selected to the convenience of the people expected to attend.

Jesus said, "I will build My Church," I believe in letting Him do just that. When God's man preaches God's message, God will draw people together and knit them into a fellowship. Some will be saved; other Christians in the area will be drawn into the work; and in a matter of time there will be enough to organize a mission. When the mission has been organized the next thing in the planning should be a Sunday school.

THIRD—THE FIRST BUILDING

When the mission is organized and begins its plans for a Sunday school, there is then a need for a building. The mission will need to seek to rent a building with as many rooms as possible. In Grifton, North Carolina, my first building was an apartment with a large hall and four rooms. In Tarboro, we rented an old Jewish synagogue with two large rooms; we divided one into five with plywood. In Scotland Neck, we rented a seven-room house with a large hall; the landlord let us take two partitions out, making a large auditorium. In Greenville, we rented a six-room house.

In every place, I rented as many rooms as possible and divided out students into many classes as possible. As much as possible we followed the grading system in the North Carolina Sunday School Manual. I have found that a good grading system always makes a Sunday school grow much faster. As soon as it is at all possible, the mission Sunday school should have at least eight classes. I have used the following age groups as a beginning when I could arrange eight classes: Birth-3, 4-5, 6-8, 9-11, 12-14, 15-17, 18-25, and 25 and up.

FOURTH—SELECTING OFFICERS AND TEACHERS

After the building has been secured then will come the important task of selecting the officers and teachers for the Sunday school. I do not believe in electing officers and teachers. The Bible says that teachers are called (Ephesians 4:11 and Luke 10:2). Jesus said, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He would send out laborers into His harvest." (continued on page sixteen)

The Changed Life

A great evangelist had just finished a meeting in a small town in the West. The tent was being taken down when a young man approached the evangelist saying, "Preacher, just what kind of life do I have to live to be saved?"

"The kind of life you live will never save you, my friend," replied the preacher.

"Then why are people always telling me to change my ways and be saved?" asked the startled young man. "Those people have the cart before the horse. Be saved by accepting Jesus Christ as your Saviour and Lord, and you will change your way of life—or rather, He will change it for you."

"Oh, that is just what I need," confessed the other, "I have been trying to change it but failed every time. If He will make it different I want Him—want Him now."—Selected.

A Cure for Misery

"When you find yourself overpowered with melancholy," said a saintly man, "the best way is to go out and do something kind to somebody or other. Thousands who today are sitting daily in the gloom of a self-created misery would soon lose it if they began to care for others." One quaint writer says concerning this: "When I dig a man out of trouble, I turn the hole he leaves behind him into a grave in which I bury my own trouble."—Selected.

"I Give Myself in the Offering"

There was a missionary meeting in a church in Scotland. The people were greatly moved. They gave generously to send missionaries into God's world-wide vineyard. Little Alexander Duff, just ten years old, sat in a pew. His heart was strangely moved. But he had nothing to give. After the offering was taken, the ushers returned to the rear of the church. Little Alexander followed them. Looking into the face of one of the collectors, the lad said, "Please, sir, put the plate low!" The usher, catering to what he thought was a childish whim, put the plate on the floor. "There you are, my boy," he said smilingly. How surprised all were when the boy stood on the plate and said, "Oh, God, I have no money to give, but I give myself in the offering!"—Selected.

OUR RECENT REVIVAL MEETING

A ten-day series of evangelistic services closed May 1 at the Bridgeton, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church of which I am pastor. The guest evangelist was the Rev. Melvin Worthington, pastor of Union Chapel Church and Palmetto Chapel Church. Mr. Worthington is a graduate of Columbia Bible College and a member of an old-fashioned Free Will Baptist fami-

While here at Bridgeton, we never heard him criticize any other denomination, any other evangelist, any other preacher, or any other institution in a destructive manner. He condemns sin anywhere and everywhere it is found. He preaches a Biblical message, proving every statement by the Bible. No time did I hear him deviate from the doctrine as set forth in our preaching and as taught by the Bible. I questioned him on many points of doctrine and found him sound according to my knowledge.

One of his main points in presenting the gospel message was "Except you are born of the Spirit, as taught in the third chapter of the gospel recorded by John, you will die and go straight to hell." He often said, "Our church membership and even baptism, and keeping the ordinances of the church, all of which are right and should be believed and practiced, without the new birth, cannot keep you from being hell-bound."

Many church members were illuminated by the messages, and some church members were brought to a closer relationship with God and the church. Several first-time decisions were made, and on Sunday evening, May 1, there were four additions to the church. Another had previously made a decision and asked for baptism and church membership, and still another boy was saved on this evening—making six in all. Mr. Worthington is clean so far as worldliness is concerned, spiritual in his preaching, and has Biblical knowledge that few men of his age have acquired.

As pastor of the Bridgeton Church, I can assure that I have not heard a single complaint against his method of presenting the mesage of God. I preached on Sunday evening, as the guest speaker had to leave to administer baptism to a goodly number of converts. We saw real signs of a revival, not a protracted meeting.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME PROGRAM

On Sunday afternoon, May 1, we attended a meeting at St. Mary's Church in New Bern where a program was rendered by a group from the Children's Home in Middlesex, North Carolina. The program was very illuminating as well as entertaining. The group was accompanied by the superintendent, the Rev. Wilbert Everton, and his wife. The Evertons are doing a wonderful job at the institution in training the children for a useful life, climaxing with real salvation from above. Our hearts were stirred with the program.

As many of our folk have learned, this is the fortieth anniversary of our Children's Home, which has been very successful in turning out men and women which is the greatest work in the world. It is work to be appreciated by loyal Free Will Baptists of North Carolina. Some of the best Christian men and women in our denomination were reared at the Children's Home. May I say, as a one-time director and secretary to the board and also one of the case workers by virtue of being on that board, that this is one of our institutions of which I have never heard any destructive criticism. I love our Children's Home and thank God for all the workers there and for all the children reared there. Personally I do not know of a single child that has brought disgrace to the institution, out of nearly 500 who have been a part of the home during the 40 years of its existence. May God bless Brother and Sister Everton as they strive to make the Children's Home the best institution that Free Will Baptists will let them make it.

PERILOUS TIMES

The apostle, Paul, certainly knew what he was talking about when he said, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy" (2 Timothy 3:1, 2).

Just read the headlines of the daily newspapers and you can see that we are living in the day that Paul was speaking of. For an example, I would like to give some of the headlines from a newspaper on May 2: "Warning to Eisenhower," "University Student Dies After Shooting," "Hope for Peace Slim in Africa," "Textile Workers Plan Strike." Then only a few days ago there was a headline that read: "1,700 Die in Earthquake." These are just some of the headlines. We do not have time or space to comment on all, but we will say again that we are living in perilous times, politically, socially and religiously. All of these conditions are brought about by sin and selfishness.

Some people seek to destroy the other fellow in order to build up themselves. The spirit of selfishness is to push down or destroy others to build up self. That spirit started with Cain, and human nature has never changed. Recently I read of our political situation. One or two seekers of office, instead of offering something helpful to the masses, based their speeches on destructive criticism of the opponents. This has always been true in politics, and I guess it will always be so.

I have known preachers to preach a selfish religion. I was talking to a minister of a certain denomination the other day and asked him to attend a Youth for Christ Rally. He said, "I don't go any more." I asked, "Why?" The answer was, "I did attend, but the last one I went to, the preacher preached everybody in hell that did not belong to his church." I could only say, "That was unethical and unchristian to take advantage of the pulpit to speak his personal belief in and at an interdenominational Youth for Christ Rally."

Yet, there are such preachers in the world, and perhaps will always be. That kind of preacher, if I know it, will not get in my pulpit—at least not but once anyway. I am a Free Will Baptist by choice and I am not ashamed of it; but God knows that I am ashamed of some of our doings of the past, such as divisions and fightings that have hindered the progress of our denomination. Jesus Christ prayed for a oneness in His Church. (See John 17.) Why not let God answer the prayer of His Son?

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Mr. R. M. Hester

On October 3, 1959, the death angel visited the home of Mr. Bob Hester and took him to his heavenly home. He is greatly missed in the community and in the church. He was a charter member and a trustee of White Oak Free Will Baptist Church of Bladenboro, North Carolina. Mr. Hester saw that the church was kept clean and warm up until a few months before he passed away. He was always there to do his part any way he could.

His funeral service was held in White Oak Church on October 5, 1959, by the Rev. Billy Hardie, assisted by the Rev. Ray Loftus, in the presence of a large congregation of friends and loved ones.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

The Secret That Wasn't Kept

by Chester Shuler

PAULINE had been ill three days, and time was hanging heavily on her hands. She wondered and wondered what she could do. And then she had a caller.

When Mother came upstairs and said, "Mrs. Baker wishes to see you, dear," Pauline made a wry face which brought a look of mild rebuke from Mother.

"Sister Baker is a nice lady, Pauline. She means to be nice to you."

"I'm sorry, Mom," Pauline said. "I'll be good. Tell her to come up."

Mrs. Baker wasn't there ten minutes until Pauline was glad she had come. She was an interesting person and could tell the nicest stories. Before long Pauline was listening wide-eyed while her visitor related Bible stories in a new way. She made them sound so thrilling and different. She made the characters talk, always using Bible words. Pauline guessed Mrs. Baker knew nearly all of the Bible by memory.

Then they sang a beautiful hymn together, after which Mrs. Baker said she must be going.

"Wait, please," begged Pauline. "May I ask a question?"

"Surely, dear."

"We junior girls have wondered how you can know so many Bible verses by heart, Mrs. Baker. And how you always know just which one to use. We've talked about it several times. We wanted to ask you, but—well, I guess I'm the first one to really know you well enough to do it."

Mrs. Baker's face was radiant with joy. She was so glad the girls had a desire to learn God's Word. "I'll be delighted to tell you how I memorize the Word, Pauline. It's a simple little plan which I worked out for myself. It has always aided me greatly, but I'm not too certain that it will work as well for others. In fact, I don't believe that anyone else has ever tried it."

Pauline let out a delighted little squeal. "Oh, good! Then we'll share a kind of secret, if you'll tell us."

"I suppose so, my dear. Only you probably won't wish to keep the secret very long."

"Please tell me about it."

When Mrs. Baker left fifteen minutes later, Pauline was so excited that she had almost forgotten her headache and other pains. She had something really exciting to tell the class, and would they ever be pleased to get the information!

The superintendent of Pauline's Sunday school had often felt disappointed because so few persons would respond when he asked for Bible verses. He did not know how to help them, either.

Therefore, he was greatly cheered when he noticed about a month after Pauline's illness that a number of the junior girls responded almost immediately. He stopped some of the girls after church that morning and complimented them. "How did you learn so many verses, if I may ask?" he added.

"We have the grandest plan in the world!" Pauline exclaimed. "Mrs. Baker told us about it. See—each girl has her notebook along now."

The superintendent listened with interest when the girls promised to tell him all about their plan for learning Bible verses. They went into a nearby classroom and displayed their notebooks.

Each was a loose-leaf affair with leather cover. On the pages were written with ink the verses the girls wished to learn. Each learned two new verses a week. These were written down in any way that would help each girl learn them. Some words were printed, others underlined, some done in red ink.

"Mrs. Baker says that's the way she learns her verses," Pauline explained.

"Well, she certainly knows a great many passages of Scripture," the superintendent agreed. "Her plan must be a good one. But won't you tell me more?"

"We write down the verses in our own handwriting," Pauline continued excitedly, the other girls helping her. "Then we try to see the pages or verses. It's just as easy! We could close our books now and reproduce them from memory, I suppose."

"Sounds like a most unusual plan," the superintendent agreed. "I am glad you found out about it, my girls. It makes me happy to hear you respond so quickly when verses are called for."

"It's sort of a secret, you see," Pauline laughed. "But I think we'd better not be selfish with it."

"It would be good to share your secret with other classes or individuals if they care to try it," the superintendent agreed. "And I'm sure you girls would gladly do that."

"We'll try to interest the intermediate class," Gladys promised.

"And I'll get after my brother Ben," Hazel declared.

The girls contacted others, too. They had some difficulty with the boys, because making notebooks seemed too much like school to suit them, at first. But when they noticed how quickly the girls could repeat verses, they accepted the idea as a challenge. "We'll show those smart girls they declared.

"I'm almost glad I was sick," Pauline told Mrs. Baker. "Because if I hadn't been sick, I might never have found out about your plan for learning Bible verses."

"And just suppose that I had not come to see you that day," smiled the lady. "You see, my dear, God has many things He wants each of His children to do, and you must be very careful that we do not forget Him in even one of them."

"I suppose that's the way it is with getting others to learn verses, then," Pauline said. "I'm glad we girls were not selfish with our secret plan."

"Try to add verses steadily," Mrs. Baker advised. "I have filled several notebooks during the years. The verses hidden in my heart have been a great blessing many times."

"We'll try—hard, Mrs. Baker," Pauline promised.—My Pleasure.

TO ALL MEN

To red and yellow, black and white—good news to all people. A little black boy asked the missionary in Africa, "Was Jesus a black man?" "No, my boy," answered the missionary, "He was not." The boy turned away disappointed, saying, "The white people have all the good things." The missionary reflected a bit. Perhaps the hot Syrian sun would, indeed, have darkened the skin of the Master, so he said to the boy, "I should think that His color would be between yours and mine." The boy clapped his hands, and shouted, "The He belongs to both of us!"—The Prairie Overcomer.

"Ten thousand, thousand precious gifts
My daily thanks employ;
Nor is the least a cheerful heart,
That tastes those gifts with joy."

Attention Auxiliaries! Don't Forget the Mexico Project

How time flies! My! where has this convention year gone? A look at my calendar jolted me. There are but two months left of this convention year! And so much must be done before time for the convention at Fresno, California.

As I thought upon these things, I decided that I should write to you. We close our books as of June 30. In order for your gifts to be counted in the convention report, they must reach this office before then.

The Mexico Project must be completed, one thing. As of this date, April 25, we have received only $4,759.96. I decided that perhaps I should break down this amount and give you a comparison with last year's suggested state quotas. They are as follows:

MEXICO PROJECT

1958-59 Suggested

State	Amount Given	Quota	Balance
Alabama	$ 167.00	$ 350.00	$ 183.00
Arizona		50.00	50.00

Over
It was voted at the W. N. A. C., Asheville, North Carolina, not to give any suggested quotas for this year's project, but . . . that last year's quotas be considered as a gauge." One state, Kentucky, has given twelve dollars over their last year's suggested quota. All the other states are lagging behind. This is a needed, worthwhile project; so let's give it our best soon.

Now with the current project needing $12,000 for its successful completion, you can see for yourself that gifts must be increased a great deal even to come up with last year's—much less to reach the needed amount.

So, have you sent your offerings for the Mexico Project yet? If, after you look at the totals, you know your money has not reached this office, will you please remind your delinquent treasurer that time is running out very rapidly.

Perry, Fla.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Mt. Carmel Church met Tuesday, April 26, at 7:30 p. m., with eight members and two visitors present. The president called the meeting to order. The opening hymn was "At the Cross," followed with sentence prayers.

The program chairman took over and read a letter which was supposed to be from Satan, telling how proud he is of church members who let radio, television, etc. interfere with their faithfulness to Christ and His cause. She then read an article on "Revival—Our Greatest Need." The group discussed plans for a revival at the church.

The president read a letter from the mission in New Mexico, asking for support and prayers. The group voted to send $5 and to remember this mission work in prayer each Wednesday at 6:00 p. m.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The group was dismissed with prayer by Sister Doris Norman.

Let's Give Cragmont A Face Lifting

Cragmont Assembly, Inc.
Route 1
Black Mountain, N. C.

Dear Friends in Christ:

We now have a nice new building here at Cragmont. It stands out in beauty and loveliness. It was built for your convenience and pleasure and for the glory of God. Visit us and see it for yourself.

We are now asking 150 people to donate each, the price of one gallon of paint ($4.00) to be used on the old building, so that it may have a new look, and put on a more pleasing appearance to match the new one. This work is essential in order to preserve the building, which is beginning to deteriorate in usefulness and value. If we can get the paint at once, we can get it put on before the summer season opens.

Please do not pass this up lightly. It is very important, and will surely assist Cragmont in its efforts to become a more useful institution. Think about it, pray about it, and send the $4.00, or as much as you can, and receive a blessing.

Thank you in advance for your co-operation in this worthy cause. Remember, Cragmont belongs to you.

Yours in Christ our Lord,
Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Wooten
Manager Treasurer

Cragmont Activities

We are pleased to announce to the friends of Cragmont, to our personal friends and to the interested public that we are back at Cragmont Assembly, and that there are many visible evidences that we have a prosperous and profitable year ahead of us. May we work together and pray to that end!

When we arrived, we found the new motel-style building almost finished. Just a little more work and it will be complete and ready for the setting up of the furniture. We expect the furniture to be delivered about May 20. Several groups and individuals have agreed to furnish rooms as memorials to loved ones. There are eight rooms to be furnished at a cost of approximately $250.00 each. Maybe you, or some group with whom you are connected, would be glad to join others who are already actively at work, and furnish a room in memory of some esteemed and worthy individual. We would be happy to have as many pledges in as possible when the furnishings arrive, about May 20. If a pledge is not possible, then send in what you can as soon as you can. It will be a great help and will be greatly appreciated. You will be helping a commendable and worthy cause.

The new building is nice and adds much beauty and pleasantness to the general appearance of Cragmont Assembly. It will accommodate thirty-two persons and each room is equipped with a private bath, both tub and shower.

The old building is still the main building. It is being repaired while we write this news, but only in part because of a lack of sufficient funds. It is in need of a complete repair job from bottom to top, including paint. We have begun a quick paint drive in an effort to get the painting done before June 1. If you have received a letter asking for the price of one gallon of paint, please consider it carefully and prayerfully before throwing it in the waste basket. This is your institution, dear Free Will Baptist Christians of North Carolina, and it is a force in the field of Christian service. Many young people are say that they are affected by the sin virus, that they are members of a fallen race, is true. The Bible also teaches that man was made in the image of God, and while that image has been marred by sin, it hasn't been completely destroyed. There is still a wonderful potential about man at every age. We have sinned ". . . and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). Still there is the evidence of God's handiwork in us. God has not given us up. God's Son believed man worth dying for!

God was willing to make the greatest sacrifice of all eternity to redeem us. This applies to young and old. So there is hope for our young people.

More than that, there is hope in them.

They haven't been eroded by frustration and become cynical. Too many adults have lost their idealism, their vision, their dreams. The sparkle is gone from their lives. It isn't so apt to be true of young people. Life is full of disappointments, frustrating defeats. It is easy to become sour. A few people live up to our best expectations. They disappoint us. What is sadder is we disappoint ourselves. But young people haven't had this happen enough to let their zest dulled and their dreams smashed. They still have hope.

The natural hopes of youth are redeemed when Christ comes into their lives. Their hopes take on new content. They become Christian hopes. In giving His Spirit, Christ promised that, ". . . your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions" (Joel 2:28). The spirit of eternal hope is imparted by God. ". . . that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary, and they shall walk, and not faint" (Isaiah 40:31). Christian young people have experienced this truth. There is a hope for them that is rooted in God. Older Christians, too, have caught something of the spirit of eternal renewal.

Not only is there hope for and in our young people, but there is hope through them. Perhaps you remember the question about the school teacher who asked, "What is in our world today that wasn't there fifty years ago?" Imagine her surprise when an irrepressible Johnny piped up, "Mr. Johnny had something. Every new generation, in fact, every new individual, is a restart from God. Young people are important. There is hope in this fact.

You expect me to say that "The hope of the world is in its youth." That is one of those bromides that the world has been repeating since the dawn of time. But it just isn't true. That statement is as false on the one side as the other saying that "The younger generation is going to take the dogs off the other side. Neither is true. The hope of the world is in Christ! From this we may go on to say that the hope of the world is in those young people in whom Christ lives by faith. The hope of the world is not in its young people, but in its Christian young people who know Christ and live for Him.

". . . if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new" (1 Corinthians 5:17).

". . . put on the new man, which of God is created in righteousness and true holiness" (Ephesians 4:24).—American Tract Society.

Sincerity in Religious Practices

(Lesson for May 22)

Lesson: Matthew 6:1-13.

Olden Text: 1 Samuel 16:7.

INTRODUCTION

The Lord has little respect for insincere religious activities, however lofty and pious they may appear to be. On the other hand, He is always had respect and praise for those who were sincere, humble and modest in their religious worship and service. Among His own people, the Lord Jesus and some whose sincerity He did not question; for He saw and understood the faith, hope and love which motivated the religious customs, habits and traditions of their day. When Jesus saw the insincerity that showed itself in every word and act of the religious practices of the most conspicuously religious people about Him, He denounced them in the most scathing terms, saying, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! how can ye escape the damnation of hell."—The Advanced Learner (F. W. B.).

I. HINTS THAT HELP

1. It is Scriptural to practice benevolence, but in such a way that God can reward it (Matthew 6:1).

2. If our benevolence is done in order to give the praise of men, that is all the reward we will ever get for it (Vs. 2).

3. It is best not to let the nearest and most intimate of our friends know how much of our income is given back to the Lord (Vs. 3).

4. It pays to invest money in helping the poor, for some day the Lord will pay it back with interest (Vs. 4).

5. We should not be ashamed to be praying, but we should be ashamed to pray in order to be seen (Vs. 5).

6. It is hardly possible for public prayer to be sincere if the individual so praying never prays in secret (Vs. 6).

7. It is not the quantity of prayer which counts in the sight of God, but the quality (Vs. 7, 8).

8. The best order of prayer is first to glorify God, and then to present our petitions (Vs. 9).

9. Prayer for forgiveness of the past should always be coupled with a petition for victory in the future (Vs. 12, 13).

10. The model prayer opens with the glorification of God and closes with an ascription of all the majesty that belongs to Him (Vs. 13).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Giving alms was an exceedingly important part of Jewish piety. Jesus had observed this practice from His youth, and while He admired and wished to preserve the custom, His whole righteous being cried out against the public show which the Israelites made of it. First, He said, don't ring a bell so as to demand the attention of a crowd when you make an offering, because this is the way pretenders do. The classical Greek word here translated hypocrites means actors in a play. The Aramaic word which corresponded with it means a profane person. Those who desire the praise of men receive it, but God receives no glory from a display of unreality. It is generally accepted that if a person receives his reward on this earth, he will not be rewarded in the world to come.

2. Jesus next turns from the negative to the positive. Do not do as the actor but in truthfulness and sincerity give secretly to those in need. The people closest to you, even members of your family need not know—just you and the Father. He sees and knows the secret things, and if it is His will you shall be publicly rewarded.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

3. The parable of the Pharisee and the publican is suggested for our study by way of enforcing this teaching of the Sermon on the Mount. The lack of humility which amounted to the most contemptible egotism, immediately stands out in the speech and conduct of the Pharisee. Prayer offers an opportunity for confession of our sins to God and for an appeal for mercy. It also gives the means of seeking more strength and wisdom for nobler living. But the Pharisee confessed no sins or shortcomings. In fact, he had no petitions to offer: he felt no lack or need. He wanted only to use prayer as a trumpet to blow to attract the attention of his fellows. He spoke to God in the most patronizing manner and congratulated God on having such a marvelous servant as himself. In fact, it is evident that he felt that God would be an object of pity, if He should lack the worship of this His perfect servant.—The Standard Commentary.

4. Jesus gave what we have come to know as the Lord's Prayer to serve as a pattern which we might well follow in our praying. Let us analyze this prayer briefly:

(1) Our Father which art in heaven, . . ." (Vs. 9). We begin, not by recognizing God merely as our Creator and Ruler; we address Him as our loving Father who is in heaven, but who is so concerned about His children on earth that He is keeping a constant watch upon them. We acknowledge that He possesses all the attributes in perfection that good earthly fathers possess in imperfection of the flesh.

(2) ". . . Hallowed be thy name" (Vs. 9). We acknowledge that He is worthy of our worship and supreme devotions.

(3) "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven" (Vs. 10). We submit our own way and that of the world to the will of God. We acknowledge that God's will is altogether right and that His plans for man's activities are just what the world needs. We long for God's rule upon earth as He rules in heaven.

(4) "Give us this day our daily bread" (Vs. 11). We confess that we are dependent upon God for everything we have. All material blessings, as well as spiritual, come directly from the loving hand of our heavenly Father.

(5) "And forgive our debts, as we forgive our debtors" (Vs. 12). This verse is best understood when interpreted to mean our debts to God and to our fellow men, including all our shortcomings, our failures, our sins, and our trespasses. We plead for the application of the atoning blood of our Saviour and the merciful forgiveness of our Father. We furthermore agree to exercise the same forgiving spirit toward others.

(6) "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen" (Vs. 13). We confess that we are weak and need God's power to keep us from yielding to temptation; we plead for Him to keep us from evil; and we acknowledge His control of the entire Kingdom.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

5. A college professor once said that Presbyterians usually said, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," but Methodists almost always said, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us."

Turning to a professor who belonged to a Baptist denomination, he asked him which of the two expressions the Baptists used and received the following reply: "We try to get both ideas." That is a good idea, don't you think?

Mission Sunday School!

forth laborers into His harvest." I believe that special seasons of prayer should be held, praying that God would call out teachers and officers. Then a special service should be announced and an appropriate message delivered with an invitation for those who feel that God would have them serve as an officer or teacher to come forth. I sincerely believe that God will supply, through this method, a more consecrated and dedicated staff than would be elected at random.

From those who present themselves should be selected officers and teachers according to their ability. Each teacher should be placed in the class he or she is best fitted for, determined by the training, age and personality.

FIFTH—TRAINING OFFICERS AND TEACHERS

In every mission or church there should be a continuous program of training for the officers and teachers. In the beginning, the training would need to deal basically with qualifications of the officer and teacher and methods of teaching. The North Carolina Sunday School Manual by Rev. Raymond T. Sasser, has proven to be a good text for the first course of study. A mission should arrange for this manual to be taught before beginning its school, and require its teachers to attend.

SIXTH—REGISTRATION

When the building has been obtained, the officers and teachers selected, and given basic training, then the mission is ready to register its students. Proper announcements should be made and advertisement should be circulated through the mission area, announcing the registration. Much care should be taken on the day of registration to get a good record of each student. A good registration card should be selected, so as to get information needed for future ministry to the student.

The registration card should reveal at least the following information: Name, address, phone, age, whether or not he or she is a Christian or church member, member of what church. The teacher will need this information to help get acquainted with the student and to know his or her need.

SEVENTH—THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT WORK

In conclusion may I state the work of the Sunday school. The work of the Sunday school is to faithfully teach the Word of God with the following purposes:

1. To win each student to Christ.
2. To train each student to live a dedicated Christian life separate from worldliness.
3. To train each student to win souls.

I pray that these words will be of help to you in organizing a mission Sunday school.

by Rev. Bobby Jackson

We are glad to announce that we now have for sale another book of sermons by one of our own evangelists. Mr. Jackson is a graduate of Free Will Baptist Bible College where he received his B. A. degree, and Bob Jones University where he received his M. A. degree.

Since his graduation in 1955, he has done extensive evangelistic work throughout the Free Will Baptist denomination, having conducted an average of 35 revivals per year.

Messages that Matter contains ten sermons which have been used during Mr.

Jackson's evangelistic meetings. They "Paul—the Qualified Soul Winner," "Crimson Cord," "The Simplicity of Salvation," "Man's Most Deadly Enemy," "Refuge from Wrath," "Man's Great Need—the New Birth," "Be Prepared—Hell," "When Christ Returns," and "conditional Surrender."

In the Preface, Mr. Jackson states: "Every thought, outline, and illustration is meant to be evangelistic. No originality can be claimed for the content of the sermons. Most of the material is almost public domain. . . .

"If one soul is brought from darkness to light, from death to life, through these sermons, the author will be repaid in full for the effort which has gone into preparing this volume."

AYDEN, NORTH CAROLINA, WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1960

Let the Lower Lights Be Burning

Brightly beams our Father's mercy
From His lighthouse evermore,
But to us He gives the keeping
Of the lights along the shore.

Dark the night of sin has settled,
Loud the angry billows roar;
Eager eyes are watching, longing,
For the lights along the shore.

Trim your feeble lamp, my brother:
Some poor sailor tempest tossed,
Trying now to make the harbor,
In the darkness may be lost.

Let the lower lights be burning!
Send a gleam across the wave!
Some poor fainting, struggling seaman
You may rescue, you may save.

Christian Parents Peopling the Earth with Christian Children

CONSIDER the following facts which should awaken us to the need of this you know:

That, according to F. B. I. Director J. Edgar Hoover, the rise in crime since 1920 reveals that we are faced with an abnormally high rate of juvenile misbehavior?

That youngsters under 21 years of age are responsible last year for 51% of the thefts, 41% of the burglaries, 28% of the robberies, 27% of the thefts, and 15% of the rapes?

That there has been an increase in the percentage of arrests of girls under 15 for frequent charges?

That in every large city there are gangs of youngsters from ten years old and up prowling around the streets at night, committing such crimes as housebreaking, auto thefts and pandering?

That breeding places of crime and vice are more common today than ever; that they are wide open and doing a land-lubbers business?

That more than one half of all crimes committed during the last year were committed by persons under 25 years of age?

That drunkenness is increasing, and $58 per person was spent last year on intoxicating beverages?

That immorality and vice rates are mounting alarmingly in high school age groups?

That the blame for these conditions is placed largely with parents who often overlook the proper training of their children who are too wicked or too busy to provide their children with the proper Christian companions?

That every neglected child sooner or later brings grief and sorrow to his parents (his prodigal parents)?

POLICEMAN USES HIS BIBLE WITH GANGS
Deputy Inspector Conrad S. Jensen is a 5-foot-7, 230 pounder, and is six feet one inch tall. He is a crack pistol shot, and has been with the New York Police Force for 23 years. He performs his duties in one of the city's toughest neighborhoods, not only with a strong arm, but also with spiritual stimulation. The Bible is his handbook. It is not a rare sight to see him kneeling in prayer with a pair of teen-age boys. "It is the only real answer for any situation," he says. "What most of these people need is a little love and attention."

He has proved this in the 23rd Precinct, which embraces Manhattan's discordant radically variegated, gang ridden East Harlem. "I try to discharge my duties first as a Christian, then as a policeman," he said. "When a person comes to the place that he realizes the Word of God does have the answer to the problems of society, it is amazing what happens," he observed.

The high crime rate has declined in the motley, jumbled East Harlem with its Italian, Negro, Irish, German, Puerto Rican population and the largest concentration of youth gangs in town, during Jensen's tenure.

He urges his force to make friends with the residents, to help them with their troubles. Officers are sent into schools to give talks. "We try to latch on to every opportunity to do good," he said.

His office door is always open to any youngster who wants to see him. Jensen keeps a Bible on his desk. In discussions with upset families or worried teen-agers, he often reads suitable passages from it.

"I don't believe the answer is in new houses and new playgrounds, but in new natures," he said. "They can be changed, and only the gospel can change anybody."

Did you know that the Bible plainly states, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6).

Did you know that the Bible places this responsibility of training on the parents? "And ye fathers (and mothers), provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" (Ephesians 6:4).

God told Abraham to look at the stars of heaven and see if he could number them. The Lord said, "So shall thy seed be." Abraham ". . . believed in the LORD and he counted it to him for righteousness" (Genesis 15:5, 6). The Lord said, ". . . Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him? For I know him, that he will command his children, and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; . . ." (Genesis 18:18, 19).

As a God-fearing man, God trusted Abraham to fulfill his mission and people the earth with God-fearing children.

THE ROLE OF CHRISTIAN PARENTS

1. Christian parents believe on the Lord (Acts 16:31).

2. Christian parents are born again. "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: . . ." (1 John 5:1). ". . . whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world" (1 John 5:4).

3. Christian parents are saved by grace through faith in the Son of God. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Ephesians 2:8-10).

4. Christian parents are active and faithful church members (no exceptions).

5. Christian parents are God-fearing parents who will people the earth with Christian children. God said to Adam and Eve, "Be fruitful, multiply, replenish the earth and subdue it."

Jonathan Edwards lived in the state of New York. He believed in Christian training. He married a girl of like character.

Christian Parents

From this union they have studied 729 descendants. Out of this family have come 300 preachers, 65 college professors, 13 university presidents, 60 authors of good books, three United States congressmen and one vice-president of the United States; and outside of Aaron Burr, a grandson of Edwards, who married a questionable character, the family has not cost the state a single dollar.

CHRISTIAN PARENTS PEOPLING THE EARTH

1. God told Abraham that he would people the earth with children "... as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice" (Genesis 22:17, 18).

2. The Early Church, under the ministry of the apostles, grew into multiplied thousands in a short while. They soon peopled the earth. Three thousand were saved in one day. "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls" (Acts 2:41). "And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women" (Acts 5:14). These multitudes of early Christians were scattered abroad over the face of the earth by persecution, and they "... went every where preaching the word" (Acts 8:4).

3. The People's Church of Toronto, Canada, has a missionary budget of $300,000 yearly. This one church supports 350 missionaries on foreign fields. This one church is literally peopling the earth.

4. There is a church in Chattanooga, Tennessee, that has twelve thousand members. They operate several branch Sunday schools. They operate a school to train Christian workers, missionaries and pastors. They have organized several branch churches. They operate several Sunday school buses every Sunday. This church is really peopling the earth.

5. The Park Street Church of Boston, Massachusetts, has a missionary budget of over $250,000 each year.

6. The Edgemont Free Will Baptist Church of Durham, North Carolina, has a missionary budget of about $10,000.

7. The Grace Free Will Baptist Church of Greenville, North Carolina, has a missionary budget of $1,500 this year. The church supports a missionary in India.

8. A church in Detroit, Michigan, grew from 250 to 2,200 in ten years by faithful visitation.

We could name hundreds of cases where God's people, Christian parents in the churches, are peopling the earth with Christian children.

Prodigal parents beget prodigal children. Christian parents beget Christian children. Like begets like.

PEOPLING THE EARTH WITH CHRISTIAN CHILDREN

"When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also" (2 Timothy 1:5).

"And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 3:15).

The best way for Christian parents to people the earth with Christian children is the family altar. Prayer and Bible study are carried on daily around the family altar. I do not say this in a boasting way, but in gratitude to God for Christian parents I must say it: All I am today and all I ever expect to be I owe to my Christian parents and to God. There were seven children in my family, and three times a day at mealtime we got on our knees in prayer. At bedtime, my father read or let someone else read a few verses from the Bible and he explained it to us. We sat and took in his words, like a little bird takes in the worms. When Father was gone, Mother did the same thing. Each night we would have prayer together. Those were precious years. All of my brothers and sisters are Christians, and today they are active in their church. They will not depart from it.

If our children are to be Christians, we, as parents, had better wake up and start a family altar. There around the family altar, we can teach them the Word of God daily, pray with them, lead them one by one to the Saviour, and train them for Christ. The family that prays together not only stays together, but also goes to Sunday school and church together. If we, as parents, are to people the earth with Christian children, we must wake up and take our children to Sunday school and church regularly.

After the family altar, the Sunday school is next in importance. The church of Jesus Christ is the foundation of our Christian civilization. If there is to be a church tomorrow, there must be a Bible-teaching Sunday school today. Eighty-two per cent of the church world came out of Sunday school classes.

The Sunday school is important because the Bible is the textbook. The late Woodrow Wilson said, "There can be no liberal education without a knowledge of the Bible." Daniel Webster said in the halls of congress, "The Bible is our safe guide. So long as we take it as our instructor for conduct and character, we will go on prospering in the future as in the past. At the moment we relegate it from our lives, catastrophe will come to us such as we have not known before."

Of our American youth 17,000,000 not receive Christian instruction last year. There are 37,000,000 young people, under the age 25, without any kind of religious instruction. The breakers are ahead, according to Mr. Webster. The Sunday school is absolutely imperative. The Sunday school is important because it takes the child in the formative years of its life. This is when destinies are settled. James H. Thompson, the psychologist, said, "A person rarely changes his habits after he has reached majority years." A questionnaire was sent to 1,500 preachers, asking them the date of their conversion. The average was 12 years.

The Sunday school makes Christian citizenship this is the objective. It produces Christian citizenship, and from its 37,000,000 pupils come the Christian fathers and mothers who will save our Christian heritage. Christian parents produce Christian children.

SOME SUNDAY SCHOOL POINTERS

Judge Fawcett of Brooklyn, New York, said that out of 2,700 boys brought before his court not one of them was a Sunday school pupil.

Prodigal parents produce prodigal children. A western judge said, when a 16-year-old girl was brought before him, "Why didn't the parents of this child keep her in Sunday school? Sunday school girls do not come to see me."

The Sunday school takes the child during the plastic period of life. Age 13 is the peak of conversion. It was said by Fawcett Sunday that only one person out of every 1,000 is ever converted after Age 20. Only one person out of 40,000 is converted after Age 40.

SHOULD I FORCE MY CHILD TO GO TO SUNDAY SCHOOL?

Shall I make my child go to Sunday school and church? Yes!

How do you answer Junior when he comes to breakfast on Monday morning and announces to you that he is not going to school anymore? You know! Junior goes. How do you answer when Junior comes in very much besmudged and says "I'm not going to take a bath." Junior bathes, doesn't he?

Why all this timidity then in the matter of his spiritual guidance and growth? Why not let him wait and decide what church he'll go to when he's old enough? You're kidding. You don't wait until he's old enough to decide whether he wants to go to school or not to start his education. You don't wait until he's old enough to decide

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF ELDER W. W. GURKIN

At the request of the conference held with the church at Little Creek in Greene County, North Carolina, I write a brief sketch of the life and death of Elder W. W. Gurkin.

He was born March 2, 1853, and died November 2, 1898, making him 45 years and 8 months old when he departed this life.

He was married to Miss Mary E. Caskey on December 3, 1874. She is a lady of high standing and Christian character. He has two dead children that preceded him to the spirit world. A wife and six living children are left to mourn his loss, but not as those that have no father.

Brother Gurkin joined the Free Will Baptist church at Corinth, Martin County, North Carolina, on the fourth Sunday in October, 1877, under the preaching of Elder Mallechi Linton, and was licensed to preach by Elder B. B. Albritton, October 18, 1886. After preaching for them two years, he then moved his membership to Roanok Grove and on September 12, 1888, the church extended his license at Roanok Grove by Elder A. A. Tyson, pastor. After then, he was ordained main elder of the church at Roanok Grove in good standing until his death.

Brother Gurkin was a Christian gentleman, a good husband, a kind father and a good preacher, and was well beloved by all who knew him. He preached twelve years, and was faithful to the cause of his Heavenly Father, and was an instrument in the hands of God to the conversion of many precious souls in all his churches that he served as pastor. At home he was kind and his door was always open to his brethren and friends as they came and went. His house was always his brother preacher's home.

Brother Gurkin will be missed by all who knew him. He was never known to turn anyone from his door or his table. He was always quiet in his manner, apt to teach, and giving good advice to his comrades and friends. He was a man that possessed great patience and always appeared to be in a good humor. He seemed to be strictly honest in all his business with his fellow man and very modest indeed. He was fervent in the Spirit, diligent in business, and always serving the Lord. His triumph in prospect of death was much like that charge of Paul's to Timothy. It seems as if in his dying hours he could but say to all, "Watch thou in all things, endure afflictions."

He has done the work of an evangelist and made full proof of his ministry while he had health. "For I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." His life seemed to be complete and his work well done.

In his last hours, I asked him if he knew me. He said it was Brother Davenport. I then asked him if he was trusting in that God that he preached to others, and he said, "Oh, yes," with a precious smile upon his face. He bore his afflictions well; then the Lord said unto him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Me. G. Davenport

(The above obituary was copied from the minutes of Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church, Greene County, North Carolina, November 10-12, 1898.)

FINAL CALL FOR JUNE GENERAL CRAGMONT YOUTH CONFERENCE

To Young People of North Carolina:

This is the final call to register for the General Youth Conference sponsored by the North Carolina Free Will Baptist Sunday School Convention at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, June 13-18, 1960.

Why do we call this the General Youth Conference?

First, it is planned to give instruction in all phases of our denominational program as it appeals to young people. There will be an illuminated Sunday school course for prospective teachers, L. E. Ballard; there will be a study of the Free Will Baptist League Manual, Billy Morris; there will be Y. P. A. and G. T. A. instruction, Mrs. R. B. Crawford; there will be missionary features, stories and mission films—perhaps a missionary; there will be counseling on youth problems, a new and novel plan including skits, stories, correct way demonstrations. Then the Reverend Earl Glenn is planning some wonderful vacation features for the young people. This conference is being especially planned for those who can only attend one conference during the season and need general help to become better Christians and workers for the Lord. Ages: 10 up—but if you lack a little. . . .

Second, a successful young evangelist will conduct a youth revival in the evenings.

Third, these people will see that all goes well for a good time along with a spiritual uplift: Earl Glenn and Billy Morris for the special features, Mr. Glenn will be camp supervisor; Mrs. R. B. Crawford for the State Auxiliary Convention; "Ma" Ballard, on the bus and at the assembly, just in case. . . . "Pa" Ballard will be around, too; some of the finest young people of North Carolina; and you—well, we hope!

Cost is $30 to cover everything except personal spending money. Busses pick up passengers at New Bern, Kinston, Greenville, Wilson, Smithfield, Raleigh and Durham. Full instructions to all who register. Registering is simple: Just send names, addresses and ages, along with $5.00 deposit to Rev. L. E. Ballard, Box 338, Scotland Neck, North Carolina.

Hurry up! We'll be pulling out soon.

Each One on Earth

by Ila R. Monday

A soul, a life, holds much in store;
The schooling of a man,
That brings each day a lesson learned,
Years widen scope and plan.

Each life's e'er seeking pleased things,
The rest a good sleep lends,
Enjoyment of hearty foods,
The presence of good friends.

Yet, somehow in each one there lies,
A deep and aching prod,
Unsatisfied till he has found
His heal-for-heart in God.

Associate Hints Graham Plans Crusade in Russia

Dr. Paul S. Rees, an associate of Evangelist Billy Graham, says an evangelistic crusade in Moscow within three years would not be at all impossible. Returning from a visit to Russia and the Far East, Dr. Rees recently reported that although two applications for a Billy Graham campaign in Moscow have been flatly refused by Russian authorities, there appears to have been some relaxation of the more stringent rules and restrictions since Mr. Khrushchev came to power. He believes any visit by Mr. Graham to Russia would get a tremendous reception from the Russian public.

Commenting on the present state of religion in Russia, Dr. Rees said, "Religion is restricted. In Moscow, a city of five million people, Protestants are allowed only one congregation. This congregation numbers 1,600—packed into a church which has seating for only 600. Watching those Russian people at worship, it is easy to see how impossible it would be for the communists to destroy religious faith. Their faces are evidence of the greatest devotion."

He admits that the number of young people attending churches in Russia is relatively small. He blames this on the Russian policy of refusing to allow persons under 18 years of age to identify themselves with any religion.

U. S. Church Membership Trailing Population

Church membership in the United States, as a whole, is steadily losing ground in a race to keep up with the expanding population, according to a recent interdenominational survey. Every year 1,000,000 persons are being added to the 66,000,000 Americans who have no church affiliation. In 24 states, more than half of the total population lives without religious ties, while in 110 counties it has been found that 80 per cent of the people are similarly unaffiliated. Little hope for improvement is held by experts. They point out that the estimated growth of the nation in the next 10 years will be 40,000,000, a challenge far beyond the means of the organized faiths and denominations to meet.

This analysis of the situation was presented recently to the Board of American Missions of the United Lutheran Church by the Rev. Dr. Donald L. Houser, executive secretary. He noted that his church would have to organize 100 congregations annually to keep pace with the population increase. The board, he added, has plans for 60 in the United States and Canada this year. "The failure to meet the problem by organizing more congregations," concluded Dr. Houser, "will become worse in the immediate future. Lack of funds, not opportunity, is the principal reason."

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Do the genealogies in Luke and Matthew contradict each other? I do not think they do but I heard a preacher say so. I accept the whole Bible as being inspired. Please explain.—Derwood Jones, Ohio.

Answer: In Matthew we find Joseph's genealogy and in Luke, Mary's. Some may question the reason for the Holy Spirit's recording the genealogy of Joseph, since he was not Jesus' father. It was because that through Joseph, the foster parent of Jesus and head of the Nazareth home, Jesus Christ had the legal right to His Father David's throne. If there had been a legitimate king of David's throne during his reigning over the Jews while Joseph lived, it would have been none other than Joseph himself. And as the eldest son of Mary, which was the eldest son in that home, Jesus Christ our Lord would have had every right to succeed Joseph as king.

Now back to the two genealogies. It is indeed both interesting and enlightening to study them carefully. Whereas Matthew traces Joseph's ancestry back no further than Abraham, since Matthew was especially written for the Jews, and this gave ample proof to the fact that Jesus was eligible, as Joseph's foster son, to the throne of David, for Jesus was the legitimate heir to Abraham's land and therefore the covenant heir to David's throne. Luke, on the other hand, traces Mary's ancestry back to Adam, which was the son of God; for Luke is showing that Jesus Christ is the perfect Son of man, the Saviour of the entire world. It is necessary, however, to note that in these genealogies the Holy Spirit exercises most scrupulous care in protecting the virgin birth of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Matthew uses the word, begat, all the way until he arrives at Matthew 1:16. He refrains from saying that Joseph begat Jesus. He does this, there is no doubt, in order to sacredly guard the precious fact that our Lord Jesus Christ was born of the virgin Mary. On the other hand, Luke employs different phraseology, omitting the words in italics, which in the English Bible are always put in by the translator to preserve the full meaning. "And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli" (Luke 3:23). Therefore, according to Matthew, Jacob begat Joseph; and according to Luke, Joseph . . . was of Heli, that is, the son-in-law of Heli. From this we see that both Matthew and Luke are writing in keeping with the Jewish custom, keeping all their genealogies in the names of men rather than women. It is worthwhile again that we note how the Holy Spirit kept sacred guard over the truth of the virgin birth of Christ, according to Luke. It is worthwhile that we pay strict attention to the fact that Joseph came through the line of David and Solomon, kings of Judah. But instead of Mary's coming through Solomon, it was through Nathan, another son of David, that she sprang. "Which was the son of Melea, which was the son of Menan, which was the son of Mattatha, which was the son of Nathan, which was the son of David" (Luke 3:31).

An early writer on this subject has said, "Anyone who calls these two genealogies contradictory only manifests his ignorance of the way to read the original Greek—or for that matter, our English translations; or he shows that he doubts the infallible Word of God." In my opinion such a person would come in the class described by Paul, "Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools" (Romans 1:22). All so-called contradictions of the Bible turn out in about the same way. Dr. Grant Stroh, deceased Bible teacher of Moody Bible Institute, used to say, "Valid faith believes more than weak faith when it has the grounds for the belief." There are many infallible proofs in the Scripture to testify to its accuracy and unity; some of the best of these require effort beyond casual reading to ascertain. The master mind that wrote all the Bible knew how to give us a perfect Book complete in every way; therefore, there are no contradictions to observe in it in its entirety. Only the unregenerate, finite mind of some septic, presumes to find contradictions in the sacred book. Any imperfections of any kind that associate themselves with the Bible are man made. "And account that the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you; As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures unto their own destruction" (2 Peter 3:16). The original writers were controlled by the Holy Spirit who caused them to write each word of His own choosing. "And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All scripture given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Timothy 3:15-17).

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

This word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

THE MESSAGE OF THE CHURCH

"O Zion, that bringeth good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; life it up, be not afraid, say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!" (Isaiah 40:9).

Last week I tried to give you Isaiah's conception of the model church in the gospel age. Now, I want to lead you in thinking of the message of the church in the same age as seen by Isaiah about seven hundred years before Christ founded His Church and gave it anew its message and mission.

The text speaks twice of bringing good tidings. We are told that the word, gospel, means, good tidings or good news. Then, surely, God has ordained from the beginning that the church should be the messenger of the good news that He has made our redemption a reality in Christ His Son.

The preaching, or publishing, the Word of God is the chief business of the Church Christ founded. We are told of the apostles that, "Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word" (Acts 8:4). This matter of preaching the Word of God takes on a number of aspects, for we are commanded not to neglect the preaching of the Cro preaching Christ and Him crucified; the preaching of the resurrection of Christ; the preaching of His second coming for His redeemed people. All these things, and many more, are parts of good tidings which Isaiah spoke of, and that the New Testament gives us the message of the church.

J. B. Phillips, in one of his recent books wrote, "There is another side to the preaching of Christ crucified. There is much in it which appears to deny a God of love; and, to be brutally truthful, there is much in it which makes men resentful of a Supreme Power who sits, as it were, in celestial comforts in the heavens, serene and insulated from the world's sin and suffering. Men may indeed feel afraid of such a Being; they may try to seek His favor or attempt to mollify His anger, but they do not love Him. But when they see that the immeasurable love of God expressed itself by a personal visit, a personal redemption, their whole idea of God is radically altered. When a man comes to what lengths his God will go to bring him to himself, the springs of love are not infrequently unsealed.

"From the tiny church in Japan the same message is producing the same results in human life."

When Christ commissioned His Church to evangelize the world He told His disciples, "... Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16). No other message than the gospel need ever be sent by the true Church. In Luke we find the Christ-given message still more explicit and direct, but how often do we remember it or refer to it? Let us hear these words and teach them: "Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24:46, 47).

As a closing thought, and as an assurance of results for those churches who bring Christ's message, and only His message, to the world, let us think seriously on the closing verses of the book of Mark.

"So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs and followings. Amen" (Mark 16:19, 20).

A lame foot may tread the right road. Better be a lame man on the right road than a good man on the wrong road.

"Impossible" is a hopeful word, for it is direct invitation to let God in.

The Church Usher

WHEN you go to church Sunday you will very likely be met right inside the door by a courteous gentleman who will greet you pleasantly, whether he sees you for the first time or he is an old friend of yours. With a program, bulletin or hymnbook in his hand for you, he will beckon you to follow him. He will lead you to your favorite pew, or if you are a stranger he will lead you to the best available seat in the house. He is a good man to follow. He is the church usher.

Who is he? He may be old or young, rich or poor. He may be a bank president or a farmer or a machinist or a school principal or a college professor or a merchant or a blacksmith or a high school student. He may be dressed in an ordinary business suit, or if it is a big city church, he may be appropriately garbed in a frock coat and striped trousers. He may wear a flower, or some other badge of office. But whatever his garb, it will be clean and well pressed and he will look his best. He must, for he is the church usher.

His is a labor of love. You can be sure of that. Others who serve you within the sanctuary may receive a monetary remuneration for their services. The preacher gets a salary. The organist, the choir director,

Exalting the Christ—That Christ May Be All in All

(1 Corinthians 1:23, 24; Colossians 3:11)

1. We are to receive Christ (John 1:12).

Many accept Him, but do not receive Him into their lives (Ephesians 2:19; 3:17-19; Colossians 1:27).

2. We are to confess Christ (Matthew 10:32, 33).

We are to confess that Jesus is Lord (Romans 10:9, A. S. V.; John 20:28).

3. We are to make Christ first (Colossians 1:18).

Only as we make Him the Head can there be unity in the body (Ephesians 1:22, 4:12, 15).

4. We are to crown Christ Lord of all (Hebrews 2:9).

In the individual life; we are living in an antichrist age (Matthew 28:18, A. S. V.; 1 Corinthians 2:2).

5. We are to pray in Christ's name (John 16:23, 24).

He is the only Mediator; many overlook the privilege (John 5:23; Hebrews 12:24; 1 Timothy 2:5).

6. We are to live for Christ (Galatians 2:20).

Our life will be a testimony to His saving power (Luke 8:37-40; Matthew 5:14-16; Philippians 2:15, 16).

7. We are to acknowledge Christ (Acts 8:5).

Many study to avoid the mention of His name (John 19:28; Proverbs 3:6).—Rev. C. C. Maple.

Walking Home with Jesus

Edith M. Preston

Walking home with Jesus
Along life's sunlit way,
I do not fear whatever comes
Nor what the world may say.
My hand held close in His dear grasp,
My heart attuned to His,
Wild storms may break and winds may rage,
The road I cannot miss.

Walking home with Jesus
I know the world is sweet,
Its scenes of beauty filled with joy,
It's fruitfulness replete.
But still we journey on our way
To happy homes above
Where all earth's strivings and demands
Are drowned in endless love.

Walking home with Jesus
Is pleasant, restful day.
The sun is always shining now
Though clouds may block its way.
The silver cloak of sorrow's pain
Has golden lining bright,
For walking home with Jesus is
A pathway cleared with light.

General Lee Recommended Enemy!

Asked about his opinion of an officer, General Robert E. Lee spoke highest praise of him. A fellow officer, hearing General Lee's words of praise expressed astonishment to General Lee, saying, "Why, General, that man is one of your worst enemies. He never misses an opportunity to speak illy and unkindly of you!" Replied General Lee, "Sir, I wasn't asked that man's opinion of me. I was asked my opinion of that man!"

"Let all . . . evil speaking be put away from you" (Ephesians 4:31).—Selected.

QUOTES

GOSSIPY EARS

If it were not for so many gossip ears, there would not be so many gossip tongues. So many of us human beings enjoy gossip. We like for our comrades to have something to tell us about someone else. Many people just take pride in listening to gossip about someone, especially about those whom we want to hear something degraded—perhaps about someone we do not like for one reason or another. Perhaps the reason we do not like has been exalted in society or politics or even in religion. We are envious; there is a spark of jealousy in our hearts. This being true, that jealousy makes our ears enjoy gossip.

I would like to tell the story I read in a letter form. I may not give it to you word for word, but maybe you will get the gist of it anyway. A new girl had moved to town with her parents. On the first day of school, this girl was walking along with a neighbor with whom she had gotten acquainted, a least partially acquainted. On reaching the campus, the new girl spoke to someone who called, "Hi!" Her acquaintance said to her, "If I were you, I would have nothing to do with that girl. Why, she is . . ." About that time the newcomer said, "Would you say what you are about to say to me to that girl?" The other girl answered, "No." "Well, then," said the newcomer, "then do not tell it to me." This girl who was new in town did not have gossip ears. If we did not have so many gossip ears, we would not have so many gossip tongues.

My father used to say to us, "Boys, if you cannot say anything good about a person, say nothing." We can condemn things in a person and not call names. After the person who has done wrong will get on and begin to remedy his ills. One time when I was preaching, I got down pretty hard on adultery, saying that some church officers and religious leaders thought more of some other lady or woman than they did of their own wife. At the door of the church afterwards, I shook hands with a Sunday school teacher who said, "Who has been talking to you about me?" He was really up in the air, and he concluded, "I'll see you later." I said, "All right." I did not know from the tone of his voice but what I might have trouble with him. Well, he saw me later, and was so deeply under conviction that he confessed his relationship with a member of the church. It would not have been good ethics nor right to have exposed his name. A gossip tongue might have enjoyed the telling. Let the Holy Ghost do the talking in my way.

One minister, several years ago, started to tell me something concerning a brother minister and said, "He ought to be carried before the character committee of the conference." Then I said, "Will you report him to the committee?" He said, "No, I don't want my name in it." The charges against ministers have to be presented in writing and signed by the presenter. (See No. 4, Page 47 of 1953 Treatise of the National Association.)

The treatise also says that disputes should be settled according to Matthew 18:15-17 which reads: "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." This is God's way, but often we take another course.

Politicians, that is many of them, try to get elected by destroying the opposer. Some politicians will spread every ugly thing that he is told, regardless to the truth of the matter. Now all politicians are not gossip hearers, nor do they spread false rumors against their political brothers, but some will. Some preachers also try to build themselves up by magnifying the faults of others. I found that out when I was young. One of my brother ministers, when I had been elected to the pastorate of a church which he had been pastoring, said, "You've called a money preacher now. He will certainly preach money to you." This is what I was informed that he said, but I have always wished that I had never heard the accusation.

Yes, some people try to build themselves up by running the other fellow down. I try to keep my ears from being the gossip kind. In almost every church you visit, you will hear some gossip about some members. When I was doing evangelistic work years ago, I would tell people not to tell me the faults of any of the members. I would make this request at the first service. Why did I make that request? Simply because I wanted to feel free to preach against sin without some fellow hanging around and saying, "Who has been talking to you about me?"

I remember hearing an old-fashioned Methodist minister say, "I had a lady in one of the churches I served who kept something going about someone all the time. She caused trouble between the sisters very often." Then this good man said, "I prepared a sermon on gossip, and did everything but call the name of this sister. When I finished my message, she came to me and said, 'Brother, I am so glad that you preached that sermon this morning, because Sister Jones was here and she ought to have heard it—she's always talking about someone.'" You see, a gossip tongue can always see the mote in the other fellow's eye, but can never see the beam in his own.

This tract which I read on this subject had this to say:

"A gossip tongue is a dangerous thing,
If its owner is evil at heart;
He can give whom he chooses many a sting
That will woefully linger and smart.
But the gossip tongue would be balked in its plan
For heart burning and tears,
If it were not helped out by the man
Who has the gossip ears."

THE CHURCH USHER (continued from page nine)

the sexton, even the man who "counts the collection" may get some pay, but you can depend on it that the usher gets none, and yet he very likely is the most pleasant-looking of them all. He has to be, for he is the church usher.

Upon him depends very largely the impression that strangers within the gates receive of that particular congregation. He is the real contact man. He must be a mind reader and a diplomat of the first water. He must have the ability to satisfy the stranger's unspoken desire. He must generally lead the hesitant and diffident and subordinate himself to the brusque and aggressive. He is the personified welcome of the church to the people—for he is the church usher.

He is a minister of worship in the Lord's house. By his decorum, his Christian gentlemanliness, his reverence and his observant service of others, he helps to create a spirit of worship. He makes us think of the amiableness of the tabernacle as expressed in the eighty-fourth Psalm—" . . . I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, . . ." That is the motto of the church usher.

Next time we go to church, let us take the hand of the church usher and thank him for his service. It may give him greater joy in his service to know that it is appreciated—for the church usher is just a man. —The Bond.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

TEST DAY

by Betty Steele Everett

DAN LOTT walked slowly along the street. His red-topped head was bent, and he frowned as he studied the list of history dates clutched in his hand.

"Hey, Dan, wait up!"

Dan turned around and then grinned as Jim Otis came running up.

"Boy, you were away off," Jim laughed. "What's so interesting that you don't even hear your best friend calling?"

Dan sighed. "These notes for the history test today. I think I've got everything straight except these awful dates we have to know. I've studied and studied them and still I get them all mixed up. And I just have to get a good grade on this test so I can stay on the honor roll."

Jim asked, "Have you prayed about it?"

"Sure, but I still keep getting them all mixed up."

"Well, I'll pray about it, too, and you just remember that the Lord's with you in the test, too."

Dan sighed. "I know what you say is usually right, Jim. After all, if it weren't for you, I'd still be lost and without Christ. But I'm afraid this test is something I've got to do alone."

Jim stopped walking and laid a hand on Dan's shoulder. His voice was soft, but definite. "No Christian ever has to do anything alone, Dan. Thinking that is a big mistake that can lead to trouble. God's ready to help us all the time."

The boys walked on without saying anything more. They were almost to the school when Jim said, "There goes Mitch Cameron. You know, if it weren't for him and the way he talks to the other fellows, I think we'd be able to get some of them interested in coming to Sunday school and church."

"I know," Dan agreed. "He keeps telling them there's no difference between a Christian and anyone else. I wonder what he's got against us."

"He says he saw a religious man put some old people out of their house once, because they couldn't pay the rent. It must have made a big impression on him because he still holds that against anyone who says he's a Christian. All we can do is try to prove to him that having Christ makes you different."

"Sometimes I think we are getting close to some of the fellows, especially Bill and Tom. Then Mitch comes along and makes those cracks, and the guys lose interest in what I'm trying to say," Dan said.

"Well, maybe someday we can prove it to him. I've got to go to the office for a minute. See you later, and remember what I said about those dates."

Dan worried through his first two classes. Then it was time for the history class.

Just before the class began, Mitch said, "Those dates are pure murder. Even with that printed list Miss Allen gave us to study they're tough. Danny boy, you got all those dates straight in your mind? Don't forget it is history class and write down some Bible stuff."

Dan fought down the anger rising in him. He ignored the laughing around him.

Miss Allen handed out the test papers, and Dan groaned silently. There were more dates than anything else.

"I'll never get them," he thought desperately. He started to write the answers to the questions he knew. The dates were still foggy in his mind.

He was chewing the end of his yellow pencil when Mitch sauntered up the aisle toward the pencil sharpener. As he passed Dan's desk a slip of paper dropped from his hand.

Dan leaned over to pick it up for him. Then he suddenly froze. The paper was part of the study list Miss Allen had given them—the part with all the dates!

Dan hesitated, but it was too late—he had seen most of the dates. Some of them were the ones he had not been able to remember.

Mitch was coming back now, his eyes laughing. "Thanks, Danny boy. I guess I dropped that."

Dan handed him the paper silently, and then turned back to the test.

He finished answering all the questions that did not ask for dates. Then he looked at the column of events that had to have the correct dates. Before, he had not been able to remember them. Now, having seen the dates on Mitch's dropped list, he could not seem to forget them.

He stared at the paper before him. His thoughts were going fast. "I probably would've remembered some of them," he assured himself. "Then I could've gotten the rest by elimination. It wouldn't have been so hard."

"But how many would I really have remembered?" he then wondered. "Maybe none of them if I got too nervous."

"But this isn't really cheating," he decided. "I couldn't help it if Mitch dropped that paper right by my desk. I did know what it was when I picked it up for him. And how could I help seeing what was on it? It isn't like I asked him to give me the dates. It was just a good break."

Dan wrote rapidly now. In a few minutes he had finished the test. He knew he would get the good grade he needed to stay on the honor roll.

He was almost to Miss Allen's desk with his paper when he suddenly remembered Jim's words. The Lord is with you in the test, too."

Dan suddenly stopped. What did the Lord think about his using Mitch's dropped paper—even if it had been an accident?

Miss Allen was staring at him, her hand outstretched to take his finished paper. "You are through, aren't you, Dan?" she asked anxiously.

Dan took a deep breath. All he had to do now was hand over his paper. It would be so easy—no one had seen the dropped paper on the floor. But he hesitated, and suddenly he heard himself explaining the whole thing to Miss Allen.

"I filled all the dates in, but I don't know how many I would have remembered for myself. I kept getting mixed up at home when I finished."

Miss Allen smiled. "I would say you aren't a bit mixed up now, Dan. Look, suppose you stay after school today and I'll give you another test on the dates."

The bell for lunch time rang just as Dan finished thanking her. He went out into the hall. To his surprise, Mitch brushed past him angrily. But Bill and Tom waited for him, shuffling their feet uneasily.

"Boy, Dan, we sure didn't think you were going to say anything to her about those dates," Bill said.

Dan stared. "I don't get you. You couldn't have known anything about it if no one saw anything."

"But we knew all about it. Mitch told us yesterday that he'd prove once and for all that Christians are just like everyone else when it counts. He said anyone could go around praying and singing hymns all the time when it doesn't count."

Dan nodded. "But that isn't necessarily being a Christian—even if Christians

The Mote Hunters

by Alice E. Lupton

A mote hunter goes along the way rehearsing for motes the livelong day.
The good he sees except his own—
in some soul be heaven-born.

They carp, find fault, complain and whine because they never see anything fine in anyone else, no matter how good the person may be, or how meek his mood.

Some people rather complain and whine because others treat them very unkind;
The beam is so great in their own narrow eyes.

They cannot see plainly the good and the wise.

Somebody is always treating them wrong,
bringing some injury and bringing them harm.
They are so innocent, they never can see the beam that they carry is large as can be.

The searchlight of God is pointing them out

With their beams and flaws floating about—

At every one who on Jesus will call,
They will find that His promises stand for us all.

There is a comfort that meets every ill
When mote hunters go out to catch and to kill.

The joy of true living for Christ every day,
And in the end that they've lost the right way.

Mote hunters never see the beam in their eyes;

They are never guilty, nor ever tell lies.
For this kind will gather around and about—

When they find a mote, they make a great shout!

Stop and consider the harm that you do
When looking for motes, its no matter who—

The good or the bad, your own will shine
out,

Just as you're an outcast within and without.

Fruits of the Spirit

by Jaunes R. Miller

“. . . the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; . . .” (Mark 4:28)

LET not without certain other influences upon it. If the sun does not shine upon it, and if there is no rain from heaven, the seed will never germinate, however rich the soil. The human heart is the soil in which the seeds of truth grow; but it must have the sunshine and rain of divine grace upon it before it will produce any spiritual fruit.

A gentleman tore down a building that had stood for many years in his yard. He smoothed over the ground, and left it. The warm spring rains fell upon it, and the sunshine flooded it; and in a few days there sprang up multitudes of little flowers, unlike any that grew in the neighborhood. Where the building had stood was once a garden, and the seeds had lain in the soil without moisture, light or warmth all the years. So soon as the sunshine and the rain touched them, they sprang up into life and beauty.

So oftentimes the seeds of truth lie long in a human heart, growing not, because the light and warmth of the Holy Spirit are shut away from them by sin and unbelief; but after long years the heart is opened in some way to the influences of the divine Spirit, and the seeds, living still, shoot up into beauty. The instructions of a mother may lie in a heart, fruitless, from childhood to old age, and yet at last may save the soul.

When we have sown the heavenly seed, we should continually pray that God would pour His Spirit, like rain and sunshine, upon the heart where it lies to quicken it into life. Then, for ourselves, we should seek always to keep our hearts open to every invigorating influence of the grace of God. We need to pray constantly for the rain to come down, else our hearts will lie bare and sterile, though filled with the divine seeds.—Copyright E. R. A., 1960.

Mrs. M. N. Whitley

On April 14, just at the close of day, God called Mrs. M. N. Whitley home to be with Him. She had been confined to her bed for four years and one month. About an hour before she quietly crossed the border, she had her Baptist paper in her hand and asked me to read to her about Easter from the paper. She loved her church and was proud of her Free Will Baptist affiliation.

Rich Toward God

(Lesson for May 29)

Lesson: Matthew 6:19-21, 24-34.
Bible Text: Matthew 6:20, 21.

I. INTRODUCTION

Materialism has been and continues to be the great evil of the day. It is an easy thing for people to become so engrossed in making a living that they forget to make life.

The greed for material possessions grows a person until, if he is not very careful, it will choke out from his nature everything that is noble and elevating.

Material things have a part to play and of great importance, but they are small when compared to spiritual things. Material values are measured in time, but spiritual things are of eternity.

The Lord Jesus realized that people were prone to worry too much about material things, for this reason He said: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added to you." It takes a great deal of faith to live by this promise, but if we can acquire that faith, it will free our lives of most of the anxieties that perplex us.—Senior Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Greed is commonly the sin of the rich, and worry the sin of the poor; but the order may become exactly reversed (Matthew 6:19).
2. It is not a sin to own property, but it is a sin to value property above God (Vv. 20, 21).
3. The weakness of earthly treasures is shown in their instability and their insecurity (Vv. 20, 21).
4. Treasures laid up in heaven will serve to draw our hearts constantly heavenward (Vv. 20, 21).
5. Cross-eyed man looks only toward heaven, but the one who is merely cross-eyed tries to look at heaven and earth at the same time (Vv. 23, 24).
6. The unsaved man can never form a correct estimate of values, because his eye is not "single" to the light of God (Vv. 22, 24).
7. Double service is impossible. Friendship with the world is always enmity with God (Vs. 24; James 4:4).

8. The same God who made the body has also provided sufficient food for the needs of that body (Vv. 25-27).

9. The God-given glory of the flower of the field outshines the artificial glory of royal garments (Vv. 28, 29).

10. Without God's Kingdom and righteousness "these things" are of very little value (Vs. 33).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Earthly treasures fade away. It would seem to be a trite statement to say that one cannot take earthly treasures with him to heaven; however, from generation to generation, people are still acting as if accumulation of earthly treasures were the most important activity in life. Over and over, we must be reminded of the statement of Jesus. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal" (Vv. 19). As we have already said, we do not believe this teaching of Jesus forbids one to be saving and preparing for the future in this world, but we do believe He would have us remember that accumulation of goods and money in this world should be secondary to the real business of laying up treasures in heaven by faithful and consecrated living.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

2. By contrast, treasures in heaven can never be subject to such loss. These consist of obedience to the will of God; service to others in Christ's name, and the spreading of His truth in the world. The reward of such a life is everlasting; not subject to time or space, and cannot be taken away from the possessor in any manner. In concluding this thought, Jesus left no room for middle ground; no shades of gray, but only black or white—one serves God or one serves mammon (material wealth); he cannot serve both at the same time.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

3. A man might serve under a general and also a captain in the same army. But he could not accept service under and obey the commands of two officers who were at the head of opposing armies locked in desperate battle. The moment he enlisted in the army of one commander, he made himself the enemy of the other. The conflict between God and the devil is agelong and without truce.

4. Mammon is an Aramaic word which means riches. Jesus used it to typify all that the devil offers in this world to lure men away from God and heaven to seek the vain things of this world. If we set ourselves to seek the treasures of this world, we automatically enroll in the army of the devil. If we serve God, we must seek the things that are above.—The Standard Commentary.

5. "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Vs. 33). This is the most important thing in all the world for everybody, but in a special way does it apply to those who know the Lord Jesus as their Saviour and Master. This is the first obligation of believers, and they can never put first things first until they learn to seek God's Kingdom and His righteousness in the right way and at the right time. Those who seek the Kingdom of God and His righteousness first of everything else—before food and raiment and other material things, as silver and gold—will receive all the necessary things of life also. This promise is not that all our desires shall be supplied, for then we should have so many things that we don't need that we should care little about the things we actually need. How clearly this very thing is seen in the confusion that an abundance of this world's goods brings into the lives of those who have them!—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

6. Where is your treasure? A man of some means sat at his desk in his home figuring with paper and pencil. After a time he remarked, "There, I have a nice sum laid up." His little niece overheard the remark and asked, "Laid up where? In heaven?" "No, little one, I fear not," was the reply. "I should think you would want some in heaven," remarked the child, who went on with her play. The words sank deep into the man's heart, and he could not shake them off. They resulted in his conversion.—Selected.

7. Years ago Jay Gould, the multimillionaire, was traveling west by train. Engine trouble delayed the train for hours in a small town. To pass the time away, Mr. Gould walked along the main street. An auction sale was in progress. "What's being sold?" asked Mr. Gould of a man. "The church is being sold to satisfy the builder's claim against it," said the man. Mr. Gould bought the church. Three gray-haired men asked, "What are you going to do with the church?" "What is it to you what I do with it? It is mine now, to keep or to give away," said Mr. Gould. One of the men said, "That is what it is to us: We three men are trustees of that church. We were sent here to see and then report what disposal was made of it. In the church, at this moment, the entire congregation is down on their knees before God asking Him to divinely intervene in some way to save our church, so that it may not be lost to us!"

"That being the case," said Jay Gould, "the church, now free of debt, is yours!"—Selected.

8. God recommends a divine economy, the placement of our treasures in heaven. They are safe there. What is deposited in heaven will never be lost.

My dad was a hard working coal miner. We were always poor. Finally Dad was able to save several hundred dollars. In those days that was big money. A smooth talking promoter persuaded him to invest his money in the Parenti Motor Corporation. The auto never hit the market and the foolish investors lost everything. This can never happen to one who lays up for himself treasures in heaven.—Selected.

those things. But what about Mitch?"

The boys looked away from him, but finally Tom answered. "Mitch dropped that paper with the dates on it on purpose, so you couldn't help reading them. We all knew that was the toughest part for you. Mitch said you'd use them and keep quiet about it because you wanted a good grade so much."

"You mean he was testing me?" Dan asked in surprise.

"That's right," Bill said. "But he was wrong. You didn't act like the rest of us. We would have kept quiet. You know, if Mitch was wrong about that, he might be wrong about the rest of it, too. How about taking us with you to Sunday school and church next Sunday, so we can find out how to be different like you are?"

Dan grinned. "Sure thing. And, say, let's ask Mitch to go with us. He may have changed his mind a little by then."—My Pleasure.

Christian Parents . . .

whether he wishes to be clean or dirty do you? Do you wait until He's old enough to decide if he wants to take his medicine when he is sick? Do you?

What shall we say when Junior announces he doesn't like to go to Sunday school and church? That's an easy one to answer. Just be consistent. Tell him, "Junior, in our house we all go to church and Sunday school and that includes you." Your firmness and example will furnish a bridge over which youthful rebellion may travel into rich and satisfying experience in personal salvation and useful Christian living.—J. Edgar Hoover.

The parents of America can strike a telling blow against the forces which contribute to our juvenile delinquency, if our mothers and fathers will take their children to Sunday school and church regularly. Don't be a prodigal parent but be a Christian parent. Don't be a rebel against God.

Dear parent, the Bible says, "Bring them (your children) up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." You cannot do so unless you accept Christ. You cannot do so unless you repent. You cannot do so unless you confess and serve Christ.

The Sunday school is a God-given institution to provide Christian character training for children.

Parents, take your children to Sunday school and church next Sunday. They will be placed in classes with youngsters their own age. Their teachers will be sincere Christian men and women who have a warm love for children and a sympathetic understanding of child psychology. These teachers are trained for their job; they know the Bible and can interpret it in terms of the modern needs of young people.

In the Sunday school you will find friendly people. There are classes and departments for all ages, including a stimulating adult group. A warm welcome awaits your children and you. Plan to be present next Sunday.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Galatians 6:7, 8).

Prodigal parents sow to the flesh. Christian parents sow to the Spirit. Which will you do?

NEW BIBLE COLLEGE PROPERTY ALUMNI BUILDING

Pictured above is the new Bible College property at 3606 West End Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee, to be named the Alumni Building in honor of the Alumni Association's plans to raise funds to cover the $37,500 purchase price.

The property was acquired the last of March, and at present is being readied for the college's administration offices on the main floor. Plans call for the decorating and remodeling to be complete for occupancy sometime in June. The spacious second and third floors will be used for pressing school needs.

The Marching Orders of the Church

BY READING the above mentioned Scriptures, you will see what I mean the Marching Orders of the Church. In the sixteenth chapter of Matthew you will find that Jesus said that the gates of hell would not prevail against His Church. In the Acts of the Apostles, Chapter 1, Verse 8, again the disciples are told of their marching orders. In every great battle there are certain things that are necessary to be successful. In the Scripture mentioned in the Gospel of Luke, we are reminded of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. Verse 47 says that repentance and remission of sins are to be preached in His name. Now look at this: The order is to begin at Jerusalem and then among all nations. Verse 48 reminded the disciples and us that we are to be witness of these things. Practically the same message is given in the Scripture mentioned in Matthew. Jesus said, "Go ye therefore." Do we really take His words?

Let's look at the various aspects of this particular warfare. The first thing involved is that we have to have the power that our Commander said we needed. Look carefully at Acts 1:8. Have we been empowered by the Holy Spirit? Are we possessed by Him? In order to be effective soldiers we must have power. No army ever wins a battle unless there is power gained by numerical strength, weapons, knowledge and the Lord. Even so the church, when she begins to move, must have the power of the Holy Spirit. It is the Holy Spirit that moves us into the front lines! It is the Holy Spirit that gives holy boldness! It is the Holy Spirit that will use us to spread the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Ask yourself the question, "Do I have the power of the Holy Spirit?"

Let's look at another aspect just now, that is the armor of the Christian soldier. Remember ours is a spiritual conflict. In Ephesians, Chapter 6, Verse 12, we are reminded that this battle is against "... principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." It is for this reason that we are commanded in

by Rev. Winston Sweeney
Kingsport, Tennessee

TEXT: Matthew 28:18-20; Luke 24:46-48

Verse 11 to put on the whole armor of God. If we were fighting flesh and blood, we would need the armor that the world provides; but since we aren't, we need the armor that God has provided. You will note that this armor will enable us to withstand the wiles of the devil. He is a real being and a real adversary. In Verse 13, the apostle enjoins us to take the whole armor. Just part won't do; we must have it all. As you look at the Scripture you will see that no armor is provided for the back. Is there a reason for this? I believe there is a definite one—the Christian should never be on the defense, but always on the offense. If we begin to retreat before the devil—he will get us. So we must keep going forward with the banner of the King of kings.

After having been empowered and having put on the whole armor of God, are we ready to march? Yes, but there are some things that we must do as we go forward toward the objective. First we are to pray always. In a physical battle in this world during war there is always, or should be, a telephone line connecting those in the front lines with the command post in the rear. Now prayer is the Christian's telephone line to the command post. Many times in this fight of faith we need words of encouragement to go on. Many times there is a particular problem that we can't solve. Prayer connects us with the command post, the throne room, where the Captain of our salvation has the words that we need. He has the right directions for us. But we must be very careful because there may be a break in the line and we couldn't get through just at the time we would like to. The devil has many ways of breaking the connection momentarily; but thanks be unto God, we can always get it repaired pretty quickly.

Next, the Bible tells us we are to walk circumspectly. This means as we march we are to look all around. We are to be careful where we walk, how we talk, and what we see. In this same command we are told to redeem the time. Why? Because Satan is on the move, and we can't afford to let a moment be lost. Many an offense has been stopped or slowed down because all the time wasn't utilized. In this battle for the souls of men, we can't afford to let Satan get ahead of us any more than he is now. I realize many times we get weary, tired and so on, but we must keep pressing on if we want to beat Satan.

Jesus told us to always be on guard watching for the enemy, because he fights in a lot of ways. In Mark 13:22 He says, "... false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect." Also we are told in Galatians 2:4, "And that because false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage." Be on the lookout for these characters. In 1 John 4:1 we are told to "... try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." In 2 Peter 2:1 we are told that there shall be false teachers among us. These four Scriptures that we have mentioned should be sufficient to get across what the Lord was talking about. Satan many times changes himself into a minister of light, so we have to be extremely careful or he will have done his work before we are aware of it. We, as Free Will Baptists, need to march forward; we need to make progress in all our denominational work. But as we march, as we go forward, let's keep our eyes open; let's keep our guard up and stay by our marching orders!

A MISFIT

A wise preacher has said: "Though I have a scientific mind and a university degree in sociology and philosophy, and although I am an expert in social service and an authority on Browning, and though I use the language of the scientific laboratory so as to deceive the very elect into thinking I am a scholar, and have not a message of salvation and the love of Christ, I am a misfit in the pulpit and no preacher of the gospel."—Christian Life.

"The Pause That Refreshes"

by Cecille Miller

THE WORLD highly advertises its "pause that refreshes." Various media of publicity will not let us forget this catchy bit of advice.

Christians, too, have a pause that refreshes. The trouble is it is so wonderfully personal, we keep it to ourselves. I refer, not to the period we call daily devotions, but the shorter pause of quiet meditation and prayer. Very few are known to utilize this pause, but those who do, affirm its lasting results.

The Bible itself indicates this would be a worthwhile habit to encourage. It is suggested in this all-inclusive invitation: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price" (Isaiah 55:1).

My childhood home was not blessed with a copy of the Bible. Therefore, the outward appearance of the Book was foreign to me until I was ready for school.

One day I visited a Christian lady who was ill. Her open Bible lying on the patchwork quilt, made me curious. I inquired what the strange book was.

"This is the Word of God," she explained. "While lying here alone, I read a little. Then I rest and think about what God has said to me."

As I recall her words, many years later, I realize she was saying, "My Bible furnishes the 'pause that refreshes.'"

A new Christian found she needed frequent pauses with her Bible. Her time was too full for long hours of study. Therefore, she left the Word open on her dining room table all day. As she passed by it, going from one task to the other, she would read a few verses. Returning to her tasks, she pondered the new truths she found therein. Her spiritual pause culminated in the salvation of most of her family in less than a year's time.

Mrs. Billy Graham, wife of the famous evangelist, is also the mother of five active children. The Bible is so vital to her spiritual life, that she keeps one in every room of her house. Thus, she is ready any moment for the "pause that refreshes."

To be most effective, a spiritual "pause" for the soul should also include prayer. Just a few moments with bowed head and a spoken prayer gives the release we all need. The strain is lifted from us, but more important it pleases our heavenly Father. He

May 29: Mount Olive College Day

There is a poem which you probably had to recite when you were a child. It begins, "I shot an arrow into the air; it fell to earth I know not where."

Unlike the arrow whose destiny was unknown, the gifts made to Mount Olive College have a known destiny—the training of youth now for leadership in the church of tomorrow.

We thank the Lord for the blessings—yes, the trials, too—that he has given to us and the college this year. We have had the best year yet.

For everything that you have done, for your prayers, and for your gifts, we are indeed grateful.

To finish the school year and to prepare for the visit in the fall of the committee from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, we need the generous support of every Free Will Baptist.

Won't you urge your church and Sunday school to give a generous offering to Mount Olive College on fifth Sunday, May 29?

Individuals who do not find it convenient to give through an offering in church or Sunday school are urged to send a personal gift directly to: Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

ENJOYS PAPER

"I have thought for some time I would write and tell you how much I have enjoyed reading and working in the interest of The Free Will Baptist paper. I have been reading the paper for more than 40 years, and I have not become tired of it yet. I have also solicited subscriptions for several years. In fact, I think that every Free Will Baptist home should receive the Baptist.

waits in vain sometimes for just a kind word or a "Thank You" from His child.

Could it be that you have never tried this prescription? Join forces then, you—the Word—and your Lord. Let Him lift your burden and lessen the stress of daily living. Hear Him say to you: "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint" (Isaiah 40:31).—Gospel Herald.

Come With Us, and We Will Do Thee Good

by Rev. Carol B. Hausley,
President of North Carolina Ministerial Association

THE ANNUAL Ministers' Conference of North Carolina will begin with the opening service on Monday evening, May 30, continuing through Thursday evening, June 2. As we look forward to this year's opportunity of fellowship together with the ministers from all corners of the state, we share some of the anticipation which must have been felt by our late and esteemed brother, the Rev. Randall Bennett, who called the first session together.

This year will be the fifteenth annual session of the North Carolina Ministerial Conference to be held at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina.

We recall that first assembly with cherished memories. History was made. Cragmont, our newly-acquired assembly, was opened that year for the first time. The ministers were the first to meet there—many of whom had not heretofore become acquainted with each other. Then and there Free Will Baptists in North Carolina were reinvested with that faith and courage in which our founding fathers pressed forward preaching the gospel of Christ. Progress has been made; we have experienced growth and expansion in all phases of our church ministry under the inspiring leadership of our Lord and Master. We have a new feeling of appreciation and respect for the outstanding and unique privilege to present to all the world the inspired Word of God in its fullness. This, our heritage, was given to His disciples by the Lord Jesus Himself; and is confirmed by the presence and power of the Holy Spirit today.

Many of our brethren, like Brother Bennett, have laid aside the working tools of life, having been called by the Master to that heavenly rest. They no longer meet with us at Cragmont. Yet, that Spirit in which we gathered for that first conference that Spirit which drew the twelve and then the many around our Saviour, will continue to live and prompt our hearts, year after year, on to Cragmont; until we, too, shall be called to that eternal reunion in the Father's house.

We urge and invite every Free Will Baptist minister in the state of North Carolina to come with us, and we will do thee good. We also invite Free Will Baptist ministers everywhere to attend—whosoever will may come.

Pray that God's blessings will be upon us as we continue to carry Christ's banner. May it be lifted higher than ever before in this year of 1960.

The Lock

REMEMBER that afternoon very well. It was cold and gloomy, and a fitting background for the story to be told. Travis and I were walking down the long steps from the entrance to the Linnemore Hospital, having come from a visit with a mutual friend. As I remember it now, it was my voice which first broke the silence on the descent.

"Medicine certainly has reached new heights of marvel, Travis. At least, I would say so in the case of Warren." That was the name of the mutual friend. I turned slightly to note the nod from Travis. "Not many a man has had such a narrow escape from lockjaw, as he has had. A marvel of medicine indeed."

Travis said nothing, and it seemed a strange silence for a man who almost had more or less of a word for any situation. We were at the street level now, ready to turn the corner to the railroad station, when I felt the strangeness of the grip upon my arm. He faced him with a puzzled turn.

"Do you have a moment or two, Ed?" he said. "There's . . . there's something about this, that seems to bring up something that I have wanted to say." He glanced away for a moment to the park square with the cluster of benches which lined the farther walk, and I accepted the invitation of the glance. A moment or two later we were seated, and I waited for the word.

"The case of Warren seems to bring it to mind," he said with a slow, low tone to the voice, "and it has to do with—lockjaw. Not a pleasant thing, but then some of the most important things in life are not pleasant." He scuffed the earth with a nervous foot. And that brings it home. Would you believe it, Ed, that I had a form of lockjaw not so long ago—and in more serious form than Warren had ever known?"

"What?" I made no attempt to hide my puzzlement. "What was that? Lockjaw? . . . you . . . ? But I had not known anything about it . . ."

He shook his head. "No, you would not have known of it. No one would. It was not that kind of lockjaw." He sighed deeply. "Much deeper it was . . . much deeper. Mine was a case of 'spiritual lockjaw!'"

That did not enlighten me any further than the previous word. "Spiritual . . . lockjaw? I don't believe that I follow you exactly, Travis."

A thin smile etched the features and he gave a slight turn. "Perhaps not—perhaps it's just my own way of definition. But there is a story to tell—and I should like to tell it. Perhaps you can pass it along, and save some other Christian from the horrors of it . . ." The voice trailed away with the memory of the referred to event, but quickly returned.

"It was about two years or so ago, just before the time of our first meeting," he began, "when I was working for Culver Brothers over at the Landover plant. I was a Christian of . . . of sorts. That is, I went to church one Sunday, and the midweek service once in a while, but that was all." He paused and bit his lip. "That was all. I never told anyone about it, and I never gave a word of testimony to the fellows with whom I was working. Particularly big Bill Summers, working with me on the job. A clean chap, quiet, not like a good many of the others. I should have said something, I should have given some kind of a word, for as the Lord knows there were plenty of opportunities, as we were more or less alone in one corner of the room." His voice became strangely low. "But Ed, I—I never did . . ."

I waited and saw the shadow of a tear trickle across the features. "I never did—and that was the spiritual lockjaw—do you see? But it did not seem to mean much until—until late that Tuesday afternoon, when it all—happened. I can see it as clearly as if it were only today—only this very minute . . ." The voice became very low, and I had to strain to catch the words. "So very clear. Bill Summers was coming back from the tool crib, walking down the aisle. I was standing at one corner, more or less watching. And then I saw the wild swing of the overhead trolley-boom trip its lock and smash across that aisle, right in front of poor Bill . . ."

I knew what he meant. Those accidents have happened before. But I volunteered the words, "And was Billy badly hurt, Travis?"

He looked up. "Badly hurt, Ed? Badly hurt? He lingered for just about ten minutes, there on the floor. I remember rushing over. I remember picking him up in my arms, and resting that poor head on my arms. I remember the look in his eyes as he looked at me. He tried to say something . . . something . . ." Suddenly Travis gripped my arm. "And Ed, that is the horrible crime of the whole black thing! Poor Bill Summers was conscious to the very end, laying there on the cold, greasy floor, looking up at me. I should have said something—I should have given some sort of a word. I should not have knelt there, just holding onto him in that awful silence. But . . . but somehow, deep, deep down inside of that backslidden heart of mine, I felt that I could not. You see, it suddenly burned home to me that . . . that my life had locked my lips—my life had locked my lips . . ." He repeated the words over and over again.

There was a long pause. I felt that no word of mine should have added anything, but I did really feel the deep horror of the whole thing. Travis had painted it so realistically, that I could see the poor man on the cold, greasy floor, going out into eternity with a look in his eye . . . and what sort of look was it? Was it entreating? Was it accusing? Who could ever tell—now?

I was conscious of Travis' closing word as he rose to his feet. "And that is what I have called 'spiritual lockjaw,' Ed. Much worse than what Warren had—much worse. This is deeper, and more terrifying! I have never forgotten it, and the Lord used poor Bill Summers to smash the coldness of my heart and bring me back to Himself. And what a cost—what a cost!"—Gospel Herald.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Where was the other tribe when Rehoboam reigned over one tribe and Jeroboam over ten tribes?—A. Peterson, Michigan.

Answer: The tribes were all present in the several different divisions by which Scripture presents them. "And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee: (But he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:) Because that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ash-toroth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father. Howbeit I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes: But I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes. And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David my servant may have a light always before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there" (1 Kings 11:31-36).

The Levites had no tribal possessions as a unit, but possessed inheritance within each tribe to act as God's mouthpiece to the tribes in whose borders they resided. "The priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance. Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren; the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them" (Deuteronomy 18:1, 2); "Only unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance; the sacrifices of the LORD God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, as he said unto them" (Joshua 13:14). The fact that the Levites should have certain cities with the border or outlying fields within the possessions of all the tribes can be seen from Scripture. "And the LORD spake unto

Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel. And, behold, I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation. Neither must the children of Israel henceforth come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they bear sin, and die. But the Levites shall do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance. But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance" (Numbers 18:20-24); "And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, Command the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them. And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts. And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits round about. And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities. And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add forty and two cities. So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs. And the cities which ye shall give shall be of the possession of the children of Israel: from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which he inheriteth" (Numbers 35:1-8).

Joseph's descendants had two tribal divisions of the land under the names of Ephraim and Manasseh. These in most places in the Bible are referred to as thought of as being on a par with the ten sons of Jacob, whose names are identified with tribal divisions of land. At times however, Joseph's name and one tribal division of the land are associated. Then again in the book of Revelation, we have the names of Joseph and Benjamin come into a tribal position. "Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand" (Revelation 7:8).

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

"And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves" (Mark 11:17).

Writing of the mission of the church someone has said, "As we read the gospel story we find many startling items. One of these is the account of Jesus' visit to the temple. Artists have called it 'The Cleansing of the Temple,' and have pictured Jesus angry of countenance, lashing right and left at the frightened money changers, the sellers of cattle and doves, and the rabble that gather in the courtyard. It is a thrilling scene and one to be remembered, but the chief theme of this account does not concern Jesus' anger but His prophecy, 'My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer.'"

In this act and in these words, Jesus gave His definition of the church. It is to be a house of prayer. The question arises, what is prayer? The best definition to prayer that I have ever seen is, "Prayer is adjustment to God." As we study the real prayers of the Bible we find that they show men and men seeking to adjust themselves to the will and purpose of God.

How truly has it been observed, "A church can do a lot of good if it does not care who gets the credit." No church can hope to be the instrument of God's purpose in the world if it is not a church of prayer. If real prayer is not contained in the uttering of a few, or of many, words, sincere they may seem to be; but prayer is the practice and development of an attitude in which makes the most of every opportunity in accordance to the will of God.

In Butler-Dunn's Systematic Theology, Pages 338 and 341, we read, "That the church exists by divine authority under the gospel cannot be doubted by any believer in the New Testament. Christ and the apostles modified it, gave it new ordinances, and adapted it to the nature of this later dispensation, and established it to be equal with the gospel itself.

"The gospel Church was organized by Christ. He is its chief cornerstone, its head and lawgiver. The constitution of the gospel Church rests wholly upon the precepts and practice of Christ and His inspired apostles. They not only organized and governed churches, but also transmitted a record of their doings to us, to be followed in the perpetuation of the Church. Essentials of church building are not left as matters of indifference to be regulated by uninspired men. The acts of popes, councils, or any other mere human authority, have no right to change the divinely established constitution of the Christian Church."

In Matthew 28:18-20 Christ gives His authority over the Church and His purpose for it throughout the ages. "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." If, or when, the Church fails to measure up to, or goes beyond, these instructions given by Christ, its Founder and Head, it fails in its divinely constituted purpose.

"... Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish" (Ephesians 5:25-27).

"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity" (Psalm 133:1).

The Use of Thorns

Eagles put thorns in their nests and cover them with down. When the young eagle is large enough to fly, the old birds put the down out and leave the thorns naked. The young bird cannot stay in the nest, but climbs to the edge, and then the old bird pushes it over, and it instinctively spreads its wings. So our Heavenly Father uncovers thorns that we may wing our way to something better.—Selected.

The Mule Is Always Right

It seems strange to find that a mule at times may be a much better guide than the ordinary man, yet we are told that in mountaineering, and when it is necessary to reach a water supply in a desert, the instinct of the rough mule has often proved more reliable than the reason of his driver. The man might be deceived by a mirage, but when the mule quickened his pace it was because he knew by some means unknown to men that there was water ahead. And the surefootedness of the mule is proverbial, making it safe for him to go where even a rash man shrinks from following.—Onward.

Dear Friend:

Easter, 1960, has come and gone and our hearts have rejoiced anew as a result of another special time of calling to remembrance the events of the life, death and resurrection of our Saviour. Along with these special blessings, there is a renewed obligation for each Christian to carry out the last command of our blessed Lord as recorded in

PRIDE

(Proverbs 11:2; 13:10)

1. Pride leads to hypocrisy (Luke 18:11, 12).
2. Pride accompanies the new converts (1 Timothy 3:6).
3. Terrible fruits of pride (Esther 7:10; Daniel 5:18-21).
4. Sinfulness of pride (Proverbs 21:4; 28:25).
5. Pride engenders rebellion (John 8:33, 39; Romans 2:19).
6. Pride causes spiritual blindness (Revelation 3:17).
7. Pride is followed by shame and destruction (Proverbs 11:2; 16:18).

I'M A POOR AND NEEDY SINNER!

It is said that Vanderbilt, the mighty multimillionaire, as he neared the opal gates of death, asked a faithful Negro servant to come to his bedside and sing the old gospel hymn, "Come Ye Sinners, Poor and Needy." The aged Negro put much feeling and pleading and pathos into the hymn.

"Come ye sinners, poor and needy,
Weak and wounded, sick and sore,
Jesus, ready, stands to save you,
Full of mercy love and pow'r!

"Let not conscience make you linger,
Nor of fitness fondly dream,
All the fitness He requireth,
Is to feel your need of Him!"

At the conclusion of the hymn, Vanderbilt, forgetting his millions, said, "I'm a poor and needy sinner!" Such are all of us in God's sight whether we be penniless paupers, or multimillionaires! The only prayer for the unsaved ones to pray is this prayer, "God be merciful to me a sinner!"—Gospel Herald.

Acts 1:8, ". . . and ye shall be witness unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Some churches and individuals gave generously in the special Easter missionary offering; yet, there were very many who did not respond. If you were among those who sent in an offering, I want to say to you "Thank you, sincerely." Be assured that you have made an investment in eternal souls.

I wish to share with you the following items of missionary significance:

New Arrival: Mr. and Mrs. Ken Eagleton missionaries in Brazil, have announced the arrival of their third son, Andrew James. He was born on April 14.

From Africa: Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparling have reported two short sessions of Bible school which were very encouraging. They also report nine new Christians in a new village.

Our newest missionaries in Africa, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jones, state that they have been able to go into eleven different villages with the gospel. They also state that there are hundreds of villages without a gospel witness whatsoever. They ask that the needs there be made a special matter of prayer.

From India: Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cronin wrote recently of three young men who completed their Bible training and have begun village preaching.

Miss Wilson wrote that her church received its first offering for foreign missions on Easter Sunday. The offering totaled 50 rupees ($10.50 in American money). Also Miss Wilson stated that the church has pledged to give 25 rupees each quarter for foreign missions.

"My heart bubbled over with joy when this decision was made. I am sure that there is new blessing in store for the church," said Miss Wilson.

Sacrificial Giving: A special Easter offering for foreign missions was given by the Bloss Memorial Church in Washington, D. C. This work was begun only four months ago. It is under the auspices of the National Home Missions Board. Rev. Kenneth Walker is the pastor.

An offering for foreign missions was recently received from the Free Will Baptist Church in Monterrey, Mexico. This work, too, is under the direction of the National Home Missions Board. Rev. Arthur Billow is the pastor.

Limas in States: Mr. and Mrs. Hester Lima and baby are now in the States. Mr. Lima plans to attend the summer session at the Bible College.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

SCRIPTURE REGULATIONS FOR CHRISTIANS

Jesus Christ says, "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you again. And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, . . . Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?" (Matthew 7:1-4).

May we notice that Jesus said, "Thy brother." This is why we entitled this message, "Scripture Regulations for Christians."

We cannot tell what is in a brother's heart, but we can know a tree by the fruit it bears. If I see a man drunk and staggering down the road, I do not have to judge him. I know he is a drunkard; and I know that, according to the Bible, no drunkard can enter the Kingdom of heaven. Get your Bible and read Galatians 5:21, and mark the third word, drunkenness. So we do not have to judge a man; he is judged by God's Word. We will do well to ponder other words in this verse.

MAN JUDGED BY HIS CLOTHES

Many years ago as I was traveling by train, a gentleman who was a preacher said, "A clergyman came into the coach, "That man is as sure to reach hell as a martin flies to his gourd." The preacher who made the remark was sitting by my side on the same seat. This preacher judged the clergyman by his dress; neither of us were acquainted with the newcomer. Later, this same preacher said of a man who was using tobacco that he was going to hell. Now I do not use the weed in any form, thank God, but I cannot believe that all the people of the past who used it have gone to hell because they used tobacco. People go to hell for rejecting Christ and living in sin. A fellow said to me some time ago, as he was smoking a cigarette, "Do you think cigarettes will send me to hell?" My answer was, "They may get you there earlier than otherwise." What I meant was that they may impair health and cause death. I say that if you are saved by accepting the Lord Jesus Christ and are Spirit filled, the Holy Spirit will show you what is wrong and what is right—not only in large matters, but in small ones. So I am no man's judge.

Jesus said, "My words shall judge." "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak" (John 12:48-50).

Let's go back to the man, the preacher, who judged the other man by his dress and then another because of his tobacco. Well, I caught this preacher in a falsehood. So I did not have to judge him because I find in the Bible, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." God is the Judge of the sin of falsehood.

WHAT GOD HAS WRITTEN AND CLASSIFIED AS SIN

God has caused to be written that which tells of damning sins. I would like to make mention of some of them. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: . . ." (Galatians 5:19-21). So we know that these characteristics in a man are sin, because they are forbidden by God.

Jesus goes further by saying, "But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart" (Matthew 5:28). So it is possible for a man to live in adultery, but adultery that is hid from the eyes of man is not hid from the eyes of God. If it is possible to be an adulterer in heart, is it not also possible for a man to be a murderer in his heart?

JUDGMENT BELONGS TO GOD

Paul asks the question, "But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God. Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way" (Romans 14:10-13).

John says, "Beloved, let us love one another:

for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins" (1 John 4:7-10).

AN OLD MAN'S TESTIMONY

Years ago as I drove my car on the lot of a county church, I saw an old man, an old faithful man. By the time I drew near to him, he arose from the steps of the church where he was sitting, waiting for the worship service. As he came in reach, he stretched out his feeble hand and said, "Brother Griffin, I am so glad to see you; I love you." Then as the conversation went on he said, "People do not love now like they used to." That was about 30 years ago, but I can say now with that old man, "Folks do not love now like they used to." We love certain individuals who agree with us, and those that disagree we do not love very much. We are not liked if we do not agree with the thinking of another.

Let us remember our Church Covenant and keep it before our people. This will help us as preachers, as well as laity. We give a copy to every new convert that he may know we are obligated to love each other.

"No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us. . . . because he hath given us of his Spirit" (1 John 4:12).

I have no apology for using the Scripture in the fifth chapter of Galatians as to the works of the flesh, even though I used it some time ago. I have learned that a good method of teaching is by repetition, so I have repeated in using the Word of God.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

In John's Workshop

by Beulah Myers

"Hey—John!"

John turned and saw Dick running up the street toward him.

"John, Mr. Stevens wants us to go with him to invite those new boys to Sunday school. You know—those two who have moved out on Morris Hill in the rock house."

John had been so busy he had forgotten all about someone having moved into that empty house.

Dick kept talking. "Mr. Stevens said it would be hard for them, to get acquainted since school is out and they might be real glad for a chance to meet the boys in our class."

"When was he going to go out there?" John asked.

"Right now—said he'd be by your house in a few minutes and pick us up."

John's heart sank. He simply couldn't go out there now. Why, he had just bought the new parts for his model plane and was hurrying home as fast as he could to put it together again. He could hardly wait to see how it was going to work. He didn't have much time because the contest was on Monday. He had won second place last year and just knew he was going to win first place this year. If he could get it to work like he wanted it to, he would have a lot more speed this time.

Just as they reached the front gate, Mr. Stevens drove up. "Ready, boys?" he called smilingly.

John hated to tell his beloved teacher that he wasn't going, but he just had to work on his plane. "I'm sorry, Mr. Stevens," he said regretfully. "I've got some work planned for this afternoon. Wish you weren't going until tomorrow." He was careful not to say what kind of work.

Mr. Stevens appeared disappointed. "Wish you could go. I felt that you boys might influence them to come. I'm going to be out of the city all day tomorrow, so I'll have to go on today."

John felt ashamed as he watched them drive off. However, he soon forgot all about it as he went to work on his plane.

That night John's mother read his Sunday school lesson to him. It was about people worshipping idols. It seemed so silly to John. Anyone ought to have more sense than to worship an idol, he thought.

Mr. Stevens called him early the next morning. "John, the boys weren't home when we got out there yesterday. I sure wish you and Dick would run out to see them some time today."

John promised that he would, then went out to his workshop to finish his plane. Later Dick called and wanted to go that morning. "They might be gone again this afternoon."

"I'm sorry, Dick—I sure wish I could," John replied. "To tell you the truth, I'm having some trouble with my plane, and I've just got to get that extra speed before Monday."

John felt better when Dick sympathized with him and said he would wait until afternoon. He hurried back to work and worry over his plane again.

When Dick came by that afternoon he had just torn it up and was starting to assemble it again. "Dick," he groaned. "I just can't leave this now. I've just got to get it to work before Monday."

Dick decided to go on without him.

The next morning the two boys, Joe and Larry Hunt, were in Sunday school. Dick had got them to come. John felt he would like them very much. They seemed so intelligent and well-behaved. Mr. Stevens was so proud to have them that he simply beamed with pleasure.

"Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve," was the golden text for that Sunday's lesson. Mr. Stevens gave the lesson a practical application. He said even boys today sometimes had idols which they put in the place of God. Perhaps they liked to fish better than work for Jesus—or play ball—or perhaps it was something else they were very interested in.

John suddenly had a peculiar feeling that the teacher might mention model planes directly. He darted a shamed glance toward the man, but Mr. Stevens was not looking toward him.

John had been thinking it was so silly for people to worship idols and all the time he had had one out in his workshop! He knew that he hardly lived for anything except to make a faster model plane than anyone else. He suddenly had to admit that it had become an idol.

John was up before daylight the next morning. At last it was time for the races and he had to take his plane to the field. He was afraid he would not win first place. He had never been able to get the speed he wanted. He still couldn't figure why his idea had not worked.

The new boys, Joe and Larry, came to see the races. John learned that they also made model planes. Joe's plane had won the county contest just last year in the county where he had lived.

Then it was time for the races to start. There were 25 planes in it this year.

John was terribly disappointed when he only won third place. He could have cried. As he started home, Joe came along and walked with him. John explained what he had been trying to do to get more speed and Joe understood at once. He had done the same thing and made it work. That's how he had won the contest in the other county.

When they reached the workshop John showed him where he had made his mistake in the assembly. John could have kicked himself for not having seen it before.

Or, if he had only gone out to Morris Hill with Dick Saturday morning, Joe could have told him what to do before it was too late. Joe had shown his planes to Dick that day. John would have been sure Joe would have told him about the trouble he was having.

John realized that his having stayed to worship his idol instead of working for Jesus was the worst thing he could have done, even naturally speaking. If he had only put Jesus first, everything else would have worked out fine.

John asked the Lord to help him never forget the lesson he had learned. No more idols for John. Jesus must come first.—Gospel Herald.

AS WE HAVE DONE

How few there are who would dare to address God each night: "Lord, deal with me tomorrow as I have this day dealt with others: those to whom I was harsh, and from malice, or to show my own superiority exposed their feelings, others to whom from pride or dislike, I refused to speak one I have avoided, another I cannot like because she displeases me: I will not forgive—to whom I will not show any kindness."

And yet let us never forget that, soon or later, God will do unto us even as we have done unto them.—Selected.

Study in Ephesians Chapter 5

Ephesians was written by the apostle, Paul, and addressed to the saints and faithful Christ Jesus. It is not to the unsaved, but to the saved. Thus the whole epistle is one letter from Chapter 1, Verse 1, to Chapter 6, Verse 24; addressed to the true believer.

We should always think when we read Ephesians that it is a letter to us as well as to the Ephesians, if we are saints and faithful in Christ Jesus.

THE WALK OF CHRIST

Verse 1: "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children." God's children are admonished to walk like God; that is in love and fellowship. May we get this: "And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweetsmelling savour" (Vs. 2). Here we learn that we should have the same Spirit that our Christ possessed; that is, to love our brethren and sisters (the children of God sacrificially). This shouldn't be a selfish love, but one that would go all the way to help a child of God in a special way. If he stumbles and falls, we should do our best to lift him up—not to wound him and make it worse for him; not to try to destroy him.

Verses 3-5 warn against the child of God yielding to sin. It is not impossible for a child of God to sin, but we are not to practice sin—that is, continue to follow sin, but shun the very appearance of sin. If we do make an error and commit sin, the writer of 1 John, Chapter 1, Verse 9, says: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." This, too, is the word of God to His child.

Verse 6 says, "Let no man deceive you with vain words: because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." Verse 7 warns against being partakers with the children of disobedience. Verse 8 reminds us that we were sinners and ones of darkness. Certainly God wants us to remember darkness as an unpleasant experience and disdain the fact of sin. Verse 9 says, "(For the fruit of the Spirit is all goodness and righteousness and truth.)" Thus, as a fruit bearer, we must be Spirit filled. We are admonished, in Verses 10-12, to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness—that is, not participate in those things that are shameful. Verse 15 admonishes us to walk circumspectly. This means for us to be cautious. Caution means watchfulness, care, warning secure, etc.

Verse 18 says, "And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit." Warning against drunkenness, but be filled with the Spirit. To my mind it is a sin for a believer not to be filled with the Spirit. A non-spiritual believer is worthless to the church. He is what a fountain pen is with no ink. He may scratch, but makes a worthless mark. So to write for Jesus, we must be filled with the Holy Spirit. Verses 19 and 20 tell us how to speak and how to give thanks. A real Christian is a thankful being, or he lives below the standard set for us by the Word of God.

Begin with Verse 21 and go through Verse 33. (Here I suggest that all turn to Verse 21 and read and make your own comments, for no tongue can add to this sacred Scripture; it is a well of deep truth on the marriage life in the flesh and to Christ as a true believer.) Notice these words: "Submitting yourselves one to another, in the fear of God" (Vs. 21). We are not to fight each other, but be submissive with a fervent love and esteem. Now listen to what the wife should do: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husband, . . . (Vs. 22). To whose husband? Your own husband. Why? "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body" (Vs. 23). What body? The answer is the body of believers, which is the Church of Jesus Christ. "Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing" (Vs. 24).

What kind of husbands should the wife be subject to? This is very important. Well, Verse 25 says, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." God's plan for husband and wife is to love each other with love like that which Christ presented. I think that this is a sacrificial, mutual, living and a dying love. No wife, who is a Christian, could be untrue to a husband that loves as Christ loved; and no husband, who is saved, could be untrue to a wife that is after the will of God. As the adage goes, "Wives and husbands that pray together, stay together."

Verses 26, 27 tell us about our sanctification, by the washing of the word, which is presented to Christ. He does the cleansing and takes out every spot that would defile us, so that we, the body, (the bride of Christ) must be without blemish.

Verse 28 says, "So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies . . ." Also Verse 29 says, "For no man ever hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church." Why this declaration? Because Paul says we are members of His body, of His flesh and of His bones. This is what Adam said when God presented to him Eve, his wife (Genesis 2:23).

Verse 31 says, "For this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh." We have to leave all that binds us to the world and be joined unto Jesus. Paul says in Verses 32, 33: "This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church. Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband."

If all men and women were Christians and would obey the Word of God, there would be no divorces. Divorce courts would go out of business.

HE TAUGHT ME WHAT CHRIST IS LIKE

A native became very angry with John Selwyn, Bishop of Melanesia. The bishop, being a strong man physically, could have knocked him over with his bare fist. Instead, he quietly folded his arms and looked kindly at his assailant! Years passed. The bishop returned to England. There, he became president of Selwyn College. His assailant of former years came to England. There, he was converted. When asked what Christian name he had chosen, he said, "Call me John Selwyn, for it was he who taught me what Christ is like!"—Selected.

University of North Carolina Professor Visits Mount Olive College

Mount Olive College, leaving no stone unturned in its move for accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, is holding a series of in-service training programs for its faculty during the spring. The most recent educator to visit the college was Dr. Luther R. Taft, professor of education at the University of North Carolina, who discussed the role of the faculty in guidance and counseling.

Doctor Taft, a former junior college instructor, emphasized that the small college can carry out a far more effective guidance program than is possible in the larger colleges and universities where the relationship between students and teachers is more formal. He commended the local college for its interest in the total welfare of its students, and explained that guidance and teaching cannot be separated.

Mount Olive College, which was accredited by the North Carolina College Conference in 1958, expects to become the first college in the history of the Free Will Baptist denomination to obtain regional accreditation. The Standards Committee of the Association will visit Mount Olive College this fall.

Living By the Golden Rule

(Lesson for June 5)

Lesson: Matthew 7:1-12.

Golden Text: Matthew 7:12.

INTRODUCTION

Most Bible readers know the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you"; they know also that this statement is taken from the words of Jesus, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this the law and the prophets" (Matthew 7:12). What a marvelous world this would be if all people lived by the Golden Rule! However, someone has said that people today have changed it so as to say, "Do others before they do you."

In the first twelve verses of the seventh chapter of Matthew, Jesus dealt with the proper attitude of the Christian toward his brothers and sisters in Christ, his attitude toward ungodly and obstinate sinners, his attitude toward asking God for the things we need, and his attitude toward men in general. Although the Printed Text for this lesson stops with Verse 12, the student should read the remainder of the chapter which contains the closing words of Jesus' Sermon on the Mount. Verses 13, 14 deal with the Christian's attitude toward his own course in life; Verses 15-20 deal with his attitude toward the false teachers of the world; Verses 21-23 deal with his attitude toward false professors of faith in Christ; Verses 24-29 are the conclusion of the Sermon on the Mount, and they deal with the necessity of the Christian's application of that which Jesus said in the sermon.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. The law of moral recompense has not been repealed, nor will it ever be (Matthew 7:1, 2).
2. Censorious judgment of others is sure to be visited upon our own heads (Verse 2).
3. A clearer vision than that of the natural man is necessary for proper spiritual development (Vs. 3).
4. We can be helpful to others in a spiritual way only when our own lives have been cleansed from sin (Vv. 4, 5).

5. The life on the inside enables us to evaluate spiritual things properly (Vs. 6).

6. Our petitions will be answered according to the earnestness with which we present them (Vs. 7).

7. God's answers to our prayers do not consist of inferior substitutions for the things we have desired (Vv. 9, 10).

8. God's good things are always "how much more" beyond the very best that we can do (Vs. 11).

9. The greatest commandment is given in Matthew 22:37-40, and from that we read that we do not start with our neighbor, but with God. First we have to be right with Him, for we cannot learn to love others till first we learn to love Him. Then we see the needs of others through His eyes. We cannot do to others as we would have them do to us unless first our heart has been transformed by the new life of Christ within us. His love flows through us to others (2 Corinthians 4:3-7).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Verses 1-5 constitute a warning to people whom Jesus calls hypocrites. They heartily condemn sin in others but are unable to see wrong in themselves. Can we individually say we are free from hypocrisy? Christ's rule for judging ourselves and others is found in John 7:24, and we must be guided by the Holy Spirit if we desire to obey this command.

2. Paraphrastically, the Lord says by way of explanation: "But be careful that you don't waste your reproof and counsel with those who will treat them as dogs will holy things and hogs will pearls." What does a dog care about holy and sacred things? And what does a hog care about pearls? There is nothing sacred and holy with dogs, nor is there any such thing as pearls with hogs. Just so it is with an attitude of some people toward the Pearl of great price and His holy Word. Not that we are to avoid the greatest of sinners as we take the gospel to the whole world; but, on the other hand, we are to use discretion lest we waste precious time, holy means and priceless pearls with those whose indifference reminds us of pigs and pups.—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

3. He that seeketh findeth. Anyone who seeks the Lord with all his heart is sure to find Him. Did He not come to seek and to save that which was lost?

"I wish to discuss with you some of the problems I have encountered in the book of Genesis. I do not believe the first three chapters of the book," said a student to a minister who had spoken to a group of students in an eastern college. The minister asked him to attend a meeting which he was holding in the city, agreeing to spend time with him after any service. One evening the minister gave an invitation to the unsaved to receive Christ as personal Saviour. The doubting young man went into the inquiry room. There he sought God, and found Him through the Saviour. After a searching talk with him, the minister asked, "Now tell me what your problems about the book of Genesis are." Glowingly the young man replied, "I have no problems with Genesis now. They are gone since I honestly sought and found the Saviour!"—Selected.

4. Many Christians tend to describe God in terms of human qualities. Perhaps the finest, most considerate, and most dependable attitude in the ancient world was a father's concern for his son. It is no less admirable in a father today. Thus in describing God, Jesus spoke of the love of father for son and said, "How much more!" Human parents can be mistaken, ignorant and warped, but God is never mistaken, is always just, forever wise. And the committed life is always in His hands.

5. If we used our ability to live with other men as doggedly as we strive to live with atoms and molecules, statistics would not show that four men out of five who lose their jobs do so because they cannot work with other people. It is not enough to gain great knowledge and learn to do a job with great skill, we must add to these achievements the rule Jesus endorsed and recommended as the sum total of all rules for human relationships—the Golden Rule.—Selected.

6. A generation ago there was a religious paper called "The Ram's Horn." One issue contained this sharp statement: "It seems strange that people who expect so much of others are generally content with so little in themselves." Jesus must have had something like this in mind when He said, "If you have a saw log in your eye don't worry too much about the splinter in your neighbor's eye."

North Carolina, May 22-29. Speakers representing the foreign missions department will be Louis Moulton, Bobby Poole, Eugene Waddell, J. C. H. Carter and T. H. Willey Sr.

The church in Holdenville, Oklahoma, will have a conference beginning June 1 and continuing through June 5. Speakers for the conference will be Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Calvery, Lonnie Palmer and Rolla Smith.

Louis Moulton and the Calverys will be in the Carthage and Henderson, Texas, area for a conference June 17-19. Rev. Don Ellis is pastor in Henderson, and Rev. J. M. Goode is pastor in Carthage.

Thigpen Attends Cuban Convention: Rev. Charles Thigpen, dean of Free Will Baptist Bible College and moderator of the National Association, gives the following report on his recent trip to Cuba:

"It was my happy privilege to attend the seventeenth annual convention of Free Will Baptists on the island of Cuba, April 22-24. A few hundred people were present. The preaching was enlightening, dynamic and Spirit empowered. The singing was very uplifting. Even the business was carried out in an orderly Christian fashion. All of us should be deeply grateful to God for the strong Free Will Baptist witness in Cuba. After meeting our national pastors and many of the lovely Christian laymen, I am confident that if our missionaries had to leave Cuba the Free Will Baptist work would continue. Thank God for Brother and Sister Willey's vision and for the dear Lord who enabled them to fulfill that vision. Special thanks to you too—for everyone who has contributed to foreign missions has had a share in this modern miracle in missions.

"The hate America campaign is being constantly carried on by the Premier and his cohorts. The Agrarian Reform is getting into full swing. Many enterprises and businesses are being taken over by the government. All of these are well known earmarks of Communism. Yet, the paradox of it all is that this Communism has not manifested itself against evangelicals. The believers have a greater freedom than ever before to preach, teach and carry on the gospel throughout the island. However, there is a growing uneasiness on the part of the thinking Cuban. He does not know what a day may bring forth. It is altogether possible that Christians may yet have a bath of blood such as was experienced in China and North Korea. Please pray much for the dear Cuban Christians during these uncertain days."

YES, I'M MISSING A LOT

Said a sinful young man to a devoted Christian, "I don't see what you get out of life. You say you are happy, but you are missing so much." The one who thus spoke had a pleasing personality, and a good position, but dissolute habits. One day the sinful young man didn't report for work. Officers went to his room. The door was locked. They forced it open. His body was found sprawled on the floor amid empty liquor bottles! When the tragic news of his death reached the Christian, he said, "Yes, I'm missing a lot!"—Selected.

For everything that God has made

For the bright, rich leaves of autumn,
And then for winter's snow!

Oh, how sweet is such confiding,
While the trustful spirit sings."

All to Him I owe;
Sin had left a crimson stain,
He washed it white as snow."

The Danger of Publicity

FROM CIVIL WAR days comes the story of a certain soldier, who, desiring to play it safe, decided to compromise. He dressed himself to be acceptable to either side, so he thought. But when he tiptoed out to the battlefield, he barely escaped being shot from both sides.

Such is the danger of duplicity, of compromise. While some compromise is necessary in certain spheres of life, and while it may be possible to blend two different elements, there can be no compromise of Christian character without dangerous consequences.

Underlying spiritual compromise there is always the root of duplicity. Two thoughts unconsciously held to can never free the soul for one alone. Two heart-loyalties without complete dedication to either one is the cause of the civil war of the soul, that conflict between the flesh and the Spirit in Galatians 5.

Not many of us think the issue is as serious as it really is. We tend to be somewhat like a poor fellow who thanked the missionary for a very helpful tract: "That tract has wrought a great change in me, sir, that tract has! Before I read that tract, sir, I didn't care for God or the devil; but since I read it, sir, I loves 'em both alike!"

The danger of duplicity is seen in its evidence in life.

Many crumbled plans result from divine guidance infiltrated with self-will. The Christian who makes plans while he asks the Lord for His plan will find the whole structure tumbling down before long. For this reason Jesus warned, ". . . which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?" (Luke 14:28-29). Winston Churchill mentioned that in planning for a campaign in war, one ought never to exclude the very worst of possibilities. There must be a complete renunciation of one's own plans for the master plan of God, for when He plans He has wherewithal to execute those plans.

A Bible school graduate, now serving in Africa, had made wonderful plans after his graduation—plans he thought to be in God's hand. But when his proposal to another missionary candidate was refused, he realized that God had not been in his plans. Weeping his tale of woe and asking for counsel, he revealed his duplicity of purpose: carry out his plans and ask God to guide. The whole structure—his castle in the clouds—came tumbling down at his feet.

by W. Theodore Laskowski

Another danger sign pointing to duplicity is restless running about. The apostle, James, tells us that the believer who asks for wisdom but not in pure faith, is a double-minded man, unstable in all his ways. Lacking true faith, he is like a wave of the troubled sea, when it cannot rest. His ups and downs and heres and theres, both in agonizing inner upheavals and outward instability of character, are all of his own doing. How much better to stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord! He calms the Sea of Galilee, giving peace which passeth all understanding.

Farther down the ladder of duplicity appear those grinding regrets. We see Samson at the mill. Around and around he goes, grinding, grinding, grinding. He needs no blindfold like a mule, for the Philistines have pierced his eyes. His body is grinding grain, but his soul is grinding out regrets that should never have been his. If he had early decided to please God alone in fighting Israel's enemies instead of gratifying his desires, too, he would not have been deceived by Delilah and bound helplessly by the enemies he had once conquered. All he could do was regret the past, "If only I hadn't . . ." and wistfully hope for a better day. But the better day came only in death.

At the very bottom of this state of affairs is a shameful end. Judas had heard Jesus say, and perhaps repeated the words himself, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it." But he went on with two ideas: to follow Jesus and hang on to his business inclinations. When he mixed the two for three years, he deceived himself into thinking that he could continue thus indefinitely. Jesus had said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," but Judas would. Others hadn't been able to, but he could! Why, he would even outwit Jesus! He would betray Him into the high priests' hands and then watch Jesus escape as He had always been able to do, and Judas would walk off thirty pieces of silver to the better. But his bartering boomcranged, and he lost life's balance in shameful suicide.

From the annals of World War II comes a striking example of a French admiral who could have been the liberator of France, but died, at the hands of assassins, in voluntary servitude to his enemies. Winston Churchill writes: "How vain are the calculations of self-interest! Rarely has there been a more convincing example. Admiral Darlan had but to sail in any one of his ships to any port outside France to become the master of all French interests beyond German control. He would not have come like General de Gaulle with only an unconquerable heart and a few kindred spirits. He would have carried with him outside the German reach the fourth Navy in the world, whose officers and men were personally devoted to him. Acting thus, Darlan would have become the chief of the French resistance with a mighty weapon in his hand. British and American dockyards and arsenals would have been at his disposal for the maintenance of his fleet. The French gold reserve in the United States would have assured him, once recognized, of ample resources. The whole French Empire would have rallied to him. Nothing could have prevented him from being the liberator of France. The fame and power which he so ardently desired were in his grasp. Instead, he went forward through two years of worrying and ignominious office to a violent death, a dishonored grave, and a name long to be execrated by the French Navy and the nation he had hitherto served so well."

Darlan's self-interest which he mixed with his service of the navy caused him to compromise the French Navy into German hands. Desiring to save his life, he lost it. If he had chosen to serve the free French cause, he would have been more famous than he ever dreamed he might be. Instead, he was killed ingloriously—taken to death by his own duplicity.

May we decide today, if ours is a case of divided devotion, to abandon forever our point of self-interest for the interests of the Kingdom of Christ, the King of kings and Lord of lords!"—Gospel Herald.

Shepherds, What Has Happened to You

by Robert L. Edwards
Rocky Mount, North Carolina

IN Birmingham, Alabama, at the 1957 session of the National Association of Free Will Baptists, our hearts were made to rejoice when the Woman's National Auxiliary Convention announced that they had completed their project to raise $10,000 to build our first mission station in Africa. They had had the Co-Laborer Station as their national project in the year '56-'57. This group of ladies, working together, had done that which would have been impossible working separately. Also, you will no doubt remember, at this same session, the ministers of our denomination were challenged to build the second mission station in Africa. This station was to be called the Shepherd Station. I well remember that many of the brethren had been enjoying the blessings of that meeting, and voiced their approval by hearty amens.

While Brother Raymond Riggs was on the floor talking about the proposed Shepherd Station, I wrote a note to him suggesting that, if possible, one hundred of our preachers be secured to pay $100 dollars each on this project, and in that way we would have our Shepherd Station paid for. However, before Brother Dan Merkh could get the note to him, Brother Riggs had finished speaking, and it was then impossible to get the suggestion before the brethren while they were moved by the spirit of the meeting, and I trust by the Holy Spirit also.

In the next newsletter from the Foreign Missions Department, Brother Riggs used the note urging one hundred of our ministers to pay $100 dollars each on the Shepherd Station, also stating that I had pledged to be the first one on the list. That letter went to approximately 14,000 homes, and I feel sure this list included at least 500 preachers. Yet, almost three years have passed, and still $3,000 dollars have not been given on the project. I did not have the money to pay my pledge when it was made, but made it in faith. God blessed us, and the pledge was paid within the year; and, praise God, I did not rob our local church by taking it out of my tithe, neither did I ask anyone to help me pay it except God. Surely my family has not suffered by giving this amount.

Now to get down to the real purpose of this article. What is wrong with our shepherds? Are we not able to undertake such a project and bring it to completion? Surely we are able! Then why have we let this project drag along almost three years with less than one third of the needed funds given? There are probably several reasons, and I shall list a few which I believe are among the many: (1) A lack of concern for the lost (in this case) in Africa. (2) Failure to realize our responsibility to them. (3) A lack of dedication of ourselves and our possessions to God. (4) We are not willing to make a gift out of our abundance (when compared with many, especially our missionaries with $75 as a monthly salary), much less to give sacrificially that the gospel may be given out. (5) Procrastination—no doubt many of our preachers have purposed to give $100 dollars for this project, but as yet have not fulfilled that purpose. Do any of these reasons apply to you, my dear preacher brother?

Will you not hear the plea of Brother Merkh, our missionary builder, as he pleads for funds to erect the necessary mission stations? "Come over into Macedonia and help us" still rings out today. If this cry will not be heard and heeded by our preachers, who do we expect to hear? I pray God that you will be stirred into action on this worthy and lagging project.

Brethren, let us put our money where our amens were, and give that the Shepherd Station may speedily become a reality. Have you given your part on this project? If we allow ourselves to be called ministers, we must shoulder our responsibility like men of God and go forward. Send your $100 gift to your state missions treasurer, earmarked for the Shepherd Station, or directly to the Foreign Missions Department, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee. Do it today, and God bless you as you give.

ARMOR AGAINST FEAR

by Edward C. John

THIS MARVELOUS AGE in which we live, with its great advances in the field of science, has affected people in a way not conducive to healthy, happy living. Today many are experiencing the gnawing effects of fear, which takes a great toll of happiness and health. This is not in accordance with God's plan for man, for in 1 John 4:18 we read, "There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. . . ."

Let us test this Scripture by studying the reactions of a young man who loved and served God in his heart, who lived in a day of great terror. In his day, the armor of the Philistines, with its great champion Goliath, had defied all the armies of Israel. For when Saul and all Israel heard the words of the Philistines, they were dismayed and greatly afraid. And all the men of Israel, when they saw the man, fled from him, and were sore afraid.

At this critical moment young David, the shepherd lad, appeared on the scene. He heard the challenge, and saw the reaction of the army of Israel; but instead of fleeing, he faced the problem. This we must all do, for it is a long step toward a solution. There must be a calm appraisal of the problem which causes the fear. It was no small problem—a giant, a seasoned warrior, six cubits and one span high. Hear the lad: "Is there not a cause? Who is this . . . that he should defy the armies of the living God?" David discovered that there was a cause, and he said, ". . . Let no man's heart fail because of him, thy servant will go and fight with the Philistine" (1 Samuel 17:32).

When Saul heard of David's words, he sent for the lad, and would gladly have clothed him in the king's armor. But David was determined to be himself and to use the resources he had developed. He refused Saul's armor and sword, saying, "I have not proved them." They were not part of himself. You and I can accomplish the mission when we make use of those things which are really our own. David properly evaluated himself in terms of the problem he faced. And like the apostle, Paul, he could say, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

Can We Fall From God's Grace

IN THE MAY 4 issue of The Free Will Baptist, there appeared an article by the Rev. J. C. Griffin dealing thoroughly with the proposition of eternal security, and in support of the Free Will Baptist doctrine of man's responsibility in the area of maintaining his favor with God by a constant turning away from sin in order to keep from falling from God's grace. This article led me to try, in my humble way, to lend support to this account written by a preacher that taught me as a child.

I was reared in a Free Will Baptist home by Free Will Baptist parents, and attended Free Will Baptist church until I was grown. Some years later I studied for the ministry under a church which gave me considerable exposure to the doctrine of eternal security. As a result of this rather extensive exposure, I am led to believe that my approach to the question of doctrine before us may, in one sense of the word, be unique. By this I do not wish to infer that I am in any way an expert, but rather that there is a slight possibility of a different point of view.

In the first place, I find it difficult to separate the doctrine of eternal security from the rapid growing condition of Modernism. The two appear to have at least common ancestry in that they came into existence as the direct result of man's attempt to make a social organization out of God's Church through what he might call elevated theology. Many acceptable principles are still being taught in schools of religion, but the smell of Modernism is strong in many areas. Modernism is comparable to cancer in that it eats into the church as cancer eats into the flesh before it is recognized as such and inflicts its damage.

We should thank God for the opportunity we have to educate ourselves as never before; but, we should, at the same time, open our eyes to the added responsibility educators must accept. Modernism has found its greatest ally in many of our schools of higher learning. It is from these schools that we receive the so-called brilliant interpretations that are making our churches sick. Things have gone so far that now most any unorthodox interpretation based on any area of reasoning is considered brilliant theology, but we should remember that from great scholars came the doctrine and the support for the doctrine of eternal security. The fifth Psalm gives the Modernist little comfort as can be seen in Verses 4 and 5, and in Verses 9 and 10: "For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee. The foolish shall not stand in thy sight; thou hatest all workers of iniquity. . . . For there is no faithfulness in their mouth; their inward part is very wickedness; their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue. Destroy them, O God; let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions; for they have rebelled against thee."

The time for a reawakening is here. Those who stand so firmly against the obvious and Scriptural principle that man can and does fall from the grace of God, die only trying to convince themselves that they have purchased a cheap fire insurance. We can readily admit that the belief in eternal security makes for a more comfortable and attractive religion, but this does not make it either right or just.

We must thank theology for giving us precious information concerning our Lord and Saviour. Yet, if we boil the pot down, push aside the fancy conjectures, and look honestly at the theological position, we will soon discover that in reality, theology is man's poor attempt to explain the explanation and define the definition.

Many theologians, in solving a problem, will turn to the time-honored system of reasoning. Although, we are not theologians, I see no reason why we too cannot use this system to support our area of thought. It appears that most people in Protestant circles stand ready to boast of their God-given freedom of will. This simply means that we have the power of choice. We can choose that which is good or that which is evil. In order to make a choice, we must necessarily use our mental processes. We are placed under conviction by the Holy Spirit, and yet we still have to think our way to the altar of God. No magic forces us there. Through our ability to think and our privilege to make a choice, we either accept Christ as our Saviour with the realization that we are lost in sin without Him, or we do not realize our sinful condition and therefore feel no need for Jesus. Now let us presume that the need for a Saviour is felt and an honest profession of faith follows. All this has come about by the exercise of our own free will, or if you please, the power of choice.

All will agree that at this point Satan attempts to influence us as never before, because Satan has little need to prod and tempt those that are already within his ranks. If somewhere along the way we begin to turn away from God's work, if we begin to crucify Christ afresh, if we turn from God and fall into a pattern of sin even greater than before conversion, how, tell me, can we expect God to accept the responsibility for our falling! At this point, do not disgust intelligent men with the defense that, should the above happen, the person was not saved in the first place. The Bible teaches from Luke 8:13, that "They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away." By our own admission we have simply exercised our power of choice, and as a result of this choice, we have belittled God, we have denied the sincerity of Christ, we have degraded the church, and we have admitted by our actions that we are no better than we were before conversion. How can we be foolish enough to assume that we can hide behind the man-created doctrine of eternal security, while at the same time we devote our lives to the kingdom of hell! If we are completely honest in our approach to the question of what constitutes salvation and how this condition of salvation is maintained, we will discover that at no point can man shed his responsibility to God. If we are to support the doctrine of once saved always saved, we are, in reality, relieving man, in a true sense of the word, of his responsibility to God; and we have, at least in

Gum Swamp Church Reports Revival

Revival services were conducted March 27—April 2 at the Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church near Greenville, North Carolina, with the Rev. Owen Ganey as the evangelist. There were 47 decisions during the meeting. The pastor, the Rev. Guy F. Owens, baptized 37 the following Sunday and received 36 into the church.

Mr. Owens heartily recommends Mr. Ganey to any church who desires real revival, and states that he is one of the finest personal workers he has ever known.

Two Free Will Baptists Among Columbia Bible College Graduates

Two Free Will Baptists were among those receiving degrees in the 1960 commencement at Columbia Bible College May 30.

Mr. Cox, a graduate of the Free Will Baptist Bible College where he received his bachelor of arts degree in 1958, wrote his master's thesis on the subject, "Applying the Messages of the Minor Prophets." He is a native of Washington, North Carolina, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert R. Cox of that city. He assumes the pastorate of the Beaufort, North Carolina, Church June 1. He is married to the former Miss Mary Jo Wall of Mount Hope, West Virginia. They have one child, one-year-old David Randolph.

Mr. Ballard is a native of Asheville, North Carolina, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Loy E. Ballard of Dawson's Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Scotland Neck, North Carolina. He has also studied at East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina; North Carolina State College, Raleigh, North Carolina; and the University of South Carolina, Columbia, South Carolina. He is married to the former Miss Winifred Underwood of Smithfield, North Carolina, and is available for pastoral call.

Mr. Cox's address as of June 1 is 203 Broad Street, Beaufort, North Carolina; Mr. Ballard's is 601 South First Street, Smithfield, North Carolina.

Other Free Will Baptist students enrolled at Columbia Bible College during the school year include Miss Laura Belle Barnard, veteran foreign missionary, of Glenville, Georgia, and the Rev. Jimmy Hughes of New Bern, North Carolina, in the Graduate School; Miss Dianne Arnold, Miss Pa-

Cordova, Alabama, Church Reports Successful Revival

The Rev. J. E. Floyd Sr. conducted revival services at the Cordova Free Will Baptist Church, Cordova, Alabama, April 11-22. The Lord blessed these services; there were 56 decisions during the meeting. Six people united with the church.

The pastor of the church, the Rev. E. B. Ledlow, states: "The church was drawn closer to the Lord through this meeting, and the revival is still going on in our hearts. Some think this meeting was the best in many years. Our church is growing. We broke the attendance record on Easter Sunday with an attendance of 220 in Sunday school. We are averaging around 200 in church services on Sunday mornings. I praise the Lord for His blessings toward us."

CRAGMONT BOOSTER BAND DRIVE FOR JUNE

Mrs. L. E. Ballard, Chairman
Box 338, Scotland Neck, North Carolina

AT A RECENT MEETING of the Board of Directors of Cragmont Assembly, Incorporated, a plan was worked out for creating a continuing sustaining fund for Cragmont Assembly through soliciting annual members for the Cragmont Booster Band upon the basis of an annual membership gift of $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for young people under 20. June was selected as the month for this special drive this year, since it is Cragmont Month in the united program schedule for North Carolina. Mrs. L. E. Ballard was chosen to direct the drive. The goal set for 1960 is 1,500 members.

Each person who makes the donations, or gifts, as indicated above, either to the director or to any one of the solicitors will receive a signed membership card for the year, which has been printed in convenient pocketbook size.

The first ten persons receiving membership cards are: Rev. Henry Melvin, Rev. Wayne Smith, Rev. C. J. Harris, Mrs. J. C. Moye, Rev. L.E. Ballard, Mrs. L.E. Ballard, Miss Verdie Davenport, Mrs. Leone Mereer, Rev. J. E. Wooten and Mrs. J. E. Wooten. Names of the first one hundred members will be published in the order in which they reach the director, and will also be framed and posted permanently at Cragmont.

The representatives for the various districts are: Albemarle—Rev. Bobby Aycock; Eastern—Mrs. J. C. Griffin, Miss Velma Morris, Mr. Fountain Taylor; Central—Rev. C. J. Harris, Mr. Jimmy Spain; Cape Fear—Mrs. E. R. Warriek, Rev. Frank Davenport; Western — Mrs. Garland Rieh, Mrs. Bagley Morris; Pee Dee—Mrs. Hattie Adcock; Piedmont — Rev. William Calvert, Miss Novela Propst; Blue Ridge — Rev. Wayne Smith, Mrs. J. E. Wooten. (This list is incomplete. Other names will be added later.) These persons will give their support to the program at conventions, union meetings, etc. and will work with the solicitors being secured for local churches.

If this membership plan can be successfully operated from year to year it should make drives for operating and upkeep funds for Cragmont unnecessary. We earnestly seek the co-operation of all who love Cragmont for the drive. Write the chairman if you are willing to help in your church. Membership gifts may be sent directly to the chairman at any time, and cards will be promptly mailed.

SPECIAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE REPORT

An official Executive Committee meeting of the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists was held at Elm Grove Church, May 12, 1960, for the purpose of hearing charges against Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

On May 17, 1960, the Executive Committee met in official session at Mount Olive Junior College for the purpose of studying the observation and grievances which were presented against said College at the above mentioned meeting.

After carefully and prayerfully considering the matters against the College, and after a period of questioning the administration and chairman of the board, we, the Executive Committee, wish to make public the following report:

In view of our study of the attacks against Mount Olive Junior College, a College owned and operated by the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists, we, as the Executive Committee, wish to reaffirm our faith in our College. We further wish to inform our people that we find the observation and grievances to represent personal views rather than denominational conflict as it relates to our policies, procedures and theology.

We urge our people to continue to support the College, with the assurance that it is filling a vital place within our denomination, and that your support is going to a College which is sound in principle and practice.

Signed:

- N. B. Barrow, President
- R. H. Jackson, Vice-President
- C. H. Overman, Assistant Secretary
- Rom Mallard, Treasurer
- Walter Carter, Member
- E. E. Edwards, Member

The secretary disqualified himself because of his affiliation with the College. (This special report received the endorsement of six of the seven members of the Executive Committee.)

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: In what way should one keep himself in the love of God as required. "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life" (Jude 21)?—A. R. Sims, Illinois.

Answer: We do this as we obey the Word of God. "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love" (John 15:10).

No one is thus keeping himself without having a Christlike love for all Christians, and then again we must love a lost, sin-cursed world (that is, of course, the lost souls) in order to be Christlike. Christ had to love us when we were lost and most unloveable; otherwise, we should still be lost. (See John 3:16.) "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus" (Ephesians 2:4-7). "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Romans 5:8). Some Christians have been known to act just the opposite to the teaching of these and other such passages. There is no doubt but such behavior on the part of Christians was what caused Paul to write: "And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you" (Ephesians 4:30-32). "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren" (1 John 3:16). God is a giver because He loves, and, in His category, one who loves always manifests that love in his giving.

Question: Are we to understand that Paul means to teach that the unmarried state of a Christian is to be preferred to that of marriage in the seventh chapter of 1 Corinthians?—Jannie Morris, Arkansas.

Answer: Yes, I think so, if the Christian wants to give everything possible in the cause of Christ. This, Paul says, could be done better while single. "For I would that all men were even as I myself. But every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that. I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I. But if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn" (1 Corinthians 7:7-9). Even though this is what I understand him to teach, I am duty bound to say he never forbade to marry. Neither did he sanction those who thus taught. He also exhorted those who were already married to remain in that way of life fulfilling all obligations that go with it: "And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband: But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife" (Vv. 10, 11).

Some scholars think that the exhortation to the single persons not to marry would pertain to the particular time in which Paul gave it and not later. Perhaps there is a sense in which this is true, but I am inclined to believe that such circumstances rather than the particular time would determine whether or not a Christian worker could better serve single than married. Some of the Christian scholars who think it was for Paul's time only that he offered this advice to single Christians give, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth" (1 Timothy 4:1-3), to support their view. When this was written, of course, it was later than when 1 Corinthians 7 was written, but not that much later as I understand but rather a different circumstance accompanied the advice in 1 Timothy 4. I feel that were Paul here today giving advice to pioneer missionaries, it would be the same as that given in Corinthians 7:7-9; and that, if he were instructing a young pastor such as Timothy in his day, he would advise him in a similar way to that given in 1 Timothy 4. None of us should forget what Jesus taught in John 14:16-18. "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things that shall come. He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you" (John 16:13, 14). Marriage, like all sacred relations and pursuits in life, should be consummated only when one has waited upon the Lord and, in that waiting upon Him received from Him detailed guidance as to whom, when and under what circumstances to marry.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

A NOBLE DESIRE

"... Sir, we would see Jesus" (John 12:21).

There can be no more noble desire than that of really seeing Jesus. Those who made this noble request were Greeks who came to worship at feast, but they seemingly were not satisfied with the regular routine of things—they wanted to see Jesus.

I have recently read two poems on this text which tell a great truth. For this week's meditation I am passing them on to you with the prayer that they will prove a blessing to all who read them.

We Long to See Jesus

We would see Jesus! we have longed to see Him
Since first the story of His love was told;
We would that He might sojourn now among us
As once He sojourned with the Jews of old.

We would see Jesus! see the infant sleeping,
As on our mother's knees we, too, have slept;
We would see Jesus! see Him gently weeping,
As we, in infancy, ourselves have wept.

We would behold Him, as He wandered lowly—
No room for Him, too often, in the inn—
Behold that life, the beautiful, the holy,
The only sinless in this world of sin.

would see Jesus! we would have Him with us,
 a guest beloved and honored at our board;
 blessed were our bread if it were broken before the sacred presence of the Lord!

would see Jesus! we would have Him with us,
 Friend of our households and our children dear,
 so still, should death and sorrow come among us,
 Would hasten to us, and would touch the bier.

would see Jesus! not along in sorrow,
 But we would have Him with us in our mirth;
 at whose right hand are joys forever,
 Doth not disdain to bless the joys of earth.

would see Jesus! but the wish is faithless;
 Thou still art with us, who hast loved us well;
 Thy blessed promise, "I am with you always,"
 is ever faithful, O Immanuel!

—Anna E. Hamilton.

We Would See Jesus

would see Jesus when our hopes are brightest
 And all that earth can grant is at its best;
 when not a drift of shadow, even the lightest,
 Blurs our clear atmosphere of perfect rest.

would see Jesus when the joy of living Holds all our senses in a realm of bliss, that we may know He hath the power of giving Enduring rapture more supreme than this.

would see Jesus when our pathway darkens,
 Beneath the dread of some impending ill;
 when the discouraged soul no longer harkens
 To hope, who beckons in the distance still.

would see Jesus when the stress of sorrow Strains to their utmost tension heart and brain;
 that He may teach us how despair may borrow
 From faith the one sure antidote of pain.

would see Jesus when our best is taken,
 And we must meet, unshared, all shocks of woe;
 because He bore for us, alone, forsaken,
 Burdens whose weight no human heart could know.

would see Jesus when our fading vision,
 Lost to the consciousness of earth and sky,
 has only insight for the far elysian;
 We would see Jesus when we come to die!

—Margaret J. Preston.

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him
 as he is" (1 John 3:2).

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF ELDER J. R. TAYLOR

In obedience to resolution of the last conference, it has become our sad duty to write a sketch of the life of Elder J. R. Taylor who has been called away by the resistless hand of death.

He was the son of Kinchen Taylor and Polly, his wife, and was born May 12, 1849. He joined the Methodist church at the age of fourteen and remained with them until the year of 1864. Then he joined the Disciple church on July 15, 1869. He lived a consistent Christian life while with the Disciples. In the year 1880, he joined the Sts. Delight Free Will Baptist Church, Greene County, North Carolina. His life being so Christlike and being impressed with the duty of preaching the gospel, the church, on the 27th of December, 1890, granted him license to exercise his gifts. He did so well as a licensed preacher, the church thought it proper to call him to ordination, which they did by calling on Elders T. N. Manning, J. T. Philips and J. M. Barfield, Presbytery.

He was ordained in the year of 1891. Brother Taylor lived a consistent life as a Christian and as a minister of the gospel, and he was a light to his church. He applied himself to the work as best he could. He endeavored to reach the high plains of Christianity and promote the cause of Christ's Kingdom on earth.

He married Josephine Cox, and he was a devoted husband to his companion, a loving father to his children, and a sympathizing neighbor, but the brother's task is all done on earth. On the first of October, 1890, he went to join the church above to receive the reward that awaits the faithful in Christ. Dear brother, your presence we cannot have any more on earth. It is sad to know we cannot meet any more here, but it is a joy to know all who live faithful in Christ will meet some sweet day never to part, where they will be permitted to bathe their weary souls in seas of heavenly rest, and not a wave of trouble roll across their peaceful breast.

Brother Taylor has laid down the cross to take up the crown that the Lord has promised to them that love and fear Him. The grave may hold his body for a time, but his spirit is mingling with the redeemed of the Lord. Rest on, brother, enjoy the fruits of your faith. We hope to meet you some sweet day.

T. N. Manning

(The above obituary was copied from the minutes of the Central Conference when in session at Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church, Greene County, North Carolina, November 10-12, 1898.)

tory was that he refused to be cowed by irrelevant circumstances. Saul doubted him: "Thou art but a youth . . . not able to go against this seasoned warrior." His brother ridiculed him: "With whom have you left those few sheep in the wilderness?" You have come just to show off—go home and tend the sheep. Goliath berated and threatened him. But all of this was secondary to the main issue. David had properly assayed the situation and his relationship to it. He told of his experience in slaying a lion and a bear that had molested his father's sheep, saying, ". . . The LORD that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. . . ." (Vs. 37).

David proceeded upon a religious assumption—that a person who does his best to know and do God's will is sustained by a cosmic support which adds to his strength, makes stable his assurances, and increases his chance of success. "The Lord will deliver me."

When the Philistine saw David, he disdained and cursed him: "Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves?" David answered, ". . . thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand; . . ." (Vv. 45, 46).

So David prevailed over the Philistine and slew him, and victory and peace came to Israel. David loved God, and it was his faith in Him that brought out the best in him, and enabled him to stand when all Israel fled.

You and I can meet the fearful giants of life and be victorious, if we love God and keep a firm faith in Him. Jesus Christ is the answer to all man's problems: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."—Free Methodist.

Home Missions Newsletter

National Association of Free Will Baptists

Nashville, Tenn.
May 14, 1960

Dear Friend of National Home Missions:

Our emphasis is in getting the gospel to the unsaved here and in all of North America. This program is making its contribution to the honor of Christ, and to our denomination, outstanding and distinctive.

The proof of the value of our missionary conviction is seen by our missionary work in Alaska, Canada-New England, Hawaii, Mexico and various other places. God is using our men and women with signal effectiveness.

The future of our missionary program is as bright as the promises of God, and as secure as its friends make it, by supporting it loyally, regularly and generously.

It has been a privilege and an honor to be associated with our missionaries, the Board of National Home Missions, and you, through these past years. Your prayers and sincere concern in my behalf shall never be forgotten.

As we approach the summer season, which is one of our most difficult times financially, will you not join me in undergirding the National Home Missions work with a gift?

The treasurer's report for April shows that for the first four months of 1960 we are considerably short of the budget in receipts. Please send the amount the Lord directs you to give.

Yours for Christ and Missions,
Homer E. Willis

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

Rev. J. Cicero Smith

Early on the morning of June 26, 1959, the death angel visited our home and claimed the life of our dear husband and daddy, the Rev. J. Cicero Smith.

He was born on November 26, 1900, in Pitt County, North Carolina, and first attended Rose Hill Free Will Baptist Church. On June 26, 1955, he was ordained as a minister of the gospel at Hugo Free Will Baptist Church. He pastored the Maury Church until May of 1958. He was faithful to the end and had a passion for lost souls.

In January of 1919, he was married to Coralie Williams who preceded him in death in 1939. To this union were born six sons and two daughters. Later in 1943, he was married to Selma Humble whom he leaves to mourn his passing, along with four sons and one daughter.

His presence will be missed, but his memory will remain in the hearts of his family and many friends. We feel that our loss in heaven's gain.

Selma Smith and Family

Theron N. Stocks

On March 8, 1960, Brother Theron N. Stocks went for a closer walk with the Lord. He was born March 12, 1908, and died at the age of 51.

Surviving are his wife, the former Rose Lee Paramore of the Pactolus community to whom he was married in 1929; a son, Kai Pace Stocks of the home; a daughter, Mrs. Dalton E. Heath of Greenville; two grand children; three brothers, Vester, Fountain V. and Arch Bishop Stocks, all of near Greenville; and a sister, Mrs. J. Sam Harris of near Greenville.

Brother Stocks was a faithful member of the Grace Free Will Baptist Church of Greenville, North Carolina. He was faithful to his Sunday school, worship service, men's fellowship and other activities of his church. He was program chairman of the men's fellowship at the time of his death.

He loved music; a breath harp was his special. His last special number was "Just a Closer Walk with Thee." He is missed by all, but our special prayers are for his family who miss him most.

Mrs. Ella Starling Pittman

Whereas our heavenly Father, in His divine wisdom, has seen fit to call from our midst unto Himself the spirit of our dear sister and friend, Ella Pittman, we the members of the Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church, Kenly, North Carolina, desire to express in these resolutions our sympathy to those who feel most keenly our common loss, and to pay tribute to the memory of our faithful sister and God's servant.

Sister Pittman passed to her reward on March 31, 1960, having served as a faithful member of our church for a number of years. Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Elijah Phillips, Mrs. Walter Parrish and Mrs. A. V. Boykin; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Rufus Starling; one son, L. G. Pittman; and one stepson, L. F. Pittman.

We shall miss her, but we feel that her mission here has been courageously fulfilled.

NOTES

AND

By J. C. Griffin

THE WAY WE DID IT YEARS AGO

In going through some of our files of years ago, we came across our "Notes and Quotes" as published in The Free Will Baptist in the issue of May 24, 1933. For the sake of history and to bring to our attention conditions as to that date, our college at Eden, North Carolina, was burned to the ground. Because of this, many were sad and broken-hearted. Others did not care, and perhaps some rejoiced. My method of writing at that time was not on lengthy subjects, but short notes as you will see in this issue.

"If church members would keep away from 'blind tigers,' their business would be slow the whole bunch would cease operation." (I will say the same now in regards to ABC and other liquor stores.)

If church members would live out and not for Christ, the world would believe on Christ; but, since the church members are full of worldliness, their lives are detrimental to the salvation of others.

A professing Christian who follows sin is like the salvation of others as a frog is to the waterpipe. A frog stops the waterpipe; so the fellow who practices sin stops the flow of the Spirit in a revival meeting.

I have found a company of Holiness who exclude everyone who does not know their particular "shibboleth" to the extent that there is no fellowship with others at all, regardless of how holy others may live. In their words they say, "Our denomination is all that is holy." John thought that he and his associates were all and in all, so he rebade some fellows from working in the name of Jesus; but after Pentecost John thought differently. (See Mark 9:38-41.)

Do you believe that North Carolina Free Will Baptists can run a Bible school, considering all things? Yes! If North Carolina Free Will Baptists will repent of their sins committed against the school they did have, take hands in the name of Jesus Christ, get off the sidings onto the main line of the heavenly railroad and fully seated on the old gospel train, and listen to every call of the great Captain of our salvation, we can run a Bible school in spite of Satan and his forces. (My mind has not changed since 1933.)

"All dear to God must learn to endure," said Martin Luther. "Christians conquer when they suffer. When they resist, they lose the day."

As a denomination, are we willing to suffer for the sake of Jesus Christ and the church that we claim to love? You know that sometimes I think the most of us are willing for the other fellow to do the suffering, but let us enjoy the fruits. Is that not so when it comes to the expense of the church? We want the bills paid, but let Brother "T" do it. We want a Bible school, but we want the other fellow to pay for it. That has been fully demonstrated here in North Carolina, as well as in other sections; therefore, we have had some disgraceful failures. Brother, is your conscience clear? Can you look Jesus square in the face?

I have not changed my mind as to the operation of a Christian college or a Bible school. We can do it if we will let the prayer of Jesus, as uttered in Chapter 17 of John's Gospel be answered in our lives. Christ prayed for a oneness in the lives of His believers, but sometimes we do not want to let Him have His way. We want our own selfish way. Cain wanted his way; and from that day, we human beings have been prone to have our way.

I heard the late Bob Self say, "If you didn't get your religion on the same knee that I got mine, something is wrong with yours." Brother Self used this illustration to show the spirit of some of us; we think we are always right and others are wrong.

Someone has said, "Take life as you find it, but don't leave it so." This has been the trouble with the world. We take all that we can get and give as little as possible. I once heard the story of an old lady who left her home in North Carolina and went to a city out west. There she united with a church, and was assessed a dollar. She said, "I'm going back to North Carolina where it does not cost so much. I was a member of a church there for twenty years, and it never cost me but twenty cents." Yes, there are some people who want the church to go forward, but they want the other fellow to do the paying.

I served a church once that in the summer when the windows were raised, a certain fellow would be sure to be looking out the window when the offering plate was being passed. I do not think he ever saw the plate.

I heard of an old lady in a church where they had no offering plate but used a hat. This old lady would put her hand down in the hat and thump the bottom, which sounded something like a half dollar. The old deacon got wise to the procedure; so one Sunday he turned the hat upside down and shook it, but no money fell out. The Bible says, "Be sure your sins will find you out."

"Above all else this country needs a nation-wide revival of the old-fashioned, prayer meeting religion which will make every man and woman strive in every act of life to do that which on the great judgment day they will wish they had done."—Selected.

It takes a lot of good old-fashioned Christianity to get a fellow out to prayer meeting on a dark rainy night, after a hard day's work. But, thank God, we have some of that type yet, to my personal knowledge. As I meditate on these words, I think it would be nice for Jesus to come during midweek prayer service. Of course there would be some who would never see their loved ones at home again. Personally, I would like for Christ to come some Wednesday evening while in prayer meeting. Hallelujah! what a Saviour!

"I will sing unto the LORD, because he hath dealt bountifully with me" (Psalm 13:6).

"A good man obtaineth favour of the LORD: but a man of wicked devices will he condemn" (Proverbs 12:2).

THE FREE STICK

by Betty Swinford

DOUG was on the porch with Terry Price, his new friend, when he saw them coming up the path. There were three of them, and Doug knew at once what it was they wanted. Suddenly he was glad that it was dark. At least that way Terry couldn't see his face. He didn't think he could bear it if Terry found out.

"Excuse me a minute, Terry," Doug said quickly. "I'll be right back. C'mon up to my room, fellas."

He led the way quickly for fear Terry might come along too. Inside his room, he turned to face the three boys. The one who spoke seemed to be the leader and he was big—much bigger than Doug.

"Got them ready?"

Doug bit his teeth together hard. "No. Like I said before, Scorchy, I'm through printing those free sticks. I—I just can't do it anymore."

Scorchy's blue eyes squinted. "And why not?"

Doug looked him straight in the eye. "Because I've given my heart to Jesus. Cheating isn't fun anymore, Scorchy, because now I know that it's wrong."

"Well, isn't that cute!" the other boy sneered. "Look, if you want to go to Sunday school that's fine with me. But I still want the sticks you promised us!"

"It isn't just going to Sunday school, fellas. It's believing that Jesus died for your sins and then accepting Him as your Saviour. You see, He changes your heart and you just don't want to do things that you know are wrong."

"Can it!" Scorchy said sharply. He looked about the room. Then he smiled as he spied the small rubber stamp with the word free on it. The black ink pad was beside the stamp. He took it down from the shelf and carried it to Doug's desk.

"No! I won't let you do it!" Doug protested. "I should have thrown it away!"

"I'm going to do it," Scorchy smiled. "And you're not going to stop me. If you try, or if you tell, then I'll say that this idea was all yours in the first place!"

Doug watched as Scorchy took three sticks from ice cream bars out of his pocket. With the rubber stamp he carefully stamped free on the ends of the sticks. A few minutes later the boys were gone. Only the rubber stamp was left behind to remind Doug of what had happened.

Quietly he knelt beside his bed and a little later he returned to Terry. They sat together on the porch step, but the fun had gone out of their evening.

"What happened, Doug?" Terry asked presently.

Doug's shoulders stooped a little lower. He couldn't bring himself to answer. He felt as bad as if he himself had taken those free sticks to exchange for ice cream bars!

"Terry, if I tell you something, would you try to understand?"

Terry brought his knees up close to his chin and wrapped his arms about them. "I'd sure try, Doug."

"Well, you know that before people are saved they do some pretty bad things sometimes, don't you?"

Terry grinned. "Sure!" Then he sobered. "You in some kind of trouble, Doug?"

Doug sighed. "Well, not exactly. You know there are six dairy bars in town? And some of the sticks in their ice cream bars are marked free.

"Sure! I got a free one only last week."

Serving Jesus

Juniors' hands can work for Jesus,
Glad to do His holy will;
Helping playmates, serving Mother.
They are serving Jesus still.
Let your hands be quick and true,
God will give them work to do.

Juniors' lips can move for Jesus,
Speaking gently all the while,
Making other people happy
With a love-word and a smile.
Let your speech in kindness fall,
Jesus listens to it all.

Juniors' feet can run for Jesus,
And for Him sweet comfort take
To the hearts bowed low in sorrow,
Blessing all for His dear sake.
Let your footsteps gladness bring,
Doing errands for the King.

—Selected.

"Yeah. That's where the trouble starts for me! I got a free stick once and thought how nice it would be to get ice cream bars all the time without having to pay." Terry sighed again. "You see, I have a small printing outfit and I made up a rubber stamp reading free. Scorchy and Joe and Eddie—they're the guys who left awhile ago—and I decided it would be a good job to make our own free sticks.

"Oh, I get it!" Terry said. "You made your own free sticks and began getting free ice cream bars!"

"That's it," Doug said miserably. "Some folks wouldn't get suspicious we went to a different dairy bar every time. Then I started going to Sunday school. I learned about Jesus—how He loves me and how He died for my sins. All of a sudden those free sticks weren't so much fun anymore. After I gave my heart to Jesus I realized how wrong it was, and I stopped."

Terry frowned. "If you stopped, the why are you so worried?"

"Because the other fellas are still using my rubber stamp to mark sticks. They say they'll tell if I don't let them use it."

"Have you prayed about it?"

"Yes, I have. And you know something I believe I've just made up my mind what to do!" Doug paused to rub his chin thoughtfully. "I'm going to talk to the manager of the dairy bars and tell him what I've done. And that's not all—I've got enough money in the bank in my room to pay him for all the free ice cream bars I've taken. Terry, I feel better already!"

"A person always feels good when he obeys the Lord," Terry said. Then he stood up. "Come on, Doug, I'll go with you!"—My Pleasure.

G. T. A. Has Mother-Daughter Banquet

The Go-Tell Auxiliary of St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church in New Bern, North Carolina, entertained at a mother-daughter banquet, Friday night, May 6, 1960, in the social room of the church, which was decorated throughout with spring flowers.

The tables were covered with white linen cloths and centered with white gladioli in crystal bowls, flanked by green candles in crystal candleholders tied with blue ribbons, carrying out the G.T.A. colors.

At each place was a miniature arrangement of flowers in the same colors, these being arranged by members of the G.T.A. The program booklets in green, white and blue colors were made by the girls of the auxiliary and were at each place.

Each mother was presented a corsage of red roses by her daughter.

Special guests were the Rev. Ralph Lightsey and son, Nelson; Mrs. W. J. Gaskins, Eastern District youth director; and Mrs. Bernard Adkins, local youth director.

The menu consisted of tomato juice, baked ham with apple sauce, green beans, relish tray, potato salad, hot rolls and butter, homemade cake and ice cream, and iced tea. The meal was served by members of the Anita Sparks Circle of the woman's auxiliary with Mrs. Miller Harrison, chairman.

The program was under the direction of the G.T.A. sponsors, Mrs. B. J. Gaskins and Mrs. Manley Jenkins. Everyone sang "Faith of Our Mothers." Ann Gassaway, president of the G.T.A., welcomed the mothers, and Mrs. W. E. Baldree, president of the woman's auxiliary, responded.

Mr. Lightsey gave the invocation. A duet entitled "My Mother's Prayer" was sung by Sandra Tilghman and Sherry Provo, accompanied by June Lightsey. Karen Hancock and Diane Provo presented a skit, and Anna Lynn Gaskins gave a humorous reading. The song "Mother" was sung by the G.T.A. members.

The program closed with all forming a friendship circle and singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH'S PARTICIPATION IN POLITICS QUESTIONED

THE RECENT POLICY statement from the Vatican will greatly increase Protestant fears concerning the influence of the Roman Catholic Church in American politics, according to a prominent Protestant spokesman.

Dr. James DeForest Murch, chairman of the Commission on Evangelical Action of the National Association of Evangelicals, said that "all Protestants will now be more hesitant than ever to support a Roman Catholic nominee for the Presidency."

Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, on May 17, carried an authoritative editorial stating that the Church has a duty to intervene in the political field and that its laymen "must never disregard the teachings and directions of the Church" in any area of life. This was interpreted in some quarters as an indication that ecclesiastical pressures might be exerted on any member of the Roman Catholic church to be elected as President.

"The Roman church is completely committed to the doctrine of the union of church and state, as its canon law, papal bulls, encyclicals and historic practice abundantly testify," Murch said. "This doctrine is taught in their schools and loyal Catholics must believe it.

"While it is true, as some Protestant and Romanist leaders have recently pointed out that there is now and has been for some time a school of thought in American Catholicism which questions this doctrine, we must remember that the Roman church is a totalitarian system and that official doctrine is changed only when its supreme authority, the pope, announces ex-cathedra that a new doctrine has been approved. Members of the hierarchy or distinguished Romanist laymen might express views contrary to traditional doctrine but these pronouncements would be meaningless so far as the Vatican is concerned."

Murch added, "That is why American Protestants have been hoping that the pope or the College of Cardinals would speak up in the midst of the current politico-religious controversy in America and clarify the issue."

Bearing Good Fruits

(Lesson for June 19)

Lesson: Matthew 7:15-23; Luke 13:6-9.

Golden Text: John 15:4.

INTRODUCTION

To point out a concrete example of what the Lord is trying to teach us in these verses, we need only to turn back to 1 Samuel and read again the story of how the people selected Saul as the first king of Israel and of how he failed them and the Lord. When Samuel went to Bethlehem to anoint a successor to Saul, the Lord reminded him of the great mistake he was about to make in his choice of Eliab. When this first of Jesse's sons came before Samuel, he was greatly impressed with his appearance and was ready to anoint him, saying, ". . . Surely the Lord's anointed is before him. But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart" (1 Samuel 16:7). Therefore, since we cannot read a man's heart as the Lord does, Jesus tells us that we can only know him by his fruits.—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. The pious appearance of false prophets and teachers makes them especially dangerous (Matthew 7:15).
2. It is not so much the leaves of a tree but the fruit it bears that reveals its true character (Vs. 16).
3. The ax of God's judgment will eventually fell everyone whose fruit shows that his character is corrupt (Vv. 18, 19).
4. The fate of the false pretender, no matter what he claims to be, will be the eternal fire (Vs. 19).
5. Though we are taught not to judge the motives of men, we are able to discern their character by their works (Vv. 16-20).
6. Not all professors are possessors of the new nature, and not all prophets proclaim the Word of God (Vv. 21, 22).
7. It is not enough to claim to belong to the Lord; we must bear His seal of identification (Vv. 21-23; cf. 2 Timothy 2:19).

8. As fruit trees serve only the one purpose of bearing fruit after their kind, so a Christian fulfills his purpose only if he bears the fruit of the Spirit (Luke 13:6).

9. The Lord is not concerned with the mass only, but that each and every Christian should bear fruit (Vs. 7).

10. It is especially distasteful to the Lord to see fruitlessness where He had bestowed special effort to produce fruit-bearing (Vv. 8, 9).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Zephaniah 3:2 uses the figure of a wolf as showing the true likeness of a false leader in Israel: "She obeyed not the voice; she received not correction; she trusted not in the Lord; she drew not near to her God. Her princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves; they gnaw not the bones till the morrow. Her prophets are light and treacherous persons: her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have done violence to the law" (3:2-4). The evening wolf is one which waits until darkness for his depredations. The disastrous results upon the flock are not entirely evident until the next day when the wolf is gnawing the bones of the sheep he has destroyed. The word, ravaging, is defined: Eagerness for plunder; rapacity.—The Standard Commentary.

2. Specifically, what is some of the fruit by which we may know the good trees from the evil ones? Yes, the answer is in God's Word, and we can find it in the writings of the apostle, John. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world" (1 John 4:1-3). What could be plainer than these words regarding the identification of false prophets, preachers, teachers, and such like? Therefore, Jesus says that we should beware of those who come to us in sheep's clothing, but like wolves they deny and try to destroy the incarnation of the Son of God. They deny that the Lord Jesus Christ was born of the virgin, Mary, and therefore deny that Jesus Christ came in the flesh. These, John tells us, have the spirit of antichrist, which means that they, themselves, are miniature antichrists. John further tells us, saying "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine (the doctrine of the virgin birth of Christ), receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 1:10, 11).—The Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

3. Take Jehovah's Witnesses for an example. They teach that Jesus was a created Being, like the angels, and that He was not eternal God. All false sects teach some Bible truths, but what they teach concerning the Lord Jesus Christ points out their wolfish character.

4. To further understand what God expects of His people, we turn to a passage of Scripture from the book of Luke. In Verses 3, 5 of Luke 13, Jesus warned His listeners that unless men repent they shall perish as others who refused to repent. The parable which Jesus then utters is intended to enforce the warning to repent.

Some trees bear no fruit even in the midst of a good environment. This parable is directed to all who do not bring forth fruit; whereas, the discussion from the Sermon on the Mount was directed against false teachers and given to Christians in discerning the character of these false teachers. "He spake also this parable; A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none" (Vs. 6). The tree was in the vineyard with all the other trees. Its chances to produce fruit were the same as all the others. The tree had an owner, which certainly means that the tree was not there by chance. Some expense was involved.—The Bible Student (F.W.B.).

5. William Booth sounded the alarm in reference to false prophets and their teaching. He said, "I am of the opinion that the chief dangers which confront the coming century will be religion without the Holy Spirit, Christianity without Christ, forgiveness without repentance, salvation without regeneration, and heaven without hell!"—Selected.

sues. This statement from the Vatican is most enlightening, because it removes all doubt that sooner or later intense ecclesiastical pressures could be applied to any Roman Catholic who might be elected President of the United States."

CAN WE FALL FROM GOD'S GRACE?

part, taken away from man his power of choice, or the exercise of his free will. In order to have the privilege to choose righteousness, it must follow that we also have the right to choose evil.

We either walk in the paths of righteousness, or we turn and walk the crowded road to hell. We either grow in grace, or we become dwarfed in sin. We either reject the unsound doctrine of eternal security, or we entertain the likelihood of becoming lost while hiding behind a false sense of security. We cannot, and we must not, allow ourselves to become bloated with a sense of false security, while at the same time we forfeit our greatest aspect of human dignity—man's responsibility to God through the exercise of our free will. "Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things ye shall never fail" (2 Peter 1:10).

We have free will to be lost, free will to be saved, but free will forever; for here is the right to choose God, and through constant effort and service to Him, we can maintain our salvation.

COUNTING THE COST

C. H. Overman

As all will readily agree, it is not uncommon to fail. It is wise, however, upon failure, to seek to find the reason for it. There are many decisions in life, and with each one, comes the possibility of failure. This may be best accepted if we just accept it as a part of human nature; and at the same time, remember that God will give us His grace in times of decision.

Opportunities come to the person who is willing to be of service to his fellow man and the cause he represents. In going from one position or job in life, he has many questions which must be answered first, such as: "Is it the right thing to do? Is it an advancement (not necessarily financial)? How will it affect my family? Is it the best for me?" There are many other questions which flood into the mind when a time of decision comes. In essence, it means an evaluation of the cost from every standpoint. Let it now be said that no one can decide for another. It is logical, therefore, to conclude that man, after he has weighed the matter carefully and counted the cost, should be able to reach a sane and logical conclusion. This is no more than God expects from any man.

Our Saviour very definitely taught the importance of counting the cost: "For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish. Or what king, going to make war against another king sitteth now down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand? Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassador, and desireth conditions of peace. So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14:28-33).

Christ spoke these words just after His discussion on discipleship. Jesus knew there would be some who would seek to follow for a time, but would turn back because they would not be willing to pay the price. He, therefore, illustrated the importance of first counting the cost before a decision is made.

Discipleship requires a willing spirit. He must be willing to count all things lost for Jesus' sake. The true disciple must be willing to forsake all and follow Jesus. Should a person embark upon a mission in the name of Christ, without having considered the cost, he is subject to turn back. For example, it is believed by many Bible scholars that this is what happened to John Mark on the first missionary journey with the apostle, Paul.

Jesus taught that, in the erection of any building, the cost is of first importance. Even today, those who plan to build a home, first consider the cost according to the amount which they have available to put into the building. The illustration which Jesus used is certainly true to life. The person who would begin to build, and then have to stop before completion due to the lack of funds would be looked upon as being unwise and foolish by those who pass by. Now, could not Jesus have also been thinking in terms of the spiritual house even more than a material structure? Actually, this seems to be the real import of what he was saying, for taken in its context, the subject is discipleship.

Christ further illustrated the cost of discipleship in reference to a king going to war. He first considers the need as to how many soldiers are needed, etc. To say the least, discipleship is a constant warfare. He who forgets this when beginning the Christian life is in great danger of losing the battle against the power of Satan and the evil forces which he has in the world. Warfare is costly in the material world, but in the spiritual world, it is even more costly, for it is a constant warfare.

A task worth completing will be costly. If our denomination's causes are invaluable, they will cost something. This cost will be felt in several different ways. Those who are leading these causes will certainly know from personal experience, just what the cost involves. They will suffer criticism from some sources, regardless to the decisions which are made. They will be working and planning when others are taking things for granted. Mission programs, educational programs, etc. are costly. May we be willing to count more than lay the foundation. We must be willing to finish the task before us. God has given us a task which He knows we are capable of doing, through and by His infinite grace, but let us be willing to pay the price; and let's be sure we have first counted the cost.

A Catholic President?

||
by Rev. F. B. Cherry

WASN'T THE TIME COME for us to quit thinking of our public officials in terms of their religious faith?" asks Senator Paul H. Douglas in the March, 1959, issue of Coronet magazine.

We are told by political propagandists not to consider a candidate's religious faith old-fashioned, intolerant, and a violation of the principle of religious freedom. However, there are those of us who feel that a candidate's whole life is affected by his religious beliefs and that, if they are not in accord with democratic ideals, he should not receive our vote.

Although a man has many parts, he is a unit. His life cannot be cut into neat segments. Whatever affects one part of his life affects his whole life; therefore, we believe that political candidates should expect their religious beliefs to be carefully scrutinized by the voters.

Since one of the leading presidential candidates is a Roman Catholic, this question of candidates' religious beliefs has been given much prominence. Should we refuse to vote for a man because he is a Roman Catholic? Do Roman Catholics have basic religious beliefs that are contrary to a Christian democracy? Is it a violation of the great principle of religious freedom to refuse to vote for a candidate on the basis of his religious belief?

CATHOLIC PRINCIPLES

The Roman Catholic church teaches that the pope of Rome is the successor of the apostle, Peter, and is endowed with the gift of infallibility when exercising his function as teacher of the church. It is not thought that the pope is an infallible human being, but that when he occupies the office of teacher of the church, he enjoys the infallible guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Therefore, his teachings are without error and are to be believed and obeyed as the Word of God. This belief is basic in all Roman Catholic doctrine and practice.

Moreover, Roman Catholics believe the pope of Rome is clothed with authority over the whole church, and that they have the right and duty to instruct the governments of the world. Pope Boniface VIII made this pronouncement in 1302: ". . . Both swords therefore, the spiritual and the temporal, are in the power of the church. The former is to be used by the church, and the latter for the church; the one by the hand of kings and knights, but at the command and permission of the priest. Moreover, it is necessary for one sword to be under the other, and the temporal authority to be subjected to the spiritual. . . ." This statement has never been retracted by any later pope.

A more recent declaration of the same doctrine is an editorial carried on the front page of the Vatican City newspaper on May 17, 1960: ". . . An unhealthy, anticlerical theory, recently singled out and publicly deplored by the Italian episcopate, has, in many minds, beclouded the basic principles of Christian doctrine on the structure of the church, on her mission and her teaching authority. There is a tendency to separate the Catholic from the ecclesiastical hierarchy, narrowing the liaison between them to the sacred ministry alone, and proclaiming the full independence of the believer in the civil field. Hence, the absurd dichotomy of conscience as between citizen and believer, as if the Catholic religion were only a special and occasional phase in the life of the soul, and not the powerful idea that involves and gives direction to man's whole existence." Remember, this is a recent quote from the Catholic newspaper in Vatican City which is under the direction and control of the pope.

Even more recently, Monsignor Francis J. Lally in an interview said, as quoted in the May 30, 1960, issue of U. S. News and World Report: "Like every other institution, the church has its regulations and all Catholics, as members of the church, are subject to the laws of the church. . . ." When asked if an encyclical of the pope were binding upon Catholics, he answered, ". . . It is intended to guide the faithful in applying the teachings of the church to their present circumstances, whatever these may be. . . ."

Now suppose that a faithful Roman Catholic were to become president of the United States, and the pope of Rome were to issue an encyclical not in accord with the basic democratic principles of our country, what would happen?

CATHOLIC PRACTICE

You may answer to the above argument that the pope will not make or issue an encyclical contrary to democratic principles. What proof do you have of that? Does the pope rule Vatican City on democratic principles? No, he rules as an absolute sovereign and claims to have the divine right to do so.

Furthermore, the pope claims to have authority to command Roman Catholics all over the world. The Catholic Encyclopedia declares: "In case of direct contradiction making it impossible for both jurisdictions to be exercised, the jurisdiction of the church prevails, and that of the state is excluded."

CATHOLIC PROGRAM

Even though essentially a religious organization, it is evident that the Roman Catholic Church is a powerful political system which is determined to subjugate the world. Samuel F. B. Morse has said, "The Papacy is a political system, despotic in its organization, antidemocratic and anti-republican, and cannot therefore exist with American republicanism."

If you do not believe this, take a look at the countries of the world where the Catholics are in power. The recent persecutions in Columbia and Spain give some idea of what treatment Protestants may expect under Catholic rule. In the Latin American countries where the Catholic church has

The People In The Yellow House

by Grace Cash

WHEN THE SUN SANK behind the ridge of pines surrounding Abbeville, like a dark-green lacy halo, Julia Lovett went to the back yard to gather the fresh-washed clothes. The clean, starched smell blended with the fragrance of honeysuckle and boxwood. Indeed, the whole town at near sundown seemed pure and undefiled. And yet they had settled here because they had no choice, Julia thought, and at the first opportunity they would leave it all behind.

Julia snapped off the wooden pins and with an armful of laundry, she started inside. At the sound of approaching footsteps she turned and saw that it was the neighbor who lived at the yellow house next door. The young woman stopped at the landline, marked by a straight mound of grass-covered earth, as though afraid to venture nearer.

"I'm Mrs. Ashley and I've come to welcome you to our street," she said, her smile showing a gap where a front tooth was missing. "You are Mrs. Lovett," she supplied when Julia appeared frozen with uncertainty. "Yes, we've been here three days," Julia answered. "I haven't yet found a minute to breathe, trying to get things in order."

"I know about moving," Mrs. Ashley smiled. "My Sid moves to a new place from one to three times a year. But do I complain? Not with a husband like Sid, not on your life."

Julia took a step toward the house, squirmed uncomfortably and forced herself to smile at the remark. "Richard was transferred to Abbeville," she volunteered grudgingly. "That's the only reason we left our first home." She did not add that their first home had been a joint gift from her parents and Richard's.

"Then you'll probably stay a while here," Mrs. Ashley said. "Why not come to church with us in the morning? We go to East Central."

Julia shook her head. "We left a nice church in Clayton," she said, "and somehow we can't imagine getting acquainted with new people. Not for a while anyway," she added, and turned to go.

"Just remember, the door is open and the invitation stands," Mrs. Ashley said. "The same for our house as the church."

"Thank you," Julia returned but she made no promise. She and Richard had discussed the wisdom of going slow about new people and above all, overfriendly church people.

That night Julia told Richard about the neighbor's overture. "I hear them now, probably practicing church songs for tomorrow," she smiled deprecatingly. "After I saw her at the clothesline, her oldest son made a wild round of circles over our front lawn with his new bicycle." She sighed. "I asked him to keep his playthings off our side and he said it was his first bicycle. He said he was practicing and was sorry. Maybe so, but can you imagine a 12-year-old boy with his first bicycle?"

Richard shook his head, equally dazed with a situation that they had not bargained for when the Kingston Milling Company had promoted him to manager of the branch plant located on Abbeville's east side. "One of my foremen lives down the block and he said this Hank was a bully, a sort of problem," Richard said. "I guess we'll have to go along with what we have. After all, it was the only house we could find and you can't buy and sell a house every day."

Julia felt sick at heart as she put the children to bed. All their lives, since their first date in Clayton High School, she and Richard had lived in a reputable part of town and had associated with the right kind of people. The Ashleys were only samples of the type who lived on East Lake Drive. Richard had wanted to live near the man in order to supervise the work and yet unable to come home frequently. It was perhaps the best they could have done under the circumstances and yet—

"Mommy, what's the neighbors' names?" Ricky asked as he knelt beside Susan for their evening prayers.

Julia felt drawn from her trance as by a whiplash. "The Ashleys," she replied puzzled. "Why, darling?"

"We want to tell God to bless them," Ricky answered. "Susan's so little, I'll be the asking."

Julia waited quietly until Ricky had spoken a few routine sentences, memorized long ago, and heard him add very sincerely, "Look down over the Ashleys in the yellow house where Hank has a new bicycle and don't let nothing happen to them. Amen." Quietly then, Ricky ran to Julia. "Mother, tomorrow may I play with Larry? He's my size."

"Go to bed, Ricky," Julia answered sternly. "Your father and I have told you to keep on our side."

Ricky went silently to his bed but Julia wondered how long the children would keep their distance. Children would be children and they had no sense of discrimination. Downstairs she found Richard lounging comfortably in his contour chair, ready to read the evening paper. "I think we have a very real problem," she said. "Trying to keep an eight-year-old boy on his side of the fence, especially when there is no fence. And, of course, Susan is right at his heels."

Richard laid the paper aside. After a lengthy silence, he snapped his fingers. "Why not put up a fence?" he suggested. "I'll order it tomorrow."

Julia's heart raced hopefully. "That's t swer," she smiled, but a frown traced her face. "Or it should be the answer."

Next morning Julia noticed that the Ashleys were up bright and early, and just as the coffee began perking on the Lovett stove, the family next door loaded into the old black automobile and headed for church. "Well, that's a relief," she sighed, "for an hour or so anyway."

"Maybe they'll go to the car races this afternoon," Richard daydreamed.

"Not a chance," Julia shot back. "I could tell by looking at Mrs. Ashley, they've made their religion top heavy."

"Julia, it's a typical mill town," Richard said thoughtfully. "These people have three values, self-preservation, self-production and religion."

"They don't interest me enough to make study of them," she said dismally. "I just know we're somehow in the wrong lane."

Later when the Ashleys and the Browns had the other families up and down the street had returned from the church and settled down for an afternoon of rest, Julia and Richard sat on the front porch near the creek pond where Ricky and Susan played. Hank Ashley rode up the street on his new bicycle, showing off his ability to sail through the air with arms outstretched. At the top of the hill, he turned and pedaled back to the hedge. He came up the walk, wearing his blond mop of hair tousled from his Paul Revere ride.

"I'd like to give you this," he told Julia, handing her a leaflet advertising a coming revival at Central Church.

"Well—thanks." Julia almost choked on the words.

Hank did not notice. He waved to Ricky and when he passed Susan, he pulled at her braids. Susan squealed with delight.

"Where's Larry?" Ricky asked.

Before Hank could answer, Julia called to Ricky. Without a backward glance, Hank trotted quietly back to his bicycle.

After that incident the Ashleys made no further effort to get acquainted. On Thursday workmen and materials arrived at the Lovett residence and before sundown, a long wire fence boldly partitioned the two houses. That same day Julia shopped for toys, a sand box for Susan, a scooter and a football for Ricky.

A shaky confidence that at last they had everything "fixed" replaced the old antagonism Julia felt for the neighborhood. Now she could relax when the children were at play. As she cleaned the house the next day she found the leaflet Hank had given her last Sunday.

Spurred by curiosity, she read it and was surprised that the sermons had such timely lessons. Tonight's service would be based on the question, "Are You a Displaced Person?" Very, very displaced, Julia answered silently, and threw the paper away.

Suddenly, then, a grinding crash jarred her senses, and for an instant she was too petrified to move. A funeral quiet followed and then Ricky's scream forced her to run into the yard. Ricky and Susan stood close together by the hedge, like two frightened little animals. She saw Hank's body crumpled in the street, his bicycle sprawled nearby. A pale-faced truck driver hovered over Hank. An ambulance careened down the hill and within minutes, Hank was whisked away to the hospital. Mrs. Ashley sat beside him, her lips parted in grief over the missing tooth.

Julia went to meet Sid Ashley who came toward her, wringing his hands. Before she could express sympathy, Mr. Ashley spoke. "I stayed behind to tell you about Hank," he said, his voice breaking. "Susan had started across the street for Ricky's football and Hank, he sees this truck bearing down on her. He was practicing on his bike and he drove out in front of the truck and stopped the driver before he hit Susan."

Julia's heart stood still. "If there is anything we can do to help," she offered lamely.

"Nothing I know of," he answered. "Guess I'll go now to the hospital."

"I'll drive you in," Julia offered.

"Thank you but Ab Smith's waiting with his car," Sid answered. "But you can come on over to see Hank if you'd like."

Julia called Richard and they arranged for Julia to stop by the mill for him. A half hour later they stood in the waiting room with Hank's parents.

"He's going to pull through," Sid assured them, as though they were the aggrieved, not he and his wife. "We talked with the doctor. Just a broken leg and a crushed shoulder."

Julia and Richard exchanged glances—just a broken leg and a crushed shoulder. Just this much anguish and suffering and disability to save a neighbor's child from the heavy wheels of a moving van.

"I think the worst investment we ever made at our house was that wire fence," Richard confessed. "I want to apologize, Sid."

"Oh, think nothing about it," Sid answered heartily, his face alight with restored hope for Hank. In her joy that Hank would live, Mrs. Ashley smiled with trembling lips, and again showed the place of the missing front tooth.

"Such things as missing front teeth don't matter," Julia thought, "if one's heart was right." These people had hearts of refined gold—these people who had wanted desperately to be their neighbors.

Julia turned to Sid. "The fence was a mistake," she said, in wholehearted agreement with Richard. "But, then, we have been in the wrong lane ever since we came to Abbeville. Yes, and while I remember, I want you to tell Hank we expect to attend revival, maybe tonight."

"Hank will be glad to hear that," Sid beamed. "He was really pulling for the revival. I guess he's sort of elected for such things."

"He's elected all right," Richard added.

"The elect, we might say," Julia smiled. "Just tell him the Lovett house and yards are open to him for practice."—Gospel Herald.

What Missions Has Done for My People

Benito Rodriguez

I AM DEEPLY GRATEFUL for the opportunity of testifying through this article as to what missions has done for my people in Cuba. May I first say that I cannot even attempt to fully cover this subject since only God could do that. There are several evangelical missions working in Cuba and all of them are contributing, in some measure, to help my people not only in the religious aspect but some of them are also doing a good work in the secular field of education. I will first testify as to what the Free Will Baptist Mission has done for my people in eighteen years of missionary work in Cuba. Just a brief word of testimony of what it has done for the author of this article: Both my family and I came out from image worship, spiritualism and the awful fear with which the witch doctor threatened us constantly, to meet Christ as our glorious Saviour. I was eighteen years old when I heard the gospel for the first time and accepted Christ as my Saviour. After a few months my mother, brother and grandfather were also saved and baptized by Rev. Thomas H. Willey, our mission director. A year later I came to help begin our Bible school in Cuba (in 1943), and after years of hard work was graduated in 1948. The following year I went to Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville for one school year and then returned to Cuba to work at the Bible school as teacher, pastor and helper in various other things. The Lord has blessed my life and work with the salvation of many precious souls and in many other ways. I am deeply grateful to the missionaries and the many Christians who have contributed to make my life what it is today, and the glorious hope of eternal life, and for the privilege of serving my Saviour.

To fully appreciate what the Free Will Baptist Mission has done for my people, I want to remind you of the words of our Lord in Matthew 16:26, "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" According to these words, the Lord Jesus said that the salvation of one single soul is worth more than the whole world. This being true, I will say that no one except God can evaluate what has been done just by our mission.

There have been over 3,000 souls saved by its work in the last eighteen years. At present we have some twenty-seven churches and approximately 100 preaching points along three of the six provinces of Cuba. Our Sunday schools are numerous and thousands of children are being taught in the Word of God and the Christian life. We consider this to be the most precious work and the hope of our mission. We have planted the seed of life in many cities, towns, villages and rural zones of our country; and, besides the precious harvest of souls already made, the Word is germinating in hundreds of new hearts every year.

Along with the salvation of souls, the Word has brought the transformation of customs and relationships to hundreds of homes. It has brought cleanliness where before there was none; it has improved it where there had been little. A person who has become clean inside has every desire to make clean his home and outward appearance. It has brought persons and entire families out of their isolated way of living into a wide circle of Christian brothers and friends, making them happier and more useful to God and society.

Also, it has freed persons from the possession of demons into a normal life and happiness in Christ the Saviour. Just close to our Bible school I know four families of whom some member was demon possessed. Many times they were completely mad, attempting to commit suicide, falling down with terrible attacks, and many other strange symptoms. There was no peace in these homes until the Lord brought it.

Then too, the mission work has also brought economic prosperity to those persons and families that have been saved, for they have been delivered from gambling, drinking, and many other vices harmful to their bodies in which they spent a large part of their usually limited income. Yet, as they have now served the Lord with their money, He has blessed (according to His promise) with the material things.

I have also known some of our Christians who have trusted God for their health in times of sickness and have been healed.

This has been another blessing and testimony to many others.

Not only has the gospel helped in the foregoing cases, but it has also helped to do away in a large measure with foolish and, in some cases, fearful superstitions that kept persons and families in fear of an uncertain future, substituting this fear with the glorious knowledge and hope of the life to come.

Our Bible school, which started in 1944, has already trained scores of young men and women for the ministry of the Word. Most of us who have been trained came from very poor families; and had it not been for the Bible school, we would never have had an opportunity to receive an education and be serving the Lord effectively. So here, in the name of all of those who have been trained in our Bible school, I want to express our gratitude to our brothers from the United States for their contributions and prayers through the years toward this great accomplishment. I especially thank our very dear directors and founders of this work, Rev. and Mrs. Thomas H. Willey, for their work of love and sacrifice among us through the years; and also I am deeply grateful to all other missionaries who have worked in our mission at some time or other.

Although our mission has not been able to do much in founding schools of secular education, some other missions that have been working in Cuba a longer time have founded a good number of these schools in addition to their evangelistic work. These schools are usually considered the best in education, discipline, and moral standards. Many of our professional men such as doctors, lawyers, teachers, etc., received the Bread of Life in the early days of their lives in some of these Christian schools, founded by the effort and love of missionaries.

It would be impossible to describe the influence of the work of missions upon my country, but I would say with sufficient evidence that it is deeply rooted in our thinking, customs and institutions. How I thank God for the missionary work done by this and other groups. All of it has been for the good of my people and the glory of God.

I believe, in this crucial hour in the political relationships of my country and the United States, that the influence of the missionary work done among people will be felt; and, no doubt, the ties of love among the Christians of both countries and our prayers will be of great help in settling the existing problems and misunderstandings between our countries.

I can gladly say for the glory of God that missions has done much for my people and I believe that the work of missions is on

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

Question: Please explain, "Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" (Matthew 6:25). Does Jesus mean by this that a Christian should not own property and provide for his and those for whom he is responsible while here on earth?—G. A. Mullins, Arkansas.

Answer: No! He could not have meant this and have said some other things on this very subject. "Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home" (John 19:25-27). In this passage we see Jesus making provision for His own mother as He assigns her watch care to His beloved disciple. The twenty-seventh verse here indicates that she followed Jesus' instructions and from that hour, perhaps to her death, she was cared for in John's own home. This also suggests that John, who well knew His teaching on this as other subjects, owned a home. Peter had a home, a wife and a mother-in-law in his home. "And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever. And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose, and ministered unto them" (Matthew 8:14, 15). This house, this mother-in-law and what else Peter had in the natural realm served the Master's physical or natural wants. Paul concurs with Jesus in teaching a young minister: "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel" (1 Timothy 5:8). George H. Sandison has the following to say in answering a similar question on Page 321 of his book, 1,000 Difficult Bible Questions Answered: "Jesus did not have a word to say against industry or prudence. His words in this instance were directed against the anxiety, worry, and foreboding which afflict so many people. Trust in God, He said in effect, do not spoil your lives by this distressing fear. At the worst, you will have clothing and food. Do not be grasping or selfish, but give to those in need. Solomon said a similar thing (Proverbs 11:24). The one man whom Christ advised to sell all he had and give to the poor, was a boastful man who wanted to be perfect. Jesus saw the fault in his character and told him that his way to perfection was to eliminate that fault. To other men He probably gave no such advice. He laid His finger on the weak place. The apostles, it is true, were bidden leave all and follow Him; but that was necessary to the work to which they were called; yet even with them Peter seems to have kept his house as did John." The Bible teaches Christians that those who refuse to work should be refused the privilege to eat. "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat" (2 Thessalonians 3:10).

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
Swannanoa, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

JESUS TOUCHED—

"And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean" (Mark 1:41).

Those who are so close to Christ that they can feel His touch at all time are fortunate indeed. Yet, this is not only possible, but it is the experience of many dear children of God. In fact, it should be the daily experience of everyone who professes to be Christians.

The poem below is based on the story of Christ's healing Peter's wife's mother of the fever as found in Matthew 8:14, 15: "And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of fever. And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose, and ministered unto them."

THE TOUCH

"He touched her hand, and the fever left her."

He touched her hand as He only can,
With the wonderous skill of the Great Physician,

With the tender touch of the Son of man
And the fever-pain in the throbbing temple Died out with the flush on brow and check,

And the lips that had been so parched and burning

Trembled with thanks that she could not speak,

And the eyes where the fever light had faded

Looked up, by her grateful tears made dim,

And she rose and ministered in her house hold;

She rose and ministered unto Him.

"He touched her hand, and the fever left her."

O blessed touch of the Man divine!
So beautiful to arise and serve Him

When the fever is gone from your life and mine,

It may be the fever of restless serving
With heart all thirsty for love and praise

And eyes all aching and strained with yearning

Toward self-set goals in the future days

Or it may be fever of spirit anguish,
Some tempest of sorrow that does not down,

Till the cross at last is in meekness lifted
And the head stoops for the thorny crown

Or it may be a fever of pain and anger,
When the wounded spirit is hard to bear

And only the Lord can draw forth the arrows

Left carelessly, cruelly rankling there.

Whatever the fever, His touch can heal it
Whatever the tempest, His voice can still it

There is only a rest as we seek His pleasure
There is only a rest as we choose His will

And some day, after life's fitful fever,
I think we shall say, in the home on high

"If the hands that He touched but did His bidding,

How little it matters what else went by!
Ah, Lord, Thou knowest us altogether,

Each heart's sore sickness, whatever it be Touch Thou our hands! Let the fever leave us,

And so shall we minister unto Thee!

"So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him" (Matthew 20:34).

WATCH FOR THE TRAIN

by Jean L. Phillips

"OF COURSE, Mother," Jimmy shouted. "Why, surely, Betty and I can go Grandmother's alone! Why, we're ten d twelve! And haven't we made the trip zens of times?"

"And we don't have to change trains but ce," Betty assured their mother. "And we n't have to wait till the other train comes the track that runs along the end of the pot. And the conductor won't let us get without looking at our tickets, so we can't t on the wrong train. Please do, Mother, ar."

So it was all arranged. Betty and Jimmy's ip was soon packed and they were all pre- red. There was a box of lunch to eat at ion while they were on the last miles of e first ride. Jimmy and Betty felt very own-up and important as they boarded e train calling back good-bys to their ends in Littlefield.

But when they arrived at Southport here they had to change, there was more an two hours to wait.

"Now do keep a close watch on the time you might miss your train," their father d mother both cautioned them. "There one train a day on the Shore Line and if u miss it, there you are!"

In the depot at Southport they checked eir grip. It cost only a dime and they ould not have to carry it about. They ooked at the clock. Then they started for e lake where the boats were always load- g or unloading. There was a whalebacker led with iron ore. A ferry went across the y, with autos on its deck and dozens of ople in its cabin. They looked at the ock in the warehouse. Then they started r the business district.

"Here's the dime store," shouted Betty. n followed her. They slid upon high ools and had ice cream. Then they made e rounds of the store, and the next one, o.

Suddenly there were sirens screeching and e street was filled with fire trucks. No, e fire was not in the store, but before ey remembered about the train again the ock pointed to—

"Oh, Betty," called Jimmy. "It's train me! Come quick! Let us run!" They eaded their way out of the crowd and ran r the depot. It was two minutes past ain time. They dashed to the informa- on desk. No, the train hadn't come. It is a few minutes latc, but it came! How ose! The children were breathless.

"Oh, Jimmy, how dreadful it would have en if we would have had to sit in that tion all night!" Betty gasped. "That was o close! I never want to do it again!"

"Makes me think of what Uncle Jim said at prayers this morning," Jimmy answered. "About always keeping watch so as not to miss the train for heaven. What did he call it? The rapture! That's it. When Jesus comes with an invisible train and takes everybody that loves Him and is ready."

"What was the memory verse about it? Do you remember?" Jimmy asked.

"Watch, therefore, for you know not what hour your Lord doth come," wasn't that it?" Betty replied. "But, of course, you can't see an invisible train. When Jesus said that, Uncle Jim says He meant that we are to keep watch on our lives, and keep true and not let even the tiniest sin get between us and Jesus, you know."

"I am surely going to remember it, when- ever I think about how close we came to getting left in Southport one night," Jim- my responded. "But here we are crossing the river. It's only a little way now. Aren't you glad?"—Herald of Holiness.

Somebody

Somebody idled away the hours
Passing up life's fairest flowers;
Somebody's life was a loss, not a gain,
'Cause somebody thoughtlessly lived in vain.

Was that somebody you?

Somebody busily told of the Saviour
Somebody watched his daily behavior;
Somebody's life was a gain, not loss,
'Cause somebody willingly bore Jesus'
Cross.

Was that somebody you?

Somebody knows Christ's coming is near Somebody has hope that chases out fear;
Somebody's waiting and watching and praying,

Loving the Lord and always obeying.

Is that somebody you?

Preaching Like a Fire Bell

Sermons that save must sound an alarm. "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." No glittering generalities, no rhetorical niceties. The message must ring out like a fire bell; it must echo like a shrill blast of the watchman's trumpet when danger is near; it must declare the whole counsel of God. This means denunciation of sin, the necessity of repentance, the certainty of a judgment throne, an eternal hell for the finally impenitent, salvation by faith, and cleansing through the blood of the Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ.—J. H. Jowett.

We Can Be Free from Fear

by Mrs. J. C. Forehand, Morrisville, North Carolina

THE world today lives under the strain of constant fear—fear of atomic powers, fear of Communism, fear of outer space. Nations fear nations. Men fear the future. The Bible tells us in Luke 21:26, "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: . . ." The Bible also tells us how we can be freed from this fear. We find the answer in 1 John 4:18, "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love." The eighth verse of this same chapter tells us that ". . . God is love."

The Bible tells us that man is sinful. "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me" (Psalm 51:5). "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23).

The Bible tells us that man cannot save himself. ". . . by the works of the law: shall no flesh be justified" (Galatians 2:16). "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, . . ." (Titus 3:5). Therefore, man needs a Saviour. Knowing this, God showed His perfect love by giving His only Son to be our Saviour. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). We can benefit from this great sacrifice only through believing on the Lord Jesus Christ and accepting Him as our own personal Saviour. ". . . Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, . . ." (Acts 16:31). It is only then that we can be free from fear.

Can This Be Said of You?

It is told of Gordon Maxwell, missionary, that he went to a Hindu teacher and asked him if he would teach him the language. The Hindu replied:

"No, Sahib, I will not teach you my language. You would make me a Christian."

Gordon Maxwell replied, "You misunderstood me. I am simply asking you to teach me your language."

The Hindu replied again. "No, Sahib, I will not teach you. No man can live with you and not become a Christian."—Unknown.

Praise Letter

Miss Volena Wilson
Missionary to India

How much we have to praise God for! Following are just a few of the many things God is doing in our midst. We thank each of you who have had a share in all of His undertakings here:

1. Last month through two deaths God very wonderfully worked. The first death was that of a little lad about 10 years of age who faithfully attended our Sunday school, Bible class and prayer meetings in Gopalapuram. Just a few minutes before his death he said to his father, "Daddy, pray for me." The father responded, "Son, I cannot pray audibly but I will pray silently for you. You pray." Then the little boy said, "Please give me the Bible." Taking the Bible, he clasped it closely to his bosom and prayed, "Jesus save me, save me, save me." Again addressing his father he said, "The Lord has done many things to us, allowed many things to happen to us, but we did not understand what He was trying to say to us. Therefore this has happened and He is taking me home." Shortly after that he passed away.

The next week this father's mother was taken, and he gave a very wonderful testimony two nights later at one of our prayer meetings. "I have watched many Christians from the various churches around, and often I would say I was living for the Lord but I had not really given my heart to Him. Now since He has taken my little son and mother, I surrender my whole life and heart to Him. I want to follow Him only."

And out of this testimony and his witness, his wife's brother, Christopher, is again showing interest and attending our services. Christopher professed to be a Christian when I first came to India but in '52 he turned away from Christ and went back into Hinduism and began devil dancing, etc. Since then he has never been free of this bondage. Two years ago during our special meetings he attended and even bought a Bible and promised to begin attending services regularly, but that was the last we saw of him until last month when the Lord began to deal with him again. He is now attending our prayer meetings, etc. and takes part during the prayer sessions. Pray that the Lord may keep him true. His wife is faithfully attending our services now as well as others who have been touched through the death of this man's mother. His name is Munaswamy. Keep praying that God will pour out His Spirit in pungent conviction until many for whom we are praying receive the Lord Jesus as Saviour.

2. Easter Sunday was set aside for foreign mission's day and the offering received was Rs. 60/! It was Rs. 10/—more than the group expected. How things do coincide. A Hindu man's cow was sick during the week before Easter. On Easter morning he sent his wife to our service with exactly Rs. 10/ as a thanks offering to the true God, because he prayed and his cow was all right and he wanted to give an offering to God. I am sure that the Lord timed this matter right to encourage our believers and we were all indeed encouraged. This offering is the first ever to be received in our church for foreign missions and it is to be equally divided between Africa and South America. It is not possible to express my joy at this new step which the church has taken but I know greater blessings are in store for them. Praise Him! Annually the church will give Rs. 100/ to missions—Rs. 25/ per quarter. However, because the first offering was Rs. 60/, this year's foreign mission's offering will be Rs. 135/! This is most remarkable and our cups have run over.

3. Last week we finished our first 3 vacation Bible schools. All were splendid and we are rejoicing in all that the Lord did. Our best vacation Bible school of the 3 which closed last week was Gopalapuram. Average attendance was 150—some days there were over 160. There were 24 decisions for Christ. Last year in Gopalapuram there were 8 decisions—how much more the Lord did work this year. I hope to give you a fuller account of the vacation Bible school at a later writing. Some of the testimonies were so inspiring! Do pray for these 24 who gave their hearts to the Lord. They will find it very difficult to live for the Lord as they come from Hindu homes. The President of the Sangam will make it difficult indeed for his daughter who gave her heart to the Lord during vacation Bible school days, but our God is able to keep, and the others as they stay close to Him.

4. We never cease to wonder at His love and grace and how He works as we wait for Him. To see such interest and evident hunger in the hearts of so many keeps eager to go forth with the Word. Pray that these hungry hearts may meet Him who satisfies every need.

There are many other things to praise Him for but no more at this writing. Thank you for all your earnest prayers for us. He is faithful and will answer every petition. Praise Him.

Hungry Hearts in Sugar Loaf

Thomas H. Willey Sr.
Missionary to Cuba

"Where did you ever hear this thing you are telling me? This Book, where do you get it?" This conversation was carried on in one of the out-of-the-way valleys of Pinar del Rio by an officer in the Rebel army and a director of a reforestation program. The Rebel officer then told me a friend the following story about the Book.

"One day some years ago, two men came to my father's house at Pons, near Pan de Azucar. They had ridden a long hard trail and were tired so they passed the night with us. It was then they told us of the wonderful Book, how important it was to read it, to believe it, to practice it, to preach it. One of these men was an American very different from any of the Americans we had seen at a distance. This American wrote his name in the Book and gave it to us. We read it, believed it and now I am telling you as I tell everyone I meet. This countryman from the Cangre was Luis Castillo. He had traveled far in sin, but had found the Saviour."

While these were talking, a third young man was listening intently; he wanted to hear this story. He was the son of Luis Castillo. Unable to restrain himself longer without speaking, he interrupted by saying, "That Cuban was my father, Luis Castillo, since gone to heaven. I am also a believer. And the American is my second father, Mr. Willey."

On the day of the National Convention this son and I had listened to a thrilling story of a hungry-hearted people seeking God and being converted by just reading the Word of God. This young man told how he himself had heard the gospel and hurried back to Pan de Azucar to tell his family, and now they were going back to preach. We listened to the blazing eloquence that came out of a heart of burden and compassion. Then this son of Castillo hurried to me and with shining eyes related

SOME HAPPY OBSERVATIONS

We have been living, most of the time lately, on mountaintop experiences with fellowship with the Lord and His children.

On Saturday, May 28, we attended the 14th Eastern Union Meeting where we had great fellowship. This meeting convened at Warden's Grove in Pamlico County, North Carolina, where some of the most respectable people are found in the South. A goodly number of ministers were present to share the fellowship of each other.

Brother T. H. Willey Sr. was present and gave us a wonderful missionary message, in which he gave many of his experiences as a missionary. Our hearts were stirred.

On Sunday afternoon, May 29, we attended the commencement exercises at our hometown Olive Junior College, where we heard from our friend, Brother Clarence Bowen, deliver one of the most fitting messages that we have ever heard delivered to a group of graduates of any institution. The message was filled with high ideals in life. God is placed first and foremost of knowing truth and the manifesting of this knowledge through Jesus Christ. I cannot go into detail and give you the full message as delivered by Brother Bowen, but I can say it was a masterful, enlightening message on the values of real life in Christ Jesus. I hope to get a copy of that message some time.

It was a happy privilege to see that group of young people receive their diplomas. We noticed that each seemed to be so happy and expressed their joy with such dignity and grace.

Well, the whole affair was soul stirring to those who had this happy privilege. We heard one man say, "We want to go on to a four-year liberal arts college." We saw many of the former students there, and they seemed to be so happy to see graduates of 1959-60.

On Monday morning, May 30, Brother Henry Armstrong and I left our homes about 7:00 a. m. for Cragmont Assembly to attend the annual Ministers' Conference. We reached our destination about 3:30 p. m. There we found several of our brother ministers, and by time for the evening service, there were several more present. All seemed to be happy to meet with old friends with whom fellowship had been sweet in past years at Cragmont. The evening services were largely that of prayer, testimonies and planning for the future services. The Holy Spirit was present with great power. It was really a love feast among the brethren. Some of us older fellows got to our rooms and to bed early after the worship services were over. Some stayed up and had fellowship in the usual way.

On Tuesday morning, Brother William Calvert brought an inspiring message in the devotions which set us for the following messages. Brother M. L. Johnson delivered a message on the history of Free Will Baptists, tying the past and the future with the present.

At the 11:00 o'clock hour, Brother Melvin Everington brought a wonderful message on "Working with Youth." On Tuesday evening, the service was switched. This writer was scheduled to conduct the communion service on Wednesday. This was switched to Tuesday evening, and I can say that it was the best communion service I have seen at Cragmont. We preached as we usually do on the occasion, using God's Word as set forth by the Lord Jesus Himself. It was a glorious sight to see that goodly number of ministers as they partook of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord—then in humble obedience to His instruction and admonition, we got down and washed each other's feet. The Holy Spirit made us happy in the observation. Truly Jesus said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them" (John 13:17).

I could not remain at Cragmont until the close, but had to come home to look after some things; but to the time that I left, or until the close of the Tuesday evening service, I have never had better fellowship. My regret is that I could not stay longer and that so many of those whom we have seen there in former years were missing; but, it was a happy privilege to meet with many new faces.

God is blessing the Cragmont movement. Money had been received to repaint the old buildings; and, except for the wiring which was almost complete, the new building was ready for the guests who shall attend other meetings there this summer.

Brother and Sister Wooten are there doing an excellent job as hosts, in which they try to make everybody feel at home.

We find that many of our churches have their vacation Bible school during the time or part of the time of the Ministers' Conference, which hinders some of our pastors from attending the conference. We feel that, if it could be possible to avoid the conflict so pastors could attend the conference, it would be a great means of trying our hearts and our actions together. Of course there are always things that prevent our doing things we want to do, and things we should do. Paul wanted to go to Rome, but was let hitherto or hindered (Romans 1:13). I really wanted to stay at Cragmont the full week but was let hitherto.

After we had finished the communion service we arose, joined hands, and sang the first verse of "Blest Be the Tie." Praise the Lord for our experience at Cragmont this year, 1960.

Brethren, let us join the number of members that are to give a two-dollar membership fee and make Cragmont Assembly what God would have it be, a real blessing to our youth and also to our older people.

My Life Is a Window

My life is a window with my Lord on display—

Do men come to view Him, and then turn away?

What sort of show window do I daily trim, Is the one central figure a likeness of Him?

My life is a window for men to look through.

It is easy to see there the things that I do. It's written in letters so plain men can see How much is for others, how much is for me.

My Lord's on display, for I claim Him my own,

And each passing hour He's there being shown.

If I faithfully paint Him in colors of love 'Twill lift men from darkness, help them look above.

So I'll light up my window, and make my light glow

As I walk in His precepts, so the whole world may know,

And see in the window I set for display That Christ is the central figure always.

STORIES for our BOYS and GIRLS

THE PECAN TREE

by Grace Cash

HAROLD and Jane ran to the pecan tree with their buckets as soon as they had finished breakfast. Plump, plump the pecans fell on the ground and by handfuls the nuts clanked inside the pails as nimble hands picked the nuts from the ground. In the spring Father had promised that Harold and Jane might claim the tree for this one season and it had been a wonderful harvest.

"After today's market we'll have enough to buy three pairs of skates," Harold said.

"If we have enough for two pairs it will make me happy," Jane laughed.

"I was joking," he said. "We only need two pairs and just think what fun it will be!"

Just then Mike came across from the house next door. His folks had lived there a month, but Mike hadn't had much time to play because of the work he had to do at home. His mother, who sat in a rolling chair all day, couldn't walk since the automobile accident a year ago.

"Hello," Jane greeted. "How's your mother?"

"She's fine," Mike returned, a smile lighting his face. "Aunt Lucy sent her a box of knitting yarn this morning and now she has plenty to do."

"Doesn't she get tired knitting all day long?" Harold asked.

"Maybe so," Mike answered, "but it makes her happy, I guess."

Then the talk fell to pecans and skates. "The tree just keeps filling our buckets," Jane told Mike. "Father said the tree had never produced more pecans."

"It was really a gift when Father gave it to us for the year," Harold said.

"What about next year?" Mike asked. "Will the tree be yours?"

Harold and Jane shook their heads. "We don't know," Harold replied. "Father acts as though it is a great secret, somehow or other."

"I know a secret too," Mike said. "Mother is knitting me a red cap and a red pair of gloves. Father told me that Mother wanted to surprise me so I mustn't let her know I saw her knitting them."

"We won't tell," Jane promised. "I wish I had a red woolen cap and matching gloves.

When I get my skates I'll need them."

"Jane, you shouldn't want everything," Harold scolded.

"But you would like a cap and gloves for yourself," she teased.

"I sure would," Harold admitted. "But we'll be doing fine to get skates."

Just then Mike's father called and he returned home. Harold and Jane took their full pails of pecans and set them in the crib. The fruit vendor would come for them later. Then Jane had an idea.

"Harold, do you remember a Bible verse we learned once?" she asked. And then she repeated, "'Freely ye have received, freely give.'"

"Yes, and I know what you're thinking," he said. "We have received freely so why not buy Mike a pair of skates if there is enough money."

"There will be," she said.

And three days later, when they counted their money, there was enough for three pairs of skates, with a full tenth of the whole amount left for the church. In less than an hour they had purchased the skates and Jane telephoned Mike to come over to their house.

"We have a surprise for you," she said.

"I have one for you and Harold, too," he confessed. "I'll bring it."

Mike opened his surprise first, a shiny new pair of skates! His face glowed as he thanked Harold and Jane. Then Harold and Jane opened their packages and found just what they wanted to go with their skates, a red woolen cap and matching gloves.

That seemed enough surprises for the day but Father added another that evening after dinner. "Mother told me how you children had divided your money with Mike, after setting aside the Lord's tenth," he said. "Well, that was just what I was waiting to see. From now on, so long as the farm is mine, the pecans from that tree belong to you two."

Harold and Jane could hardly speak. Finally Harold said, "We'll try to handle the tree the right way."

"We'll just remember it was given to us," Jane said. "I guess all we have is really a gift from God."

"I'm glad you have learned this wonderful lesson," Father smiled.

God's Alarmist

by Rev. Walter E. Isenhour
Taylorsville, North Carolina

When a man lives clean and Godly,
Walks by faith and acts through love,
Keeps himself in tune with heaven,
With his heart on things above;
Knows the Bible and its Author,
Leans upon His holy arm,
It is wise to give attention
When he speaks to give alarm.

God's alarmist sees the danger
That's confronting you and me,
And he sounds a note of warning
Lest we lose our liberty,
And go down beneath the surface
Of the raging ocean waves,
Like the vessel that is sunken
And no captain ever saves.

God's alarmist knows the purpose
Of the sly and cunning foe;
Knows that he is set to drag us
To damnation down below;
Set to keep us out of heaven
Where there's peace for evermore,
And where saints across the ages
Have marched safely on before.

Oh, give heed to God's alarmist
Who may preach across the earth,
Or proclaim a note of warning
That is of profoundest worth;
Who is prayerful in his warning,
Honest, earnest in his soul,
Telling you of what is coming
That will keep you from life's goal!

"I Know that It Does"

A preacher was speaking from the text, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." He was stopped by an atheist who asked, "How can blood cleanse away sin?"

For a moment the preacher was silent; then he asked the infidel, "How can water quench thirst?"

"I do not know," replied the infidel, "but I know that it does."

"Neither do I know how the blood of Jesus cleanseth away sin," answered the preacher, "but I know that it does."—The Pentecostal Testimony.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF N. C. AUXILIARIES

The following is a copy of the recommendations and suggestions given by the benevolence chairman of the North Carolina State Woman's Auxiliary Convention for the year, 1960:

"We truly feel that God has blessed us in giving us our superannuated ministers as close friends. They who have faithfully blazed the way that we might have the glorious gospel. The time has come when we want to show our devotion to them in a special way, therefore, I recommend that:

"1. We accept Father's Day as a special day of recognition for our superannuated ministers, and Mother's Day for our widows.

"2. That we who have ministers adopted, see that they receive cards, letters and gifts; also, remember them in any way to make it a great event for them.

"3. To the auxiliaries who do not have ministers or widows adopted, that they mail cards and letters to as many ministers and widows as possible on their special day, and that they send an offering to Mrs. Raymond T. Sasser, earmarked for superannuation for Father's Day.

"Let us send our love in showers on their day."—Mrs. J. K. Rhodes, Benevolence Chairman.

Father's Day comes on June 19, 1960. As recommended, this will be a good time to remember, recognize and reward these ministers on our superannuation list:

The cost of room and board at the conference will be $15. In addition, a registration fee of $2 will be charged each person attending. Interested persons should write for application forms. Address all correspondence to: Michael Pelt, Director, Youth Conference, Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

Olive Leaves Dedicated To Former Dean

The 1960 edition of the Mount Olive College yearbook, "Olive Leaves," has been dedicated to former dean, Daniel W. Fagg Jr. Making the presentation in behalf of the student body was Bertie Ann Hill of Snow Hill, editor of the 120-page publication.

The dedication read: "To you whose love for this institution, determination to build it upon high scholastic foundations, concern for its progress, and loyalty to its program have each helped to make Mount Olive Junior College a reality, we dedicate this, the 1960 edition of Olive Leaves."

Mr. Fagg is now a graduate student at Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia, where he expects to complete his studies for a Doctor of Philosophy degree during 1961.

In addition to receiving the yearbook dedication, Mr. Fagg spoke at the annual alumni banquet during commencement activities.

Annual Dedication: Miss Bertie Ann Hill, editor of the 1960 edition of the Mount Olive College yearbook, "Olive Leaves," presents the dedicatory copy to former Dean Daniel W. Fagg. Miss Hill, a 1960 graduate of Mount Olive College, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harper Hill of Snow Hill.

The Disciplined Life

(Lesson for June 12)

Lesson: Matthew 7:13, 14; Luke 15:11-24.

Olden Text: Proverbs 3:6.

INTRODUCTION

This lesson is taken from the chapter which Jesus gives three illustrations that describe the kinds of lost persons who are in the world. In the first, He describes those who are lost because they merely wandered away from God, like the sheep which wandered away from the flock. In the second, He describes those who are lost because of carelessness on the part of those who might have helped them place their faith properly in Christ, like the piece of silver which the woman lost in her house. Today's Printed Text is taken from the third illustration which Bible students have named the Prodigal Son. Jesus gave these illustrations in answer to the criticism of the Pharisees and scribes who said, ". . . this man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them" (Luke 15:2).—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

HINTS THAT HELP

1. Which way will you choose? (Vv. 13, 14).
2. Beware of becoming weary of home and too anxious to see the world (Vv. 11-12).
3. Sin is a waste of substance and life (Vs. 13).
4. Sin only brings misery and woe (Vv. 14-16).
5. The way out of sin is through repentance (Vv. 17-19).
6. Conversion brings joy and is a time of rejoicing in the Father's house as well in the heart of the converted (Vv. 20-24).—The Teen-Age Teacher (F. W. B.).

ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. This is a temperance lesson and from it we should learn that we cannot attain the truly abundant Christian life without self-discipline. Such discipline to be effective must relate to all areas of life. An alarming condition of people is the tendency toward trying to fulfill all their wants in addition to all their needs. In other words, some of us classify many things that are luxuries as necessities, while the careful mind even places more emphasis upon non-essentials than upon true essentials of life. The problem of alcohol in America is a case in point, but alcohol is not the only serious social problem for the Christian. His greatest difficulty is self-discipline—how to control the temptation to hate, envy and avoid strife which leads to division. He is often tempted to keep up with the Joneses and neglect his stewardship toward God; besides, he is tempted to neglect those who are in need while giving too much of his attention to selfish wants. This was the problem of the prodigal son who saw only that which he wanted for himself. We recall that he took his portion of his father's liberality and set out to find happiness for himself, but ended up in a sad state of want and very unhappy. When he came to himself, he remembered that servants in his father's house were happier than he was, and that they even had more physical comforts than he now had. In other words, he had learned that self-discipline and sacrificial service toward others brought stability and happiness even in a state of slavery. Therefore, Christian duty must be placed before any consideration of the Christian's wants. We learned in Lesson 9 that God will supply the needs of the Christian, His faithful servants, but his wants should not be stressed above his Christian duty.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

2. What young person has not felt that the restraints of the home were too strict upon him? He has felt that the sacrifices he had to make for the common good of all the family were too much. He felt that he had neither the money or the freedom he might have if his parents understood the situation as they should. Furthermore, he galled at the restraint which society demanded he exercise in order for him to fit into community life and make a good citizen. These are perhaps the thoughts which ran through the mind of the younger son in the story under consideration.

The immediate application of the illustration was to the Jews and the Gentiles. When Jesus was criticized by the Jews for associating with Gentile sinners, He answered them by saying, ". . . A certain man had two sons" (Vs. 11). The inference here is that the father loved the two sons with equal fatherly emotion. He planned for both the sons from the very beginning of the sons' existence in his household. This revelation was not acceptable to the Jews, because they understood God as the Father of the Jews only. They could not accept the fact that He is God of all peoples everywhere and in every generation.

The younger son chose to depart from his father's house. This younger son was not cast out by the father, nor was he made to serve under burdens loaded upon him by the partiality of an unfair father, "And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of foods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living" (Vs. 12).

The student should note that the father, though bound by no law or custom to do so, divided all that he had and gave his younger son half of his possessions. The only tie by which the father was bound to the son was by love for his child.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

3. "Two men looked through prison bars; one saw mud, the other saw stars!" This is well exemplified in the history of Lot and Abram. Lot looked around with an eye to earthly advantage, and he got it. His was a downward look. What a contrast in the verse with its wonderful "after that"! Now God steps in—God who had been quietly watching those two men, waiting to see what they would do; who saw generous hearted Abram giving up his rights, letting Lot choose the best for himself. But we never lose by taking back scats!—Moody Monthly.

4. The story is told that years ago the body of a young man was found in the Mersey. A paper found in his pocket carried this message: "A wasted life. Do not ask anything about me. Drink was not the cause. Let me die, let me rot." In less than a week the coroner had received over two hundred letters from fathers and mothers all over England wanting a description of the young man.

This is just another illustration of the earthly parent loving and seeking a wayward child. It serves as a reminder that our heavenly Father ever loves and seeks the prodigal.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

What Missions Has Done For My People

its way to a greater harvest of souls and service to our country.

Thank you again to our missionaries, Christian leaders and pastors in the United States and to every Christian that has and is having a part in the advancement of this glorious work. Let us pray and push forward until the Lord comes!

the story he had heard. My heart thrilled with joy. I thought back of how on that long passed day returning home through a cloudy, misting night my pony's hoof slipped and we fell over and over; three times the horse rolled over me. Luis slid down the embankment crying and moaning, thinking I was badly hurt. Then I remember riding on for hours, tortured with broken ribs. Thank God for the trip. There are some things we shall never know till the books are opened and we see the results of obedience and faithfulness.

Now again we are challenged with Pan de Azucar, Sugar Loaf, getting the Word of God. Some wonderful conversions are taking place along those high cliffs. Our pastor from the mines came in as I was writing this and now tells me there are thousands along these hidden valleys. In some parts no one has ever preached the gospel. What a challenge! I cannot miss it. Next week a native pastor and I are going on mule back from the unexplored end to Pan, and then to Pan de Azucar. I hope to complete the story.

* * *

One week later: The national pastor and I made the trip by mule and found that a mining company had built a fine road over the mountains. After riding six hours, doing personal work on the way and finding that no missionary had ever been in there, we came out into a beautiful level valley not far from the tall mountain called Pan. Inquiring the way of a boy working a team of oxen, we told him we were gospel missionaries. His face lit up with joy and he said, "We are evangelicos also." Going on to the house, the family was awaiting us. It was easy to see something wonderful had happened here; there was a joy radiating from the faces of this family. When we introduced ourselves as missionaries the father said, "Of what sect?" When we said, "Bautista Libres," his face did light up and he said, "Gloria a Dios, I also am the same." The mother then said, "I was praying that you might be missionaries. We never have had one to visit here. See how God answers prayer!"

Upon inquiring how they came to know the Lord there came another marvel of the power of the Word of God. The father said, "Many years ago an uncle from Vinales had a wonderful Book called the Bible.

He read some to me and from then on I wanted this Book." Then he told me that one day he happened to be at a nearby town while we were having an open-air meeting and for the first time he heard the Word preached and accepted it in his heart. A Bible was given to him. He said, "Since then we have been following the teaching of the Bible. We still do not know any songs to sing." Then the mother said, "Oh, how we want to be baptized and build a church." The entire theme of this remarkable man is the wonder of the Word of God. For hours this whole large family gasped every word of the gospel.

We are making arrangements to leave this afternoon with the Gospel Bus and the family to have the first gospel service back in this valley. There is still a large space to reach within sight of the mountain called Pan and on to Pan de Azucar. We must build a chapel and benches and send a worker. We shall need your prayers. There are many to reach, but thank God, with this family we shall make a start.

A Catholic President?

been in the ascendancy for generations, we get an example of their attitude toward the masses.

Catholics are different in the United States, you say. Sure, they have to be. But where is your proof that they will continue to be if they have the power to do otherwise? The election of a Catholic President might not make any perceptible difference for awhile, but it would be a great step forward in the Roman Catholic program to dominate the world.

Too many church people say, "Don't mix politics and religion." Why not? If our Christianity is just something that affects our lives on Sunday morning, what is it worth? If those in the ministry do not have an obligation to warn of dangers we face, whose responsibility is it? It is an obvious fact that many Christians are first republicans or democrats and then Christians. Is this really Christian?

Woman's Auxiliary

Mrs. Nancy Sawery read the Scripture. The business session was then held.

Mrs. Etta Harrell and Mrs. Freddie Vinson rendered the special music for the evening. The program was discussed by Mrs. Margie Pittman, Mrs. Freddie Vinson, Mrs. Ruth Rose. Mrs. Rose also read a poem. Mrs. Berlene Hobgood of Grimsley Church rendered a solo. Mrs. Nancy Sawery dismissed the group with prayer. Refreshments were enjoyed by all.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Mt. Carmel Church met recently with seven members and two visitors present. Velma Grubbs led in the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that binds" followed with prayer. The president, Dr. Norman, turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Lucille Parker. Those participating in the discussion of the topic were Anna Grubbs, Eunice Iseral and Dr. Iseral.

The G. T. A. presented a playlet in the form of a family altar. Everyone present enjoyed the meeting very much, and received a blessing from the program.

Georgia Youth Fellowship Day

The Youth Fellowship Day for the state of Georgia will be held at Camp Mt. Bethel near Ashburn, Georgia, on June 10, 1960. All youth groups are urged to attend, and we are looking forward to a glorious day. Each church is asked to send $5.00 to defray the expense of the luncheon, which will be served in the camp dining hall.

Attention Georgia

The Georgia State Woman's Auxiliary Workshop will be held at Camp Mt. Bethel on June 23, 1960. May each auxiliary make plans to attend. Let's see just how many auxiliaries throughout the state will be represented. Each church is requested to send $5.00 to meet the expenses of the luncheon which will be served in the dining hall at the camp.

MEET MY DAD

I wish that you could meet my dad;
He's really quite a guy!
I wouldn't trade with anyone,
And here's the reason why:

He helps with baseball practice,
And gives me useful tips.
He even lets me go along
When he takes fishing trips.

Whenever I have problems,
Doubts and questions, too,
We talk them over—Dad and I—
And decide what's best to do.

Then, too, my dad's a Christian;
We often kneel and pray.
He helps me live as Jesus taught;
Yes, sir, my dad's okay!

NATIONAL SUPERANNUATION DAY

C. H. Overman

Father's Day, Sunday, June 19, has been designated by the National Association of Free Will Baptists as National Superannuation Day. Publicity has been mailed out to many of our people, both ministers and laymen. Those receiving the publicity were asked to do three things in promoting this special day: (1) Secure about five minutes during the morning worship service on Father's Day in which to acquaint your people with National Superannuation; (2) ask your church to take an offering for National Superannuation on Father's Day; (3) stress to your people that the National Superannuation Board will welcome endowment gifts and bequests for expansion of the minister retirement program.

For the past two years, the Superannuation Board has mailed to our people a folder which explains the National Superannuation program. Since many of our class are not acquainted with this program, we would like to pass a part of the information contained in the folder on to you as a reader of this column, in hopes that this will be the greatest promotion of this day we have ever had.

"The Board of Superannuation for the National Association of Free Will Baptists in the United States of America was organized for the purpose of providing the ministers of the denomination with a program of retirement insurance.

"This was done by working with the Ministers' Life and Casualty Union of 3100 West Lake Street, Minneapolis 16, Minnesota. The insurance program now offers to each minister a $2,000 endowment policy, Age 65 or 70 years.

"The board hopes that sometime in the near future, the ministers and churches will become so interested in the Retirement Insurance Program that we may be able to offer to each minister a $10,000 policy.

"You can help in this great cause by placing superannuation in your church budget, by contributing regularly, by bringing it before your church and asking them to support it. You can help by asking and urging your minister to apply for the policy; then help him to pay for it each year. One of the best ways to support superannuation is to set a goal in your church of 25 cents per member each year. This would give the treasury an approximate budget of $41,250. If the board could receive this amount we could offer to every minister $10,000 worth of insurance and have enough to keep the board solvent at all times. . . .

"We do not like for our ministers to be occupied in other fields while they are pastoring churches. This is sometimes necessary if the minister is to live independently in the community in which he serves. He does this for two reasons: because of his low salary from the church, and because he realizes that some day he will have to retire from active duty, when he will have to have some type of provision made for retirement. Each minister and church should evaluate this in their planning. It can best be done through retirement insurance. The Board of Superannuation offers this insurance. Each minister should make application for it. He will need it some day.

"A wise church and minister will sit down together and plan a program of retirement for the minister. A thrifty church will include in its budget some amount for the retirement of its minister. Some churches include the entire amount of the minister's retirement cost. Some churches pay one half of the cost. . . .

"The minister, who realizes that the church and community which he serves loves and respects him well enough to help him prepare for the future day when he or his family may be ill on the day when he will return from active duty, can serve with a free attitude toward his people. This means better sermons, more work performed, a growing and healthy church. When this happens, the minister can look with pride and dignity upon the community where he serves. The community in turn will look up to the minister with confidence. He will be placed in position of leadership and responsibility; the church and its program will enhance the community and will strengthen the cause of Christ. . . .

"When a minister has served well and wisely and comes to the day of retirement, and can spend the remaining days of his life with confidence that he will be cared for without embarrassment and suffering for what he actually needs for his comfort, he has something for which to be thankful.

"It is only natural for each one of us to have a desire for security during our entire lifetime. This desire is realized more strongly during our declining years. The minister is a human being and has the same desires as other people. During his active days, he often thinks how nice it would be if he could make enough salary to properly care for his family and to have a small sum to lay aside for the time for his retirement. Surprising as it may seem, there are very few ministers who make salary enough to even live in a dignified way, must less to save for the time of retirement.

"Since this is true, it is the duty of the minister and the congregations he may serve to try to plan together some program that will give him the security at retirement he deserves. On a small salary, this can best be done through retirement insurance. This type of program affords small financial requirement to the minister and is one he can afford to pay."

Please remember our ministers, and their futures, on this Father's Day.

Fresno to be Convention Site

THE city of Fresno, California, is located in the exalt center of the state, less than a day's drive from anywhere within the state. From Fresno it is only a pleasant, 91-minute drive over modern highways to three of America's oldest and most famous national parks—Yosemite, Kings Canyon and Sequoia. El Capitan, Bridalveil Falls, Mariposa Big Trees, the nation's Christmas tree, and the oldest living thing in the world are just a few of the famous landmarks hundreds of thousands of people have traveled many miles and from all parts of the world to see and enjoy.

It is here in the Memorial Auditorium, at the 24th Annual Session of the National Association will be held. The Hotel Californian has been designated as the headquarters hotel. Free Will Baptists from across the United States will be traveling to the West Coast for this very significant meeting.

The program emphasis will develop the general theme, "Abounding in the Work of the Lord," taken from 1 Corinthians 15:10. The Rev. Othel T. Dixon from Missouri will bring the keynote message. His message on Tuesday night will be "The Urgency of This Hour." Music has always played a large part in this opening service and this year will be no exception.

On Wednesday morning we will be challenged to "Abound in Our Consecration." The Rev. Ralph Lightsey from North Carolina will be the speaker and will speak to us from the subject, "Devotion Without Measure."

The service on Wednesday night will be a service of missionary emphasis and we will be challenged to "Abound in Our Witness." Some 24 returned missionaries and missionary appointees will be introduced during this service. The speaker will be Dr. Bob Pierce, President of World Vision, Inc. You will not want to miss the stimulating message of Dr. Pierce who has been called by some a missionary to the missionaries.

"Abounding in Our Intercession" will be the keynote of the Thursday morning service. Speaking on the subject of prayer will be the Rev. Reford Wilson from the state of Oklahoma. His message for this last Worship period will be "The Availing Force."

Other special features of the convention which will bless the hearts of all who attend will be the special music, an early morning prayer service which will be held on Wednesday, and the annual laymen's breakfast which will be held on Thursday morning. Dr. Delmer Priest who has served for 14 years as juvenile court officer of the Richmond, California, Police Department will be the speaker at this breakfast.

This session of the National Association which will open on Tuesday night, July 12, will be preceded by the Woman's National Auxiliary Convention. Their convention will open on Monday night, July 11. The sessions are scheduled to continue through Thursday afternoon, July 14.

Many have already made plans to attend this convention. Every church should insist that their pastor attend and should arrange to help with his expenses. The business of the denomination is the business of every pastor and elected delegate. Churches should also take advantage of the opportunity to have their own personal delegate at the convention. The necessary form to designate the delegate from your church is available from the Executive Department, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee.

The California State Association stands ready to extend to you their warmest hospitality. Let's go to the west coast and Fresno this year to enjoy this hospitality and to do business to the glory of our God.

RELIGION

Slogan posted by a Baltimore church: "The main object of religion is not to get a man into heaven, but to get heaven into him."—Good Business.

a glad father

by MARGARET N. FREEMAN

YOU work, you plan, you pray for your children, Mark Northcross thought, and suddenly you don't know if you've accomplished a thing. Suddenly you don't know the child himself.

Mark Jr. was almost 18, certainly not a child, but so young somehow! They'd always been so close, but, the father thought in despair, if he chooses the other road we can never walk in closeness again.

How short back to that road of 17 summers ago when on a rain-swept evening he and Ruth had been on the way to the hospital. She had put her hand over his on the wheel: "Don't worry, Mark, everything will be all right. We're in God's hands, you know."
