All of us who live in this age of spiritual decadency in which universal persecution of the saints may be revived at anytime should be sure that our hearts and affections are fixed on the right object and that these are so attached to Christ that nothing else really matters. If we are certain of that, the gales of evil may blow and the storm-tossed currents of false doctrine and evil practice may sway this way and that, but we shall be certain that our anchor holds. The attitude that Paul took would be a safe attitude for us. "According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain" (Philippians 1:20, 21).

We think with disdain of the turn-coats of World War II, but what of you and me? Have we always been the kind of witnesses we have needed to be in the face of all the evils that confront us? It was He who said, "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth" (Matthew 28:18). ". . . I am with you alway, even unto the end . . ." (Matthew 28:20). "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Corinthians 10:13). "And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels" (Mark 8:34-38).

ARE THE OLD PATHS GONE?

by DEAN HILLYER

As we arose from bowed knees around the family altar this morning, one member was heard to say, "Beautiful spirit," and another with audible voice thanked God for His eternal days, here and henceforth.

It is our privilege to carry on a third-generation tradition in Free Methodism, found in not removing (nor permitting interference with) the ancient landmark of the family altar, wherein we draw nigh unto God, and ask for the old paths. As a boy, between 65 and 70 years ago, I became acquainted with a few of those who obeyed and trusted the words, "Thus saith the Lord," and dared "walk in the good way." Their daily life is vivid in my memory today. It is with the definite knowledge of how God's consecrated people lived victorious lives in those days, that I am persuaded nothing will separate me from the love of God through Christ Jesus.

In those days God's consuming fire was in the pulpit and in the pew. The Amen corners were filled. The mourner's bench was not barren. Many sinners were seekers, and the saints sought a closer walk with God.

God's consuming fire was given at Pentecost. He is still in the pulpit and pew. He is here. We must hold fast to the truth, "Jesus, the same, yesterday, and today, and forever." It is true, we cannot progress spiritually on memories of the yesteryears—but as those of other days, we must not conform today to worldliness and modernism. We must hold the blood-stained banner high, and set an example of Christlikeness before those who do not know the old-fashioned way. "Remove not the way of the ancient of days." "Walk in the old paths, and find rest for our souls."

—The Free Methodist.

"WORN AND WEARY . . . we sat back in our seat and, as is our custom at the start of each new flight, breathed a silent prayer," says Herman W. Gockel, in the September issue of This Day. His prayer was, "Lord, bring me safely home," and "looking out into the infinity of blue beyond" the window of the plane, he added, "If not here—there." We like that. And we like also the statement of faith that follows, "The assurance that our heavenly Father would answer it according to His gracious will rested on us a heavenly benediction—as we crossed soaring mountains and verdant valleys and sun-parched prairies at almost the speed of sound. . . . To the Christian pilgrim who has caught the heavenly vision, his earthly dwelling can never be more than his 'home away from home.' His permanent abiding dwelling place is now and always in the mansions of His Father."—The United Evangelical.

BOYS and GIRLS

SURPRISED!

GRACE HELEN DAVIS

THE three young Sandersons were holding their usual what-to-give-Dad-for-Father's-Day huddle.

"Just giving Dad a necktie or handkerchief doesn't seem like much," said Gil. "Besides, he has plenty."

"Yes, and we gave him things like that for his birthday and at Christmas," added Kathy.

Six-year-old Lois said nothing, but looked hopefully to her big brother and sister for an idea.

"I wish we could give Dad something big, like a motorboat," enthusiastically exclaimed Kathy. "He's such a wonderful dad, and he works so hard."

"But we can't do that, Kathy!" Lois protested, taking her seriously.

"No, but Dad likes fishing so much! Maybe . . . let me think!" said Gil, in an excited voice.

"Dad used to like to go off by himself on Saturdays to fish. But since we've had this house, with such a big lawn, and the car to wash and all, he doesn't get much chance," he began. "We could mow his part of the lawn as well as ours, and do other tasks for a month, while he went fishing. That would be a different Father's Day gift, and I think Dad would appreciate it."

"Yes, I'm sure he would, Gil!" cried Kathy. And then she added, "But cutting all the grass for a month would be hard work, don't forget."

The Sandersons had an arrangement about the lawn. Dad cut a big part of it, Gil the rest and Kathy trimmed around the trees, shrubs and paths.

"It's work, but we won't mind it for Dad, Kathy," declared Gil.

"No, of course not, Gil!" Kathy decided. "It will be one way of obeying the Bible command to honor Father."

Lois hadn't understood very well. "I thought we were talking about presents for Daddy, not about mowing the lawn," she said.

Gil and Kathy explained to her, and the little girl was pleased with the plan.

"Let's tell Mother immediately," suggested Kathy.

"I like your plan a lot, children," Mother declared when they had explained it to her. "Dad does like to go off by himself sometimes, or with an old fishing friend. When his vacation comes around, we all go somewhere together, and he likes that too, but it's not the same as fishing and thinking or dreaming by oneself."

"Let me help you work your plan out," Mother said.

"Thank you, Mother. First we must look around and see what other chores Dad has for Saturday," "I think," declared Gil, "the garage needs straightening up, for one."

The three decided to start on that. So Gil straightened up the tools at the back, Kathy swept the floor and Lois dusted.

Then Mother appeared with a delicious snack on a tray.

"This is my part this afternoon," she said.

Dad was a little surprised to see the garage looking so neat, but he smiled knowingly at Mother.

"There are some young earners at work, I see," he remarked. "Well, cleaning up the garage is one less job for me on Saturday."

"Dad figures that we're earning money to buy him something, not giving him a free day!" said Kathy. "We'll try to keep that a surprise."

The next afternoon the three went to work washing the car. This time Mother came out to help. With four persons working, the car soon shone.

"A clean car in a clean garage," Dad said cheerfully when he came home.

On the third afternoon the lawn was tackled. How big Dad's part looked! But when Gil and Kathy took turns running the mower they didn't find it bad at all. Lois took short turns at pushing, too.

"We'll get Dad's part of the lawn finished today and our usual one tomorrow afternoon," declared Gil.

"That will give us Friday afternoon left over," said Kathy. "What shall we do then?"

"We can dig Dad's fishing worms, for one thing, Kathy," replied Gil.

Kathy shuddered. "That's one thing I refuse to do, Gil," she announced. "It'll be up to you to dig and catch all the worms."

"Okay."

Dad whistled when he saw the lawn.

"Well, well, what is this?" he asked.

"There'll be nothing left for me to do on Saturday."

"I'm afraid Dad suspects, Kathy," whispered Gil.

But Dad cheerfully inquired how much hired help charged nowadays.

Mother just looked mysterious and didn't reply.

"No, Dad doesn't know yet—he still thinks we're earning money for his gift!" happily exclaimed Kathy later.

On Friday afternoon Gil got ready to dig some fishing worms in the back yard.

"There is something you can do, Kathy—write a note explaining our gift. Then we'll all sign it," suggested Gil.

"I'll do that," agreed Kathy.

Gil dug busily in the back yard, and soon turned up some earthworms. Lois picked them out of the soil, although she gave little squeaks as she did it.

Lois and he soon had plenty of worms in a can. "We'll put them in a safe place in the garage overnight, Lois," said Gil.

Meanwhile Kathy had been writing and copying a nice little note, explaining to Dad that his gift from them all this year was a month of free Saturdays.

"That sounds good, Kathy," said Gil, and signed the note.

Lois wrote her name in big printed letters. The three had already bought and signed a handsome Father's Day card for Dad.

"Let's give Dad our note tomorrow morning, and leave the cards at his place on Sunday morning," suggested Gil.

"That's it," agreed Kathy. "My, I wish tomorrow morning would hurry and come!"

It did roll around, and Gil, Kathy and Lois waited until Dad sat down at the breakfast table. Then they marched in single file, with Lois first, carrying the note.

Although Lois giggled a little, she managed to hand the note to Dad.

He certainly looked surprised. "Father's Day already?" he asked.

"Yes, happy Father's Day, Dad!" chorused the three.

Dad quickly opened the note. It said:

"Dear Dad,
We've cleaned the garage, washed the car, with Mother's help, and cut the whole lawn, so that you can go fishing or wherever you want to on Saturday. We intend to do this for a month. That's our Father's Day gift, and we all helped. Love,
Gil, Kathy, Lois.
P.S.: We have some fishing worms for you."

Dad seemed to have trouble with his throat for a minute. Then he managed to clear it.

"I think this is the nicest Father's Day gift ever. Thank you so much, Gil, Kathy and Lois!" he exclaimed. "Best of all, I like it because you worked it out together.

"I'm sure Mother will help us about lunch, and will come along. I know a good place where we can all fish and then have a picnic," went on Dad.

"Oh, but, Dad, this is your outing! We're not included," cried Gil.

"Yes, we thought you'd like to get away for a day, Dad," said Kathy.

"Fish all by yourself, Daddy!" Lois put in, not to be outdone.

"That does sound like a nice idea for sometime, but not for Father's Day," replied Dad. "I want to be doing something with you then, for that's when I'm happiest."

It was the children's turn to be surprised. They were delighted too, to know that Dad was happiest of all when he was with his family. Kathy ran and hugged him, and Lois climbed on his knee.

"Of course we'll prepare a big lunch, working on it together, Dad," Mother said. She was happy too.

The Father's Day plan had worked out better than any of them had expected. Gil, Kathy and Lois began to plan with Dad and Mother for a delightful day's outing.—Juniors.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR JUNE 28

The Whole Household Of God

LESSON TEXT: Ephesians 2:11-22

MEMORY VERSE: Ephesians 2:19

I. INTRODUCTION

This is the last lesson for this quarter. The purpose of this lesson is to inspire Christians to a new and fresh recognition that they belong to a world fellowship of Christians by virtue of faith in one Lord and one Father of all believers. Even though there are many denominations, all Christians are included in the body of Christ.

Teen-agers are often disturbed by the number of Christian denominations: the Baptist, Holiness, Methodist, etc. They usually want to know why there are so many different denominations and what the differences are. Some denominations are liberal in their approach to doctrine and worship; whereas, others are fundamental and evangelical. Within the Christian denominations, however, there is one basic ground, or one common ground: faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as personal Saviour.

It should be emphasized that denominationalism does not make a person a Christian. A Christian is one who believes in and relies on Christ as Saviour. If this step of faith has been taken, and the person who has taken it can faithfully serve Christ in the church of which he becomes a member, then he belongs to the great fellowship of believers.

—Teen-Age Teacher (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Before the death of Christ, the Gentiles were aliens to the covenants God had made with Jews, and they were actually without God in the world (vv. 11, 12).

2. Through the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, all people have access to salvation (v. 13).

3. Jews and Gentiles are made one by the blood of Christ (v. 14).

4. Christ broke down the barriers that separated the Jews and Gentiles in order that He might make of all peoples one Church (vv. 14, 15).

5. By His death Jesus Christ reconciles both Jews and Gentiles to God and each other (v. 16).

6. The gospel of peace is brought to those who are afar off as well as to those who are near (v. 17).

7. Christ is the one mediator between God and men (v. 18).

8. Through redemption and reconciliation, people are no longer strangers and foreigners but fellow-citizens as saints in the Lord (v. 19).

9. The Church is built upon the foundation of the teachings of the Old Testament prophets and the New Testament apostles, Jesus Christ himself being its chief cornerstone (v. 20).

10. In Jesus Christ, all the building fits together to make a habitation for God (vv. 21, 22).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.)

III. ADDITIONAL HELPS

1. It was once said that nobody can make a tool as wonderful as a man's hand. A man's hand can do things which no man-made machine can ever be made to do.

Why two hands? One is to grasp the hand of God and, the other the hand of one of our fellowmen. This is where the idea of world fellowship comes into focus. You and I have a knowledge of the true God, but there are many high school students around the world who do not. It is our responsibility to share our light with them. We must reach out to them with a friendly, helping hand.

The Gospel was introduced to Europe by the Apostle Paul when, in a vision, he saw a man of Macedonia crying, "Come over . . . and help us" (Acts 16:9). The result was far reaching and earth-shaking. No longer was Christianity limited to the Near East or the Jewish race. Now it was to go into Europe, Athens, Rome, the Germanic tribes, Britain and eventually to the western world. From the western world the Gospel is sent to the ends of the earth. Many needy parts of the world look to the United States both for the bread of physical sustenance and the Bread of spiritual life.

How short-sighted some people are! At the beginning of the 19th century the British East India Company said, "The sending of Christian missionaries into our Eastern possessions is the maddest, most expensive, most unwarranted project ever proposed by a lunatic enthusiast." At the close of the 19th century the English lieutenant-governor said, "Christian missionaries have done more lasting good to the people of India than all other agencies combined."

—Senior Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

2. "A beggar one day, soliciting aid, stopped a Christian, who, upon searching his pockets, found he had no money. Whereupon as Peter and John had done, he tried to show his love. Placing his arms about the beggar's shoulders he said, 'I am sorry to disappoint you, my brother, but I do not have a coin for you.' The beggar's face brightened as he said, 'You have done something better than give me a coin. You called me brother.'"—Selected.

3. The waves that carry TV travel in straight lines. For this reason when TV was first introduced, only persons living near the stations could receive programs. Because of the curvature of the earth or because of hills, many people were cut off from the programs. In the years since TV was introduced, many improvements have been made in the sending and receiving equipment. As a result an ever-increasing number of people may enjoy TV. But one major barrier still intervened—the ocean. No live program could be transmitted across the ocean. But a few years ago, an American audience was able to view a live program that was originating in Europe. This was made possible by a communications satellite.

After two thousand years the church finds itself split up into hundreds of sects and denominations. Each of these is like a pioneer TV station surrounded by a few listeners. But in recent years many men have become concerned about Christian unity. By mergers and other means they have enlarged the smaller audiences receiving the messages. But the problem of total Christian unity still remains unsolved. There is but one solution: men must return to the Bible and the Christ revealed there as the source of authority. Only God's Word, the Bible, can bring men together in one audience.

—Standard Commentary.

4. "Tired of life, a Chicago coed and her school girl friend inhaled gas in a wine-celebrated suicide pact that left one dead and the other in critical condition." Thus began the tragic newspaper account of two 19-year-old university students. In the gas-filled apartment were two half-gallon wine bottles, one empty and the other half empty. "Today I die," began one of the suicide notes. "I die simply enough, because I haven't enough life in me to maintain life through long, long years." "Tired of life" can be said of millions today who reject the One who came to give life, even abundant life!

A young woman had been reared in a Christian home. Often she had heard God's call, "Give me thine heart." She had thought upon this destiny-determining question, "What shall I do then with Jesus?" As she continued to reject Christ, she went recklessly into sinful ways. Finally, she was stricken with a fatal illness. One night she awoke suddenly. She cried, "Mother, I had a most vivid dream. There seemed to be a heaven-sent messenger in my room who said solemnly, 'Read Ezekiel 7:8, 9.'" Opening her Bible to the reference, the mother read, "Now will I shortly pour out my fury upon thee . . . I will judge thee according to thy ways." Shortly afterward, the girl passed into a Christless hereafter.

Good Fathers

REV. WALTER E. ISENHOUR

We need good fathers in our homes
Whose hearts are full of grace,
Who, by their love and earnest prayers,
Make home a pleasant place;
Who set examples that are clean
For all their folks to see,
And long to be the noble men
That God would have them be.

We need good fathers in the church
To occupy the pews,
And help their fellow members seek
The things they ought to choose;
Whose lives are such from day to day,
Wherever they may go,
That others looking on may say,
"The Lord they surely know."

We need good fathers o'er the land
Who live and tell the truth,
And have at heart along life's way
The welfare of our youth;
Who want to keep our country free
On ocean and on sod,
And help their fellows on their way
To heaven and to God.

Such fathers then deserve our prayers,
Our honor and respect,
And never should they suffer from
Our spirit of neglect;
And by the living grace of God
We ought to boost them on,
Until their battles all are fought
And Glory's day shall dawn.

GOOD NEWS

By HARRISON RAY ANDERSON

Our young minister with his wise and winsome way was seeking to make his flock see the true meaning of the gospel. He was speaking from his heart as we were about to come to the Lord's Table.

"How would you react," he said, "if word came over the wire that a cure for cancer had been found?" I closed my eyes and saw an army at work on that and still another tragic company— young and old—going down into death because of it. I remembered a Chicago doctor who thought he had a cure and without enough scientific proof precipitately announced to reporters the new discovery.

And our young pastor was reminding us—"We do have the cure for the cancer of sin. This is what the Savior has brought us. Do we say anything about it?" And I saw another company of men and women, defeated and despairing, seemingly unaware that Christ had lived or died to save them, and then we were at his Table.

Here is the place to see what sin has done. Cancer is a normal cell which becomes so proud and selfish it destroys itself and its host. And this is what our sin did and does. Here also is the place to know and experience again the cure. Blind? Now we see. Lame? Now we walk. Withered hands? Now they can reach out to others. Broken? Now we are made whole. Lepers (thought of in Christ's day as we think of cancer now) cleansed by the burning fire of God's love.

"Be of sin the double cure Cleanse me from its guilt and power."

A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY

Original Free Will Baptists will gather on July 7, 8, at Chipola Junior College, Marianna, Florida, for the purpose of extending the work of the kingdom of God through mutual Christian endeavors, under the banner of Free Will Baptists.

This fellowship is unique in many ways. It exists because there are those who are willing to retain and protect the faith that was once delivered unto the saints. Its purpose is not to wield centralized power over its member bodies; its purpose is fellowship and cooperation in the promotion of the cause of Christ; its doctrine is that propounded originally by Paul Palmer, the forerunner of true Free Will Baptist doctrine. Representation for a church in this Fellowship is one delegate for each fifty members or fraction thereof; all ordained and licensed ministers; larger bodies, one delegate for each five hundred members or fraction thereof.

Any Free Will Baptist body, or organization, may represent. The 1964 session will begin on Tuesday evening, July 7. You are urged to attend.

Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist'

The Mount Allen College Trio will visit churches throughout eastern North Carolina, July 1—July 28. Members of the trio are Lois Harrell, Mary Alice Wetherington, and Esther Etheridge.

The youth meeting at Cragmont Assembly held the week of June 20 had 91 in attendance. Seventy-seven of this number were resident at the assembly and 14 commuted daily from nearby towns.

The North Carolina State League Convention will meet at Jacksonville, July 2, 3, 1954. The program will include a message from a returned missionary, the intermediate sword drill, a religious film, chorus singing, messages from the Word, and wonderful fellowship.

The Race for Home

Do your pupils race home after Sunday school is dismissed, apparently forgetting that the church service follows? Or are unconcerned about it?

Here are some things the school should emphasize in an honest effort to stop the children and young people in this mad race for home:

1. Stress the fact that the teachers should attend church faithfully, setting an example for their pupils.

2. Emphasize the importance of parents' being cooperative in this matter.

3. Counsel the young people on their need of the strength obtained from the worship service.

4. Encourage classes to attend and sit together in the worship service of the church.

5. Urge the pastor and others who plan the service to use as many of the young people as possible.

6. Pray for the young people.—The Sunday School Reporter.

Editor's Comments—

EVANGELIST BILLY GRAHAM is surely a man sent from God. For more than a decade God has marvelously used this man to herald the message of salvation to thousands of persons throughout the world. The scope of Billy Graham's evangelistic team is almost beyond comprehension. There is the weekly "Hour of Decision" broadcast which is heard around the world, to say nothing of the hundreds of radio stations that carry it here in our own country. There is also the ministry of the team's monthly publication, "Decision," with a circulation of thousands. This publication has a ministry that is unique within itself. Then there is the work of the associate evangelists; such as, Fernando Vangioni, Joe Blinco, Leighton Ford, Grady Wilson, and others.

We believe that Billy Graham has filled the place of a prophet for this twentieth century. His message is a call to repent; and like the Old Testament prophets, he warns of coming judgment unless our nation and the world turns back to God. With each cry of "Repent," there are hundreds and thousands of souls that find their way into the fold of God. For instance, of the 180,000 persons who attended the ten-day San Diego Crusade in May, 8,690 persons were converted, having committed their lives to Christ. This story has been the same in hundreds of other cities in America. Only eternity will reveal the good accomplished through this prophet of God.

Yet, in spite of God's blessings and His manifestations upon Mr. Graham, there are those who oppose him. Some of this opposition comes from those who would only be content to see Mr. Graham conform to their every wish and whim. They are religionists who desire that everything and everyone fit into their own little molds. We are glad that the work of the Billy Graham evangelistic team is not marked by schism and sectarianism. Some oppose him because his campaigns are integrated. Some oppose him because he seeks and often receives the support of people of all faiths, particularly those within all areas of Protestantism. His reason—that he might win some to Christ. What better way is there? Our conclusion is that this great modern-day prophet is worthy of each Christian's prayers and support.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Free Will Baptists should feel proud that its moderator, the Rev. W. S. Mooneyham, has joined the Billy Graham team. From what we have read and observed, however, the very opposite is true; for there are those who are opposed to his decision to join the team. This may seem strange, even to those who are not in the camp of the National Association, except for one thing. When the National Association met in 1958 at St. Louis, Missouri, a resolution was presented which called upon the "executive secretary to send a letter to Billy Graham assuring him of the prayers of Free Will Baptists in his evangelistic efforts." The resolution, however, was postponed. So far as we know, no action has ever been taken on it.

There are some Free Will Baptists who know how it feels to be ostracized—to be cut off with a lack of kindness and understanding. We feel that Mr. Mooneyham has taken an important step; and although our personal interests are not as they once were in the matter, we sincerely hope that he will be able to successfully resist the powers that be—the powers that removed five leading men from their offices in the National Association in 1961 and forced the North Carolina State Convention out of the Association. Speaking personally, if I had joined the Billy Graham evangelistic team with the position that Mr. Mooneyham holds in the National Association, and there were those within the Association who opposed my decision, the Association itself would have to take action and then it would be with violent protest. There is serious doubt, however, that a protest would be heard, for when steamroller tactics begin to roll, there is little chance of stopping them. We feel that sooner or later they will be stopped, and perhaps this is time that it will happen—before another great injustice takes place on the floor of the National Association.

REPENT!

by Haywood B. Hill
Snow Hill, North Carolina

ONCE had the acquaintance of a great old preacher and great Bible scholar. I would ask him questions, and he would answer, "Our opinions are too frail. We will go to the Book for the answer." So that is what we will do here.

The subject is Repent, and this is one of the greatest commands given to men. It is mentioned at least eighteen times in the Old Testament and eighteen or more times in the New Testament.

As John the Baptist preached in the wilderness, he said, "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Then when Jesus began to preach, He, too, said, ". . . Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matthew 4:17).

Now find in Mark 1:15 what Jesus said, ". . . The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel." Christ called the twelve disciples together and commanded them to go out two by two. "And they went out, and preached that men should repent" (Mark 6:12). Again we find a direct quotation from Christ, "I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 13:3).

Then sinner friend, as we read Peter's great sermon to sinners, we find that it applies to you as much today as it did then. This you will find in Acts 2:37-39: "Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Again we read in Acts 3:19: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."

As we continue our study on repentance, we find God's command to repent in Acts 17:30, "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent."

As we search further we will find in Revelation 2:5: "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent."

Continuing our search, we remember what Christ said, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39).

He also said in Matthew 9:12, 13: ". . . They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

In Mark 2:17 we find the same Scripture we have quoted from Matthew 9:12, 13.

Let us digress from the subject for a moment. In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth and everything therein. Man and woman were the last of His creations. He made man and woman free moral agents with a conscience to know right from wrong. A beast has no conscience to know right from wrong.

But man is responsible to God for his conduct. God knew that man, as a free moral agent to do as he chose, would sin; but He made a way for his salvation by His grace through faith in His Son, Jesus Christ.

This brings us back to the subject where Christ said in Luke 13:3, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." God commands all men everywhere to repent.

Right here I would like to mention my chaplain in the Sanatorium, the Rev. William Tyndall, who was a splendid preacher and wonderful man. Chaplain Tyndall had the best approach to any man I ever saw. It made no difference how good or bad he might be, Chaplain Tyndall could approach him in such a manner as to leave him feeling better. He was a man who loved a sinner, especially someone who needed help.

If a patient came in with a problem, or if the patient himself was a problem, Mr. Tyndall was on hand to help him.

I remember one Sunday morning after listening to the Sunday school lesson on WNCT, Channel 9, by Mr. Hattan, whom I have listened to every Sunday for many years, I went to my room and adjusted my head phone and listened to the chapel service for 45 minutes. Then I dialed my radio to a church service in Wilson and heard a most wonderful sermon directing sinners to repent. One phrase was that you are not condemned to eternal punishment because you committed sin, but because you refused to repent of that sin, after Christ has said, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," and "God commanded that all men everywhere to repent." I hate sin, but I love a sinner. My hope and prayer is that sinners repent and believe on the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and be saved.

BRENT COMES HOME

E. Elizabeth Stutzman

BRENT HAMILTON pulled his collar up around his neck and moved closer to the building. The stiff wind bit through his thin overcoat. Inside the Mission the folk sang lustily, "I must needs go home by the way of the cross."

"Humph—me go home! I'd give anything in the world if I could. It's too late though. I've no one to blame but myself," he told himself bitterly. "Not even Sally knows the whole truth."

"Why don'tcha come in? It's warm there. Can't hurt ya any." The voice vanished as the man passed him and went inside. The song was nearly ended as Brent found a seat in the back row. The room was nearly full of men who looked like himself; "probably felt like him, too," he thought.

Four young men on the platform stood to sing. Their rich voices filled the room. Something about the song gripped Brent's heart. "All to Jesus I surrender, All to Him I freely give."

"Why did I come in here? I surely didn't mean to," he muttered. He glanced toward the door, but for some reason he didn't move. The young men sang on, "All to Thee, my blessed Saviour, I surrender all."

"It's easy enough for them to sing. What do they know about trouble? They look like they never had a care in the world." All the bitterness that filled his heart for so long was stirred again. "If God was so good and kind, why did He let it happen to Dick? He was only 12. A fine boy, too. I had big plans for him. There's Jimmy Taylor's boy down the way. Look at him. He'll never walk. Somebody's got to look after him all his life. He'd be better off dead. Where was God when that big truck smashed into Dick's bicycle? He never had a chance."

Brent remembered as if it had been yesterday. Sally had walked around in a daze before the funeral. The house was so quiet after that. Robin cried often; she was 10. Dick had been a wonderful brother. Sure, they had their problems, and Dick had teased her and pulled her blonde pigtails. But she loved it. That was just a part of growing up. There wasn't a happier family anywhere. Brent moved restlessly in his seat as memories of home swept over him.

Sally was so steady. She seemed to have an inner strength that kept her from questioning. "If I only had some of her faith—well, I guess I'd have done differently," he pondered. But he had refused to go to church after that. The bottom seemed to have fallen out of his world. "God doesn't care," he had argued with himself. "So what's the use?" "You go and take Robin," he'd told Sally, "but count me out."

He felt a pang of loneliness even now as he thought of Robin's words, "Daddy, I feel all funny inside. I don't want to go without you. Please, Daddy." He'd turned away quickly when he saw the big tears in her eyes. He never could stand that. He was wrong. He knew that. But he could get along without God he'd told himself stubbornly.

He could see Sally's face again the day the Strobes invited them to dinner. They were fine people. Mr. Strobe could speak almost as good as the preacher himself. Brent had attended the Bible Class nearly every Sunday. After all, he was respectable. But he didn't want anyone speaking to him—not even Mr. Strobe. He was quite sure no one in the class knew his real problem. He hoped Mr. Strobe hadn't found it out.

"You'll go, won't you, dear?" Sally had looked at him so pleadingly. "They want you to try out their new car. A drive in the country would be wonderful."

He felt ashamed now at what he had told her. "I'm sorry, Sally, but one of the men at the shop needs some help. I'm the only one he can count on. I just can't let him down."

He remembered the hurt look in her eyes.

"I've got to make it up to her some other time," he told himself miserably.

He had come home very late that night. It was just three weeks after the accident. Brent remembered exactly.

Sally was terrified. He had staggered up over the porch and fallen clumsily into a chair in the living room.

That was just the beginning. He felt very sheepish the next morning as he sat at the breakfast table. "It'll never happen again, Sally. I promise."

But several months later, his boss, Mr. Mason, had told him, "Hamilton, you're slipping. You'd better get hold of yourself, or we can't use you around here. Take a few days off and think it over." There was a note in his voice that Brent couldn't mistake. That was the last straw. With no job, how could he pay back the money he'd borrowed? No one knew how deeply he was involved. He felt sick at the thought of it. He didn't have the heart to tell Sally. She trusted him so completely. So he'd left them without even a note. Coward—his conscience kept saying. That was two years ago. It seemed like an age to him tonight.

He groaned and wiped his forehead with the back of his hand. His whole life seemed to move before him like a bad dream as he sat in the service tonight.

Several times in the past he had almost yielded to the longing to call Sally. If he could only hear her voice again it might give him courage to ask her forgiveness. He was still young. He didn't want to live the rest of his life like this. Besides, Sally and Robin were his responsibility. But he was so unsure of himself. The thought was almost unbearable at times.

Back in Penbrook, Sally had taken a position in the bank where she'd worked several years earlier, and had managed to keep her little home secure.

Sally was terrified. He had staggered up over the porch . . .

She had borne her burden courageously. Friends had been kind and sympathetic, but she longed for Brent, and prayed for his return more than anything else.

Brent shuddered now as he thought back a few nights ago. He had stood on the bridge not far away and looked down into the black icy water below. "No one will ever know," he'd argued with himself. "They'll be better off without me." In spite of himself, something seemed to be holding him back. "Could it be God?" he wondered now. "I guess I'm not ready to die."

The service was nearly over when Brent realized some one was speaking. It was a tall gray-haired man with a kindly face. He hadn't noticed him before. "Why—that's Mr. Strobe," Brent thought with a sudden jolt.

"But it couldn't be." He wiped his eyes and straightened. This man was older.

He thought the man looked straight at him as he quoted the words of an old song, "Take all the failures, each mistake, of our poor human ways, and Saviour, for Thine own dear sake, make them show forth Thy praise."

"God knows I've made enough mistakes. It's too late now. I've spoiled everything."

He bowed his head, conscious of a deep yearning within. "You know I've tried, God, I've tried hard. I've failed, so what's the use? You won't want me. Sally wouldn't want me either."

The quartet sang softly as the audience rose. "Transformed by grace divine, the glory shall be Thine."

Brent felt his whole body tremble as he stood to his feet. He'd get out of here and quick. But somehow his feet refused to move.

He felt someone touch his arm. "Could we have a word of prayer before you leave?" The man spoke softly. Brent turned and looked into the face of Mr. Strobe. He felt the eyes of all the men on him as they made their way into a side room.

He learned that Mr. Strobe had come to the city on business for his firm and had been asked to speak in the Mission several times.

For the first time Brent felt he could talk freely with someone about his problem.

Several of the group joined them as they knelt to pray. The hands on the clock pointed to nearly midnight when they got up from their knees. Most of the folk had gone. Gone, too, was the burden, the heavy burden that Brent had carried so long. In its place there was a quiet peace he had never experienced before.

"God has waited a long time for you," Mr. Strobe said as he placed his hand on Brent's shoulder.

Late the next afternoon there was an extra passenger on the train to Penbrook.

"SORROW WITHOUT CAUSE"

One day a man under the influence of liquor entered his home. He tried to remove the wedding ring from his wife's finger. He wanted to sell it for more liquor. The wife resisted him. They scuffled. He stabbed her to death! He was tried and condemned to hang. There were three children—ages 12, 9, and 5. They were motherless and would soon be fatherless. Before his execution, the children visited their father. "Good-by, Papa," they said as they wept. The oldest child said, "You were a good Papa before you began drinking. You loved us and you loved Mamma. You didn't mean to kill Mamma, did you, Papa?"

Have little children a deadlier and more merciless enemy than strong drink?

'Behold, I Thought'

By CHESTER SHULER

THINKING CERTAINLY isn't wrong, and in our day we hear, all too often, the lame excuse, "I didn't think it was loaded. . ." when the gun goes off and kills someone. But there is a passage in the Bible which tells about a man who did think, and still got into trouble, because he didn't think straight.

"Behold, I thought—" The speaker was Captain Naaman, an officer in the army of the king of Syria. The Bible assures us that this ancient warrior was mighty, brave, honorable, a favorite with the king, and that he had been used of the Lord (2 Kings 5:1). But in spite of all Naaman's skill, fame, courage, honor, and valiant service, he was a leper.

One day Captain Naaman led his army over into the land of Israel. When he returned, he brought with him some prisoners. Among these was a little maid, whose name we do not know, but who must have been attractive and good, for he decided to present her to Mrs. Naaman, as a personal maid.

True, the little girl was a slave, but it would appear from the Word that she grew fond of the Naamans. And so when she learned that the captain was a victim of leprosy, she went to her mistress, and told about a famous prophet in the land of Israel who could cure leprosy. This must have been good and exciting news to Captain Naaman, and we know the rest of the story—or if not, we can read it in 2 Kings, Chapter 5.

Naaman lost no time going over to find the famous prophet, but, as the Bible record indicates, when he learned that the cure included a bath in the Jordan River, he rebelled—for a time (v. 11). And in his exasperation, he uttered the words, "Behold, I thought—"

Naaman was a thinker, but he didn't think correctly. And until he was willing to change his thinking, in this instance, he received no benefit. When he obeyed the prophet's instructions to the letter, his leprosy was cured.

Today, all of us need to think—very often. But mere thinking is insufficient; it must be correct thinking to get us anything good. Wrong thinking, like no thinking at all, spells trouble for someone—usually the thinker himself.

Dieticians have stated that physically we are what we eat. It is safe to say that mentally and morally we are what we habitually think. Thoughts, good or evil, are the food upon which one feeds his character. Thoughts affect the heart, and Jesus said, "Those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart" (Matthew 15: 18)—from which a person may conclude that many of his thoughts do eventually form themselves into words and deeds.

We like to be "big folks" sometimes. But we are just about as "large" or as "small" as our thinking. We become small and mean like our two-by-four thoughts, or grow into great dimensions of our large thoughts. This is just as true of the man with a college degree as of an uneducated person. Inge said, "We are what we care about, think about, and love."

We take on the color of our thinking. A modern psychologist has said,

"As a man imagines in his heart so he ultimately becomes." An old Roman philosopher put it thus: "The soul is dyed in the color of its thoughts." Others have expressed the same idea in similar terms. But they are not contradicting God's Word in its declaration that, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he" (Proverbs 23:7). We cannot deny that our thinking habits affect the whole of our lives and living. To do so is to pit our judgment against that of the great philosophers, psychologists, and the Bible itself.

What we think about others is tremendously important. It is easy to surmise that others will never know the thoughts which we think concerning them. We may deny the very existence of such thing as mental telepathy; but since our habitual thoughts have a sly way of translating themselves into words at times, there is always the danger that we shall say what we think. And words, we know, are dangerous things once they take wing.

What we think about ourselves is very important also—because, as stated, we really become just about what we think we are in many cases. Do we habitually respect or despise ourselves? Do we think we are failures or successes? Do we have self-respect or not? Consciously or unconsciously, we try to live up to our own appraisal of ourselves.

God is much interested in our thoughts. And He knows all of them, too! (Job 42:2; Matthew 9:4). We cannot hide thoughts from Him. Happy are we, therefore, if each of us can sincerely pray, "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts."

Something causes wrong thinking. What is it? Perhaps simple ignorance of its manifold dangers and ultimate penalties is a cause. And surely, when an earnest Christian becomes aware of these, he will no longer willfully cherish improper thoughts. Temptations to wrong thinking are legion—listening to and telling unclean jokes and stories, gazing upon nasty pictures, attending vicious movies and many theatrical productions of the day, listening to swing and jazz music, reading pornographic literature, and many others.

The mind will think about something; it cannot remain a vacuum, if it is healthy. Merely seeking to banish evil thoughts will not work. The mind must be filled with nourishing mental food. Fortunately, while temptations

Learning About the "Great Book"

Pictured above is the group which attended the daily vacation Bible school at Bethlehem Free Will Baptist Church, in Duplin County, North Carolina, July 8-12.

The theme was "The Great Book." The materials used were those published by the Free Will Baptist Press.

On this page are some scenes depicting the type of materials that are available this year. These scenes can be repeated in hundreds of daily vacation Bible schools.

The Press is pleased that the materials have been well received. In less than a decade the work of publishing such materials has greatly increased.

This year's theme is of special significance. It is certain that many Free Will Baptist girls and boys, as well as those who have taught this course, have learned much about "The Great Book."

GOLDSBORO LAUNCHES $50,000 CAMPAIGN FOR MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE

Seated: President W. Burkette Raper; Mrs. Robert Buckner, publicity chairman; Mrs. Robert H. Peacock, residential chairman; and James Pittman, business and industrial chairman.

Standing: Albin Pikutis, director of the Mount Olive College Area Foundation; William Hagar, general chairman of the campaign; B. E. Bryan, member of the college board; the Rev. James A. Evans, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church, Goldsboro; J. Faison Thompson, professional chairman; and Charles Norwood Sr., special gifts committee.

In his address to nearly 100 workers, President Raper sketched the growth of the college during the first ten years of its history. "The abandoned elementary school building in Mount Olive which has been our home for the past decade is no longer adequate. The ability of the college to continue serving the youth of this area depends upon our having more and better facilities," he declared.

An Open Invitation to The Friends of Mount Olive College

Dear Friends:

Your moral and financial support of Mount Olive College have brought our college and our denomination to the beginning of a new era. We invite each of you to attend an historic event on our campus on Sunday, June 28, at 4 p. m.

On this occasion we will dedicate to Almighty God and to the service of Free Will Baptists the original fifty acres of our new campus. With faith in God and our friends we are planning to burn the mortgage on this property.

Also, on this date we plan to have a ground breaking ceremony for our first academic building which will be named in memory of our late benefactor, Dr. C. C. Henderson. This will probably be the largest and most beautiful building in the entire Free Will Baptist denomination. Estimated construction cost is $339,000. It is designed to accommodate 350 students and will contain office space for twenty members of the faculty, staff, and administration.

Our service will not exceed 45 minutes. Those attending should come to our present downtown campus where guides will give directions to the new campus.

W. Burkette Raper,
President

PRESS TO BE CLOSED!

The Free Will Baptist Press will be closed Saturday, July 4, and Monday, July 6, in observance of the Fourth of July holiday.

ALCOHOLISM

"Alcoholism is a disease produced by drinking alcohol."

When does alcoholism begin? It begins when a person is deceived by Satan and led to take the first drink. If a person would refuse the first drink, that person would never become an alcoholic. The first drink leads to the last. If not repented of and saved by God's grace, the last drink leads to a demon's hell. I am sure that the alcoholic never thought that it was nice to become an alcoholic.

After Satan had led the people of the United States to destroy the Eighteenth Amendment, politicians and their followers distorted the truth by saying, "It would be better to bring liquor out into the open and stop so much bootlegging." Perhaps some people actually believed that it would make conditions better. I say perhaps they were honest in their thinking; but I could not see then, nor have I seen since, where it has bettered conditions. The very idea of having more alcoholic beverages and less drinking is absurd. They argued that it would lower taxes. If they were honest in their thinking, they were deceived by Satan.

Let us notice what God says: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise" (Proverbs 20:1).

Several years ago I knew a young lady who was reared in a fine home and educated to be a nurse. She was outstanding. She reached the place of superintendent of a hospital. Later, after Satan had deceived our nation; that is, some of its leaders, I saw this nurse off duty. She was in a secluded place from the others, and as I entered that spot in the hospital, I saw this lady with a bottle of a well-known and well-advertised beer. In just a few months this one time fine, efficient nurse was no longer efficient. In about three years I saw her on the street in a physically tottering condition. Her dress was dirty and her hair which was well kept years before was hanging every way. She had no job, and seemingly, no one wanted her service.

About the same time there was a gentleman whom I knew that was addicted to drink but was under probation. He had been able to break away from the habit, and he told me that for seven years he had lived a sober life. Then the first day that beer was sold in his hometown, a crowd of old friends invited him to have a beer with them. When he was first invited he said, "No, I will take a Coke." The devil, through those who claimed to be his friends, kept on persuading until he yielded, and in a few months he was in the gutter again. I called to see him in his last days. There was a half empty beer crate sitting at the head of his bed and a jug of hard liquor under the edge of his bed. He began to cry, saying, "Preacher, I was persuaded by some friends to take a beer and that old desire for liquor jumped back on me, and now I have got to die—I am not saved." He was drunk that day, and that first drink led to this. I prayed for him and tried to tell him that God would save him if he would only let God have His way. The poor fellow was in such a state that I doubt he could grasp what it meant to repent and accept Jesus Christ as Saviour. I never saw him again. He was under the power of Satan.

I was glad that I voted to retain the Eighteenth Amendment. Had I voted to repeal the amendment, I would have felt guilty of being an asset to the damnation of this poor man. I believe those who voted to repeal the amendment are guilty of being an asset to his downfall. They not only helped this man to a drunkard's grave, but every drunkard who has and will go down under the power of king alcohol. I have known a large number of fine men and women go down under the power of strong drink.

Broken homes, hungry children, drop-outs from school, and criminals have been produced because of drunken parents. Why? Because they were deceived by Satan to drink. Often drinking leads a mother to prostitution to the extent that she sells her body to get money to buy liquor. There have been instances when drunken fathers have kicked their little children around until they were crippled for life.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise" (Proverbs 20:1).

"Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babblings? who hath wounds without cause?

who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look thou not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder" (Proverbs 23:29-32).

A lot of young men think that it is manly to drink, but it is very unmanly. It is dangerous to the physical and moral character and finally damns the soul in a demon's hell. One of the most pitiful sights that I have ever seen is for a nice young lady to be married to a drunkard and for little children to be born to these parents. Then in a few years to see these little dirty, unkept children crying for bread; and by the time they are old enough to go to school they are dressed in dirty rags while both Mother and Father are pouring their wages down their ungodly throats, and often the state of some church institution has to take over in order to keep the little children from starving. Then I think of other children who dress fine, never suffer for food, live in mansions, get an education—why the difference? These are the children of the rich who have obtained their wealth by selling strong drink to the unwise parents of the poor little, dirty, hungry children.

Strong drink is producing fathers and mothers who are bringing into the world a generation of drunkards, harlots, thieves, and illegal children. We talk much about juvenile delinquency when the parents are to blame. I say that in general our children are better than their parents. Drunken, fighting, whiskey-drinking parents who curse and swear in the home before their children are responsible for much of the crime that is committed by the youth of our country today.

Will Jesus Understand?

As one of God's children neared the close of his life, he was in great distress. His pastor spoke comfortingly and assuringly to him. The man listened as if in a trance. Then he said, "I am saved. I have no fear of dying. But what can I say at the judgment seat of Christ about the wasted years? Will He understand?" —W. B. Knight.

If we did half as well as we know, we should be twice as good as we are.—Selected.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Where will the Battle of Armageddon be and who are the contestants to be?—Alma Johnson, Texas.

ANSWER: There is a large triangular shaped plain north of Jerusalem called in the New Testament Armageddon, measuring about 14 miles on its north and bounded by the hills of Galilee, about 20 miles to the east, bordered by the hills of Nazareth, and about 20 miles on the southwest, bounded by the hills of Samaria. This is a vast plain of unusual proportions surrounded by hilly terrain and very suitable, we are told, for the maneuvering of large military forces. Many of the great and decisive battles of history have been waged here upon this ancient plain. The Old Testament passages that mention it generally refer to it as the valley of Megiddo, the plain of Jezreel, and the plain of Erdracelon.

While this has been the scene of many fierce battles already, in Revelation we learn that the greatest of them all to be fought here is yet in the future. It will end in the most decisive victory of all the past and in favor of the saints of God. The antichrist, the king of the north (probably Russia), and the sunrising king, those that will come from toward the sunrise, will meet for a final showdown at this place. "And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army" (Revelation 19:19).

The battle is to last only a brief moment for the Lord will slay His enemies by the "sharp sword" that shall proceed out of His mouth. "And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God" (Revelation 19:15). This victory will accomplish the deliverance of God's earthly people, the believing remnant of the Jews. It will follow the seven years of tribulation and the three and one-half years' reign of the antichrist. At its end will come the judgment of nations and the thousand years' reign of Christ on this earth. At the end of the millennium will come the great white throne judgment.

QUESTION: If, as the Bible teaches, human sacrifices are an abomination to God, why did He require that Abraham offer Isaac on Mount Moriah?—Mammie Dieda, Georgia.

ANSWER: The Lord had a lesson He wanted to teach Abraham as He wanted to teach this lesson to Isaac, Jacob, the twelve sons of Jacob, and all future generations; it was a beautiful lesson of the coming Redeemer, His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. Moreover the Lord knew what He was going to do, and that He would not allow Abraham to actually kill Isaac, his son. Some Bible students acknowledge that the whole incident is a lesson in obedience on the part of Abraham and Isaac; but often they fail to see the very heart of the divinely displayed object lesson in type; namely, that one day He would send His only begotten Son as an offering on one of the mountains of Moriah for the sins of the whole world. Both Calvary and the mount on which the temple stood, as well as the Mount of Olives, are among the mountains of Moriah. That whole region in that general area was referred to in Old Testament times as the field of Moriah. This incident in which Abraham offered Isaac was no doubt one in which Abraham was cursed to see Jesus' day and rejoice over the day. "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad" (John 8:56).

He saw God's only begotten Son in the offering of his own only begotten son. Jesus taught that according to one's heart condition, which caused him to give freely to God and others, so would he receive of God the bounties that God has prepared in behalf of those that respond to His love and help. "By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son" (Hebrews 11:17). Jesus said, ". . . freely ye have received, freely give" (Matthew 10:8).

Give attention here to the striking analogies: The long journey covering three days' time in which Abraham's heart was sad. Compare this fact with that of Christ's three days in the tomb. Isaac carried the wood for the offering of himself on Mount Moriah, just as Christ bore His wooden cross to Mount Calvary. Abraham's faith in a resurrection hope pointed to Christ's resurrection.

"Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure" (Hebrews 11:19). Note again among the similarities in Isaac's obedience to his father, even as our Lord Jesus Christ was obedient even unto death, that he was ever doing His Father's will.

But notice again the contrasting features: Isaac was saved from death; the ram hung in the thicket being the substitute and the type of the lamb slain before the foundation of its world. This was not so of our Lord himself. Because He was our blessed substitute on Calvary, bearing the curse, the shame, and the suffering in our place and stead. (See Matthew 27:48.)

Indeed there is to be seen a beautiful and worthwhile lesson in faith and obedience on the part of both Abraham and Isaac; but we miss the vital message of the whole incident, if we lose sight of the "shadow of the cross" which is purposefully and plainly cast upon the inspired page.

TIMMY'S BASEBALL GLOVE

Marjorie Preston

WE won! We beat the Tigers!" Timmy shouted running into the dining room.

"That's great!" his dad said. "How many innings did you play?"

"Seven. Then my glove tore again," Timmy answered. "Dad, may I have a new glove for my birthday? I really do need a new one."

"I know Son," his dad answered, laying his hand on Timmy's shoulder. "But we can't buy you one now. We are all happy to have Jean home from the hospital. Now we must pay the doctor for helping to make her well. I think you understand that must come first."

"Sure, Dad," Timmy said softly.

"We'll fix your glove after lunch," his dad promised.

"Oh, Timmy, there's a letter here from Grandma addressed to you," Timmy's mother said as she put the food on the table.

Timmy tore open the envelope and looked at the birthday card. "Oh look!" he said. "Five dollars! Now I can buy the baseball glove in Mr. Wilson's store window. It's four dollars and seventy-nine cents."

"Aren't you forgetting something Son?" his dad asked.

"What Dad?" Timmy looked puzzled.

"What about the Sunday School class missionary project?" his dad asked.

"Oh well, I'll have twenty-one cents left over for that," Timmy answered quickly.

"How much would you give if you didn't want the glove?" his dad asked.

Timmy hesitated. "Fifty cents, maybe more. But if I gave that much I couldn't buy the glove."

"Should we give to the Lord first, or give Him what is left?" his dad asked.

"It's up to you, Son. Now we had better thank the Lord for the food and for the birthday gift."

Later that afternoon Timmy felt the crisp five-dollar bill in his pocket as he looked at the glove in Mr. Wilson's window. "I prayed for a glove, now I have the money for it," he told himself. Then he walked into the store and bought the baseball glove.

On the way to church he jangled the two dimes and one penny in his pocket.

After the class had sung some choruses, Mrs. Karson said, "This is the last offering for our missionary project. You remember Mrs. Jacobs' letter telling how badly they need a ball for their children's camp in Brazil. I must mail it this week to be sure that it arrives before camp starts. We need a dollar and a half to buy the ball and pay the postage."

After Timmy took up the offering, Mrs. Karson thanked the Lord for it and counted the coins. "One dollar and twenty-one cents. We are twenty-nine cents short. We must pray that the Lord will provide that twenty-nine cents."

Timmy didn't hear much of the Sunday School lesson. He was thinking about his new baseball glove and the children who might not have anything to play with at camp.

The next morning on his way to school he stopped at Mr. Wilson's store with his glove. "Mr. Wilson," he said, "I haven't played with this glove yet. Could I return it and get my money back?"

Mr. Wilson looked surprised. "Don't you like the glove?"

"Oh yes, I like the glove," Timmy answered quickly. "But you see I bought this glove with the five dollars my grandmother sent me for my birthday. What little was left I put in the Sunday School offering. Our class has a special project to send a ball to Brazil for a children's camp. We didn't get enough money to pay the postage. If you'll take the glove back, I'd like to put more in the offering. I should have put more in before." Timmy hesitated a moment. "Then if I get some more money, I can buy the glove back again."

"Sure, Timmy, I'll take it back," said Mr. Wilson kindly. "You come in again any time you have the money."

On his way home for lunch, Timmy stopped at Mrs. Karson's house to give her the twenty-nine cents.

When he got home he went to his room and put the rest of the five dollars in his drawer. Then he picked up his old glove his father had fixed and bowed his head. "Thank you, Lord, for giving me a dad who can fix torn baseball gloves, and bless all the children who play with the ball at the Jacobs' camp. Help them to have fun and believe in Jesus. In His name, Amen."

As he ran down the stairs for lunch, he heard his mother talking on the telephone. "Yes, Mr. Wilson, I'll tell him. Good-bye."

"Timmy, that was Mr. Wilson," she said to him. "He would like for you to stop at the store on your way to school."

Timmy wondered what Mr. Wilson wanted as he walked into the store. "Hello Timmy," Mr. Wilson said reaching under the counter for something. "Do you like this glove?"

Timmy took it from Mr. Wilson. "Why it is even nicer than the other glove!" he exclaimed.

"It came in this morning," Mr. Wilson explained. "I was putting the price tag of six dollars on it when I noticed this mark. Some water must have gotten into the box. So I am going to sell it for four dollars and twenty-five cents."

"Yes, Mr. Wilson," Timmy said. "I sure would. My money is at home. If you will keep it for me, I'll run home after school and come back with my money."

Mr. Wilson smiled. "You can take the glove," he said. "You can bring me the money tomorrow on your way to school."

MISSIONS

Matthew
18:19, 20

My Testimony

by Jose Guzman

I am Jose Guzman, 43 years of age. I was a child of Catholic parents, and for thirty-six years I lived in a lost condition. Like a ship without a rudder, I was carried by the winds without any certain or fixed direction or aim. In my early years I was a farm worker, and the region where I lived knew only the law of the pistol. So with my pistol strapped to my side, I had no fear of God or man.

I soon began to realize that this was not a happy life, and I began to seek for peace and contentment. I thought I could find peace and happiness in marriage, but in this I was doomed to disappointment. It just wasn't there. I then began to patronize witches, and to seek happiness in black magic, but it wasn't there either.

I tried to do good things, but I always ended up doing evil. I tried to be good, but I became worse and worse. I decided to dedicate myself to a trade; therefore, I began to study very earnestly automotive and diesel mechanics until I graduated and received my diploma. I could work and earn money, and I also had a degree of acceptance by my fellow workers, and by the world in general. But the peace and contentment which I desired so much was no nearer to realization. On the contrary, everyday I sank deeper and deeper in the mud and slime. Having followed all the worldly paths, and always arriving at the same place (perdition), I came to hate myself. Moreover, I hated and cursed all men, because I felt that all of them were guilty of causing my unhappiness.

Finally, one day a missionary invited my children to his evangelistic services, and they began to hear the Word of God. I didn't oppose their attendance to the services, but I didn't consider it of any importance. They continued to attend the services, and in a short while I could see that some of them knew how to pray. They invited me to attend with them, but I rejected the invitation. In the house they began to sing hymns, and to tell me of the joy they felt in their hearts, but they couldn't awaken any hope in me. All was dead.

Then one day my attention was drawn powerfully to a song which they were singing. It said, "Leaving His throne of glory, He came to take me out of my filth, and I am happy, and I am happy, for Him." I couldn't get those words out of my mind. There was born in me a desire to read the Bible, and from it a light began to illuminate me.

I saw, from reading the Bible, that Christ died for my sins and guilt. I accepted Him as my only and sufficient Saviour, and now I am happy. I have the peace for which I sought so long, and the knowledge that I am saved by my Christ. Now I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. I now spend my time telling others. ". . . how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee" (Mark 5:19). Glory to God.

To Sorrow Beguile

FRED SCOTT SHEPARD

Beguile earth's cares with a smile,
For gladness hath ever a charm;
A true, sincere smile,
Passed onward the while,
To those who may know
Life's sorrow or woe,
Will cheer the sad heart
And courage impart,
If love makes it tender and warm.

OBITUARIES

MR. DELEON KENNEDY

Whereas in the wisdom of our Lord He has called to his eternal home our brother, Mr. Deleon Kennedy, we do hereby set forth the following resolutions:

1. The membership of High Hill Free Will Baptist Church, Scranton, South Carolina, feels keenly the loss of this official of our church, Brother Kennedy having served as church trustee for many years.

2. That we found in him a true follower of Christ, a good neighbor, and one that loved his church, his family, and his community.

3. That we the members of High Hill church, by these resolutions, hereby set forth expressions of mutual sorrow to his family.

4. That a copy of this be sent to The Free Will Baptist for publication, a copy to the family, and a copy to Mrs. Fred Cox to keep in the church records.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. Judy Webster

Woman's Auxiliary

Clayton, N. C.—The James Lanier YFA of Powhatan Free Will Baptist Church met on June 16 at the home of Linda Benson for its monthly meeting. The meeting was called to order by the president, Diane Stevens, who then read the Scripture, Galatians 6:7-9. Larry Coats led the group in prayer, followed with everyone's singing "If You Want Joy."

During the business session the roll was called and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Linda Benson. There were eleven members and three visitors present. Since the YFA will sponsor a teen-ager's prayer room during the revival which is in progress, the president appointed different persons to read the Scripture each night. The group decided to visit the Free Will Baptist Children's Home at Middlesex on Sunday, July 26. They also chose to sponsor a youth revival Friday and Saturday nights, July 17 and 18.

The monthly program was given by Edith Brady which was enjoyed by all. Mrs. J. W. Nichols closed the meeting with prayer. The hostess then served refreshments.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR JULY 5

From Sojourners To Slaves

LESSON TEXT: Genesis 47:1-6; Exodus 1:8-14

MEMORY VERSE: Hebrews 13:2

I. INTRODUCTION

The title of this lesson gives a clue to where our study will take us. The subjects are the Children of Israel, and we see them as guests of a Pharaoh in the land of Egypt and as slaves at a later date.

As a teacher, you should be thoroughly familiar with the material in Genesis 43—50, which is a record of Joseph in Egypt and later Jacob and his other sons in Egypt. In order that you may present the lesson in proper perspective, it is divided into three parts. The first will be mostly introduction and cover some of the history of Israel and attempt to answer questions such as why they were in Egypt. The second and third parts will show the people as guests and then as slaves.—Teen-Age Teacher (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Joseph, the prime minister of Egypt, showed respect to his superior by consulting him regarding the place where his family was to dwell (v. 1).

2. He introduced five of his brethren to the Pharaoh (v. 2).

3. Upon being instructed by Joseph, the men told Pharaoh that they were shepherds (v. 3).

4. The men requested that they might live in Goshen as sojourners (v. 4).

5. Pharaoh granted their request and offered shepherding positions to the men of activity (vv. 5, 6).

6. The new Pharaoh did not know Joseph (v. 8).

7. He took steps that were designed to destroy the Israelites (vv. 9, 10).

8. He set taskmasters over the Israelites to afflict them and increase their burdens (v. 11).

9. The Israelites prospered in proportion to the sufferings they endured (v. 12).

10. The Egyptians made the Israelites slaves, hoping that they could ultimately destroy them (vv. 13, 14).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Years ago a secretary of a British missionary society called on a Calcutta merchant and asked him to help in the work. The merchant wrote out a check for $250 and handed it to the secretary. At that moment a telegram was handed to the merchant. He read it and looked troubled. "This telegram tells me that one of my ships has been wrecked and the cargo lost. It makes a big difference in my affairs. I will have to write you another check." "I understand perfectly," said the secretary and handed back the check for $250. The check book was still open on the merchant's desk. He wrote another check and gave it to the secretary who read it with amazement. It was made out for $1000! "Haven't you made a mistake?" asked the secretary. "No," said the merchant. "I haven't made a mistake." Then, with tears in his eyes, he said, "That telegram was a message from my Father in heaven. It read, 'Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth . . . but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.'"

2. Aunt Betty was converted late in life. She was very poor, but active in the service of her Lord. She faithfully witnessed to His saving and keeping power. Out of her poverty she gave to those who were even poorer than herself. In time she succumbed to crippling rheumatism. She lay in bed month after month suffering much. "It must be very hard for you to lie in bed when for years you have been so active for your Lord," said a friend to her. "No, not at all," she said. "When I was well, the Lord said to me, 'Betty, go here. Betty, go there.' I always obeyed Him. Now the Lord says to me, 'Betty, lie still and suffer!'"

3. Many years ago Pobjendonostow bitterly persecuted the Jews in Russia. Once he asked a Jew, "What will be the result of continued persecution of the Jews?" The Jew replied, "The results, sir, will be a feast! This is illustrated by history. Pharaoh sought to destroy the Jew. The result was the Passover. Haman sought to extirpate the Jews and the result was the Purim. Antiochus Epiphanes sought the Jews' destruction. The result was the feast of the Dedication of the Temple!"

How blessed are rulers and nations which show kindness to God's specially chosen people—Israel. God said, "And I will bless them that bless thee" (Gen. 12:3). God's curse is upon those who mistreat them, for He said, "And I will curse him that curseth thee."

Let Christians take seriously the command, "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee" (Ps. 122:6).—Bible Expositor.

4. A great waterfall is an impressive sight which will attract people from near and far. The visitor finds much to admire in the sight of the waterfall.

A more practical-minded man may see something besides beauty in the waterfall. He may see tremendous power in the rush of water and the steep fall. He knows he can build a power plant to harness this tremendous energy. If he is greedy to use every available bit of power, he may completely destroy the beauty of the waterfall.

Joseph's family went into Egypt at the personal invitation of the Pharaoh. Like the stream of water that grows into a mighty river, this family multiplied until a vast host of people were living in Egypt. At first they were treated as guests. The Egyptian people were happy to have them, glad for them to pursue their occupations.

But the Pharaoh who loved Joseph passed away, and a long succession of new kings forgot the history of these people. As the children of Israel multiplied, the new Pharaohs no longer saw them as strangers enjoying their hospitality. They began to look upon the Israelites as a vast source of power. So the Hebrews were put to work. They were exploited and subdued and beaten. Their talents, their intelligence, their religion—all of which could have contributed to Egyptian culture—were obscured. Just as men may exploit and destroy a waterfall, so the Egyptians exploited the Hebrews. Their places as visitors, as advisers, as fellow workers, were lost in the Egyptian greed for power.—Standard Commentary.

5. A visitor to the White House during the days of the Civil War said: "I had been spending three weeks in the White House with Mr. Lincoln as his guest.

The Family Fortune

Victor Trimmer

Every father wants to be able to take care of the physical needs of his family. He has ambitions to give his wife and children the extra things that make life a little more pleasant and enjoyable—the new toy, the new dress, money for school, and many other things.

It gives the father a great deal of satisfaction to be able to provide financial security so that his love and concern for his family will be seen even after he is gone.

This feeling of concern for the physical needs of the family is most commendable. Not all are able to see these desires realized. Many times the family fortune is very meager. Sometimes lack of ability or lack of opportunity have so limited a father's earning power that he has not been able to provide all the necessities, to say nothing of the luxuries. Sickness often has devoured the family fortune, and many pleasures of life have had to be sacrificed. How the heart aches when such circumstances occur, and what great efforts are made to compensate for this lack!

In my travels I have seen families whose fortune was very meager, and yet in my associations with them I discovered they had a fortune that was of more value than the things which finances can provide.

The family that has love, a love that is expressed in compassion and concern, is a happy family. The families where there is singing and merriment, the families which enjoy a very real sense of peace and confidence, where faith in God is real, and trust is not only taught and talked about, but is a part of everyday living—these families have a fortune even more secure than a comfortable bank account. Their security comes from a knowledge of God and His Word. Such security

"Thanks, Mr. Wilson!" Timmy said. "I'll be sure to bring the money." Then he hurried off to school.

That evening Timmy told his dad all about the new baseball glove and the Sunday School offering. Then he thanked the Lord for the new glove and prayed again for the children's camp in Brazil.

goes beyond the problems and needs of this life; it reaches beyond the valley of death and promises reunion with loved ones in the life to come. Here is a treasure moth and rust cannot corrupt, a fortune that thieves cannot steal. Every family can enjoy it regardless of their station in life.

Where is this fortune found? First of all, the parents must find this fortune for themselves. It has been provided through the unsearchable riches of God Himself, who gave His Son as a ransom, to die on a cross in our place. Jesus paid the full price for sin, and in accepting Him there comes the rich experience of eternal salvation accompanied by the treasures of real peace, joy, security, and faith.

You cannot leave or give to your family that which you do not have, however great your desire may be. This family fortune is preserved and increased by making worship and Bible reading as much a part of the family life as eating and playing. A parent cannot leave to the society in which he lives, whether it be government or schools or any other agency, the financial responsibility of taking care of his family; neither can he shift the spiritual responsibility of providing this spiritual family fortune to the church or the Sunday School or the preacher. The parents themselves are responsible to God and to the family to point out by precept and example the source of the true riches.—The Pentecostal Evangel.

God's Highest and Best

One day a certain gentleman was watching an ant trying to get a crumb on the ground where some picnickers had been. The man became thoroughly interested. After watching the ant for sometime, he put his finger on the crumb. The ant went to another crumb. He put his finger on that crumb, too, and the ant hurried off in search of another crumb. The man kept putting his finger on each crumb, until he was able to get the ant to go to the biggest crumb of all.

Likewise with God. When we choose things that are not His highest and best for us, He gently puts His finger on it until He brings us to the place where we will choose the greatest crumb of all—the Lord Jesus who is our Bread of Life.

One night—it was just after the battle of Bull Run—I was restless and could not sleep. It was coming near to the dawn of the day, when I heard low tones proceeding from a private room where the President slept. The door was partly open. Instinctively I walked in, and there I saw a sight which I shall never forget. It was the President kneeling before an open Bible. The light was turned low in the room. His back was toward me. I shall never forget the tones so piteous and so sorrowful. 'O Thou God that heard Solomon in the night when he prayed and cried for wisdom, hear me. I cannot lead this people, I cannot guide the affairs of this nation without your help. I am poor and weak and sinful, O God, Thou didst hear Solomon when he cried for wisdom—hear me and save this nation.'"

God heard and answered President Lincoln and the nation was saved. It is true that we are not involved in a great war as the country was in the days of President Lincoln, but some of the same evil forces that brought the Civil War are at work in our country today. Who would deny that there is a great need for the leadership of the country to cry out to God for wisdom?—Advance Quarterly (F.W.B.).

to evil thinking are legion, our modern times provide much that is good in the form of clean Christian literature and other reading matter; wholesome magazines are available, as are helpful pictures, and good music of the masters and Christian composers. Wholesome friends may be had if we sincerely look for them.

Best of all, the great cleanser of lives, the Word of God, may be read and memorized by all who will do so (Psalm 119:105) with great benefit. Nothing is more purifying to the mind than memorizing and meditating on God's Word daily. And of course, the heart needs to be cleansed by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and true repentance of the wrong thinking habits of the past, so that with sincerity and confidence one may say, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer" (Psalm 19:14).—Evangel.

A crowd of 120,000 persons jammed Wembley Stadium, London, England, for the final rally of Dr. Billy Graham's three-month London crusade.

The huge attendance broke all records for evangelistic meetings in the country and surpassed Dr. Graham's largest previous audience of 75,000 at the Dallas Cotton Bowl in Texas last year.

The first North Carolina annual camp meeting will be held at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, July 26—August 6. It is a time of spiritual refreshing and communing of kindred spirits. An outstanding feature of the camp meeting will be a course in Bible each morning from 10:00 to 10:50.

The Third District Union Meeting of the Eastern Conference of North Carolina has recently completed the District Assembly Building. The building is located about 3½ miles from Pink Hill, North Carolina, on the Pink Hill and Beulaville Highway.

In the Editor's Mail—

"I am an ordained Free Will Baptist minister in good standing with the Eastern Conference of the State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina. Since I plan to attend the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary next year, I am seeking part-time pastoral work for the coming church year that will be within reasonable driving distance of Wake Forest, N. C.

"Anyone who wishes to contact me may do so by writing to me at Route 2, Pink Hill, N. C., or by calling CYPRESS 8-3703."—The Rev. Eugene Sumner.

FREEDOM CARRIES RESPONSIBILITY

The cry for freedom rings out from deep within African jungles, from the mounts of the Himalayans, from literates and illiterates, from the downtrodden and the upper class, from the teen-ager under parental control and the parent under his burdens. "Let us be free!" cry nationals, would-be nationals, and civil righters around the globe.

Everyone desires freedom, but freedom means many different things to people. In writing of the many faces of freedom, Margaret Muse Oder said, "Freedom is many things. To some it is flags waving, soldiers parading, bands playing. Freedom plays a 'solo' instrument, but listens with attentive ear in order to blend harmoniously in a world symphony. It is believing, loving, giving, taking. Freedom is release from bondage, yet it is love—bound by ethics, standards, and principles.

"Freedom is living with dignity and honor. It is security within the boundaries of good conscience."

Yet, to many people, freedom means the license to do as one pleases. Even some professing Christians have the attitude: "I'm a free moral agent. I can do as I please!" On the whole, man has done basically what he has chosen to do. Only a few, in comparison to the vast population of the world, submit themselves to determining the will of God for their lives.

Freedom taken by an individual or a nation to an ultimate degree can mean only chaos. One should remember that freedom also carries with it responsibility—responsibility for others as well as self. This is true not only in the spiritual realm, but also in the world in general because no one lives to himself. As John Donne said, "No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main." Although one may say, "I'm a free moral agent; therefore, I can do as I please," his life is in contact with others; and in some way what he does affects others.

Sometimes freedom for one may encroach upon the freedom of many. What is freedom then? Regardless of the merits or demerits of the case it seems a paradox to this writer that a few men in a country founded upon freedom should take away the freedom of many to use the Lord's Prayer and read Scripture portions in school devotions so that the freedom of an avowed atheist might be upheld.

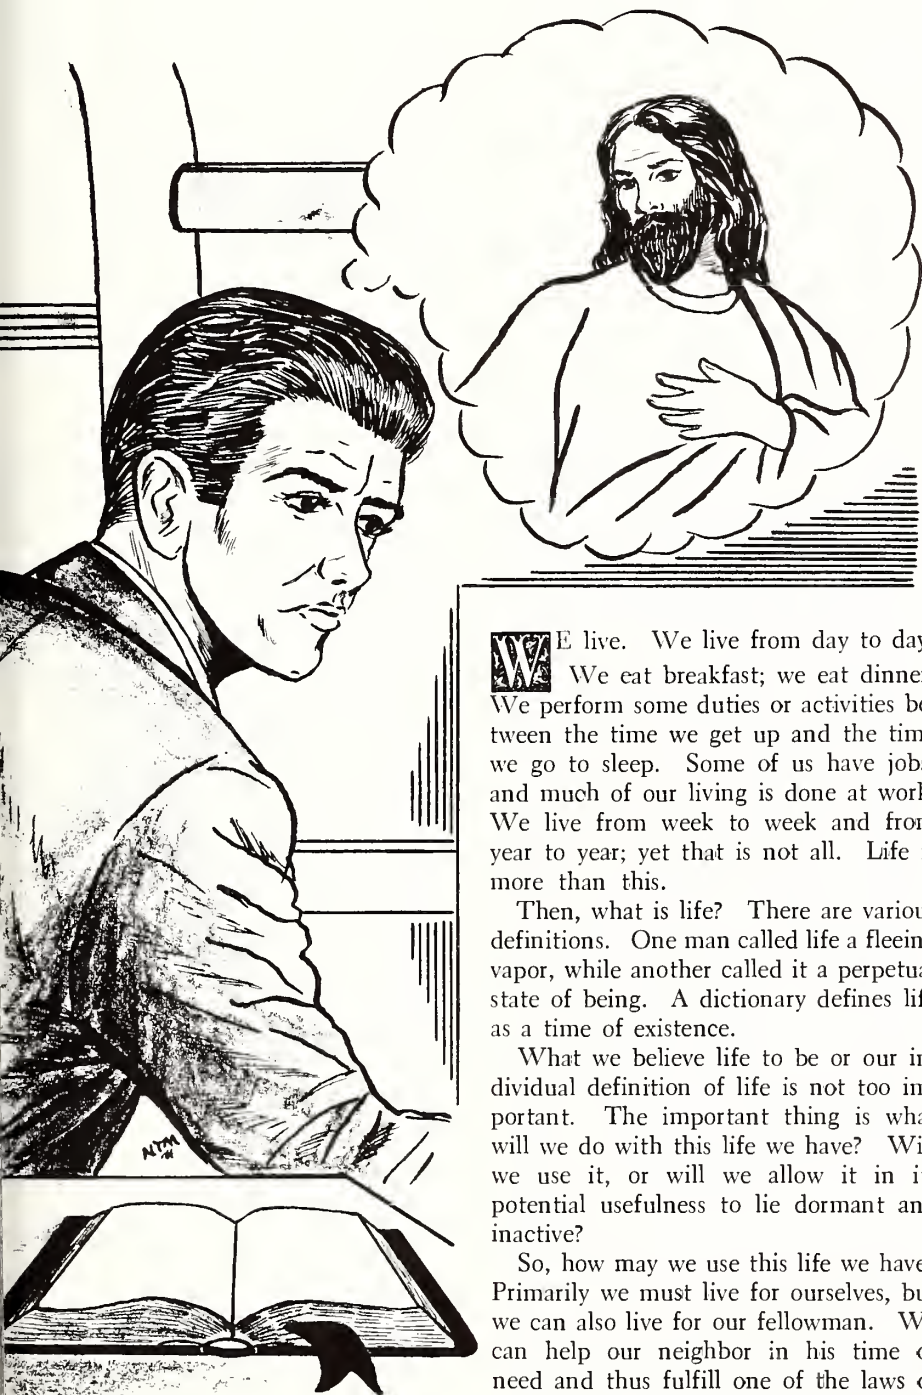

The Apostle Paul, in writing to the Corinthians, said, "For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant" (1 Corinthians 7:22); and in writing to the Galatians (5:13), he said, "For brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another." Paul is saying here that one becomes free from the bondage of sin when he receives Christ as his Saviour, but that at the same time he becomes a servant of Christ; that is, he is to seek to do the will of Christ. He is not to use the fact that he has freedom for his own personal interest, but he has responsibilities towards others—"by love serve one another."

Paul recognized that although all things might be lawful for him, they were not necessarily expedient. He warned the Corinthians about being stumbling blocks to the weak; that is, they should recognize their responsibility to their weak brothers and not use their freedom to eat meat offered to idols to cause the weak to fall.

In the final analysis, freedom is found in the Lord: "Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty" (2 Corinthians 3:17). Therefore, the best expression of freedom is found in total dependence upon the Lord.—LEAH MCGLOHON.

Living the Life Through His Word

by TOMMY MANNING

WE live. We live from day to day. We eat breakfast; we eat dinner. We perform some duties or activities between the time we get up and the time we go to sleep. Some of us have jobs, and much of our living is done at work. We live from week to week and from year to year; yet that is not all. Life is more than this.

Then, what is life? There are various definitions. One man called life a fleeing vapor, while another called it a perpetual state of being. A dictionary defines life as a time of existence.

What we believe life to be or our individual definition of life is not too important. The important thing is what will we do with this life we have? Will we use it, or will we allow it in its potential usefulness to lie dormant and inactive?

So, how may we use this life we have? Primarily we must live for ourselves, but we can also live for our fellowman. We can help our neighbor in his time of need and thus fulfill one of the laws of God. We can share our blessings with those around us—whether these blessings be material ones or spiritual ones. We can use our life more abundantly by living a good example. In this way the usefulness of our living can be transmitted to others; and others should be our main concern; for in essence, we are our brother's keeper—and what better way can we "keep" our brother than by living a good example for him to follow?

By living this example, we obey God in that we are a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto Him. Of course there is a lot more to being a living sacrifice than merely living a good example; but by keeping our fellowman foremost in our minds, we are doing that which God commanded us to do. We must love our neighbor as ourselves, or we are breaking the second most important commandment.

So we must live our life for others.

In living our life for others, we must not forget that we must live for ourselves. We cannot lose ourselves in the problems of others and neglect our personal life. The Bible says that no man should think more highly of himself than he is, but it also clearly states that we should not devoid ourselves of personal thought. Consequently, we must think of ourselves and constantly keep our guard up against any undesirable things which might confront us—undesirables such as temptation, anger, evil thoughts and deeds. None of us can proclaim perfection, but we can all strive to be better. We can strive to be better in our association to our fellowman, and better in our association to our character in that we live in such a way that our character can be strengthened. Thus, we are better in association to God.

So actually in living for ourselves, we are living for others an example.

For most of us there is no better way to learn a truth than to see it in another person's life. Example is a far more effective teacher than the voice, and actions speak when the voice cannot be heard. When others see in us a good example, they are blessed. We know that high ideals are always commendable; they indicate fine character. What higher ideal could any of us have than to reach for a better life? A better life usually indicates Christianity, and the Christian life is certainly the most gratifying type of life.

When we look about ourselves, we see this big world, and we realize just how insignificant we are. Each step we take seems uncertain, for we are overshadowed by the bigness of everything that is

TRUTH

MEN today are seeking various kinds of freedom. Three years ago we were in Africa, and we found all over that continent that people were gathering in crowds and shouting, "Freedom!" Even the smallest countries, such as the island of Malta in the Mediterranean, are now asking for independence. Every little group of people in the world wants their political freedom, no matter how ill prepared they may be for it. Last summer I visited the world's fair in Seattle and saw the tremendous prospects of science presented in the exhibitions. I thought of what Einstein said shortly before he died. "I feel," he declared, "like a man chained. I get a glimpse of reality and then it flees. If only I could be free from the shackles of my intellectual smallness, then I could understand the universe in which I live." Not only do we want political and intellectual freedom today; we also want moral freedom. We have sexual expression on a scale unknown in modern times. We thought it would make us happy, but we are miserable with it. We have found it destroying not only our morals, but our souls.

We say that we want freedom from prejudice, freedom from ignorance and freedom from poverty. We even say we're searching for religious freedom. There is a group in America that wants to throw out all Christian emphasis, all religious symbols. They wish to be free from such "bondage." They say, "Do away with the recognition of God in national life."

by BILLY GRAHAM

Our forefathers did not feel that way. They desired that we should have freedom of religion, but not freedom from religion. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." If we ever do push God aside, may God have mercy upon our nation! Today we live in a pluralistic society, and secularism has become a very rapidly growing religion, with its fanatical adherents who work for it day and night. They say that if we can be freed from the Protestant, the Roman Catholic and the Jew we shall be a happy people.

Yet the Scripture teaches that the only truly free people in the world are those who have made Christ their Savior and Master and Lord. Jesus Christ said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

What then is truth? Men seek for that, too, as they seek for freedom. The scientist seeks truth about the physical universe. The philosopher tries to discover truth about human existence. The psychologist looks for truth about the action and reaction of the human mind. At the end of his life Gautama Buddha said, "I am still searching for truth."

But here is a man, a giant among men, who appears on the horizon. He stands before his neighbors and friends and asks, "Which of you has ever seen me commit a sin?" and they cannot answer him because they have never seen him commit one sin. "This man stands and declares, "I am the truth!" What an astounding claim. "I am the secret of all truth—all psychological truth, all sociological truth, all scientific truth, all philosophical truth, all religious truth."

SECRET OF THE UNIVERSE IS CHRIST

The Scripture says that "by him were all things created" and "by him all things consist." There is something that holds matter together, and the scientist cannot tell you what it is. I believe that some day we are going to learn that the secret of it all is Christ: that if he took his hand off us for five seconds, we would blow apart. He is truth! Ultimate truth!

Now, you can reject this truth and think that you are free. You can say, "I have rejected Jesus Christ, I have rejected God, and now I am going to live it up." But you will find yourself in a bondage far greater than any you knew before. You end up with inner conflicts, guilt complexes, inferiority feelings, fears and neuroses, and your so-called freedom is a new ensnarement.

When Christ told his disciples, "I am the truth," he was either right, and was telling the truth, or he was a blasphemous deceiver who knew that he was not the truth, and was lying. Or he thought that he was God, and he did not know the difference. That would have made him a maniac—a person who thought he was God when he really wasn't! Which was it? That is a decision you will have to make. You will have to decide who Jesus Christ is—a liar, an egomaniac, or what he claimed to be: God manifested in the flesh, the ultimate reality and truth in the universe. If he is God and is the truth, and he tells me to follow him, I would be a fool not to do so.

GOD DEMANDS A COMMITMENT

We are all interested in truth, and Christ is the truth. When you give yourself to him he opens the doors of your mind in the most glorious way. You see a new dimension of life that you have been previously blinded to—supernaturally blinded by Satan. When you open your life to Christ—to truth—it lights up. Your whole inner life glows, and there comes a peace and joy and security that only he can give.

So God demands a decision, a commitment ment, a surrender, a conversion. Jesus said, "You must be born again." It wasn't optional. It wasn't something that one "ought" to do. He said, "You must be born again," before you can get into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Sometimes I think that spiritual birth is much like natural birth. There is the moment of conception; then there are nine months of gestation; then there is birth; then there is growth. When people come forward in some of our meetings and make commitments, it may be for them a moment of conception. It may be a stage in gestation, or it may be birth. Only God knows. But the whole gestation period could take place in just 30 seconds. You don't have to wait nine months.

You can have conception and gestation and birth right now, but remember that salvation is of the Lord. It has to be done by the Holy Spirit. When you are willing to bend your will, the Holy Spirit does the rest. He is the one who regenerates; he is the one who changes; he is the one who gives the elements for growth; and what a wonderful thing it is to relax in him.

When you come to Christ, he gives you a freedom that is real: "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." What is this freedom? First, he frees you from the penalty of sin. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan said, "There is no subject for which the Bible uses a larger number of descriptive terms than this of sin." I could preach from morning until night, describing what sin is. But I do not need to. You know that you have sinned against God.

HE TOOK THE HELL OF OUR SIN

We break the laws of God; we fail God; we fall short of his requirements; we are sinners. And this sin has done something—it has alienated us from God. Our sin comes between us and God, so that he has to hide his face from us and will not hear us. You may laugh at this. But remember: the Bible says that "fools make a mock at sin." You can say that your peccadilloes are small and don't amount to anything; but God is a pure and righteous and holy God, and in his sight you have caused offense; you have caused a cloud to come between you and God. You are separated from God so that your prayers cannot be answered, and all of your religious motions mean nothing in his sight. You can try to cover up your sins, but God says that you cannot get away with it.

But here comes the glorious part: Christ took the penalty of our sin. That is what the cross is all about. He died on that cross for people like you and me, sinners who had failed him and had broken his laws. On that cross God took all of our sins and laid them on Christ, so that he became sin for us. He took the judgment of our sin; he took the hell of our sin. And the moral accountability that you would ordinarily expect to face at the judgment, you will not have to face if you claim him for your Savior.

I will not be at that judgment. Oh, yes, I have sinned; I have broken God's laws a thousand times, but I will not have to face the judgment. I will not have to give an account. Why? Because on the cross the Lord Jesus Christ took the accountability for me. He took the sin and judgment for me. That is the glorious Grace and mercy of God that none of us can understand.

ACCEPT IT, BELIEVE IT—AND REJOICE

Oh, the depth of God's Grace! Oh, the height of God's mercy, the breadth of God's love, that he is willing to say to you and to me, "I forgive you. You will never have to face the judgment"! When that gets through to you, you can go to bed and sleep a new kind of sleep. You will say to yourself, "I don't deserve this kind of release. Surely I will have to face the music sometime." And you may even find the past haunting you; but you are free. The full penalty has been paid. The Judge will never say, "I pronounce sentence on you," because Christ has accepted that sentence for you. In Christ you are free. Accept it by faith and go your way rejoicing.

Second, we are freed from the power of sin. Jesus said, "Whosoever commiteth sin is the servant of sin." How many of you are servants of sin? In bondage to jealousy, to pride, to selfishness, to immorality, to gambling, to some narcotic, to sinful pleasure, so that sin has become your slave driver? It may be that sin stands over you with a whip and lashes you across the back. You protest, "But I don't want to commit this sin. I don't want to tell this lie. I don't want to get drunk. I don't want to get involved with that person." But sin says "WHOOO!" and you bow down, you yield to the domination of sin, you are a slave to sin. The very thing you say that you will not do again, you do. It becomes worse and worse as you grow older and older. Your heart gets harder and harder, until finally there is death and judgment and hell.

But when you know the truth, the truth shall make you free. How wonderful! Sin is no longer in the throne room of my life. Christ sits there, and as I daily, moment by moment, yield my members to him, he orders my life. Satan no longer has the power over my life that he once had. Sin is no longer in command. Oh, to be sure, I slip and fall, but Christ is there to pick me up and to put his arm around me and to love me.

BLACKMAILED BY A DEAD DUCK

I heard years ago about a little boy who went with his sister, Mary, to visit his grandparents at their farm during the summertime. The grandmother had a pet duck of which she was extremely fond. It was a very handsome duck, and one day as little Johnny was playing, he aimed at the duck with his slingshot and hit the duck right on the head. The bird toppled over, kicked a few times and died.

Johnny was frightened to death. He looked about and saw no one, so he took the duck and ran into the woods, dug a hole, buried the duck and came back to the house. No one seemed to know the difference.

He and Mary always divided the chores, and that evening it was her turn to do the supper dishes. But instead Mary turned to him after supper and said, "Johnny, you do the dishes tonight."

"You're crazy," he said. "This is your night; I am going out to play."

Mary said, "Come here. I saw you kill that duck this afternoon. If you don't do exactly what I tell you to do, I am going to tell Grandma what you did. You know what that means. It was her prize duck."

"All right," said Johnny, "I will do the dishes." The next time it was Mary's turn the same thing happened, and this went on for two weeks. Johnny was going around with his tongue hanging out. Every time he would bring up the matter she would always say, "Johnny, remember the duck!" At last he couldn't stand it any longer. Mary had gone to town, and his grandmother was sewing. Johnny went in and stood around and twisted his ear and bit his nails, and finally he said, "Grandma, there is something I just have to say."

"What is it, son?" she asked.

He said, "It is the hardest thing I have ever had to do, Grandma. About two weeks ago I was playing with my

Memorial Chapel Host To Youth Fellowship

The Youth Fellowship of the Second District of the Western Conference will be held at the Memorial Chapel Church at the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, Saturday night, July 4. At the meeting a Sword Drill contest will begin and last for six months. Each church in the district is urged to send two participants for the contest. The winner will receive an all-expense paid trip to Cragmont Assembly and the runner-up will receive half of his expenses to Cragmont. It is hoped that by stressing the Sword Drill contest that the youth will study their Bibles more. This is a challenge to all the youth of the district.

Oriental Church Announces Revival Services

The Oriental, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church announces revival services to begin July 6 and to continue through July 12. The Rev. J. W. Everton of Clayton will be the evangelist for the services, which will begin at 7:30 each night. The Rev. E. E. Edwards is pastor.

Revival in Progress At Shady Grove Church

Revival services are in progress at Shady Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 5, Dunn, North Carolina. The Rev. J. W. Everton of Clayton is the evangelist. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend the remaining services, which begin at 8 p. m., by the pastor, the Rev. Walter Reynolds, and the church. July 4 will be the last service of the series.

News Notes from Spring Branch

Spring Branch Free Will Baptist Church near Walstonburg, North Carolina, began its summer activities with a community sing on Saturday night, June

13. The churches represented were Friendship, Free Union, and Saratoga. An offering of $50 for missions was received. The church was glad to have these visitors, and they are urged to visit again.

The week of June 15 vacation Bible school was held at the church. Each night during the week the Sunday school bus made its rounds, and many who perhaps could not have attended were able to attend. Their educational building again proved its worth by affording additional rooms which the lack of up until now had been a handicap.

A picnic on Saturday evening, June 20, brought the last day of the school to an enjoyable climax.

Macedonia Church Ends Successful Spiritual Revival

A soul-stirring revival was experienced at Macedonia Free Will Baptist Church, Ernul, North Carolina, last week. Many remarked that the services were compared with those of past years when people longed for revival.

The Spirit of the Lord was much in evidence as many came to the altar to make their decision for Christ. In this humble rural church, 56 decisions were registered. Among these were 17 first time decisions, 3 transfers by letter from other churches, and 36 rededications. All members of the church were revived spiritually in their hearts.

The Rev. Earl Glenn, pastor of St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church of New Bern, was the evangelist, who preached the Word of God to an overflowing group every night. Visitors came from various churches to attend the services.

Special music was rendered during the week by the Morris Sisters of Vanceboro; Carol Whitford and the pastor, the Rev. A. J. Lyczkowski, who sang solos; a church trio, consisting of Mrs. Doris Shackelford, Vicky Shackelford, and Pete Ipock; and the church choir.

The revival services were concluded

SPECIAL NOTICE

NO FREE WILL BAPTIST NEXT WEEK

The pastor and the members of Macedonia church thank God for this heaven-sent revival in the midst of a complacent generation. A cordial welcome is continually extended to all to attend this church.

One Word That Can Change Your Life

By Robert W. Olewiler

Most things you have to put up with are just for a little while. They change. They pass away. So lift up your spirit!

St. Paul once said: "I never lose heart." On another occasion he testified: "I glory in tribulation." Remarkable! Here was a man who was beaten and left for dead, shipwrecked, put into prison, finally beheaded in Rome. His health was never good. He was forced to make his long journeys by walking rough roads. Yet he said: "I never lose heart. I glory in tribulation. Our light affliction, which is but for a moment. . . ."

This great Apostle knew that his sorrow was just for a little while. That's why he could be cast down, but not counted out; depressed but not defeated; "in all things more than conqueror."

Take courage. Human experience breaks up into fleeting moments, the word that can change your life.—Biblical Recorder.

The Gospel of Reconciliation

THE great cause of the world is the lack of the spirit of reconciliation. Estrangement between social classes makes life narrow and bitter. The want of good feeling and cooperation between employers and employees wastes a nation's strength. A domestic paradise is turned into an unhappy world of quarrelling when husband and wife and children are self-centered. The joy of friendship is lost when men become too proud to ask for pardon and to give it.

The peoples of the world have been brought so close together that life can be tolerated only if we think of one another as friends. If we are to live together happily, we must live together peacefully. The world is now a neighborhood, and a neighborhood calls for neighborliness. Otherwise, more contacts between peoples will mean only more troubles.

But there is a greater need than to be reconciled with others. We must be reconciled to the Father of us all. We cannot have peace with all the other members of the family unless we are at peace with the Head of the family. So this is the gospel message: "Be reconciled to God" (2 Corinthians 5:20).

But does God want to be reconciled to us? Or have we too deeply offended against Him for this to be possible? The good news of Jesus Christ is that God wants very much to be reconciled to us, so much so that there is nothing said about the need of His being reconciled to us. We have no need to plead with Him in this matter. The spirit of enmity never entered His heart. His heart was always full of love. God never broke away from us. We rejected His love. We became estranged from Him.

From the moment of man's first sin of rebellion, his heavenly Father began to take steps to restore the lost harmony. Through all the ages He has worked for this. He has never given man up. His reconciling activity reached its climax in Jesus. It is in Christ that God proves that He wants to be reconciled to us. We cannot love God unless we have proof that He loves us. Jesus proves it.

We see a complete absence of bitterness towards the sinner for all the outrages he has committed against God. Instead of revengefulness, we find a love that will suffer all insults and injuries rather than retaliate. We find a love that will give itself to the utmost to win the estranged ones to loving fellowship.

Christ let sin do its worst to Him. He let sinful men abuse and afflict Him, even unto death. Yet His love was unabated. He proved the perfection of His love. His love was proof against all sin, all hatred, all injury. This is the love of God. It is a love deathless, unconquerable.

It is quite certain, then, that in spite of all the evil we have done, God with all His heart loves us. He gave His only Son into the hands of sinful men to put Him to death, that He might bear the penalty of our sin, and show that He is ready to forgive us. God, our Father, standing near the cross of His Son, assures us of His pardon and brings us to repentance.

What great lengths God goes in pressing His invitation to accept His love! He does not extend it to us in a take-it-or-leave-it fashion. He becomes a suppliant. He begs and beseeches. The great Creator becomes a petitioner. "As though God did beseech you by us: we pray you . . . , be ye reconciled to God"

(2 Corinthians 5:20). God is longing to have all the obstruction put out of the way. It will give Him unspeakable pleasure to receive us into His arms.

God cannot do more than He is doing. He cannot make us accept the offer of His love. Love can only be offered, not enforced. See God in Christ, holding out the right hand of reconciliation to us. Shall we not grasp the outstretched hand? In view of the fact that sin nailed Him to the cross, let us repent of our sin, and put our trust in the love of Him who has done so much to prove it.

Let us also prove we are at peace with God by being at peace with all men, seeing that all are His children, and our brothers and sisters. Let us be reconciled to our Father, and to all the family.—Editorial in The Free Methodist.

No Afterglow

Romans 12:1, 2

A match company advertises one brand of matches as having "no afterglow," and, therefore, not so liable to cause fire when thrown aside after lighting. That suggests, by contrast, the fact that there is no afterglow in the lives of some Christians whom the minister is called upon to bury. They were honest and decent enough as citizens, and there were some other admirable traits in their lives, but there was no warm, helpful, cheering "afterglow."

What is admirable for matches is tragedy for character. Is there a glow in your life for Christ now? If there is, then there will be an "afterglow."

Go out and watch the sunset glow tonight. The most beautiful of all colors come out as the afterglow. So with our lives. We should leave something that will ever glow.—The Brethren Evangelist.

Your Flag and My Flag

Your flag and my flag,
And how it flies today,
In your land and my land,
And half a world away!

Rose red and blood red,
Its stripes forever gleam,
Snow white and soul white—
The good forefathers' dream.

Sky blue and true blue,
With stars that gleam aright,
The glorious guide of the day,
A shelter through the night!

MISSIONS

What Can We Do To Help?

by John B. Elliston

Three weeks ago I wrote an article on this same theme, at which time I emphasized the Dollar Club; and at that time I said that in the next issue I would give more information. However, there were other things which needed to be reported, so that we were unable to get back to this theme until now. However, Brother Bryan had an article about used clothing in the last issue, which was a part of this theme. Today, therefore, I hope to present some more ideas.

As many of you know, we are working toward opening a missionary training school in the fall. We hope to bring young men and women from many parts of Mexico to the school, for which we must have dormitories and a kitchen. We have the foundation of the kitchen ready to continue building, but we have been at a standstill for lack of finance. Any person or groups who can contribute ten dollars to this fund, known as the Gladys Elliston Memorial Kitchen Fund, will receive a beautiful certificate which includes a picture of Gladys. One certificate will be issued for each ten dollars so contributed.

We are also selling bonds in connection with the North Carolina Mission Board. These bonds are in denominations of $50, $100, and $500. They bear 5% interest annually, paid semiannually by simply sending the due interest coupons to the bank here. It is our hope that some of you will see fit to invest your savings in this project. It is a sound investment, and it will help us to get our school underway in a good manner in the fall. The North Carolina State Convention, through your mission board is paying for redeeming these bonds. After the bonds are redeemed, the mission board holds the bonds as a sign of interest in the property here. You can receive your money back, with five percent interest, while promoting world missions. Who could ask for a better opportunity?

The woman's auxiliaries, etc., have been sending green stamps for the purchase of gasoline lanterns and other equipment. This is a very good project. We hope to completely furnish the memorial kitchen with dishes, etc., by the use of green stamps and Gold Bond stamps. These stamps can be sent here, and we can take them to Tucson, where we can procure the things we need. If you wish to contribute other types of savings stamps, it would be best to contact us to see if we can readily redeem them. If we can't, it would be best for us to tell you what we need so that you can redeem them in your area and send the articles needed.

Another way in which you can help is through used clothing. They are always in demand. We need good clothing which is clean in all sizes, makes, and models.

It may be that some of you have dried beans, dried milk, rice, or other such commodities which you receive more than you can use. Such things are always in great demand in a school of the boarding type. If someone had an idea to dry some fruit—apples, peaches, apricots, etc.—they could then be shipped and stored with little difficulty. Most of these fruits lose about five sixths of their weight when dried, so the shipping would be greatly reduced.

If anyone who reads this has an interest in this mission activity, or desires to know more about it, please make sure that you receive the "Arizona-Mexico Missionary," which is our monthly publication. There is no subscription charge, but offerings to help with its printing are greatly appreciated. Just write to Arizona-Mexico Missions, Inc., P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona 85621, and tell us that you would like to be placed on the mailing list.

If you have received a sample copy of The Free Will Baptist, in which you are reading this, be sure to subscribe for The Free Will Baptist. We usually have an article in it each week. May God bless and guide you.

Woman's Auxiliary

Bladenboro, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church held its June meeting on Tuesday night, June 9, at the home of Mrs. Lucille Bryan. After a devotional by Mrs. Martie Russ, the roll was called and the minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Frances Davis. Eight members were present.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Nancy Hardee, the vice-president, Mrs. Lucille Bryan, presided over the business meeting.

"The House That Unity Built" was the topic of the program. Those taking part were Mesdames Wilma Storms, Maybelle Edwards, Martie Russ, Hayes Pait, Gracie Hester, Louise Smith, and Miss Elizabeth Edwards.

Following the closing prayer by Mrs. Gracie Hester, the hostess served refreshments.

SERMONS ABOUT "LOVE"

On the love of God I am not sure you should ever preach generally. A good and thoughtful and devout man said, "I am tired of hearing sermons about love. After all, it is only said once in the Bible that God is love." What he was weary of was not the reality, which was the center of all his faith, but the unreality of mere sentimental repetition till the very word became nauseous. Like the apostle's great lyric on it, you must make it into a grand sweet song before it will sing its way into men's hearts, and then enable them to see in all common experience, however, partially and dimly, that God's love knows them and directs their way, however imperfectly they know it. When our Lord makes God's kindness to the unthankful and evil his supreme perfection, which we are to seek in loving them that hate us and praying for those who use us despitefully, there is no danger of ending in vapid, unreal, unpractical sentiment.—JOHN OMAN in Concerning the Ministry, re-published recently in paperback by John Knox Press, Richmond, Va.

Make friends with your trials, and you will see that when you cease to take thought for your own deliverance, God will take thought of it for you.—Selected.

around us. But as a rule, we do precisely what we want to do even though we know this life is uncertain. We go where we want to go; we think what we want to think—but when the heart wants above all else to do the will of God, life takes on a richer and fuller meaning, and that feeling of uncertainty seems to lose its pressure. We are challenged then to live a good life before our friends. A challenged life is moving in the right direction. All selfish tendencies are halted and we think of others. In this way we move into favor with God.

It is sad that most of us lack this favor with God. If we could remove the curtain which surrounds each other's life and see the naked heart, we could find much wickedness and selfishness. We read of people in forgotten ages who walked through fire and blood. We hear of those who were lashed to the stake, those who were cast into dungeons, and some that were even lifted to the cross—and we—we are too selfish to give a little of our time to help someone in need. Why? Because we are self-centered individuals.

We can lose some of this self-centeredness by having a closer walk with God. Sometimes it takes sickness or pestilence for us to recognize the fact that we need this closer walk. Life is never so earnest or so real as when one has had a vision of a closer walk with God.

Sometimes when misfortune strikes us, we are prone to be bitter. We think that others were never called upon to endure the same difficulties which confront us. We are certain that our pains and misfortunes are more severe; our obstacles are more forbidding; our distances are longer. It all relates back to the fact that we think of ourselves; but, if we read the Scriptures, we can cleanse ourselves of all bitterness and other undesirable traits.

All of us want to live, but few of us have ever determined for ourselves a holy motive for living. We all ask for life, but how many of us are willing to let our life be used? If each new day could produce Christian people, dedicated to think and determined to act for the betterment of the world, the whole population at large would be impressed with the Christian way of life and would desire to be a part of it. What do we do? We put forth halfhearted efforts and back down at the hint of a little opposition. We are weak; we lack fortitude. We refuse to use the weapon at hand. That weapon is faith, and it can conquer great victories; but we are unwilling to latch ourselves to it and exercise its power. Life without faith has little meaning.

Men suffer willingly for their country. Generations have seen men leave their homes, their loved ones, and all cherished interests to engage in war to protect some ideal. Those men thought it not beneath them to sleep in ditches, to crawl in mud, to suffer with the cold. When arms and legs were torn with shells, and when cruelties were suffered in the hands of heartless enemies, it was all for a cause. If men can suffer for their country, cannot men suffer, if need be, for Christ. Is His cause not greater than any cause for war? We should be willing to, but how many of us are willing to suffer for Him. It takes a holy life for one to be willing to lose a part of it for Christ, but unless our life has an element of holiness in it, it has little value. The desire for a holy life must begin in the heart.

If we are clear-thinking people, at one time or another in our life we take note of our possessions and accomplishments. Each of us can say of something, "This is what I have," because we all possess certain material things and certain abilities. Yet, what do we have as far as spiritual blessings are concerned? We have very little in comparison to what God will provide for us if we let Him. This should give us incentive to press on to a better life. Every promise that God makes to us is flavored with happiness.

With the proper perspective, life has but one pattern. Life has but one outlook—to improve. We can improve if we try. Any attempt is rewarded when it is backed by a sincere effort. For an effort to be rewarded, however, it must be a sound effort. The Bible speaks a great deal about soundness: sound words, sound doctrine, sound minds, sound hearts—and a sound heart is the keystone of spiritual stability. For our life really to count, we must be spiritually stable; for, spiritual stability is the essence of a good life.

We complain sometimes that God is not so near to us as He should be. We must realize that the nearness of God to us is dependent upon the nearness of our life to His. The devil is constantly digging pits. We must be aware of his snares, notwithstanding the fact that we must ever and always submit to the control and leadership of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit will guard us from the pitfalls and lead us into the way which is pleasing to God. When we follow the path that God has for us, we discover life on the highest plane. This is what the heart has longed for so long. In this type of life, we find a reward of happiness; and that happiness stems from doing His will.

So then, what is life? an existence, a perpetual state of being, a fleeing vapor, a mystic beauty? Yes, life is all of these things, yet it can be more. It is for us to choose, for each of us has the power to mold his own life. No one else can live our life for us; we must live it ourselves. What we choose to do with it can make the difference between ultimate failure or final success.

To assure our success, will we live our life for others and for God? Will we draw close to His teachings and follow His pathway? It is for us to decide. What shall we do? It is a perplexing question, but each us has to answer it in one way or another. We must use this life, for it is given to us to live.

"So, let us long
Take joy in its full measure,
And realize the wonder of wonders
we know;
Let us derive from this life
Seeds of kindness and pleasure,
Knowing our dear God willed it so."

By faithful study of the Bible and earnest application of His teachings, we can live that life as Christ taught and ordained for His followers.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

Years ago I published a tract entitled "Do You Know?" More than twenty thousands of these tracts were distributed, mostly in North Carolina; however, some were sent to other states. Several months ago the Free Will Baptist Church of Williamston, North Carolina, through its pastor, the Rev. Mr. Ambrose, and some of the members, asked for a reprinting of this tract. So we granted them the privilege to have it reprinted for their own use. It was reprinted for the church by our own Free Will Baptist Press at Ayden, North Carolina.

For several months we had planned to have a reprint made, but due to the fact that it takes money to print tracts and that there were many calls coming from our denominational enterprises, I kept putting it off, thinking that my money tree would bear fruit and I could get the tract into circulation again. But seemingly, I am not much nearer that fruit than I was in the past. Though under the leadership of the Holy Spirit I believe that the time will soon come when we can do the job.

I am placing this tract in the columns of The Free Will Baptist for my "Notes and Quotes" this week.

After this tract appears in the "Baptist," if any of you, my readers, would have a desire to help publish and distribute this biblical tract, you can send me any gift, small or large, and say: "This gift is for the reprinting of the tract, 'Do You Know?'" This tract has received much praise as being one of the best. The late Rev. J. R. Bennett said, "This is the best tract on Bible truths that I have seen."

DO YOU KNOW?

First—THAT ALL MEN ARE SINNERS?

"For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23).

"All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way" (Isaiah 53:6).

"There is not a just man on earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not" (Ecclesiastes 7:20).

Second—THAT YOU MUST DIE? THEN TO JUDGMENT GO?

"And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment" (Hebrews 9:27).

"But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ" (Romans 14:10).

"Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead" (Acts 17:31).

Third—TO REACH HEAVEN THAT YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN?

"Jesus answered and said unto him, (Nicodemus) Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? . . . Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God" (John 3:3-5).

Fourth—THAT FAITH IN CHRIST PRODUCES THE NEW BIRTH?

"Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him, also that is begotten of him. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments" (I John 5:1, 2).

Fifth—THAT THE BELIEVER HATH THE WITNESS IN HIMSELF?

"If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son" (I John 5:9, 10).

Sixth—THAT THE BELIEVER HATH AN ADVOCATE?

"My little children, these things write I unto you that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world" (I John 2:1, 2).

Seventh—THAT GOD LOVES SINNERS?

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, (Christ) should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

"But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Romans 5:8).

Why not take God's sure Word, rather than man's religion? Why not believe the whole Bible, instead of a Bible full of holes? Why try to be saved or try to hire God to save you by making business promises in what is called "prayer"? Take your salvation the Bible way. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31). "For by grace are ye saved through faith (notice that it says 'through faith') and that not of yourselves: It is the gift of God: Not of works lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Ephesians 2:8-10).

So, sinners can only believe on the Lord Jesus Christ with perfect yielding of all sin—body, soul, and spirit, and know that they are saved. Why? Because God says so. Not by works; not by agonizing; not by doing "penance" or causing the body to suffer. Christ did the "agonizing." Christ did the "suffering." He did all, that we might believe on Him and thereby be saved. Sinner, will you accept Christ as your personal Saviour right now?

I hereby, realizing that I am a sinner, lost without Christ, do accept God's Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, as my personal Saviour.

"The church is never at its best except when it is caught in the active torture of identifying itself with man's hurt, to the point of hurting itself. We can no more redeem our times without disturbing our congregations and communities than a surgeon can remove an abdominal cancer without cutting."—Dow Kirkpatrick.

Too many Christians envy the sinners their pleasure and the saints their joy, because they don't have either one. — Martin Luther.

If you were the only Christian left alive, would the church start up again?

Questions & Answers

3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Please explain, "He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved" (Psalm 15:5). Would this verse and other such passages of Scripture on usury indicate that the receiving of interest on money loans as now is commonly done in the business world is wrong?—Ada G. Snydes, Illinois.

ANSWER: This word usury is generally employed in the Scriptures in the same sense in which we use the word interest today. We speak of the "usurious interest" but the Bible never does, although the idea which those words suggest is that which the Scriptures have generally in mind when it uses the word usury. That usury in the sense of simple interest, however, is not in itself wrong would seem to be the inference from such passages as that found in Deuteronomy 23:20, "Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all that thou settest thine hand to in the land whither thou goest to possess it." Here we see that its imposition is permitted in the case of a stranger or foriegn to Israel.

What the Bible is inculcating against usury, or interest, is its employment among the Israelites themselves as fellow members of the theocracy, and especially in their dealings with the poor. The poor were special objects of God's pity and love. When some of the disciples wanted the ointment Mary used to anoint Jesus' body, which He said was in preparation for the grave, He rebuked them, reminding them that they would always have this class of people, the poor, with them and their obligation to that class of people, but that this need that Mary had met was imminent and could not have been delayed.

Interest in itself, however, would seem to be a legitimate form of business, and only when it is exercised or employed in a spirit contrary to that of the second table of the law does it become illegitimate—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Whether the business world of today violates this commandment or not in its demands for the loan of money, the one who asked this question is perhaps as able to judge as I am. If and when one does so, he is guilty of usury in the bad sense; and he cannot escape the day when he must settle with God for such a sin; it must either be done here or hereafter. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy" (Proverbs 28:13).

In writing on a similar subject, Dr. James M. Gray says: "To add a further word, loan association, it has been developed, could not do business on a smaller margin than 2 percent per month. This might be regarded in some quarters as 'usury' and yet to cut off the business of such associations would be to work injury instead of good to the people intended to be benefited. All of which teaches us the great wisdom required in the application of the principles of Christianity to the specific case, and how careful we should be about raising a cry of wrong doing before we know the facts."

Dr. Gray, it seems, reached the wrong conclusion; and we might make a bigger mistake in what we conclude today. I quoted the above because it was written before the 1929 stock crash. The government did something about such high interest after the crash and during the economic depression that followed it. If it had made such high interest and the wild speculation that went with it illegal before the market crash, the depression may have been avoided.

Though it will be different in many ways, I fear that our country is headed for a worse disaster than that brought about by the crash unless something is done to curb the foolish use of money we now make of it. Men never major in excesses such as was the common practice in 1929 and that like what we as a nation are freely engaging in now without ill results. Men are just simply mad over money as they were then. Then we read in the daily papers of the "teapot dome," the Andy Mellon scandle, and the strange death of President Harding, the Al Capone gang, etc. Now we read of the Cuban ransom money (that paid by United States citizens for the mistake our government made in conjunction with the Bay of Pigs scandal,) the British train robbery, the United States handout to unworthy nations, etc. The bubble burst in 1929 and it may burst again soon for "the love of money is the root of all evil," and who knows how far reaching this evil will spread and what all will be the ill results before it reaches such an unhappy climax? "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Galatians 6:7, 8).

"We have been surrendering our liberties under the delusion that government has some superior competence in the realm of economics, some magic multiplier of wealth, some ready access to a huge store of economic goods which may be had without working for them—merely by voting for them."—Admiral Ben Moreell, USN (Retired), in Christianity Today.

Samuel Writes a Song

Norma Cournow

ON E dark day in Andover, Massachusetts, Samuel Smith decided to get away from his studies for a while. Samuel was studying to be a preacher and his studies were not easy. He turned to a song book on his desk and began flipping through its pages. The sun was setting outside his window as he found a song with a catchy tune that he liked. The song was written in German, so Samuel decided to write English words to the same tune.

Samuel picked up a bit of waste paper, five or six inches long and began to write. Half an hour later, he had finished writing "My Country 'Tis of Thee," one of the most famous songs in history.

But let's start a few months before this. A man named William C. Woodbridge had started the chain of events that led to the writing of the song. He had just returned from Germany where he was studying the German school system. Woodbridge had discovered that much music was taught in the German schools. He brought back to America a number of music books for children that were used in the German schools.

When Woodbridge arrived in Boston, he found his friend Lowell Mason had a problem. Mason was leading a children's church choir, but he could find little music to use. In the 1800's there was little music printed for children, so Woodbridge gave Mason all the books he had brought from Germany. But this did not solve Mason's problem. The books were all in German, and he could not read them. Then Mason thought of Samuel Smith and went to his school campus to ask him to help.

In Samuel's room Mason set down the books and said, "There, Mr. Woodbridge has brought me these books. I don't know what is in them. I can't read German, but you can." Mason asked Samuel to translate some of the better songs into English. He said, "If you prefer, compose hymns or songs of your own of the same meter and accent with the German, so that I can use them."

Samuel thought this would be a good way to get away from his studies sometimes. As any student enjoys time away from lessons, he took up the challenge and decided to help Mason. From time to time he translated different songs for Mason to use in his choir work. Mason saved each one, and when he had a large number, he had them printed into a song book entitled, Juvenile Lyre. It was the first book of children's songs ever printed in America.

Samuel enjoyed the time he spent away from studies writing these Christian songs for the children's choir. This was recreation and easy work for him.

On that dismal day in February, 1832, he was about to write another of these songs when he came across the song, "God Save the King," in German. He did not realize at the time that the song was the National Anthem of Great Britain. But he liked the tune, so he began to write a patriotic song of his own to the tune. Since Samuel loved the Lord, he made the last verse a prayer to God for America. That day he wrote the hymn called "America" or "My Country 'Tis of Thee," as it is known by both names. The whole hymn is exactly the same today as it was when written on the bit of waste paper. There have been no changes made in the words.

Samuel Francis Smith did not realize that in one-half hour he had scribbled on waste paper a song that would make him famous! On July 4th of the same year at a children's celebration in Boston the song was first used. From there it soon was sung in the public schools, and at patriotic celebrations everywhere. Finally it was placed into the hymn books of many churches.

Although Samuel Smith was a professor, preacher and writer, wherever he went, he was most famous for one song—"My Country 'Tis of Thee." During the last year of his life, he was honored at a public celebration in Music Hall, Boston, for his patriotic song. Dr. Smith lived to be 87 years old, and was active and busy until his last evening on this earth.

Many Americans love the hymn Samuel wrote. It expresses their love for America and for God. Even though Americans love this song, very few know all of its words. Can you sing the song by memory? Read it over a few times and memorize the words. Then when you sing "America," sing the words from your heart with love for your country and your God.

MY COUNTRY, 'TIS OF THEE

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.

My native country, thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love;
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills;
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees
Sweet freedom's song:
Let mortal tongues awake;
Let all that breathe partake;
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

Our fathers' God, to Thee,
Author of liberty,
To Thee we sing:
Long may our land be bright

Liberty or Death

Dr. Albert Leonard Murray

Practically every American child, for generations, has heard some one quote the brave words of Patrick Henry, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death." But the wisdom of age is hardly enough to give us adequate appreciation of the sense of values, the sacrifice, the courage and the decisiveness implied by this brief startling statement. Death is not a light matter. Nor is the absolute necessity of liberty always and everywhere appreciated, even when tied with life and pursuit of happiness.

Before I was nine years old, in a country school in Canada, I heard a bachelor schoolteacher telling our class that a great man named Patrick Henry, speaking at a political meeting held in an Episcopal Church, uttered a sentence that millions have since heard and read and never should forget. The teacher paused until there was perfect silence, then spoke in a deep voice with great feeling: "As for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

Doubtless in many countries, as in France and England, millions of people have heard, considered, remembered and decided that these courageous words are basic to every life and every nation, for liberty is more than a blessing and a way of life; liberty is the royal crown on every head that reverences life and truth, justice, righteousness, goodwill and love and peace.

Startling it is to realize that even life, which we all instinctively want, is better given in sacrifice and is no blessing without liberty.

Yet in all human history there have been persons, and still are men and women who have called Patrick Henry a fanatic, a coward, an alarmist, a dreamer, a bigot and even a traitor of humanity and a blasphemer of God.

On the other hand, men in high positions and low, have thought and felt, as Patrick Henry did when he offered all he was and all he had to the cause of liberty.

Today, as never before, millions behind and outside so-called curtains cry for liberty and know that they face death if liberty does not come.

With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God, our King.
(Rev. Samuel Francis Smith, 1832.)
—My Pleasure.

Let us not forget this. Let us not forget that Jesus Christ came to set men free. Free from sin and death, free from ignorance and hate; free from tyranny and compulsion; free to think, work, own property, choose and decide; free to enjoy justice, and have good will and love toward all mankind. Free to be the people of God!—The Bible Friend. (Abridged.)

FOR JULY 12

God's Concern For His People

LESSON TEXT: Exodus 3:1-12

MEMORY VERSE: Psalm 68:19

I. INTRODUCTION

In Exodus 1:14—2:23 we have the story of Moses' first forty years. This passage records the story of his birth, his condemnation by the edict of Pharaoh that all male children were to be destroyed, his rescue by Pharaoh's daughter, his training at the Egyptian court, his rash attempt to rescue his people by violent means, his flight into the wilderness, and his discipline in the land of Midian.

The rash attempt to rescue his people was made when he went out from Pharaoh's court and beheld the oppression of his people. It seems that Moses had not realized the plight of the Israelites before, and the sight of an Egyptian slaying one of his brethren was more than he could bear. It could have been that Moses was attempting, single-handed, to do something about the situation without any thought as to its consequences. At any rate, he killed the Egyptian in revenge, and hid his body beneath the sand. Then, for fear of being caught, he fled to the land of Midian, and in the most distasteful act we can see God's providence—for Moses fled through part of the same region to which, forty years later, he was to lead God's people.

While in Midian Moses met and married Zipporah, the daughter of the priest of Midian. He found contentment in the household of the priest as we read of him in today's lesson. Moses' life may be divided into three forty-year periods: the first forty were spent in Pharaoh's court; the second in the land of Midian, and the third in leading the Israelites to the promised land.—Bible Student (F. W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The backside of the desert is sometimes the place to which God brings us to better reveal His will to us (Exodus 3:1).

2. God is with us in the fires of affliction, and He is there to burn out the dross in us (v. 2).

3. Many people are so absorbed in "tending sheep" that they fail to see and hear the God who wants to speak to them (v. 3).

4. God knows the name that was given to us by our parents and uses it in speaking to us (v. 4).

5. He who comes near to God first must become aware of God's holiness and his own unworthiness (v. 5).

6. There is a comfort in knowing the same God whom our parents and grandparents worshiped is personally interested in us (v. 6).

7. There is comfort in knowing that the God of our parents is fully acquainted with all our experience (v. 7).

8. The God who calls us to come is also the God who wants to send us out to bring others (v. 10).

9. God's orders are: "Come," "Go," "Bring forth" (vv. 10, 11).

10. It is sad when the children of God-fearing parents do not know the name of God (v. 12).—Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The story of Israel in Egypt and their deliverance is largely the story of the B's. Let's take a closer look at some of the B's involved.

The first B is bondage. The Israelites were in bondage in Egypt. Our lesson last Sunday dealt with how they came to be in Egypt. Can you recall the story? At first they were the guests of the Egyptians because of Joseph; but after the death of Joseph and the king that knew Joseph, the new king began to fear the growing power of this people and made them slaves. The bondage of the Israelites in Egypt is a good example or type of the sinner's bondage in sin.

The second B is the baby. The baby, Moses, was born and miraculously spared death in order that he might lead Israel out of her bondage. In history God has often used a baby as the first natural step in bringing about some mighty act of deliverance or salvation.

There were Isaac, Samuel, John the Baptist, and Baby Jesus. As Moses was to deliver the Israelites from the bondage of Egypt, so Baby Jesus is the Deliverer of all those who will believe upon His name.

The third B is the burning bush. This is, of course, the place where Moses received the call from God to lead these people out of Egypt. This story of the burning bush is one of the most important in the history of the human race.

The fourth B in this story is believer. Moses was their God-appointed leader and their hope, but he did not appeal to many. Sadly many people have turned from God because of their like or dislike for the servant of God. The thing to remember is this: you are not serving the preacher and your opinion of him is not so important as your opinion of Christ.

There are many unusual things in this story, but perhaps the greatest thing is how God's concern for His people when they are in bondage stands out. Your trouble cannot be so black that He is not concerned about you. He is concerned about your every care.—Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

2. In the early years of his ministry Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman experienced financial difficulties. Before the throne of grace he pleaded the promise, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19). One day a millionaire entered his study. He said, "Dr. Chapman, I believe you are financially embarrassed. I will not tell you how the knowledge came to me, but I ask you if it is true?" Dr. Chapman answered, "Yes." The man of wealth continued, "I will not inquire the amount of your obligations. I only ask if it would be a comfort to you to know that my fortune is behind you?" Then he gave to the minister a checkbook, saying, "The checks are signed. You may fill in the amount you need!"

John B. Gough was a humanly hopeless alcoholic before his conversion. One Sunday morning he lay in the gutter of a street where churchgoers passed. What a pathetic sight he was with face covered with flies! Some kindhearted person placed a clean handkerchief over his face. When Gough sobered up he removed the handkerchief from his face and exclaimed, "Somebody cared enough for me to stop and place this handkerchief over my face!" His slumbering soul began to awaken. He came to God for mercy and forgiveness. Later he became a mighty power for God. He could give only the remaining part of his life to God. This was the great regret of his life. He often said, "The scars remain! I have been snatched as a brand from the burning, but the scars remain—scars never to be eradicated, never to be removed this side of glory!"—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

5. It takes training and experience to make a good farmer. A man can throw a handful of seeds on the ground, and some of them may grow. But a good farmer plants them carefully. As the plants grow, he may very carefully pull the weeds one time during the summer. But other weeds will grow. He must keep at the job until the crop is grown and harvested, and then he must prepare the soil for the next crop. Because farmers have learned to study, experiment, and work, they have been very successful in growing fine crops.

God was concerned for His people Israel. He heard their groaning and remembered His covenant with them. But their deliverance was not something to be accomplished in a day or a year. A leader must be trained carefully. He must have the qualities that will stand the test of coming trials.

Like the farmer who carefully prepares the ground and sows the seeds, God prepared Moses to be that leader. Since such a leader must know the Egyptians and especially the Pharaoh, God arranged to have Moses reared as the son of Pharaoh's daughter. Moses, putting too much trust in his own ability, attempted to free the Israelites prematurely. God pulled these weeds from Moses' life by allowing him to serve as a shepherd for forty years. When God was finally ready to use him, Moses began to make excuses. But God, by demonstrations of His power, convinced Moses to accept His call. Moses' faithfulness for the next forty years vindicated God's patience in preparing him.—Standard Commentary.

slingshot and I shot at your duck and killed it."

The grandmother wiped a tear from her cheek, and she reached out and said, "Come here, son." She put her arms about him. "I was sitting upstairs by an open window, and I saw you kill that duck." And then she added, "I wondered how long you were going to take this bondage to Mary. I have watched her give you orders for two weeks, and I wondered how long it would be before you came to me."

Our heavenly Father has seen everything that you have done. He is just waiting now for you to come and confess it, to acknowledge it and say, "Lord, here I am. I want a fresh start. I want a new day in my life. I want a new beginning. I want a new birth. The greatest work of the Holy Ghost is to call a halt and quiet His children, and teach them to be dead to their own activity and work and plans.—A. B. Simpson.

The Fourth Day of July

Strong men had sacrificed their lives
In battles far and near;
Had left their children and their wives
And homes so sweet and dear;
That freedom's flag might float and wave
Across our native hills,
And prove the goodness of the brave
Who suffered for our ills.

Then on the fourth day of July
The bells of freedom rang,
When soldiers laid their armor by
And hymns of freedom sang;
And hallelujah shouts went up
To God upon His throne,
Who gives in joy a brimming cup
To those who pray and moan.

Oh, don't forget the sacrifice
Of blood our fathers shed,
And tears that flowed from weeping eyes
And prayers our mothers said;
For those were days of awful strife
When freedom was at stake;
When son and father gave his life
For home and country's sake!

Yes, on the fourth day of July
Sweet freedom was proclaimed
From sea to sea and mountain high
For hearts that were defamed;
Proclaimed for well and strong and weak
Who dwell upon our sod;
Proclaimed for all who wish to seek Sweet fellowship with God.

Are We Reverent In God's House?

by Mabel S. McMullen

The new, young couple had attended our services a few times. We called on them and invited them to come again. They didn't. On our second call the young man said, "May I be frank? We liked the gospel you preached, but we were disturbed over the irreverence of your people. Our early training has taught us that the church is the house of God—a sacred place."

Must we visit loudly in the foyer, and converse freely in the pew? Is the sanctuary a place to exuberantly greet one's friends? Must our children run in and out, sit with their friends, and disturb with play? Are adults worshiping if they gaze about during prayer, and read the Sunday-school paper while the minister speaks?

Next Sunday let us enter the sanctuary in silence and prayer, remembering, "The Lord is in his holy temple. Let all the earth keep silence before him."

Maybe then our young couple will return!—The Free Methodist.

YOUR LIFE IN GOD'S HAND

Mary Ann Horst

It didn't seem quite right
That God should take me away from bustling activity,
And yet, when after some rebellion,
I at length grew quiet before God,
I suddenly felt His touch divine Giving me new strength.

"Be still, my child," I heard Him whisper in my ear,
'Tis only for a time,
Tomorrow, out into the raging battle you may go.
Rest now, Tomorrow you may labour hard and long Until at last you will count it a joy to rest.

But now, I ask of thee, 'Be still,'
And better be prepared for future toil."

And so, my God,
In simple faith I take Thy hand,
Thou, only Thou,
Dost know the path ahead,
I do not see around the bend,
And yet, what matter?
My hand is in Thy hand, O God.

A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY

Original Free Will Baptists will gather on July 7, 8, at Chipola Junior College, Marianna, Florida, for the purpose of extending the work of the kingdom of God through mutual Christian endeavors, under the banner of Free Will Baptists.

This fellowship is unique in many ways. It exists because there are those who are willing to retain and protect the faith that was once delivered unto the saints. Its purpose is not to wield centralized power over its member bodies; its purpose is fellowship and cooperation in the promotion of the cause of Christ; its doctrine is that propounded originally by Paul Palmer, the forerunner of true Free Will Baptist doctrine. Representation for a church in this Fellowship is one delegate for each fifty members or fraction thereof; all ordained and licensed ministers; larger bodies, one delegate for each five hundred members or fraction thereof.

Any Free Will Baptist body, or organization, may represent. The 1964 session will begin on Tuesday evening, July 7. You are urged to attend.

Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, announces its first annual Camp Meeting, July 26—August 6, 1954. The Rev. Wayne Smith will direct the activities throughout the session. Dr. L. C. Johnson, president of the Free Will Baptist Bible College, will speak each morning at 10 o'clock, and the Rev. W. S. Mooneyham, executive secretary of the National Association, will speak each evening at 7:30

Mrs. L. E. Ballard, manager-treasurer of Cragmont Assembly, makes the following remarks relative to activities there: "During the month of June, Cragmont Assembly has been happy to have around 200 guests for conferences and overnight guests. We feel this is a great beginning for a wonderful summer. Have you visited the assembly? If not, begin now to make your plans to do so. . . ."

'I'm Not the House!'

In greeting John Quincy Adams a friend asked, "How are you, John Quincy?" He replied, "John Quincy is all right, but the house in which he lives is becoming quite dilapidated. The roof is caving in. The sides are sagging. The underpinnings are giving away, but I'm not the house! The real John Quincy will soon be moving out of the decrepit earthly house into his abiding, eternal house!"

With unshakable trust in God, His children can confidently say, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" (2 Corinthians 5:1).—Gospel Herald.

FELLOWSHIP SIDELIGHTS

Old-fashioned Free Will Baptist fellowship is not dead. In fact, it is very much alive. This fact was most evident at the meeting of the Fellowship of Original Free Will Baptists at Chipola Junior College, Marianna, Florida, on July 7, 8. It was a time of unity and common understanding, for those in attendance were seeking a mutual goal and purpose. Free Will Baptists from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida were present in a spirit of humbleness and dedication. The delegates and ministers who met in this Fellowship are original Free Will Baptists in every respect. Their desire is to have an organization that is free from any dictatorial power and centralization of power. We share the desire of hundreds and thousands of others who want a fellowship that is of God, grounded in the fellowship that only comes from Christ. This, we believe, we now have.

* * *

A characteristic of Free Will Baptist fellowship is the "get-togethers" that are always held during conferences and conventions. These gatherings are unofficial meetings of certain interested persons who thoroughly enjoy just getting together and talking. These sessions are given different names. There was such a "get-together" during the meeting of the fellowship. In this case, it was group of ministers. Problems involving the work of the Fellowship and Free Will Baptists in general were discussed. Out of such discussions, good is often accomplished and as long as brethren can sit down and in brotherly love discuss their problems, as well as the benefits, there will be peace and harmony. When brethren cannot sit together, there will be disunity and finally division. Let us labor to the end that brotherly love will always be a motivating force in our lives and action.

Two very fine messages were delivered during the meeting by the Revs. J. O. Fort and Ralph Lightsey. Mr. Fort's message was one of the most inspiring and appropriate we have ever been privileged to hear. His text was Acts 4:13, 14. It was concerned with the event of Peter and John when they were brought before the Sanhedrin court as a result of their healing the cripple man. Emphasis was given to their acknowledgment that Peter and John had been with Jesus. "Christians today must show to the world that they have been with Jesus," was the conclusion to the message. Mr. Fort is a former editor of the Free Will Baptist Press, having served as such for six years. He is now living in Newton, Georgia.

Mr. Lightsey's message was based on 1 Kings 18:38, "When the fire of the LORD fell, . . ." Emphasis was placed on repairing the broken altar in our lives as Free Will Baptists that the power of God might be upon us. Mr. Lightsey is also a former editor of the Press and is presently living in Athens, Georgia.

All in all, much could be said about the 1964 Fellowship of Original Free Will Baptists. There is much to be done and in order to do it there must be sincere dedication on the part of all concerned. The cause shall grow and prosper because we believe the will of God is being sought.

Those who made the Fellowship possible this year are to be commended. Chipola Junior College was good to us. For this we are grateful. The Rev. Chester Pelt, who served as host, and others who assisted him, did a wonderful job. We hope we shall be able to someday return to Florida. Our thanks and appreciation are extended to all those who made this session of the Fellowship possible.

Fundamental Points of Free Will Baptist Doctrine

and

Why Our Ministers Must Uphold Them

by the Editor

MANY hundreds of years ago, the aged Apostle Paul wrote this warning to His son in the ministry, who of course was Timothy: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt save thyself, and them that hear thee" (1 Timothy 4:16).

It is our conviction that we would do well to take heed, or, as the Amplified New Testament puts it, "Look well to ourselves and to our teachings, and persevere in them." In doing this, we must hold to them. Our doing this will result in the salvation of others.

We realize that much has been said, and much will be said relative to our doctrine during this ministers' conference. Some areas have been well covered; others are yet to be. We also realize that there are many here who are far more advanced in our doctrine than your speaker. However, it is doubtful that there are any others here that have any deeper convictions relative to our doctrine than your speaker. We also realize that our doctrine is not a matter of terms; such as, fundamentalism, orthodoxy, or evangelical. What really matters is the condition of our hearts relative to our doctrine. Do we know what we believe?

The teachings of our church are not to be regarded as one would regard the rules of a club; for our teachings are founded upon the truth of God's Word—or so we profess to believe. Some people live with the idea that rules are made to be broken, or changed. There are also those in the world who would break or change the teachings of our church. We deplore such a desire, for we believe it is a fatal and serious mistake.

What are the main fundamental points of Original Free Will Baptist doctrine? Briefly, they are these:

1. We believe that there is one God, whose eternal existence is in three persons: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; that all three are equal, but distinct persons. They are the divine trinity.

2. We believe that Jesus Christ is the only begotten Son of God; that He was born of the Virgin Mary; that He died for man's redemption; that He ascended to heaven and is today at the right hand of the Father as our intercessor.

3. We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God.

4. We believe that the human will is free and self-controlled; that it is possible for a person who has been saved by divine grace to make shipwreck of his faith and become lost. However, the person (believer) who through grace perseveres unto the end of life has the promise of eternal salvation.

5. We believe that sanctification is initial at regeneration and continues progressively through the Christian experience, becoming final and complete in heaven.

6. We believe in three gospel ordinances: Baptism by immersion, the Lord's Supper, and washing of the saints' feet.

7. We believe that tithing is God's financial plan for supporting the work of the Church here on earth.

8. We believe in the return of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ; in the resurrection of the dead; and in the final judgment.

We realize that there are thousands of others in other denominational bodies who share these beliefs. None of them are new; however, there are areas in some of them that are peculiar to Free Will Baptists, but time will not permit us to enter into a discussion of them. In fact, for the purpose of this message, we shall center our discussion on "Why we as Free Will Baptist ministers should uphold our doctrine."

Evidence points to the fact that something has been missing in our not too glorious past. Perhaps it has been the lack of zeal and enthusiasm for the faith of the saints and the teachings of our church.

We all realize that before a product can be sold, it must be tested. After it is tested, it goes on the market. If it is to be sold, sales representatives must be found who believe in the product—they must have confidence in what they are asked to sell. The application can be made to our doctrines and why we as ministers must uphold them. May we note:

1. As Free Will Baptist ministers, we must uphold our doctrines because we believe they have been properly tested. They have, so to speak, been tested in a furnace of fire. Sure, they have been attacked, criticized, ridiculed, and even despised. But they have stood the test and they cry out in the words of Paul to the Philippian jailer, "Do thyself no harm, we are all here!"

Any denomination that can trace its doctrine to the famous "Confession of 1660" has been properly tested and tried. The Anabaptists of that day believed, for the most part, as we believe today. When they subscribed to that famous confession, they did so with the purpose of "informing all men (in these days of scandal and reproach) of our innocent belief and practice, for which we are not only resolved to suffer persecution, to the loss of our goods, but also life itself, rather than to decline the same." We must possess an equal conviction.

MISSIONS

Matthew
18:19, 20

Free Will Baptist Association Organized in Mexico

On June 11 all of the Mexican preachers that are working with the Rev. J. E. Timmons met in the mission church at Saltillo Coach, Mexico, for the purpose of organizing a Free Will Baptist Association in the area where we have missions and churches.

This was indeed a high hour. "We met the night before and enjoyed an evangelistic service. We met in the spirit of prayer and devotion, being led by Brother Herman Rodriguez of Jimenez, pastor of the church in Jimenez, this was followed by words of welcome by Pastor Juan Lopez of the Saltillo Mission," says director Timmons.

After a number of pastors led in a chain of prayer, a discussion followed. The group voted to organize an association, choosing the name of Northern Mexico Free Will Baptist Association. The constitution being adopted, Pastor Antonio Lopez of the mission in Monterrey was elected moderator with Pastor Herman Rodriguez of Jimenez as vice-moderator; a ministerial student, Brother Camerino Ortega, as clerk, and Mrs. Audulia Revera de Rodriguez as president of the woman's auxiliary work in our association.

Two committees were named: the executive and ordination, and the program committee; also, J. E. Timmons was elected to serve as treasurer and the executive instructor. The ordination committee examined Brothers Herman Rodriguez and Elias Rodriguez for early ordination since they were not officially ordained by an official Free Will Baptist body.

The Rev. Timmons says, "We request your prayers as we go forward with the message of the gospel, trying to win the lost and build up our work into self-supporting churches."

Miss Barbara Becton Assigned to Arizona- Mexico Mission Station

The North Carolina State Convention's Mission Board has assigned Miss Barbara Becton to work in the Arizona-Mexico Mission for the summer. The student missionary left the Kinston, North Carolina, Airport by plane at 7 a.m. on June 27. After a delay she finally joined the Rev. and Mrs. John B. Elliston, mission directors, at the Tucson, Arizona, Airport.

Miss Becton, a recent graduate of Mount Olive College, will be engaged in woman's auxiliary work and evangelistic mission work among the youth. She is expected to return and enter school in the fall for further training.

The missionary is a member of the Elm Grove Church, Ayden, North Carolina, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Becton of Route 6, Kinston, North Carolina. Barbara will need your prayers and financial support during the summer. Nogales, Arizona, has one of the hottest climates during the summer months of any city in America. It is a border city and is connected to Nogales, Senora, Mexico, a city much larger than the Arizona city.

Secretary-Treasurer A. B. Bryan and Miss Becton's parents, two sisters, and two brothers stood in silence as the plane cleared the runway with the young missionary on her first brave venture upon a mission she has been planning for two college years and part of her high school days.

What Does an Area Mission Director Do In a Month?

The Rev. J. E. Timmons, missionary director on the border of Mexico and Texas, reports his work for the month of June, 1964, as follows:

First week: conducted three services in Piedras Negras Mission; made visits and contacts in the area; have constantly been on the lookout for a place to move in the city of Eagle Pass.

Second week: conducted services in the Piedras Negras Mission; spent three days in Saltillo, the capital city of the state of Coahuilia with the Rev. Juan Lopez; preached several times while there; organized the work into a Free Will Baptist Association; did some personal work; and preached over TV in Laredo.

Third week: conducted regular services at Piedras Negras Mission; spent several days in Jimenez area with the Revs. German and Elias Rodriguez and preached several times; the results was four persons making full surrender to Christ.

Fourth week: conducted regular services in Piedras Negras and made personal contacts in Eagle Pass, giving out tracts and witnessing for Christ.

Total sermons during the month was 16.

A NEW EXPERIENCE

by BARBARA BECTON

As some of my experiences during the day showed, Saturday, June 27, was the first day I had ever ridden on a plane. I left from Kinston, North Carolina, at 7 a.m. on a small Piedmont Airlines plane. The green fields looked very neat as we passed over them. After a short few minutes, we stopped in Goldsboro where I had to change planes. Unfortunately passage on my next plane had been overbooked, so about thirty minutes were consumed in trying to get someone to change his plans so that the plane could leave with the correct number of passengers.

About thirty minutes after we took off, I became airsick. The stewardess and a licensed pilot sitting nearby were very kind and helped me through this situation. Throughout the remainder of my trip, I became sick almost every time the plane took off or landed, especially on small planes. But that will not keep me from riding in a plane again.

After a few stops, we landed in Atlanta, Georgia. Although I went to the terminal immediately, the plane I was supposed to be on had already taken off, probably about ten minutes before I arrived. This misfortune, I believe, was caused by the thirty minutes delay of my earlier plane. I was given a "stand-by" on another plane which left almost immediately. After several stops, we landed in Dallas, Texas, only about an hour and a half after I was supposed to have left Dallas on an American Airlines plane for Tucson. So I had to wait for the 8:40 plane. I tried to call Mr. Elliston to let him know I would be late getting to Tucson, but could not reach him. Finally I left Dallas. The lights of this large city were beautiful at night and reminded one of Christmastime. Sitting beside me was a Bostonian lady with whom I enjoyed talking. In front of us was a German boy who knew no English. This reminded me of the Spanish I will need to learn. After a stop in El Paso, I finally reached Tucson at 11 p.m.—about six hours late.

After meeting the Ellistons and talking with them, I was told that they had already called Mr. Bryan to make sure I had left Kinston that morning. After about a sixty-five mile drive, we arrived in Nogales and my home for the summer. Even with its misfortunes, this trip has only increased my experiences and has not dampened my spirits. It showed me again that even though things may not always go as planned, God will still take care of us if we trust in Him.

Godly Ambition

It is supposed by some that, to be Christlike, all ambition has to be destroyed. Nothing could be further from the truth. Ambition is a plant of heavenly origin, and will never be destroyed.

Like reason and conscience, it has been perverted by sin, and by grace is restored to its normal place. In its normal operation it is an eternal necessity to our highest happiness and usefulness.

In its perverted form, its pathway is marked with disappointment, the wreck of hope and enthronement of despair. Before its restoration, its motivation is selfish, sordid, earthly, of satanic origin. After restoration, it is unselfish, spiritual, God-given and heavenly. In the one case, it seeks the promotion of self; in the other, the glory of God.

Real humility puts into holy ambition the highest motives and opens to it the widest fields in time and in eternity.—M. E. Haney, in Herald of Holiness.

THAT IS ALL

I can give you a prescription that will bring revival to any church on earth:

First, let a few Christians themselves get thoroughly right with God.

Second, let them bind themselves together to pray for a revival until God opens the heavens and comes down.

Third, let them put themselves at the disposal of God for Him to use as He sees fit in winning others to Christ.

That is all!—R. A. Torrey, in The United Evangelical.

Ministers' Conference Well Attended

The annual Ministers' Conference, held at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, June 22-26, was attended by more than sixty Free Will Baptist ministers. Those who were privileged to attend feel that it was one of the most profitable conferences ever held in every respect.

The Rev. David W. Hansley, pastor of Kenly Free Will Baptist Church, Kenly, North Carolina, was reelected as president, and the Rev. Frank R. Harrison, pastor of Little Rock Free Will Baptist Church, Lucama, North Carolina, was elected as secretary.

The picture above shows some of the ministers as they await the evening meal on Wednesday evening.

Black Jack Grove Holds DVBS

Black Jack Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Goldsboro, North Carolina, held its daily vacation Bible school June 8-12. The school met in the evening from 7 till 9 p.m. There was an enrollment of 106 with an average attendance of 95. Four decisions for Christ were made on Friday night. Cooperation between teachers and children was wonderful.

After classes Friday night the Young Adult Sunday School Class sponsored a weiner roast for those who attended.

Commencement exercises were held Saturday night; each class gave a program from what they had learned during the week.

Geiger Mission Experiences Enjoyable Bible School

The Geiger Original Free Will Baptist Mission, Jacksonville, North Carolina, recently experienced a most enjoyable Bible school. Instructors for the classes were the Rev. B. M. Taylor, adult; Mrs. Ben Avery, junior; and Mrs. B. M. Taylor, beginner. An average of sixteen attended, and commencement was held at the Sunday school hour on June 21.

The mission plans to conduct another week of Bible school August 3-9. All will be welcome to attend.

FREE WILL BAPTIST FELLOWSHIP MARKED BY GREAT ADVANCEMENT

More than one hundred delegates and ministers met at Chipola Junior College, Marianna, Florida, July 7, 8, for the second annual session of the Fellowship of Original Free Will Baptists.

During the session further steps were taken to unify the work and cause of Free Will Baptists in the fields of missions, education, and other endeavors as deemed necessary. At this session, as in the 1963 session which was held at Colquitt, Georgia, emphasis was given to the fact that the organization is chiefly for fellowship purposes. Its purpose is to unify the fellowship of Original Free Will Baptists.

A constitution with bylaws was adopted to govern the organization. Section One of the constitution called for the changing of the name of the organization to the International Convention of Original Free Will Baptists. The boards of the convention are administrative board, board of missions, educational board, board of superannuation, board of Christian literature, and auxiliary board. Provision is also made for the setting up of any other board that the convention may decide upon. The constitution called for five members on each board; therefore, C. C. Burress of Georgia and L. P. Pinson of Florida were added to the missions board; C. H. Overman of North Carolina and R. C. Baggette of South Carolina were added to the board of Christian literature; Dr. W. B. Raper of Mount Olive Junior College, North Carolina, and Chester Pelt of Florida were added to the board of Christian education.

The constitution and bylaws, however, was adopted on a provisional basis. They are to be studied by the administration committee during the next year and a report given at the next session.

A resolution was adopted which called for the setting up of a study committee to make plans for a woman's auxiliary meeting in 1965. The resolution came from the women who were present.

Nearly $600 was received in offerings and pledges for the promotion of the organization. A goal has been set to raise at least $1,000 during the next year. Churches, conferences, etc., are urged to make a contribution. They may be mailed to Paul Irvin, Box 164, Newton, Georgia. The 1965 session will be held at East Rockingham Free Will Baptist Church, East Rockingham, North Carolina. The Rev. Walter Carter will be the host pastor. The Rev. Louis A. Holliday, Manning, South Carolina, is president of the convention.

SPENDING TIME UNWISELY

WALTER E. ISENHOUR

WHEN I was a boy I well remember a little place in our community where there was a store or two, a grist mill, a post office, and a few dwelling houses. Through the winter months, or on rainy days in the spring and summer, men would gather up and play checkers, or cards, tell jokes, chew tobacco, talk about their farming, trade pocket knives, buy a little merchandise, or just sit around on counters, chairs, and benches and kill time. Somebody named the little village "Loafer's Glory." Only God knows the valuable hours, weeks, months, and years that were spent on the part of those men that were simply wasted.

The same was true, no doubt, with people in thousands of other communities, towns, and cities. It is largely the same today; but radio, television, the theater, amusements of various kinds, and gatherings among worldly people for sports and pastime, have displaced largely the old scenes at "Loafer's Glory" over the nation and the world. Not any better by the various changes that have come to pass, but perhaps much worse. It is astonishing how millions of people spend much of their precious time in idleness, or reading a low class of literature, or drinking beer, smoking cigarettes, drinking liquor, or seeking pleasure that is worthless, or just riding and gadding about.

Multitudes of people will never amount to anything good, great, and worthwhile in life, nor reach heaven, because they spend so very much of their time in idleness, or at something that is a curse instead of a blessing. Many people do not know what an honest day's work is, nor what it is to use their time profitably, wisely, and in a way that pleases God. Perhaps millions of our youth today put a very low value upon their precious time. Multitudes of older people, likewise, are idlers. Some of them think they have worked their time out, and in the years of retirement just settle down to do nothing constructive for themselves and their fellowmen.

Time is precious. It is not simply to be idled away. There is so much good that could be accomplished by wisely using the time that is wasted. Part of this time could be well spent in reading and studying the precious old Bible, praying, visiting the sick and suffering, reading good books and a clean, wholesome class of papers and literature, or singing good songs, or speaking to people about their soul's salvation, or helping the needy people morally and spiritually, or giving to the poor who may be almost suffering for food and clothing.

Many people could use some of their spare time writing good letters to their loved ones and friends, or to those who are "down and out," or writing something for the papers that might be very beneficial, or testifying to the saving, sanctifying grace of God and praising Him for their many blessings. Time spent in something good, constructive, ennobling, uplifting, and worthwhile is just as full of pleasure and interest as time spent in foolishness, nonsense, evil, sin, and wickedness, and far more so. God has plenty for all of us to do that is blessed, honorable, and glorious, rather than let the devil have our time that only brings defeat for time and eternity.

I think of so many who were time-killers, or time-idlers, who accomplished nothing in life really worthwhile. Some of them have long since passed on to another world to try the realities of eternity. Many went practically "unwept, unhonored, and unsung." Multitudes are living like that today and going in the same way and manner.

Think of this Scripture, "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time" (Colossians 4:5). Adam Clarke says of this passage: "Perhaps the apostle (Paul) means in general, embrace every opportunity to glorify God, save your own soul, and do good to men." That is wonderful living and time wisely spent. Praise God forever.

Auxiliary Presents Life Membership Awards

At the close of the worship service at Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Ayden, North Carolina, Sunday, July 5, the Woman's Auxiliary presented Life Membership Awards to three of its members. This makes a total of five membership awards presented by the auxiliary this year. Those receiving the awards were Mrs. Lena McLawhorn, Mrs. Mittie Humbles, and Mrs. Carrie Stocks, Mrs. McLawhorn and Mrs. Humbles being charter members of the auxiliary.

Mrs. J. B. McLawhorn presented the awards to these three honored members. A brief history of the auxiliary was given by Mrs. William Earl Stocks. She stated that the auxiliary was organized in January, 1922, with the late Mrs. Katie Sawyer Jackson as the first president.

The service came to a close with Mrs. J. B. McLawhorn reading a poem written by Mrs. Clay Stroud for the occasion of presenting life membership awards.

Vanceboro, N. C.—The YFA of Juniper Chapel Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting at Cow Pen Landing on June 24. For refreshments the group had a weiner roast. After the weiner roast the group sang several choruses. Frank Anderson and Ronald Taylor presented a playlet, "A Wise Look."

The meeting was adjourned with Mrs. Otis Gattin pronouncing the benediction.

Kenly, N. C.—The Mt. Zion Woman's Auxiliary held its June meeting in the home of Mrs. Nadine Crocker. Mrs. Crocker presided over the meeting. The meeting was begun with the group's singing "I Want to Be a Worker." Mrs. Lillian Crocker led in prayer. The Scripture text was read from Matthew 12:25-30.

Those taking part on the program were Mrs. Laudy Brewer, Mrs. Myrtle Lewis, Mrs. Geraldine Cockrell, Mrs. Lois Boykin, Mrs. Eloise Sutton, Mrs. Anna Johnson, Mrs. Alonia Narron, and Mrs. Lizza Godwin.

After the program the group discussed ways to bring the church members and nonmembers closer together. After this discussion sentence prayers were begun by Mrs. Ruby Johnson and closed by Mrs. Nadine Crocker.

For the benediction the group prayed the Lord's Prayer.

Fountain, N. C.—On Thursday night, June 25, the YFA of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met for its regular monthly meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Langley.

The meeting was opened by the group's singing "Are You Washed in the Blood?" The president, Angie Owens, prayed the opening prayer and used for the devotional, Romans 10:9-14. After the program the group sang choruses.

The president presided over the business session. Evelyn Morgan, secretary, called the roll and read the minutes of the May meeting. Judy Fay Ellis, treasurer, gave her report and received the dues.

After the meeting adjourned, the hostesses, Mrs. Paul Langley and daughter, Bobby Jean, served refreshments to the twenty members present.

Fountain, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Friday night, June 26, in the church with eleven members present. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, president, turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Mrs. Dick Smith. Mrs. Smith had the group to join together in singing "Work for the Night Is Coming," followed with prayer by Mrs. Smith. She also used for the Scripture lesson Matthew 12:25-30; followed by the program, "The House That Unity Built," written by the Rev. W. S. Burns.

The program was closed with soft music by Mrs. David Hobgood, while the group prayed sentence prayers.

During the business session Mrs. Gardner presided and Mrs. Lester Gay, secretary-treasurer, called the roll and received the dues. She also read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved. This was followed by the treasurer's report. A motion was made and seconded to send $10 to Cragmont and $10 to Mount Olive College.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. David Hobgood prayed the closing prayer.

Bear Grass, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church held its June meeting July 2 in the home of Mrs. Selma Cowan with nine members and one visitor present. The group sang "Work for the Night Is Coming," followed with the Scripture lesson taken from Matthew 12:25-30, read by Mrs. Mertie Coltrain. Mrs. Ophelia Taylor led the group in prayer. Mrs. Annie Cratt was in charge of the program, "The House That Unity Built."

During the business session the treasurer, Mrs. Selma Cowan, reported a balance of $32.76 in the treasury. A card was signed by all the members present to send to Mrs. Tommie Lawrence Roberson who is a patient in the hospital. Mrs. Mertie Coltrain dismissed the group with prayer.

The hostess served delicious refreshments to the members present.

Nashville, N. C.—The AFC of Mount Zion Free Will Baptist Church held a mission study at the church Saturday, June 20. Each member had been given an assignment to be given during the study concerning missions.

Carol Ann Manning gave a talk on "Missions Through the Bible." She explained how missions had started in Genesis and continued throughout the Bible. She had studied and prepared her talk well. Pat Jones told the story of John Huss' life and how he died because he dared to teach and preach God's Word the way he thought was right. Debbie Rochley had prepared a pictorial sand box showing some of the many things that a missionary family has to do in their work. Cameron Bass had

Christian Education

College Yearbook Dedicated to O'Donnell

The students of Mount Olive College dedicated the 1964 edition of their yearbook, Olive Leaves, to Dean Roy C. O'Donnell. Shown making the presentation to Dean O'Donnell, left, at a dedication ceremony are coeditors Jasper Cowan of Williamston and Ethel Smith of Kinston.

The dedication read, "Because he is a warm and natural person who is deeply concerned with the welfare of the student and the progress of the school

. . . because he is the very symbol of dignity and education with his outstanding abilities, his devotion to the Christian principles, and his subtle sense of humor . . . because he shows fairness and impartiality when dealing with the disciplinary problems that arise and demonstrates his wisdom and foresight in solving them . . . because we admire, respect, and love him, we dedicate the 1964 Olive Leaves to Dr. Roy C. O'Donnell."

College Dedicates Original Fifty Acres On New Campus

Mount Olive College formally dedicated the original fifty acres of its new campus, and ground was broken for the first new building on Sunday, June 28. President W. Burkette Raper announced that the dedication of an additional forty acres is planned for 1968, when the entire campus acreage is expected to be free of debt.

In the dedicatory statement President Raper said: "Today we declare the original fifty acres of our new campus free of all indebtedness. In gratitude and faith, we submit this property to be dedicated to the glory of God and to the service of humanity. Let this soil become sacred, and let all who ever walk upon it be aware that they stand on holy ground."

To climax the dedication, L. B. Wilson, member of the college board of directors, and Charles Harrell, college business manager, burned the cancelled note. The college bought the land in 1956 from Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Martin for $38,000 through a loan from the Church Finance Association. Payment was to be completed by 1971; but in order to begin building on the new campus site, the college arranged to pay off the debt seven years ahead of schedule.

The prayer of dedication was given by the Rev. James A. Evans, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Goldsboro. The first spadeful of dirt for the C. C. Henderson Building was turned by the Rev. David W. Hansley, pastor of the Kenly Free Will Baptist Church and former chairman of the college board of directors, and W. H. Franklin, mayor of Mount Olive.

The first new building, a memorial to the late Dr. C. C. Henderson who has been the foremost benefactor of the college, will be erected at an estimated cost of $339,000. President Raper announced that a loan in the amount of $140,000 has been secured from the Bank of Mount Olive to complete the amount needed to begin construction. The new structure will be a modern two-story academic building containing 23,400 square feet of floor space. Designed to accommodate 350 students, it will include laboratories for biology, chemistry, physics, and foreign languages. It is scheduled to be ready for occupancy in September, 1965.

Dean Roy O'Donnell gave the invocation and Ralph A. Morris, chairman of the board of directors, gave the welcome address. Greetings were extended from the town of Mount Olive by May-

OBITUARIES

MR. CORBITT MORRIS

Our heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom has called to his eternal reward the soul of our friend and brother in Christ, Mr. Corbitt Morris, a member of Juniper Chapel Free Will Baptist Church near Vanceboro, North Carolina, and a trustee of the church for several years. He was 54 years old at the time of his death. He was a farmer and also a barber in Vanceboro for a long time. He will be greatly missed by all.

A precious one from us is gone;
A voice we loved is still.
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

MRS. RANSOME LUCAS

On May 13, 1964, God saw fit to take from our midst one of our dear members, Mrs. Ransome Lucas. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, the Rev. Frank Harrison. Burial was in the Lucas Cemetery.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters: Mrs. Juanita Morris of Raleigh and Mrs. Dorothy Clodfelter of Norfolk, Virginia; four sons: Lafayette of Norfolk, James Edward of Bryan, Texas, Robert Ray of Washington, D. C., and the Rev. Ransome Taylor Lucas of Gastonia; several grandchildren, and innumerable friends.

Since she was a loyal member of Little Rock Free Will Baptist Church of Lucama, North Carolina, and a member of the woman's auxiliary, it is with sad hearts that we, the members of the auxiliary, submit the following resolution of respect for our dear deceased member and friend, "Miss Mag," as she was called by many of her friends.

Whereas "Miss Mag" was an humble Christian, a kind friend, and a devoted wife and mother; and whereas we are grateful for the privilege and joy of laboring in God's kingdom with her; and whereas we shall miss her, but we know that God knows best, and we look to Him who is the author and finisher of our faith for comfort; therefore be it resolved:

First, that we pray for God's richest blessings on the family; that while we, too, shall miss her smile, her kindness,

You get up in the morning and find everything wrong in the kitchen and in the dining-room, and you say, "Oh, it is that cook; it is that wretched stove." Oh, no; it is the Lord trying you and proving you. You come down to business, you find things wrong in your store, and you say, "Oh, it is that careless porter." No, it is the Lord trying and proving you. You open your mail, you expect a check according to promise from some person. It is not there. You say, "Oh, it is this dishonest and unprincipled man." No, it is the Lord trying and proving your faith. You meet with a friend, the very one that you look to for help and comfort, and something happens to try you more keenly, and everything in your life seems to become a source of annoyance. You say, "Oh, it is the inconsiderateness of others." No, it is the Lord showing you something in you that is wrong, and that He wants to have burned away.

And so He comes to you every moment, as Job says, from morning to night; if you would understand life as He does, you would see nothing but God; and as you meet Him in everything, you would see nothing but God's ever presence, and every unfriendly blow be warded off, and against every fiery dart you would have a shield of faith that nothing can pierce, and out of every storm you would shout with the great apostle, "None of these things move me." Beloved, they will come until they don't move you. "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake."—Phil. 1:29. "That He might present to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be Holy and without blemish."—Eph. 5:27. "Not as though I had already attained," "I press toward the mark."—Phil. 3:12-14.

evening, July 20 and continue through Sunday, July 26. Services will begin each evening at 8 p.m., with the Rev. A. J. Lyczkowski as the evangelist. The pastor, the Rev. Eugene Sumner, will assist in the services.

The pastor and the church extend to everyone a cordial invitation to attend all these services.

NOTES

AND

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

OUR CAPTION IS TRUE TO NAME

This week we are quoting Mr. A. B. Simpson's tract, "Try Me." For this subject Mr. Simpson chose that wonderful verse of Scripture written in Romans 8:28 which is as follows: "All things work together for good to them that love God."

Mr. Simpson has brought out some wonderful things to think about in his treatment of the text. We think the statements of Mr. Simpson worthwhile to the extent that we are passing along to you who read our writings the full tract as written by Mr. Simpson and published by the Free Tract Society, Los Angeles 21, California.

TRY ME

"All things work together for good to them that love God."—Romans 8:28.

God tries us, proves us, and establishes us. It is not by a quick process. "He shall sit, as a Refiner and Purifier of silver." He sits down to His work, He takes plenty of time. He will wait years with you over a single lesson, if you make Him do so, or He will get you through it at once, if you are willing to take the quicker process and the hotter fire.

How touching is the love that will take so much trouble with all these little matters. No wonder that Job should say, "Lord, what is man that Thou shouldst magnify him? and that Thou shouldst set Thine heart upon him? and that Thou shouldst visit him every morning and try him every moment?"

Yes, every moment the great Refiner is waiting to add some new touch to your strength and beauty and fit you for a higher place in His eternal life. We are so prone to think that these things that come to us are accidents, incidents, mishaps or personal injuries from personal hands; but, after a while, we learn that His hand is above every other hand and His love above every hateful blow.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Please explain "When the clean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation" (Matthew 12:43-45).—J. R. J., South Carolina.

ANSWER: There have been various and sundried interpretations and applications made of these verses. It should be clear indeed to every ardent student of the Scriptures, however, that there is one and only one true interpretation or explanation to be offered, and that is in respect to the unbelieving generation. Pay special attention to the closing words of Verse 45, "Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation." The word generation as used here must be understood in the sense of "race." (See the footnote in the Scofield Reference Bible on Matthew 24:34 for the meaning of the Greek word translated generation here.)

Israel's "unclean spirit" during Old Testament times was that spirit which fostered idolatry. In the time of Christ it had left Israel; for the captivity and the chastening from God in that incident had caused Israel to see and fully recognize the folly, sin, and trouble of idolatry. It was while they were in Babylon that three of her loyal sons were put into a fiery furnace for not bowing to an idol and that one was cast into the lions' den for praying. Even today, after 2500 years or so, Israel still has her house swept clean of that evil spirit, idolatry, and still boasts of the reform. The condition will not always exist among God's ancient people, however; for that evil spirit of idolatry will not always be apart from her and her religious activities; he is to return bringing seven other more despicable spirits with him. That spirit with seven others will take possession of the house again (under the form of the beast, Revelation 13 and 17), and the last state will be worse than that of the first. That condition indicated by Revelation 13 will engulf her in her every activity, in all that she feels and does.

Because Israel as a nation (household) rejected her Messiah, our Lord Jesus Christ, she still suffers a state of spiritual blindness. When she makes that covenant with the antichrist that is suggested by both Daniel 11 of the Old Testament and Revelation 13 and 17 of the New Testament, during the seventieth week of Daniel's prophecy, then and not until then will she be allowing the return of the demons—that one that she swept out while in captivity and seven others, for full possession. The antichrist will put forth every possible effort to force all the world to worship his image. That will be idolatry in its last, boldest, and most despicable form—the kind the king of Babylon tried to force on the Hebrew children, except that it will be more subtly m a n e u v e r e d. The true remnant of Israel will recognize this as coming from a false messiah; will break her covenant relations with him, and will consequently have to go through the great tribulation.

Only the return of the Lord in glory will save His chosen people, Israel, from complete destruction from the earth. "And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened" (Matthew 24:22). While antichrist and his forces will seek the complete destruction of God's people, just as times have reached the climax in evil deeds and devices, He will come to His own with a shout and with all the armies of heaven, taking vengeance on all who do not acknowledge God in His rightful place in their experience. "Be ye also ready," for you know not when this day of vengeance is to come.

and her love, we can only commend them to our heavenly Father for comfort and consolation.

Second, that we strive to live day by day as did our dear sister, and may we realize that this earthly separation is only temporary; for we look forward to God's promise of a most glorious life to come where the severed ties will be mended.

Third, that we send a copy of these resolutions to her family, that we place a copy in the minutes of our auxiliary, and that we send a copy to The Free Will Baptist for publication.

Though Sister Mag has left us
To join the auxiliary above,
She is waiting there to greet us
With gentle arms of love.

"Blest be the tie that binds,"
We shall sing together again,
As we beam our light ever upward,
While we join in the sacred refrain.

The Miracle of Prayer

by SUE HEATH

Free Will Baptist Children's Home,
Middlesex, North Carolina

God gave us sunshine, birds, and trees,
The star-filled sky above;
He gave us beauty, flowers, and friends,
And special folks to love;
And then because each life would bring
Its share of stress and care,
He gave us a wonderful gift—
The Miracle of Prayer.

He knew the sun would sometimes hide
Behind a cloud of grav,
And we'd have need of faith and hope
And strength for each new day.
How comforting it is to know
His love is always there
To comfort, help, and guide us
Through the Miracle of Prayer.

STORIES

BOYS and GIRLS

THE mission band had stopped playing and now the speaker was giving all an invitation to come to Pacific Garden Mission and hear the story of those who had been saved from sin. The young baseball player sitting on the curb had been stirred. He knew he ought to go to the mission and receive Christ but a battle raged in his heart. Would he take the step? The fate of a million people rode on his decision—. He stood to his feet and said to his fellow baseball players: "I'm through. I am going to Jesus Christ. We've come to a parting of the ways." Hat in hand he followed the band down the street. Billy Sunday had started on his spectacular career for God.

1962 marked the centennial of the birth of one of the great preachers of American history.

William Ashley Sunday was born in a log cabin November 19, 1862. His father had marched away to the Civil War a short while before his son was born and died shortly after. The family were in dire circumstances after the loss of the father, and Billy and his brother had to leave for the soldiers' orphans' home where they spent much of their early life.

Billy was an exceptional athlete. He recounted with pleasure how as a lad he beat a university professor who was a specialist in running and won the three-dollar prize at a Fourth of July picnic. His speed earned him a place on the local baseball team and this proved a stepping stone to the National League, and what became the Chicago Cubs. His specialty was stolen bases and it is claimed that no one yet has broken his record for circling the bases.

At the old Pacific Garden Mission after attending a street meeting Billy was converted in 1886 at the height of his diamond career. Immediately he swung into action for the Lord by helping with YMCA services. After a little while he promised God he would leave baseball and enter full-time work. And he left a large salary to take a meagerly paid position with the "Y."

Dr. Wilbur Chapman heard of his hard-working ability and offered him a job as his assistant. For two-and-a-half years Billy received the best of training under the famous evangelist. Then suddenly his little world rocked, as Chapman wired him he was quitting evangelistic work to take up a pastorate, and could no longer use him. But just as Billy was considering going back into baseball some churches in Garner, Iowa, asked him to hold revival services and he was on his way, never again without invitations to have meetings.

In many respects Sunday was like D. L. Moody: He had virtually no theological training. He was not cultured of speech and was much opposed to formalism. He was God's man for a time when the church was reeling from the battering waves of German rationalism. There were no half tones in his theology. He believed the Bible was the Word of God and that it could save men. With this forthright message his small beginning merged into the giant city campaigns in the early part of the century. Billy was no pacifist in the battle with the prevailing sins of the church and nations. Cards, dancing, gossip, the theater and others all came in for their share of his withering, blasting vindictive.

The saloon and its booze was a favorite target. Town after town went completely dry following his campaigns. He went into one city for a revival as they were planning on enlarging the city jail. Not long after the city had closed the saloons and Sunday had left, the city abandoned its jail construction idea because half of the available cells were not being used.

How the liquor interest hated him. His life was threatened by them and he went most places with a body guard. One liquor group sadistically mutilated his family burial lots in the cemetery and then published a picture of it asking, "Is this the way Billy Sunday takes care of his cemetery lots?" But such excesses only made him all the more determined.

Billy Sunday was a man's man. He went all out in preaching as he had in baseball and the people loved him for it. His call to conversion was an uncompromising forsaking of sin. Around 80,000,000 people listened to him and some one million walked the "sawdust trail" professing Christ as Saviour.

But Billy was human. Dr. Williams Ellis who loved him dearly, sadly says that later in life Billy's "clear-cut call to conversion and confession widened into a challenge to dedicate oneself to nobler living." But with this easy emphasis Billy got less converts than he had before.

But despite his defects he was the man of the hour for the United States. There is yet something about the average American makeup that prefers the rough and true to the polished and false. We are still a people who despise a man who will not get his hands dirty and work as one of the fellows. As an evangelist Billy fitted this image. He used the language of the people and with it won them.

We may again stir the spiritual life of our nation if we follow his lead. Let our Gospel be plain and simple for better understanding. High standards of separation from the world will add to, not take away from our number. And

Our doctrine has come to us through suffering; for if our forefathers had not been willing to renounce all personal interest, for the sake of God and the truths they believed, we would not have such a sure doctrine as we have today.

Since the day that Paul Palmer came preaching in eastern North Carolina, there have been those who have mercilessly attacked our doctrine; but God has miraculously preserved it down to this day.

Thus, we owe it to our forefathers to uphold these doctrines—to hold on to them, to defend them with all our might because they paid a heavy price to preserve them.

2. As Free Will Baptist ministers, we must uphold these doctrines because we believe they are true—that they are the truth. If we do not believe this, we cannot present them to others. But let us consider the things that make them true:

a. They find their basis on "Thus saith the Lord." Our doctrines have not come down to us through the wishes and desires of man. They are based on the Word of God. Even our "Statement of Faith" advances a belief only after definite evidence is found in the Scriptures to substantiate it. If there were no other reason, this one alone would be sufficient.

b. They satisfy the spiritual hunger of the soul. Satisfaction of the soul cannot be found in error—in being misled.

As Free Will Baptist ministers, we should be able to say to anyone, "Try our doctrines, they will satisfy the soul."

3. We must uphold these doctrines, as Free Will Baptist ministers, because if we do not, we are playing the part of a hypocrite—we are professing to believe something that we do not really believe in the heart. It is possible that even ministers may pay only lip service to a cause. Most anyone will give some sort of acknowledgment to a subject, but wholehearted belief in it is a different thing. No minister can perform at his best unless he believes in what he is doing. This is proven in every walk of life.

False doctrine has been compared to the doctor who gives the wrong medicine to sick people, so that they get worse instead of better. We believe that unless we really believe what we preach, our spiritual patients will become worse instead of better. If we are to promote the cause of Christ through the Free Will Baptist Church, we must believe that it is true. Someone has said: "Truth is imperishable, and to hold to the truth is a continuing appointment to all those who follow the One who was Truth incarnate. Not only are we to publish the message of the Cross but we must keep truth alive, for it is absolutely essential to the effectiveness of the message."

For well over 200 years a fire that was started with the use of flint and steel by Tom Dalton in his Blue Ridge Mountain cabin has been kept going to this day. The fire has been moved from one cabin to another, down through the years, from one family to another. Today it is the oldest fire in the United States, perhaps in the world. Even in hot weather the fire requires a cord of wood per month. It has been no easy task, but always the fire has burned on.

As Free Will Baptist ministers, we must possess the spirit of this family. We must be willing to keep the fire of our faith burning—and brightly, not in dying embers.

Carteret County Benefit Dinner

The Original Free Will Baptist churches of Carteret County, North Carolina, raised $3,323 at their benefit dinner for Mount Olive College on June 20. This amount is more than twice the $1,417 raised at their dinner last year.

President W. Burkette Raper praised the 1,200 Free Will Baptists of Carteret County by saying, "They have set a high standard for our dinners during 1964."

Members of the county steering committee were T. A. Taylor of Sea Level, chairman; the Rev. Jerry Rowe of Newport, secretary; and Reginald Styron of Davis.

A series of benefit dinners for the Mount Olive College development fund is planned this fall for all Free Will Baptist churches in North Carolina.

Campus Fund Drive Climbs to $9,412

A campaign, launched June 1, to raise $25,000 to complete payment for the original fifty acres of the new campus of Mount Olive College had reached $9,412 on June 25.

"We appreciate the response of our many friends on this project," President W. Burkette Raper declared, "and we believe that this goal will be met at an early date. We are proceeding with plans to begin our building program this summer, but actual construction will not begin until the goal of $25,000 is reached," he added.

Churches and friends of the college which have not yet contributed to this project are urged to do so at the earliest possible date.

made a toy television and he brought a message from the Rev. John B. Elliston, telling how boys and girls can help the cause for missions. Some of the ways told were by praying daily, joining the Dollar Club, collecting stamps, and writing to the missionaries.

Others taking part in the study were Ricky Matthews, Rex Jones, Paul Manning, and Jeanette Coppadage. By using posters, maps, and flannelgraph pictures, they made talks on the missionary needs, Free Will Baptist missionaries, how to witness, and what Jesus said about missions.

Mrs. Earl Bass, AFC sponsor, said she felt the boys and girls had learned many things from the study that they would always remember.

Mrs. Thomas Allen Matthews visited with the group and assisted in a weiner roast after the study.

MEMORY VERSE: Psalm 68:19

I. INTRODUCTION

Much of the work of God is accomplished through human instrumentality. In our lesson for today we study the performance of a very great and necessary work. We will see the hand of God present in its formation and its execution, but we will also see a wonderful display of human leadership by a faithful and dedicated man.

The deliverance of the Children of Israel from the bondage of Egypt constitutes one of the marvels of history. Egypt was at this time one of the most powerful, if not the most powerful, nations on the face of the earth; Israel had come a long way from the time that the house of Jacob came into Egypt; but in spite of their increase in numbers, they remained a captive nation, without arms or armament, and seemingly unable to cope with the great strength of Egypt. This deliverance should serve as an incentive to all Christians to realize that nothing is impossible under the leadership of God. This was what Paul had in mind when he said that he could do all through the strength of God.

There were many difficulties in the path of Moses in the completion of this task; but Moses, though he felt himself unequal to the task, arose to the occasion demanded for the surmounting of each obstacle and carried the plan through to its completion.

—Senior Quarterly (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. God revealed himself as Jehovah, a name by which He had not been known to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. In fact, it took the exodus from Egypt and the settlement in Canaan to manifest it fully (vv. 2, 3).

2. He reminded Moses of the covenant that He made with his fathers many years before (v. 4).

3. He further reminded him that He was aware of the sufferings of the Israelites and that He would relieve them according to the covenant (v. 5).

4. He reiterated the call to Moses and sent him to deliver the Israelites from bondage (v. 6).

5. God also promised the Israelites exactly what He covenanted with their fathers (v. 7).

6. The Lord smote all the firstborn in Egypt exactly as He said that He would do (v. 29).

7. The death of the firstborn in every family caused an awful cry in Egypt (v. 30).

8. Pharaoh showed that he felt the urgency of the matter by giving orders that same night for the Israelites to leave (v. 31).

9. The tragedy was so severe that he was willing for the Israelites to take all their possessions with them (v. 32).

10. The Egyptians joined Pharaoh in urging that the Israelites hasten their departure for fear of a worse tragedy (v. 37).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The 1964 Minister's Manual calls this a lesson of great importance for these reasons:

a. This is an important lesson from the standpoint of history. The story should be presented by the teacher with emphasis on the Passover and the beginning of the exodus. God acts where men are, sometimes in the confusion and struggle of historical events.

b. It is important because of "the living heritage of the Passover." It gives the historical background of the Jewish festival called the Passover. Rabbi Solomon S. Bernards writes, "It unites the Jewish generations of today with their heroic ancestors—from Moses on. The Passover has been celebrated in literature, drama, art, and music. Its living heritage is pivotal to an understanding in Judaism . . . For Christians, Passover is of special interest since it provides the historical background for

c. This is an important lesson because the Old Testament story of the exodus finds its fulfillment in the work of Christ. God found Israel in slavery in Egypt and brought her through "the great and terrible wilderness" to her homeland. Jesus Christ was born in the empire of Caesar Augustus in the days of Herod and ever leads men out of another kind of wilderness—that of their sins.

It may be well to review briefly the two previous lessons. Some time has elapsed since Moses had received the call from God to be the deliverer. Since then he had (1) made two objections, that the people would not listen to him and that he was not eloquent of speech; (2) received help from Aaron; (3) returned to Egypt; (4) announced deliverance to the elders of Israel; (5) had trouble with Pharaoh; (6) caused the people of Israel to be given extra burdens.

He had gone to God in great distress that he was getting nowhere in his task.

—Teen-Age Teacher (F.W.B.).

2. God used plagues to deliver the Israelites from Egypt. The climactic, decisive one was the slaying of the firstborn. That was like dropping the bomb on Hiroshima.

There is a purpose for divine judgments. Not always are they sent as penalties for sin. Often they are correctives to draw us back into the paths of righteousness and to make us more fruitful.

In the parable of the true vine (John 15:1-8) Jesus says, "Every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." We cut back our fruit trees and flower bushes so that they may produce more luxuriantly. Often that is the purpose of divine discipline.

Here is how a new pastor developed efficiency in a dead church: First he inquired diligently into the lives of his members who had lapsed into worldliness. These he visited often, seeking to reclaim them to God. Where they were deep in sin he dealt with them according to the New Testament law by excluding them from membership. Then he turned to those who had a name to live up to but who were dead, whose only sign of life was attendance at the Sunday morning preaching service. These he sought to interest in the work of the church. His preaching was faithful and kind, full of the love of Christ, tressing the obligation of fruitbearing and service. He reclaimed a few of them, but many were offended and either dropped out or transferred their letters elsewhere. The church became purged of the rotten branches and the fruitless boughs. The remainder of the church began to bear fruit, and in the third year of his pastorate the reaping of souls came. Some of the repentant ones had been among the first group driven away by faithful preaching. The largest number of converts were from among the non-churchgoing class who had become convinced of the reality of the Gospel when they witnessed a preacher and a church in dead earnest for God and the truth.

I. INTRODUCTION

If you are personally experiencing the heavy hand of God's judgment, do not seek to escape. But rather, seek the reason why.

—Senior Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. Weather forecasters can tell us when conditions are right for the formation of tornadoes. A tornado will pass over many places, then suddenly touch down to the ground, often causing complete destruction where it touches. It may pick up a house, carry it a distance, and smash it to earth. Man is powerless to stop the destructive power of the tornado, but he can take measures to protect himself. In some places men have built storm cellars that provide protection against storms.

Pharaoh's rejection of God's request to let the Israelites go set the stage for divine judgment to fall like a storm upon Egypt. Once Pharaoh hardened his heart, man was powerless to turn aside this judgment. But man still had a way of escape. Moses instructed the people to sprinkle the lintels and doorposts with blood from the slain Passover lamb. Those who obeyed these instructions would be safe from the storm of judgment. Homes not so protected would feel God's wrath.

Like a tornado with its path clearly marked, touching down to earth at scheduled places, death—God's judgment—swooped upon every household of the Egyptians, but passed over the marked homes of the Hebrews. In the wake of the storm, of death, the Hebrews also carried away jewels, treasures, and cattle. According to God's purpose, they went out of the land, delivered by His hand.

—Standard Commentary.

Many significant things happened to the Israelites from the time of last Sunday's printed text until the time of today's text to prove that God was with these people. "And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt: But God led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red Sea: and the children of Israel went up harnessed out of the land of Egypt. And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: . . ." (Exodus 13:17-19). The last two verses of this same chapter tell us that God went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, and by night in a pillar of fire.

The Children of Israel traveled first from Succoth in Egypt to Etham. This was their first camping spot, and it was near the wilderness. So far, their journey was without incident. Pharaoh, however, was not content at their departure and he pursued them. At the sight of their army, the Israelites became afraid and wished that they were back in Egypt; but God was with them and instructed Moses to lift up his rod over the sea, to divide it, so that Israel could walk over on dry land (see Exodus 14:15-26). Moses did as the Lord commanded, and the Israelites fled through the sea with the Egyptians in pursuit. The Israelites reached safety on the other side, but Pharaoh's army was drowned as the waters of the Red Sea rushed back into their proper place.

From the Red Sea they journeyed to Marah. The people were thirsting for water, but the waters were bitter. God purified the water for them. In the Wilderness of Sin, they were faint with hunger, and God sent them manna and quails to eat. At Horeb the people again became extremely thirsty, and this time water was provided as Moses smote a rock. At Rephidim, the Amalekites came upon them; but God gave victory to the Israelites.

—Bible Student (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Moses assumed the role as judge of the Israelites and worked hard at the task (v. 13).

2. Jethro observed the laborious task of Moses and the way the people were inconvenienced by it (v. 14).

3. When asked by Jethro what he was doing, Moses replied that he was making known to the people the laws of God (vv. 15, 16).

4. Jethro observed that the task of administering justice was too great for one man (vv. 17, 18).

5. Jethro, apparently able and capable, advised a change in the administration of justice (v. 19).

6. He suggested that Moses instruct the people in the laws of God and that he teach them what they should do (v. 20).

7. He further suggested the appointment of judges that would work under Moses to handle ordinary matters of concern to the people (vv. 21, 22).

8. Moses was still to be the chief ruler and the mediator between God and the people (vv. 21, 22).

9. Aware of the fact that Moses had a greater Counselor, Jethro left it up to the wisdom of Moses to accept or reject his proposals (v. 23).

10. Moses sanctioned the system that his father-in-law suggested and put it into operation (v. 24).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Often the little girl of Dr. Andrew Bonar of Glasgow would accompany her father to his church when no service was in progress. Placing her in a pew in the rear of the church Dr. Bonar would enter pew after pew, bow his head and earnestly pray for the Sunday occupants of the different pews. The little girl didn't understand the meaning of it at the time, but as she grew older and the pew holders grew in grace and Christlikeness she learned the significance of it. The undershepherd was interceding for the sheep!

2. Some years ago in Buffalo, N. Y., two young men on a Sunday night broke into a photographic studio. The aged owner was there. So intent were they on robbery that they murdered him. Screaming front page headlines announced the crime in the Monday morning papers. The two youths were apprehended and charged with murder. Their names seemed familiar to the secretary of one of the local churches who wrote letters to those whose names were written in the visitor's book. She discovered upon examining the book they had been in church Sunday morning and had committed murder Sunday night! The pastor's sermon subject in the morning was "An Educated Ministry." Yes, we do believe in an educated ministry, but only God knows what might have happened if the minister had preached Christ with a loving, pleading heart and told of Christ's power to change "desperately wicked" hearts!

—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. Perhaps you have on occasions stopped to be a "sidewalk superintendent" as a great building was being constructed. You may have seen an excavation first, into which a foundation and walls were placed. Then supporting framework was put up, and later walls and the roof. Inside the building carpenters and electricians and plumbers and plasterers and painters were soon at work. Near the building there was probably a trailer or a small house, the construction office.

Watching the men at work, you would see that each type of work required a foreman—a foreman for bricklayers, one for carpenters, another for roofers. These foremen solve the little problems that arise, giving the general foreman in the construction office time to keep the total job in mind.

As Moses led the children of Israel, he found himself the sole judge of their problems and their disputes. It was as if each workman on the job trailed in and out of the superintendent's office. Thus Moses was unable to provide outstanding leadership because he had so many little problems to solve. Accepting the advice of Jethro, his father-in-law, Moses chose able men to be rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. These men "judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves" (Exodus 18:26).

In the church today we must learn to divide responsibility and give positions of leadership to able people who will use their talents for the Lord.

—Standard Commentary.

4. Perhaps one of the greatest lessons that we can learn from this Scripture is this: Do good to all men. Jethro might have shrugged his shoulders and said, "I am a Midianite and he is a Hebrew. Let him get his help from somewhere else." Another great lesson to learn is that we can learn something from all men—be he relative, foreigner, or what have you. Moses could easily have said, "Why should I take his advice?"

D. L. Moody used to say that it was better to get ten people to work than to do the work of ten people. One of the outstanding characteristics of leadership is the ability to enlist, inspire, and encourage others to work. Some who aspire to be leaders are so selfish and suspicious that they are never able to designate authority and assign tasks to others. As a result of this, their leadership is limited.

—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

Concentration

By HARRISON RAY ANDERSON

To the rich young ruler seeking the way of eternal life, Jesus said, "One thing thou lackest." To Martha, "distracted by her many tasks," he said, "Martha, Martha, you are fretting and fussing about so many things; but one thing is necessary." The man born blind, confronted and confused by the Pharisees and their questions, confessed that there were things about Jesus he did not know, but "one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." And Paul, with all his abilities, from a damp cell in Rome wrote to the church he loved, "But this one thing I do." "But I do concentrate on this; I leave the past behind and, with hands outstretched to whatever lies ahead, I go straight for the goal—my reward and the honor of being called by God in Christ."

There are men and women of real gifts in our churches whose service to the cause of Christ is hurt because they take on so many tasks that they can do none of them well. A fine fellow coming in late to a board meeting confessed that this was his third meeting that noon! Soon after that he was asked to resign from the board and later lost his position with his company. An orange tree that is not pruned yearly soon ceases to bear much fruit. Why not an annual day for pruning our cluttered lives and their too many responsibilities?

There were things Jesus refused to do. He refused to become a temporal king. The church as the church is not called upon to do everything. A sermon can leave something for next Sunday. That invitation to come and speak can be graciously declined and next Sunday's worship and sermon may reveal that through concentration a hard-pressed pastor has once again recovered his calling and become again a specialist for God.—The Presbyterian Outlook.

above all we need to remember that God can use the roughest diamond to do the finest work. He delights in using the untrained Peters as well as the brilliantly educated Pauls.

THE COST IS SMALL

Kindness has been described in many ways. It is the poetry of the heart, the music of the world. It is a golden chain which binds society together. It is a fountain of gladness.

Kind hearts are more than coronets.

Kind words produce their own beautiful image in man's soul.

Everyone knows the pleasure of receiving a kind look, a warm greeting, a hand held out in time of need. And such gestures can be made at so little expense, yet they bring such dividends to the investor.—The War Cry.

Sow With Care

ESTHER JOHNSON

A planter, when he goes out to sow,
Must have concern if the seed shall grow.
He cannot say, "It will not matter
When, where, or how, the seed I scatter."
He must till the soil with utmost care
Striving to use good seed that will bear.
For he knows, when the autumn is here,
The harvest depends on his seed and care.

How do we sow? What is our concern?
For we scatter seeds at every turn.
Do we as the planter; use great care,
Select good seed and the soil prepare?
And then as each seed begins to grow,
Do we cultivate, and weed—just so?
Results of our harvest we may not know
But God tells us we will reap what we sow.

Law of the Land

The famed Civil Rights Bill is now the law of the land. Like it or not this is a fact. Although there are some who still seek a loophole, compliance with the law is the best answer; for the enemies of our great democracy thrive on our discord. Meanwhile, let us hope that the "beatnik-type" demonstrations will cease; that states can go ahead in obedience to the law without outside agitation and interference.

Every Christian is under obligation to obey the laws of the land. "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well" (1 Peter 2: 13, 14). "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation" (Romans 13:1, 2). In addition to these verses of Scripture, we need to remember the words of Jesus when He said, "... Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's" (Matthew 22: 21).

The Christian must be an example in all things. Obedience to the laws of the land is a good place to start. Those who flout the local laws within our states, counties, and cities, if they are the Christians they profess to be, should take the above Scriptures to heart also. After all, laws are written for man's protection.

DR. STRONG WAS CONCERNED

The term "liberalism" has now become a common term. It is more than frequently used in the social, political, and religious world. The political camps have seemingly become distinct parties of liberalism and conservatism. As the term is used in these days it indicates an extreme view—a view away from established principles, forms, beliefs, etc. For this reason, we fear the term and especially the practice of liberalism.

Politically, it is defined as "a political philosophy based on belief in progress, the essential goodness of man, and the autonomy of the individual and standing for the protection of political and civil liberties." Religiously, it is defined as a "movement in modern Protestantism emphasizing intellectual liberty and the spiritual and ethical content of Christianity."

To be sure, we believe in intellectual liberty; but not to the point of tearing down the fundamental doctrines and practices of Christianity. We believe that there is an ethical element in Christianity; but we do not believe that it requires a place of predominance above all else. In fact, we believe that the cause of Christ is greatly jeopardized if we fail to adhere to those doctrines and beliefs that have made the Church great.

Recently, we read with a great deal of interest the preface to Dr. Augustus H. Strong's book on Systematic Theology. The preface was written on August 3, 1906. It is especially significant that Dr. Strong was greatly concerned at the spread of liberalism at about the turn of the century. Consider his words in the last paragraph of the second page:

"I am distressed by some theological tendencies of our time, because I believe them to be false to both science and religion. How men who have ever felt themselves to be lost sinners and who have once received pardon from their crucified Lord and Savior can thereafter seek to pare down his attributes, deny his deity and atonement, tear from his brow the crown of miracle and sovereignty, relegate him to the place of a merely moral teacher who influences us only as does Socrates by words spoken across a stretch of ages, passes my comprehension. Here is my test of Orthodoxy: Do we pray to Jesus? Do we call upon the name of Christ, as did Stephen and all the early church? Is he our living Lord, omnipresent, omniscient, omnipotent? Is he divine only in the sense in which we are divine, or is he the only-begotten Son, God manifest in the flesh, in whom is all the fulness of the Godhead bodily? What think ye of the Christ? is still the critical question, and none are entitled to the name of Christian, who in the face of the evidence he has furnished us, cannot answer the question aright."

We believe the crucial question is still "What think ye of the Christ?" We must believe in all that the Bible presents Him to be—nothing less and nothing more. This is not too much to ask of anyone.

We believe that there is evidence of liberalistic trends that are gaining footholds today. Some may not agree with this editor. In fact, as we deal with this matter editorially for the next few weeks and months, we will expect to be questioned. If we are wrong in our conclusions (and we hope so), we shall gladly apologize. If, on the other hand, what we conclude is right and people are awakened to this trend, we will have accomplished our purpose.

We believe that God wants the service and lives of those who will dare to be different. The philosophy of tolerance for anyone and everything can (and perhaps already has) reach an extreme. We believe the average church member must alert himself to these current dangers, for the real answer to the problem rests with him.

WHERE

sponsibility of this instruction program will fall mostly upon the pastor of the local church. In my thinking there are five points as a minimum in this instruction program:

1. Free Will Baptist History
 - A. Heritage
 - B. Beginnings
2. Study of the Discipline
 - A. Doctrine
 - B. Church Covenant
 - C. Local Church: How it Is Organized and Operated
 - D. How to Become a Member of a Free Will Baptist Church
 - E. Transfer of Membership
3. Denominational Structure
 - A. Local Church
 - (1) Definition
 - (2) Purpose
 - B. Union Meeting
 - C. Conference
 - D. State Convention
 - (1) Purpose
 - (2) Boards
 - (3) Enterprises
 - E. International Convention of Original Free Will Baptists
4. Subscription to the Free Will Baptist paper. This serves as another contact between the individual and his denomination.
5. Regular Contact by the Pastor
The pastor plays a very important role in the life of new converts. His presence and help are appreciated and strengthen the faith of "babes in Christ."

This is only a minimum outline of instruction for the new members. The amount of time spent in such a program will be determined mostly by the pastor; but it must not be too short, or he misses the point in the whole program.

In a time of rising secularism, I believe it most important for our church to meet the challenges presented. It takes prepared Christians to meet these challenges. How shall they be prepared except they be taught? I believe this to be the answer to our problem of church loyalty and church membership.

by Frank R. Harrison,
Pastor, Little Rock Free Will Baptist
Church, Lucama, North Carolina

ACROSS our state there are many Free Will Baptist church rolls with a long list of names, but no one to answer when those names are called. This brings us face to face with a problem among most of our churches: Why is there such a great lack of loyalty among our people? Many Free Will Baptists move to other towns and go to other churches even when there is a Free Will Baptist church in that town. Then there are those who move away from their church and never go to any church anywhere.

Still another problem in many local churches is that many of the people do not know what Free Will Baptists believe, or from whence they have come. These problems arise because the candidates for membership are taken in and no program of instruction is given to them. Some of the new candidates join the church and really know nothing of what they are joining because no one tells them.

Church membership in the Free Will Baptist Church is taken too lightly. We need to make new converts more aware of their responsibility as Christians and as members of the Free Will Baptist Church. We suffer in almost every point of our denominational program today because we, as pastors and laymen, have not taught loyalty to our people. Why does Dr. Raper have to beg and plead with our people for support of Mount Olive College? Why isn't our whole denominational program in better condition financially and otherwise? One of the reasons is that our people have been taught that Free Will Baptists get their name because they support themselves by "free will" offerings. Original Free Will Baptists do not get their name from "free will" offerings; neither is this the method of our support, according to our discipline. Original Free Will Baptists believe in tithing (chapter sixteen of the Statement of Faith and Discipline of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina) as God's plan for support of the church and its respective work.

We may dislike Jehovah's Witnesses or the Seventh Day Adventists, but they do teach their people to tithe; and not only this, but they teach them church loyalty. I am convinced that when we as Free Will Baptists teach our people our doctrine and loyalty to the Free Will Baptist Church, we will not have to beg or be ashamed of our denominational program.

Too long have we cried, "Free Will Baptists are poor people and cannot tithe"; or "I don't know anybody in this Free Will Baptist church, so I will not go"! We have hidden behind the yoke of excuses long enough! It is time for us to put our hand to the plow and put some strait furrows through our fields of excuses.

I believe a program of instruction and training for new converts and new members will solve some of our problems of church loyalty and support. The re-

MISSIONS

Matthew
18:19, 20

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

We have just concluded a very successful summer Bible school in the Mission de Gracia in Nogales, Sonora. The Rev. and Mrs. James L. Lanier have the care of this mission. In addition to the Laniers, Barbara Becton and Sally Elliston assisted in the school, as well as several of the young Christians in the churches in Nogales on both sides of the line. Our two young preachers, Federico Bernal from the First Free Will Baptist Church in Nogales, Arizona, and Fabian Guzman from La Iglesia Bautista de la Voluntad Libre, La Casa de Dios, in Nogales, Sonora, both helped in the school.

A total of eighty different children attended the school one or more days, with an average attendance of fifty-five. Needless to say, the large majority of them had never attended the mission before. Many of them, however, received enough instruction to want to learn more. As a consequence of the school, the attendance in the regular services has more than doubled. Pray that these young people will find Christ and become workers for Him.

At the present moment the teaching force is recuperating from the Bible school in the Mision de Gracia and preparing for the Bible school which is to begin in Brother Guzman's church, La Casa de Dios, next Monday, July 20, 1964. As soon as you read this article, right now, be sure to pray for the success of this Bible school.

In August we plan to have a Bible school here at the First Free Will Baptist Church in Nogales, Arizona. By that time the Laniers will probably be in North Carolina, but there should be more than enough persons left here to carry on the school. We need your prayers for that school too.

Moreover, we need your prayers for the school in the Academy due to begin on August 31. We have already begun to accept enrollments for the fall. We have now three young people enrolled, and we expect to receive enrollments very rapidly as the summer progresses. Most of these prospective students cannot pay their full tuition, and some of them cannot pay even a token amount. Therefore, we are going to need several sponsors for the fall, or for this fiscal year which began on July 1.

The tuition cost for day students, those who live at home and come to school each morning, is twelve dollars per month. Room, board, and tuition for dormitory students will be forty dollars per month. However, in neither case is it a matter of all or none. Any person, or any group, who feels that he would like to help sponsor a student, but doesn't feel capable of sponsoring full time, can sponsor on a half-time, or part-time basis. Inasmuch as some of the students will be able to pay part of their tuition, they will only need help on a part-time basis. Also, several persons or groups can sponsor the same individual. Therefore, as you can see, you can pay any amount you feel capable of paying.

Dormitory students will only be those who are enrolled in the Christian Workers course, who live in cities too far away to attend classes while living at home, and who have no relatives close enough with whom they can live. In a few weeks we hope to publish a complete listing of students, with their needs in the way of sponsors. In the meantime, the need for finance to begin the school in the fall is an ever-present one, and as of now we have students needing sponsors.

If you would like to sponsor some student in the school, you may have full information about your student by writing for information. Address all inquiries to: Arizona-Mexico Missions, P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona 85621. You may send your offerings for this purpose to: North Carolina Board of Missions, P. O. Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513, or to here. If you send the money to the missions board for tuition, be sure to designate where it is to be used so that we can apply it properly to the account of the student. If you send the money directly here, it will still be counted toward the 60% of the budget of Arizona-Mexico Missions which is being underwritten by North Carolina. In either way the credit will be the same all around, so you may use the method which appeals to you.

We still must raise 40% of our operating budget outside of North Carolina. The above instructions were to those of you in North Carolina. Those outside of North Carolina who send your money directly here will have your offerings applied on the 40% of the budget necessary for us to raise outside of North Carolina, unless you tell us to apply it on North Carolina's part.

Please pray for the work here. Particularly pray that God will send us the candidates for the Mexican ministry whom He wishes to receive the training which He has led us to provide. Pray for us that we shall accomplish His purpose in providing the training. And pray that His people in other places will see fit to support in a financial way so that the training can be provided. May God bless you.

Shall I Give To Missions?

Horace Bushnell once made an interesting list of all who might be excused from giving to missions. Here it is:

Those who believe that the world is not lost and does not need a Saviour.

Those who believe that Jesus Christ made a mistake when he said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

Those who believe the Gospel is not the power of God and cannot save the heathen.

Those who wish that missionaries had never come to our ancestors, and that we ourselves were still heathen.

Those who believe that it is every man for himself in this world, and who with Cain ask, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Those who want no share in the final victory.

Those who believe they are not accountable to God for the money entrusted to them.

Those who are prepared to accept the final sentence: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

To which band do you belong?—Selected.

Tamed Lions

Dr. C. I. Scofield testified that he had been a drunkard before his conversion. When he was first saved he was nearly overpowered by the appetite for strong drink. He would cross the street when he came near a barroom. "I was in torment day and night," he said. "No one had told me of the keeping power of Jesus Christ."

A few days after his conversion he saw

OBITUARIES

MRS. KATIE SAWYER JACKSON

On Tuesday, May 26, 1964, our heavenly Father in infinite wisdom and mercy, called our dear sister and friend, Mrs. Katie Sawyer Jackson, home to her reward in the Father's house.

Whereas, the Celia Hart Garris Auxiliary of the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church, Ayden, North Carolina, has sustained an invaluable loss, we are truly grateful for the memory of her whose life has been such an inspiration to all of her many friends and loved ones; and

Whereas, Original Free Will Baptists have lost a member, through death, who through many years of faithful service did not seem to become weary with well-doing, and whose love and enthusiasm for her Saviour never faltered;

We therefore resolve, in the midst of grief and tears we will rejoice in the life and immortality brought to light through the gospel, striving to emulate those virtues that have commended her life to all who knew her, and comfort ourselves with memory as well as hope.

That we may devote ourselves to the continuance of the task so faithfully performed, and now enjoined unto us who survive, by our beloved sister; and that this resolution be recorded in the minutes of the Celia Hart Garris Woman's Auxiliary of the Ayden church; a copy be furnished for publication in The Free Will Baptist; and copies be sent to the immediate members of her family.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. Anna Hill
Mrs. Beulah Stocks

Harry A. Ironside

“the boy preacher who was ‘born again’ ”

James C. Hefley

HARRY IRONSIDE was a remarkable boy!

At three he memorized his first Scripture verse—one he did not learn the real meaning of for many years—“For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost” (Luke 19:10).

During his eighth year he read the Bible all the way through, reading three chapters on weekdays and five on Sundays. The next year he read the Bible through twice, and by the time he was 14 he had caught up with himself by having read it through a total of 14 times.

When his widowed mother moved from Toronto to Los Angeles, young Harry—only 11—discovered there was no Sunday school in the neighborhood where they lived. But this was a challenge instead of a problem for Harry.

He gathered together the neighborhood children. After outlining his plans, he sent the boys out to collect all the cloth sacks and burlap bags they could find. Then under his direction (his mother was a seamstress), he organized the girls into a sewing club. In a matter of days the youngsters had erected a burlap tent that would easily cover 100 people. During the first year the average attendance was 60. Harry was the teacher.

Sometimes a few adults would come to the burlap-tent Sunday school. After listening to Harry, they would come up, pat him on the head, and say, “God bless you, little preacher.” Nothing pleased Harry more.

When Harry was 12, Mr. Moody came to town. Harry was late for the first night of the 1888 Los Angeles Crusade. He found every seat taken in Hazzard’s Pavilion. But Harry walked up to the second gallery and found room in a trough-like girder that joined the gallery to the roof.

High up in his perch, Harry listened to the bearded evangelist preach. And while he listened he prayed, “Lord, help me some day to preach to crowds like these.” He did not even dream then that 42 years later he would be pastor of the church which Moody founded.

After Moody left, Harry continued his Sunday-school work. One day when he was 14 he came home from school to find a visitor waiting.

“Harry, you remember Mr. Munro, the evangelist,” his mother said. “He visited us in Toronto.”

Indeed, Harry did remember. Donald Munro, a tall man with a long brown beard, had stayed in the Ironside home numerous times. And every time he had asked Harry at least once, “Lad, are you born again?” Harry’s stock reply was that he memorized Scripture, gave out tracts, and went to Sunday school. And Mr. Munro’s retort always was, “O laddie, you can do all that and still spend eternity in hell.”

Now after a four-year absence his old tormenter had caught up with him again. And, as Harry expected, his question was the same as before.

“My, my, how you’ve grown, Harry, lad,” the bearded preacher chortled. “Now tell me, are you born again yet, laddie?”

Harry blushed and stared down at the floor. Then his Uncle Allan, who was present, interrupted and Harry thought he was rescued.

“Didn’t you know, sir? Harry preaches himself now. Has his own Sunday school.”

But the bearded visitor only expressed amazement, “You mean you’re preaching and not yet born again? Get your Bible, lad. We’ve some things to talk about.”

Harry reluctantly dragged himself upstairs. A few moments later he shuffled back down.

“Now, lad, read Romans 3:19,” Mr. Munro said.

Harry read the verse. “Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.”

“Now, lad,” the visitor commented, “When God makes a preacher, He stops his mouth first and shows him his lost condition. Then God leads him to put his trust in the Lord Jesus and he is born again. Don’t you think you’ve been putting the cart before the horse.”

“Maybe so,” Harry answered weakly in a not-too-positive tone.

A few weeks later Harry became more positive that he was going at things backwards. He gave up his Sunday school, telling himself that if he wasn’t a true Christian he had no right to speak for God. Then the thought came, “Since you’re not a Christian, why not enjoy all the things you’ve stayed away from before?”

So Harry went out to have a good time in the world. But every time he did, he came home with a burning conscience. About six months later, Harry was attending a gay party of young people. Suddenly a verse of Scripture he had learned came to his mind: “Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you. Because I have called, and ye refused; . . . I will mock when your fear cometh . . . as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind . . . Then shall they call upon me, but I will

MISSION STUDY CLASS

The following is an article prepared by Mrs. Earl Bass of Route 2, Nashville, North Carolina, to be used for a woman's auxiliary mission study class.

Foreign Missions

I. Why I Believe in Foreign Missions

1. Because God's Word tells us that the heathens are lost.

2. Because God's Word tells us to carry the gospel to every creature.

Jesus said in John 4:35, "... Lift up your eyes, and look on the field; for they are white already to harvest."

3. Sixty-five percent of the world's population is in heathen darkness.

4. Two hundred thousands souls are dying daily without Christ.

5. God's provision for the salvation of every person has been made. (Read Romans 10:9, 13 and John 3:16-18.) These verses alone should be enough to convince us that Christ did not die for us alone, but for every person everywhere.

Jesus said many things concerning Himself. He said, "... I am the bread of life: ..." (John 6:35); "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, ..." (John 10:9); "... I am the light of the world: ..." (John 8:12); "... I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). Jesus also said, "... Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16).

We here at home have the Word of God and hear it preached over and over. Are we going to close the door to the rest of the world and not share this wonderful gospel with those living in darkness?

II. Our Foreign Mission Field

At the present we Original Free Will Baptists sponsor no foreign mission field except in Mexico. The Rev. James E. Timmons heads the Mexico-Texas work.

He writes that the Rev. Herman Rodriguez, a Mexican pastor and a medical doctor, is doing a great work for the Lord. The Rev. and Mrs. John B. Elliston direct the work in the Arizona-Mexico district. The Rev. and Mrs. James L. Lanier and sixteen native workers help with the work there.

Miss Barbara Becton, Miss Winnifred Averett, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Barrow are missionary candidates, preparing for missionary work. We should pray for these young people and ask God to lead them in their field of service. I do not believe that God desires us to work only in Mexico, but in all the world.

III. Mission Needs

1. Regular offering for the general fund.

2. Sponsors for native pastors.

3. Special offerings for new mission points.

4. Good, clean, used clothing, blankets, quilts, and linens.

5. Literature; such as, Bibles, Testaments, tracts, and hymnals. (Twelve or more hymnals have already been placed in eight different missions. More are needed.)

7. Prayers.

God has supplied man's need for salvation, yet many are still in ignorance of God's provision. Why?

1. Because of lack of knowledge.

2. For lack of interest.

3. For lack of burden.

4. For lack of funds.

5. For lack of laborers.

Our pastors must preach mission sermons, have mission programs, and have missionary speakers to help create an interest for missions within our churches. As Christians and parents we must study God's Word concerning our part in worldwide missions, and pray that we will be submissive to His will. We must give to our youth and our church a missionary education. Let us ask ourselves, What are we doing as a church for God's mission program? What can we do? What would He have us do?

Newport, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting on July 7 in the Fellowship Hall. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Agnes Garner; and the group sang "Bring Them In." Mrs. Garner prayed the opening prayer and then turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Mrs. Pat Gurganus. The program was based on missions and the speaker was Mrs. Ann Bass of Morehead City, North Carolina. Mrs. Lorraine Garner and Mrs. Ann Bass sang a duet, "Have Faith in God," after which prayer was offered by Mrs. Floraine Slaughter.

During the business session the roll was called with each of the twelve members and two visitors present responding with a Bible verse.

The hostesses, Mrs. Jean Rowe and Mrs. Ethel Bush, served refreshments which were enjoyed by all present.

Walstonburg, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting on Monday night, June 29, at the church. The meeting opened with the singing of "Work for the Night Is Coming." The president, Mrs. Raeford Heath, read for the devotional, Psalm 133; and Mrs. J. C. Moye offered the evening prayer.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll was called with 41 members and three visitors present. The treasurer's report was given and accepted as read. All circle reports were read and turned over to the auxiliary treasurer. Mrs. C. L. Patrick gave a report of the Fourth Union Convention held at Peace Free Will Baptist Church the fifth Sunday in May. At the close of the business period, the Rev. C. L. Patrick offered special prayer for Mr. Jim Letchworth who is critically ill.

The program for the month was presented by the Friendship Circle. "The House That Unity Built" was the topic of the program. For the benediction, the entire group joined hands, making a circle around the altar, and sang "Blest Be the Tie."

Christian Education

Ministerial Students Available

A number of ordained ministerial students from Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, will be available for weekend pastoral services for the church year beginning in September. Some of these men have had several years of experience.

A number of them are graduates of Mount Olive and are continuing their education in other colleges in eastern North Carolina.

Churches that need non-resident pastors for the coming year are invited to contact President W. Burkette Raper for additional information.

Helping Our Neighbors

One day a man came to Jesus and asked Him what to do to go to heaven.

"What does it say in the Bible?" asked Jesus.

"Love . . . God with all thy heart . . . and thy neighbour as thyself," answered the man.

"This do, and thou shalt live," said Jesus.

"Who is my neighbour?" asked the man, and Jesus told a story to help him understand. He told of a man traveling along a lonely road. Some bad men caught him and took all of his money and most of his clothes. They beat him until he was too weak and sick to stand up. Then they left him lying beside the road.

After a while a man who was supposed to be very good came along. But he went by on the other side of the road. He did not want those robbers after him! Then another man came by who was supposed to be very good. But he too was afraid that if he helped the poor man the robbers might beat him and rob him, too.

But after a while a Samaritan came along. Jesus' people, the Jews, did not think much of Samaritans. They did not think they were good at all. But the Samaritan stopped and helped the poor man. He took care of the man's hurt places. He took him to a place where someone would take care of him until he was well.

"Which now of these three . . . was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?" asked Jesus.

The man said, "He that shewed mercy on him."

Jesus helped the man to see that our neighbors are not just the people who live next door. Everyone we meet is our neighbor. Everyone that we can help is our neighbor.

If we really love God, we love other people, too. If we do not love other people, it shows that we do not really love God!—Mina A. Young.

The Great Canadian Naturalist

Jack Miner—Lover of Birds

Myrna Lanktree

From an early age Jack Miner was impressed by the wonders of nature, especially in bird life. His heart was filled with a love for God, mankind, and all God's creatures. In 1904 he started caring for birds by giving them a sanctuary on his farm near Kingsville, Ont., and protecting them. He continued to feed the birds who found shelter there, until the morning before his death, on November 3, 1944.

At the time of his death, Jack Miner ranked fifth in fame in the American continent. Following one worldwide hook-up, Mr. Miner received letters from 65 countries. It has been stated that Jack Miner spoke to larger audiences from the lecture platform than any other person. All his efforts were directed to influencing public opinion in the need of protecting our birds.

Jack Miner practiced what he preached. His main interests were the Canada goose, the purple martin, the robin, swan, woodpecker and swallows. He destroyed the natural enemies of the birds, and is considered to have protected more birds than the game wardens.

To the young people of the community, Jack Miner was known as "Uncle Jack." They loved to visit the sanctuary and play ball on the field he had provided. Often they would gather around him and listen to the fascinating stories of wild life he would tell.

Mr. Miner was a sincere Christian and, for many years, he taught a boys' class in the local Sunday School. It was said of him that he carried his religious principles in all his daily living. Many times Jack Miner testified, "Had I not taken God into partnership and give Him first place, my sanctuary would never have been a success, and I owe everything to Him."

The first tags from the North were brought to Mr. Miner by a missionary who had not had a furlough for 25 years. He told Mr. Miner that the Bible verses on the tags had started a revival amongst his people. This missionary had used the Bible verses as texts for his sermons. Interest in the texts on the tags had been sufficient to cause a large attendance at church. Later the missionary gave Bible pictures in payment for the tags and many pictures were provided by Mr. Miner for this purpose. Jack Miner regarded the feeding of the birds and banding them with a Gospel message as a means of providing food for the body and soul of the native peoples.

The proclamation of National Bird Life Week during the week of Jack Miner's birthday, April 10, is a public recognition of his efforts towards bird conservation. On the Silver Jubilee of King George V, Jack Miner was chosen to represent Canada in a worldwide broadcast. He was appointed an officer of the Order of the British Empire for the greatest achievement in conservation in the Commonwealth.—The Young Soldier.

THE LOVE OF GOD

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

The love of God "... shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us" (Romans 5:5) produces love for one another. If we are saved and filled with the Holy Ghost, there is a sacred nearness that the world knows nothing about. It puts something into our fellowship that makes us rejoice when we are assembled together.

Week after the third Sunday in June when the Ministers' Conference of the Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina were in annual session at Cragmont, Black Mountain, North Carolina, the love of God was manifested in an unusual way. It seemed that the joy of heavenly fellowship reached the highest degree ever in our history of fellowship at the Assembly. Every speaker who was on the program was in touch with the love of God. This writer received such a blessing that he felt as if it would be a pleasure to erect more buildings on that mountain and enlarge our attendance and make our stay longer each year. This can be done if we ministers will make it so.

This year we missed several of our brethren who have attended in the past. We found that they were detained in revival work in their churches or neighboring churches. Instead of conducting revivals, we feel that it would be better for our denomination for our churches to send their pastors to the Ministers' Conference. The church can easily pay the expense of their pastor to the Ministers' Conference. The little church that I serve sent me this year. This was on their own free will and accord. I did not ask for it. It was my birthday gift. I was 85 years old the day the conference convened.

ORIGINAL

We find that the Original Free Will Baptist Denomination in North Carolina is more than 200 years old; for instance, the Central Conference celebrated its 215th annual session last year. We quote the statement made on the front cover: "Minutes of the 215th Annual Session of the Central Conference of the Original Free Will Baptist Church of North Carolina Convened with Friendship Church, Greene County, Nov. 6, 7, 1963."

The date of the Central Conference is an established fact that the Original Free Will Baptist Church is at least 215 years old in North Carolina; however, it is conceded that there were churches in North Carolina of the Free Will faith prior to 1727, but definite records are not given. But it is definitely set forth that the Central Conference is the oldest organized body of Free Will Baptists in the United States that we have any record of. But there are organizations two or three years old which claim to be Original Free Will Baptists. A son might jump up and say, "I am the original John Doe," but saying it would not make it so.

THE ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS

OF NORTH CAROLINA

The Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina, along with others, have kept the Free Will Baptist Press alive for more than 80 years. They are the owners and supporters of the Free Will Baptist Children's Home at Middlesex, North Carolina. The State Convention elects the board of directors of the Home. It also elects the board of directors of Mount Olive Junior College, which it owns.

Cragmont Assembly, Inc., is owned and controlled jointly by the State Convention, the Woman's Auxiliary State Convention, the State League Convention, and the State Sunday School Convention, with an equal number of directors from each state body.

In our mission activity we are connected with the Arizona-Mexico Missions at Nogales, Arizona, with the Rev. John B. Elliston as director.

The above information is given because of the fact that very often someone asks, "Why the difference in two Originals?" The North Carolina group is not a member of the National because of the fact that the National requested us to repudiate our form of government which we refused to do by a large majority vote.

We have our own Statement of Faith and Discipline that we have had for partial guidance for two centuries or more. We do not anticipate "junking" this discipline in the near future. We may add more institutions for the ongoing of our denomination, which may call for some revision of our Discipline.

GROUND BREAKING

I had the happy privilege of attending the ground breaking on the campus of Mount Olive Junior College on June 28, where I saw and had fellowship with a goodly number of people who were and are deeply interested in Christian education; and because of this interest they were present for this dedication of the first 50 acres of land purchased for the erection of new educational buildings. Those who attended seemed to love one another as they talked of the future prospects of having a Christian liberal arts college where our youth can obtain an education that fits them for a useful life in helping to make this world a better place to live.

This writer is happy to tell our youth that we have an educational institution that is accredited both by the State of North Carolina and by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

I pray that we Free Will Baptists will pray for and support with our finance Mount Olive Junior College. This manifestation of support will show our youth that we desire for them an education that will make them more efficient in useful vocations of life and prepare them to be better ministers and missionaries to carry the message of salvation to a lost and sinful world.

In 1909, Jack Miner started banding the birds and, in 1914, after purchasing a Scripture calendar from a Salvationist he commenced to use Scripture texts on the other side of the tags which contained his name and address. Jack Miner described the event as follows: "Early one morning it came, like a star shooting across heaven. It was God's guidance and I was impelled to stamp a Scripture text on the goose and duck bands. From that time on I felt the help of God, and I knew that my tagging system was perfected."

Had it not been for the Scripture verses Jack Miner would never have enlisted the co-operation of the missionaries in the vast Canadian Northland. The Indian and Eskimo hunters killed the birds and took the tags to the nearest missionary for him to interpret. They were regarded as messages from God.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

QUESTION: I have always wanted to be a pleasant person, taking whatever my lot is and trying to be happy over it, and especially when it might affect someone else. But now things seem so out of line that I wonder if I am becoming an unhappy grouch and if my life is influencing others in an undesirable way. My husband is gone a lot and the children seem to have forgotten what obedience and respect mean, or at least they never seem to show it to their parents. The servants who are supposed to do most of the work around the house are so unreliable that it is pitiful. They break, and make useless most expensive things, and do not even have the courtesy or consideration to report the damage, most of the time, until I discover what has happened and then they act as though nothing is wrong but rather that I am a fault-finding, inconsiderate creature when I report having discovered the result of their carelessness. I am sure that honest, respectable people did not so act when I was younger. What is the answer and what is the solution?—Mrs. E. G. C., Illinois.

ANSWER: I feel that the Bible gives the answer to such conditions as you describe, and that most of us are aware of as now dominating the scene in most homes. It (the Bible) tells us what to do regardless of what may be our social, political, and economic status in life. Servants are to know and correctly fill their place as servants. Christian servants may gain lessons from the good service they render earthly lords and thereby make better servants of the Lord, who is in heaven. "Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God: And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ. But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons" (Colossians 3:22-25).

Then the Bible does not leave the question here; but the next verse, which is the first verse in the next chapter, advises masters how they are to treat their servants; for God knew that there would be those of each class exercising misconduct in behalf of the other. "Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven. Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving" (Colossians 4:1, 2). I have both known and read of ideal situations existing in a household where there was servant-master relations carried out correctly.

The story of the Queen of Sheba's visit to Jerusalem, and her interview with King Solomon, reveals such a happy relationship between the wisest king on earth and his servants. "And when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the LORD, she came to prove him with hard questions And when the queen of Sheba had seen all Solomon's wisdom, and the house that he had built, And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel, and his cupbearers, and his ascent by which he went up unto the house of the LORD; there was no more spirit in her. And she said to the king, It was a true report that I heard in mine own land of thy acts and of thy wisdom. Howbeit I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard. Happy are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom" (1 Kings 10:1, 4-8).

My mother's aunt told us of her father freeing three slaves that his wife's father gave him as a wedding present, and of these slaves begging him to let them stay with him as they were supposed to do, but of his refusal to own slaves. Then the slaves asked him to build them a house near his, which he did. These young negroes stayed at their former owner's house after they had a house prepared for them, more than at their own, and regularly volunteered to do the chores they did while they belonged there. If people on this earth would only commit themselves to Christ and allow love instead of hate to prevail in all they do, most of their problems of every kind and nature would be much easier to solve.

There is every indication in the Scriptures that King Solomon and his servants loved each other and respected the rights and position, each of the other. The actions and attitudes of such servants as yours and the behavior of most children of today indicate the fact that the time of our Lord's return is drawing near. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Timothy 3:1-5).

God's Word in many sections of the Bible admonishes children to honor and obey their parents; and it promises them health, happiness, and length of days if they obey this divine instruction. "Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee" (Exodus 20:12). "For Moses said, honour thy father and thy mother; and, whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death" (Mark 7:10). The Epistles, if anything, suggest to children that they exercise more care and love in the obedient walk than they are to exhibit before their parents. "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise; That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth" (Ephesians 6:1-3). "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord" (Colossians 3:20). Of course the Bible is fully as prolific in its instructions to parents in their duty

THE NEIGHBORS

Enola Vastine Feldman

GRACE TOLMAN sighed. "I guess all we can do is ask the Baters to come."

"Baters!" Jenny stopped kneading the bread in surprise. "Who wants the 'show-off Baters' to come?"

"Pastor Brown said last time he was going to change his circuit if he couldn't reach at least 30 people here at Lonesome Pine."

"There were only 17 three weeks ago, and 21 the time before," remembered Jenny. "But the Baters! Why they wouldn't come if we did ask them. Or if they did it would likely be just to cause trouble."

Grace shuddered. The spring term of school had not been the same after the Baters began attending. The two older boys who were in her class had made Grace miserable. On the last day of school they had slipped a live mouse into her coat sleeve.

Jenny suddenly grinned. "Go ahead and ask them. They'll probably bring a skunk along." Grace agreed. "But they are our closest neighbors. I guess we should try to be friends. If we have to go clear to The Bluffs for monthly meeting, it would mean a two-day trip."

"Father wouldn't listen to that," Jenny sobered. "I guess we'll just have to ask the Baters." Grace's eyes lifted to the hills. A lazy column of smoke drifted to the right. Evidently the Baters were doing their baking today, too. Or did they know how to bake? Growing up as they were without a mother's care perhaps they just didn't know how to act or do for themselves. An idea began to grow in Grace's mind. She didn't like the "show-off" Baters. In fact, she was afraid of the boys, but the girls could be rather sweet. Perhaps she could make friends with them if she tried hard enough. She'd ask Mother if she thought her plan would work.

Every day that week, Grace rode her horse over the hill toward the Baters' place. Jenny and the younger children begged her to tell them what was going on. Grace would only shake her head. "Wait until Sunday."

Sunday was a beautiful day. The Tolman family packed the spring wagon full of goodies and set out for Lonesome Pine to share a picnic lunch with their neighbors and the minister who came this way once a month.

The Dales already had a blanket spread in the shade of the tree. As the Tolmans unloaded their wagon, the five Lanters drove up in a shower of dust. Grace helped her mother with the food, but her eyes kept straying across the hills toward the Baters' cabin.

Presently other families arrived. Jenny nudged Grace. "I counted. There are 40 people here now. Guess we don't need the old Baters after all."

"But here they come!" Grace jumped up.

Mr. Bater and his seven children were riding on four horses. Two of the girls carried carefully wrapped parcels.

"Let me help." Grace held one bundle while the girls scrambled down. "Oh, Sarah, this smells so good," she beamed.

Sarah and Mary Bater smiled shyly. Five-year-old Lena told them solemnly, "I punched-ed it. After I wash-ted my hands. I punched-ed it real good!"

Grace saw that her father was greeting Mr. Bater. The boys were taking care of the horses. She drew the three girls into the circle with Jenny and their friends. "I want you to see what the Baters brought," she said. "Unwrap it, Sarah."

"It's not so much." She fumbled with the cloth. "But we never had no one to show us how to do nothin' before."

"Why, those are beautiful loaves of bread," beamed Mrs. Tolman. "I must have a big slice."

"Count me in on that, too," Pastor

Brown stepped up to shake hands. "You girls must be fine cooks."

Two little Baters shuffled their feet at the praise, but Lena accepted it as her just due. "I punched-ed it," she reaffirmed.

When the meal was finished, Pastor Brown began the service. There was hymn singing as well as preaching.

"Those children even know the songs," marveled Jenny.

"Sh-h-h." Grace tried to silence her, but Lena piped up. "Grace sing-ed us, to. We punched-ed and sing-ed."

As the Tolman family started homeward that night, the three Bater girls rode in their wagon until the trail forked toward the Bater cabin. Mr. Bater reined in so the youngsters could climb on the crowded ponies for the remainder of the ride home.

"We're surely glad to have had you at the meeting today," Father Tolman assured the younger man.

"We were pleased to come. Your girl, Grace, is a born teacher. We appreciate her help this week."

"Well," said Jenny when they were out of earshot. "So that's what you've been doing over at the 'show-off Baters'—teaching them to cook and sing. They acted real nice today."

Grace nodded, her eyes shining. "I tried to help them," she agreed, "but I think they taught me more than I did them. Those children hardly ever fuss among themselves and Sarah showed me how to make the sweetest dolls out of corn husks. The boys have taught their dog about a dozen tricks. The family is coming over some night soon just to visit."

"The boys, too?" Jenny drew back in alarm.

"Of course, the boys, too. They act just as nice as anybody when you get to know them." Grace smiled. "In fact, I think they are going to be about the best neighbors we ever had."—Junior Journeys. (Adapted).

Grandfather's Plum

YOU mustn't take any." Mother pointed to the plum tree. "They're Grandfather's. He wants them for jam."

Every morning Julia went to the tree. She liked to watch the plums grow big and blue as the days went by. It was fun spending the summer on Grandfather's farm. There were so many interesting things! One day cousins came to visit. "Julia will show you where things are," Grandfather told them.

But soon they were finding things for themselves. Mary found a bird's nest in the grass. "A honey tree!" called John. "Over here!"

Every one ran to look high up where buzzing bees flew in and out a hole. Not even Walter dared climb that tree! "Come," he said, in a big cousin way. "Let's look for something else." He went ahead and the rest followed. Suddenly he stopped.

"Whew! Plums."

In a moment he was up the tree shaking them off. "Don't," cried Julia. "They're Grandfather's. He wants them for jam!"

"He won't care if we take a few." Walter picked one and threw it at her.

"But Mother said not to!"

"Maybe she thought you'd get a tummy ache," Walter laughed, the others laughed, too, and went on eating plums.

Julia took one and bit into it. Ugh! It was sour! She spit it out and ran to the house. "Oh," she sobbed. "I didn't mind Mother and stole Grandfather's plum."

When supper came she couldn't eat.

"What's wrong?" asked Mother.

Julia didn't look up. "Oh . . . oh, nothing."

Now she'd tried to fool Mother with a lie! Tears made her hurry from the table. Mother was there almost as soon as Julia reached her room.

"Honey, something is wrong. Tell me."

"I disobeyed you, Mummy." Out tumbled the words. "I stole Grandfather's plum. Then I told a lie to keep you from knowing something was wrong. . . . I'm sorry. Will you forgive me?"

"Of course, dear. I know you're sorry. But you must ask Grandfather to forgive you. I'll call him." Grandfather, too, was willing to forgive a girl who was really sorry.

"Now you're ready to ask God to forgive you," Mother said.

"But I broke His commandments. I sinned. There's a big cloud between God and me!" Julia was sobbing again.

"Tell Him you're sorry just as you told Grandfather and me." She knelt at Mother's knee. In a moment the cloud was gone. A happy feeling came into her heart. God had forgiven her, too. Now she was ready for a good, big supper.—The Canadian Free Methodist Herald.

Woman's Auxiliary

Baptist Church met for its regular monthly meeting Monday night, July 6, at the church. The meeting opened with the group's singing "O Zion, Haste," followed with prayer by Mrs. Estelle Boyd. The president, Mrs. Jean Deal, welcomed the sixteen members and two visitors who were present. The program Scripture was taken from Luke 14:15-24.

Miss Winnifred Averett gave a very interesting program on the subject, "Our Neighbor 'Round the Corner." The meeting adjourned with the auxiliary benediction.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Jean Wilson and Mrs. Maggie McLawhorn.

A Dispute

A venerable minister preached a sermon on eternal punishment. The next day it was agreed between some thoughtless young men that one of them should draw him into a dispute with the intent of making fun of him and his doctrine. The joker accordingly went and commenced by saying, "I believe there is a small dispute between you and me, Sir, and I thought I would call this morning and settle it."

"Oh," said the clergyman, "what is it?"

"Why," said the other, "you say that the wicked will go into eternal punishment and I do not think they will."

"Oh," said the minister, "if that is all, there is no dispute between you and me. If you turn to Matthew 25:46 you will find, 'And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.' The dispute is between you and the Lord Jesus, and I advise you to go immediately and settle it with Him."—The Evangelist.

not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me" (Proverbs 1:23, 24; 26-28).

As never before, 14-year-old Harry felt the pangs of his guilt before God. He saw what he had been doing. As soon as he could manage an exit, he hurried home to the privacy of his room.

He arrived after midnight and turned immediately to his Bible. First he turned to Romans 3, a chapter Mr. Munro had asked him to read. Then he turned back to John 3 and read about the new birth. He knew this chapter by memory but this time the words stuck to his heart. His fingers moved over John 3:16 and "whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," and verse 18, "He that believeth on him is not condemned."

Then he declared aloud, "I believe, Lord. This verse says I'm not condemned if I believe."

But he felt no different. He read the verses over again. This time he said as resolutely as he knew how, "Lord, I rest on Thy promise. I do now take Christ as my Saviour and because Thy Word says so, I know I have eternal life."

At long last, Harry Ironside had been "born again."

The years ahead were fruitful ones for Harry Ironside. He became known around the world for his skill in Bible exposition. For many years he was pastor of the great Moody Memorial Church in Chicago. He wrote over 20 popular commentaries on books of the Bible and authored dozens of other booklets and Gospel tracts. But in all of his sermons and writings he never grew tired of telling of how "Harry, lad was born again."—Selected.

FOR AUGUST 2

God's Covenant With His People

LESSON TEXT: Exodus 19:3-5; 20:1-4, 7, 8, 12-17

MEMORY VERSE: Mark 12:33

I. INTRODUCTION

Our lesson today depicts a crucial turning point in the development of the Hebrew nation. It deals with a covenant formed between God and Israel. Through the giving of the law, God made known to man his duties to God and to his fellowmen.

Christians today are also living under a covenant established between themselves and God. It is required of us that we accept and serve His Son; and, of course, this can be done only through the exercising of faith. If we do these things, God has promised to be with us in our labors, has promised us eternal life, and, in addition to this, has promised us a richer and more abundant life.

Though we term this the covenant of grace, it carries in its wake many responsibilities. Though we are not under the law, and thus do not serve through necessity, we find that our obligations to God and to our fellowmen are more binding than those of the law, for ours are dictated by the Spirit of God that dwells within us.—Senior Quarterly (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. God called to Moses and announced to him the divine purpose (vv. 3, 4).

2. God's covenant with His people was prefaced by a command to obey (v. 5).

3. The commandments were introduced by a proclamation of God concerning Himself (vv. 1, 2).

4. The first commandment excludes all gods except Jehovah (v. 3).

5. The second precept prohibits the making of any image or likeness of anything in the universe (v. 4).

6. All vain use of God's name is forbidden (v. 7).

7. One is to labor six days, but he is to rest and worship on the seventh (v. 8).

8. The fifth precept orders honor, respect, and obedience to parents (v. 12).

9. Murder, adultery, stealing, and false witnessing are prohibited by the commandments (vv. 12-16).

10. Covetousness—all manner of inordinate desires—is prohibited by the tenth precept (v. 17).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. "Before the delivery of the Law in the mount the people were prepared by special commandment. For three days they purified themselves and then led by Moses they came to the lower part of the mount where they were to remain. Under no condition were they allowed even to touch it. The Lord descended in a flame of fire and proclaimed in loud tones the Ten Commandments to all the people. The frightened people fled and then insisted that Moses alone talk with God. Accordingly Moses went into the mountain alone and God gave to him the detailed 'Law of Moses.' The decalogue was given to him on tablets of stone which were later to be entrusted to leaders of the Israelites. During this time instructions were given to Moses for the construction of the Tabernacle and the Ark of sacred chest."—The Heart of Hebrew History.

2. It was a Christian sailor's first night on a lonely South Pacific island. He yearned for fellowship with God and His people. Following three other sailors who carried Bibles he came to a hut where 33 men had assembled. The sailor recalled, "The order of the service was simple. We sang hymns. Newcomers were recognized and welcomed. Testimonies were heard. Scripture verses were quoted. The Christian soldiers and sailors did not greet one another with 'GI Joe' or 'Mate,' but by the endearing word 'Brother!' How precious and meaningful that word was

A missionary became greatly interested in the conversion of a Brahman. The Brahman had seen too much grasping greed among merchants and government officials from so-called Christian nations. He listened with respect to the missionary. At the end of the conversation he placed a little image and a gold coin on a table. He wrote something on a slip of paper and placed it beside the image. Then he wrote on another slip of paper and placed it beside the gold coin. He said to the missionary, "Read these." The note beside the image read, "Heathen idol." The note beside the gold coin read, "Christian idol."—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. All the thousands of Hebrews who had been born in Egypt and knew life only as slaves were now free people moving toward a homeland of their own. The people understood very little of God and of worship, for their stern masters had left little time for such activities.

Now it was necessary for God to provide a means whereby these people could be governed justly and could worship God properly. So it was that God called Moses to Mount Sinai and gave him the law as the basis for the covenant relationship with God. The covenant relationship, as the focal point of the law, can be pictured in simple form.

God was to be central in the life of His people. God called the Israelites to Him to be His special people. God's people were bound to Him by the law, which God gave through Moses. The law not only bound the Israelites to God; it also excluded other people from this special relationship.

Some of these same principles apply under the new covenant established by Christ. But one very important change has been made. The gospel is for all men in all ages. The exclusiveness of the gospel.—Standard Commentary.

4. It is well to remember that our lesson today deals with a covenant which God made with His people. The Ten Commandments are part of this covenant. Just what was the nature of this covenant God made with His people?

First, it was a mutual agreement. God took the initiative, but He awaited man's response. What God promised to do for Israel was conditioned upon their obedience. They had the freedom to say "No" to God and take the consequences.

One of the serious problems of the Church today is a hyper-Calvinism when we were in a strange land thousands of miles from home. Although total strangers to one another, we greeted each other with a smile, an outstretched hand and a hearty 'Welcome, Brother!' " which teaches that we are God's people and will receive the blessings from God as His children regardless of what we do. We are a covenant people which means that the covenant for us is void unless we live up to our part which is obedience.

Second, a covenant carries obligations. Once we accept God's conditions, we are obligated to live up to them. The Christian religion is a relationship. This relationship has to do with our relationship to God, to ourselves, and to others. It is the quality of the relationships in our lives that indicate the kind of persons we are. But no relationship can exist without a sense of obligation.

Third, a covenant has a purpose. God's covenant with Israel served a profound purpose. In return for God's guidance and presence, Israel was to be a repository for the Word and bear witness to Him. Christians today have the same obligation and serve the same purpose if they are true to their obligations.—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

to their posterity. "Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged" (Colossians 3:21). "And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" (Ephesians 6:4).

The Scriptures describe the end of this age as being a time of lawlessness, when the servant-lord, the parent-child, and the ruler-subject relation will be abnormal. "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; And shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth" (Matthew 24: 45-51). "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like: He is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it: for it was founded upon a rock" (Luke 6: 46-48). "Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you. Verily, verily, I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them" (John 13:13-17).

ST. MATTHEW 10

24 He said unto them, Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn.

25 But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist'

The Rev. W. Burkette Raper, Snow Hill, North Carolina, has accepted the invitation to become president of Mount Allen College, Mount Olive, North Carolina. In accepting the invitation, Mr. Raper stated: "I accepted this offer because I believed it was the will of God that I should, and I believe the College to be a necessity for the permanent growth and stability of our denomination."

The Rev. Fred A. Rivenbark, pastor of Sherron Acres Free Will Baptist Church, Durham, North Carolina, has accepted the pastorate of the Fairmount Park Church, Norfolk, Virginia. He will begin his duties with the Norfolk church on September 1, 1954.

This is Rivenbark's third pastorate of the Fairmount Park Church. It was under his pastorate that the church began the construction of the $100,000 building which they occupied last Easter.

From 'The War Cry'

"What I say does not matter. My influence is only a drop in the bucket!" Have you ever heard that said, or felt that way yourself?

Well, do not be too sure of that, it all depends on what the drop is and what is already in the bucket. One little drop of water falling into a bucket of acid may cause an explosion. One drop of germ culture may change the contents of the bucket in a few hours. A speck of yeast introduced into dough will leaven the entire mixture. One drop of disinfectant may neutralize a whole bucket of poisonous material.

A "drop in the bucket" may be of very great importance in the results it achieves.

Editorial—

LIBERALISTIC TRENDS

In last week's editorial, we gave a definition of the term "liberalism." We found that religiously it is a "movement in modern Protestantism emphasizing intellectual liberty and the spiritual and ethical content of Christianity."

The opposite of liberalism is fundamentalism. It is defined as "a movement in twentieth century Protestantism emphasizing as fundamental the literal inerrancy of the Scriptures, the second coming of Jesus Christ, the virgin birth, physical resurrection, and substitutionary atonement."

The Free Will Baptist denomination has, since its early beginnings, been recognized as a fundamental denomination. We believe those things referred to in the above definition. This has given us a distinctiveness in the Christian world. Although the word "fundamental" has been abused and misunderstood, Free Will Baptists should count it a blessing to be called fundamentalists. So far as we are personally concerned, we would cast our lot with those who are thus called, at any time, in preference to the liberal, or the liberalistic sympathizer. Certainly, however, we do not want our fundamentalism to reach the point of sectarianism or religious bigotry. To allow this to happen would be equally as dangerous as extreme liberalism.

We believe that liberalism is marked by definite trends or traits. We must be aware of these trends that we might guard against them. In the first place, liberalism is marked by a lifting, or loosening of moral standards. If nothing more, there is an attitude of complacency regarding moral issues and conditions.

We know that there are social changes and adjustments that we make from one generation to the next. This, however, does not necessitate the changing of moral values and concepts. Christians cannot afford to adopt the philosophy, "anything goes," to any degree.

Next, liberalism is marked by a turning from the preaching of the Cross to a social gospel and to do-better sermons. We realize that there are social aspects of the gospel that cannot be ignored, especially in this day and age. The real purpose of the Church, and the very heart of the minister's preaching, is the presentation of Christ as the Saviour of man's soul. Christ must be lifted up. He has promised to draw men unto Himself. The ministers of our day must also warn men of the consequences of sin and coming judgment. The love of God must also be proclaimed, but not to the exclusion of pending judgment if man fails to repent. Someone has said that ministers of our day have become social directors rather than preachers of the gospel.

It is not difficult for the Christian, minister or layman, or even for the Church, to become so engrossed with the promotion of denominational enterprises and institutions that the real purpose is lost. A pastor may find himself so occupied with meeting the budgets that have been set for his church that he neglects the proclamation of the Word.

Finally, liberalism is marked by a placing of human reasoning above "Thus saith the Lord." The Bible admonishes us to "Search the Scriptures." In our searching we learn the eternal truths that are written therein. The mind and heart of the skeptic, however, cannot receive these truths until he recognizes and accepts the truth that the Bible is the Word of God. We have no right to question the wisdom and mind of God. We accept it by faith. Human reasoning must conform to His will.

When reasoning takes its flight separate and apart from spiritual faith, we become easy prey for liberalistic trends. It may happen without a realization of what is taking place. It may be manifest in an indifferent attitude regarding doctrines and practices of the church. Free Will Baptists must guard against the encroachments of liberalistic trends and thoughts. God can use us in a great and marvelous way if we remain true to His Word and will.

by
L. E. PRICE

FIRST, let us look at the international crisis. Explosive developments are possible in the extreme hatred between Israel and the United Arab Republic, between Formosa and Red China, between East and West Berlin, between North and South Korea, and between whites and blacks the world over.

Russia has slowed her moon-shot effort to develop an anti-missile missile. Red China is harnessing her vast human resources in a crash program to perfect her first atomic bomb. Cuba is ever increasing her Communist infiltration of Central and South America.

While this goes on, what do we do? We boast of our nuclear bombs, nuclear submarines, a great arsenal of ICBM's, and the strongest army and navy in the world. We feel so strong and secure that we have even agreed to abandon some of our nuclear testing, largely on the enemy's terms. We are spending 20 billion to get a man on the moon. Our national debt is greater by 25 billion than the total debt of all the other nations of the world.

Let us look at our international stature. J. Edgar Hoover tells us that crime is increasing at a rate four times greater than the rate of population growth. Take the gigantic business of pornography. One authority has said, "Never before has such immoral literature been rewarded so handsomely." Look at organized crime. It is classed as our biggest business. It grosses ten percent of our national income annually—roughly $40 billion—largely tax-free. We bet nearly four billion on race tracks alone last year. Twenty-nine electrical equipment firms were found guilty of price-fixing and rigging bids. Congressional investigations into packaging found bottles with false bottoms, and boxes much bigger than their contents.

In the home there is a declining respect for, and increasing revolt against, authority. Parents are finding it harder to enforce discipline. Cuyahoga County, Ohio, showed some 6,000 divorces out of 11,000 marriages for 1962. The major cause, they say, is an excessive love of self. Billy Graham speaks of the sex-binge contemporary society is on. With advertising, TV, public schools all sex-oriented, is it any wonder chastity has become old-fashioned, and that promiscuity, venereal disease, and illegitimate births have taken its place? From one leader we read, "The real challenge, then, is to awaken youth to new values—spiritual ideals—if we wish to rear a generation with the character and courage to live life with moral integrity." Shakespeare in "Hamlet" says, "Give me the man that is not passion's slave."

Take a look at alcoholism. Surveys show that 37 percent of our high school students drink. One has said, "When, in virtually any country we can name, the cost in economic wealth, human misery, sorrow, illness, and social disruption from alcohol is beyond all possible reckoning, who would gainsay the need for greater moral progress?" It is a major cause of crime wherever it is tolerated. Consider the use of tobacco. The American Cancer Society has declared definitely that there is a positive link between lung cancer and smoking, but cigarette sales continue to soar. A poll taken in one large high school showed one-half of all boys and girls were regular smokers—many having started at eight or nine years. "With society which looks upon smoking as a measure of adulthood rather than of a psychotically immature attitude toward life, it is plain that in this matter youth is the victim of its elders." Shakespeare causes King Lear to say, "The gods are just, and our pleasant vices make instruments to plague us."

Why this decline in morals? We blame it on the aftermath of two global wars. We blame it on urban society. We blame it on the automobile and the industrial age. Are we honest when we do this? Admiral Rickover gives his view of the situation. The Protestant ethic prevailed in the previous century. The Freudian concept prevails now. "The first sees man shaping his own destiny, being governed by standards he sets himself and by his own conscience. The second sees man ruled by unconscious drives and external pressures, hence not really responsible for his own acts. His life is not shaped by himself but by his socio-economic environment. If he becomes a failure or a criminal, not he but society is to blame."

Our major enemies are complacency, conformity, apathy, tolerance, materialism, and the love of ease. To materialism Jesus said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." To apathy Paul says, "And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light." To tolerance he says, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you."

Christ refers to the body of true believers as the light of the world and the salt of the earth. He urges that we let our light shine, and guard against losing the savour of our salt. In this spiritually-starved, sinsick age there is an extreme demand for the exceptional among the "born-again." The need is for those who have sufficiently died out to self as to go beyond the call of duty whenever they find themselves in the presence of need. The need is for people who will sacrifice popularity for principle, and for ministers who are more concerned about doing a job for God than getting the applause of their congregations. The need is for people who put conscience ahead of conformity, regardless of personal risk involved.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: I have always wanted to be a pleasant person, taking whatever my lot is and trying to be happy over it, and especially when it might affect someone else. But now things seem so out of line that I wonder if I am becoming an unhappy grouch and if my life is influencing others in an undesirable way. My husband is gone a lot and the children seem to have forgotten what obedience and respect mean, or at least they never seem to show it to their parents. The servants who are supposed to do most of the work around the house are so unreliable that it is pitiful. They break, and make useless most expensive things, and do not even have the courtesy or consideration to report the damage, most of the time, until I discover what has happened and then they act as though nothing is wrong but rather that I am a fault-finding, inconsiderate creature when I report having discovered the result of their carelessness. I am sure that honest, respectable people did not so act when I was younger. What is the answer and what is the solution?—Mrs. E. G. C., Illinois.

Jesus calls upon His servants, the church members, for a loyalty that renders to Him perfect obedience. No Christian needs to be too well versed in the Scriptures and in Christian living to become aware of the fact that the Protestant church is cooling down from the point of view of all-out zeal on the part of Christian professors to perform their whole duty as required by the Bible message of the saints of today. What of the Christian fervor that caused John Knox to pray, "O God, give me Scotland or I die"; or that which made D. L. Moody, when he heard it, say, "The world yet awaits to see what God can do through one man entirely dedicated to him; by the grace of God I shall be that man"; or what has become of the revival fire and spirit that characterized the meetings of Charles Finney and John Wesley's days? The "... go ye ..." of Matthew 28:18-20 and the "... ye shall be witnesses unto me ..." of Acts 1:8, somewhere along the line we must have misinterpreted and, therefore, now fail to accept the Lordship of Jesus as in these and personal experiences so magnificently portrayed. Jesus is the Lord of this vineyard in which we should serve and which we should enjoy, not make a mock of and thereby serve ourselves or the carnal cravings of a depraved nature while seeking to lord it over some other servant; for those who thus serve God will come as a thief in the night, bringing swift judgment and eternal disaster.

Even though we are not to set dates for the Lord's coming, we can readily see the clearly outlined signs before us. While one branch of the Christian Church exhibits its disobedience in lawsuits, contending for authorities that perhaps those seeking them never deserved; such calling the names of those in the camp are not accepted as having the authority to dominate in the phase of government to which they have been elected and in some cases trying to slant the ecclesiastical machinery so as to make it function in their favor, giving them authority over those who in the accepted conventional procedures should have the final say. What else is this than cutting asunder and destroying a fellow servant? (See Matthew 21:33-43. Compare Matthew 25:40; Luke 20:9-16, and all of Romans 11.)

The Gentiles departed from God willingly and willfully, "And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient" (Romans 1:28); and likewise, as Israel did, so will the church at the end of this age. "Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded, but fear: For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee" (Romans 11:20, 21). "And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write; these things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God; I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth. Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked" (Revelation 3:14-17). It seems that these Scriptures should suffice in showing forth the fact that such symptoms as are said to permeate the behavior of the Gentiles, where their disobedience outreached the patience of God's grace, invoking His wrath upon them and that the same symptoms were manifested about the time God turned from the Jews in the mercy that He had for many generations exercised while He upheld them as a nation in spite of their wickedness and the apparent strength of larger nations that opposed them.

God's wrath was manifested against Solomon and the way he conducted himself in the latter years of his reign when he allowed Jeroboam to become ruler over ten of the twelve tribes of Israel, and for David's sake he allowed Rehoboam to rule the two tribes. Then it carried Judah into her seventy years captivity; and finally, when he allowed Titus to destroy Jerusalem, A. D. 70.

Now the church has ripened into such apostasy. The dark ages and the decadent Roman Catholic Church and its domain of evil should suffice as a warning to the Reformation, or Protestant church; but who in the church is paying attention to that? We are all too busy keeping up with worldly conventionalities, both in the church and in society in general. We haven't had time to go to the Bible and seek its teachings on how to bring up children, and children are too busy conforming to the world to take the time to see what is required of them in relation to the duty and respect they should pay their parents and as to the servants and servant's class. They are more interested in using the sentiment manifested in labor unions or anti-christian societies and foreign governments than the Bible and what it requires of them and what the rest of the brats their own ages and caliber think of them.

Parents, children, and servants who really want to do right to those with Peter, an apostle

not a pope

BY WILLIAM E. BURKE

reprinted from "Home Missions"

THE Roman Catholic church claims that Peter was the first pope, the bishop of Rome, and that his pontificate lasted for 25 years.

However, according to the history of the church in the Acts of the Apostles, taken along with Paul's epistles, we find evidence that Peter was not at Rome during all those 25 years. He was pre-eminently the apostle to the Jews, and we find him at Jerusalem, Joppa, Caesarea, Lydia, Antioch, but never once at Rome. Paul in his letters referred to more than 30 others, yet he never once makes any reference as to Peter having been in Rome. Paul would not have maintained this silence if Peter had been bishop of Rome and had been in Rome.

The Roman Catholic church relies exclusively on tradition for her teaching that Peter resided in Rome. The first reference to the supposed pontificate of Peter is made by Eusebius (270-340): He quotes it from Papias, whose writings are lost, and whom he describes as "a rude, simple person, endowed with very little judgment," (Supremacy of the Pope, p. 168), but Eusebius himself never asserts that Peter was Bishop of Rome. Not one of the fathers held the theory until Jerome in the fifth century. Even Du Pin, the Roman Catholic historian, acknowledges that, "the primacy of Peter is not recorded by the early Christian writers Justin Martyr (139), Irenaeus (178), Clement of Alexandria (190), or others of the most ancient Fathers." (Eccl. Hist., p. 313)

All the grandiose claims of the church of Rome to universal control of Christendom, to papal infallibility and supremacy rest entirely on the bold assertion that the Apostle Peter was the first pope and bishop of Rome. The whole structure of the Roman Catholic church depends on this one bold statement, which we have seen is unsupported by either history or Scripture.

Very little is known about Peter after his miraculous deliverance from prison, as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, Chapter 12. For several years he seems to have resided mostly at Jerusalem. There Paul met him when he went from Antioch to Jerusalem to discuss the question of circumcising Gentile converts. This was about the year 49, fourteen years after the conversion of Paul (Galatians 2:11). It was at this time that Paul received from Peter, James and John the right hand of fellowship, and it was agreed among them that he should preach the gospel to the Gentiles, while they continued to labor among the Jews.

Not long after this we find Peter at Antioch where he "dissembled through fear of the Jews," refused to associate with Gentile converts, and acted contrary to the decrees passed at Jerusalem. For this he was rebuked by Paul. He received this criticism in a Christian manner, no doubt, that it was deserved.

After this Peter went to Corinth, where he spent some time. The church of Corinth at that time had become divided in regard to its ministers. Some declared that they were of Paul, some of Apollos, some of Cephas and some of Christ (1 Corinthians 1:12). Later we find him at Babylon, probably New Babylon in Assyria, in the neighborhood of which many Jews had resided since the captivity. It was from this place that Peter dated his first epistle. (Converted Catholic, p. 117).

According to origin, Peter's last missionary labors were chiefly among the dispersed Jews in the regions of Pontus, Galatia, Bithynia, Cappadocia and Asia. This agrees with the statement of Paul, that while he was commissioned to go to the heathen, Peter was to be the apostle to the Jews. This also harmonizes with the action of Peter himself, who addressed his first epistle "to strangers," i.e., foreign Jews scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia.

Roman Catholics wishfully insist that Peter became bishop of Rome and was the longest-reigning pope that ever lived. But the Scriptures, instead of favoring this assertion, give testimony against it. Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans about the year 57, long after Peter was supposed, according to the Catholic contention, to be bishop of the church in Rome. Yet there is not a word in it about Peter, nor any intimation that he or any other apostle had ever been there. In the last chapter, Paul sends salutations to beloved Christian friends in Rome, mentioning each one by name and stating distinctive things about them. Not a word do we find in regard to Peter.

A few years later Paul himself arrived in Rome as a prisoner and was received with great favor by the church there: but still no mention is made of Peter. Paul dwelt for two whole years in a

Rev. Morris to Pastor Mount Olive Church

The Rev. E. C. Morris of Winterville, North Carolina, has been elected to pastor the Mount Olive Free Will Baptist Church, Mount Olive, North Carolina. He will begin his new duties on September 1.

Mr. Morris is currently pastor of the Bethany Free Will Baptist Church in Pitt County. Previous to his return to North Carolina two years ago, he was promotional secretary of the Georgia State Association of Free Will Baptists.

Central Conference Ordaining Council to Meet

The Ordaining Council of the Central Conference of North Carolina Free Will Baptists will meet Tuesday, August 11, at 2 p.m., in the conference room of the Free Will Baptist Press. Anyone interested in meeting with the council please take note of this date and time.

New Church Organized In Alabama

A new Free Will Baptist church was recently organized in Phoenix City, Alabama, with a goodly number of members. The Rev. C. D. Bass is pastor.

Community Mission Announces Revival

The newly organized Community Free Will Baptist Mission at Norwood, North Carolina, announces revival services to begin Monday, August 3, and continue through Saturday, August 8. The Rev. Walter Carter of East Rockingham will be the visiting minister. Services will begin each evening at 7:30. The Rev. Truett Dick is pastor of the mission.

Smith Has Operation

Friends of the Rev. S. A. Smith of Beulaville, North Carolina, will be interested to know that he underwent an operation at Memorial Hospital at Chapel Hill on Wednesday, July 22, and is doing fine according to reports. He requests the prayers of all his friends.

A GOOD RULE

The rule that governs my life is this: Anything that dims my vision of Christ, or takes away my taste for Bible study, or cramps my prayer life, or makes Christian work difficult is wrong for me, and I must as a Christian turn away from it. This simple rule may help you to find a safe road for your feet.—J. W. Chapman.

The Final 1964 Cragmont Youth Opportunity

The Abundant Life Conference, being sponsored by Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, August 10-15, offers a final opportunity for young people who may have been unable to go to earlier conferences to enjoy the blessings of a week at the assembly. The Rev. L. E. Ballard and the Rev. Joe Ingram will be co-directors, with Mr. Ingram in charge of the instructional and inspirational features. The program will be similar to that of the June General Youth Conference, but there will be some special features planned especially for this conference. One of these will be the building of a large model of the Holy Land on the campus, using mountain rocks to build in the towns and colored sands to mark the rivers and seas. A program of recreation and sight-seeing trips, directed by the Rev. Wayne West, will make the week a real vacation.

For this conference, parents or adult church leaders may come along with their young people. The total cost per person for transportation, board, room, etc., will be $30. For those coming "on their own" from areas not served by the chartered bus there will be a $2 registration fee and $15 for board and room.

Several have already been registered. If time will permit, those who decide from now on to go are asked to register with the Rev. L. E. Ballard, 1225 S. Washington Street, Greenville, North Carolina (Phone PL 2-2950), either by mail or phone. However, for this conference, any who are on hand at the time and places listed below, whether preregistered or not, will be taken until bus and accompanying cars are filled.

Here is the bus schedule: Leave New Bern around 7:00 a. m.; leave Greenville around 8:00 a. m.; leave Snow Hill around 8:30 a. m.; leave LaGrange around 9:00 a. m.; leave Goldsboro around 9:30 a. m.; leave Smithfield around 10:30 a. m.

(Other stops by arrangement.)

New Occurrences at Arizona-Mexico Missions

by JOHN B. ELLISTON

I suppose that the news of most interest to all of you is that the baby of Roberto and Hermelinda arrived safely, and both mother and child are fine. It was a boy, and I understand he has been named David. If any woman's auxiliary group sees fit to send some baby clothes, please send them here, and we can deliver them to them. If you try to mail them into Mexico, the import duties will be so much that they can buy the stuff cheaper than they can pay duty.

Many shipments of used clothing have been arriving deadhead from North Carolina. They have been sent by McLean Truck Lines in North Carolina, which takes them to Chicago; and Western Gillette Truck Lines have been bringing them down from Chicago. We are deeply thankful to these companies for their generosity, and we feel sure that God will reward them for it. Please understand that this is not automatic, and that arrangements must be made with the company for each shipment.

We hope that as of the first of August we can begin a new mission work in Agua Prieta, Sonora. It is our present plan for Emiliano Lopez and family to move to Agua Prieta. However, we are trying to know the will of the Lord in the matter. We must have $50 per month for rent of a building in Agua Prieta and for providing the necessary things to begin a mission. We want all of you who read this to pray immediately that God's will be done in the matter. Then ask Him if He would have you do anything toward helping this work to come into existence. If you are going to help on this need, please designate your offering for rent in Agua Prieta. May God guide all of us.

Although it is not a new work, we have asked many times if there isn't some group which will help with the rent and utilities in Cananea. The minimum for these items is $25 per month, but we shall need upward to $50 per month to expand the work there. As you know, Roberto and Hermelinda Cruz are caring for the three missions there in Cananea. Pray earnestly to know whether God would have you help with this need. May He guide you. Your gifts can be designated for Cananea rent.

Another need is for help to Brother Guzman for rent in Magdalena and for transportation to and from Magdalena. To many of you the $5 per week that it costs him to care for the work in Magdalena doesn't seem like much, but you must remember that his salary is only a little more than $12 per week. I am sure that there are five or six of you who read this who could spare $1 per week each more easily than he can afford $5 per week.

I know that it seems to you that we are always needing something, and it is true. But there is no way by which we can promote the work of Christ here except as you, the people of God, are moved upon by His Holy Spirit to support with your finances and make the work possible. May God move upon your hearts as you pray over these needs, and may you help to fulfill the purpose for which Christ died and for which He saved you and us.

Those of you in North Carolina may send offerings to the North Carolina Missions Board, c/o the Rev. A. B. Bryan, P. O. Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513. If it is for one of these projects, or for Arizona-Mexico Missions, please so designate, so that he will know. Those of you in other states may send your offerings directly to Arizona-Mexico Missions, P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona 85621. If it is for one of these specific projects please tell us.

Please! Please! Those of you who are now sending offerings for some project, or undesignated offerings, do not take away from these purposes in order to send for one of these projects. We surely do not need a diversion of funds from one project to another. What we need is an increase in receipts. These projects are for the persons or groups that are looking for a special project to which to contribute. Those who are giving to other projects please continue to do so.

If every Free Will Baptist who reads this article were to give a minimum of $1 per month to missions the entire mission program would be multiplied greatly. Yet, it seems that $1 is such a tiny, inconsequential amount to give for the purpose for which Christ came and died, the purpose for which He established the church, the purpose for which He sent His Holy Spirit; surely no one can think himself a follower and lover of Christ and do so little for His cause. This is not sacrificial giving. This is not even giving enough that we would notice it in our daily lives, yet we give so much less that Christ must weep many tears over our callousness and hardness of heart.

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? . . ." (Lamentations 1:12).

OBITUARIES

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT MR. H. PEREANE TYSON

Our heavenly Father, who is in heaven, in His infinite love and wisdom has called home to rest the soul of our dear friend and brother in Christ, Mr. H. Pereane Tyson, who was a loyal and faithful member of Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville, North Carolina, for more than forty years. For 28 consecutive years he was superintendent of Sunday school, serving diligently with love and devotion in every way possible to promote our Lord's cause in the church and the community. At the time of his passing, he was an active member of the Board of Deacons and the Board of Trustees. We now wish to pay a loving tribute to his memory as a faithful servant of God, a loving husband, a devoted father, and a man of quiet strength. We desire to express our deepest sympathy to his wife, his daughters, and all those who share their loss.

Mr. Tyson was born December 23, 1901; and following several years of declining health, he suddenly slipped from our presence on June 12, 1964. He is survived by his wife, Louise Nichols Tyson; two daughters, Mrs. Elvy Forrest

God's People Learn To Worship

PRINTED TEXT: Exodus 25:1, 2, 8; 35:20-22; 40:12-15, 34-38

MEMORY VERSE: Psalm 95:6

I. INTRODUCTION

Between Exodus 25 and 31:11 we have the record of the directions Jehovah God gave to Moses concerning the building of the Tabernacle, the means by which, in the inevitable breach of the first covenant, Israel's relationship with Jehovah might be sustained. The directions here given comprised only the pattern of the Tabernacle, but the giving of them to Moses revealed the fact that Jehovah God had anticipated Israel's faithlessness and made provision beforehand for their failure.

In spite of Israel's unhesitating and presumptuous affirmation, "All that the Lord hath spoken we will do" (Exod. 19:8), Jehovah God knew they would fail. In His eternal foreknowledge He clearly anticipated it from eternity. And indeed, they had to fail in order that they might be allowed to prove fully what was in them of native wickedness and moral weakness. And so, in His infinite and matchless grace, Jehovah made provision in advance that their relationship with Him might be sustained by means of a mediator and the priesthood, when they would fail and break the covenant they had made with Him.

We observe that the instructions concerning the Tabernacle conclude with the emphatic reiteration of the injunction about the Sabbath. This was done for a specific purpose. The keeping of the Sabbath by Israel was a sign of their covenant relation with Jehovah and that they were a people set apart from the nations for Himself. With the reiteration of the injunction concerning the Sabbath, the Law was completed and Jehovah God gave Moses "two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God" (Exod. 31:12-18).

But alas! While Moses was still in the mount with Jehovah, Israel broke the Law and the covenant. Upon Moses' return in the midst of Israel, he saw their idolatry and degradation, and he threw down the tables of the Law and broke them beneath the mount. The breach of the first covenant had now come and through the marvelous intercession of Moses the second covenant, one of mingled Law and Grace, was established. It was under this second covenant Israel finally entered the land.—Bible Epositor.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The Lord instructed Moses to tell the people to bring a freewill offering of whatever amount they chose to Him (vv. 1, 2).

2. The purpose of the offering was to erect a sanctuary so that God might dwell among the Israelites (v. 8).

3. The Israelites departed from Moses and went immediately to get their offerings for the Lord (vv. 20, 21).

4. Both men and women gave freely of their different ornaments so that the sanctuary might be erected (v. 22).

5. Aaron and his sons were anointed as a family of priests to the Israelites (vv. 12-15).

6. The family of Aaron was to be an everlasting priesthood among the Jews (v. 15).

7. God, through the cloud, showed His approval of the work of the people in building Him a sanctuary (v. 34).

8. The glory of the Lord so filled the tabernacle that Moses could not enter into the building (vv. 34, 35).

9. The cloud served to guide the Israelites in their journeys. They traveled when the cloud moved to another location, but they stopped their journey when the cloud remained still (vv. 36, 37).

10. The pillars of cloud and fire served to guide these people in all their journeys (v. 38). — Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTH

1. "In our lesson today we have a graphic picture of the way the ancient Israelites went about building their tabernacle. This, we should remember, was the portable sanctuary in the form of a tent which Moses and the people of Israel were directed to make, that God might dwell as King among his people.

The tabernacle was thirty cubits long and ten broad. The Hebrew common cubit was about seventeen and three quarters inches long, and their so-called long cubit was almost twenty-one inches. At the center of the tabernacle was the holy of holies, within which rested the ark of the covenant. As the Israelites moved from place to place, the Levites would take the tabernacle to pieces and put it together again when they reached a new camping ground. This served as their place of worship during the period of wandering in the wilderness and for some time after their settlement in Palestine. It was finally replaced by the temple which Solomon built."—Douglass.

2. When they came out of bondage in Egypt, the Israelites were in many ways almost like children. Thus God chose to teach them in simple terms the things they needed to know about worship. They had to be shown objects that would help explain worship to them. For this purpose God designed the tabernacle and gave them instructions about how it was to be built. Since the tabernacle was to be an object lesson in worship, directions for its construction had to be specific.

The tabernacle may still serve as a helpful object lesson for us today. The large fenced court was entered through a gate at the east. Inside the gate was the huge altar of burnt offering. The great brass laver held water where priests cleansed themselves. The tabernacle itself was covered by a tent and hung with curtains all around. It contained the altar of incense, from which the sweet odor went up to heaven, just as the people's prayers went to God. The table of shewbread reminded the people of God's gift of daily bread. The beautiful candlestick was also there. In the Holy of Holies was the ark of the covenant containing the tablets on which God gave Moses the Commandments. All of these furnishings reminded the people of the laws to be obeyed and the necessity of approaching God respectfully and worshipfully, with repentance and sacrifice for their sins.

When the Israelites stopped in their travels, the tabernacle was set up in the center of the camp, a reminder that God was to be central in their lives. Let it also remind us that God should be central in our lives.—Standard Commentary.

3. The Israelites felt the need to worship and sensed a keen desire to participate in acts of devotion. It is the common lot of God's people to feel the need of worship. If you do not

BOYS and GIRLS

"SUNDAY SCHOOL BOY"

Chester Shuler

JOHN opened his eyes and blinked. At first he wondered where he was. The room was not familiar. And then he remembered! He was at Uncle Henry's house, in the big city. And it was Lord's Day morning, at that.

With a bound, John was out of the comfortable bed and getting into his best clothes. He must look his nicest when he went to the big city church. Again, he heard Mom's words, as he was leaving home, "Be real polite, John. And be sure you go to Sunday School. You know you haven't missed in three years. There's a nice, big church just about two blocks from your uncle's home," she had added.

John listened. The big house was very still. Uncle and aunt and cousin Gretchen didn't seem to be awake yet. He looked at his watch. Why—it was getting late! They would miss Sunday School if they didn't soon get moving! Maybe he had better call them—but no, that wouldn't be polite.

At home Sunday School began at nine o'clock. But, of course, they didn't have far to go in the city. Only two blocks, Mom had said. That was O. K. After another 15 minutes of silence, John began to walk around uneasily. Besides, he was hungry. And then he heard one of the bedroom doors open upstairs. Soft, padded footfalls sounded on the steps, and Uncle Henry came down. He was wearing a robe, and his hair hadn't been combed.

"Hello, there, my boy," he grinned. "What's the matter? Couldn't you sleep well?"

"Oh, yes, Uncle Henry. But it's getting—or—that is, I thought I'd better get up, or we might be late for Sunday School, or something and—."

door. Now he returned, his arms full of Sunday newspapers. He tossed the funnies to John. "Umm—" he mumbled, looking at the headlines. "Sunday School, eh? That's right—I suppose you go to Sunday School out in the country, don't you, Johnny?"

John started, and felt queer in the tummy. "Oh, yes, Uncle Henry. I haven't missed a Sunday in three years. I'm to have a nice Bible as an award from our school if I go five years without missing. I wonder, Uncle Henry," he rattled on eagerly, "if they give attendance credit cards at your Sunday School. Mom said I'm not to forget to ask for mine, so our superintendent will know I was in Sunday School today!"

Uncle Henry suddenly lost interest in the headlines. "Credit cards, eh—? Oh, I see. Yes, I've an idea they have some, Johnny. Well, now, you see—" Uncle Henry seemed to be having difficulty finding words—which was odd for a famous lawyer, John reflected. "You see, there's usually so much to be done around the house Sunday morning, and we just don't seem to make the grade, you know. But of course—" he hesitated again, and scratched his tousled head, "I know how your mom feels about such things, and I don't want you to break your record, so-o-o—You know what? I'm going to wake those gals now, and maybe—just maybe, Son—they'll decide to get ready." He bounded up several steps, then paused: "You're quite a missionary, Johnny!"

John listened. There was subdued conversation upstairs. Then banging of some doors, and soft footfalls. After a bit, Uncle Henry came bounding down again, dressed, and looking happier. John thought how much he looked like his own daddy used to look, when he "played boy" too! Soon they were eating a hurried breakfast.

John wondered why his uncle kept watching the window. He wondered, too, whether the women were going to Sunday School. But he didn't ask; maybe that would not be polite. They were just finishing breakfast, when Uncle Henry muttered: "I never thought they would do it!"

John turned and saw—Aunt Alice and pretty Gretchen coming down the stairs. Uncle Henry sprang to his feet and urged them to take a bite to eat. But they shook their heads. Gretchen was smiling at John. "Hello, there, Mr. Missionary," she joked. "May we go with you to church, please?"

John felt so happy inside, he was afraid a big tear might come into one of his blue eyes! "Oh, boy!" was all he could say—and then he wondered whether it was polite to say such things in the city!

The doings in the city Sunday School were so different from those in the little church at home that John was kept in wonderment for the next hour.

After Sunday School was over Uncle Henry asked if John would like to go to church. "Sure," he said; "but maybe they wouldn't like it—" He nodded toward the ladies.

"Oh, but 'they' would like to, John," laughed Aunt Alice.

The sermon wasn't so interesting as those at home, because he couldn't understand some of the huge words the minister used, but John enjoyed being there—and especially having his folks with him.

At the noon meal everyone seemed in good spirits. "I believe early rising agrees with us, Henry," smiled Aunt Alice. "I believe I'll go back to that ladies' class again next Sunday. They were as sociable as could be, and I discovered that some of my best friends are members, too."

"I liked the girls' class, too," cousin Gretchen said. "I never dreamed that Harriet Speece, who works with me in the office, was a member, but there she was, sitting next to me! She made me acquainted with a lot of young folks—and wants me to come back this evening to the youth meeting . . . says there are lots of nice boys come to that!"

Uncle Henry looked at John and laughed.

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

The assembly of Original Free Will Baptists on July 7 and 8, 1964, in Marianna, Florida, will go down in history as one of the greatest times of fellowship as known among the Free Will Baptists. The fellowship was, as we see it, in keeping with what the writer of 1 John 1:3 gave to us when he said, "... truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." Truly the Lord was there. I do not know what others felt; but as an humble servant of our Lord, I felt the presence of the Lord the very moment I entered the auditorium in the Chipola Junior College, where we met old friends—those seen and heard years ago—and a goodly number of God's children whom we had never met. Several came to me and said, "I've been reading 'Notes and Quotes' for many years, but never met you; but I knew who you were as soon as I saw you." Such salutations as this make us rejoice that we have been able to do a little work that has made and kept friends waiting for an opportunity to greet us in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I did not get the names of all the speakers and workers who were present to share in the fellowship that God has made possible through the interested children of God, who have brought into existence this organization, known as to now as the International Convention of Original Free Will Baptists. This organization was and is possible by ministers and laymen of the various states who connected themselves together for the promulgation of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Truly this is a connection of God's people who want a fellowship of freedom in Christ. The fellowship does not have a new doctrine, but that which has been adhered to in this area since the days of Paul Palmer; and we trust it will be accepted and shared with others until the Lord comes as promised by the Word.

We would be glad to give the names of every person who was there at Marianna; but since we do not have the list so that we can do justice to the count, we will leave the name calling off for another day. We can truly say, "Our heart was made to rejoice by the fellowship."

INGRATITUDE: A SIN!

by GRACE WHORTON
Merritt, North Carolina

As we look about us today we see many evidences of discontent. We note discontentment on the faces of people; we hear them express it; we find it even in our reading. The daily papers are permeated with the discontentment, and at the bottom of much of this lies a serious spiritual disease—the disease of covetousness.

We are a people with a perverted sense of values. One of the strongest desires of man's heart is the desire for money. We feel that if we had plenty of money all of our problems would be solved.

It is good to be ambitious and to seek the best things in life for ourselves and our loved ones, but let us be careful to place the values of life in their proper perspective.

The Scripture says, "... Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15). If we are not happy with what we have, what assurance do we have that we would be happy with more?

The cure for this disease of covetousness comes in a small package labeled "gratitude," and the prescription is free.

The dictionary defines the word gratitude as "thankful." If we thank God for the many blessings we receive each day, how can we find it in our hearts to ask for, or want, more in a material way? "Giving thanks always for all things unto God . . ." (Ephesians 5:20).

There are so many things to be thankful for. All we have to do is to look about us to see what God has provided for our good. Without sunshine and rain our existence would soon cease. The soil would eventually dry out, crust over, and become as the desert sands. Our water supply would last a short period of time. We know nothing of the pangs of hunger and thirst, yet our bodies are wholly dependent upon food and drink.

(This message was written before we received our church paper last week, so we do not aim to overlap or repeat what was said by our editor and others. We only wish that all of those who call themselves Free Will Baptists could have shared the fellowship with us.)

Blessings? We do not have to meditate very long to realize how dependent we are on God. The old idiom, "The best things in life are free," is full of meaning.

Therefore let us be thankful for all things, realizing that we deserve no favors from God, but claiming His promises that "... all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28).

Let us remember the advice of Paul to "... be without covetousness; and be constant with such things as ye have: . . ." (Hebrews 13:5).

We are all saddened at his passing, but we are reminded of the words that death is the door by which we enter into eternity where we shall meet our Lord. We humble our wills before God who doth all things well, and we are grateful for Mr. Tyson's shining example of a dedicated Christian life.

We submit that a copy of this be sent to the family, a copy to be sent to The Free Will Baptist for publication, and a copy be kept for the church minutes.

There is nothing so objectionable to God as hypocrisy. . . . There is nothing the world so much admires as the finer and finest forms of hypocrisy.—Soren Kierkegaard.

by ROBERT S. BEATTY
Winston Salem, North Carolina

Someone has said that alcohol will remove stains from summer clothes. This may be true, but I know by self-experience that alcohol or strong drink will remove much more than that. It will remove the summer clothes as well, and also spring clothes and autumn clothes, and the money to purchase new clothes. It will remove school books from the arms, hope from the hearts of boys and girls, and laughter from their faces. It will remove happiness from the home and then remove the possibility of its ever returning again. I know, personally, what alcohol will do.

Friends, I'm sorry to say, that last statement really hurt me to my heart because I must confess that alcohol and sin has separated me from my home, my lovely wife, and twelve children—six boys and six girls. Alcohol has sent me to prison for life. It is sad but true that alcohol and sin will remove all that is good. If it had not been for alcohol I would not have been guilty of my crime.

Sometimes we try to hold up alcohol and put the blame on something else because we are not willing to give up alcohol or its false happiness, but now I know better. Sin and alcohol have no excuse. Alcohol will make you do many things that you would not do without it. I know this is true.

I have prayed and thought it over. I keep asking myself why or how I could do such a thing, how I could destroy the home that I loved so much. The only answer is sin and alcohol.

What has happened is sad, but I have found a few words of light. King David, when he lost his child, said, ". . . can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me" (2 Samuel 12:23).

My daily goal now is to teach men the way to Christ so that they will not fall into the trap of sorrow that I have fallen into, as well as thousands of others all over the world, through sin and alcohol.

I have now heard the Word of God, and faith has been given to me as taught in Romans 10:17. I have believed and confessed with my mouth that Jesus Christ is the Son of God as taught in 1 John 5:1 and Romans 10:9. I have repented and my sins have been blotted out as in Acts 3:19.

I have confessed Christ before men as taught in Matthew 10:32 and Luke 12:8, 9. I have forgiven those who have wronged me as taught in Matthew 6:14, 15 and Mark 11:25. I have repented and been baptized in the name of Christ.

My friends, I end my message by saying that the Holy Spirit is the sure way to keep us from sin and alcohol. I am thankful to God for His forgiveness.

Gifts to Mount Olive College Set Record

Financial support to Mount Olive College for the 1963-64 fiscal year which ended June 30 has set an all-time record.

Charles Harrell, college treasurer, reported that gifts included $214,384 in cash, $8,904 in real estate, $8,300 in bonds, and $1,850 in stocks, for a total of $233,438.

Leading contributor was the Free Will Baptist denomination, sponsor of the college, which gave $128,032 in cash, as compared with $71,221 one year ago. The Mount Olive College Area Foundation contributed $74,801 in cash, $8,300 in bonds, and $8,904 in real estate, for a total of $92,005. Area gifts last year were $21,031.

An allocation of $4,924 was received from the North Carolina Foundation of Church-Related Colleges. Other friends and foundations gave $6,626 in cash and $1,850 in stocks.

The above gifts were designated as follows: development of new campus, $165,363; general operations, $49,634; and designated purposes $18,441.

"We are profoundly grateful to our many friends who helped to make last year the most successful in the history of the college," President W. Burkette Raper declared. "Our gifts this year are more than double those of any previous year," he reported.

Ayden, N. C.—The AFC of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church met on Friday, July 10, at 4 p.m., in the home of Diane Roach for its monthly meeting. The meeting was called to order by the president, Diane Briley. The opening song, "He's Able," was followed with prayer by Nancy Garris. The group repeated the watchword taken from Psalm 143:8-10 and the motto taken from Ephesians 4:15. Mary Lou Jarvis read the devotional taken from Matthew 5:27-30 and Romans 13.

During the business session it was agreed to purchase a gift for Bruce Jones who had been a patient in the hospital. The Danny Duzits the AFCs had sent for had come and were distributed to the members after the meeting for them to sell. The treasurer reported that $1.22 had been received at this meeting, making a balance in the treasury of $19.70. The secretary called the roll with thirteen members being present.

The following took part in the program: "Introduction," Diane Roach; "Keep Your Body Pure," Diane Briley; "Keep Your Mind Pure," Delores Briley; "Keep Your Heart Pure," JoAnn Jones; "Conclusion," Debbie Stocks. The closing prayer was offered by Vicki Jones.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. George Roach.

Wilson, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Calvary Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting on Tuesday night, July 21, at the home of Mrs. Allen Bartlett. The program opened with the group's singing "In the Service of the King." The president, Mrs. Harvey Pittman, read the Scripture for the evening and prayer was offered by Mrs. Allen Bartlett. The program, "Our Neighbors 'Round the Corner," was presented by Mrs. Mark Taylor, program chairman, assisted by Mrs. L. G. Etheridge, Mrs. Paul White, Mrs. Vera Bass, and Mrs. John Day. The program closed with the singing of "Rescue the Perishing" and prayer by Mrs. Alvin Murray.

The usual business session was held, and Mrs. Leslie Harrell closed the meeting with prayer.

The hostess served refreshments to the members present.

Rickover says, "Mediocrity excuses itself as the normal and healthy state of mankind." Mediocrity in spiritual matters keeps the body of Christ weak, and makes us easy prey to the encroachments of materialism and complacency.

Paul says, "Quit you like men, be strong." Let's rise to the occasion. Throw off the shackles of lethargy, and minister to the spiritual hunger surrounding us.—The Free Methodist.

Questions & Answers

whom they have these relations have my most sincere sympathy, for to act right in this capacity requires that they stand alone in many major issues; for we have developed the kind of anti-God, anti-decent society that Lot was faced with just before the overthrow of Sodom and the kind that forced God's wrath upon the ungodly antediluvians.

This is a time for all of us to think seriously; and if we have not already done so, it's time to flee to Christ and cast our all upon Him, making no reserves. He, now as when here upon earth, calls upon us to "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:28-30).

feel this need, you are in a dangerous condition. It may be that you have become self-righteous and have a feeling of self-sufficiency.

Why is worship so important to God's people? Why do we urge people to worship and maintain worship services in our churches?

First, worship is important because worship means confession. All God's people know how far short they fall of God's standard of conduct as set for us in Jesus' example. Worship is a time of confessing our sins and asking God's forgiveness.

Second, worship is important because worship means praise and adoration. In our worship services we express the feelings of praise that are within our hearts through hymns, prayers, and the offering. These feelings need expressing for our good and God's glory.

Third, worship is important because worship is thanksgiving. There is something wrong with the Christian who does not like saying "Thank You" to God.

Finally, worship is important because it is commitment. The climax of the service is the quiet resolve to make our lives count for God.—Advance Quarterly (F.W.B.).

ed, as he slipped him a second hunk of chocolate cake instead of eating it himself. "Well, Mr. Missionary Boy, it looks as though you can report to your mom that you not only went to Sunday School, and were polite as could be, but you also did a lot of good among the 'city heathen relatives' of yours. For your Uncle Henry's sure going back to that men's Bible class again next week—even if the women do forget to go."

"Don't worry about us, John," Gretchen laughed. "Dad will oversleep if any of us does—it won't be your cousin, I can promise you!"

"Oh, boy," gulped John. "That'll be—great!" He guessed he ought to say something more polite than that, but anyway, he felt very, very happy inside!

Being a Christian, and a Sunday School boy, was O.K. after all—even when visiting in the big city.—Gospel Herald.

Peter, an Apostle Not a Pope hired house in Rome and while there wrote several epistles to other churches. But not in a single one of these do we find the slightest allusion to Peter.

In view of all those, no one could believe that, at the time of Paul's writing of his last epistle, Peter had ever resided in Rome—much less had been bishop there and pope of all the churches of Christendom. As a matter of fact, the very term "pope" (papa) was applied for centuries to any bishop.

The truth is that Peter was never a bishop anywhere. He was not a bishop, but an apostle. Not only are these two offices not the same; they are distinctly incompatible. An apostle was "one who was sent forth," a missionary, a minister at large, attached to no particular church or district. He had, what Paul claims for himself, "the care of all the churches." The apostles were expressly appointed to be witnesses for Christ, in Jerusalem, in Judea, in Samaria, and to the uttermost parts of the earth. A bishop, on the contrary, was the overseer of a particular flock, decidedly restricted to his own field of labor.

It is almost degrading to deny Peter a distinguished apostleship and suppose that he was restricted to a single city like many others whose names were so unimportant that they have not even been preserved in history.

If you don't believe in cooperation, just look at what happens to a wagon when one wheel comes off.

It is not necessary to put out the other person's light in order to let your own shine.

Since returning to the editorship of the Free Will Baptist Press almost a year ago, we have made several appeals for more news and more feature articles for "The Free Will Baptist." Our appeals have not been too successful.

From time to time we have been criticized for printing articles from other magazines. Please understand that we prefer original feature articles that are written by our own people, but they are not always available. "The Free Will Baptist" is the only weekly publication in the denomination; therefore, at least eight or ten good, sound feature articles are needed each month to make it the success that it ought to be. Thus, we are trying a new approach. We are writing to different persons within the denomination asking them to write an article to appear in a certain issue. We may be calling upon you. If we do, we believe you will be greatly blessed in rendering this service and that others will be blessed in reading what you have to say.

We also need more news items pertaining to the work of our denomination. The editor, under the present arrangements, does not have the time to become a roving reporter. In fact, the publishing of news has largely been the responsibility of readers in sending it to us. In return, it is our policy to publish any news that we consider pertinent and any that will help our cause. By the same token, it is our right and privilege to reject that which we consider to be otherwise. The same is true of feature articles. If we do not have this right, then there is no need of having or being an editor.

In conclusion we once again appeal to you, our readers. To be sure, almost 4,000 readers can and will do this. Your comments about "The Free Will Baptist" will be appreciated at any time.

Editorial—

WE ARE PREOCCUPIED

Everyone is busy these days, but busy doing what? There are some things that just don't add up. This is a day of modern comforts and conveniences. The ladies of the house have electric appliances that Grandmother never dreamed of. Many of these conveniences function automatically, leaving Mother free to do many other things. The same is true in the man's world. There are few of the backbreaking chores that Grandfather had to perform. Even farming has been modernized to the point that missing a few years on the farm puts one so far behind that it's practically impossible to catch up. If a rainy season comes, there is little to worry about, for the tractor can do the work in a couple of days. The man who works in the city also enjoys many comforts. Many work in air-conditioned offices, ride to and from work in ease, and work only forty hours per week. Yet, we are too busy to visit our neighbors, too busy to visit the sick, and too busy to serve God. Something is out of focus!

Often we hear an expression similar to this, "I planned to do so and so, but I just didn't have time." The fact is that most things just will not get done if we wait until that extra time drops in our laps. In other words, there are absolutely some things that we must take time out to do. Our other duties and responsibilities will come easier if we put first things first.

Not too long ago we heard a statement that went something like this, "Americans are more concerned with the crab grass in the backyard than they are the real issues of life." What the person was saying is that Americans are preoccupied. We have built our own little backyard worlds and we do not want to be disturbed. We have our own petty interests, and we consider them to be more important than anything or anyone.

It would be beneficial if we remember that the people of Noah's day were preoccupied. They were too busy to render service unto God. They were too busy to listen to the righteous preacher's warnings. They were too busy to consider their spiritual needs; that is, until the day that Noah entered into the ark and it began to rain. Then it was too late. The people of Sodom were preoccupied with satisfying their own lusts to listen to the voice of God; that is, until fire and brimstone fell from heaven. Then it was too late.

Americans are too preoccupied to consider the serious threat of Communism. We have said that it just can't happen in "good old America." We blindly ignore the riots and mob rule. Many conscientious Americans are afraid that the Communist agitators have accomplished more for their cause than our government leaders will admit. Many of us are wondering if there is anyone who can and will do something to stem the tide of Communism.

Many parents have been so occupied that they have not had the time to be companions to their children, to help them in their problems, and too busy to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The result has been juvenile delinquency. Many have refused to make Christ the Head of the home. The result has been a generation of defiant attitudes among many youth.

Let us not despair, however, for there are still faithful saints who love God and hate evil. There are still many conscientious, industrious young people who love decency and virtue, who have high ideals and ambitions. There are still those who are willing to serve a good cause. These are not preoccupied; they are willing to become all things to all men.

And God Made Man Free

by

FRANK R. HARRISON

Pastor, Little Rock Free Will Baptist
Church, Lucama, North Carolina

THE story of the Free Will Baptist denomination is long and was formulated with a grand heritage. The background of our history and theology is found in the latter part of the sixteenth and early part of the seventeenth century. The predominant theology of this period was Calvinism, which said that the elect of God are foreordained unto eternal life and that those who are not saved are foreordained to be lost in eternity.

Original Free Will Baptists were born as a reaction against this high Calvinism and its theology. We believe the Bible teaches us that we have the freedom to choose eternal life with God or eternal death apart from God in eternity. This is the source of the term free will. God has made man with a free will to choose life or death. We are free rational agents to choose salvation or reject it. God has not foreordained anyone to eternal life or eternal death.

The term free will does not come from a freewill offering. I picked up a church envelope sometime ago, and written upon it were these words: "My Freewill Offering to _____ Free Will Baptist Church." Someone does not understand or know our history and theology! We do not believe in supporting our church by "freewill" offerings. We believe in tithing as God's method of support. The term free will is derived from our theology, not from offerings.

We believe Jesus Christ died for the sins of all men, and not just a few chosen of God while the rest are lost. The Bible says that God is "... not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9).

In the creation of man God said, "... Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness! ..." (Genesis 1:26). I believe part of this "image" and "likeness" is a thinking, rational soul, or mind. God did not make Adam and Eve as puppets, to be manipulated like a machine; rather He gave to them a mind—the power and capacity to choose right and wrong. They disobeyed and ate of the forbidden fruit because they chose to do so.

If we have knowledge, or conscience, and have no power of choice, how can we know right from wrong? If we are unable to choose, how can we be good or bad, virtuous or unvirtuous? Without freedom of will we would become mere machines; therefore, we would not be responsible for our sins; neither would we be the author of our sins. Instead, God, our Creator, would be responsible for our transgressions.

Again, if we do not have the power of choice or free will in our transgressions, why do we have civil courts to punish transgressors? If they have no choice and are not responsible for their actions, then we should not punish them. However, since we do have choice, punishment is a consequence of our action which we choose to take in transgressing the law.

We realize our freedom of choice by our consciousness of it, and often we debate within our minds what action to take in certain matters. We become Christians because we "will" or "choose" to "open the door of our heart" upon which Jesus knocks. By our own free will we open that door to let the Master in.

Nowhere in the creation story of Genesis can you find God responsible for the tragic sin of Adam and Eve. God set before them obedience to His will or disobedience to it. They chose of their own power in temptation to disobey God. As a result or consequence of that choice, they suffered the judgment of God. If they were not free to choose, then God did not judge fairly, which is inconsistent with His moral nature. Adam and Eve were turned out of the garden as a result of their disobedience—disobedience in which they exercised the freedom of will and choice.

Jacob Arminius, a Dutch theologian (1560-1629), was the first known theologian to defend and advocate this idea of "free will." He was born in South Holland October 10, 1560. His relatives were slain by the Spanish when he was a lad of 15. Some friends sent Jacob to the University of Leyden to study theology. Arminius is said to have broken "the strangle hold which high Calvinism had on the spiritual throats of the people."

After the death of Jacob Arminius a young theologian and disciple of his, Simon Episcopius, systematized Arminius' work and had it published. As

OBITUARIES

MR. JESSE W. LEE

God, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to call from among us a beloved friend and brother in Christ, Mr. Jesse W. Lee, a member and deacon of Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Rockfish Station, Route 3, Fayetteville, North Carolina.

He was 81 years of age, and he is due credit for a long life of faithful and devoted work. Brother Lee will be missed a great deal by the people who knew and worked with him in the Free Will Baptist Church.

W. H. Edwards

THE REV. ANGUS PREVATTE

Our members have been decimated by the passing of another of our beloved brothers in Christ, the Rev. Angus Prevatte; but we know that God in His heavenly place and divine knowledge knows what is best for us, His children.

Brother Prevatte was 74 years of age when called to his heavenly reward on July 24, 1964. He certainly, beyond doubt, served his Lord without considering any earthly remuneration. He will always be remembered for his long and consistent service of delivering the gospel to the poor.

Brother Prevatte served a number of churches in the Rockfish Conference of North Carolina. He also served as moderator of both union and conference assemblies. He will be greatly missed.

W. H. Edwards

MRS. ELIZABETH WILKINSON

On July 14, 1964, God called to her eternal rest Mrs. Elizabeth (Miss Lizzie) Wilkinson, age 83. She was an active member of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church in Beaufort County, North Carolina, until her health failed. Although she was unable to attend services for several years, her love and interest for the church and its spiritual welfare never lessened.

The Rev. Allen B. Bryan of Kinston, a former pastor, and one whom she loved and respected very highly because of his frequent visits with her and their fellowship through the discussion of God's Word and prayer, conducted the funeral services. He was assisted by her pastor, the Rev. A. B. Chandler, and the Rev. John Bunch of Greenville.

The following poem best describes her as I knew her, the dearest mother in all the world.

MY MOTHER

Of all the gifts from God to man,
There's one that surpasses every other;
She's a woman with a heart of gold—
It is my darling mother.

When I, only a babe of eleven months,
God took away my father,
And left alone, with two others besides,
The care of all fell on Mother.

No braver warrior in days of old
Ever fought a battle harder;
With a broken heart and cares of the
the home,
She didn't give up—my mother.

From sun to sun, each day she worked
To give us our daily bread;
Each night she taught us how to pray;
At church and Sunday school our souls were fed.

The Holy Word of God she taught
Our tender minds to read;
That as we grew our knowledge would be
Its teachings all to heed.

In sickness she was always near
To sooth away the pain;
Somehow she found the needed time;
With God's help, her loss was gain.

Just what her prayers have meant,
No human tongue can tell;
Her Christlike character and lessons taught
Have helped to save us from hell.

Although she is growing old
And her hair is turning gray;
Each day I love her more and more—
God's greatest gift to me.

Of all the love in this world,
By husband, children, sister, or brother,
There's none that can quite compare
With that of my saintly mother.

From heaven, her work here ended
And her crown of victory won;
With outstretched arms she beckons,
"Children dears, please come home."

Mrs. Edwin Roper

The Dramatic Ending

by LOY EVERETTE BALLARD

"If you were to write something with the most dramatic climax, ending, or punch line you can imagine, what would it be?" asked a friend.

I thought a long time about the question, and then I sat down and wrote the following:

The world's greatest fair of history was going in full swing on a large reservation just outside the world's largest city. A great electric sign, with letters one hundred feet tall, stretched between the two highest towers ever built, proclaimed the theme of the fair: "Index to the Future."

Covering acre after acre, the most fantastic, futuristic buildings ever dreamed of waited to astonish visitors. Inside these buildings were displayed models of vehicles for transportation that made the imaginations of science fiction writers of the 1960's as obsolete as a Stanley Steamer. Machinery was on exhibit more fantastic and marvelous than anything dreamed of by engineers of twenty centuries.

In the great amusement and pleasure area of the fair, the lid was completely off! Every kind of gambling device that could be designed was being utilized to the fullest. Nudity and indecency were on full and open display everywhere. The song of sex was being played to the highest note in the scale. It was as though the sponsors of the fair had been given a universal license to disregard all moral standards and all the conventions of civilized society.

Then someone looked up into the sky, and lo, the Son of God was coming on a cloud. . . .

'DADDY, GIVE ME A PUSH!'

There is a man in our community who doesn't understand the importance of religious education. He has never taken his little boy to Sunday school because he figures "it's time enough for a child to learn about religion when he's old enough to know what it's all about!"

One day his little boy, sitting on the swing, said, "Daddy, give me a push." Woman! You think he would have refused? (Time enough for a child to swing when he's old enough to know what it's all about.)

But he gave him a push . . . and another . . . and many more! Which prompts us to observe that religious education has far more to do with a child's happiness and character than swinging. Early years in the church mold moral fiber and awaken spiritual discernment. The soul of your own child . . . at the threshold of Faith . . . cries, "Daddy, give me a push!"

The Old Man and THE MOUNTAIN

by GERALD BATES

The scouting party came back into camp and reported that the job was impossible—all of them, that is, but two, who filed a minority report. "Giants," said the majority, "dwell in the land, and we are just like grasshoppers compared to them." Caleb stepped forward and motioned for quiet, "Let us go and possess the land, for we are well able." The crowd said, "We would have been better off back in Egypt; slavery is preferable to giants." Then Caleb, now with Joshua shoulder to shoulder, tried again to urge them onward. "The Lord is with us; fear not," they cried. The majority had their way—and received a life sentence to wilderness wanderings—all but two, Caleb and Joshua. They were promised a share in the promised land.

Forty-five years later, now in Canaan, Caleb comes to Joshua to claim his inheritance. "I am eighty-five years old," he says, "but I am as strong as I ever was, and I am ready for battle."

"I completely followed the Lord," he continued, "and He gave me an inheritance in this land; there it is up there; give me this mountain."

In these days we often think of mountains as something to be overcome—mountains of work, or crippling disease, or poverty. And in this sense we speak of making mountains out of molehills. In the Old Testament mountains were often meeting-places with God. Caleb's mountain was a dwelling mountain; it did not stand between him and anything he wanted; he did not want to go over it—he wanted the mountain. A lot of—and probably most—Christians should be saying with Caleb, "Give me this mountain, and this mountain, and this mountain . . . in the promised land, for they are my inheritance."

Measure the mountain of prayer—a close, continuous fellowship with God. Have we really claimed this mountain for ourselves, or are we wandering in the brush at the foot of the hill? This is not so much our laying hold of God, but His having hold of us. Are we God-obsessed so that our ears are directed Godward? That is what praying without ceasing really amounts to—unbroken contact with God. Moses was often on the mountain of intercession—sometimes a forgotten art today. We should ascend and dwell on the mountain of prayer.

Then there is the mountain of witness. Somehow there has spread across our churches the crippling idea that living a consistent Christian life is all that is required for us to be witnesses. Witnessing in New Testament manner meant bringing men face to face with eternal facts so that they must decide. We must talk as well as walk our faith. Look at Peter at Pentecost when he says with almost astounding courage, "Listen to this: God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." There is the challenge flung out to them; what will you do with that! Decision! We should possess our mountains of witness—it is part of the privilege of being a child of God—to witness to the most glorious thing that has ever happened to the world.

There is also the mountain of peace—inward tranquility, a gyroscope on the inside that runs true in all the adversities of life. We have all known people like that—heroes of peace. Jesus said, "My peace I give unto you." It is in the promised land for all Christians. In the world, peace usually follows war, and so in the spiritual life peace is often the reward of struggle—overcoming and then peace. If we are lost in the anxieties of the world, then we need to put on our climbing boots and strike out up the mountain of peace. It is a dwelling-mountain, and God will give it to us.

Two middle-aged women boarded an airliner. One of them spoke to the pilot, "Now, young man, don't go faster than sound. We want to talk." Turning back to her companion, the lady said: "I do think Congress should appropriate some money to discover some sound that is faster than planes."

The Invincible Cross

by

WILLIAM R. GAYLORD
Pinetown, North Carolina

IF you were asked what is the greatest single object that the world has ever produced, you might say the pyramids or some other wonder of the world. But think for a moment. Could any of these things you have named withstand man? If man should unleash his destructive ability against any of the great achievements of man you have named, could it stand? The great Pyramid of Cheops, 482 feet high and covering 13 acres of land, could not withstand man for five minutes if he decided to destroy it. Yet, there is one object that has withstood all the treachery and heathenism of man with his desire to destroy all good and salvage all that would lean to his lust and greed. This is the Cross of Jesus Christ. Since it was erected about nineteen hundred years ago, a continuous onslaught of hate and slander has been wedged against it by humanity, that refused to live by it. But with all the hate and treachery men have cast against it, no one has ever discredited it. But the more the Cross is oppressed, the brighter it glams in a lost world of suffering humanity.

The wooden cross of Christ was destroyed some time in history. Some think that probably it was burned when Titus destroyed Jerusalem. It is also claimed that the Christians preserved it until the time of the Crusades, and that it was destroyed by the Saracens who fought the movement of the Crusades. But the fact is that the Cross is greater than two pieces of wood, and the real Cross is not a relic, but it lives. The Cross is alive; it lives in the heart of every man who has ever looked up to God for deliverance. The deeper man sinks into condemnation the more glorious the Cross appears to him. The more the enemies of God perpetrate acts of treachery against the poor, the more the Cross lights their way, and gives them hope in the days of their provocation. No power on earth will ever stamp out the glory of the Cross because the Cross is man's life, and without the

Warden's Grove to Observe Homecoming

The Warden's Grove Free Will Baptist Church of Lowland, North Carolina, will observe its annual homecoming on Sunday, August 16. Following the worship service, a picnic lunch will be served on the church grounds. An old-time song festival will be a feature of the afternoon program.

All former pastors, members, and friends of the church are invited to attend these services.

Wayne County S. S. Fellowship Met in Goldsboro

The Wayne County, North Carolina, Sunday School Fellowship met for its third quarterly meeting of the year at Willbert's Barbecue in Goldsboro. There were 44 Sunday school superintendents, teachers, pastors, and Sunday school workers present.

Dr. Thomas R. Morris of Goldsboro was the speaker. He challenged the group to do a better job for their Sunday school by considering it "a serious business in life."

Dr. Roy O'Donnell of Mount Olive College was present and brought the invocation. Dr. W. Burkette Raper, president of the college, spoke briefly on the work and building program of the college.

During the business session, plans were made for the superintendents of all Free Will Baptist Sunday schools in Wayne County to meet, and if possible, formulate a plan whereby courses of instruction could be offered in the churches for Sunday school teachers and workers.

Mr. Robert Overman, president of the fellowship, presided.

Fayetteville Mission Showing Progress

According to reports received from the director of the Fayetteville Free Will Baptist Mission, Fayetteville, North Carolina, Mr. Taylor Hill, the mission

Coming Events

September 2—First term of Mount Olive College begins for 1964-65

September 7—Labor Day

September 16, 17—North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, American Legion Auditorium, Wilson

September 24, 25, 26—Muscle Shoals State Line Free Will Baptist Association, Cross Roads Church, Lawrenceburg, Tennessee

is showing a great deal of progress. The regular quarterly business meeting was held on July 22. The missions secretary, Mrs. J. K. Adcox Jr., reported that 14 persons had united with the mission and that there had been an average attendance of 27. Two others recently united, raising the total membership to 16. The treasurer, Mrs. Taylor Hill, reported $295.11 on hand.

Actions taken by the mission included the establishing of a building fund, the beginning of a teacher training program; and in order to promote unity and increase membership, it was decided that every member should visit at least two homes each week, either fellow members or prospective members.

The mission is under the sponsorship of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Goldsboro. Mr. Hill was recently licensed as a gospel minister by that church. At the present time, the mission is not receiving financial support from any missions board. Instead, the members and interested persons have made the work possible. If you, or any of your church groups, would like to assist this new mission work you may send your contribution to: Fayetteville Mission, 311 Bryan Street, Fayetteville, North Carolina.

Profit and Loss

I counted dollars while God counted crosses.

I counted gains while he counted losses!

I counted my worth by the things gained in store.

But He sized me up by the stars that I bore.

I coveted honors and sought for degrees; He wept as He counted the hours on my knees.

And I never knew 'til one day at a grave, How vain are these things that we spend life to save!

Life's Length And Its Destiny

by WALTER E. ISENHOUR

IT may seem a long way through life if you live to be old. Even if you should only reach middle age, it may seem a good distance to that point. Or if you should die young, there are some miles you have to travel. However, when we think of the length of life, and compare it with eternity, it is very short.

But our journey here on earth determines what our destiny shall be hereafter. This is the thing that should be considered, which should be, more or less, alarming. It is not so much how long we live that means the most, but it is how well we live. One man may live more in a very short time than another lives in a hundred years.

Methuselah lived to be nine hundred sixty-nine years old, who is the oldest person we have any record of on earth; but so far as I know, there is no record of any good and great accomplishments in his life. How did he spend his time? We don't know. Certainly, if he had been a man of exploits, or a man who was a great blessing to his country and the world, there would be some record of it.

Enoch lived to the age of three hundred sixty-five years, but he ". . . walked with God: and he was not; for God took him" (Genesis 5:24). When a man walks with God, his life certainly is not in vain. He will do his fellowmen good all along the journey, and he will leave a record behind that will bless the world when he is gone. Amen, and thank God!

One man may live a hundred years and do the world no good, or very little good, or maybe much harm; whereas, another may live twenty-five years and bless the world. It is up to the individual. If the devil has charge of one's life, time, talents, influence, and means, he will curse his fellowmen as long as he lives, or do more or less harm, according to the grip the devil has upon him.

I have seen men who lived to be old, but served the devil all their years. The same is true of women. Just why did they start wrong and continue like that through life? The home has much to do with it. God was left out. There was no family altar. Parents and grandparents lived sinful lives before them as they grew up. Therefore, they chose such a course across the years. This is a deplorable fact.

Then to the opposite: I have known those who died young, but they were Christians. I remember a young girl who was a member of one of my first churches about fifty years ago. She was a very noble girl, with a clean life, a spotless character, and a Christian experience. The church appointed her as superintendent of the Sunday school, but she died in early life. No doubt her influence still lives in her community, though she has been dead more than forty years.

I also remember a young man whom I pastored in the beginning of my ministry who also died in early life. Close to the time of his passing away to meet God, he told someone to tell me to meet him in heaven. I shall never forget those dying words and shall see him again "in the sweet by and by."

Yes, one can live a good and great life even if it is short; while one may live a long life and live wickedly. It is not the length of years that counts; it is how well one lives, or how poorly and ungodly. Success may crown one who dies young; whereas, defeat may characterize one who dies when he is old.

I am thinking of a man I knew some years ago. He dealt in liquor for years. In the meantime his wife did the same; also his sons. He lived to be old, but what a life! How different it should have been, and would have been, if he had yielded his life and soul to God! So far as I know he died as he lived. The influence he wielded is still existing in his country. He could have been a saint; whereas, he was devil-possessed. He could have been a soul winner; whereas, he helped to wreck lives and souls.

Then to the opposite: I knew a man who was a minister of the gospel—a blessed and wonderful man of God. His wife was a Christian lady and wonderful helpmate and mother. Their sons became ministers of the gospel, and a daughter married a minister—a very godly man and soul winner. Think of the difference in the two men and their families. One man and his family cursed his country, while the other man and his family blessed his country.

If a ship sets sail in the wrong direction and continues such a course, it will flounder. Its wreckage may be tragic. Many people may go down with it. However, if another ship sets its sail in the right direction and continues such a course, it will reach port safely, and many passengers will rejoice because they were on such a ship.

The same is true in regards to life. If one goes with the devil and sin and continues this journey until he reaches the end of his earthly career, he will be lost and damned forever. If one gives himself to God and sails on the old ship of Zion until he reaches the end of the journey, he will be safely anchored in the haven of eternal rest, bliss, life, and glory.

Whose ship are you sailing on? Who is your captain—the devil or God? How long or how short will your life be? You do not know; but regardless of where you land, you will be gone forever. This means hell or heaven. What course are you traveling? Who is directing your life? Stop awhile, think, take reckoning! What will be your destiny?

Saratoga, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Saratoga Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting Tuesday, July 21, in the parsonage, with Mrs. Ruth Rose as hostess. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Sudie Welton. The group sang "Bring Them In," and Mrs. Rose read the Scripture taken from Luke 14:15-24. The president offered the opening prayer and then turned the program over to the program chairman, Mrs. Madeline Amerson. The program, "Our Neighbor 'Round the Corner," was discussed by Miss Bettye Mae Webb, Mrs. Nettie Thigpen, Mrs. Ila Grey Jones, Mrs. Lizzie Mae Cobb, and Mrs. Dorothy Skinner.

The business session began with the roll call. Eleven members and four visitors were present. Miss Bettye Mae Webb closed the business session with prayer.

The hostess served refreshments to those present. During the social hour, a visitor and newcomer to the community, was remembered with baby gifts. The meeting was very interesting and enjoyable for those present.

Ayden, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church held its June meeting in the home of Mrs. Margie Humbles. "Work for the Night Is Coming" was sung by the group, which was followed with the Scripture taken from Matthew 12:25-30 and read by Mrs. Stella Worthington. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Eva Worthington.

During the business period, the roll call showed seventeen members and three visitors present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and the treasurer's report given. Mrs. Norman Ard gave a report on the Woman's Auxiliary Convention.

A very interesting program was given by Mrs. Annie Eliza Chappell on the subject, "The House That Unity Built."

The closing hymn was "Take My Life and Let It Be," followed with prayer by Mrs. Elizabeth Balls.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Fountain, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Friday night, July 17, in the church. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, president, presided. The group joined together in singing "O Zion, Haste" and "Bring Them in." Mrs. Gardner used for her Scripture lesson Luke 14:15-24, followed with prayer by Mrs. David Hobgood.

The following took part on the program, "Our Neighbors 'Round the Corner," written by Mrs. R. H. Jackson: Mrs. David Hobgood read the poem, "Obedience"; Mrs. Lester Gay read "Leaders Introduction"; Mrs. Carlton Gardner read "Our Neighbors in Raleigh"; Mrs. Robert Oakley read "Our Neighbors in Weldon and Our Neighbors in High Point"; Mrs. A. G. Mangum read "Our Other Neighbors We Have."

During the business session Mrs. Gardner presided and Mrs. Lester Gay, secretary-treasurer, called the roll and received the dues. She also read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved. This was followed with the treasurer's report. Mrs. Leroy Owens prayed the closing prayer.

Fountain, N. C.—The YPA of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Thursday night, July 16, in the home of Mrs. David Hobgood. The meeting was opened with prayer by Brenda Goff, after which the group sang "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms."

After the business session Brenda Goff made a very interesting talk, taking her Scripture from John 3:18, 19. She closed her talk by reading a poem by Bobby Jackson entitled "Eternity."

For the benediction the group prayed together the Lord's Prayer.

The next meeting will be in the home of Kay McCoy. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Hobgood.

Bladenboro, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church held its July meeting in the home of Mrs. Maybelle Edwards with twelve members present. The Scripture was read by Mrs. Edwards, followed with prayer by Mrs. Lucille Bryan. The program was read and discussed by the president, Mrs. Nancy Hardee. It was reported that twelve sick visits had been made during the month. The meeting closed with prayer.

The hostess served refreshments to those present.

A Fading Rose

Ruth Vaughn

THE pink and gold of the rising sun was just beginning to tint the eastern sky. I stood looking out of the window, reveling in the beauty and wonder of a new day. When I turned to begin preparations for breakfast, I paused to caress the velvet folds of the roses on the table; they were so rich, so beautiful, so fragrant.

I leaned over to bury my face in their soft, creamy petals when I noticed that one large flower had begun to turn dark. Some of its petals had fallen off—its beauty had faded—it looked shriveled and old.

I looked at it curiously. Why, out of the entire bouquet, had this one rose lost its loveliness? Upon closer inspection I found the answer. The stem of this rose was shorter than the rest, and it could not reach the water which covered the others, preserving their life and beauty. This one rose was above the water—dry, ugly, dead.

Pulling the flower from the bouquet, I stood looking at its dark, faded petals and pondered a deeper meaning. How like some Christians who, in attempting to get to the top of the bouquet, pull themselves out of the place of God's choosing. And these people, like the shriveled rose, are out of God's will and useless to Him!

There in the kitchen I prayed, "Lord God, help me to keep my religious stem long and reaching ever into the water of life which You have provided for us. May I never be as this rose and become so short-stemmed, so worldly-minded, so wrapped up within myself that I allow myself to lose contact with Thy living water; and, as this flower, become dry, ugly, and dead to Thy power and Thy love."—Herald of Holiness.

Christian Education

Church to Observe College Day

President W. Burkette Raper of Mount Olive College will preach at Sound Side Free Will Baptist Church, Columbia, North Carolina, at the morning worship service on Sunday, August 9.

The Rev. Robert Rollins, pastor, has announced that the church will observe Sunday as "Mount Olive College Day."

To Attend Institute

Ralph A. Morris of New Bern, North Carolina, chairman of the Mount Olive College board of directors, and President W. Burkette Raper will attend an institute on "Board-Administrator Relationships" August 5-7 in Atlanta, Georgia.

The institute is sponsored by the Kellogg Foundation in cooperation with the Junior College Leadership Program of the University of Florida and Florida State University.

Faculty Conference

The opening faculty conference for the fall semester at Mount Olive College will be held Tuesday, September 1. Freshmen orientation begins September 2, and returning students are scheduled to arrive September 7. Classes begin Tuesday, September 8.

All dormitories for resident students have been filled; however, day students are still being admitted.

O'Donnell Accepts Appointment

Dr. Roy C. O'Donnell, dean of Mount Olive College, has accepted a one-year appointment as a post-doctoral research assistant at George Peabody College for the academic year 1964-65.

He will assist Dr. William J. Griffin in a research project sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation and do post-doctoral study in psychology and linguistics at Peabody College and Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee. The research project is designed to investigate how children learn to use their native language.

Dr. O'Donnell has been chairman of the English Department at Mount Olive College for the past three years and dean for the past two years. He has been granted a leave of absence by the college board of directors.

Dr. and Mrs. O'Donnell and their daughter, Susan, plan to move to Nashville in early September. He will resume his teaching duties at Mount Olive College in the fall of 1965.

Benefit Dinners Planned for College

Another series of benefit dinners for the Mount Olive College development fund will be held this fall. Approximately the same schedule and plans will be followed this year as last year.

During 1963 a series of nineteen dinners raised more than $52,000 for the new campus. President W. Burkette Raper will coordinate plans for the dinners in cooperation with local committees.

TURN TO THE LORD

by SUE HEATH

Children's Home
Middlesex, North Carolina

When things seem to go all wrong,
And nothing you do seems right;
Turn to the Lord and He'll see you along—

He'll protect you with His might.

When you've done something you shouldn't do,

Ask the Lord to forgive you;
And every time you pray,
Ask God to help you through the day.

When you pray, if you're sincere,
God will wipe away every tear;
And the most important thing you must do

Is to say, "Lord, thank you."

Elected to Top Office

Miss Bonnie Coates of Smithfield, a rising sophomore at Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, was elected president this spring of the Collegiate Academy of the North Carolina Academy of Science.

The Collegiate Academy is an organization for undergraduate students of all the colleges in the state. It is sponsored by the North Carolina Academy of Science for the purpose of encouraging and promoting research.

Miss Coates served as president of the Henderson Science Club at Mount Olive College during the 1963-64 academic year. She was also a soloist in the college chorus. Her parents are the Rev. and Mrs. Albert Coates of Smithfield.

Other students from Mount Olive College who have held office in the Collegiate Academy include Mrs. Ruby Blackmore of Warsaw, president 1960-61; Lee Glover of Dover, historian 1961-62; Marsha Barrow Taylor of LaGrange, vice-president 1961-62; and James Adams of Belhaven, historian, 1962-63.

True Elevation

MEN like to rise in the world; but there are different kinds of elevation. One is that which money gives. Then, there is elevation which comes through social recognition. But true elevation is of character and worth. It can be obtained only by being diligent.

Because Moses could not be an emancipator at once, he did not spend his time in idleness, but was faithful as a shepherd; and when God wanted him, He found him at his work. Do well today's work, however lowly; perhaps tomorrow God will have something larger for you.—Sel.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

READERS OF OUR CHURCH PAPER

Just a few days ago Brother O. A. Jones of Grantsboro and a member of New Bethlehem Original Free Will Baptist Church came to see me. After talking to me for awhile, he said, "Brother Griffin, I want to renew my subscription to our church paper, The Free Will Baptist; for I do not want to miss an issue."

If every Free Will Baptist in the country felt as does Brother Jones, the subscription roll would be possibly twenty thousand in North Carolina and greatly increased in other states. Several years ago I was visiting in a home of one of our real "old timers." He said, "Brother Griffin, I want to show you a very old receipt given to me for my subscription." This man was possibly four score plus; and when he produced the receipt, I found that it was sixty years old. This man was proud to say, "I want to keep up with our church by reading the 'Baptist.'"

When I was attending the Fellowship of Original Free Will Baptists in Marianna, Florida, the early part of July, a brother came up to me and said, "I do not recall ever meeting you, but I have been a reader of The Free Will Baptist for many years. As soon as I saw you, I knew that you were J. C. Griffin." An elderly lady who was attending the Fellowship from Florida came across the auditorium of the college in which we met and said, "I wanted to speak to you, for I have been reading The Free Will Baptist for a long time, and your writings have been a blessing to me." Then I said, "It is a glorious privilege to meet old friends who have become friends by hearing about each other and reading about each other. It is fine to have fellowship with people that you have never seen." People who have a good word to say to you about things which pertain to this life and the life to come bring rejoicing.

REAL FELLOWSHIP

The writer of 1 John 1:3 says, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." I have learned a great deal about this fellowship through writing "Notes and Quotes" and from the hundreds of replies received from our readers who appreciate our feeble remarks. It has been a source of fellowship that has kept me writing for many years. Since the Lord took my feet out of the miry clay and placed them on the solid Rock—Christ Jesus—I have loved to have Christian fellowship with God's people everywhere. Those whom I have never seen and those in faraway lands, I love to hear from; I love to pray for them and to know that many are praying for me. This knowledge is obtained by our fellowship with the Father and His Son Jesus Christ, and it is enjoyed and strengthened by fellowship with one another. This fellowship can be increased abundantly by writing and reading about one another.

We read the Bible to learn about God and His wonderful salvation, but we read our church papers, magazines, and regular correspondence to learn about our denomination and our brothers and sisters in Christ and to learn about what is being done in our connection.

OUR SUBSCRIPTION LIST

When our reports are read in our union meetings in which it is stated that a church has 150 members but only 10 or 12 subscribers to the "Baptist," we know that the people are not very well informed about the activities of our denomination. The Free Will Baptist, edited and published by the Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, North Carolina, should be in the home of every Free Will Baptist.

"THE FREE WILL BAPTIST"

The Free Will Baptist is the oldest church periodical published by the Original Free Will Baptists of the United States. This paper is owned and operated by the churches and institutions of the Original Free Will Baptists by duly appointed and elected directors, who are dedicated to the work of sending to the public, and to those who are interested in the sending, the gospel to all mankind. In its pages we learn what is being done in and at our Children's Home at Middlesex, North Carolina. We learn of the workings of our Mount Olive Junior College. We learn about the working of Cragmont Assembly, Inc. We learn what is being done in our state Sunday school work; we learn what is being done in our state missions; we learn about our missionary program in Arizona-Mexico Missions. Thus our knowledge is increased as to our needs and our accomplishments, and by this knowledge our fellowship is increased and we actually learn to love those whom we have never seen because we have a mutual interest in all these institutions as agencies of missionary endeavor. This knowledge is vitally necessary for the spread of the gospel of our Lord. Too, with all others, we learn that we are responsible to God and to the leaders of our wonderful denomination to share that which God has made possible to our claim as our very own with God's Great Commission, "Go ye into all the world."

WE ARE A LIBERAL PEOPLE

I have heard it said by some that Free Will Baptists are stingy, or are "tightwads"; but this is not true. We are a liberal people when well informed as to the needs of the work as a whole. Some of the most liberal people that I have ever known, I have found among Free Will Baptists. I know that there are exceptions to be found. But, in general, when we preachers acquaint our people with the facts, they are ready to give.

When we look at the accomplishments in building and supporting our Children's Home; what has been done toward building our college at Mount Olive and our Cragmont Assembly; long standing accomplishments of our Free Will Baptist Press; and our missionary work of today, we are proud to say that God has done great things for us. He would have done more if we had worked harder and given more to the cause and if we had let Him; but, thank God, we are learning more and more as we read the columns of our church paper.

APPEAL TO PREACHERS

Our closing appeal is: "Preachers, let us lead our people to greater knowledge by selling them on reading their church paper and getting our subscription list lengthened."

This issue of "Notes and Quotes" was written and sealed in the envelope QUESTION: Please explain, "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death" (Revelation 20:14). What is this second death referred to here?—Mrs. S. H. Andrews, N. S. Canada.

ANSWER: The second death referred to in this verse is the eternal state of being that all those who are lost will experience while they are punished forever and ever in a place called in the Bible hell. The men, women, and children that die without Christ do so because they do not choose to be like Christ and all of His saints; so there is but one other place that awaits them, wherein there will be Satan and all of his angels; for Jesus' own words indicate that hell was prepared for them: "Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matthew 25:41).

This punishment is not annihilation as the Russellites, such as Jehovah's Witnesses, and many other cults might teach you in this day of error; but it is a state of eternal punishment separated from God and all He offers all of us poor lost hell-bound sinners; that is, hell-bound until we come Christians by accepting Christ as our Saviour and begin following Him.

The Bible quite well describes this place, or does so well enough that all reasonable people that have access to the Word of God might escape it. "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; And shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear" (Matthew 13:41-43).

I surely know one thing; and that is that I don't want to go there, no, not even for one look of adventure. Just listen to what the Bible says about it: "For a fire is kindled in mine anger, and shall burn unto the lowest hell, and shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains" (Deuteronomy 32:22); "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8).

God, here in His Word, speaks as though the punishment has already begun; and no doubt it has. In another place Christ, from His perspective, speaks of two people of the past—one, Abraham of several millenniums ago, and the other, Lazarus of a later day than Abraham—as already being in a state of enjoyment; whereas, He spoke of a contemporary with Lazarus as being a rich man, one that now suffers in a state and condition for which there is no remedy:

"There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores. . . . And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence" (Luke 16:19, 20, 22-26).

Read the whole passage of Luke 16:10-31, and I think you will get a fair picture of the situation as being that a person has this life, and this life only, in which to decide which of the two prepared places for two kinds of prepared people he may choose; for while here on earth we each prepare for the place to which we will go. If one should read this passage without allowing Satan's interference or influence, I am sure that he would at once make a final decision as to which he would choose by applying John 3:36 personally and by beginning to apply Romans 10:9-18. So watch out and be sure that Satan does not influence you through some smart-alecky, worldly-wise person or through something you may read in the speculative field of "science so-called" as we are warned against in the Scriptures. "O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called: Which some professing have erred concerning the faith" (1 Timothy 6:20, 21).

There is, I think, a little more that the Bible tells us in an effort to help us choose eternal life, which means that we in this state shall be separated from those who choose "the second death," or eternal death, which we should both know and heed. We who are Christians have passed from death unto life and we now possess a certain set of values that carry with them both positive and negative qualities of distinction. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24); "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death" (1 John 3:14).

God chose us when He gave Christ. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else" (Isaiah 45:22). Now there is but one thing; and that is a must, without which all

SECRET CLUB

FLORENCE M. HILL

GREG thrust his hands into his pockets, hoping the boys from over Jessup Street way were busy somewhere else. Just because he went to Sunday School and church and his hair was combed they had a lot to say about it!

"Oh—glamourrr boy," someone slurred as Greg stepped off the curb to cross the avenue. That's Buck Jensen, Greg thought as Buck and Torchy caught up with Greg, doing a mincing step.

"Aw—cut it out," Greg growled.

"O.K. Tell you what! Interested in a club?" Buck quizzed. Greg pricked up his ears. "We thought you'd like to join our Secret Club," Buck said.

Maybe these boys are all right, Greg thought, slowing down and looking at them with an interested grin. Kind of dirty though.

Buck spoke, "Be at Torchy's shanty tomorrow night at seven. We'll initiate you into a full-fledged goose," he chortled, winking at Torchy.

"My folks are going to a social down at Larsens," Greg exclaimed. "I'll have to take care of my little brother."

"He'll be asleep by then. Just sneak out," Buck advised.

"I couldn't go without asking my mother," Greg said slowly.

They stared at him. "Don't ask her!" Buck said as they parted. "Just do it!"

Greg pushed at the oak door and went into his and Danny's room. What was wrong, he asked himself, in having to ask if you could do things? Was he a softie?

He picked up his books from off the floor and noticed his prize basketball was missing. Why don't Danny leave my stuff alone, Greg thought crossly.

That night at dinner Greg asked,

"Father—may I fix up the storage room for my own room?" He paused, "Danny gets in everything I've got!"

His father looked stern. "I need that space," he stated.

Greg stopped cutting his pie as his mother spoke of the social tomorrow night. The Secret Club! Maybe he would sneak out, he thought.

His mother walked in as he unlaced his shoes. "Greg, Dad's been working hard. He just didn't want to think about your problems tonight," she said. "Prove you're almost 13 and he'll come around," she smiled at Greg and left.

"Yah, Dad will realize I'm growing up when I'm an old man of 25," Greg grumbled.

A curiosity grew in him as he undressed and got in bed. What was the Secret Club?

All the next day he felt a nervous twitch in his stomach. He told the boys after school he'd be there.

Greg couldn't eat much dinner. After Dad and Mother left, Greg looked at the clock. It was seven-thirty. I'll just slip down and see what Buck and Torchy are doing. Danny will be all right for a while.

He quietly opened the door, and took a step down, then stood. He was remembering Dad's faithful coaching on being dependable and using his talents for God. Oh—Dad hadn't said anything tonight. But he'd been saying it all of Greg's life.

He heard a thud and moved closer to see who was prying a tire off a car near Larsens, then jumped back. It was Buck! And someone was fooling around a gas tank.

Greg ran back. What to do? He got a police whistle Mother kept in a drawer and hurrying out, he blew the whistle hard three times! Figures flew and porch lights went on.

He'd have to tell Dad, he decided as he put the whistle back. Wow! So that's why Buck and Torchy were poking and winking at each other.

Greg felt glad his parents had taught him about Jesus. Glad he was in Sunday School on Sundays! Those boys would be in jail before they grew up. He shuddered.

Dad walked in and Greg burst out, "Father, I have something to tell you!" His father's eyes widened as Greg told him everything.

"I thought that whistle came from here!" his father said, eyeing Greg thoughtfully. "We'll clean that storage room for you Saturday." His voice became brisk. "And don't worry about those boys. I'll talk to their parents."

Greg felt relieved. And although he loved little Danny, it would sure be good to have a place for his own things.

DON'T SNUB

Don't snub a boy because he wears shabby clothes. When Edison first entered Boston he wore a pair of yellow linen trousers in the depth of winter.

Don't snub a boy because of the ignorance of his parents. Shakespeare, the world's poet, was the son of a man who was unable to write his own name.

Don't snub a boy because he chooses a humble trade. John Bunyan, author of Pilgrim's Progress, was a tinker.

Don't snub a boy because of some physical weakness. Milton was blind.

Don't snub a boy because he is dull in school. Hogarth, the celebrated painter and engraver, was a stupid boy at school.

Don't snub a boy because he stutters. Demosthenes, the great orator of ancient Greece, overcame a harsh stammering voice.

Don't snub anyone—not just because some day they may outstrip you in the race of life, but because snubbing is neither kind, nor right, nor Christian. —Selected.

people remain in a state of spiritual death. "And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house" (Acts 16:31). Now that the way has been provided, the means pointed out, and the urgent and universal invitation given, all those who reject and spurn God's love and grace have but one alternative: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness" (Romans 2:18). Those who believe not on God's Son make God a liar and thereby face His eternal and relentless wrath.

We might take a look at some of the other passages that reveal quite clearly what will be the eternal state of the wicked. It is a place where life in the individual continues to exist as he takes what would be unbearable punishment to him while in this body, for the unrighteous will be resurrected and will have new bodies capable of such suffering. "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection" (Revelation 20:5). "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever. And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Revelation 20:10-15). "And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh" (Isaiah 66:24). "And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched" (Mark 9:43-48).

I hope that every single reader shall search the Scriptures diligently until he has determined what God would have him to do in an effort to shun hell and that he may begin at once to do this as he obeys the voice of his never failing God. God will not fail to meet the need of each. If you are not sure that you know Christ in the forgiveness of your sins and through this the salvation of your soul, see John 3:36 and listen to what God says.

"Seek ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon" (Isaiah 55:6, 7). "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isaiah 1:18).

He should give heed to the warnings: "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Hebrews 6:4-6). "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Hebrews 10:26-31). "For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them" (2 Peter 2:20, 21).

I would advise that you give heed to the further teaching of God's Word. "This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:5-9).

FAITH ON TRIAL

PRINTED TEXT: Numbers 14:2, 3, 26-33, 36-38

I. INTRODUCTION

God desires that His children should walk by faith, and not by sight. It has always been true that men who are primarily interested in material things will be influenced in formulating their decisions both by material advantages that can be utilized and by material obstacles that might be encountered. They put their trust in material things and thus miss many things that come to those who walk by faith. Had the Children of Israel walked by sight, instead of walking by faith, they would never have left Egypt; and most certainly they would have never crossed the Red Sea. Neither of these could have been accomplished by material means, and to the natural eye both would have seemed impossible.

It is true that the Christian faces many difficulties that appear impossible to overcome, but we must remember that nothing is impossible with God. The question should never be, "How difficult is this task?" but rather, "Is it God's will that we do this thing?" God will not ask us to do that which lies beyond our ability. When He told Moses to speak to the Children of Israel that they go forward, it made little difference that the broad expanse of the Red Sea seemingly barred their progress; for when we walk in obedience to God's command, barriers have a way of disappearing from our paths, and things that looked insurmountable dwindle to insignificance.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The Israelites murmured against Moses and Aaron and expressed a desire that they had died either in Egypt or the wilderness (vv. 2, 3).

2. The Lord considered the murmuring against Moses and Aaron as being against Him (v. 27).

3. The murmuring was evil in the sight of the Lord (v. 27).

4. The Lord excluded from the land of Canaan those who murmured against Him (vv. 28, 29).

5. Only Joshua, Caleb, and the young would be allowed to enter the land of promise (vv. 29-31).

6. Those who rebelled against the Lord were to die in the wilderness without even getting to see Canaan (v. 32).

7. These people were to wander in the wilderness as a traveler that is lost until a full forty years passed from the exodus from Egypt to the entrance into Canaan (v. 33).

8. During that period, those from twenty years of age and older would all die in the wilderness (v. 33).

9. Ten of the twelve spies died of a plague, probably a malignant infectious distemper, before the Lord (vv. 36, 37).

10. Joshua and Caleb escaped that death because they were obedient to the Lord (v. 38).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Twelve spies had been sent to spy out the land of Canaan before the children of Israel entered it. They came back and reported that it was indeed a land that "floweth with milk and honey," but then ten of them went on to say that it was inhabited by giants and that it would be impossible to capture it. This is the background of today's lesson.

. . . The report of the ten spies raised fear in the hearts of the people. They had to admit that God had brought them up to the land He had promised to give them. But they doubted that He would be able to fulfill the rest of His promise that He would give it to them. No matter how often God has answered our prayers, the next time we find ourselves confronted by difficulties we do just as the children of Israel did. We doubt that God will help us this time, and in so doing sin against God.

The people murmured against Moses and Aaron, as if it were the fault of their leaders that they had come to Kadesh-barnea near the promised land, yet could not proceed. When things go wrong we are always ready to put the blame on someone else. The Israelites did not seem to remember how many times they had caused God to be angry with them on account of their unbelief. They began to denounce their leaders and express the wish that they had remained in Egypt, or that they might die in the wilderness. They foresaw nothing but distress and difficulties for their children. Unbelief gendered discouragement and discouragement led to rebellion. But there were still two of the twelve who had faith in God. But even their encouraging words failed to awaken a favorable response in the people. Do we ever let discouragement overwhelm us?

—Bible Expositor.

2. God had safely delivered His people from the hands of the Egyptians. He had led them across the Red Sea and through the wilderness. He had provided daily food and water. Surely the faith of the people should have increased daily through all of God's care. Like a balloon that is blown bigger and bigger, faith should have hung over their camp as the cloud of the Lord did.

But when the time came to trust God even more, their faith began to waver. The people, tired of living and traveling in the desert, began to complain. They complained about the food. They complained about Moses' leadership. Then with the Promised Land just across the way, Moses sent spies into the land of Canaan. It was true, they reported, that the land flowed with milk and honey. But the people were giants. They lived in walled cities. They seemed stronger people than the Israelites.

One by one, the pin pricks shattered their already shrinking faith. Joshua and Caleb tried to restore it. "We are well able to overcome it," Caleb testified. "Rebel not ye against the Lord," Joshua warned. "Their defence is departed from them, and the Lord is with us: fear them not" (Numbers 14:9).

How often we let similar things interfere with our faith and trust in God. A little setback, an illness, some gossip, an unpleasant church relationship—suddenly we forget all the good things God has done for us and our faith in Him wavers, interfering with our work for Christ and His kingdom.

—Standard Commentary.

3. Just as the Israelites' faith was on trial there in the wilderness, our faith is on trial in the wilderness of this world. How do we face up to the difficulties and dangers of life? How do we react to criticism? May God give us the grace and wisdom to stand true to the trial of our faith in the wilderness of this wicked world.

Billy Bray, the Cornish Methodist preacher, one day was met by a man who said to him, "I have observed your unselfish way of life and have come to feel much interest in your welfare. I have prayed about helping you and the Lord has led me to give you a suit of clothes. Will you come to my house and see if the suit fits?"

Instantly Mr. Barry replied, "I will come by to see you, but have no fear; the suit will fit me if the Lord led you to give me. He knows my size." If the Israelites had manifest this kind of faith, things would have been different.

Someone once asked the famous Englishman, George Miller, who started an orphanage on faith, if he did not have a hand-to-mouth existence. "Yes," he replied, "but it is from God's hand to my mouth." This is the kind of faith and trust that enabled Paul to say when he was in a Roman jail, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

And God Made Man Free

Original Free Will Baptists, we are Arminian in theology as opposed to Calvinism.

Looking in the Old Testament for a moment, we see examples of men exercising the freedom of choice. Israel as a nation, under the leadership of Moses, had the freedom of choice in serving God. The Lord says, "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed shall live" (Deuteronomy 30:19). Israel had to choose one path—life or death, blessing or cursing! God urged Israel to choose life that she might live.

Joshua assumed leadership of Israel

after the death of Moses. His last charge in his old age was to choose whom they would serve: "And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; . . . but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD" (Joshua 24:15). Joshua says choose. "It is your choice whom you serve: the true and living God, or the old gods of your fathers. You must choose," says Joshua.

Elijah, a prophet of God, challenged the four hundred fifty prophets of Baal to see who is God. They gathered on Mt. Carmel where two altars were erected. Elijah, a beam of fury in his eye and thunder in his voice, cried: "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him." The time had come to choose: If God be God, follow Him; if Baal, then follow Baal! "You cannot stand between two opinions," says Elijah; "you must choose!"

We, today, cannot stand between two opinions anymore than Elijah or any of the others could. How easy it would be if we could take the middle of the road, but we cannot. We cannot have divided allegiance. Jesus said, "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (Matthew 6:24).

We must choose whom we will serve for eternity and where we will spend eternity. Eternity is a long time; it is time without end. God has set before us eternal life through Jesus Christ, or eternal death by rejecting Him as our Saviour.

No one is responsible for our sins but ourselves. When we stand before the white throne of justice, we cannot shift the responsibility of our sins upon someone else. We cannot blame our neighbor, or our parents, or our children. Ezekiel tells us: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die . . ."; making us solely responsible for our own transgressions!

Each time one hears the gospel preached, he makes a choice: to receive Jesus Christ as Saviour, or to reject Him and be lost. He may knock upon the door of your heart, but you must choose to open that door. Today you choose. What choice have you made?

ready for mailing when I got the time to read the Rev. Frank Ray Harrison's article, "Where Is the Answer?" in the issue of July 22. It struck me so forcibly that I broke the seal and wrote an endorsement of what Frank Ray said.

I, too, find a great number of people who do not have a treatise and a number who do not read their church paper. I am aware that no one person can know all there is to know about the doctrines, usages, and customs; but there is no excuse for a lack of proper knowledge. Frank, I join with you in saying that a large part of not knowing what we should know is a lack of ministerial teaching to the laity.

For a good many years I have read and explained the Church Covenant to people being received into the church. I have also given them a copy of our treatise and urged them to read its contents. Again, I urge our ministers to teach our people the doctrine of the Original Free Will Baptists.

A Mighty Hand

It was a mighty hand that was stretched out those ages ago to create this wonderful world in which we live; to bring into being every living thing, including man.

It was a mighty hand that saved three young Hebrews from being incinerated when they were thrown into a fiery furnace for refusing to bow down to a false god.

It was a mighty hand that saved the godly Daniel when he was cast into a den of lions for his faith.

It was a mighty hand that stilled the raging waves and saved a boatload of frightened men.

It was a mighty hand that raised a dead man to life.

It was the mighty hand of God and of His Son, Jesus.

It was a mighty hand that was stretched out to lift you from despair, to deliver you from sin and its power, to transform your life. Take hold of that hand now.—War Cry (New Zealand).

Good and evil both increase at compound interest.—C. S. Lewis.

Cross man is dead. The Cross stood between Hitler and the complete control of man's life. It inspired the Crusaders to paint the Cross on their shields and march in battle against the Saracens who offered the Jews, Islam or the sword. When it was raised up in the Roman Empire, the hearts of men took a renewed hope that shadowed out the glory of Caesar and produced a love and fellowship that changed the course of the world.

What does the Cross mean? The Cross means that God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever will believe on Him shall have everlasting life. It means that God does not want any one of His children to be lost, but for all to have the redeeming grace made possible through the Cross. Jesus told people that He loved them, but at the Cross He showed them. At the Cross Jesus did for all men in death what He could not do for them in life—pay the debt of sin to God. Men loved darkness rather than light, and in the glory of the Cross they learned to love its light. Yet, because of the Cross, man stands condemned before God. Man is born into the world with a demand upon him to make a choice, "What shall I do with Jesus who is called the Christ?" To put off this decision is not the answer. Jesus said, "He that is not for me is against me."

Finally, the Cross is the only real refuge man has. It is a fount for the thirsty, bread for the hungry, and life for the dying. It can lift up the head of the weary and give hope to the down-trodden. American dollars are not the solution for depressed peoples of the world; neither can world problems be solved at the conference table. The only solution is the Cross, and the taking up of one's cross and following the one who died upon Calvary.

If you must kick—kick towards the goal."

ENDEAVORING TO KEEP THE UNITY

by Leah McGlohon

Since the Republican Convention met in San Francisco last month, the presidential nominee and his advisers have been seeking ways of bringing unity to their party. The Democratic Convention, which will meet at Atlantic City the end of this month, when its sessions are over, will probably also be seeking ways of bringing unity to its ranks. Each will be endeavoring to bring unity to its party for the purpose of winning the election in November.

There are many things to divide a political party, a family, a church; but Christ warned the Pharisees, and warns you today, that ". . . Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand" (Matthew 12:25). Thus, it behooves one to strive for unity. But what is unity? "Unity," according to Webster's dictionary, "implies oneness, especially of what is varied and diverse in its elements or parts."

To some, perhaps, for an organization to have unity, every member must agree on everything, or other members should think as they think. This, of course, is an impossibility. Unity takes into consideration individuality and differences of opinions; it seeks, in spite of the differences, oneness of purpose, sentiment, etc.

It seems to this writer that in the church, where unity should prevail if it prevails anywhere, so often members let their feelings stick out like a sore thumb. Any little thing that comes along which is contrary to the opinions or sentiments of some members offends them, and they become disgruntled and many times seek to arouse unrest among other members.

Under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the Apostle Paul, in his letter to the Ephesians, admonished them to strive for unity: "Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Ephesians 4:3). Now the church at Ephesus was made up of converted Jews, as well as Gentiles. Because of the different manner in which they were brought up, there were perhaps frequent causes for controversies. Though converted, the Jews might have been envious that the Gentiles had the same glorious privileges that they had without having to bear the yoke and burden of the Mosaic law as they had. Paul guards them against this and tells them that they should intensely labor to promote peace and unity.

Adam Clarke says, "By the 'unity of the Spirit' we are to understand, not only a 'spiritual' unity, but also a unity of sentiments, desires, and affections, such as is worthy of and springs from the Spirit of God. By the 'bond of peace' we are to understand a peace or union, where the interests of all parties are connected, cemented, and sealed; the Spirit of God being the seal upon this knot."

What are the means of unity? The apostle gives them in the preceding verse: "lowliness and meekness, long-suffering, and forbearing one another in love." "Lowliness" means humility; "meekness" makes men unwilling to provoke others or to be easily provoked or offended with their infirmities; "long-suffering" implies patiently bearing injuries without seeking revenge; and "forbearing one another in love" means that one bears their infirmities out of a principle of love, and not that one ceases to love because of them. The best Christians need to bear with one another, because they find in themselves much that is hard to forgive themselves; therefore, they must forgive others as they forgive themselves.

With these things unity can be preserved; without them it cannot. Therefore, endeavor to keep the unity.

THE HARVEST TRULY IS PLENTEOUS

by

A. B. BRYAN

Kinston, North Carolina

JESUS went about the cities and villages of the historical country and birthplace of the Christian church. He preached the gospel of the kingdom while demonstrating its power and effectiveness and by healing every sickness and every disease among the people. He set an example of the concern and fervor every Free Will Baptist should possess as we look upon the fields and visualize the doors now open to us.

Jesus had before Him a panoramic view which does not compare with our interest in missions today. "But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd" (Matthew 9:36). Then as Jesus turned to His disciples with an optimistic desire to see the infant church evangelize the world, He said, ". . . The harvest truly is plentiful, but the labourers are few" (v. 37). He showed His knowledge of techniques of a successful mission church when He said, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest" (v. 38).

I cannot, for my life, see where Jesus meant for the church to adopt the plan it has fallen upon as a substitute for failure. Jesus did not intend that one mission candidate from a single church give his life in a sacrificial way to reach the millions in faraway lands. He did not institute a plan whereby one mission-minded minister should be singled out to make a sacrifice in building a Free Will Baptist church in a community where those of like faith can continue to proclaim, as Jude of old uttered, ". . . it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3). Sending special servants is fine, but that is the beginning of active participation by all of like faith. There is no biblical method whereby we should send a missionary or mission pastor to an area and not provide prayers, support, and finances for the job to be well done.

Each Free Will Baptist must be moved with compassion in a personal way, because there are millions, many of whom can be reached and won to Christ, by our own united efforts. This has been experienced among the Spanish speaking people in Mexico and in mission churches across the states in these last few years. We must be moved by and become profoundly interested in declaring this gospel, which is the power of God, bringing salvation to everyone who believes.

To my sorrow, the records, as they stand, will haunt us at the judgment. They reveal the uninterested way we have gone about the task; yet, while we know we have a biblical doctrine unsurpassed by many of the so-called more progressive churches, we have stood almost idle. We must go forth into the field to work at the task. Free Will Baptists are to be commended in the area of standing true to the fundamental doctrines and principles of our fathers, but I do not see how we can think soberly without bowing our heads in shame by the way we have worked at winning people to what we believe as the eternal way of salvation. If we are to succeed, we must find ourselves lacking, become repentant, and remedy our status as a denomination. We must enlist our people in an active and worthy program of missions. Free Will Baptists must become involved before the victory comes. We shall seek to involve our people in a worldwide mission endeavor, God being our helper!

Personally, no one was needed to tell me to be interested in reaching the lost for Christ. The desire was born in my conversion the last Thursday night in May, 1938, in a small country church in Bladen County near Bladenboro, North Carolina. From that night I have felt the need of my church being active in missions. It is not enough for Christians to be present in a community. We must put first things first by promoting an active program of winning men and women to our faith. The church is at a loss for survival unless it sustains itself by each Christian winning another until all who will are won to Christ.

During the last twenty years it has been my privilege to pastor and do evangelistic work in Tennessee, South Carolina, and North Carolina. I have also served in various capacities in the bounds of the Pee Dee Association, Western, Cape Fear, Albemarle, Central, and Eastern Conferences of North Carolina; and have been active in the State Convention's work and the denomination at large. This I shall continue to do. I am proud of my church and for what it stands. I am proud of the opportunities

Progress of Central Conference Missions

by RAYMOND T. SASSER
Promotional Secretary-Treasurer

We are happy to report that the State Mission Board met with our Central Conference Mission Board on July 21 and approved our application to be the first to use the new metal building which the Woman's Auxiliary Convention has raised money for. In a telephone conversation with the Rev. R. H. Jackson, chairman of the state board, he reported that the order has been placed and that delivery is anticipated in about three weeks.

Our mission work, a work of faith, has been blessed by God and faithfully supported by most of the churches in our conference. Receipts for the year to date (November 1, 1963, through July 20, 1964) have amounted to $5,503.66, for which the board is deeply thankful. However, we have had to spend $6,984.39 to date, and our debts were so large at the meeting that we arranged a thousand-dollar loan to meet some of the pressing bills. The loan was not enough to pay all, so we are appealing to each church to make an offering as soon and as large as possible. Over half of what we have spent, and owe for, is for investments in real estate and improvements for the benefit of the Roanoke Rapids Mission and our Weldon church, which was just recently organized. We are endeavoring to carry out your instructions in mission work as voted by our conference while in session, the goal of which is "An Original Free Will Baptist church in every town." Our people are moving to town; they need a church of our faith when they get there.

ROANOKE RAPIDS SUNDAY SCHOOL

The following reports are encouraging:

WELDON

Sunday school attendance on July 12 was 79; a year ago it was 37. The new education building is a fine monument to the dedication of the members who have worked so hard to build it and to our people who have financed it with offerings to help them get started. They will repay your board according to contract, and this money will be used to help another mission with its building program. The Rev. Vance Link is pastor.

ROANOKE RAPIDS

The following attendance figures are given for the month of June, the month of July, and August 2 respectively: Sunday school—43, 42, 55; morning worship—35, 44, 50; evening worship—38, 24, 23; prayer meeting—15, 20. Vacation Bible school attendance averaged 60, with 86 attending the commencement exercises.

There have been several decisions for Christ. We met a fine group of men representing the building group of the mission. They were pleased with the prospect of securing a metal building for worship services, and plan to work all they can to install it when it is received. Plans are being made to have a conference work spell one Saturday when it arrives. The foundation will be installed before the date, and it is our prayer that some men from each church will attend to give a day's work to get this building installed.

URGENT REQUEST

Please send offerings to the State Mission Board to provide funds to purchase the necessary building materials to build a portable floor, inside walls, and electric fixtures to be used in the building. These will be used at the next place the building is moved also. The board wants this building to present just as good appearance as possible so that each mission will receive the best benefit possible from its use. Missionary Noah Brown writes in his last weekly report: "We are waiting for the new building to come. Brother, I believe that God will give us a great revival."

If everyone who reads this report could see how God has blessed in both of these mission works of faith, you would know that God has blessed to have the attendance and interest that they have had with such limited accommodations—Roanoke Rapids with a four room house and Weldon an abandoned store building for about three years. Mission support is our opportunity and duty.

Academy Needs

by JOHN B. ELLISTON, Director

As most of you know, we plan to begin classes in the Nogales Academy on August 31, 1964. We plan to have a Christian day school on the junior high school level, and a ministers' and missionaries' training school for those who have completed the first two years in the Academy. It is a Christian academy whose end and purpose is to prepare Mexican youths for service in Christian work.

We are in desperate straits for sufficient funds to purchase books and materials. (continued on page thirteen)

Do Laws Make People Good?

by Wallace A. Ely
Texarkana, Arkansas

PEOPLE cannot be made good just by enacting laws. Why have laws? It has been said that the human race would destroy itself and thus become extinct if we did not have civil laws and law enforcement officers. So laws should be regarded as essential to the preservation of the human race. But laws are outward and arbitrary. Only that which is inward and spiritual brings true goodness. The moral self of a person remains lodged within the will of that person. Good works and deeds come from good human wills.

Good and bad are not determined by whether or not they are a part of civil laws. Most civil laws are good, but some may be bad. Bad civil laws have endangered good people since the Hebrew children were placed into the fiery furnace and Daniel was cast into the lions' den by the civil laws. When evil is legalized by civil law, it does not become good.

Laws that promote public welfare, protect human rights, and give the weak a chance to survive and do well are good laws. The ones that promote the welfare of a few but bring hardships to the many are bad laws. The ones that make the mighty stronger and give no defense to the weak are also bad laws.

Civil laws do have a definite bearing upon human goodness. Most citizens have a respect for civil laws. When evil things are forbidden by civil laws, most people have a tendency to refrain from those things. One reason why they do is that these things are against the law. When laws of the land require that good things be done, people usually become strongly inclined to do them. Obedience to the law is a part of their motive in their doing them. So good laws help make people good.

Laws improve human conduct because they remove or minimize temptations to improper acts. A will to be a law-abiding citizen, a fear of punishment of violations of the law and a wish for good public opinion are powerful forces provided by laws. These good laws do improve human conduct.

Law enforcement officers range from marshalls of small towns, constables of townships, and deputy sheriffs to all of the armed forces of the nation. Wise people know that crime does not pay. Any law violation by any person or by any group of persons will become exposed and will meet with punishment if practiced long enough. This inevitable punishment of bad proves a strong force to keep people good.

People, especially the youth of the land, need to be educated as to what is good and what is bad. When the laws of the land require that certain things must be done, the citizens become well informed that these are proper ways of human conduct. When the laws condemn certain practices as forbidden and requiring punishment, the subjects of that government have a most impressive lesson in conduct from which they should refrain.

When there are requirements by law to do certain things, law-abiding citizens invent ways to accomplish them and these laws can be openly and widely publicized. This helps burn the good requirements into the consciences of the citizens. When laws forbid and place penalties upon certain human conduct, they establish the conduct as unquestionably wrong.

Good laws put wrong behavior on the defensive, drives the wrongdoers to cover and often completely stops the wrong.

Law-abiding citizens find adequate protection from wrongdoers who have little or no regard for law. Lawless individuals or groups of individuals find a powerful restraint from their wishes to break the law when they know that law enforcement officers are on every hand and that these are in sufficient force to bring law violators to justice.

Good moral people have a convincing reason for their moral conduct when all who know them accept them as being well within the laws of their country. Their morality shines brighter in the darkness of immorality if it is approved by the civil law. Wrongs manifest themselves as more horrible when they are in flagrant violation of the statutes of the government.

Great injustices have been done by some governments and by some law enforcement officers. These will prove extremely minor compared to the insecurity, injustices, and chaos that doubtless would be rampant in human society if there were no laws.

Clubs, secret organizations, labor unions, religious organizations, civic organizations, and other groups of people banded together to accomplish a purpose find it necessary to establish well-defined rules or laws. Institutions, factories, business establishments, and corporations must establish laws to coordinate and promote the efforts to produce goods or to accomplish a purpose.

These who believe in God must accept Him as a lawgiver. They must accept Him as one who rewards the obedient and punishes those who violate His laws. The Bible strongly endorses civil law. Indeed, Romans 13:1-7 teaches that "every soul be subject unto the higher powers." It also forbids resistance to the civil authorities and represents rulers as a terror to evil. The writer of the passage concludes that we should be subject to the civil powers and pay tribute to them.

In a democracy as we have in our country the laws originate largely in the will of the people governed. This being true, every serious-minded citizen should remain active to prevent laws that harm human society and to establish laws that promote human welfare.

The Lighted Church

A Challenge to Free Will Baptists
by MRS. GRACE WHORTON

This generation is blessed with prosperity second to none; yet we take all this for granted—yes, and expect more and more. When will Christian America awaken to some of her spiritual responsibilities?

There are few churches, including all denominations, that are lighted on Sunday nights. There is no better place that people of all ages can be found than in God's house on Sunday night. The world offers so much entertainment by way of TV programs, resort areas, and the like that even some Christians seem to forget the commandment to "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy."

You may say that you have church only twice a month, so what can you do? You can organize a Free Will Baptist League! You do not have to have a pastor to organize and carry on a league program, although a pastor can add much strength by his attendance and advice.

You may say that you have so few young people in your church that it would not be worth the effort. Who said that the league is just for the youth? It is indeed for the young, middle aged, and old folks.

North Carolina Leaders Receive Recognition

TWO members of the executive committee of the State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina recently received recognition through papers and magazines. The Rev. C. L. Patrick of Walstonburg, president of the convention, was recognized by The Progressive Farmer and the Candler School of Theology of Emory University as being the 1964 Rural Minister of the Year for his state; and Oscar Webster, a lay member of the committee, was recognized in the Washington Daily News of Washington, North Carolina, through the column, "In the Rural Spotlight."

The Rev. Mr. Patrick was nominated by the Layman's League of his church, Free Union Free Will Baptist, located near Snow Hill. In nominating him, they said:

"C. L. Patrick is a born leader. He not only knows how to convince you, but he also leads you in your convictions. He has stirred us, a small church, into the most outstanding accomplishments of our history.

"It must have looked like a great challenge to a young man when he started to preach for us the first Sunday in each month in 1948. His first burden was to save souls. His next was to build a bigger and better church to reach more people. A vestibule was built. Plate glass windows were replaced with colored glass windows. A baptistry was installed. An impressive choir loft was built, and then a parsonage.

"By 1952, Free Union became the first Free Will Baptist church in our conference to have a full-time minister. (Editor's note: one of the first. Greenville had a full-time minister before this time; and at least three others, about the same time.)

"The next forward step was a new and larger sanctuary, Mr. Patrick endorsed the 'Lord's Acre Plan' and extra money began coming in from this source. Men of the church helped in the building program. Now complete is one of the most modern rural church plants in the state."

Mr. Patrick has also served as past moderator of the Central Conference, of which he is a member, and in various other offices and on numerous committees of the denomination. In addition to his church activities, he has been very active in PTA work and served as president of his local organization. He maintains an active membership in the Farm Bureau, and has been both manager and coach of Little League baseball teams.

Oscar Webster of Pinetown, Route 1, is active in a variety of affairs, largely church and school, in his native Beaufort County.

A long-time lay leader in the Original Free Will Baptist denomination, Mr. Webster is a member of Trinity church at Pungo, where he is a teacher of the Adult Sunday School Class and a member of the board of deacons. He is also secretary of the Albemarle Conference and a member of the executive committee of the State Convention.

His interest in church affairs dates back to boyhood and his active support has been constant. In past years he served as secretary of the North Carolina Sunday School Convention, president of the State League Convention, and president of the Albemarle Sunday School Convention. Last year he served as chairman of a steering committee in Beaufort County to raise funds for developing the new Mount Olive College campus. Currently, among other things, he is conducting a Tuesday night prayer meeting for the Trinity church.

Of his school and community affairs, the Washington Daily News reports as follows:

"In school affairs, besides heading up the Bath school committee, he is a member of the Parent-Teacher association and is a past president. He is also a member of the Bath Alumni association and a past president of that organization.

"Other activities include serving as an Adult leader for the Spotlight Four-H club in which his daughter is president and leader in a variety of local and county activities. She was the 1961 Four-H Grand Champion at the County Four-H Strawberry Show and Sale here. He is a former Ruritan and past president of the Bath club and is a member of the Washington-Beaufort Industrial Education committee.

"Politically, the county man is a Democrat from a long line of Democrats and is chairman of the Hunters Bridge precinct."

Mr. Webster is a builder by trade.

PERHAPS HE IS A GOOD MAN

When you see a man dragged to prison or to death, do not hasten to say he is a bad man, who has committed a crime against his brother.

For perhaps he is a good man who has tried to serve his brothers, and who is punished by their oppressors.

When you see a people loaded with irons and given over to the executioner, do not hasten to say that it is a turbulent people seeking to trouble the peace of the earth.

For perchance it is a martyr people dying for the human race.

Eighteen centuries ago, in an eastern town, the pontiffs and the kings of that day nailed upon a cross, after having beaten him, a rebel, a blasphemer, as they called him.

On the day of his death hell trembled, but there was joy in heaven.

For the blood of the just had redeemed the world.

College Board to Award Contracts

The Mount Olive College board of directors will meet Monday, August 31, to award the first contracts for the building program on the new 90-acre campus.

G. Milton Small of Raleigh, college architect, announced that blueprints for the first buildings are currently being distributed to interested contractors. Bids will be opened at the college on August 27, Small reported.

Included in the plans are an academic building for 350 students and a dormitory complex for 132 students. The academic building, to be named in memory of the late Dr. C. C. Henderson of Mount Olive, will be constructed out of college funds. Contract for the dormitory complex is contingent upon approval of a loan to the college from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

These buildings are scheduled for occupancy in September, 1965, President W. Burkette Raper disclosed.

College to Offer Evening Classes

As a service to the area served by Mount Olive College, an evening program in business will be offered this fall for persons who wish to develop personal and vocational skills.

Courses will include typewriting, shorthand, and bookkeeping. Classes will meet Monday and Wednesday evenings from 5:30 to 10:30 beginning September 9 and ending January 20. Students may enroll in either or all three courses.

Registration is open to the public and graduation from high school is not required for admission. No college credit is given but a certificate is awarded to those who complete courses successfully.

Additional information and application forms may be secured by contacting the Registrar, Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina (Phone: 658-2502, Mount Olive).

ROSE BUD CHURCH TO ENTERTAIN YFA AND AFC

The YFAs and AFCs of the Second Western District will meet with Rose Bud Free Will Baptist Church near Wilson, North Carolina, Saturday evening, August 15, at 7:30. All members of the YFAs and AFCs of this district and other interested young people, also adults who are interested in the welfare of our youth, are welcome and urged to attend.

Bear Grass, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church held its July meeting in the home of Mrs. Annie Cratt with eight members and four visitors present. Mrs. Mertie Coltrain read the Scripture taken from Luke 14:15-24, and was in charge of the program, "Our Neighbors 'Round the Corner." The program closed with the group's praying together the Lord's Prayer.

During the business session the treasurer, Mrs. Selma Cowan, reported a balance of $34.01. The meeting adjourned with sentence prayers.

The hostess served refreshments to those present.

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Mount Zion Free Will Baptist Church met for its monthly meeting on July 28 in the home of Mrs. Josephine Johnson. There were sixteen members present. The group sang "Bringing in the Sheaves," followed with the Scripture reading taken from Luke 14:15-24. The program chairman, Mrs. Laudy Brewer, took charge of the program, "Our Neighbors 'Round the Corner." She was assisted by Mrs. Ruby Johnson, Mrs. Lillian Crocker, Mrs. Geraldine Crockrell, Mrs. Crema Johnson, Mrs. Anna Johnson, Mrs. Alonia Narron, Mrs. Lizza Godwin, and Mrs. Martha Boswell. The group then discussed the topic in general. The pastor, the Rev.

Royster Martin, closed the program by singing the song, "Unworthy."

During the business period the roll was called, minutes read, and the treasurer's report given. The meeting closed with the praying of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

WORD BRAMBLES

Wirt Blaine

ELLEN saw the lovely wild roses growing just under the shadow of the hill. "I'll take some along home to fill the rose bowl," she decided, reaching for the longest and pinkest of the blooms.

The next moment she leaped back, gasped and looked ruefully at a long scratch on her plump arm.

"The rosebush is growing right through that sharp old bramble, and I can't gather the roses," she said to herself.

Taking the two blooms she had managed to reach, she started toward her home.

"This is all I could pick," she explained to her mother. "And all because an ugly old dead bramble was twisted hard and tight around the rosebush. It makes it so unpleasant. I shan't go there to gather flowers again."

"No, I don't suppose you will," Mother said, examining the ugly red scratch on Ellen's arms. "Does that remind you of anything, dear? Something about which we talked just this past week?"

Ellen thought for a moment as she bathed her arm with a cooling lotion. "You mean—the way an unkind word sometimes scratches and spoils all the kind words a person remembers?"

"That is right," Ellen's mother said. "If the beautiful word or act is buried in words of complaining and grumbling, or if we aren't careful to keep the sharp words 'trimmed down,' other persons cannot gather happiness from our lives without their being stung or hurt just as the bramble injured you."

"I—I understand, Mother," Ellen said, thoughtfully.—Junior Journeys.

QUOTES

THE LAST DAYS

The Apostle Paul writes: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Timothy 3:1-5). When will these conditions come? "In the last days." These conditions are here. When? "In the last days."

We human beings have so much love for self that we prefer to live in luxury and live in the spirit that the rich man lived in who died and lifted up his eyes in hell (Luke 16:31). This man was filled with love for self; therefore, he could not see the man full of sores, nor hear his cry for bread. A great number of people today carry the spirit of the rich man. Friend, if you are in this number, you had better repent and get right with God and man before you close your eyes in death, or else you might meet the rich man of Luke 16.

Demonstrations that are promoted by hatred and prejudice—not only in foreign countries, but right here at Jackson, Mississippi; Harlem, New York; and Rochester—are facts that we are living in the last days. Satanic powers cause confusion. The desperate wickedness of man destroys life and property. It is certain that the poor class of people, not only among the Negro, but also among the white, throughout all ages have not had a chance to improve their condition in the most needful ways of life. But two wrongs never make a right. It is wrong to put on demonstrations that turn to riots with destruction of life and property.

Truly perilous times are right here with us. There is a cause. What is it? It is selfishness, covetousness, hatred, and greed. Satan is ruling the world. Paul, in Verse 3 of this chapter, says, "Without natural affection, . . ." A newspaper article carried the story of a baby found in a garbage can. The mother of this baby had destroyed natural affection. Some mothers leave their children to the mercy of the world. Sometimes a mother leaves the man that she has been living with and runs off with another. She has lost natural affection. Then there are those who think more of their pet dog than they do of anything else in the world. I once asked a lady about going to Sunday school; and she said, "No, I have got to take my dog to walk." Her affection was on her dog instead of her church and her Sunday school.

The mother cow has more natural affection than some men and women. If a person goes near a newborn calf, the mother will usually shake her head and warn against getting too near. But some mothers turn their children out to roam the streets and alleys amidst all kinds of people, not knowing of their whereabouts. Years ago Sam Jones said that some men have $100 bird dogs and ten cent boys. I do not know about the saying, but it is a fact that some men spend more time with their dogs than they do with their boys.

Space does not permit a discussion of all the words in this passage from Paul's writings. The next word is trucebreakers, and I am sure that there are a great number in this category. Many of these are politicians, along with some preachers. Preachers who have promised to abide by the rules and regulations of the denomination to which they have connected themselves by choice and who, when they have gotten control of the majority of the membership, split the church and run off with what they can get to follow them, to my mind, are trucebreakers.

Many of these trucebreakers become false accusers. God says, "Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! . . ." (Jeremiah 23:1). I have been told that preachers have a very unique way of dividing the sheep by saying, "Anyone else" or "Another." In a case like this, perhaps the preacher wants a church of his own. But anyway, God says, "Woe be unto the pastors that scatter the sheep."

In most church splits there are always some people who are gifted in bearing false witness—false accusers. They do not fail to be true to the sin of falsely accusing others.

Now may we consider lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. This class love worldly pleasures more than God. They have the spirit, "I'll go to church, or Sunday school, if it does not interfere with my attending my favorite ball game or fishing trip. I had rather fish than to attend church." Some of these people say, "I can be as good at home as at church." Let us see what God says: "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;) And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching. For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins" (Hebrews 10:23-26). It is a sin for a child of God to willfully stay away from church, or to let trivial things come between him and God. It is a sin that must be repented of, and there is no other way of repentance except by the way of Christ.

That doctrine or saying, "I can be as good at home as at the house of worship," is a work of Satan. And Satan does not fail to work to keep Christians away from the house of God. When Satan wins, that Christian is the loser; and he can lose until he loses out and is left in a state of which the writer of Hebrews says, "But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, . . ." (Hebrews 10:27).

"GO-SPELL"

The original Twelve were commissioned, "Go . . . to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Later Christ appointed the additional Seventy, whom He sent two by two into every city and place. This was a larger authorization. "Go your ways," He told them, "the harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few." Go has always been an important part of GOspel. Merely hyphenate the word, adding another letter, and it seems to automatically flow, "Go spell out redemption to all people."—Clay Cooper.

Don't think that you are necessarily on the right road because it is a well beaten path.—Biblical Recorder.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: I would appreciate it very much if you would explain for me, "As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction. Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness" (2 Peter 3:16, 17).—Mary M. Mewborn, Route 2, Box 133, La-Grange, North Carolina.

ANSWER: I believe that a part of what Ellicott's Commentary has to say on this passage will be useful to us in understanding this Scripture; therefore I quote: "As also in all his epistles"—All those known to the writer. The expression does not necessarily imply that St. Paul was dead, and that his Epistles had been collected into one volume. That each church made a collection of them as they became known to it, and that in the great centers they became known soon after they were written, are conjectures of great probability.

"Speaking in them of these things"—viz., of the return of Christ and of the destruction of the world. Some, however, understand the words as meaning the exhortation to holiness here given.

"Some things hard to be understood"—Certainly the difficulties with which 2 Thessalonians 2 bristles are well described by this expression, and they relate to the very point in question—the time of Christ's coming. Moreover, scoffers could easily turn them to account by arguing that 'the man of sin' had not yet appeared and that therefore there was no likelihood of the end of the world coming just yet. But in admitting that 2 Thessalonians 2 is among the passages alluded to here, we are not committed to the theory that 1 and 2 Thessalonians are alluded to in verse 15. Many refer these words to St. Paul's doctrine of justification by faith as wrestled to mean 'faith without works.' So again, Ephesians 2:5, 6 and Colossians 2:12 might be wrestled that 'the resurrection is past already' (2 Timothy 2:18)....

"Unlearned and unstable"—The word for 'unlearned' here is not the same as that translated 'unlearned' in Acts 4:13. . . . That signifies 'without special study'; this means without ordinary instructions. Ignorance naturally produces instability; those who have no clear principles of Christian doctrine easily fall victims to seduction of all kinds. (Compare Chapter 2:14.)"

Wrest, as used here, means "to strain," "rock," "torture," "distort." There were—I understand from reading the Scriptures and also historical data other than that found in the Bible descriptive of the current events of the day in which Peter wrote and of the attitudes expressed concerning the Christians, their teachings, and way of life—those who mocked believers who sought to help weak and more unlearned than they by inserting false expressions and meaning to what the true disciples had tried to clarify. Certain Judaizers were noted for the propagation of such errors. The Jehovah's Witnesses and Seventh Day Adventists of our day are good for this; also the Mormons, Christian Scientists, and the liberals. The Christians of Peter's day needed to be warned of these false teachers, so Peter was keeping faith with his Lord by warning them. We need to know our Bible and be aware of the corrupt teachings of false cults and give warning to those whom God has called us to be overseers to.

Long and Ellicott both agree that this word wrest, as here used by Peter, means "to torture by means of the rock." By the use of this word then, he is saying that there are false representers that are not among those that the Holy Spirit now controls and teaches, who, in their ignorance of the true meaning of the inspired Word, do violence to its real meaning as they, in claiming to expound it, warp the words so as to make them miss the meaning the Holy Spirit has given them. In this way they bar the way to clarity of the thought in the passage of Scripture; and not only do they do this to the degree that they hinder others who may be sincere seekers of the truth and of Jesus, the true Way into the truth, but they also in this dishonesty close the door of entrance into eternal life to themselves. Probably these false teachers had heard the truth often, but, instead of bowing to its influence, had explained its significance away, continuing in the way of darkness they had willfully chosen. Solomon tells us what such may gain. "Better is the poor that walketh in his integrity, than he that is perverse in his lips, and is a fool" (Proverbs 19:1). Jesus also tells what this class are in for and what the results of their effort will gain for them and others that follow their evil example. "Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch" (Matthew 15:14).

One might note here that the Scriptures nowhere excuse a man because he has believed false teaching. Therefore, those who believe them that teach that there is no eternal hell of fire will go there for believing the lie that false teachers teach, instead of what John 3:16, 36; Acts 16:31; and Luke 16:19-31 teach. Believing on Christ as Saviour does not only mean that one believes in Him as a historical character. The devils did that and trembled. It means for us to believe on Him as He is set forth in the Scriptures; viz., as the only begotten Son of the only true God and as the Saviour of all who believe on Him. (See Romans 12:1, 2; Matthew 11:28-30; Romans 1:16-26; Acts 16:31.) "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble . . . Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect? And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the Friend of God" (James 2:19, 22, 23).

I have heard it said by several noted scholars that true genuine faith always produces good works. Jesus' testimony bore this fact when He said, "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth

TEN-YEAR-OLD Meggy sat on the steps of her drab little home, and thought of the neat little house she and her mother had lived in before coming to this poor little street which people referred to as "Junk Alley." Meggy had been three years in Canada, after coming from a small town in Scotland. She loved to think of it, and of her dear grandparents, and how they had pled with her father and mother to "leave the bairn with them." Nobody ever called her a bairn in this land, she sadly thought.

The family had only been in Canada a short time when her daddy had taken sick, and died suddenly, leaving both Meggy and her mother very lonely, and bewildered. They had to leave the nice little house beside a park, and come here, to "Junk Alley." The house wasn't so very bad, Meggy told herself, but oh dear, the street was horrible.

Her mother had to go to work, when Daddy died. She didn't mind working to support herself and Meggy, if only they had a decent place to live. It was summer vacation now, and Meggy cleaned up around their place. Her mother showed her how to plant a little garden, and now on this bright summer day, it gave an air of brightness to the drab little street. If only everybody cleaned up their places, Meggy told herself, it would make the street look so much better, but the people on "Junk Alley," just seemed to have lost heart, and oh how the little girl longed to cheer her sad neighbors.

As she sat on the steps of her home, that nice day, she wondered how she could be a help to the folk on her street. She had really tried to get the other children to go with her to the Mission Sunday School, but so far the only one she could get was Mrs. Thomson's lame granddaughter. Meggy gave a loud sigh. Well, she would keep on letting her light shine for Jesus, as she had been taught at the Mission.

Meggy loved the Lord Jesus. He was her own personal Saviour. She had given Him her heart before she ever came to Canada. Back home in Scotland, her grandparents had taught her from God's Word, and encouraged her to memorize much of it. The good superintendent of the Mission had taken fresh heart each time Meggy recited one of the Psalms. There was much to discourage God's servants who ran the Mission, but everyone of them thanked God for sending the sweet little girl, and her quiet mother to their Mission Hall.

Although she was only ten, Meggy did most of the housework. Her mother called her "a treasure," and the neighbors on "Junk Alley," were amazed at the way the little girl could keep house, and do so many other things so well. Her quiet, refined ways spoke for the faith God had planted in her heart. Oh, Meggy didn't know it, but God was using her to bless the lives of her neighbors.

Meggy heard her next door neighbor call her, and she quickly went to see what the lady wanted. Her mother told her she must be polite at all times to the neighbors, but she mustn't go in their homes unless it was very necessary, and Meggy always obeyed her mother. Mrs. Thomson had come from Scotland, too, many years before. She had a great respect for Meggy and her mother, but poor Mrs. Thomson drank a lot of strong drink. Meggy got her a nice cup of tea, then asked what else she could do. Mrs. Thomson surprised her. "Will you sing me a Psalm, dearie?" she asked. Meggy was thankful to do what she asked, and she sang the 121st Psalm. "I to the hills will lift mine eyes." Her voice rang out in reverence and joy and in witness for her Lord, and more than one person in "Junk Alley" was touched.

From that day, Mrs. Thomson began to change for the better in her way of life. Meggy was well enough instructed in the Bible to know that the lady had to turn to Christ as a lost sinner, just turning over a new leaf would not save her soul. But when Mrs. Thomson asked to go to the Mission Hall with them, Meggy and her mother rejoiced. They knew the lady would hear the Gospel preached plainly there. The good superintendent of the Mission rejoiced, too. As did all the workers. Oh, how they had prayed for the folk of "Junk Alley," and for Mrs. Thomson. Now it looked as if God was beginning to answer their prayers, using a little girl and her mother to lead the woman who was hardest of all to reach. Along with Meggy and her mother, the Mission people took fresh courage, and worked harder than ever on the task God had entrusted to them. They met oftener to wait on Him, as well as giving more time to visitation.

Meggy and her mother had another wonderful answer to prayer. Great was their joy when the city council decided to pull down an old factory, and make a little parkette. Trees were planted, and flower beds made, and nice benches placed around. This did much to make the "Junk Alley" folk want to fix up their places. Then every Lord's Day, in good weather, the Mission people held a service in the parkette, so those who couldn't or wouldn't attend the Mission, heard the Gospel of the grace of God preached to them. Meggy loved to think that better times were coming to "Junk Alley," and gave God all the glory.—My Pleasure.

materials with which to begin school. We had great confidence that you would have sent in sufficient money to provide for this need during the last month so that we would have it by now. However, such was not the case. As a consequence, the opening day of the Academy is rapidly approaching with insufficient books and supplies and no money with which to buy them.

It will cost about $15 for books and materials for each student in the ministerial course and about $5 for each of the others. If we can anticipate some ten students in the ministerial course, that will require in the vicinity of $150, while some thirty students in the junior high school will cost about the same, or another $150. Those of you who have children in school know very well that these are not exorbitant amounts. The main difference is that you are paying this amount for your children, while we are asking your help for those who are not your children. However, these children are too poor to pay the cost themselves. Therefore, if they are to attend the school, they are going to require your help.

Unless someone has sent in some help by the time you read this, the need will be very desperate. If you feel disposed to send an offering to help with this need, please send it directly to Arizona-Mexico Missions, Box 550, Nogales, Arizona 85621. If you live in North Carolina, it will still be counted toward the 60% of the budget on the account of North Carolina, but we shall have the money to order materials before school begins. Please pray over this and see if God would have you help with this urgent need.

We feel that our hope of obtaining Mexican workers who are sufficiently trained and dedicated must rest in this school. Our past experience has taught us that the other persons who come along claiming to want to work with us are only seeking an income. They are not faithful to their work, their congregations, nor their contractual agreements. In fact, they have so abused every confidence placed in them, that if it were not for the faithful ones which we have trained in the past (who remain faithful regardless of circumstances) we should be tempted to doubt that you can find a Mexican who is faithful.

However, we have had long years of wonderful relations with the Mexicans whom we have trained; and we know that any hope of evangelizing Mexico which we may have must of necessity depend upon persons trained by us. Not only is this school a good thing for the work here; it is absolutely essential. We are practically at a standstill in our evangelization of Mexico until we can train some workers. Please pray for this need, and help as you can.

Laniers on Itinerary August 22 through September

The Rev. and Mrs. James L. Lanier, missionaries to the Spanish speaking people in Arizona and Mexico, will be on itinerary in the state of North Carolina and other areas beginning August 22 and continuing through September.

They will be available for a mission service at your church if your request is made before their schedule is filled. They will be equipped with the latest movies of the Mexico work and will be promoting missions and mission projects sponsored by the State Convention of North Carolina Free Will Baptists and other affiliated bodies.

Forward your request for a mission service to Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513. You will receive prompt information as to when they are available for your area. If you have preference, please state so.

Do not delay. Let this couple help you support missions by keeping you informed as to the progress being made.

The league programs for each age group, including the adult, are designed to inform Free Will Baptists of the important facts of doctrine, to help promote fellowship, and to help the member to be loyal to his church and to his God through attendance and service.

As the president of the Fifth Eastern League Convention, this writer would like to urge people who have no leagues in their church to obtain a Free Will Baptist League Manual from the press in Ayden and learn some of the values of league work. Then they should get busy and lead their church to start this training program. It could prove to be the best step a church has ever taken.

After a league has been organized, it should represent with delegates at the next league convention of the district. The next convention in the Fifth Eastern district convenes on Saturday night, August 29, at New Haven church.

It is discouraging to the few who try to carry on this program of the convention when there are only seven out of thirty-three churches that represent, as was the case at the last convention of the Fifth Eastern district.

This is a worthwhile undertaking for any group of Christians who would like to see our Free Will Baptist churches lighted once again as of old on Sunday night.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR AUGUST 23

A NEW CALL FOR FAITHFULNESS

LESSON TEXT: Deuteronomy 6:4-17

MEMORY VERSE: Deuteronomy 11:16

I. INTRODUCTION

The Book of Deuteronomy contains parting counsels which Moses, a short time before his death, delivered to the then living Israelites by word of mouth and wrote down in a Book for future generations. The Children of Israel were soon to enter the Promised Land, their covenanted possession, and these counsels were delivered to them as needed instruction for their conduct in the land.

In the sixth chapter of Deuteronomy Moses charged Israel to be sure to maintain piety in Canaan. They were to fear Jehovah their God, to keep their statutes and commandments, Israel and their children and their children's children. This would assure their prosperity in the land. If they would fear Jehovah, it would be well with them. Those who are well taught if they pay attention to what they are taught, are blessed and prospered of Jehovah.

It will be observed that Moses was deeply concerned about the coming generation, and that he gave counsels which immediately concerned the homes of the Israelites. And what could have possibly been more important than that? The homes of the Israelites were the chief center in which the fear of Jehovah and true piety could be fostered and maintained.

It is for this reason that Jehovah God through Moses laid great stress upon teaching the Law to their children, keeping it and making it a vital part of their daily living.—Bible Expositor.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. God made it clear to the Israelites that He alone is the true and living God (v. 4).

2. He also commanded that they should love Him with all their heart, soul, and might (v. 5).

3. The Israelites were to keep the commandments to the very best of their ability in all their activities, and they were to teach them to their children (vv. 6, 7).

4. Religion is a matter that requires the constant attention of those who would please God (vv. 8, 9).

5. God reminded His people that He was going to bring them into the land that He had promised their fathers; but in doing so, He warned them against forgetting Him (vv. 10-12).

6. The Israelites were commanded to fear God and to serve Him in the land of promise (v. 13).

7. God warned them against going after other gods—those of the people around them (v. 14).

8. The Lord is a jealous God, and idolatry will kindle His wrath against those who forsake Him (v. 15).

9. The Lord warned His people against further provoking Him as they had done in Egypt (v. 16).

10. The commandments, as well as all His teachings, must be kept diligently (v. 17).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Somewhere I have read a little story of a child in a woodland camp whose father sent him with a letter to the village, pointing out a trail over which the lad had never gone before. "All right, Father, but I don't see how that path will ever reach the town," said the boy. "Do you see the trail as far as the big tree down there?" answered the man. "Oh, yes, I see that far." "Well, when you get there by the tree, you'll be able to see the trail a little farther ahead, and so on until you get within sight of the houses of the village." There is in our pilgrimage of faith an element of sheer faith, not seeing.—Sunday School Times. Frederick Robertson (Brighton).

2. In the wilderness the children of Israel lived among neighbors and relatives who worshiped God and obeyed His commandments. The tabernacle of the Lord was always among them, to remind them of God and His laws:

Now the people were almost ready to go into the Promised Land where they would live in the cities already settled by other people. In some cases the inhabitants would be gone; in others Israel would simply move in among them. Here they would see the gods of the heathen. They would be tempted to marry heathen people. They would be invited to join their revelries and idolatrous practices. How would God's people fare?

It was going to be necessary to set up defenses that would keep the people close to God. Lacking the tabernacle or the cloud of the Lord in their camp, each household of God's people would need a kind of invisible wall of faith between it and the homes of the heathen.

They were to repeat diligently their covenant with the Lord. They were to teach these words to their children, talk of them as they gathered in their homes, and as they walked along the way. They were to bind them on their hands and their foreheads, and write them on the posts of their homes. Such constant reminders would help them meet the temptations of living among heathen people.

While we today may not need such tangible reminders to strengthen our faith, we still need the invisible wall of faith between ourselves and those who would tempt us to sin.—Standard Commentary.

3. A hardened unbeliever went one day to see, but not to hear, George Whitefield. In order to have a good vantage point and be inconspicuous, he climbed a nearby tree. Putting his fingers in his ears he watched with fascination the mighty preacher in action. Then a persistent fly lit on his nose. He shook his head, but the fly wouldn't move. He stood the annoyance as long as he could. Just as he removed his hand from his ear to flick the fly away Whitefield quoted the verse, "He that hath an ear, let him hear." Then he spoke of the willful deafness of those who reject Christ. The unbeliever was so impressed by the seeming coincidence that he opened not only his ears to the Gospel, but his heart, too!

"Hear ye the word which the Lord speaketh unto you" (Jeremiah 10:1).

"I have enjoyed your meetings this week, but I am sorry I attended them," said a well-to-do businessman to a minister. "Why?" "Here's why. These meetings have reminded me afresh that I have missed God's best for my life. I was called to be a missionary in Africa. I intended to answer God's call. I began to earn money for my passage and outfit. I earned more and more money. I stayed and entered business. Today I am the owner of a large business concern. I have everything money can buy. I also have a lovely wife and children. But in my heart there is a great void. My life has been a failure, not from the standpoint of the world, but from God's point of view!"—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

it has given me, and I intend to show it by the way I spend the remainder of my days.

All the remaining talents I possess have been challenged in recent weeks as I have pondered the will of the Lord in an answer as to whether it was His will to resign an active full-time church to become director-treasurer of the mission work. In this decision, with a new dedication, I am confident the Lord will continue a steady progress. We covet your prayers and financial support in the years ahead. We must have your support.

I am convinced, along with each member of the mission department, that the Lord, in a very special way, has guided the efforts of Original Free Will Baptists in establishing the beginning of a sound mission program that with His guidance will continue to succeed. Each Free Will Baptist can justly be heartened at the work as it stands. It would take several hours to review the records here in the office and explain why there is convincing proof of His guiding hand.

The mission board has seen the department grow from an empty collecting and promoting agency for mission interests of nearly $90,000 yearly with less than $6,000 being used in the State Convention work. The convention's mission board, as you know, was emphatically told to get out and stay out of a mission program that had been built partly from several hundred thousand dollars coming from loyal Original Free Will Baptists who are still supporting missions and are largely responsible for the present program with more than thirty part-time or full-time employees.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few." You can increase the number of laborers by becoming a prayer partner and by becoming a faithful contributor to the cause. You can encourage your church organizations to contribute a regular amount to missions. Ask your pastor and church officials how your church supports missions and request that more emphasis be placed upon mission support.

You can begin now to prepare an offering to take to the mission rally at the State Convention in September. Have a rally in your church. Invite the incoming director-treasurer for a mission service in your church. Start receiving an offering and having a season of prayers for missions at the Wednesday evening prayer service.

Lets get together on the theme of missions, "The Harvest Truly Is Plenteous." We need more people to help gather sheaves. Will you help us while we sing:

"Going forth with weeping, sowing for the Master,
Tho' the loss sustained our spirit often grieves;
When our weeping's over, He will bid us welcome,
We shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves."

good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them" (Matthew 7:16-20). "For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit" (Luke 6:43). You have never known the Mormons, the Seventh Day Adventists, the Jehovah's Witnesses, the Christian Scientists, the Catholics, or the modernists to produce and send forth a Billy Graham, a Billy Sunday, a Gypsy Smith, a D. L. Moody, a John Wesley, a Charles Spurgeon, nor anyone to be compared with these and others when it comes to one's being able to expound the Scripture without bias and in the power of the Holy Spirit so that it brings thousands of hardened sinners humbly into the saving grace of God's love.

Qualities of a Minister

The Preacher must possess:

- The strength of an ox.
- The tenacity of a bulldog.
- The daring of a lion.
- The patience of a donkey.
- The industry of a beaver.
- The versatility of a chameleon.
- The vision of an eagle.
- The meekness of a lamb.
- The hide of a rhinoceros.
- The disposition of an angel.
- The resignation of an incurable.
- The loyalty of an apostle.
- The heroism of a martyr.
- The faithfulness of a prophet.
- The tenderness of a shepherd.
- The fervency of an evangelist.
- The devotion of a mother.

No Time to Treat Men Wrong

WALTER E. ISENHOUR

There is a time to work and play,
A time to eat and sleep;
A time to study and to pray,
A time to laugh and weep;
A time for fellowship that's sweet,
A time for sacred song;
But never is there time to treat
A human being wrong.

There is a time to lift men up
And help them on life's road;
A time to drain their bitter cup
And share their heavy load;
A time to bless them with our grace
And boost them all along;
But never is there time and place
To treat our fellows wrong.

There is a time to help men seek
Our God who saves the soul;
A time to show them that the meek
Shall reach life's highest goal;
A time to help them turn aside
And leave the wicked throng;
But never did the Lord provide
A time to treat men wrong.

Prevailing faith in God's promises makes us conquerors. When we step out into God's promises we forget self and win victory by believing God.—L. H.

There Is No God?

TOMMY MANNING

The world is filled with doubt and confusion. Disbelief abounds and man's arrogance is prevalent on every hand. Each day we come in contact with those who would deny the existence of a divine Power. There are those who feel that man, himself, is supreme. Yet, when we look about ourselves and discover the splendors of nature, who can say, "There is no God"?

Who can say "There is no God"?
I see Him in the field;
I hear Him in the songs of birds
From o'er the distant hill;
I feel Him in a drop of rain;
I hear Him at the shore;
I know for sure there is a God—
For now and evermore.

Who can say "There is no God"?
He's felt in every breeze;
He's seen amid the flow'rs of spring
And in the autumn leaves;
He whispers in a shady brook;
He's seen in setting sun;
I know for sure there is a God
Who cares for everyone.

Who can say "There is no God"?
I see Him in a smile;
I hear Him in the shouts of joy
And laughter of a child;
I feel Him in the summer's warmth
When sunshine turns the hay;
I know for sure there is a God
Who watches day by day.

Who can say "There is no God"?
He's in the air we breathe;
His fingers touch the lily pad
And turns its flow'r to seed;
His voice is in the billows' roar;
His might in ocean deep;
I know for sure there is a God
Who watches while I sleep.

Who can say "There is no God"?
I see Him when I wake;
I feel Him in the path I walk
And with each step I take;
I see Him in the willow's sway;
And in rainbow after rain;
I know for sure there is a God
Who soothes my every pain.

Who can say "There is no God"?
He's seen in budding tree;
He's felt within the foamy waves
That flow from yonder sea;
He's heard in every sound of dark;
He's seen in starry sky;
I know for sure there is a God—
He's in my heart—that's why!

I SEE GOD IN THE SEASONS

Dorothy Conant Stroud

I see God in Spring's greening loveliness,
 In Summer's miracle of growing things,
 And as the misty hills flame red and gold
 I see Him in the beauty Autumn brings.

Then when chill Winter winds adorn the earth
 With drifting veils of rainbow-tinted snow,
 My heart thrills with a love and reverence
 Which only God's own children truly know!

Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist'

The Free Will Baptist Sunday schools in Greene County, North Carolina, will meet with Spring Branch Church, near Walstonburg, Friday, September 3, at 7 p. m. This is a regular quarterly meeting of the fellowship which meets at different schools for a free supper and then a business session. The president is Jimmie Lee Jones of Grimsley church.

The North Carolina State Convention is to convene September 15, 16, 1954, at the Orphanage, Middlesex. The Rev. N. B. Barrow will deliver the introductory sermon.

From 'Living Waters'

It is said that Tennyson was walking one day in a beautiful garden where many flowers were blooming, and a friend said to him, "Mr. Tennyson, you speak so often of Jesus. Will you tell me what Christ really means to you?"

Tennyson stopped, and pointing to a beautiful yellow flower, said, "What the sun is to the flower, Jesus Christ is to my soul."

On the Light Side

A little girl watched with fascination as her mother smoothed cold cream over her face and patted her wrinkles. The little girl finally gathered up her courage and asked: "Why do you do that?" "To make me beautiful," said her mother. Then the mother started to remove the cream with a facial tissue, and was quite taken back when the little girl spoke up and said, "What's the matter? Are you giving up?"

Editorial Opinions—

THERE ARE MANY ADVANTAGES in using the Uniform Lesson Outlines in the writing and preparing of Sunday school materials. In the first place, they are by far the most widely used of any series. The largest denominations use them. Thus, it is a blessing to know that many thousands of Sunday school members are studying the same subject each Sunday, regardless of where they may attend. Next, because it is so widely used, there are numerous aids that can be used without any alterations. The larger publishing companies, such as Standard Publishing Company and Union Gospel Press, use the uniform series. The major Sunday school lesson commentaries are based on the uniform series.

Another advantage is that each denomination or publishing house is free to make its own application to the lesson. For example, our own writers write according to the teachings of our church and according to the needs of our people, etc. There is no obligation to follow the suggestions in the outline series.

In view of these advantages we were quite surprised to learn that the Sunday school department of the National Association has made plans to drop the Uniform Lesson Outlines and begin their own series, to begin by the first quarter of 1966. The idea is nothing new, but it is doubtful that the proposed advantages in preparing one's own outlines would be worth the sacrifice.

The Free Will Baptist Press has no other intention than the continuing of the uniform series. Our writers will continue to present the doctrines and practices of our church. We appreciate the support of the many thousands of Free Will Baptists throughout the nation. We believe your church will be strengthened spiritually by its continual use of the Sunday school literature which is edited and published by the Free Will Baptist Press.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION has decided to discontinue the Free Will Baptist League. It has been replaced by an entirely new training program called the Church Training Service (CTS). In view of this action, we would like to inform our readers that the Free Will Baptist Press is continuing its printing of original Free Will Baptist League materials. You may order any or all of your league supplies from the Press with the assurance that you will be getting materials that carry out the original purpose and design of the Free Will Baptist League.

We are convinced that this organization has a definite purpose for its existence. We believe it is the best source of training available to our church. We are proud to carry on the program which was instigated years ago by men of vision and purpose.

THE LIQUOR FORCES are seeking the establishment of ABC stores in Johnston County, North Carolina. The day of decision will come in September. Such a referendum was held in Wayne County, which is an adjoining county, several months ago. The wet forces were the victors. There was a strong vote opposing the liquor stores, but not enough to stem the tide. We are hoping, along with thousands of others, that Johnston County will remain a dry county. We hope that the citizens will not be taken in by Satan's argument that the county will benefit in any way by having ABC stores. Statistics prove otherwise. Those who are interested in receiving facts in the case may write to "The Christian Action League of North Carolina, Inc.," 424½ Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. This organization will be fighting the liquor forces in Johnston County during the next few weeks. Let us pray for victory.

Background Scripture: Exodus 10:8-11; 10:24-26
Text: 1 Timothy 6:20—"Keep that which is committed to thy trust, . . ."

MANY MINISTERS today are compromising with the world while people die and go to hell. We seem to be afraid to speak the truth lest our people be offended and we lose our jobs. We want to see our churches grow in number. Thus, numbers become our aim rather than helping our people grow in grace. We often pat the members of our congregations on the back, giving them praise, even though we know they are living in sin; for this is much easier than talking to them about their sins and mistakes, and will not place us in a position to be ridiculed. We seem to forget the words of Paul in our text when he said, "Keep that which is committed to thy trust." Thus, while we compromise in order to be popular, many of our people are crossing the threshold of death into eternity without Jesus Christ as their Lord and Saviour.

Our purpose, however, is not to refer only to the ministers, but also to the laymen. Our laymen also compromise in their own way. Generally, they seem to take the attitude that now I am saved, I am safe, and I am satisfied. They sit back, cross their legs, and become "rocking chair Christians." Therefore, it seems that the symbol for Christianity is no longer the traditional cross, but the rocking chair. Most laymen either forget or pay no attention to the words of Jesus when He said, ". . . If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me" (Luke 9:23). Jesus requires complete devotion on the part of Christians. Thus, there is no room for compromise in the Christian life (Matthew 6:24).

In our background Scripture one of the most dramatic scenes in the Old Testament is presented to us. The leaders of God's people are insisting that they must not only get out of Egypt, but that all they have must go with them—that ". . . there shall not an hoof be left behind; . . ." (Exodus 10:26). Pharaoh, on the other hand, is doing his best to drive a shrewd bargain with the people of God. Four times he has offered them a generous compromise; and four times Moses and Aaron have stood out against all compromise. The battle goes on until the people of God win everything, because they refused to compromise themselves in any way.

Four great lessons come to us out of this incident. Let us try to catch the meaning of each one of them:

1. A full and uncompromising surrender to the will of God in our lives cuts off all the approaches of evil.

Let us note that Pharaoh sought four distinct and definite compromises, everyone of which was rejected. First, ". . . Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land" (Exodus 8:25). Second, ". . . I will let you go, that ye may be sacrifice to the LORD your God . . . only ye shall not go very far away: . . ." (Exodus 8:28). Third, the men could go and sacrifice, but the families could not go (Exodus 10:11). Fourth, all could go and sacrifice, but they were to leave all their worldly goods behind (Exodus 10:24). But due to the power of God in their lives, the diligence of their leaders, and their own faithfulness, the Israelites were able to leave the land of Egypt without having to compromise in any way.

All too often we compromise in order to avoid the criticism of men. As ministers, we like to be told that we did a good job on our sermon—forgetting that it was supposed to be God's sermon. Sometimes we compromise or "tread softly" because we are afraid that Mr. Jones will stop paying to the church if he is offended. We seem to fear man and to think more of the praise of men than we do of the praise of God. In John 12:42, 43 the Bible says, ". . . because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, . . . For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." Paul said, "But what things were gain to me, these I counted loss for Christ" (Philippians 3:7). Paul further teaches that it is necessary to "Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thessalonians 5:22) if we are to live a fully surrendered Christian life.

As Christians we must learn to reject opportunities for compromise and accept criticism as a sign of progress through Jesus Christ our Lord. "For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those

Matthew
18:19, 20

A Missions Letter

Dear Fellow Workers for Christ:

I would like to offer my deep appreciation to those of you who are contributing in any way to the support of the Arizona-Mexico Missions, Inc.

My first contact with Brother Elliston, and the first Mrs. Elliston, was in the years 1946 and 1947. At that time, however, our friendship was not especially close. About three years later, at a time when we had been separated by about 2,400 miles, God in His divine providence caused our paths to meet again. I had heard that they were doing some work among the Indians. Thus, while traveling through the country where I had heard they were working, I once again visited them.

I volunteered to assist them in some work with the Chocktaw Indians. It was during this time that I witnessed what I felt was the most devoted passion and concern for lost, needy people that I had ever seen demonstrated by anyone with whom I had ever been in contact. There was utter abandonment of personal consideration for themselves, or their comfort. Such devotion took hold of me and made an impression as nothing else has ever made. Its influence stays with me.

Since that time my husband and I have maintained close contact with them. We have been interested in what Brother Elliston and his workers are doing and have visited them in various places where they were working.

I have had cause to be deeply grieved at the havoc which Satan's emissaries have wrought in the work. I have suffered great disappointment with those in whom I have for many years had much confidence, because of their indifference toward such a sacrificial work.

We should realize that the trend of these times in which we live is toward centralization of power, and usurpation of authority over the activities of people, and we should not be dismayed. I would like to encourage you to pray much for this work, and let God lead you as an individual about your giving. We should feel an obligation to our denominational activities, but our first allegiance must be to God.

Maybe this could be considered as an "open confession" of the soul, which is good. Since I have felt a call to the work in intercessory prayer, and by whatever other way I might be led, I have never openly stated that commitment, not even to the Ellistons. After examining my own position, I wondered if my failure had resulted in the inroads which Satan has tried to make on the work. This conclusion is the result of summarization of various tests which I feel God has brought me through. I now feel more established and I know my loyalty is first to God, and second to my denominational activities.

We do pray that you will take upon you the burden of Brother Elliston's work, and that of his workers, into the very recesses of your heart in prayer; and help them give the "Word of Life" to those who are "dead in trespasses and sin" before our dear Lord returns.

Yours in His dear name,
Mrs. John Grider, Greenfield, Missouri

Barbara Becton Reports

Many things have appeared in the short month that I have been here in Arizona and Mexico. At first it was very difficult for me because I did not know the Spanish language. Since most of the services are in Spanish, directions would frequently have to be repeated in English for my benefit. The Ellistons, Laniers, and Guzmans have been very helpful to me in my language difficulty.

During July we had two vacation Bible schools, one at La Mision de Gracia, in Nogales, Sonora, and one at the House of God Free Will Baptist Church in Nogales, Sonora. Attendance was very good in both of these schools, and everyone seemed to enjoy them.

In July we began a youth fellowship of Ambos (both) Nogales. We hope that these services will be very helpful in training the youth in all our work. The youth fellowship meets in four different places, with a president in charge of the program at his particular place. The presidents are as follows: Fabian Guzman at La Casa de Dios, in Nogales, Sonora, on the first Friday night of each month; Lico (Federico) Bernal at La Mision de Gracia, in Nogales, Sonora, on the second Friday night of each month; Augustin Mercado at the service in the Mercado house, in Nogales, Sonora, on the third Friday night of each month; and I am the president when the fellowship meets in the First Free Will Baptist Church in Nogales, Arizona, on the fourth Friday night of each month. The fifth Friday night, which comes once every three months, is a night for social activities, with the winning group being entertained by the other three groups.

We use report slips very similar to Free Will Baptist League report slips, but with added points for Scripture verses memorized, Bible chapters read, tracts distributed, visits made, and visitors brought. In addition to points, the youngsters can win prizes for Scripture memorization. At most of the meetings we have had quizzes on Bible characters. These quizzes have been enjoyed by all.

Last Monday Fabian, Maria Luisa, and I began a Bible club for children at the Mercado house in Nogales, Sonora. Fabian and Maria Luisa led the children in singing choruses. Then, as I told the flannelgraph story in English, Maria Luisa translated it into Spanish, because most of the children do not know any English. For our first meeting we had about 28 present.

Recently, after much prayer, meditation, and discussion with the Rev. Mr. Elliston, I decided to remain in Nogales to help with the work here. I will be teaching in the Nogales Academy, and helping with Bible clubs and work in the office and in the church and Sunday school services. I will probably be taking some extension courses from the University of Arizona at Tucson. In this way I can continue my education while I am serving in a needy field of service.

I hope that you will support me in this work, both by your prayers and with your financial support. Please send offerings to: The North Carolina Mission Board, c/o the Rev. A. B. Bryan, P. O. Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513. You know that we can only stay on the field and work as those of you at home send. I would like to thank those of you who have been supporting me thus far, and I urge you to continue to do so. May God bless you.

Salary is derived from the Latin word "salarium," which is what ancient Rome's soldiers called the salt they received as part of their pay.—Sunday School Messenger.

Report of the 'YOUTH FRONTIER' CONFERENCE

by David C. Hansley, Director

I believe that the "Youth Frontier" Conference at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, during the week of July 6-11, 1964, was one of the greatest conferences that I have ever had the privilege of witnessing. The theme of the week was a real key to a wonderful challenge to the young people present: "Today Not Tomorrow, God's Way My Way."

The entire program was centered around the idea of the Space Age. All the instructors were given officer's titles. For example, the Rev. Earl Glenn, minister of the week, was "Colonel Glenn." Every camper was called an astronaut. The Tabernacle was called the "Launching Pad" because it was here that a rocket was erected to inspire the thought of the theme. Cragmont Assembly was simply named "Cape Cragmont."

During the week, all the campers attended their various classes. One afternoon all climbed up the dear old mountain directly behind Cragmont, and all enjoyed the "Outer Space" hike that was taken early one morning. During the services of the entire week, over thirty young people accepted Christ as their personal Saviour.

There is no way that I can express in words just how much a week such as this could have meant to your young people. There is but one way to find out, and that is to attend the Youth Frontier Conference next year.

Here is a girl who expresses her feelings about the week. She is Miss Barbara Jernigan, age 15, of the Lee's Chapel church near Dunn, North Carolina.

"I experienced one of the happiest weeks of my life when I attended the Youth Frontier Conference at Cragmont. As I looked at the beautiful mountains and valleys, I knew that it was not man who created this earth, but God, the Creator of all things.

"At Cragmont, they have good recreation, good fellowship, and most important of all, very good spiritual training. You have a lot better opportunity to accept Christ as your personal Saviour and to testify for Him while you are away from the cares of the world. Some people think they have to go to the worldly places to have fun, but this isn't true. At the Youth Frontier Conference, I learned that you could have fun and live for Christ at the same time.

"I realize that in the future we young people will be the leaders in our churches and communities. We should not wait until we have to accept these responsibilities, but we should start preparing now by attending church camps. We learn more about our denomination and get better training. Therefore, we can serve our church, our community, and most important of all, our God, much better.

"I am glad that I attended the Youth Frontier Conference this year, and I am sure that you would be able to serve better if you too would attend."

On Friday, a king and a queen were crowned and they reigned for the entire day. The king and queen, chosen by the campers as the most popular astronauts, will receive $10 each toward his expenses next year to the Youth Frontier Conference.

Sue Bass

Danny Griffin

Mr. Danny Griffin of the First church of Greenville was chosen the king, and Miss Sue Bass of the Robert's Grove church near Dunn was chosen the queen.

Danny is a very outstanding Christian young man at school and at church. During his freshman and sophomore years, he was in the Greenville High School Band and served as section leader. In his junior year, he was the representative on the United Christian Youth Movement Council, homeroom representative to the Student Council, and a member of the Future Physicians' Club. He was elected to play in the All Star Symphonic Band at East Carolina College. For six years Danny has been a member of the Bible Memory Association. As a member of the Greenville church, he sings in the choir and teaches the intermediate boys' Sunday school class.

Miss Sue Bass, age 16, is also a very outstanding Christian at school and church. She is a member of the FHA

Teasley Takes Fourth Place In International Contest

The Rev. J. Garland Teasley, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Smithfield, North Carolina, has made the fourth highest grade ever scored on a writer's aptitude test given by the Famous Writer's School of Westport, Connecticut. The test was taken by over 1,800 persons from every state in the United States and several foreign countries. The presentation was made by Paul O. Treadwell, special North Carolina representative of the school.

The Famous Writer's School was founded in 1960 to search out and train people to enter the field of writing. The aptitude test, administered on a voluntary basis, is the main source of securing writers. The school is directed by a board of people well known in the writing and publishing business, including Rod Serling, Faith Baldwin, Max Schulman, and Bennett Cerf. Mr. Teasley has been offered special assistance to train with the school as a writer of fiction.

Teasley has been a Free Will Baptist pastor for eight years and served during the summer of 1962 as interim editor of Free Will Baptist publications, Ayden, North Carolina.

Hillsberry Mission Revival September 7-12

The Hillsberry Original Free Will Baptist Mission of Clinton, North Carolina, (continued on page nine)

A Pastor and well-known revivalist frankly discusses the spiritual condition of our churches.

by J. W. Everton, Pastor
Johnston Union
Free Will Baptist Church
Clayton, North Carolina

HOW REAL IS OUR SPIRITUALITY?

HOW real is our spirituality? is a heart-searching question. In an attempt to determine its answer one could be very easily misunderstood. In searching for an honest appraisal of the spiritual condition of our church, this writer does not seek to give the impression that he knows all the answers. A sincere prayer goes forth with each word that God will direct us in our evaluation and challenge us to a more dedicated walk.

There are many concepts of spirituality existing within the walls of the church today. Therefore, it seems to be necessary for us to arrive at some kind of an understanding about this term. Some would very readily say that anything in the program of the church or the life of the individual which is in anyway inclined toward dignity or refinement definitely does not possess any spiritual quality. Others would very quickly inform you that the church, or individual life, in which the wheels of activity constantly turn, are the ones in whose lives we find the marks of spirituality. There are still others who feel that the use of vulgarity to denounce sin is positively a distinguishing trait of the spiritual life.

We should accept instruction from the Scriptures as we seek for directions. Christ said, "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them" (Matthew 7:20). In the fifth chapter of Galatians we find definite enlightenment concerning the spiritual life. Two times in this chapter we are admonished to walk in the spirit. ". . . the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance: . . ." (Galatians 5:22, 23). Doctor C. I. Scofield says that these nine graces taken together present a moral portrait of Christ. Can we then say simply that spirituality is Christlikeness? To be Christlike is to be spiritual. Just how Christlike are we?

It is the observation of this writer that our church generally is on the spiritual decline. This decline is probably characterized in many ways. This preacher is convinced that the work of the entire church rests upon the shoulders of not more than twenty percent of its membership. Take a look at the closed church doors on Wednesday nights during the summer months. What does this say to you? Pastors tell me that their Sunday night services are very poorly attended. It is also alarming to see just how little the average member of our church knows about the Bible. It is disturbing to learn that very few Free Will Baptist homes have family altars. The Lord's Day no longer has the proper recognition which it is due. Instead of a holy day it has become a holiday. How many laymen do you know that ever attempt any work in personal evangelism?

There is at least one other major way in which we possibly can check the spiritual temperature of our church. We have more scheduled preaching services today than we did a few years back. Usually a series of these services is called revival. However, are we really seeing revival in our church? In most cases these services do not attract the multitudes. The members of the church do not show by their presence a hunger for revival. Not long ago an individual was heard to remark, "Two or three nights of the revival will give me all the religion I want."

Surely these observations give some indication of the spirituality of the church. One day a minister returned to his home and heard a commotion in the backyard. Upon investigation he found a group of children singing and one standing in front as the leader. He asked, "What are you doing?" One of them replied, "We are playing church." Could this be what has happened in the church today? Where is the courage, vision, and determination that was present in the lives of our forefathers? Certainly this condition does not necessarily mean that we are on the brink of sudden destruction. It does give indication that we have a lukewarm church.

Do these symptoms confine themselves to the pew only? Isn't it evident that the pulpit has also been touched with a certain amount of unconcern? Observe the very small number of ministers who have given themselves to the full-time work of the church. What kind of training do the men of our pulpit seek today? Are they seeking for the kind of instruction that will prepare them to be the best possible spiritual leaders? Or are they preparing for other vocations in life and making the ministry of Jesus Christ a sideline? Do we major today on the spiritual message of God's Word? Or do we find ourselves seeking those well-worded phrases that actually say very little? Are we interested in proclaiming Christ Jesus as the only Saviour of men, or does the pulpit try to project a desired academic image? It is the feeling of this writer that the men in the pulpit will in a great measure determine the spirituality of the pew. We need men today who are concerned primarily with the proclamation of the gospel of Christ. There seems to be clear indication that the pulpit no longer possesses the compulsion that the Apostle Paul expressed when he said, ". . . woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" (1 Corinthians (continued on page fifteen)

Christian Education

MOJC—Growth And Future

In an address before the Goldsboro Rotary Club August 11, President W. Burkette Raper described the first decade of Mount Olive College as "a struggle for survival."

Financial support to the college has increased from $11,090 ten years ago to $233,437 for the fiscal year just ended, he revealed. The operating budget of the college now exceeds $250,000 annually.

The assets and fixed properties of the college today total three quarters of a million dollars as compared with $25,000 ten years ago, Raper reported.

An enrollment of 250 students is anticipated this fall as compared with 22 students in 1954, the year the college opened in Mount Olive.

In a forecast of the decade ahead, President Raper predicted that the college would reach an enrollment of 1,000 by 1974 at which time he believed that the college would have a new campus valued at nearly $5,000,000.

The contracts for the first buildings on the new campus are scheduled to be awarded August 31. Included will be an academic building and a dormitory complex which are scheduled for occupancy in September, 1965.

In his emphasis upon the value of Mount Olive College to eastern North Carolina, President Raper declared: "It is as essential that we preserve private higher education as it is that we preserve private business and private professions. What happens to higher education will eventually happen to our nation," he warned.

Mount Olive Begins Eleventh Year

Mount Olive College will begin its eleventh academic year on September 1 with a general faculty conference.

Orientation for freshmen students will be held September 2-5.

Returning students will register September 7 and classes will begin September 8. Registration for night classes in business is scheduled for 7 p. m., September 9.

The fall convocation will be held Sunday, September 13.

President W. Burkette Raper reported that a record enrollment of 250 students is expected.

Pamlico County Benefit Dinner

Pamlico County Benefit Dinner -----

E. H. Holton of Vandemere has announced that there will be a meeting of all Free Will Baptist churches in Pamlico County on Monday, August 24, for the purpose of organizing a benefit dinner for the development fund of Mount Olive College.

The meeting will be held at Mount Zion church near Cash Corner at 8 p. m. Pastors and representatives from each Free Will Baptist church in the county are expected to attend.

President W. Burkette Raper from the college will present the building program scheduled to begin this fall on the new 90-acre campus. Contracts for the first buildings will be awarded August 31.

A Mind With Wings

William Carey was a cobbler, but he had a map of the world on his shop wall, and outdid Alexander the Great in dreaming and doing. Many a tinker and weaver and stone cutter and handworker has had open windows and a sky and a mind with wings.

OBITUARIES

MR. J. L. VANCE

Funeral services for Mr. James L. Vance, age 77, of Bryan, Texas, were held recently in the Callaway-Jones Funeral Chapel in Bryan. The Rev. Herbert Richards of North Zulch, Texas, was in charge of the service, assisted by the Rev. Don Ellis of Bryan and the Rev. H. Ray Berry of San Antonio, Texas. Burial followed in the Concord Cemetery in Grimes County.

Mr. Vance was a long-time resident of Bryan and was a painting contractor. He is survived by his wife, Bessie; one daughter, Mrs. Charles Sebesta of Snook; three sons, Gaston F. and Garvin B. Vance of Bryan, and James E. Vance of Fort Worth; and nine grandchildren.

Pallbearers included Lenwood Carter, Luke Ruffino, Dean Rogers, Jack Boone, Olen Cole, and Uel D. Thompson.

Mr. Vance was born November 10, 1886, on a farm near Kurten, Texas, and was a member of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Bryan.

Woman's Auxiliary

Winterville, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church met at the church August 3 for its monthly meeting. The meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Mrs. Louise Langston. The opening song, "Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus," was followed with the Scripture lesson from Psalm 127:1 and Matthew 7:24, read by Mrs. Joan Hooks. Mrs. Rebecca Davenport led the group in prayer.

The minutes were read and approved. The secretary called the roll with nineteen members and two visitors present.

Mrs. M. A. Woodard gave a very interesting program entitled, "Except the Lord Build the House."

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Mabel Tucker and Mrs. B. F. Faulkner.

Our severest temptations will come to us after our greatest blessings.—Gospel Herald.

Western Conference Board Of Ordination to Meet

The North Carolina Western Conference Board of Ordination will meet Thursday, August 20, at Free Union Free Will Baptist Church, near Spring Hope. Anyone who would like to meet with the board is asked to be present at the church at 5 p. m. The Rev. Boyd Shook is chairman of the board.

Holy Ground

Prayer is the soul drawing near to God. And when the soul draws near to God, the ground beneath our feet becomes holy ground, and the commonest bush is flaming with the presence of God.

The soul needs no ritualistic paraphernalia nor logical process to find a way to God's ear and heart. It may be on the street, or in the quiet of the closet, where the ladder drops from heaven to earth.—Hugh McLean.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

The question comes: "If you were living in a town, or an area, where there was no Free Will Baptist church, what would you do?" My answer is that I would do my best to start one. I would let those with whom I was living know that I believed the doctrine as set forth by the Bible and preached by Paul Palmer, Joseph Parker, Jeremiah Heath, and others of their day, and of those who have followed the doctrine as set forth by Christ. I would be loyal to the truth as I believed it.

When I was doing evangelistic service in Alabama several years ago, an elderly gentleman, a member of the church at Townley, told me this: "When I learned of the doctrine of the Free Will Baptists, I began to teach it. There was no church of the faith here, and I rode a mule 80 miles to get an ordained minister to come and help organize our church." This was loyalty to what he believed.

In many instances Free Will Baptists will fall in with some other denomination and soon forget the church in which they were brought up; they get so faraway from the doctrine of the church at home that they fail to attend the annual homecoming. But in many instances if they do return to the homecoming, they act like strangers. There are exceptions to this indictment of course.

WHY WOULD I START A CHURCH?

The Apostle Paul wrote: "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

This is not to say that there are none saved but Free Will Baptists; but I do believe the doctrine as preached by the Original Free Will Baptists to be founded on the divine Word of God. Since I believe the doctrine to be backed by the Word of God, I believe in building up the cause by being loyal to our profession of faith. I can worship with anyone who says, "My sins are under the blood of Christ," provided that person lives according to the doctrine of complete separation from all sinful activities and worships God in the fullness of the power of the Holy Spirit. I mean by this a Christian whose Monday behavior is equal to his Sunday profession. I do not care to worship with anyone who denies the atonement—salvation by the shed blood of Jesus Christ. ". . . without shedding of blood is no remission" (Hebrews 9:22). As an Original Free Will Baptist, I cannot accept a substitute for the blood of Jesus Christ.

Some substitutes accepted by many creeds and by some individuals are the denomination and water baptism. In visiting a hospital, I found a lady who seemed to think that she was saved because she belonged to a certain denomination, and actual words to that end were uttered by her. I tried to convince her that her church would not, nor could not, blot out her sins. Christ only can save. You might join every church of every denomination in the state where you live and still be lost.

I believe in water baptism because Jesus, in giving the Great Commission, said, ". . . All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: . . ." (Matthew 28:18-20). But you may be baptized (immersed) without an absolute saving faith in Jesus Christ, and never be saved. In that instance you go into the water a dry sinner and come out a wet sinner. You can be sprinkled at an altar and never be saved. We are saved by grace through faith. The whole statement, as recorded, says, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast" (Ephesians 2:8, 9).

I was in a group of personal workers once, and there was a fellow who seemed to doubt. The personal worker said, "Just stand on your feet and confess Christ and it will be all right, and you will be saved." But it takes more than confession to be saved. Confession is all right as far as it goes, but there must be a possession. Christ must be accepted without any reservations.

WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED?

The jailer at Philippi was told to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and he and his house would be saved (Acts 16:31). Did they do it? Let us see: "And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway" (Acts 16:32, 33). The washing of the stripes of Paul and Silas was an evidence of repentance. After his repentance he washed the stripes of Paul and Silas, and the washing was before the baptizing according to the Word. When he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house. This man was a Christian now; things had changed in his life and manners.

At sunset Paul and Silas were his prisoners; before sunrise they were his guests. This jailer was a saved man. He had accepted Christ as his Saviour; he had confessed Jesus Christ. He was more than a professor: he was a possessor. What was he a possessor of? A living faith. Therefore, he could and did rejoice. This jailer's attitude had changed toward Paul and Silas. He could whip their backs until the blood flowed and cuts and bruises were left on the body, but now he wanted to spread comfort where he had caused pain. He wanted to heal; whereas, before he enjoyed obeying his Roman boss.

If you are not saved, you obey your boss—Satan. Satan is your boss because you do what he says. But when Christ comes in, Satan is no longer your master. Christ becomes all and in all, so that we can say, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Galatians 2:20).

SPECIAL NOTICE

Since the Free Will Baptist Press is in the process of changing from a shareholding corporation to a membership corporation, there will not be a stockholders meeting until after the attorneys complete the transaction. Representatives of the bodies holding membership in the new corporation will then be called into session. There will be no other meeting until the change is completed.

QUESTION: Please give me some light on and help me to understand Ezekiel's vision of the dry bones as seen in Ezekiel 37.—M.J.T.

ANSWER: This is explained in the following passage: "Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel; behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD" (Ezekiel 37:11-14).

When Israel went into captivity, it was first the northern kingdom that went under Assyria; and over a hundred years later Judah went at the hand of Nebuchadnezzar and under Babylon. The latter part of this chapter, Ezekiel 37:15-28, indicates that not only will God re-gather all of Israel to her land in Palestine but that He will also erase once and for all time the difference between the house of Judah and the house of Israel that was effected at the death of Solomon. I understand that all this bliss will be enjoyed by all the descendants of upon the earth. It may also be that this Israel during Christ's millennial reign will be her eternal inheritance since it appears that, even though this earth is to be destroyed or renovated by fire as a result of or following the great white throne judgment, the new Jerusalem that descends from the new heaven and the new earth as a bride for Christ will be the city in which no evil at all will ever appear.

This whole passage in Ezekiel speaks of the national resurrection of Israel. They have for many centuries been buried as a nation in the several countries of the world, but even now we see the restoration of this ancient people taking place before our very eyes while they slowly and gradually but definitely settle in the land of their forefathers. The Zionist movement made remarkable progress for several years; and finally after the post World War II landslide in migrating there from all nations when the allied nations directed their influence in her behalf, she was declared a sovereign nation and now has a government and land of her own, such as she has not enjoyed for 2500 years, in a part of the ancient kingdom of David, God's king, the man after God's own heart. The Lord seems to be using influential American Jews to give momentum to the move as they furnish money and political influence to keep the move progressing. All of which, I understand, points to the soon return of Christ to this earth. When He comes, Ezekiel 37 will be literally fulfilled and Israel restored to her own covenant rights so long denied her because of her disobedience to God. Then she will be permanently established in her own land to never be removed. We may lack a full understanding of this, but there are too many Scriptures that speak of a time to come when Israel shall be established in her land and not to be removed for us to ignore them.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

The same moment which brings the consciousness of sin ought to bring also the confession of it and the consciousness of forgiveness.—Selected.

GOSSIP or TRUTH!

by Mrs. H. L. Bowen

Gossip can be defined as idle talk about other people's affairs and discussing the private affairs of others—telling idle tales about others. If I were to say I could give advice about the above, I would feel guilty, because I am. I have lost many an hour's sleep because un-thinkingly I found myself telling or listening to things that were absolutely none of my business. As for idle tales about others, I can say I am not guilty. But then how can I say I am not guilty, for how can we be sure that what we hear and repeat is true?

Truth is the great fundamental attribute of God. Truth and love are inseparable. If we love a person, we should be very careful of the things we repeat about him. A person whom everybody believes and can trust is of unmeasurable worth to this world. The lover of truth never intends to color it to suit himself. Truth is everywhere and can easily be discovered if we only desire to know it, or make an effort to identify it when we see or hear it.

The idle talebearers are the devil's lighthouse attenders. God grant that we may read aright the signals that come from God's lighthouse.

So I would say that the greatest treasure in the world is a friend—one that will not flatter us, but will tell us our faults to help us correct them; one who will not court us in times of good fortune and then forsake us in times of adversity.

Horatius Bonar, the Scottish preacher and hymn writer, was right when he wrote:

"All truth is calm
Refuge and rock or towers;
The more of truth, the more of calm;
Its calmness is its power.

"Truth is not strife
Nor is it to strife allied;
It is the error that is bred
Of storm, by rage and pride."

Samuel M. Zwemer summarizes the missionary problem in Islam in three terms: "neglect, difficulty, and paucity of definite results."—Selected.

STORIES

for our

BOYS and GIRLS

EDWARD'S HAPPY HOME

Chuster Shuler

EDWARD wasn't very old yet. But he was old enough to love his daddy, mother, and home.

One day a crowd of people gathered in front of his house. A noisy man stood on a box and talked so fast that Edward couldn't understand much that he said. But Edward did hear folks in the crowd saying something about "selling the house."

Edward knew what that meant! When you sold something—why, someone else took it away with him! And now they were going to sell his very own, dear home! Many troubling questions went through his mind. If they sold his home and took it away, maybe—where would he live? Where would he go to keep dry when it rained or snowed? Where would he eat and sleep? He began to cry bitterly—because he was still young enough to cry and not feel ashamed—and ran to find Mother.

Mother and some other ladies thought Edward had been hurt. They gathered around him, asking questions. At first he could hardly speak for sobbing. But when Mother heard his story, she smiled and dried his tears. "Yes, dear," she said, "they are selling your house. But listen—your own daddy is going to buy it. And then it really will belong to us—to you, and Daddy and me. It will be our very own home."

Edward wasn't crying now. He was smiling, all over his face. He ran out again to listen to the noisy man on the box shouting. And then after a time, he heard what the noisy man said—"Sold! To Edward Jones!"

Edward Jones was Edward's daddy! He ran over and put his hand into his father's big hand. He felt secure now—it was their very own house!

Edward began to think about houses and homes quite a lot after that. There was that nest in the maple tree, for example. It was the home of some little robins. And out in the barn was a box—home for Tabby eat's kittens. Even mice and rats had homes underneath the floor of the corner, barn, or attic—and how they did scamper away to their homes when frightened!

Then Edward heard in Sunday School about another home. The one which the kind Father God has for His people, up in heaven. The teacher told Edward's class all about that happy home. She explained that the Lord Jesus is there now, preparing that home for those who love and have faith in Him. And that, she said, is the very happiest home of all.

The teacher told them more about houses and homes, too. Edward was so interested, after seeing his own home sold, that he asked some questions. Were big, fine homes better than just ordinary, small homes? Why did some boys and girls live in great, big, wonderful mansions, while others lived in just shacks?

Teacher smiled and explained that there's a great, big difference between a "house" and a "home." At first Edward and the others couldn't understand this—hadn't they always spoken of theirs as either a house or a home? Well, there is a difference, teacher said. Even a beautiful, big mansion isn't a home unless love is found in it. Couldn't the rich man who was daddy to those rich children buy some happiness, or a lot of wonderful things, which would make the mansion a happy home? Edward wondered. But no, teacher said, you just can't buy happiness. It's something that we must work for. Oh, not like we work to earn money, exactly. But we must each do our part to help make a home happy—like thinking first of others' happiness, being helpful, unselfish, ready to help with work gladly, and things like that.

Edward held up his hand. Then he told teacher and the class about the robin's home in the maple tree, and the kitten's home in the box, and the home of the mice in the attic.

"Exactly," said teacher, "and do you think their homes are happy ones?"

"I guess the birds are happy, 'cause they sing a lot," Edward answered. "The kittens seem to be crying most of the time, but maybe that's 'cause their eyes are closed yet. And the mice squeal sometimes—I don't know 'bout them."

"Suppose those happy little robins began to peck each other, and push, and shove, and be mean," said teacher. "Do you think theirs would be a happy home or just a house?"

Edward laughed. "I guess it wouldn't be either! 'Cause they'd tumble down to the ground, and old Tabby would take them out to her home, and feed 'em to her kittens!"

"Very likely," agreed teacher. "And if those little mice fought and pushed, and got out of their hidden home—"

Everyone laughed then. "Tabby's kittens would have a big meal," they guessed.

"Correct. And even if those birds and kittens and mice—and some little boys and girls, too—lived in a fine big mansion, fighting and being mean to one another would surely spoil their happy homes."

"Why did Jesus live in such a funny little house," asked Edward, pointing to a picture on the wall, "if there's such a beautiful mansion up in heaven where He could have stayed in?"

"A good question, Edward," teacher said, "Jesus, when a boy, lived in a very humble cottage in Nazareth. He had brothers and sisters, a kind mother, and I am sure it was a very happy home indeed. We may be certain that Jesus, at least, did His part to make it happy. He grew strong and wise, and I am certain He always obeyed Joseph and Mary quickly and gladly."

Out and Out for God and Soul Winning

that believe" (1 Timothy 4:10). Peter suggests that we should glorify God if we are allowed to suffer as a Christian. "Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on his behalf" (1 Peter 4:16). "Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator" (1 Peter 4:19). From Paul's writing to Timothy we receive instruction to flee unrighteousness and to follow after the things of God as we fight the good fight of faith. "But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses" (1 Timothy 6:11, 12).

2. A full and uncompromising surrender to God's will places our lives in line with God's purpose.

God had a great and glorious purpose in the lives of these Israelites. He had separated them through several covenants with their forefathers to become a priest-nation—interceding between the nations of the world and God. By cutting themselves completely off from Egypt, God's great purpose was given a real chance for realization. Then, and only then, could God use them to the best advantage—to carry out His will for their lives.

If we are faithful and sincere Christians, we must sever ourselves from the world and commit our all to Christ Jesus. Paul suggests complete consecration when he says, "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:2). In 2 Timothy 2:4 Paul tells Timothy, "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." I hope each of you will remember the beautiful words of our text as Paul said, "Keep that which is committed to thy trust."

3. A full and uncompromising surrender to God's will gives a mighty witness to the needy world.

The Israelites served God well until they began to compromise with the Canaanites. Time and time again we see in their history occasions when they were pleasing God with their dedication to the task to which they were called, only to have their relationship with the Creator marred as a result of compromise as they yielded to the temptations placed before them by the Canaanites. When this happened, they were separated from God until they repented and met God's terms for the restoring of fellowship.

We quote Jesus again as He said, ". . . If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me" (Luke 9:23). To be a real Christian requires dedication and sacrifice. But all hardships and difficulties are rewarded when we prove to be mighty witnesses for the Lord Jesus Christ. "Follow me," said Jesus, "and I will make you fishers of men" (Matthew 4:19). The only requirements for Christians to be powerful witnesses for Jesus is to follow in His footsteps and remain under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit who is now with us. "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

4. A full and uncompromising surrender to God's will also gives God a chance to bless and use our whole lives.

Strange enough, God can use only so much of our lives as we willingly turn over to Him. He will never force Himself upon anyone, nor will He use us in His service until we have said with Isaiah, ". . . Here am I; send me" (Isaiah 6:8). Blessed be His name! God wants us and will use us. He will use all we have and are if we will surrender it to Him.

Job said, "I would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause" (Job 5:8). The psalmist cries, "Commit thy way unto the LORD; . . ." (Psalm 37:5). We as Christians should be so humbly proud of the opportunities which we have to serve God "That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, . . . And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Philippians 2:10, 11). "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service," says Paul in Romans 12:1. Finally, brethren, the words of our text command all Christians to "keep that which is committed to thy trust." We can all become mighty soul winners for God if we learn how to live uncompromising lives fully surrendered to the will of God.

"A medical student was in the operating room waiting to watch a great surgeon's work. The surgeon's assistant failed to come and the surgeon called this student to help him. 'How proud I was,' he said, 'to help this great man save a life.' Jesus has called us to help Him save others, and we should be proud of the honor, glad that we can help to save others to everlasting life. A great minister said that he praised God for the honor and privilege of helping to save the world. We have only to obey His command and trust Him to help us do this work for Him."—Gospel Herald.

In closing, let us quote John Wesley who said, "Give me one hundred preachers who fear nothing but sin and desire nothing but God, and I care not a straw whether they be clergymen or laymen; such alone will shake the gates of hell and set up the kingdom of heaven on earth."

If God Be God

"Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him" (Psalm 37:7).

Do you believe in God? If God be God, whatever He shall plan for us, is positively and surely the best; and could our eyes at this moment see by the light of eternity instead of time, we would always choose for ourselves, that which God has chosen for us. God knows the difference between the idle waiting of the desire to escape His will, and the honest waiting of a willing heart to have His will made plain, in order to do it. The present circumstance, which presses so hard against you, if surrendered to Christ, is the best shaped tool in the Father's hand to chisel you for eternity. Trust Him then. Do not push away the instrument lest you lose also its work.—Choice Gleanings.

The Reason for the Difference

The Old Testament ends with the solemn word "curse" (Malachi 4:6). The last chapter of the New Testament promises that "there shall be no more curse" (Revelation 22:3), and that because Christ was "made a curse for us" (Galatians 3:13).—Good News.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR AUGUST 30

Possessing the Promised Land

PRINTED TEXT: Joshua 1:10, 11; 23:1-9; 24:14, 16

I. INTRODUCTION

As we learned in lesson seven, only Caleb, Joshua, and the youth under twenty years of age were allowed to enter the promised land. Even Moses was not allowed this glorious privilege. This was due to a burst of anger and impatience while at Kadesh, in the desert of Zin. The occasion was the smiting of the rock from which came water to quench the thirst of the murmuring Israelites. As a result of this unethical action, Moses was not allowed to enter the promised land (Numbers 21:11, 12); however, God did grant him the privilege of viewing it from Mount Nebo which is a peak of the Abarim Mountain range. From the bluffs of Abarim one can look over the Dead Sea from the east. It was from here that Moses viewed the land which God had promised to His people. Moses died in the land of Moab and was buried in an unmarked grave (Deuteronomy 34).

While on Mount Nebo, Moses prayed to the Lord, "Let the LORD, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation" (Numbers 27:16). This was about a year before the Israelites actually entered Canaan. The Lord answered Moses' prayer, for Joshua was chosen. Joshua had been faithful in all things. He was a man who was possessed with God's Spirit—and Moses was to lay his hands upon him. Moses presented the charge to Joshua, and part of Moses' honor was placed upon him.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. When God commands His appointed leaders it is their duty to pass the command on to those under them (Joshua 1:10, 11).

2. The test of time will establish the validity of every promise of God (23:1).

3. New enthusiasm is generated by the words of a man who has grown old in the service of the Lord (v. 2).

4. The records of church history are a great encouragement to faith, for they reveal what God has wrought in the Christian era (v. 3).

5. God's people should learn the Lord's plans for them, then seek to put these plans into operation (v. 4).

6. It is just as wrong to turn to the right as to the left if it takes us out of the will of God (v. 6).

7. Cleaving to the Lord is impossible without separation from all that displeases Him (vv. 7, 8).

8. The secret of obedience is found in love for God (vv. 9-11).

9. No matter what our ancestors have done, it is our duty to serve the Lord in sincerity and in truth (24:14).

10. When decisions have been made to serve the Lord, they should be kept in all sincerity (v. 16).

—Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. When one buys a home today, he takes responsibility for it. The home owner is responsible for keeping the yard in good condition. If one is to be comfortably housed, he must make improvements and repairs wherever they are needed. If the roof leaks, it must be repaired. When the paint becomes faded and peels, the owner must paint the house. And if there is a mortgage on the house, the owner has certain obligations to the lender who holds the mortgage.

When the children of Israel went into the Promised Land, they had obligations just as does the home owner. First of all, they had to possess the land—fight the battles and settle the cities. They were to use the land carefully and wisely. They also were obligated to be faithful to God, who in a sense had lent the land to them.

When families move into a new home, they are usually bubbling over with good intentions about maintaining and improving the home. But as time goes on they often lose their enthusiasm, and their homes visibly show the results. Joshua realized that the initial enthusiasm of the Israelites as they moved into the Promised Land would likely wane as they faced many temptations. And so on several occasions Joshua reminded his people of their responsibilities.

Christians, who have been entrusted with even greater blessings than the Israelites, have similar obligations. In a sense God has lent the church to Christians. If Christians are to keep the church "holy and without blemish," they would do well to heed Joshua's warnings.

—Standard Commentary

2. Years ago a foreigner left the old country by boat for America. His valise was stocked with dried herring, cheese and crackers. For breakfast he ate herring, cheese and crackers. For dinner, to vary the fare, he ate cheese, crackers and herring. At supper, he ate crackers, cheese and herring. Soon the tantalizing smell of good food coming from the ship's dining room caused him to long for the meals which the other voyagers were enjoying. Just as the ship was nearing New York harbor, the half-starved man went to the ship's purser and asked, "What would one good, square meal cost me?" "Let me see your ticket," said the purser. "Why, man," he exclaimed, "your ticket includes all meals during the voyage!" How like this man are many of God's children! God daily spreads a feast of good things, saying, "Come, for all things are now ready." Yet, they fail to possess their possessions.

The "world" has been defined as an evil system headed by Satan which leaves God out. The world is expressed in part by things. John Wesley said, "Whatever cools my affection toward Christ is the world."

There was a Scotchman who had a dress shirt. He wore it on special occasions. After he had used it several times he would question its cleanness and take it to the window for close inspection. Said his wife to him, "If it is doubtful it's dirty!"

—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. Writing about Joshua, William J. Deane has said: "Throughout he is the fearless soldier, the straightforward leader, the simple, unquestioning executor of the divine will; and his work is settling of Israel in the promised land, and assigning to the tribes their separate possessions in such a way as to preclude jealousy and dispute. That this could not be effected without much suffering and bloodshed is obvious . . . But the execution of this divine vengeance on the sinful Canaanites did not brutalize him or his soldiers. He and they felt that they were simply instruments in infliction of a righteous punishment; and they carried out the sanguinary sentence, not as relishing the terrible performance, but simply as acting in obedience to an acknowledged duty. But before this result could be obtained, what stupendous difficulties had been met and overcome! What consummate abilities Joshua had displayed! He had all the qualities of a great general, rapid decision, unshrinking firmness, through knowledge of the materials at his command, masterly estimate of every varying situation, and the power of winning the love and confidence of his soldiers . . . Joshua was a soldier, an ideal soldier, but he was something more; he has other claims on our love and veneration. When his martial labors were accomplished, he sought no pre-eminence, he set up no military despotism, he shrank from unnecessary responsibility, he was content to share his authority with others. In the distribution of the conquered land he acted in subordination to the high priest and in concert with the elders of the tribes. He sought not to found a family; he was the last to receive an inheritance; with a rare unselfishness he took for his own possession a spot, little regarded, rugged, unfruitful. There was no self-assertion, no pride, no presumption; his victories were referred to God as the giver; for them he claimed no reward and no thanks at the hands of his countrymen . . . He is never partial, never imperious; gentle and strong, firm and loving, conscious of power, yet clothed with humility, he is the most perfect representative of the religious leader, the theocratic general, the guileless Israelite."

"Mother says," spoke up John, "that when Jesus lives in our hearts, He helps us be good and happy."

"Very true, John," said teacher. "I don't know of a better way to help make our homes happy than to invite Jesus to live in our hearts. Then, every moment of the day and night, He will keep us and help us to make others happy—and that's the only sure way to be happy ourselves."

Just then the bell rang, and the class prepared for dismissal.

"Let us bow our heads," teacher said, "and thank God for our homes, and ask Him to help us make them happier."

Before he started home, Edward said, "I'm glad I have a happy home to go to, Miss Jones. Won't you come over and see it some day?"

"I certainly shall be glad to do that Edward. Thank you," she said, with a happy smile.

How Real Is Our Spirituality?

9:16). May we who stand as the messengers of God dedicate ourselves anew to this, the greatest task God has ever given to man.

Assuming you have partially answered the question, How real is our spirituality? what are your conclusions? Do you agree with the author of this article? We recognize that the fires of spirituality do not blaze as brightly as they should in the lives of many today. Therefore, we must conclude that we are in need of a spiritual awakening.

Please read Psalm 51:1-13, because in this passage are presented the elements for revival. In these verses must be the expression of King David after Nathan the prophet had pointed out his failure and sin. The first thing to be noted is David's recognition. In Verse 3 David acknowledges his transgression. In Verse 4 he confesses that his sin is against God. He readily admits his guilt. This is the first step to any revival. He who seeks for revival must first get a good look at himself. Secondly, we observe David's repentance. The first and second verses of this Psalm are expressions that could come only from a repentant heart. No doubt there was the desire in his heart to turn away from the former things and turn back to God's ways. In the third place, we are confronted with David's prayer for renewal. In Verse 10 David asked God to renew a right spirit within him. We need that renewed consciousness of ourselves and of the power of God. Verse 12 records David's request for restoration. Every sincere person who recognizes his disobedience should certainly seek for restoration. Verse 13 teaches the ultimate purpose for revival. That is regeneration. David says, "Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee." Note carefully the revival prescription given in this Psalm: (1) recognition, (2) repentance, (3) renewal, (4) restoration, and (5) regeneration. When this Psalm is studied carefully and applied to our lives, we will be the church in which the likeness of Christ can be seen at all times. May these thoughts challenge us to honestly examine our own personal relationship with God. Let everyone hear the voice of the God of grace as He calls to His children: "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon" (Isaiah 55:7).

and the Beta Club at Midway High School. As a member of Robert's Grove church she is a very active choir member. She has also served as secretary, treasurer, and president of her Sunday school class. In the YFA she has served as the secretary and treasurer; and at the present time, she is serving as the reporter.

It is our hope that more young people will strive next year to attend the week of their choice at Cragmont.

We Can't Ask God

—For help if we are not making any effort.

—For strength if we have strength we are not using.

—For guidance if we are ignoring the guidance we now have.

—For prosperity if we have proved we cannot be trusted with it.

—For faith when we are afraid to act on what we already know.

—For forgiveness if we continue hating someone.

—For mercy if we intend to commit the same sin again.

Does the Church Really Care?

by Harrison Ray Anderson

Professor John Bright in his remarkable book, The Kingdom of God, sets forth clearly how again and again in her long history, Israel showed little concern for others and in so doing suffered. She betrayed her covenant obligation as God's agent.

What of God's people, his church today? This isn't a question of mere numbers or of church statistics. Some men try to hide behind mere figures. Do we really care for the so-called outsider? Do we long for him to know what Christ has come to mean to us? If we did care, would not more non-members be in our services?

What of our sad secular friends—surfeited with gadgets, yet purposeless without a Saviour?

What of the students, and especially the foreign students, who are with us for a few years? Many of them long for a fresh vision of God and man.

What of the so-called skeptics? Are we willing to write them off? What fisherman ever gave up because the trout was hard to land?

Look Magazine (May 5), "The Vanishing Jew," confirms what many have known, the high percentage of American Jews who have no faith whatever. Is the church to go on ignoring these good people? Is not such an attitude discrimination of the worst sort?

Has our so-called social concern blinded us to men in particular? Jesus looked upon the multitudes with compassion, but had time for the individual soul.

Let us pray for a fresh baptism of concern. Isn't this what Pentecost means? Why not a dedicated group leading the church out to and for others? Why not small, trained groups especially concerned to reach students and skeptics and our Jewish neighbors who have left the synagogue?

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?" Lam. 1:12a.—The Presbyterian Outlook.

Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist'

The beautiful auditorium of the Sheron Acres Free Will Baptist Church, Durham, North Carolina, was finished shortly before Easter Sunday of this year. The Rev. Fred A. Rivenbark returned to this church as pastor November 1, 1949. It was during his pastorate that the building program was launched and completed.

Editor's Comments—

NORTH CAROLINA FREE WILL BAPTISTS are still being attacked by those who are evidently filled with the intention of doing all the harm they can to the Free Will Baptist cause in this state. From what we have been able to learn, accusations are still being hurled at the conferences and the North Carolina State Convention.

From time to time, we have written in defense of the action which the State Convention was forced to take. Never, however, have we spread malicious untruths against our fellow Christians, even though we did not agree with them. We have always tried to face the fact that each Christian has a right to his own opinions and notions.

Again we are thankful that our people in North Carolina are interested in knowing the truth first of all and are not easily swayed by high pressure tactics. If any Free Will Baptist body has a right to be angry, it is the North Carolina State Convention. We have been persecuted, misrepresented, and misunderstood. In spite of these things, however, we have emerged as a stronger, more determined Convention. By standing up for our convictions, we shall become even stronger. Certainly, we do not object to any other group's establishment of churches, carrying out a missions program, winning souls, etc., but we must be allowed the same privilege without harassment.

From the time that the Fellowship of Original Free Will Baptists began in August of 1963, untruths regarding North Carolina have been spread in some of those states where there are Free Will Baptists who share the same convictions which we share. We have reason to believe that these untruths are being spread by some of the very ones who really know the truth—by those who are originally from North Carolina and who received their start in the ministry from this state.

There is one great consolation that overrides all untruths: it is the realization that the truth shall ultimately prevail, and that which is not true shall be brought to light. We believe that God is honoring and shall continue to honor the Free Will Baptist cause in North Carolina because we have done the best we could do, and that is all He requires of anyone. We know that there are others who share our convictions, and we believe that as the months pass our cause shall spread and our number shall increase to a greater host.

All this adds up to the fact that there are still those with little, warped minds who are not content to advance the kingdom of God without attacking others. Thus, from time to time, we shall be compelled to write in defense of our cause. If our readers take exception to our approach, we hope each one will understand that we have sought to let the matter drop, but we have felt it necessary from time to time to present the truth. This reminds us again that the battle is not completely over in some areas. Thus, we must press on with the convictions that have brought us thus far.

AS CLEARLY POINTED OUT in the feature article by Brother Walter Reynolds, the idea of a promotional director in the state of North Carolina is nothing new. In fact, we are in agreement with the conclusions drawn by Brother Reynolds. We feel that some positive action must be taken right away. We cannot sit idly by with the hope that somehow the work of the kingdom will somehow be accomplished without putting forth a concerted effort.

Be sure to read the article "State Promotional Department: Do We Need It?" in this week's issue. Any comments from our readers will be appreciated.

THE INDIVIDUAL CHRISTIAN---

HIS IMPORTANCE

BY THE REV. P. C. WIGGS

Pinetops, North Carolina

CHRISTIANITY does not substitute masses of people for individuals. Quite the opposite is true. God is concerned about individuals, about you and me personally. Paul gives an account of the importance of you as an individual in Galatians 2:20: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

God doesn't love us and care for us collectively; rather, He knows our names, He understands our problems, and He has a thrilling plan for each of us individually. To put it bluntly, you are important to God. This is where self-esteem comes in. A Christian who has self-esteem realizes that he is worth something; and because of this, he takes care of himself and accomplishes something. Self-esteem is not pride or arrogance or showing off. To have self-esteem doesn't mean you put yourself on a pedestal and command everyone else to bow down to you. Nor does it mean you consider yourself better than others. That is self-conceit, and it's a sin.

Now, if the Bible teaches anything, it's the dignity and worth of the individual. You were created in the image of God; Christ died for you on the Cross. In God's sight you are an important part of creation. It is this conviction of the worth of the individual that penned the Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation Proclamation, and that sent Jesus Christ to a Roman cross. You are important, not because of who you are, or what you can do, but because you are a part of God's eternal plan. After all, didn't God use a Christian man named Joseph to save his family; a Christian named David to rescue an army; and another Christian named Daniel to save a whole nation? I have every reason to believe that this same God can use a Christian like you to play an important role in His exciting plan for the universe.

There are four important words that you must understand of your Christian life is going to be successful and amount to anything; namely, interdependence, privilege, responsibility, and accountability. First let us consider them in the order given.

You must learn the importance of interdependence. Or to put it in simple language, you will have to learn how to live with one another in a constructive way. Imagine how confused this world would be if everyone were really independent. Some would drive on the right side of the road and others on the left side. Some would pay taxes; others would refuse to pay. Why it would not be safe for you to step outside your house. Total independence, or living the way you please without considering others, is impractical and dangerous. I firmly believe that the lack of understanding regarding this one word (interdependence) among individuals in the Free Will Baptist denomination as a whole (may I say this does not exclude the ministry either) has been one of the greatest hazards in retarding the spiritual growth and progress of our great Free Will Baptist denomination. So what we must learn, if we are to be a successful Christian people, is that we must depend on one another to keep our denomination strong and progressive. Every misunderstanding, every disappointment, and every enjoyment will help us as individuals to understand that we can't have our own way and make others happy, or either be happy ourselves.

The second word is privilege. Christians today have more privileges and opportunities than any previous generation has enjoyed. It isn't because God thinks more of you than He did of Christians twenty years ago, or because you are more talented or intelligent. The reason, I think, is this: God wants to use each of you to accomplish something that has never been accomplished since the first days of the church; namely, to take the gospel to a lost world. Christians have the opportunity to learn more, see more, go more places, and accomplish more than any other generation of Christians in the history of the world. You have more time, money, and social status than any other Christians in history. Regardless of what problems you now face, you must admit that you are a privileged Christian.

Now with privileges go responsibilities. This is the way God has made the world, and I think it's a pretty sensible arrangement. If you want the privilege of eating, then you'll have to accept the responsibility of working. "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat" (2 Thessalonians 4:10). If you want the privilege of driving a car, then you must accept the responsibilities of obeying the law. If you want the privilege of belonging to any society, group, or church, you must accept the responsibilities that go along with belonging to each.

With responsibility goes accountability. Everybody must answer in some way or another for the way he has used his God-

MISSIONS

Matthew

REVIVAL FIRE BURNS IN MEXICO

by J. E. Timmons

In the Texas-Mexico area we are experiencing a revival which we have long prayed for. How we rejoice to see the evidence of revival on the Mexico mission field with souls coming to Christ in full surrender and following in baptism!

We especially want to mention the work in Saltillo, Coahuila, Mexico, where Brother Juan Lopez is the pastor. Recently eight persons were baptized (pictured at right). In a few days, the Lord willing, four others will be baptized.

In Monterrey, Brother Antonio Lopez is working in a most needy field where there are no other churches. The people meet in a home; therefore, he is in need of some kind of a place to meet. They are doing a good job of telling others of Christ, and the attendance is growing. A number have accepted Christ. I had the joy of preaching to a large number, and at the end two young men surrendered to Christ.

Brother Elias Rodriguez continues in Santa Rosa. He tells the story of a little Mexican boy by the name of Pedro who started attending Sunday school, and the boy's father would punish him after he would return from Sunday school. But little Pedro would slip away from herding the goats to attend the Sunday school. He said, "Please pray for me so I can come back next Sunday and hear more of the Bible."

We are happy to announce that Brother and Mrs. Elias Rodriguez are the proud parents of a baby born just a few days ago. They are in desperate need for clothing for the baby.

Herman Rodriguez and his wife continue serving in the Jimenez area and in El Moral. There have been a number of new ones to accept Christ in Jimenez recently. In El Moral the work is very slow. Sometimes it is impossible to have services when there is a celebration going on, since there is much drunkenness and shooting; but in spite of all this, a number are seeking and finding Christ.

GIVE ME MY SWORD

by Mrs. Bruce Johnson
Shellman, Georgia

IN our country today every American, whether learned or unlearned, whether rich or poor, whether young or old, can feel a danger within his heart of things coming upon our nation. We are turning our backs on the truth we were built upon.

As a child, having the blessings of being raised by Christian parents, I remember how well the rod of discipline had to be used in my life. Have you ever overheard your parents say, "She's gone just about as far as she can go"? If I ever heard this I knew what to expect. It seems I could never find peace until I felt this discipline in my life. Talking about it didn't help; I had to have the experience. When the final blows came they were not always alike. Perhaps some privilege was denied or some extra task was added; then sometimes the old razor strap was used. One thing for sure, I always knew why if not how the punishment would come. (I must admit I never really appreciated it to the fullest until after I became a mother. My, those words still ring out today: "It hurts me the most to have this to do, but because I love you I haven't any other choice!")

I can hear within my heart, "America needs discipline." We know how much more our heavenly Father loves us than our own parents. With heavenly love we can hear Him say, "Fear not my little flock." The battle is almost here; and we, as Christians, if the Lord tarries, will be called to the front line for service. How foolish it would be to march as a soldier into battle without any training without a uniform, or without something to fight with! Nor will God have us in His battle without training, a uniform or any weapons to fight with.

In Ephesians 6:10-17 we find these words: "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his mighty arm. Put on the whole armour of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all, taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."

Are you wearing this great uniform Paul is telling us about? Brush up on the sword. We can't fight a battle without a sword; it is so important. The sword is the Spirit which is the Word of God.

STATE PROMOTIONAL DEPARTMENT:

Do We Need It?

by Walter Reynolds, Pastor

Shady Grove Free Will Baptist Church
Dunn, North Carolina

FOR us to properly consider the question of whether we need a promotional department or not, we need to bring ourselves up to date as to what has been done in this respect in the past. As far back as the twenty-first annual session of the State Convention, and perhaps even further back, there was an office in the Convention known as field secretary. In the minutes of the twenty-first session, which was held at Union Chapel church in 1933, the following is recorded in Article 1, Section 4 of the Bylaws:

"The Field Secretary shall have charge of preparing statistical tables showing the increase or decrease in membership, church property, etc., and read at each session of the annual convention and refer same to the Recording Secretary for permanent record. He shall have charge of placing all the work of the Convention before the various Conferences and Associations. Also the field work in general." Various ones filled this office up through the thirty-second annual session of the State Convention, among them the Revs. R. B. Spencer, M. E. Tyson, and J. C. Griffin. In this thirty-second session, the resolutions committee presented a resolution calling on the Association (the State Convention was known for a few years as the State Association) to go on record as desiring the services of a full-time promotional director. During this session the executive committee was asked to prepare such plans and recommendations as would be necessary for the establishment of this office and report to the next annual session.

In the thirty-third annual session of the State Association held at the Kenly church, Johnston County, in 1945, the report was given setting forth detailed plans for the full-time services of a promotional director. The executive committee was instructed to proceed with the work and to put the full-time promotional director on the field as soon as practical. It seems that Brother Griffin, who was field secretary, continued under this new arrangement until the thirty-fifth annual session of the State Convention. In the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth annual sessions of the State Convention, there was much discussion concerning employing a promotional worker but nothing different was done.

Preceding the thirty-seventh annual session of the State Convention, the Rev. R. N. Hinnant, in lieu of someone to do promotional work, was appointed by the executive committee to meet with the ministers of all the conferences and associations of the state for the purpose of coordinating the work throughout the State Convention. Just after the thirty-seventh session the Rev. J. A. Evans was appointed by the executive committee to do the promotional work for the coming year. His report is in the minutes of the thirty-eighth annual session of the State Convention held at Rains Cross Roads church, Johnston County, in 1950. Following the thirty-eighth session, the executive committee worked out a plan and employed the Rev. M. L. Johnson as promotional director on a part-time basis. This is reported in the thirty-ninth annual session of the State Convention held with the White Oak church, Bladenboro, in 1951. In the fortieth annual session of the State Convention, which was held with the Goshen church, North Belmont, in 1952, there was much discussion concerning the work of the promotional director. A change was made in the Constitution and Bylaws relative to this office.

A minister and leader among N. C. Free Will Baptists asks a question which our State Convention must soon answer.

During the time that Brother Johnson was promotional director, the work of the State Convention showed signs of progress; but due to pressing obligations, he resigned just preceding the forty-first annual session of the State Convention held at Marsh Swamp church, Wilson County, in 1953. The Rev. W. B. Raper succeeded him in this office, but again it was on a part-time basis. Even on a limited basis, though, the work that was done by the promotional director greatly helped the program of the State Convention. However, again because of other commitments, the promotional director resigned to be effective at the forty-second annual session of the State Convention held at the Orphanage in 1954. For a few years there was limited promotional work carried on by the State Convention through a promotional director. After the resignation of Brother Raper, it seems that year by year the executive committee was given the responsibilities of the promotional work. However, this did not mean that the idea of a promotional director was abandoned; for it seems that almost every year some motion, report, or resolution was considered relative to this matter.

In 1956 the executive committee appointed a committee to define and interpret the office and work of the promotional department. Their report was given at the forty-fourth annual session of the State Convention held with Beaver Dam church, Columbus County, in 1956; (continued on page thirteen)

Church Dedicates Annex And Honors Pastor

On Sunday, August 16, during the eleven o'clock worship service, the Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church near

Coming Events

- September 2—First term of Mount Olive College begins for 1964-65
- September 7—Labor Day
- September 16, 17—North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, American Legion Auditorium, Wilson
- September 24, 25, 26—Muscle Shoals State Line Free Will Baptist Association, Cross Roads Church, Lawrenceburg, Tennessee

ayden, North Carolina, dedicated the new annex to the church with a note burning service and honored its retiring pastor who has served the church for the past ten years, the Rev. Hubert Burress of Pinetops, North Carolina. The dedication sermon was delivered by Mr. Burress; and Mrs. James Blanchard rendered a beautiful solo, "Bless This House."

During the service Mr. and Mrs. Burress were presented a silver tray and cake server by the church and its auxiliaries as a tribute to their faithful service for the past ten years. The service closed with a picnic lunch served in the church annex.

During the pastorate of Mr. Burress, Little Creek church has made many accomplishments. The sanctuary has been completely renovated with new pews, an organ, and carpet being installed. A new porch has been added to the entrance of the church; Sunday school classrooms have been added, and the annex has been built. In the annex is also a modern baptistry.

The church has an active Sunday school, woman's auxiliary, and layman's league. During the summer months it sponsors both a ladies' and a men's softball team. It also participates in all phases of the denominational work.

Mr. Burress is being replaced with the Rev. Eugene Sumner of Pink Hill, North Carolina. He will begin his duties with the church on September 6. Mr. Sumner is a graduate of Mount Olive and Atlantic Christian Colleges, and is at present attending the Baptist Seminary at Wake Forest, North Carolina.

Maple Hill, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Angola Free Will Baptist Church met August 13 in the home of Mrs. Lela Bronson for its monthly meeting. The group sang "Near the Cross," which was followed with prayer. Mrs. Bronson read the Scripture taken from Psalm 127:1 and Matthew 7:24. Mrs. Leria Swinson was in charge of the program entitled "Except the Lord Build the House."

During the business session the group discussed ways to get more members of the community interested in the activities of the church. Mrs. Jeanette Raynor dismissed the group with prayer.

Ayden, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting Thursday, July 23, in the home of Mrs. Rosalie Murphy with seventeen members and one visitor present. The meeting opened with the group's singing "Bring Them In." The Scripture, taken from Luke 14:15-24, was read by the president, Mrs. Stella Worthington. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Esther Mae Gibson.

During the business session a motion was made and carried to pay $15 on a missionary's salary to Arizona-Mexico. Also motions were made and carried to give a love offering to Miss Barbara Beeton, a missionary student from Elm Grove church to the Arizona-Mexico mission field, and to give a sunshine box to Mrs. Lucy Worthington.

The program entitled, "Our Neighbors 'Round the Corner," was given by Mrs. Margaret Ard and was very interesting. The closing hymn was "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me." Mrs. Annie E. Chappell dismissed the group with prayer.

During the social hour Mrs. Rosalie Murphy gave to Mrs. Ard a beautiful handmade crocheted bedspread in appreciation for the splendid work she has done with the church choir. The hostess then served delicious refreshments.

Ayden, N. C.—The AFC of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church met on Friday, August 6, at 4 p. m., in the home of Pattie and Vonnie Williamson for its monthly meeting. The meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Vonnie Williamson. The group then joined together in the singing of "Stand Up for Jesus," followed with prayer by Vicki Jones. The group repeated the watchword, taken from Psalm 143:8-10, and the motto, taken from Ephesians 4:15. The devotional reading was read by Pattie Williamson, taken from Genesis 27:1-33. Chorus time followed, directed by Vicki Jones.

During the business session the treasurer reported a total of $19.70 brought forward from the last meeting. During the month the following had been paid out: Danny Duzits, $12.50; Bruce Jones' gift, $2.06; stamps, $1.00; leaving a balance at this meeting of $4.14. The secretary called the roll; fifteen members were present. She also read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved.

The following took part on the program: Donna Briley, Nancy Garris, Vicki Jones, Vonnie Williamson, and Mike Griffin. The closing prayer was by JoAnn Jones.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Irene Williamson.

Fountain, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Friday night, August 14, 1964, in the church. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, president, presided. The group joined together in singing "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?"

Mrs. Carlton Gardner, program chairman, opened the program with prayer. She used for the Scripture lesson Psalm 127:1 and Matthew 7:24, which was followed by the program, "Except the Lord Build the House," written by Mrs. Almond Warrick. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner gave a very interesting and informative talk about her week's stay at Crag-mont last summer, 1963. This was followed with prayer by Mrs. Robert Oaley.

During the business session Mrs. Gardner presided and Mrs. Lester Gay, secretary-treasurer, called the roll and received the dues. She also read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved. This was followed with the treasurer's report. A motion was made and seconded to send $10 to Mexico missions. Also plans were made for each member to give one day's wages at the next meeting to send to Cragmont to help furnish a room. The closing prayer was given by Mrs. David Hobgood.

Fountain, N. C.—The Young People's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met at the church Thursday night, August 13, 1964. The meeting opened with prayer, after which the group joined together in singing several choruses. The Rev. C. H. Overman, pastor, gave the program. He made a very inspiring talk on "Stairways to Success."

The roll was called, minutes were read and approved, and a collection of $1.75 was taken. The group voted to have a "Youth Sunday" the fourth Sunday in October, details to be arranged by the pastor and the sponsors of the YFA.

Refreshments were enjoyed by all. The next meeting will be in the home of Cooper Goff.

FRUITS AND ROOTS

Many of us would love to have sin taken away. Who loves to have a hasty temper? Who loves to have a proud disposition? Who loves to have a worldly heart? No one. You ask Christ to take it away, and He does not do it. Why does He not do it? It is because you wanted Him to take away the ugly fruit while the poisonous roots remained in you. You did not ask that henceforth you might give up self entirely to the power of His Spirit. Do you suppose that a painter would want to work out a beautiful picture on a canvas which did not belong to him? No. Yet people want Jesus Christ to take away this temper or that other sin while as yet they have not yielded themselves utterly to His command.—Andrew Murray.

Is your Christianity ancient history or current events?—Samuel M. Shoemaker.

Christian Education

Mount Olive Graduate Receives Scholarship

Adrian Grubbs Jr., a 1964 graduate of Mount Olive College, has been awarded a $250 annual scholarship to North Carolina Wesleyan College at Rocky Mount, North Carolina.

Last year Adrian was president of the Student Government Association of Mount Olive College and served as student pastor of Indian Springs and Grant's Chapel Free Will Baptist Churches near Mount Olive. During the past two summers he has worked on the maintenance staff of the college to help finance his education.

He is open for weekend pastoral services or supply work beginning in September. "We can recommend Adrian to any Free Will Baptist Church within driving distance of Rocky Mount that may need a student pastor," President W. Burkette Raper declared. "He is a dedicated Christian and is one of our promising young ministers."

Adrian is an ordained Free Will Baptist minister and is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Grubbs Sr., of Mount Olive. The elder Grubbs moved his family from Perry, Florida, to Mount Olive in 1960 in order that he and his children might attend Mount Olive College.

His second son, Harry, also a ministerial student, will enter Mount Olive College in September.

Wayne Benefit Dinner

A planning session for the 1964 Wayne County benefit dinner for the development fund of Mount Olive College has been set for Tuesday, September 1, 7:45 p. m., in the First Free Will Baptist Church of Goldsboro, North Carolina.

Hardy Talton, chairman of last year's dinner, has requested that each Free Will Baptist church in the county send its full college committee to this meeting.

President W. Burkette Raper will discuss plans for the building program on the new campus and distribute workers packets to committee members.

Mount Olive College Day Reminder

Free Will Baptist Sunday schools and churches are reminded that Sunday, August 30, is Mount Olive College Day.

Each fifth Sunday has been designated for college day observance by the North Carolina State Convention of Churches and the North Carolina State Sunday School Convention. Free Will Baptists everywhere are called upon to remember the college in prayer and to make special gifts for its support.

"Mount Olive College stands today on the threshold of a new era when golden opportunities present unparalleled challenges," President W. Burkette Raper declared. "A record enrollment of 250 students is expected in September. As we begin our second decade of service, the need for the building program on the new campus becomes increasingly urgent," he added.

Churches and Sunday schools are urged to remember the college on August 30. Gifts will be applied to the 1964-65 general fund quotas of churches.

Calendar of Events at Mount Olive College

Miss Farmer Named House Counselor

Miss Bonnie Farmer of Mount Olive and Middlesex, North Carolina, has been appointed to a position as house counselor at Mount Olive College for the forthcoming school year. She will live with women assigned to the Tyndall House on East College Street.

Miss Farmer, a native of the Mount Olive community, is the daughter of Mrs. G. L. Farmer of Route 1 and the late Mr. Farmer. For the past fourteen years she has been field representative for the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex.

She plans to continue her summer duties with the Children's Home as manager of the concert class.

The Rev. Raymond Hardison, pastor of the Sound View Free Will Baptist Church, Morehead City, North Carolina, will be the evangelist for revival services at Smyrna Free Will Baptist Church of Blounts Creek, North Carolina. Services will begin Monday evening, September 7, and continue through Saturday evening, September 12.

The pastor, the Rev. Allen Campbell, and the congregation extend a hearty welcome to all to attend.

Executive Committee To Meet

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists will meet September 1, 1964, 10 a. m., at Mount Olive College. Anyone who would like to meet with the committee is invited to do so. The Rev. C. L. Patrick is president of the convention.

"The saint and the sinner both need to know the truth that the Saviour is also Lord, and that He came not only to deliver from sin's penalty, but likewise from its power."—Selected.

OBITUARIES

A MEMORIAL to the Late Wm. Herbert Graves

It was just a year ago that God call my dad;
We all miss him so, and it makes us so sad.

Our memories of him are so very clear
Of joy, of sorrow, of laughter, and tear;
Day after day, and night after night,
It seems I can see him still in my sight.

To his family he was the perfect dad,
Teaching and sacrificing all that he had;
His neighbors and friends gave him a good name,

Now that he is gone, there is nothing the same.

To his church he gave much of his time;
For service to God, he never did mind.

Life seemed better when he was around,
For he always wore a smile, never a frown.

No sweeter man ever did live;
To be just like him, oh, what I'd give!
I realize now my fortunate ways
Of having had him for so many days.

Now that his home is in that heavenly place,

Sleep on dear Dad, 'til we meet face to face.

Written by his daughter,
Mrs. Helen Gaydek

ATTENTION UNION MEETINGS

This is to remind you that the union meetings and conferences belonging to the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists are entitled to one delegate for each 500 members or fraction thereof to represent at the convention which meets at the American Legion building, Wilson, September 16, 17. It is hoped that the union meetings will elect or appoint the delegates when they meet on August 29.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: What are some of the strongest arguments favoring divine healing and how may we explain and meet these arguments? Do you believe in miracle working in this age?—Ellis Gray, Illinois.

ANSWER: I do believe in miracle working in this very age in which we now live, and the strongest argument I know is that of my own experience. Whereas I was once lost, now I am saved. And whereas I was once blind to spiritual things, I now clearly see many things in the spiritual realm and have a clear understanding of them; that is, one that is clear compared with the lack of vision and of understanding I once had of these things. For example, I once had all kinds of doubts as to where I should spend eternity and what would happen to me if I should suddenly be snatched from this realm of existence, what hell would be like if I should go there, or what being in heaven would be if I should be so fortunate as to ascend to its sublime heights and enter its glories. Now I know that I am in Christ, that I live and move and have my being in Him, that to be absent from the body is to be present with Christ, that whether I live or die that I am Christ's, and that all things work together for good to me because I am His, and better than all, He is mine. "For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring" (Acts 17:28). "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. Wherefore we labour, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him" (2 Corinthians 5:8, 9). "I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them" (John 17:9, 10).

Besides this, I have been among those that prayed for people that the doctors did not think would live for many more hours, and they still are living today. One of those that I have in mind was the mother of a young daughter. This mother is living today and serving the Lord. The daughter, then only a day or so old, has finished Bible school, is the wife of a minister, and has two children that she and her husband are bringing up in the ways of the Lord. Another is a woman who at the time of her illness had five children, the oldest in her early teens. The mother is still living and was active in church work the last I knew of her, and several of the children are married and have Christian homes. The child who was a baby at the time of his mother's serious illness is grown, but I do not know anything more about him.

Another incident worth mentioning here was a fall sustained by the young son of a young minister that appeared to be fatal. A group of us were meeting to pray for missionaries, but just before we knelt to pray, the father came to the room where we were with what appeared to be the lifeless body of his son and called for one of the number to drive him to the hospital. We prayed for the young father and mother as well as for the injured son. They drove about two and one-half miles to the hospital, the father holding what appeared to be the lifeless body of his son, until the instant he entered the room where the doctor was. At that time the lad opened his eyes and spoke for the first time since the fall. The doctor examined the child, finding no sign of injury whatever. This same lad graduated from high school a few years ago with the highest honors of any in the county.

I have not told these stories thinking that the healing of the body is a miracle equal to that of the regeneration of a soul; for I do not. So far as I know any or all of these could go to hell judging from such Scriptures as Hebrews 6:4-6;

10:26-31; and Ezekiel 33:13, 14. I believe that the greatest of all the miracles in our age is the new birth; the life of faith as exhibited by a consecrated Christian. God is changing men and women day by day through the preaching of the Word, and through the power of this same Word they have hidden in their hearts. God is holding them up to a lost world while they study and meditate upon the Word, growing in grace and knowledge day by day. It is indeed marvelous, and we have no way of adequately expressing the personal joys that come to us in this day by day experience. Hallelujah! I am glad I am saved, aren't you? Besides knowing that I am saved and having the happy privilege of telling a lost, sin-cursed world of it and of the joys it brings, I have seen a few people when they were saved, and oh, how it thrilled my soul! What a privilege it has been to watch them while they grow in grace, exhibiting that life and generosity in contrast to that of hate and inconsideration to others they exhibited before the miracle of grace took place in their lives.

I remember a man here in Nashville, Tennessee, was involved in the Jehovah's Witness hoax with whom I went to the altar and prayed. He was truly converted and lived honorably for Christ for several months; but a former business partner, a Jehovah's Witness, kept pestering him until he gave way to this temptation to the extent that he no longer showed the joy of his salvation that he had immediately following his conversion. One night when the altar call was given, he came to me and said, "I want you to pray for me again." We prayed at the altar. He has now been a faithful member of this church for about seven years, has taught his children in the Lord, and now enjoys their Christian testimony.

Besides such as these about whom I know personally, I have had many friends who asked me to pray for many different people with whom they have dealt, to later tell of their wonderful conversion and of the consecrated lives they are now living in active services for their Master.

I feel that we who are Christians, that have been true to our profession, will meet with many pleasant surprises when we get to heaven, seeing Jesus face to face and meeting the many that we have faithfully prayed for but have never seen. "Abraham believed God and it was counted to him for righteousness."

If we believe God, we will accept Him

STORIES

for our

BOYS and GIRLS

A MESSAGE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

by Lelia Hines
Selma, North Carolina

BELIEVING that there are some of you dear boys and girls who have often felt the desire to accept Christ as your Saviour and who have failed to do so because you were afraid you could not be good enough, I am giving you a few thoughts to think over.

When my daughter was between five and six years of age, she was given a pair of roller skates; but if she had taken them and said that she knew nothing about skating and was afraid to try, she never would have learned to skate. Instead, she took the skates with the determination that she could and would learn to skate. So she put the skates on; and with a stick to guide her, she went on the sidewalk to master the art of skating. It is true that she got a lot of bumps, but each time she rubbed her bumps and got up more determined not to fall again. It was her determination to stick to the task until she learned to skate without falling that helped her to become a good skater.

Now this is just how each of us will win the race as a Christian: we have to be determined that we will win and make a start sometime. When you start out as a Christian, you will know very little about it; and there will be many times along this journey that you will become discouraged. But just as the little girl used her guide stick, you open the Bible (your guide) and read it. It will help you over the rough places of life; and each time you read it, you will become a stronger Christian.

Think back over the years when God placed you in the arms of your loving mother. You were a helpless infant; and if left alone to depend on yourself, you would have died. It took the patient care of a loving mother to help you become the fine boy or girl that you now are.

When you were at the age to begin trying to walk, your mother knew that you would get many falls; but this did not keep her from letting you pull up by the furniture and try again. Each time you fell, Mother picked you up and gave you a loving caress and told you to try it again. It was your mother's faith in you and your desire to walk that helped you to walk alone.

Now this is simple enough for a small child to understand, and God intended it to be like this, for Jesus loves the little children. Do not let anyone make you believe that you are too young to accept Christ as your Saviour. All big people have to accept Christ the same way that a little child does. (See Matthew 18:3.)

It is a beautiful picture to see a junior boy or girl accept Christ as his Saviour, because he is giving a life to God. If he lets God use his life for His glory, many other lives will be saved through his witnessing along this journey of life.

Yes, it is true that sometimes you may get discouraged, but just remember that it is you who have failed and not God. Just as Mother keeps on loving you after you have disobeyed her, so your heavenly Father still loves you, even after you have disobeyed Him at times.

All a Christian has to do when he feels that he has disobeyed God is to confess his mistake and repent of it to God through prayer. God will restore in your life the joy that went out when you sinned. Always remember that Christ comes into your heart as an invited guest.

All you have to do to accept Christ as your Saviour is to seek (Isaiah 55:6), confess (1 John 1:9), repent (Luke 13:

3), believe (Romans 10:9), and receive (John 1:12). Look up these passages in your Bible and read them over and over again.

A HEROINE

THERE'S Cap?" cried Florence as she galloped up to her friend, the shepherd.

"Poor Cap, I'm afraid I'll have to kill him."

"Kill him! Oh, no, Roger! What has he done?"

"He didn't do anything, Florence. Some boys threw stones at him and broke his leg. I'll have to put him out of his misery."

Florence jumped down from her horse. "Oh, Roger, please let me see him. Perhaps I can do something for him."

In a few minutes Florence heard angry barks, but as soon as Cap saw who was coming he wagged his tail and whimpered. "His leg's not broken, Roger, only badly bruised and swollen. I think we can nurse him back to health."

Each day Florence tended Cap and each day he grew better. That was hardly surprising, was it, for Cap's nurse was none other than little Florence Nightingale who grew up to be the "angel of mercy" to hundreds of British soldiers.

If Florence, who was born in Florence, Italy, but whose parents returned to England soon after, had not loved to "play nurse," many thousands of British boys would never have lived through that awful Crimean War of 1854-5—thirty years after the beginning of our story.

Florence Nightingale had finished her nurse's training and was enjoying all the comforts of home life when this terrible war was taking the lives of thousands of brave, young men. Suddenly she tossed out it was tabled for twelve months and the executive committee was instructed to continue the work of the promotional department for the coming year. The following year another study committee was appointed and they made their report at the forty-fifth annual session of the State Convention held with the Dramerton church in 1957, their report was adopted.

STATE PROMOTIONAL DEPARTMENT: DO WE NEED IT?

Then in December 1957, the executive committee authorized the president and secretary to purchase such equipment as was needed in the establishment of a promotional office. The minutes containing this authorization were subsequently approved by the forty-sixth annual session of the State Convention held at the Orphanage in 1958. On October 21, 1958, the executive committee passed a motion to authorize the employment of clerical help to assist in the promotional work of the State Convention. Following this another motion was passed that the secretary of the Convention be given $15 per month and the president, be given $50 per month, plus mileage, for promotional work during the coming year. These minutes were adopted at the forty-seventh annual session of the State Convention held with Mount Olive Junior College in 1959.

For the next two years little or nothing was said about the promotional department, perhaps because our attention was directed toward the conflict that arose within our denomination. Then in April, 1962, the Rev. Ralph Lightsey was employed as promotional director; he was also director of public relations of Mount Olive Junior College. He held the office of promotional director a very short time, resigning when he accepted the position as editor of literature at the Free Will Baptist Press.

Again last year, the work of the promotional department was carried on by the president and vice-president of the State Convention. However, at the fifty-first annual session of the State Convention held at the Memorial Auditorium in Raleigh, there were two items considered relative to promotional work. The first was a report that came in the minutes of the executive committee pertaining to the $50 Jubilee contributions. The report recommended that the expenses of the Convention be paid from these contributions and then the remaining portion be used for the promotional work of the Convention. The second came before the Convention in the form of a resolution which called for someone to "promote and coordinate the training of our people, develop improved methods of youth work, and generally oversee the work of our denomination in preparing our youth to take their place in our church."

The past should help us plan for the future. I conclude from what has taken place in the past that, as a State Convention, we need a promotional department. Why don't we have a promotional director promoting the work of the State Convention today? Several reasons perhaps could be given, but I believe it is simply that we have just talked and haven't concentrated our efforts in that direction enough. We usually bypass the issue by saying, "Let the executive committee assume that responsibility"; and that is the way it goes. Then the executive committee will allocate some money, by request, to this or that board of the State Convention, and do what it can to represent the work of the Convention on the field. This is better than no promotion at all, but we should have something better! Our Convention needs a full-time promotional director and would greatly profit from having one. For this Convention year the different boards, committees, and institutions are going to need approximately four hundred fifty thousand dollars to effectively carry on their work. A promotional director could greatly help in making this and the many other needs of the Convention known to the people. He could also offer the assistance of the Convention wherever and whenever needed.

Perhaps one of our greatest fears in respect to a promotional director is that of centralizing the authority and work of the State Convention. We need not have this fear as long as the Convention continues as it is and the Constitution and Bylaws remain intact, for they set forth the scope of his work. The promotional director's work would be mainly in the field of public relations. He should be the link between the State Convention and the local church, and between the State Convention and the general public. Another fear that we have concerning this office is in respect to adequate funds to maintain the work. The question is always raised, Will we be able to secure the funds that we will need and where will they come from? We need not have this fear, for a Convention the size of ours, with our resources, surely can finance this work. I sincerely believe that with a promotional director our Convention would benefit financially. I would suggest that the money received at the annual sessions of the State Convention, along with that received during the year, other than that earmarked and that necessary for the operation of the Convention, be kept in a fund for the purpose of employing a promotional director as soon as the funds are sufficient. Funds should also be sought for this purpose from every possible source.

It is time that we carried out the provisions for a promotional director as set forth in the Constitution and Bylaws of the State Convention. Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution reads: "The officers of this convention shall be a president, vice-president, recording secretary, assistant recording secretary, promotional director, and treasurer."

Article II, Section 5 of the Bylaws reads: "Promotional Director: The promotional director shall be elected for a term of (1) year under such contract as may be agreed upon by himself and the convention or its executive committee. In case of a vacancy in this office between sessions of the convention the executive committee shall fill the vacancy until the next session."

Article III, Section 5 of the Bylaws reads: "Promotional Director: The promotional director shall maintain an office for the purpose of coordinating the work of the convention. He shall prepare statistical tables necessary to keep the convention informed as to the growth and progress of the denomination. He shall work with the convention, the executive committee, all boards, committees and commissions of the convention in placing the work of the denomination before the

LESSON TEXT: Judges 2:11, 14-23

MEMORY VERSE: 1 Corinthians 10:13

I. INTRODUCTION

There are at least two different effects that failure can produce on the mind and the efforts of the individual: first, it can lead to the development of a defeatist attitude, which says in effect, "What's the use?" and gives up in despair; secondly, it can serve to develop a more determined attitude in the mind of him who has failed, a determination that boldly and in the face of all difficulties asserts, "Though this thing has defeated me on this occasion, I'll show it that I am master."

Success or failure are not things that are predetermined, nor things that just happen. There are causes for both. Nothing succeeds with everything working against it, and nothing fails without at least one thing being responsible for that failure. If we have failed, it behooves us to take an inventory of our efforts to determine the cause of that failure. We might have to recognize our efforts; we might have to solicit additional sources of aid; we might have to redirect our efforts; or we might have to do anyone of many things to take away the possibility of failure and make success more likely. The primary causes of failures in Christian activities are lack of faith, lack of dedication and devotion, lack of prayer, and the lack of the many things that lead to failure in secular endeavors.—Senior Quarterly (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The Israelites sinned by turning to idolatry (v. 11).

2. The idolatry of the chosen people caused the Lord's anger to be kindled against them (v. 14).

3. The Israelites were distressed because the hand of the Lord was turned against them (v. 15).

4. Even in spite of their sin, the Lord loved the Israelites and raised up judges to deliver them from their oppressors (v. 16).

5. After all that God had done for them, the people still went a whoring after false gods (v. 17).

6. Out of compassion and love for His people, the Lord raised up the judges (v. 18).

7. In the face of the goodness of God and the influence of their fathers, the Israelites further corrupted themselves by serving other gods (v. 19).

8. Because of the continual transgression of His covenant, the Lord's anger was further kindled against the Israelites (v. 20).

9. The Lord refused to drive out any more of the ancient inhabitants from Canaan in order to prove the Israelites (vv. 21, 22).

10. The Lord at first drove out only enough of the ancient people to make room for His chosen people; and in turn, they were to drive out more of them as they multiplied (v. 23).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The hundreds of miles of rivers in our country are used by tugboats pushing barges to carry all kinds of loads. As one watches a river flowing calmly by, it is hard to realize what problems in navigation it may present.

One cannot see from the surface the sandbars on which a boat may run aground. There are rapids or waterfalls that must be avoided by locks. Swift currents, the piers of bridges, sunken logs and boats—all present danger to the pilot whose task is a difficult one. On a long trip a boat may use several pilots, each for a different section of the river.

God's people faced many dangers and obstacles as they settled in the Promised Land. Time and again they fell into disobedience, and as a result God used the pagan nations about them to punish them. But God also provided "pilots"— the judges—who guided the Israelites past these dangerous spots.

When Moab threatened, Ehud delivered the people. When the Canaanites under Jabin oppressed Israel, God raised up Deborah who led the people to victory. Later on, the Midianites oppressed Israel. Gideon was called of God to overthrow these oppressors. Still later the Ammonites threatened Israel. This time God used Jephthah to relieve His people.

It is quite obvious to us that a tugboat and its barges cannot navigate a river without a pilot. It should be just as obvious that a nation cannot navigate the river of history without guidance from God, whether it be Israel or America.—Standard Commentary.

2. When Bishop Ditchfield was a layman he visited an aged woman who was a devout Christian. On the wall hung the framed text, "Thou God seest me." The aged saint said, "Read the text." He read it aloud. "My lad," said the aged woman "when you are older people will tell you that God is always watching you to see you when you do wrong so that He might punish you. I do not want you to think of this text in that way. I want you to take the framed text home with you. Whenever you see it I want you to know that God loves you so much that He cannot take His eyes from you!"

The injured body of a young girl was brought by policemen into the emergency room of a city hospital. After examination the doctor said, "Stand aside. She'll die!" But a kind, Christian nurse didn't "stand aside." She stood by! She sat at the bedside of the dying girl waiting for an opportunity to speak to her of the mightiness of Christ to deliver her from sin. "Does God care for anybody like me?" asked the dying girl. Assured by the nurse that He did love her the sinful girl said, "I've been such a bad girl. Tell me straight if there is any hope for me." Tenderly the nurse replied, "Yes, dear, God loves you and cares for you. He loved you so much that He gave His dear Son for your sins and my sins on His cruel cross." As the nurse spoke further words of assurance into ears rapidly dulling in death a smile of confidence spread over her face. Then a forgiven, triumphant soul passed into the presence of the One who said to a sinful woman in the long ago, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more!"

A mother repeatedly told her obstinate, stubborn boy to sit down. He continued to stand. Finally the mother went to him nd plopped him down in a chair. Fuming, the boy said, "I may be sitting down on the outside, but I am standing on the inside!"—Bible Expositor.

3. Today our nation is like the Israelites in that there is such a tendency to forget God. It seems that we in America have gone wild after the dollar, and we forget God in our quest for material things.

"A number of years ago Beverly Shea had an opportunity to sing on the radio on a program that would dictate to him the material he would use. This was at a time when radio was young and many people would have given anything for the opportunity that was given to Beverly Shea. He pondered the matter and found the words, 'I'd rather have Jesus than silver or gold.' He took these words, wrote music for them and used the song as his theme.

"Today George Beverly Shea blesses millions each year singing the Gospel. Radio stations would be glad to have his voice on the air singing the songs of his choice. He did not have to pay a price; it proved the greatest decision he ever made."—Selected.

Recently a story was carried in a national magazine about Al Worthington, a big league baseball pitcher, who left his team because he knew that they were cheating and who refused to pitch for a team that he knew was cheating. This was the kind of faith and courage that God wanted the Israelites to have, but they were weak and yielded to the pagan practices and customs of those about them. Even though God raised up leaders to help them, they suffered many difficulties as a result of their lack of courage and faith.

The value of good leaders cannot be overestimated; however, leaders cannot do everything. They must depend upon the people; and if the people have become corrupt, the leader fails. On the other hand, the people cannot accomplish much without adequate leadership; and if the leadership becomes corrupt, the people they lead fail. Both leaders and followers must recognize that their work is important and the work of each depends upon the integrity and cooperation of the other.—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

The devil doesn't care how much good we plan to do, provided we do not do it today.—Selected.

various bodies of the state for their information and support; also perform any other promotional duties as directed by the convention or the executive committee.

"When designated by a board, committee or commission, the promotional director shall receive and (or) pay out any money controlled by said board, committee or commission as directed by them.

"The promotional director shall be ex-officio member of all boards, standing committees and commissions of the convention."

How long are we going to allow our State Convention to suffer for lack of a promotional director?

as presented in His Word, and by faith will obey His Word. "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance." What a tremendous opportunity but also what great responsibility! "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16). "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded" (James 4:8). "Ye lust, and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts" (James 4:2, 3).

The Individual Christian— His Importance

given privileges and responsibilities. Let us hear what God has to say about giving account in Luke 16:2, 3: "And he called him and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward. Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my Lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed." Note also Romans 14:11: "For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." "But I say unto you, That every idle word that man shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment" (Matthew 12:36). So then all of us will have to give account someday before God. Accountability always lies at the end of the road. Yes, you are important as an individual; and God has a plan for your life. "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Ephesians 2:10). The way we conduct our lives now will come home to us tomorrow.

Christian Education

The appointment of Miss Farmer brings to five the number of house counselors for women the college will have during 1964-65. Other counselors returning from last year include Mrs. M. T. Tanner of Rocky Mount in the main building on Breazcale Avenue; Mrs. Esther Jinnette of Calypso in the Annex on West James Street; Mrs. Bertha Martin of Mount Olive in the Carroll House on Chestnut Street; and Mrs. Marie Griffin of New Bern in the Burnette House on East College Street.

For Whom Did Christ Die?

"Christ . . . died for all" (2 Corinthians 5:14, 15).

Twelve shipwrecked men were laboring in heavy seas in an overloaded boat. One of the seamen, in order to lighten the boat, deliberately sprang overboard. The rest were saved. For which of the eleven did the sailor give his life? If Christ died for all, He died for each; for no one more than another, and no one omitted. The sun shines for nineteen hundred millions of mankind; but I know that it shines for me.—A. T. Pierson.

the newspaper aside saying, "They need me on the battlefield, and if this is God's will for me, I shall go."

With 38 carefully-chosen nurses Florence went to South Russia where she found hundreds of wounded soldiers with no food, no medicine, only candles for light—miles of beds with only 18 inches between each one.

Florence Nightingale and her nurses worked day and night—scrubbing floors, washing sheets, setting up a kitchen as well as a laundry, caring for the sick and wounded.

Once she came to a Highlander lad in great pain. She tried to ease him, spoke kindly to him, smiled and went on. The Highlander turned and fell happily asleep but not before he had kissed the shadow that had fallen across his pillow—the shadow of Miss Nightingale, the angel of mercy.

Can you guess what made Florence Nightingale the great woman she was? When a young girl she believed that the Lord Jesus Christ loved her so much that He died to save her and she accepted Him as her Saviour and Friend. She continued to let Him control her life and it was out of love and devotion to Him that she followed His leading to Crimea. She was decorated with the highest honor that Queen Victoria could give her—the Order of Merit—and was the first woman to receive this award; but a higher honor was hers when she heard the words of the King of kings, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."—The Young Soldier.

HOPEWELL DEDICATES ANNEX

"I have been a victim of multiple scrosis since October 15, 1959. Since I have been unable to serve as pastor of churches, I have taken up the work of marriage counseling. I also run a call system of practical nurses, unskilled nurses, baby-sitters, and house trainers. I have some 75 ladies whom I can call at a moment's notice.

"As I was looking over my 'Baptist' of August 19, I saw where the National Association has decided to discontinue the Free Will Baptist League and replace it with a new training program called the Church Training Service.

"I would like very much to stress the most vital thing to our church, not only concerning our denomination, but others as well; that is, the training of our young boys and girls in church and Sunday schools. For the past three years, I have had 280 persons with marriage problems to come to me. Some were seeking the divorce court, with some having been separated for as long as three years. By the help and leadership of the Holy Spirit, I am very pleased to say, 254 of them have been reunited. I have had 100 boys and girls with various problems to come in and talk with me. Not a single one has entered into the juvenile court, and only two of the marriage cases have ever attained a divorce. I find that in the homes of the people I have interviewed, only about one percent read the Bible or grace the table, and none have family altars. About two percent attend church. Six percent attend Sunday school. Ninety-eight percent do not know the pastor's name, or the various churches they could attend. Surely we need a training program in our churches to train our adults as well as our boys and girls. We need full-time pastors and a full-time social worker to visit our neighborhoods and invite people to worship with us. As Brother J. C. Griffin says, 'We have doctrines. All we need is guidance, and leadership, and devoted Christians to work in our churches.' May God bless all that may read this article. Pray for me and my wife. You are invited to visit with us if you should pass this way."—The Rev. B. F. Ringgold, Sr., Route 5, Box 47, New Bern, North Carolina.

GOSPEL GIMMICKS

There are several definitions of the work "gimmick," but the one that applies to our subject is the following: "a new and ingenious scheme or angle." Gimmicks are sometimes used to give a boost in sales to the manufacturer's product. In fact, we have all succumbed to the brain washing tactics of high-pressure commercials on radio and television, as well as advertisements in magazines and newspapers. Many times we actually believe that the advertised product will do everything it professes to do. Thus, the advertisers scramble for new gimmicks—something that will give a new angle to an old product. The result is that many times we are taken in by it, forgetting that somewhere along the line we have a price to pay. We learn that trading stamps are not really free—that a special bargain still carries a price tag and the product itself may be inferior.

The fact is that the scramble for gimmicks has had its effect on the work and the plans of the church. The Church, however, is not an earthly institution; and therefore it must not adopt the ideas and schemes of the world. Sometime ago we read of a church that offered trading stamps to everyone who attended the morning service. Some people were probably attracted by the offer. If so, they did not attend the service for the purpose of worship, although it was certainly possible that they benefited from the service. The idea was a gimmick. Whether it was ingenious or not is not for us to say.

A church, Sunday school, or any other organization of the church may try to use gimmicks to attract people. Thus, we arrive at the term "gospel gimmicks." We have known of all sorts of things being done in the name of the gospel. To attract more people to Sunday school, one pastor had a mock missile firing one Sunday morning, with an object resembling a missile made of empty barrels.

Many ideas have been tried, but most of them are nothing more than gimmicks. Now the question is, Do they work? The answer is often "yes," if a church is interested in attracting the crowd. We seriously doubt, however, that the church is strengthened spiritually. If something is done for the sake of Christian fellowship and unity among God's people, on the other hand, then surely the blessings of God are upon it.

Crowds of skeptical, curious people do not strengthen the church. When Jesus began His earthly ministry, great multitudes of people followed Him. After He performed the miracle of feeding the 5,000, many followed Him to the other side of the sea; they followed Him that they might once again be fed. Soon, however, He reminded them that the path of discipleship is not easy; thus, many forsook Him. As they turned from Him on one such occasion, He turned to His disciples and asked, "Will ye also go away?" He used no gimmicks to attract or keep them. He did not need to, and neither do we need to employ them. In fact, we have what it takes to advance the kingdom of God without man-made schemes and devices. It is the pure teaching and preaching of the Word of God—it is the presenting of Christ to the world.

Once the use of gimmicks is employed, others will be required and expected. May we as Christians realize that the best answer is found in the words of Jesus, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me" (John 12:32). Every plan and program must be based on this promise. There is no room for gimmicks.

A GOOD YEAR

We are happy to report that the fiscal year which has just ended with the month of June has been a good year for the Free Will Baptist Press. In a later editorial we shall share this information more thoroughly with our readers. The auditor's report, however, has been completed and will be reviewed by the board of directors very shortly.

Are You Ready for Your Trip Through Space?

Rev. Carlton L. Myers

YOU may not be an astronaut, but you will be traveling through space someday. I can guarantee it! You will choose your own destination in advance. What preparations have you made for the trip?

Astronaut Gordon Cooper completed more than 22 orbits. The 36-year-old Air Force major traveled through space around the earth. He was over 100 miles above the earth. He traveled more than 17,000 miles per hour. It was a 600,000-mile trip. He covered the distance in about a day and a half.

When you take your trip through space, you will not go into orbit. Neither will you return to earth. You won't want to.

The Bible tells of others who traveled through space. It tells us about our own space flight. It tells us of Another who has a space flight planned. We do not know the launching time of this flight.

Enoch must have traveled through space. The fifth chapter of Genesis provides us with the family tree of Adam and Eve. It tells about the people that were born; they lived so many years; they begat sons and daughters; and they died.

But, in the middle of these "begats" and deaths, one name stands out. It is that of Enoch. He "walked with God." His statement was not made of any who preceded or followed him.

Enoch had a son who lived longer than anyone else, but the important thing about Enoch was his walk with God.

We read, "And Enoch walked with God: and he was not: for God took him" (Genesis 5:24).

Apparently Enoch traveled through space. He must have gone directly to heaven without ever dying. This unique privilege may have been given to him because "he walked with God."

He wore no spacesuit. He had no spaceship. He carried no special supply of oxygen. He did not blast off into space as a result of a rocket firing beneath him.

He was not propelled from beneath. Enoch was drawn from above. He was drawn by the One who has always known the laws of inter-planetary travel. In fact, He made those laws.

Elijah must have traveled through space. The second chapter of Second Kings tells us about it.

Elijah is perhaps best remembered for his contest with King Ahab and his flight from the wicked queen, Jezebel. He was the same man who was so discouraged that he wanted to die.

We read of Elijah and Elisha, "And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven" (2 Kings 2:11).

Apparently Elijah also traveled through space. He, too, must have gone directly to heaven without first dying.

Like Enoch, Elijah had no spacesuit. There was no "Faith-7" spaceship such as Gordon Cooper used. Elijah had a chariot of fire. There was no Atlas Rocket to propel him from beneath. There were horses of fire instead.

He too was not thrust up from beneath. Elijah was drawn from above. No jet propulsion, but a whirlwind.

As Enoch has the honor of being the first man in space, so Elijah has the honor of being the second.

Of course Jesus was more than a mere man. He is God. But, humanly speaking, He was the third man in space. At least, He was the third mentioned in the Bible. (We do not take the time to write of angels or of Satan.)

The first chapter of Acts tells the story of Jesus' trip.

He had been giving final instructions to His followers. They were to wait for the coming of the Holy Spirit. They were promised power for witnessing.

Then we read, "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight" (Acts 1:9).

Apparently Jesus traveled through space. He returned to the place from where He had come some 30 years previous to this event.

Jesus wore no spacesuit. He had no spaceship. He was not thrust up from beneath. He too was drawn from above.

We do not know if anyone saw Enoch leave. Apparently Elisha watched Elijah take off. Probably a large crowd witnessed the departure of Jesus to heaven. No one watched it on television.

Do you have any relatives or friends who have traveled through space? Of course they had to die first. If they were

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a lamp unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

'THAT'S ALL I WANT'

"The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever" (Psalm 23).

At the last prayer meeting I attended as pastor of the Asheville Free Will Baptist Church, Mrs. Alice James, who led the prayer meeting that night, read the 23rd Psalm as her Scripture. Sister James also read, and very ably commented on, the following beautiful, inspiring poem:

THAT'S ALL I WANT

"The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want."

Each child had cited a Bible verse
In Sunday school one day;
And each one with credit performed his part,
Till at last came little May.

"The Lord is my shepherd"—she paused to think,
And her heart the faster beat;
"The Lord is my shepherd—that's all I want,"
And she proudly took her seat.

'Twas a message new from a little child,
And it stirred my inmost soul;
Such a tender shepherd is all I want Till I reach the heavenly goal.

"The Lord is my Shepherd"—that's all I want,
He feedeth His flock with care;
He carries the lambs in His bosom close,
And nothing can harm them there.

"The Lord is my Shepherd"—that's all I want,

He numbers His flock each day;
He knows all the lambs of His fold by name,
And watches them lest they stray.

"The Lord is my Shepherd"—that's all I want,

And why should I covet more?
The pastures are green where He leadeth me,
And abundant is His store.

—Author unknown.

In Psalm 23 David expressed his confidence in God as in no other passage in the Bible. But David's confidence in the Lord is no greater than that which every Christian is privileged to experience and express in Christ as the "Good Shepherd." All the benefits and blessings the psalmist praised the Lord for, and many more, can be ours from Christ, the Great Shepherd of His sheep.

Just as David testified of the Lord as his Shepherd in protecting him and supplying all his needs by bestowing His blessings upon him, so we, the redeemed by Christ, can trust with the fullest of confidence in Christ for more and greater spiritual blessing. Paul gave two very significant assurances to this truth. The first is found in 2 Corinthians 9:8, "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." The next assurance comes to us from Philippians 4:19, which reads, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." No spiritual blessing need be wanted by those whose Shepherd Christ is. We can say in the words of the little girl, "That's all I want!"

We praise God for the assurances of Christ when He says, "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. . . . I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. . . . My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: And I give them eternal life. . ." (John 10:11, 14, 27, 28). "That's all I want!"

"Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, the great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen" (Hebrews 13:20, 21).

MUSIC IN YOUR BIBLE

The whole Bible rings with music. We are told that in the beginning when the earth was made, "The morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." And in the very beginning of the Gospel also, when the Christ was revealed, there was with the herald angel "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." And as music is in the earliest, so is it in the last glimpse we have of heaven. We see myriads of angels shouting, "Hallelujah," and "harpers harping with their harps," and "the redeemed in their countless multitudes singing the song of Moses. . . . and the song of the Lamb."—God's Revivalist.

WHAT OUR CHURCHES CAN DO FOR OUR CONVENTION

doing, please fill out completely the report blanks which have recently been mailed to the churches. If your church has not received one, please write the State Convention secretary, the Rev. C. H. Overman, P. O. Box 373, Ayden, North Carolina, at once. Include with your report to the Convention a liberal offering for the promotion of all the work of our Convention.

In addition to the things which need to be done in relation to this year's session of our Convention, let us remember that the work of our Convention is continuous. Our children at the Free Will Baptist Children's Home must be provided for. Mount Olive College with its increased enrollment and the great need to provide adequate facilities for the education of our youth offers a wonderful opportunity for investment in the kingdom of God. Our rapidly expanding mission field, both state and foreign, gives us all an opportunity to witness, ". . . unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8). Our Convention has a vital interest in Cragmont Assembly with its program of training and fellowship. Through the Board of Superannuation, our Convention attempts to help the aged ministers and their widows. Through the Church Finance Association, many local churches are helped in their building programs. These institutions and enterprises, though too much for any one church to support alone, have become a work which all Original Free Will Baptists can do working together under God.

When you pray for our Convention and help to plan and support its work, you are carrying on in the tradition of those who labored before us. May God bless our Convention as we attempt to do those things which are pleasing in His sight.

"Ask not what your Convention can do for you, but what you can do for your Convention."

SINCE the North Carolina State Convention is the democratic organization of Original Free Will Baptists through which we own and operate a number of institutions and enterprises for the purpose of promoting and increasing the cause of Jesus Christ, it is a good question to ask, What can our churches do for our Convention?

When Jesus warned that ". . . without me you can do nothing" (John 15:5), He was pointing out how dependent we are upon Him. Let us not neglect to pray that our Convention may ever be undergirded with His power and be under His direction. So many times the Gospel writers tell how Jesus prayed, especially when He was about to do something very important. Jesus prayed at His baptism (Luke 3:21). After praying all night (Luke 6:12), He chose the twelve and preached the greatest sermon ever preached. It was as He prayed (Luke 9:29) that He was transfigured. Before He ever called Lazarus from the grave, He spoke to God in prayer (John 11:41, 42). As He faced the agonies of rejection and torture, He prayed in Gethsemane, ". . . not my will, but thine, be done" (Luke 22:42). Even while His life's blood was being poured out upon the ground to make an atonement for sin, He cried, ". . . Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do . . ." (Luke 23:34).

In keeping with the example of our Master, let me suggest that every Free Will Baptist church, when the members are come together to worship and serve our Lord, pray that God will guide our Convention and work through it to His glory. I firmly believe that if we pray earnestly, yielding ourselves as living sacrifices to Him, that God will bless our Convention.

After a season of prayer for our Convention, let me urge that every Free Will Baptist church elect one delegate for each one hundred members or a fraction thereof to attend our Convention which meets at the American Legion Building in Wilson, North Carolina, September 16 and 17. Through their delegates every church has a voice and a vote in the program of Original Free Will Baptists. Insist that your pastor attend too. While ministers and delegates are expected to attend, the Convention offers to all our people a wonderful opportunity to enjoy the fellowship of one another and to profit by the inspiration and information available. THIS IS OUR CONVENTION UNDER GOD.

Williamston Church Gives Going-Away Supper to Pastor

On Thursday night, August 20, the members of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Williamston, North Carolina, gave their pastor, the Rev. L. E. Ambrose and Mrs. Ambrose, a surprised going-away supper. To show their appreciation for the service rendered the past two years, the church, Sunday school, and woman's auxiliary presented the Ambroses with a lawn mower.

The church clerk, Mrs. Nellie Rogerson, makes the following statement: "During the pastorate of Brother Ambrose our church has experienced a great spiritual growth, with six new members being added. The church has been painted, the floors sanded, and new pews installed; the church has also been air-conditioned.

"We would like to praise the Lord that our church is debt free. Without God's grace and mercy this could not have been accomplished. May God bless and direct Brother Ambrose as he continues to serve the Lord. As yet he has not committed himself for services on second and fourth Sundays."

The Williamston church has gone to full-time services with the Rev. Robert Rollins as pastor.

Moretz Returns To Rock of Zion

The Rev. Willet L. Moretz has returned to Rock of Zion Free Will Baptist Church, Grantsboro, North Carolina, as full-time pastor. He was pastor of this church on a half-time basis for seven years, beginning in the fall of 1954 and continuing until the fall of 1961. Since leaving it, he has been pastor of the Asheville Free Will Baptist Church in Asheville, North Carolina. Mr. Moretz says that he is looking forward to a great pastorate with the good people of Rock of Zion. He asks for the prayers of all Christian people for continued success to the glory of God and the upbuilding of His kingdom.

With the beginning of his work at Rock of Zion, Mr. Moretz is resuming his weekly column, "The Lighted Pathway," the first of which is on another page of this issue. He desires your prayers in the preparation of these meditations.

ECC Fellowship Begins September 14

The Free Will Baptist Fellowship of East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina, will hold its first meeting of the 1964-65 college year on September 14. The Fellowship, which meets each Monday at 5:15 p. m. in the "Y" hall located on the college campus behind the library, was organized with the principal purpose of aiding the spiritual development of Free Will Baptist students on the campus.

The Fellowship meetings consist of devotionals, followed by a brief program. After the program students are served very delicious home-cooked meals by ladies from nearby churches. These meals are served without charge to the students. Students enjoy the fellowship with one another as they eat.

The Fellowship is open to students of all denominations, and everyone is welcome. But all Free Will Baptist students at the college are especially invited and urged to attend.

Officers for the year include Levern Lamm, president; Judy Spruill, vice president; Ann Harrison, secretary; Brenda Calhoun, treasurer; and Ann Pugh, publicity chairman.

Piedmont Conference Met August 22

The Piedmont Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina met in regular session on August 22, 1964, at the High Point Mission in High Point. A total of thirteen missions and churches were represented. It was pointed out that when the conference met two years ago, only four churches belonged to the conference, some of them having left the State Convention. Since that time nine new missions and churches have been organized.

During this session reports were given

Coming Events

September 7—Labor Day

September 16, 17—North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, American Legion Auditorium, Wilson

September 24, 25, 26—Muscle Shoals State Line Free Will Baptist Association, Cross Roads Church, Lawrenceburg, Tennessee

October 7—First Western Auxiliary Convention, Stancil's Chapel Church, Kenly, North Carolina

om several denominational enterprises, including the Free Will Baptist Press report and the report of the state missions board which was given by the Rev. R. J. Jackson. With him were the Rev. James Lanier and Mrs. Lanier of the Arizona-Mexico Missions. The conference sermon was delivered by the Rev. Walter Carter, pastor of East Rockingham Free Will Baptist Church.

The following officers were elected: Moderator, the Rev. Walter Carter; vice-moderator, the Rev. C. C. Burris; secretary, the Rev. Tom Hinson; treasurer, the Rev. Truett Dick. Other members of the executive committee are the Revs. Eugene Puckett, Paul Davis, and Grayson Spencer.

Hillsberry Mission Revival September 7-12

The Hillsberry Original Free Will Baptist Mission of Clinton, North Carolina, announces revival services for September through 12 with the Rev. Walter Sutton of Beulaville, North Carolina, as the sitting evangelist.

The pastor, the Rev. J. Stewart Humfrey, and the church extend to everyone cordial welcome to attend all of these services. They also request all Free Will Baptists to pray for this new work and especially for the revival.

Hopewell Dedicates Sunday School Annex

Hopewell Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Smithfield, North Carolina, dedicated its new Sunday school annex a special service Sunday, August 16. Some of the principals in the dedication (pictured on the front cover) were William H. Johnson, chairman of the board of deacons; Braxton Langdon, the son of Mrs. Ruby Langdon and the late Theodore Langdon; and the Rev. Ronald C. Cherry, pastor of the church. As special music the church choir sang "How Great Thou Art."

Mr. Cherry used 2 Chronicles 6:14-21 as the Scripture lesson, and "The Answered Prayer" as the topic of his dedicatory sermon. As he reviewed the past four years, he declared, "God has blessed so wonderfully that it is hard to see all the blessings and progress our church has enjoyed."

Among the things he listed as outstanding things to remember were the following blessings: God had given many souls for Christ; the parsonage debt was paid; new tile flooring was installed in the educational building; new choir robes were purchased; new chairs and equipment for the new nursery and Sunday school department with an additional piano had been recently purchased; the baptistry was completed with heating elements and piped in water; a lighted outdoor bulletin was built; and during the Bible school a life size nativity scene was built by the young people.

During the service Miss Joy Parker was given special recognition with a gift by the president of the Men's Brotherhood, Sherwood Parker, expressing the appreciation of the church for the lovely baptistry scene she painted in oil and gave to the church. The picture was unveiled at this time.

The highlight of the service occurred when the congregation and the pastor gathered on the church yard to install the bronze plaque on the new annex by William Johnson and Braxton Langdon. The new annex will be known as the Theodore Langdon Annex, in memory of Braxton's father.

Mr. Cherry gave the prayer of dedication. In his closing remarks he reminded those present of the faithful work of Mr. Langdon, as well as others who had passed away. He said, "We hope this will be a day we all will rededicate our lives to Christ, and let these be an inspiration to us to do even greater work here in our church."

Mr. Rayford Matthews pronounced the benediction.

Bethany's Oldest Member Celebrates Birthday

Mrs. Sallie Ann McGlohon celebrated her ninety-second birthday on Tuesday, September 1. She is the oldest living member of Bethany Free Will Baptist Church, Winterville, North Carolina. She resides with her school-teacher daughter, Miss Maggie McGlohon, at 309 East Second Street, Ayden, North Carolina, and is probably the town's oldest resident. In addition to her daughter Maggie, she has four other daughters, nine grandchildren, twenty great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

Until recent years, "Miss Sallie Ann," as she is affectionately called by her many friends and neighbors, led a very active life. She possessed a keen sense of humor, liked to take walks, and loved to read and chat with visitors. She is still very fond of all types of music, her favorite hymn being "The Old Rugged Cross."

Failing health has confined her to the house for the past few months, but oc-

He Dreamed of a Land Without Drunkards

by Mary N. Peterson

"And when the victory shall be complete—when there shall be neither a slave nor a drunkard on the earth—how proud the title of that land which may truly claim to be the birthplace and the cradle of both those revolutions that shall have ended in victory! How nobly distinguished that people who shall have planted and nurtured to maturity both the political and moral freedom of their species."

These were the words of Abraham Lincoln, one of our greatest Presidents, and a truly great man.

Abraham Lincoln was a lifelong advocate of temperance. He took the first-known abstinence pledge at the age of nine. He promised his mother upon her death bed that he would never use intoxicating liquor. He never did.

As a boy among his playmates, he often talked to them about the evils of alcoholic beverages.

Later, he said, "Whereas, the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is productive of pauperism, degradation and crime, and, believing it our duty to discourage that which produces more evil than good, we therefore pledge ourselves to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage."

After he became President, he remarked to friends that he had never tasted liquor in his life.

When someone offered to supply liquor at a function, he said, "No, no, my young friend. I have seen many a man in my time seasick ashore from drinking that very article."

Among his words of wisdom were these, "The liquor traffic has defenders, but no defense."

Lincoln's last utterance on the liquor question came leaping from his heart on the day of his assassination. Speaking to Major Merwin, officer in the army and noted temperance worker, he said, "Merwin, we have cleaned up, with the help of the people, a colossal job. Slavery is abolished. After reconstruction, the next asionally a warm smile will break through, showing the good outlook on life which has always been very typical of her.

WHAT THE WORD OF GOD CAN DO

One Sunday afternoon I was asked by a young lady to visit a dying man. She took me to his house, and I took out my Bible and read to him a part of the fifth of Romans, dwelling on the verses that told of God's love to the sinner. I read where it told how Jesus Christ bore our sins in His own body on the Cross. I then knelt and prayed God to open his eyes to see that he was a lost sinner, and also to give him to see that he could have forgiveness and salvation then by simply believing in Jesus. The young lady told me he was an infidel. When I had finished praying, I began to sing in a low voice,

"Just as I am, without one plea,

But that Thy Blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come, I come."

I sang on, verse after verse. When I came to the last verse he sang it too. When we had finished, I said, "Did you really come?" He said, "I did." I talked with him a while and found that he was really trusting in the Saviour. A short time after he passed away to be forever with the Lord.

His wife came to me and asked me if I would conduct the funeral, which I did. Around the coffin were several of his infidel friends. I told them the story of his death; how his infidelity had failed him in the trying hour and how he was led by God's Word to see his lost condition as a sinner and that Jesus Christ was just the Saviour he needed, and by simple faith he believed on Him.

Then I said, "Are there any of you here today who have been infidels who will accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour?" A stalwart man standing on the other side of the coffin reached his hand across to me, and said, "I have been an infidel with him in all his views, but I now give them all up and take Jesus Christ as my Saviour."—R. A. Torrey.

BE QUIET!!

Out of quietness we appropriate divine strength. The beautiful prayer of Dr. Henry Edmonds suggests that we, "begin the day without hurry; face its emergencies without fear; meet its temptations without dishonour; bear its burdens without complaint; rest at its close without shame." "Stand thou still a while, that I may shew thee . . ." "Be still, and know that I am God." Take time to be quiet.—The Prophetic News.

Kinston, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Kinston met on Monday night, August 3, in the educational building. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. James Lucas. The opening hymn was "'Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus," followed with the Scripture taken from Psalm 127 and Matthew 7:24. The Rev. A. B. Bryan offered the evening prayer. The program, "Except the Lord Build the House," was presented by Mrs. Milton Lovick with the assistance of her granddaughter, Mary Eva Edwards. A special in song, "Our Best," was rendered by Mrs. W. S. Oliver, Mrs. F. M. Register Jr., Mrs. Alton Suggs, and Mrs. J. E. Harris. Following the closing hymn, "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone," prayer was offered by Mrs. Annie Bell Hines.

The roll was called with 27 members, 11 daily Bible readers, and 4 visitors present. The minutes of the July meeting were read and approved. Reports were heard from Circle 1 and the following committee chairmen: enlistment, youth, study course, and benevolence.

The study course chairman, Mrs. F. M. Register Jr., who is working with the library committee of the church, announced that the following girls from the YFA would be working with the committee: Vickie Warren, Barbara Lancaster, Joyce Tripp, Brenda Gardner, and Joy O'Neal. A motion was made, seconded, and carried that the auxiliary furnish the necessary money needed for the committee to get the library started for the church.

The meeting adjourned with the auxiliary motto, after which refreshments were served. During the social hour the Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Bryan were presented going-away gifts by the various departments of the church.

Walstonburg, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting on Monday night, August 24, at the church. The meeting opened with the group's singing "'Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus," followed with the president, Mrs. Raeford Heath, reading Psalm 121 for the devotional. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Jimmie Taylor.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and the roll was called with 39 members being present. Each of the circles gave its report. The treasurer gave the treasurer's report, and by motion it was accepted. Delegates were appointed to the Union Meeting to be held at the Saratoga Free Will Baptist Church Sunday, August 30, and to the District Auxiliary Convention to be held at Hull Road Free Will Baptist Church September 30.

The program for the month, "Except the Lord Build the House," was presented by the Lydia Circle. Mrs. John R. Murphy dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Sims, N. C.—The Youth Fellowship Auxiliary of Marsh Swamp Free Will Baptist Church held a cookout at the church Monday evening, August 24, with eighteen attending. Picnic tables and chairs were placed in the oak grove on the church lawn. The YFA colors were carried out in the table decorations. On the center table was a crude candelabra of wood holding white candles. On each end of the table was a candle lamp. The pastor, the Rev. R. H. Jackson, returned thanks for the food.

The meal consisted of barbecued chicken, boiled potatoes, slaw, deviled eggs, pickles, and drinks. The meal was topped off with Mrs. R. H. Jackson's serving her famous chocolate pound cake.

Following the dinner, outdoor games were enjoyed by all.

The sponsor for the YFA is Mrs. R. H. Jackson, who is assisted by Mrs. James Winbourne.

It is more important to be noticed by the Lord than by the crowd.—Selected.

MONEY—GOOD OR EVIL

by Mrs. H. L. Bowen
Winterville, North Carolina

WE KNOW that "the love of money is the root of all evil." The Bible does not say that money itself is evil, but it does say that "the love of money" is an evil. In other words, the love of money is the source of every evil—an original cause of it. But how is the love of money the root of all evil? First, it is covetousness, which is idolatry. Second, we have to be very careful of the way in which we make our money and the way we use it.

A miser is like the Dead Sea into which the rains fall, the streams flow, and upon which the sun shines. He receives all but gives out nothing. Like the waters of the Dead Sea, his spirit becomes stagnant. He really exists without living. Like Judas, he might say, "Why all the waste?" If only he could get a glimpse of the beauty and glory of heaven!

Many lovers of money care nothing for its hoarding, but use money to foster their pride and ambition, or else to indulge their fleshly appetites. Many a bank account has grown out of the sweat and toil of the poor and unfortunate without adequate returns, simply to gratify the pride and ambition to gain wealth.

It is not only the rich but also the poor laborer that often works hard all the week and then spends his money on things and ways that are no good to himself or others, thus robbing his wife and children of bread, home, and comfort. There is not an evil or crime that is not traceable directly to the love of money.

Some say that money is the world's standard of value, but unconsciously to most men it becomes the shining charm and the clinking music of a covetous heart. Few things are so valuable and blessed as money honestly gained and wisely used. Personal necessities, education, business operations, religious developments, and many more things depend upon the use of money.

The man who has no aspiration or ability for the accumulation of means will be the victim of poverty or misfortune and be left upon the charities of the world. We should beware of loving money for itself. Someone has said, "Money is a good servant, but a dangerous master."

Don't put your trust in money, but put your money in trust. Make all you can, save all you can, and give all you can liberally. Give out in some way to man what God gives to you; and in so doing you will glorify God, the giver of all you have. If God gave to us as we give to Him, what would be have? No church, community, or nation prospers beyond the benevolence of its people.

The more we give and do for God, the richer we are because He keeps in trust all that we do or give; and someday we shall receive the interest on our trust. How much we receive will be up to us.

them very much. We also had singspiration.

Each night we went to worship services. The Rev. Bruce Dudley was the preacher. On Tuesday night no one went to the altar, but on Wednesday night things changed. I would say that about three-fourths of the group went to the altar that night. This is when my life changed. As I sat in my seat, a strange feeling came over me. I couldn't describe it. My heart was pounding, tears filled my eyes, and I knew I wanted to become a Christian.

As we began to sing our invitational hymn, something kept telling me to go up; but I couldn't. Finally, before I knew it, I was talking to Mr. Dudley. As I knelt before the altar, in prayer, I knew that my sins were forgiven.

That night as I lay in my bed, I suddenly knew how to describe my feeling. I knew I was a sinner and the Lord called me to be a Christian. In other words, I had knocked the devil out of my lap.

Now you know a little about what an experience it is to attend Cragmont Assembly. A week at Cragmont taught me the real meaning of being a Christian.

HATING SIN

There is only one thing to do with sin—hate it. Hate it in your own life. Hate it in the lives of others. The following selected illustration should encourage us:

"When the emperor of Constantinople arrested Chrysostom, and thought of trying to make him recant, the great preacher slowly shook his head. The emperor said to his attendants, "Put him in prison." "No," said one of them, "he will be glad to go, for he delights in the presence of his God in quiet." "Well, then, let us execute him," said the emperor. "He will be glad to die," said the attendant, "for he wants to go to heaven—I heard him say so the other day. There is only one thing that can give Chrysostom pain, and that is, to make him sin; he said he was afraid of nothing but sin. If you can make him sin, you will make him unhappy." Oh, that God would make us like Chrysostom!—Selected.

Can you not stand the tests of God that only come to you to make you strong in His Word and work?—Selected.

MY WEEK AT CRAGMONT

by Pat Boyd

(Editor's Note: Miss Boyd is a member of the Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville, North Carolina. She is twelve years old.)

I had heard about the good times that others had at Cragmont. I wanted to go very much. Finally, two other girls and I had the chance to go. We attended the League Conference representing the league at our church. We had a wonderful week.

We did everything from climbing a mountain to going shopping. Mr. Wayne West was recreational director. On Tuesday we climbed the mountain, but I did not get to the top. On Wednesday we went to Asheville shopping. While there we had the chance to take in some of the rides that were near the shopping center. On Thursday we went to Cherokee and visited all the souvenir shops. Then we had a picnic and went to see "Unto These Hills," a drama of the Cherokee Indians. On Friday, while the boys played ball, the girls cleaned up the tabernacle.

Each day we had three very interesting Bible classes, and everyone enjoyed

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

NO MESSAGE LAST WEEK

The week of August 26 we failed to furnish the manuscript for our page, "Notes and Quotes." It was not our will; but we have long since learned that we cannot always reach the height of our desires, due to our limitations. In fact, we thought that we had mailed our manuscript for the issue of August 26, but we had not. So now we are asking for forgiveness from all concerned.

As I read the issue for August 26, I was delighted with the editorial in which our esteemed editor referred to our state of affairs with the National Association of Free Will Baptists. I can endorse every word that the editor said. I have tried to stay away, as much as possible, from the controversy; but when some of those fellows keep right on and on bringing up the matter, with distorted accusations, we find it necessary to reply. In fact, I am about to write a book that will open facts.

A BLESSING PROMISED

Jesus said, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."

Now I believe that these words of Jesus are very applicable to us here in North Carolina, so let us praise the Lord and be assured that deliverance will come. Conditions imposed upon us forced us to dissolve fellowship. While I believe that the words of Jesus are applicable to individuals, I also believe that His words are applicable to religious institutions.

WHY I BELIEVE AS I DO

Our institutions are being blessed by our Lord. These blessings are not just a "happen so," but they are the fulfillment of the promised blessing. Cragmont has had its greatest year in attendance and offerings at the various conferences. The reports from the conferences have been full of good news. The facilities have been strained to the greatest capacity. The Rev. C. F. Bowen, who was instructor in the Woman's Conference this year, said in his church bulletin, "There were 98 at the Woman's Conference. . . . The women gave $586.66 and $214.48 of this amount was for missions." The attendance and offerings show that our women are very much alive to the work of their organization.

All the conferences, except the Ministers' Conference, were filled to the utmost capacity. The reason that the Ministers' Conference was not so large as it should have been was that so many ministers planned and conducted revival meetings in their own churches and for other churches. We ministers should not contract for, nor plan, revivals for the week of the Ministers' Conference. We need fellowship one with another. Our churches should urge, and in reality pay the way of, their pastor to attend the Ministers' Conference the week after the third Sunday in June. The interest this year was good; the fellowship was extra good, but we should have had at least twenty-five or thirty more in attendance. I am aware of the fact that at my age I will not attend many more conferences; but as long as strength will permit, I want the fellowship of my brother ministers. I like, in fact I love, revivals anytime; but a few days rest at Cragmont and fellowship is a revival to my soul, and I can preach better when I get back home. So brother ministers, let us begin to plan to attend the Ministers' Conference in 1965, it being the Lord's will. If we go in the Spirit of the Lord and seek the blessings that awaits us, God will not disappoint us.

OUR MISSION PROJECT

It is soul stirring to get the news from Arizona-Mexico Missions. I believe that this is an open door, one that God has opened to us and placed the responsibility for upon us as a people that we might have the privilege to obey the Lord in the great "Go ye" command. Jesus said, "I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it; for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name" (Revelation 3:8). I feel sure that this verse of Scripture fits us to go into the Arizona-Mexico area with all our heart. Yes, I believe that God opened the door to us to go into Mexico with Brother Elliston and his staff of believers to spread the gospel.

With this faith in the Word, I urge from the very depth of my heart that we make sacrificial offerings to the work of Arizona-Mexico Missions. Along with Brother Elliston come the Rev. James E. Timmons and his associates in their work in Texas and Old Mexico. Now we have one of our own girls, Miss Barbara Becton, who is witnessing for Jesus in the work along the border of the United States and Mexico. Let us send money to support Miss Becton, the Ellistons, the Timmons, and all their co-workers that those who sit in darkness may see the Light of the world.

OUR MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE

To have educated missionaries to work anywhere, we must have accredited colleges to prepare them; so we must build and equip Mount Olive College so that we can prepare and send teachers and qualified persons to those countries that are under the curse of sin and do not know the way out. Send money for Arizona-Mexico Missions to our state treasurer, the Rev. A. B. Bryan. Look for his address in The Free Will Baptist.

Do not neglect to subscribe for the "Baptist" and keep posted as to our denominational expansion, along with our responsibilities and obligations. And do not forget that our Discipline says for us to tithe; also the Bible says for us to tithe and then make offerings.

God saves men by His sovereign grace through the atonement of Jesus. He works in us to will and to do of His good pleasure: but we have to work out that salvation in practical living. And once we start on the basis of His redemption to do what He commands, we find we can do it. If we fail it is because we have not practiced.—Gospel Herald.

The church is always asking for money because it sees so much that ought to be done.—Selected.

The epic story of history, written in the dust of vanished civilizations, even as the testimony of our own disillusioning experiences, assures us that men may survive with barest earthly substance but that they cannot live without faith, which is the soul's affirmation of divinity.—The War Cry.

QUESTION: Do you believe that a Christian should presume the liberty to vote, and if so might he not be required to help subdue any who caused riots or insurrections or to assist the government in keeping order? In the latter case would he not by so doing violate the commandments of Jesus as well as the principle of His life while He lived an exemplary life here on earth; and especially would He not violate His commandment when He said, "I say unto you that ye resist not evil"?—J. R. C.

ANSWER: I do not only believe that it is the Christian's privilege to vote but that under ordinary circumstances it is his duty to vote in a democracy or republic. Whenever or wherever this may occur, if the government needs a Christian citizen to subdue or put down a riot or insurrection, it is indeed his duty to so serve his country, not only in such emergencies, but where or whenever he is needed to aid the government it is his duty to render instant and cheerful service; and this is true whether he votes or not. This would not in any wise be a violation of the commandment of our Saviour referred to above; because in the case quoted, He was reprimanding the Pharisees for preventing a just principle of God in a mere effort to human revenge.

Jesus taught that we may not demand strict justice upon those who have done us a wrong individually; but that is not to say that we must remain passive in the presence of all evil, the consequence of which would be appalling. God himself places the sword in the hand of the magistrate, and it is the duty of all good men to strengthen that hand. Jesus himself accepted the responsibility to cleanse the temple when it was being misused. "And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem, And found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting: And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables; And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise" (John 2:13-16).

It probably is more definitely the duty of Christians of today to cleanse the house of God of modernism and communism than most Christians are assuming. I can remember back in the twenties when men of Christian caliber and integrity like Dr. R. A. Torrey, James M. Gray, William Griffith Thomas, and many others felt it their duty to show by scholastic and Christian logic the fallacy of such men as Dr. Shaler Matthews, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick of this country, and Dr. Richards of Birmingham, England, when they assumed the evolutionary hypothesis as being a fact and wrote articles that were published in both secular and church periodicals setting such a fallacy forth as if these were proven facts. When their articles of denunciation were not received in any others, they would reply in such as "Kingsbusiness," "Moody Monthly," and "The Sunday School Times." Also when they heard of and knew that modernists were drawing great crowds to the Chicago Sunday Evening Club and other large halls of renown where the youth and others were exposed to their heresy, they invited the public and spoke to large crowds in auditoriums such as the Moody Tabernacle, the Paul Rader Tabernacle, and Moody Bible Institute's Auditorium; and besides this, these men organized groups all through the country, holding Bible conferences in many cities throughout the land wherein through their public messages they defied such men as these mentioned above in their untrue statements, calling them by name, taking up their false claims, and one by one refuting them with proven facts from the Bible and those from the pen of those known to be the best scholars of the day in the field in which the false statements occurred. They named and located falsehoods and the source of their origin. I do not think any should show a pugilistic spirit or attitude just for the sake of being militant, but anywhere and anytime a Christian sees the need, he must speak in defense of the truth.

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry" (2 Timothy 4:2-5).

There is no question at all in my mind as to the attitude that should be shown by a Christian to those who profess to be Christians but are not. I mean the attitude the Bible tells him to show to so-called religious people that seem to be hiding behind a smoke screen of some religious cult. The Pharisees of Jesus' day did that, not to win His acclaim, but the sharpest rebuke He ever gave anyone. "Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness" (Matthew 23:26, 27). "Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" (Matthew 23:31-33). "That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him" (John 5:23). "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). "Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me" (John 8:42). "If ye keep

VELVET EARS

Bertha R. Hudelson

CHILDREN, obey your parents! There are plenty of verses in the Bible concerning obedience—150, more or less—but the one I especially have in mind is Ephesians 6:1. I forgot it one day and certainly brought trouble down on my head by flunking, you might say, a very important test. Let me tell you about it.

Usually breakfast on your farm is eaten to the tune of robins singing, lambs baaing. Their music adds much to the pleasantness of the meal. But on this bright summer morning, although we heard all these things, a jarring note was mixed in with them. A loud-thud of hoofs banging against a stable door, followed by a raucous bray.

The family knew what was making the racket before Dad said, after swallowing a bite of egg, "Bill, young Velvet Ears sounds homesick."

"Homesick!" I gasped, letting a spoonful of oatmeal slide from my spoon back into its dish. "I thought he was mad!"

"Nope! Only homesick. Be better for you not to handle him until he is more accustomed to his new quarters," and Dad looked sternly at me, knowing how much I love animals and how I'd be tempted.

I certainly felt let down, for I'd planned to get better acquainted with Velvet Ears right after breakfast, but I meekly answered, "Okay." And I really meant to do as Dad said, although later—but I'm getting ahead of my story.

I should stop here, I guess, to explain that Velvet Ears is a young mule that Dad had kept from a drove of 14 he'd brought up from Missouri to our farm in Illinois. He'd sold all of them but Velvet Ears, named by me when I noticed that his ears looked like tan velvet edged with brown. Right away I wanted to keep him, because of those ears.

"Don't sell him, Dad," I begged. "We can break him and then team him up with Old David," the only horse left on the farm to do odd jobs here and there.

Dad looked doubtful, but finally said, "If we keep him, you'll have to do the breaking of him, and the currying, and the feeding. Even clip his tail when it needs to be."

"Oh, I will! I will!" I cried, scarcely believing what I was hearing.

He was the most beautiful mule I'd ever seen. Fawn-colored, you might say, with trim, slender legs, neat little feet and shiny black hoofs. His body was sleek and well-proportioned. His great dark eyes almost seemed to talk. But those ears!

"Thanks, Dad. I'll name him 'Velvet Ears.'"

That happened two days ago, and the commotion he was making this morning made me wonder if he had a mean disposition. Maybe he was bluffing with those mild-dark eyes, and my heart sank at the thought. I wanted Velvet Ears to be as gentle as his ears were soft.

"You don't think he's mean, do you?" I asked Dad, as he got up from the breakfast table. I sat waiting, heart thumping hard against my chest. But it beat quietly again with Dad's words, "Nope! He's a fine animal, and will always be if treated right.

"He's only homesick, as I told you, and letting us know it by braying and kicking. Again I say, don't handle him until he gets over his tantrum, for his heels are pretty quick. Now, I'll be going for that tractor tire. Anything else from town, Mother?"

"Just groceries," and she handed him the list.

A few moments later Dad leaned from the pickup truck seat and said, for the third time, "Remember, don't handle Velvet Ears, and mow the yard this morning. Then take a look at the blackberries. After that, cut the weeds along our farm and on past Harrington's. He's sick and can't."

That was like Dad. Always doing something nice for someone in trouble. But why did he need to tell me three times not to handle Velvet Ears? Didn't he trust me? I stood wondering about it as he rattled out of sight.

I sighed. A big day for me, and no fishing included. Oh well, that big catfish in our new pond could wait until later. But after working for hours, it seemed, and the sun getting hotter every minute, the yard work was finished. All the time, though, as I ran the lawn mower I could hear Velvet Ears braying and kicking. If only I could do something to make him feel more at home. Maybe a lump of sugar offered on the flat of my hand the way Old David liked it served.

But no! I remembered Dad's cautioning.

The mowing done, from the blackberry patch I could hear Velvet Ears still moaning his fate. His braying sounded like begging. Homesickness is a real trouble, if you ask me. Wasn't I so homesick several years ago, when visiting my Grandmother Reynolds in Iowa, that I had to come home before the visit was half done?

The blackberry season being almost over, I found only a quart—heaped up. I took the berries in to Mom to make into one of her juicy, mouth-watering pies.

"Now for the slaying of the weeds," I told her, setting the bucket of berries on the kitchen work bench. And away I went.

I hitched Old David to the out-of-date mower and started on my last job. Old David seemed eager to work, and soon the weeds were cut on both sides of the road from our farm on past the limits of the Harrington land.

When I passed Mr. Harrington's house, homeward bound, he called from his rocking chair on the porch. I could see that he, being sick, was wrapped up as if the weather were below zero. This made me hotter than ever.

"Come in, Boy!" he cried. "For a cool drink of lemonade."

I didn't need that invitation twice, but from what happened later I certainly wished I hadn't accepted. I tied Old David to a maple tree by the front gate and soon was sitting on the top porch step telling Mr. Harrington, between swallows of lemonade, about Velvet Ears, ending with, "Dad didn't need to tell me three times not to handle him." I still felt hurt about it.

Mr. Harrington listened carefully, and then said, "Well, your dad probably is right. But I'm like you. I'm inclined to feel sorry for the critter. Maybe you could say a soft word to him, and he'd feel better. Your dad didn't say anything about talking to your pet, did he?"

"No-o! And why wasn't I smart enough to know that talking to Velvet Ears wasn't handling him? Dumb me! Good-bye, and thanks for the drink."

I rushed down the steps and clattered down the road with the mower. In "three wags of a sheep's tail," Old David was unharnessed and turned into the barnyard. And, just as I turned him in, Velvet Ears gave an unusually sad bray, I thought.

I stepped to the half door—sort of a Dutch door, you might call it—that held him prisoner. He stood in the center of the stall, great soft ears lopping forward, head drooping,—a picture of gloom and despair. I put out my hand to coax him to me, and then jerked it back. I mustn't disobey Dad.

Then, without warning, the fellow whirled and kicked up his heels. In some way they flipped loose the latch on the inside of the door, making it fly open. I was behind it, except from the chest up. With a bray of delight, I would call it, Velvet Ears kicked again before tearing out into the barnyard. But his heels didn't hit the door this time. They hit my jaw, and that's all I knew until later I opened my eyes and saw Mom's white face above me, and Dad's stern, but worried, one.

My brother and sister were standing back of them looking half-scared to death. "I didn't handle him, Dad," I mumbled.

A bit of a smile passed over Dad's face, and then it was solemn again.

"No? I'm glad. But he certainly handled you!"

"Mr. Harrington said—" and then I was out once more.

When consciousness returned, Dad helped me to my feet. On the right side of my face, so Mom told me, was the imprint of Velvet Ears' small hoof. My lip was so torn that, when we went to the doctor's office to see if my jaw was broken—which it wasn't—he had to take 12 stitches. Imagine! Happily no teeth were knocked out.

"You surely had a close shave," the doctor told me. Then he joked, trying to make me feel better, "Velvet Ears has made that dimple in your chin half-an-inch deeper. Nice, for girls like dimples in boys' chins!"

But that didn't make me feel any better at all. I didn't feel better for a long time, what with worrying about having disobeyed Dad, and the extra expense I was causing. Besides that, it's no fun "eating" through a straw. I knew Dad meant for me not to go near Velvet Ears when he said not to handle him. Again, dumb me.

Queer, but he never scolded me. I know that the next day after my "accident" he stopped at Mr. Harrington's. Maybe Mr. Harrington tried to take the blame, for he sent me a small pig from his choice Chester White litter. Be that as it may, I shouldn't have listened to him, even though his words were what spurred me on. However, I'll admit I didn't need much spurring.

But the way things have turned out, I think, from now on, I can stand squarely on my own feet, no matter who says what. When the next test comes I certainly don't intend to flunk it.

I wish you to know, too, that Velvet Ears didn't kick from temper. He kicked from the good feeling of having company (me), and of being free.—Gospel Herald.

God has given to each of us
A talent to use for His glory;
It might be to sing or teach,
And tell someone the sweet story.

That sweet story of God's wonderful love,
That Jesus died for all;
Or a small child might need our hands
That he might not stray or fall.

It takes you and you and you
The Church of Christ to make up;
I cannot use your talents,

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR SEPTEMBER 13

A Spokesman for God

PRINTED TEXT: 1 Samuel 2:19, 20; 7:5, 6, 10-17

MEMORY VERSE: Proverbs 3:5, 6

I. INTRODUCTION

As indicated in last Sunday's lesson, the period of the judges did not result in a growth of true faith among the Israelites. In fact, Israel's growth had declined in every respect. Down through the years the tribes had become divided because of jealousy and envy among them. From a national standpoint they had degenerated into a weak, sickly nation. The reason is given in this verse: ". . . And the word of the LORD was precious in those days; there was no open vision" (1 Samuel 3:1).

The most outstanding judge of Israel was Samuel. The story of his birth, boyhood, and training is one of the most inspiring in the Old Testament. The story centers around his God-fearing mother, Hannah, and the aged priest, Eli. Hannah was faithful in attending the temple. There she would offer her prayers to God. Her main prayer was for the birth of a son, and in her prayers she vowed that she would give the son to the service of God. Her prayers were answered. God gave her a son and she named him Samuel, which means asked of God.

When Samuel was of age, Hannah took him to the house of the Lord and presented him to the Lord and to Eli. "And she said, O my lord, as thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the LORD. For this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of him: Therefore also I have lent him to the LORD; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the LORD. And he worshipped the LORD there" (1 Samuel 1:26-28).—Bible Student (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Samuel's parents gave him to the Lord; and each year when they went to offer their sacrifices, they took him a coat that his mother made for him (vv. 19, 20).

2. Samuel called the Israelites together at Mizpah for prayer (v. 5).

3. The people responded by gathering, confessing their sins, and fasting (v. 6).

4. The Lord defeated the Philistines through great thunder. He works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform (v. 10).

5. Under the guidance of the Lord, the Israelites drove out the Philistines from the land of Israel (v. 11).

6. Samuel set up a memorial in recognition of what God had done for them (v. 12).

7. The hand of the Lord was against the Philistines throughout the life of Samuel (v. 13).

8. The cities that the Philistines took from the Israelites were restored (v. 14).

9. Samuel judged Israel throughout his long life (v. 15).

10. Samuel went regularly to various places in the land of Israel to judge the people (vv. 16, 17).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. "In studying the character of Samuel it is impossible not to be impressed with his piety. Dedicated to the service of God by his mother, that service became an irksome routine. God was the center around which he, as well as heaven turned. In all his difficulties he repaired to God for counsel. In all his acts and decisions he was guided by the word of Jehovah. His advice to the Israelites was the motto of his life. 'Turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart.' Nor was his patriotism less apparent. His object was not the possession of power, but the welfare of his people. Place, honor, and power were not sought by him, but he by them. And when the people, without respect to his gray hairs and long service, called upon him to resign his office there was no feeble cry for pity nor peevish reproach for their ingratitude."—Unger's Bible Dictionary.

2. "The legend is told of a very young king who came to the throne of his little country and was impatient with those who were of old age. He ordered everyone in his country of mature age put to death. The prime minister to the king loved his aged father very much and so he hid the father in the attic of his home. He cared for him faithfully for many days, seeing that food and water were made available for the man.

"After a few years of plenty there came a plague in the land and though the history of the people told the young king that this same plague had come several years before his coming to the throne the cure had not been written down.

"The king was worried for he had put to death, so he thought, all the wisdom of the kingdom that could solve the problem. When his prime minister related to the king that the minister's father was still alive and knew the solution, the king was overjoyed. Thereafter he gave the aged man a place of high honor in the kingdom and was filled with remorse over his early folly. When God is through with people on earth he takes them home, until that time there is something for each of us to do."—Clipped.

Our lesson today emphasizes three great truths: First, young people need guidance and help. This is brought out in the help Eli gave Samuel. Second, the wisdom of older people is needed. God was not pleased with Eli, but He still had some use for his wisdom and experience. Third, the value of godly leaders cannot be overestimated.—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

3. Hannah had prayed for a son and had promised God that, if she should be so blessed, she would give him unto the Lord for a life of service. When Samuel was born, she began to train him at once for this purpose. Her household was a devout one, and the child would have been trained in the law of the Lord. He was taught to love the Lord and to want to serve Him.

As soon as Samuel was old enough, he went to live in the temple with Eli, the priest. Through a long lifetime of dedicated service Samuel served as a spokesman for God, as judge, priest, and prophet for his people.

Certainly Samuel's early training brought him to his place as a forceful and influential speaker for God. Such training is still essential today in securing and training people for Christian vocations. Families that teach children the Scriptures and the love of service to God are guiding them into Christian vocations. More families should feel such responsibility today.

Today's preacher, missionary, evangelist, and youth worker in almost all cases have the early training and inspiration of a family dedicated to God's service.

We must emphasize that it was not always easy for Samuel to speak the word of the Lord. Often he had to deliver rebukes to the people. But he spoke fearlessly, and the people recognized that he spoke for God. Thus they were willing to follow him.

It is not always easy for the missionary or the evangelist to speak God's word. But it must be done nevertheless. And in so doing, people will be led to believe and follow and obey God's Word.—Standard Commentary.

4. A teacher said, "James, suppose your mother made a peach pie, and there were ten of you at the table—your mother, father, and eight children. How much of the pie would you get?" James replied, "A ninth, ma'm." "No, no, James. Pay attention," said the teacher. "There are ten of you—ten, remember. Don't you know your fractions? "Yes, ma'm," said James. "I know my fractions, but I know my mother, too. She'd say she didn't want no pie!"

A little girl was a problem child. She was always getting into mischief. Many predicted that she would come to early ruin. Then someone became interested in her and invited her to go to Sunday School. She went and there she heard about the Lord Jesus Christ. Soon she trusted Him as her personal Saviour. A great change came into her life. She was as full of life as ever. But instead of injuring others, she helped others. She became kind and thoughtful. One day a neighbor said to her, "How is it that you have changed so much? I know they say you have been converted, but doesn't Satan ever come to you with temptations?" "Oh, yes," she replied. "The devil comes every day. He knocks on the door as he always did. Before I became a Christian I used to go to the door, and I always got into trouble. But now I let true believers they were promoted to glory.

Are we ready for our trip through space? Preparation must be made in advance, the earlier the better. We can be sure of our destination. The date of our launching is known only to God. Arrangements are not made by NASA or Cape Kennedy. They can be made at the mourner's bench or your own bedside. It doesn't matter where.

Jesus told us about heaven in John 14: 2, 3: "In my Father's house are many mansions: . . . I go to prepare a place for you . . . I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

The Bible mentions one other space flight. It is yet future. Some have claimed to know the exact date. They are wrong.

Someday Christ Himself is going to travel back through space again. This return will be personal and imminent.

We read, ". . . this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11).

The Apostle Paul spoke of it in these words, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17).

—Bible Expositor.

Jesus said Himself, ". . . I will come again, and receive you unto myself; . . ." (John 14:3).

What of the unbeliever? The Bible tells of his destination too. "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Revelation 20:15).

As believers we are to watch, to be ready, for we do not know of His "launching" or ours.

When Major Cooper and his predecessors returned from their space flight, they were given complete medical examinations. When believers arrive in heaven, they will need no medical examination. For we are told that in heaven there will be no pain, no sickness, no death.

He Dreamed of a Land Without Drunkards great question will be the overthrow and abolition of the liquor traffic, and you know, Merwin, that my head and heart and hand and purse will go into that work. In 1842, less than a quarter of a century ago, I predicted, under the influence of God's Spirit, that the time would come when there would be neither a slave nor a drunkard in the land. Thank God, I have lived to see one of those prophecies fulfilled. I hope to see the other realized."

Major Merwin was so impressed by this remarkable statement that he said, "Mr. Lincoln, shall I publish this for you?" "Yes," was his prompt and emphatic reply. "Publish it as wide as the daylight shines."

With those words ringing in his ears and echoing through all his being "like music from the spheres," Major Merwin started on his important mission for the President, and the next morning, upon his arrival at New York City, learned that the voice which uttered those words was forever hushed in death.

Abraham Lincoln was shot by an assassin who bolstered his courage to do this dastardly deed by getting himself intoxicated. The plot to accomplish the crime was masterminded by a group known to be continuous drinkers. What a condemnation of the liquor traffic!—The Free Methodist.

Mother's Light

Little Jennie was to repeat her first verse from the platform at Sunday school. Her text was, "I am the light of the world," and her mother had faithfully drilled her all the week.

When she stepped up on the platform, Jennie swallowed a couple of times, then said loudly: "My mother is the light of the world."

Perhaps there is a moral in this little story. How wonderful when a child can think of her mother as "light in the Lord."—Prophecy.

FLAG GOES UP ON NEW YEAR AT MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE

The raising of the flag September 2 on the front campus of Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, marked the opening of the 1964-65 academic year. Shown raising the flag, as members of the freshman class and faculty stood at attention, were sophomores Dana Wooten of Tarboro and Dennis Lamm of Wilson.

"To the Colors" was blown on the bugle by Elaine Bracey of Mount Olive, and Miss Judy Foreman of the department of music led the singing of the National Anthem.

An enrollment in excess of 250 is anticipated for the fall semester, of which approximately 175 will be new and transferring students.

WOUNDS DO HEAL

Three years ago the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists met in Mount Olive at the National Guard armory for its forty-ninth session. The attendance proved to be the largest on record. But attendance was not the only record that was set. Those who were there will long remember that it was a stormy session. In fact, we will not forget some of the things that took place: the unprecedented action of a group of ministers who walked out, the unwillingness of this group to work in cooperation with the Convention, and the accusations that were hurled at the Convention. These things, however, did not begin or end with the 1961 session of the State Convention. They began, we believe, several years ago, and only became manifest in 1959 and 1960. They became real when five North Carolina men were kicked out of office in the National Association and the State Convention was asked to repudiate its Statement of Faith and Discipline. The events that followed will be remembered for years. We have long believed that there were those who purposed to seize control of the State Convention. From all indications, they believed they could do so. Such was not the case, however. Original Free Will Baptists in North Carolina awoke. So real was the awakening that the state program became stronger—stronger in attendance and stronger in support and purpose.

We must acknowledge, however, that wounds were inflicted that have been slow to heal; but they have healed. It is also true that wounds leave scars, but those scars are not detrimental to our well-being. In fact, they serve a twofold purpose: they remind us of a time of trouble through which we have passed, and now we are thankful; they remind us to be more careful and not allow the wound to be opened, or wounded, again in the same spot and manner.

When this largest state gathering of Free Will Baptists meets on September 16, 17, at the American Legion building, Wilson, there will be reports from all the state institutions and enterprises, as well as spiritual inspiration from the Word of God. We believe each report will show that we are growing and that there will be an increase in giving over previous years. Some may report the greatest year ever. Such reports will be indicative of wounds that have healed.

In view of the blessings of God upon the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, we propose that the 1964 session of the Convention acknowledge these blessings by observing a special session of thanksgiving.

Let us urge other Free Will Baptists who share our convictions to join with us in gratitude to God.

SMITH IS HOME

The Rev. S. A. Smith, well-known and well-loved Free Will Baptist minister, was recently dismissed from the Eastern North Carolina Sanatorium in Wilson. He is now at his home in Beulaville. Brother Smith was admitted to the hospital in January of this year. Since that time he has undergone major surgery at Chapel Hill. Along with thousands of Free Will Baptists, we are thankful for his recovery. We are thankful for his example of Christian patience during his trials. Along with "Ma" Smith, we are glad to have him home.

Brother Smith is a member of the Free Will Baptist Press board. Thus, we are anxious to see him in another board meeting—right away.

COLLEGE BIDS OPENED

College architect, G. Milton Small of Raleigh, North Carolina, (standing) presided at the opening of bids on August 27 for the academic building and dormitory complex on which construction is planned to begin this fall at Mount Olive College.

Bids were received from eight general contractors, seven plumbing contractors, four heating and air-conditioning contractors, and four electric contractors.

The new campus of Mount Olive College will represent the largest capital development program in the history of Original Free Will Baptists.

College and Architect Reviewing Bids

Officials of Mount Olive College and architect G. Milton Small of Raleigh are reviewing bids which were opened last Thursday for the first buildings planned for the new 90-acre campus on U. S. Highway 117.

Low bids on the academic building, to be named in memory of the late Dr. C. C. Henderson of Mount Olive, were approximately $345,000 as compared with the estimated cost of $339,000. "We were well pleased with the bids on this building," President W. Burkette Raper declared.

Low bids on the dormitory complex in the amount of $439,000, however, exceeded the college estimate of $367,500 by $71,500. In order to give officials of the college time to study deductive alternates, the meeting of the college board of directors to award contracts has been changed from August 31 to September 9.

"It is our hope that we can submit to the board recommendations that will enable us to award contracts for both the academic building and the dormitory complex," President Raper reported. "It is of the highest urgency that these buildings be ready by September, 1965."

TITHING

Since the very beginning of human existence, man has felt a close personal relationship with God. People of many faiths have considered tithing as a means of expressing gratitude for all that God has given. The Old Testament relates tithing to a deep devotion to God. The New Testament accepts tithing as an expression of love. Modern day Christians consider tithing as a way of life. Tithing is considered to be the systematic setting aside of the first 10 per cent or more of one's income to be used for the advancement of God's kingdom.

The tither, however, is not satisfied with simply devoting 10 per cent of his income to the purposes of God. He believes, as a Christian steward, that all he has is a gift from God and should be used for His glory. Nothing less than 100 per cent commitment will suffice. The practice of tithing helps persons to place God first in their lives and to keep from placing first-rate importance on second-rate things. Jesus adds to the concept of tithing by teaching that both the tithe and the tither are needed—not only the gift, but the giver; not just ours, but us.—The United Evangelical.

WHAT IS PRAYER?

Rev. W. S. Bowden

Prayer is weakness leaning on omnipotence.

Prayer is faith laying hold on God's promises.

Prayer is hope realizing its fruition in anticipation.

Prayer is the thirsty soul's cry for the Living Water.

"Pray and provender hinder no man's journey."—Old Proverb.

Prayer is a virtue that prevails against all temptations.

Prayer is the Christian's staff by which he is helped along his homeward way.

Prayer is the atmosphere in which all Christian virtues grow to perfection.

Prayer is inspiration climbing the ladder of promise to lay hold on Divine realities.

Prayer is the child taking hold of the hand of its Father for strength and guidance.

Prayer is the believer's outstretched hand and upward vision seeking all the fullness of God.

Prayer is the Divine wand by which we transmute life's trials, temptations, and drudgeries into the gold of character.

Prayer is a groan, "Ah!" Our groans are prayers as well. The very cry of distress is an involuntary appeal to the invisible power whose aid the soul invokes.

Prayer is the open door by which the individual or the church may pass from weakness to strength and from struggle to everlasting victory.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:10)

"For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light" (Psalm 36:9).

"In him was life; and the life was the light of men" (John 1:4).

LIFE AND LIGHT

The Lord Jesus Christ is the source of all spiritual life and light. The text, John 1:4, tells us that "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." Christ is the eternal Fountain from which only the people of God have ever derived life. All the spiritual life and light possessed by Adam and Eve before their fall was from Him. Whatever degree of deliverance from sin and spiritual death any child of Adam has ever experienced or will ever experience and enjoy, since the fall; whatever light of conscience and understanding anyone has ever obtained—all have flowed from Christ, the eternal Fountain. The great, vastly great, majority of mankind in all ages have refused to know Him and have closed their eyes to the fact of the fall and to their own need of a Saviour. Yet the Light has been constantly shining "in darkness."

In the text from the Psalms, the psalmist is illustrating the lovingkindness of God. In the tenth verse he says, "O continue thy lovingkindness unto them that know thee; and thy righteousness to the upright in heart."

Spiritual life comes before spiritual light. Christ said in John 10:10, "... I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." He came that we might have life—more abundant life. The more abundant life had to come from Christ. There is no other source. We can by no means obtain it for ourselves. Since man's original sin we have been in a fallen state of guilt and condemnation, and have been as incapable of removing these and of restoring ourselves to the favor of God as were the fallen angels.

But Christ came that He might make it possible for life to be restored to us. He came in order that He might purchase life for us and impart it to us. He purchased our life with His own precious blood; He imparts life to us by His Spirit. Yes, Christ came that we might really have life more abundantly. The very instant that we believe in Christ as Saviour and Lord, we have life. We are new creatures in Him. This life is with more abundant evidence and blessings than was enjoyed under the Mosaic dispensation, or during the days of the prophets.

The promises to the Jews were for the greater part temporal; whereas, those to the redeemed by the blood of the Lamb are mostly spiritual. A careful study of the Old Testament will reveal, to the surprise of many, how little eternal life is mentioned, and especially its silence about the resurrection of the body to participate in it. Now, the life given by Christ is so abundant that God is brought very close to the believer. He ever has direct access to Christ. No more sacrifices are offered through the instrumentality of the priest. No longer are all but the High Priest denied entrance into the holy of holies, and that but one day in the year; and he could go then only if he had the blood of his sacrifice. We praise God that with the life, abundant life, given by Christ the believer need not, indeed should not, approach Him through His mother, Mary, nor by any other medium. Christ said, "... him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37). Not only does Christ himself attend to the supplications of His believing children, but He also gives blessed assurance: "Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Hebrews 7:25).

New York's World Fair

When Dr. Billy Graham shovelled the first spadeful of earth for the Billy Graham Pavilion at the New York World's Fair, he expressed the hope "that the pavilion will make some small contribution in helping the world to choose God and peace." Baptist bodies in North America have united to sponsor an exhibit at the Fair during the summer seasons of 1964 and 1965 and these exhibits, emphasizing Baptist activities and the significant aspects of Baptist life, will be seen at the Protestant Centre.—The Prophetic News.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE CONVENTION MEETS SEPT. 16, 17

C. H. OVERMAN, Secretary

The North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists will hold its annual meeting on September 16, 17, 1964, at the American Legion building, Wilson. This will be the fifty-second annual session. For the past several years the Convention has set new records in attendance and support to its various enterprises and institutions. A record attendance is expected again this year.

The introductory sermon on Wednesday morning will be delivered by the Rev. Willis Wilson, pastor of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church, Winterville. The Convention sermon will be delivered on Thursday morning by the Rev. Lloyd Vernon, Richlands. A special mission service will be conducted on Wednesday evening which will be under the direction of the state missions board.

Copies of the annual church letter have been mailed to all church clerks whose names and addresses are correctly listed in the files of the State Convention. Any local church affiliated with the State Convention that has not received an official report blank should contact the secretary, requesting a blank. This report blank should be returned with a contribution to the State Convention. Checks or money orders are to be made out to the State Convention treasurer. Churches are asked to bring a special missions offering which is to be received during the missions service on Wednesday evening. Churches are also reminded to send a $10 contribution to the Paul Palmer endowment fund for Mount Olive Junior College. All correspondence with the secretary should be sent to P. O. Box 373, Ayden, North Carolina 28513.

Churches are again reminded that they may send one delegate for every one hundred members or fraction thereof. Union meetings and conferences may represent with one delegate for each 500 members or fraction thereof.

On the right is a copy of the program of the 1964 session. The Rev. C. L. Patrick, pastor of Free Union church, Walstonburg, is president of the Convention.

All offerings on homecoming day are to be applied to the building fund.

Former members, pastors, and friends are extended a cordial invitation to attend.

Our Intercessor

Once at Clifton Springs dear George Muller was there. I was broken down in health. I knew George Muller years before, and I went to him and said, "I would like you to pray for me." He prayed.

As I went out from his presence there came to me this humbling thought, "Why did you not ask Jesus to pray for you? He is better than Muller, and He is nearer. Don't you think there was a little thought in your mind that was discrediting to your Master?" I knew there was, and I received such a blessing out of George Muller's prayer that I never asked him again.—A. B. Simpson.

St. Mary's Host Eastern W. A. Convention

The fall convention of the Eastern District Woman's Auxiliary will be held at St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church, New Bern, North Carolina, Thursday, September 24. - Benediction, the President

Bear Grass, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church held its August meeting in the home of Mrs. Charlie Gray Coltrain with ten members present.

During the business session the treasurer collected the monthly dues. The auxiliary voted to clean the church floors the third Saturday in September.

Mrs. Peggy Bailey was in charge of the program. She read the Scripture taken from Psalm 127:1 and Matthew 7:24. The program discussion was on "The Fulfillment of the Old Testament Prophecy," followed with a short reading on the Book of Revelation. The meeting adjourned with the group's praying the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The hostess, Mrs. Coltrain, served delicious refreshments.

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Mt. Zion Free Will Baptist Church held its August meeting in the home of Mrs. Clovis Boykin with ten members and two visitors present. The meeting opened with the singing of "Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus." The Scripture, taken from Psalm 127:1 and Matthew 7:24, was read and was followed with prayer by Mrs. Crema Johnson. Before the program discussion Miss Teresa Martin gave a very interesting talk on her week spent at Cragmont in July. Mrs. Eloise Sutton, program chairman, was in charge of the program entitled, "Except the Lord Build the House." Assisting her with the program were Mrs. Mary Martin,

ARE YOU SENDING?

by JOHN B. ELLISTON

We regret to have to report that we are unable to begin classes in the Nogales Academy as planned. We deeply appreciate the offerings which some of you sent for that purpose. However, whereas we needed about $300, we received about $12 for this purpose.

We hope that we can stretch out our income at the first of the month sufficiently to be able to start on September 14. It is very difficult for me to understand the lack of response to this need. I am sure that many of you are in favor of having someone to obey Christ's command to go into all the world, but you seem unwilling to do your part.

I believe that there are actually some of you who claim to love and obey Christ, when by your actions you deny both love and obedience. It is impossible for anyone to be a Christian and still fail to further the cause for which Christ came and died. The church has only one job. That is to preach the gospel in all the world. As soon as that job is done, the church will have completed its job and will be taken out of the world. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matthew 24:14).

Every Christian is "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13). Therefore, every Christian is dedicated to completing the job which the church has been given to do. Even if you were to die before the job is done, you cannot receive the reward of the glorious new body which is being prepared for you until the Lord appears; and He cannot come until the church has completed its job.

There may be some of you that read this who will say, "But I am not desiring the coming of the Lord! I am quite content to stay in this world." If such be the case, you need to seek the Lord while He may be found, and call upon Him while He is near, because you are not a part of His Church. You are unsaved. If this present world seems desirable to you, heaven will not be desirable. "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God" (James 4:4).

If you are not anxious to finish the job which the church has to do, so that we may the sooner go home to be with Christ, I fear very much that you are a friend, or are desiring friendship, of the world in which we live. In such a case you are an enemy of God, and this by God's own Word.

If you are a friend of Christ, you are ready to suffer and die that the gospel may be preached in all the world. If you have no desire to see the gospel go into all the world, you are an enemy of Christ.

Regardless of what you or I do, the gospel is being preached in all the world. You cannot prevent the completion of the job. However, you can doom your soul by your opposition to the job. It behooves us to examine ourselves and make certain of whose spirit we are.

Won't you, at this very moment, dedicate yourself to Christ and to His cause. Surrender yourself to Him completely, and without any kind of reservation whatever. If you do that, He will either send you forth as a missionary or have you give in order that others may go.

". . . how shall they preach, except they be sent? . . ." (Romans 10:15).

"Our daily walk should be like one whose path goes about a mountain, but climbs a little higher with each circuit until at last he gains the clear summit and looks into the face of God."—Selected.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

My writings are under the caption, "Notes and Quotes," as my readers know. So often I find materials that are so good that I feel I cannot improve on their message. I have just received a tract from the American Tract Society written by the Rev. Billy Graham entitled, "Do You Know God's Way?" Since it is from the American Tract Society, I am not quoting excerpts from it, but giving to you, my readers, the entire message, praying that as you read it your faith will be strengthened in the Bible truths it contains.—J.C.G.

Do You Know

GOD'S WAY?

The Bible shows very clearly how God's hand has moved through the ages in carrying out His plan for the redemption of mankind, and the story is told in words as short and simple as those of a third-grade reader. One of these short and profound words is the four-letter word "made." The Bible says that, in accordance with God's eternal purpose, Christ was made in the likeness of man that man might be made in the likeness of God, the prince literally taking the place of the pauper in order that the pauper might become a prince.

God's justice required that sin be punished, but his mercy provided a substitute for man in the person of Christ. The Bible teaches that Christ and God are one. In the triune Godhead there is no distinction of substance, only of manifestation. Therefore, in the person of his Son, God himself suffered the punishment for sin.

God's Word teaches that Christ was made flesh. The Bible says, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God . . . without him was not any thing made that was made . . . And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us."

This great miracle of the virgin birth was the result of the greater miracle of God so loving this sinful, warring, wicked world that He gave himself in the person of Christ for its redemption.

When the Lord Jesus was born in the flesh, it became possible for man to be born of the Spirit. That is the reason Jesus could say, "Ye must be born again."

A Marxist, speaking in Hyde Park in London some time ago, pointed to a man in rags. He cried, "Communism can put a new suit of clothes on that man." A Christian standing nearby pointed to the man and shouted, "Christ can put a new man in that suit." That is the difference between communism and Christianity. Christ came in the flesh in order to make new men and women and to make a new society and a new race of men. You are not simply reformed when you come to Christ; he does not just put a new suit on you. Jesus Christ makes a new man. He gives you a new heart. You are regenerated by the Spirit of God. That is what being born again means.

The Bible also teaches that Christ was made sin. History records the repeated failure of man to attain righteousness by his own methods. The Old and the New Testaments tell us the same story. Man failed in Eden and carried the race down with him.

Today we have the same spectacle that history records time after time—the spectacle of a civilization committing suicide. A continuous record of thousands of years proves that the possibility of arriving at moral perfection by natural evolution is a will o' the wisp. A power greater than man's must intervene for his salvation, and that is what God provides in Christ's act of substitution. "He hath made him to be sin for us, [him] who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." Christ took the responsibility for your sins and mine when he died on the cross. More than that, the Scriptures say, "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." He voluntarily took your sins and mine and was actually counted to be a sinner.

The Bible also teaches that Christ was separated from God for us. His suffering on the cross was more than physical, it was the far greater agony of separation from God. When Jesus cried, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" he clearly showed that whatever else hell may be, it certainly is separation from God. That was the agony of spirit which forced from Jesus' lips the anguished cry of "forsaken" during the hours of darkness which shrouded the cross.

It is only in Christ's dying on the cross for us that we can see the sinful depths of man. You can never see sin you can never understand sin, you can never understand what it means to transgress the law of God, unless you look at the cross. You can see a sinful world about you, you can read the exposes by congressional committees and you will understand a little of the sinful depths of the human heart. But for true understanding you must go to the cross and find the holy Son of God dying there. And the Bible says you have put him there. The Bible says that you are responsible as much as anyone else in the human race for putting Jesus Christ on the cross, because you are a sinner. The Bible says, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." The Bible says, "The wages of sin is death." The Bible says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." And Jesus Christ in that awful hour bore your sin.

The cross of Christ also reveals the love of God. You will never understand how much God loves you until you look at the cross, because Jesus Christ was God in the flesh, dying on the cross for you and for me. Jesus Christ died because he loved you. God so loved the world that he gave. The Scripture says that "God commendeth his love towards us, in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us."

And the cross of Christ declares that it is the only way of salvation. There is no other way. You cannot be saved by your good works, you cannot be saved by philanthropic deeds, you cannot be saved by way of any other road or avenue than through the cross of Jesus Christ. Only as you receive and trust him, committing your life and yourself to him can you be saved from hell to heaven and have a whole new way of life here and now.

God's way is the only way and right where you are now you can say "yes" to Christ. You say, "what do I have to do?" All you have to do is acknowledge that you are a sinner and then by faith accept Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour.

Questions & Answers

QUESTION: Do you believe that a Christian should presume the liberty to vote, and if so might he not be required to help subdue any who caused riots or insurrections or to assist the government in keeping order? In the latter case would he not by so doing violate the commandments of Jesus as well as the principle of His life while He lived an exemplary life here on earth; and especially would He not violate His commandment when He said, "I say unto you that ye resist not evil"?—J. R. C.

Then also there is a teaching in the epistles that indicates that we who are Christians should not hesitate to re-ounce and withdraw ourselves from heresy and from the heretics that propagate them. "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: but he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also" (1 John 2:23). "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son, If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 9-11). "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple" (Romans 16:17, 18). "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed" (Galatians 1:8, 9).

These denunciations from the epistles of those that are not loyal to God and His Word are well in line with such teachings that are to be found in abundance in the Old Testament. "Thou art my portion, O LORD: I have said that I would keep thy words. . . . Depart from me, ye evildoers: for I will keep the commandments of my God" (Psalm 119:57, 115). "Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee? and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee? I hate them with perfect hatred: I count them mine enemies" (Psalm 139:21, 22).

I just simply can't for the life of me see how any may call themselves Christians and presume that from the biblical point of view they are safe when they plainly and clearly deny the Bible's teachings on the person of Christ. It is so definitely taught in the Bible that He is the virgin-born Son of God that it would appear that the most simple-minded should well see and acknowledge this if he in anywise applied the teaching of the Scripture concerning the Christian's duty in studying, meditating upon it, and hiding the Word of God in his own heart and thereby living, that I sometimes feel a spirit of intolerance in my inner being when I hear or read of men that question this wonderful and all important doctrine; and I must confess that I feel almost equal indignation for those who fellowship with such unbelievers that in the terminology of Hebrews 6:6 ". . . crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." I believe that in such cases the very Word of God demands that a Christian be militant. This militancy of course is not to be expressed in the wielding of a material sword as was done by Peter when he showed his skill in this realm of activity by slicing off Malchus' ear who then was servant of the high priest (John 18:10), but instead by a skillful use of the Word of God. (See Hebrews 4:12; Jeremiah 23:29; 2 Corinthians 10:4, 5; Revelation 2:16; Ephesians 6:17.)

It is not to be presumed that we of ourselves have the authority to rebuke even though there is a sense in which this is true, but that the Word we preach carries with it such authority. It is able to "save to the uttermost"; it can divide asunder soul and spirit and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. But remember, we must preach it unadulterated if these are the result; we are without choice in the matter. "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry" (2 Timothy 4:1-5). "For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" (1 Corinthians 9:16).

In conclusion I would direct our attention to the fact that we who are Christians have entered into a new life in Christ, who gave His all that we might enjoy this privilege, and that in His word that demands no less of us than that which He gave for us. He calls on us in Romans 10:9-11 to present our bodies as living sacrifices. He calls in Matthew 11:28-30 for us to be yoke-fellows with Himself. He calls in Hebrews 12:1 to encourage that we lay aside the weight of sin and run with patience the Christian race. In 1 John 3:19 we are directed always to be at the task of laying down our lives for the brethren. And finally Jesus tells us, "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it" (Matthew 16:24, 25). The Tell-Tale Pennies

TWYLA MCNEFF

WHICH drawer, Grandma? There aren't any shoestrings in this one." Patsy shut the top drawer of the old chest of drawers Grandma kept in the hallway upstairs.

"In the second one, Patsy," Grandma called from the kitchen, where the spicy odor of chocolate-chip cookies filled the air.

Patsy opened the second drawer. She hated to hunt for things. Why hadn't Mother put new shoestrings in her shoes before she came to visit Grandma last Saturday! This drawer must be Grandma's odds-and-ends drawer! There was a pair of brown shoelaces down under some old snapshots.

Patsy's curiosity overcame her. She tucked the shoestrings in her pocket, and started to discover what interesting mysteries the drawer contained. There was a faded rose attached to a comb Grandma must have worn a long time ago, an old pair of gloves, some safety pins, flashlight batteries, a bunch of keys, and an old, old coin purse.

Patsy shoved the things back. Nothing interesting! But wait a minute!

Patsy was only five years old, but she knew that money would buy nice things, and the purse felt nice and fat. Patsy opened it, and found it full of small coins. She didn't know for sure what they all were, but she could tell most of them were pennies. Two pennies would buy a lollipop at Mr. Black's store.

For a minute she hesitated, and then quickly slipped two pennies into her pocket. Hurriedly she pushed the coin purse back out of sight, and slammed the drawer.

"Grandma wouldn't care if I took two pennies," she thought to herself.

"Anyhow there are so many, she'll never miss them!"

So with these thoughts, Patsy ran out for Grandma to tie her shoes.

"Did you find them, dear? Oh, I see. Sit there a minute while I take this batch of cookies out. Then you may have one, and go out and play in the yard till Daddy, Mother, and the boys come for you."

Patsy was a little disappointed because Daddy, Mother, and the boys didn't stop in town, but went straight home that afternoon. She did so want a lollipop!

She almost told her mother that she had money to buy a lollipop, but there was just a chance that Mother wouldn't understand, and make her give it back to Grandma. Of course, she could say she found it, and she had found it! Patsy's face felt awfully hot for some reason. But she clutched the two pennies tightly in her little fist.

All during the evening meal, she felt in her pocket to see if her pennies were still there. They seemed to be burning a hole clear through her dress!

Patsy thought of letting her two brothers in on her secret, but they might tell. She might get a chance to have a whole lollipop all to herself.

When Tom, her oldest brother, told how they had been chased by a strange dog coming home from school, Patsy became so excited that she commenced to jump up and down. Before she knew it, her pennies were rolling across the floor straight for the furnace register.

"Oh, my pennies!" Patsy shrieked. Her mother quickly picked them up before they were lost. She started to hand them back, then bent over and examined them carefully.

"Why, Daddy, where did you get Indian-head pennies?" she asked Patsy's father.

"Why, I haven't Indian-head pennies," he objected. "The boys must have given them to her."

"No, we didn't," the boys denied in unison.

"What is an Indian-head, Mommy?" Patsy asked wonderingly.

"Patsy, dear, did you find these pennies in Grandma's house?" She drew Patsy gently to her knee.

Patsy drew a long breath, and nodded her head slowly.

"Where?"

"In a drawer upstairs. But Grandma doesn't care, Mommy. She had so many pennies she wouldn't care a bit!"

"How do you know, Patsy? Did you ask her if you might have them?"

Patsy tried to say "yes," but her face felt as if it were on fire.

"No, I didn't," she admitted.

"You see, Patsy, Grandma has been collecting pennies for a long time. That was how I knew they were Grandma's. You did very wrong to take them. Did you know that?"

Patsy nodded her head miserably.

"God says in His Book, 'Be sure your sin will find you out.' No matter what we do, God always knows about it. Did you know that Someone saw you take those pennies, Patsy?"

"No, Mommy, nobody was there," Patsy replied.

"But you forget; who sees everything?"

Patsy thought for a moment and then said in a half-frightened voice, "Did God see me, Mommy?"

"Yes, my child, for 'the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth'; but He saw deeper than that."

"What more could He see?" Patsy was bewildered.

"He saw that your heart was wrong, Patsy. You knew you were doing wrong, deep in your heart, didn't you?"

"Y-yes I did, Mommy." Patsy was trying hard not to cry.

"Well, God sees your heart, too, when you are sorry, so let us ask Him to forgive you."

Souls in the Balance

DALE NEFF, Nigeria

Ikakumo is a needy place. The nearest medical help is 40 miles away. Although the section is heavily populated, there is no real Gospel witness in the entire area.

An important government official, though not a Christian, has requested that missionaries open work in Ikakumo. He has offered to provide a home, dispensary, and financial assistance. The Yoruba Conference has already chosen an African nurse who could go and serve as a pastor if a missionary could be sent.

These facts were presented to us by the Field Superintendent at the Annual Missionary Conference in Nigeria. Then he put this question to us: "You have heard this request. What shall we do with it?"

A missionary stood to his feet, "Mr. Chairman, before we make a decision on this matter we ought to consider some other requests that have come in." He proceeded to mention the Jejas area—a large territory near the city of Benin. He continued, "There are no churches of any kind there! There are a few religious schools scattered around but worship in the area is entirely pagan!"

Now another missionary spoke. He was burdened for a large unreached area within our own borders—an area formed by a "Gentleman's Agreement" of missionary organizations some 60 years ago.

I was reluctant to mention the tremendous Fulani work that is heavy on our own hearts.

We are perplexed. Here were at least three new areas standing open before us and the question was: "Do we have a single missionary to send?" Certainly we did not have three missionaries to spare for new work. Then there was the matter of money. That was another thing we did not have.

As various missionaries voiced opinions, I sat listening. Suddenly I was aware that this was more than a mere business meeting. We were actually deciding the fate of thousands of souls!

We were saying what the Church has been saying to the unreached for centuries. "Since we don't have enough money or missionaries, we'll have to choose who will hear the message of salvation! We'll take the message to these but the others will just have to wait!"

I had a dream last night. It is a dream I will have a hard time forgetting. I dreamed I took a Christian friend with me to a public gathering. I looked around and saw a number of Moslems in brightly-colored gowns. I remarked casually about the funny little "goatee" beards the Moslems grow.

When I looked back at my friend, I was shocked. He had suddenly become one of them! And I had been so sure that he was too well grounded in Christ to ever accept their teaching. If I had worked to win the Moslems they would not have won my friend!

Mosques are being built in American cities and pagan philosophies are being taught in our universities. We are reaping the results of our "delayed action" method of spreading the Gospel. Let's let them hear!—Missionary Standard.

FOR SEPTEMBER 20

The People Demand a King

PRINTED TEXT: I Samuel 10:17-25

MEMORY VERSE: Psalm 33:12

I. INTRODUCTION

In our lesson for today, we have an instance of men rejecting that which God desires for them, and yet finding God present in their choice of a second-best alternative. This lesson also describes the establishment of the Hebrew monarchy. The judges had served their purpose well, and now the people desired a king to reign over them. The people had become more national minded during the days of Samuel and Eli. They observed that the other nations had kings, and they wanted to be like the other nations.

The people came before Samuel to voice their desire. Much of the dissatisfaction with the reign of a judge had been brought about because of the corruptness of Eli's and Samuel's sons. There was cause for dissatisfaction. Samuel, however, was greatly displeased at the suggestion of the elders who came before him. He knew they were desiring to depart from the pathways in which God would have them walk. Moses had told them (Deuteronomy 17:14-20) that they could have a king in due time, but the elders had acted without seeking God's counsel and will.

Samuel, being a man of great faith and a man of prayer, placed the matter before God. He had done his best for Israel, but as usual he did not consider himself. God warned Samuel of what the results of having a king would be: ". . . He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots. And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instrument of war, and instruments of his chariots. And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants" (1 Samuel 8:11-14). In spite of this warning the people refused to obey. They still wanted a king over them.—Teen-Age Teacher (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Samuel called the people together at Mizpah, the same place where he prayed for them when they repented of their idolatry (v. 17).

2. Samuel, as God's spokesman, reminded the Israelites of His goodness in delivering them from their oppressors (v. 18).

3. Samuel plainly reminded the people that they had rejected the Lord by requesting a king to rule over them (v. 19).

4. Then he commanded that they present themselves before the Lord for the purpose of ascertaining who their king was to be (v. 19).

5. The tribe of Benjamin was chosen, which meant that the reign of kings over Israel would be of short duration (v. 20). (The ruling tribe was Judah.)

6. Saul was chosen to be king, but he could not be found when the lot fell upon him (v. 21).

7. When the people inquired of his whereabouts to the Lord, He revealed where he was (v. 22).

8. Determined to have a king, the people ran to find Saul (v. 23).

9. When Saul was presented, the people accepted him and shouted, "God save the king" (v. 24).

10. Samuel reminded the people of what they could expect from their king and then sent them home (v. 25).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

II. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. A mature Christian man who has served the Lord truly and effectively for many years writes to a friend about new work and new experiences that he is having. He says: "What a change I think, also, that I am going to enjoy resting wholly on the Lord for daily needs. I never did it before in my life. I do not know where the rent is coming from, but I am not worried at all. I am wondering why I have always slept better when some big financial man underwrites me, and a bit nervous when only the Lord says He will supply all my needs! Aren't Christians funny?"—Sunday School Times.

2. Around the world we find countries with many kinds of government. One of the best known is the monarchy in which a king or queen rules a nation, inheriting the kingdom through family succession. When a strong man seizes power, we know the government as a dictatorship. In a representative government such as we have in this country, every citizen has some responsibility for government through his right to vote.

No government today is perfect, and no nation today looks completely to God for guidance the way it should. Yet God guides the destinies of nations as He does of men. If a nation recognizes God and His leadership, and asks His guidance, He will lead that nation. Certainly a country that denies His existence cannot expect His help.

For many years God had ruled His people directly, speaking to them through Moses and the judges. But when the people murmured against them and asked for a king. Even though this was not pleasing to God, He permitted them to have a king. Moreover, He chose a king for them and arranged for his proper anointing. Thus God's people had a monarchy. The twelve tribes lost some of their separate identity as they became unified under a king. As long as the kings were good and looked to God, everything was fine. But when a bad king took power, then the entire nation was likely to become disobedient toward God.

The righteousness of a nation depends more upon its citizens than it does upon its form of government. Because of this, it is especially important that Christians in a democracy use their influence for righteousness.—Standard Commentary.

3. Governmental leaders should be chosen on the basis of proper qualifications. These include spiritual qualifications. Saul has been characterized as man "after the flesh." He received orders from God, but refused to carry them out. Christians today must diligently study God's Word to learn His will. While God temporarily may appear to bless an effort conducted in the strength of the flesh, the day of reckoning is sure to come. Both Saul and Israel persisted in unbelief. Eventually both were harshly judged by God.—Bible Expositor.

4. In the world's futile effort to explain away the record of the conversion of Paul some unbelievers say that he had an epileptic seizure or a sunstroke. Observe Paul before the so-called seizure—a Pharisaic persecutor: "Beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it" (Gal. 1:13). He was a terrible firebrand of hatred for the followers of Christ: "And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord" (Acts 9:1). Observe him after the so-called seizure—utterly submissive to the will of God, endowed with willingness to suffer the loss of all things for Christ's sake, and wanting only to magnify Christ. He said, "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death" (Phil. 1:20). He had consuming passion to make Christ known where He was unknown: "Yea, have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named" (Rom. 15:20). If Paul had epilepsy we would have to exclaim, "Oh, thou blessed epilepsy! Continue thy heart-transforming, character-ennobling ministry in our shackled, hate-dominated hearts!"

Alexander Duff visited William Carey during his terminal illness. Duff, the Scottish missionary, spoke glowing words of Dr. Carey and his accomplishments. After Duff's many words the young missionary whispered, "Pray." Duff knelt and prayed. As he left Carey solemnly said, "Duff, you have said much about Dr. Carey. When I am gone, speak less about Dr. Carey and more about Dr. Carey's Saviour!"—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

"Be thoroughly willing that God should treat you in the manner that pleases Him."—Selected.

the authority of the officers, even though they were filled by officers who were sinners and He taught us to do the same when such obedience did not conflict with our spiritual duties, therefore we should vote so as to have good leaders. We should obey all laws calling to the service of our country and try to influence men to do the same when these laws do not hinder correct moral and spiritual living.

Our Place in Heaven

How good it is to know that our names are written in heaven! It is related of Frederick the Great that at one time he was at his Cleves palace with Voltaire, the noted French philosopher, as his guest.

At the dinner table the Philosopher began to mock at God and good people, and said, "I will sell my seat in heaven for a Prussian thaler (dollar)."

Among the guests present was a councilor, who was a devout Christian. He was very much shocked at Vol-taire's words, and at once spoke his mind. "My dear sir, you are in Prussia, where we have a law which says one who wishes to sell anything must prove ownership. Will you prove you have a seat in heaven?"

Those words had a wonderful effect. Voltaire could not prove his ownership, and he had nothing more to say. His lips were sealed.

Just so! But for those who have taken their place under the shelter of the shed blood of the Lord Jesus there is no uncertainty as to their place in heaven. Chosen in Him from before the foundation of the world, they shall assuredly be there, holy and without blame before Him. To Him be all the praise!—Selected.

Our Deep Needs

When once you have put your mind in the true attitude of prayer, then the Holy Spirit will help you. That is one of the ways in which to prove to ourselves the action of the Holy Spirit. He kindles our aspirations, and does not let us rise from our knees until we have said something that is worth saying to God. Do you want nothing from God?

Do you need no divine help in increasing your control over yourself, in bridling that tongue of yours which has in its time wrought so much unhappiness to yourself and others, in getting rid of that selfishness which has been such a curse to you, or in practicing that self-denial which is the secret of your happiness?—Archdeacon W. M. Sinclair.

After they had prayed, Patsy felt better, then Mother said she must take the pennies back to Grandma and ask her forgiveness also.

What Changed Mary's Looks

Mary was looking so sour and cross that every one in the room thought her quite an ugly girl. She was having a selfish and angry thought because she wanted to stand at the end of the front row when the children got up to sing.

Of course, that was a nice place to stand because one could see all the people in the house, and catch their pleasant smiles. One could also look out the window and see the shadows of the trees on the green and sunny grass. Mary couldn't be blamed at all for liking to stand there. She had stood there the day before, and she shouldn't have been selfish about it. It was the selfishness that made Mary look so ugly, because all at once her face changed until she was beautiful.

A kind thought came into her heart. She offered the place to little Alice, who was not as tall as Mary, and never could have seen anything over Mary's head.

When the kind thought came, it brought a beautiful smile for Mary's lips, and two shining candles of love for Mary's dark eyes, so, of course, Mary was beautiful.

When you do a kind deed, the love thoughts change your face, just as they changed the looks of Mary's face when she offered the good place to little Alice.

"Beautiful faces are those that wear
It matters little if dark or fair,
The smiles of love reflected there."

Political Activities on Sundays

The Lord's Day Alliance of the United States has called upon the National Charimen of the Democratic and Republican Parties to urge their constituency to refrain from "political activities on Sundays." Based upon a survey by the Elmo Roper Associates, it was found that the American public is opposed to Sunday politics.

Not underestimating the campaign issues the Alliance spokesman said, "The issues of the campaign are important but they can be satisfactorily presented to the American people on the other six days of the week. We believe that all potential leaders in public life should set a high example of reverence and respect for the day when millions of our citizens worship Almighty God. We do not want our nation to follow the path of lands in other parts of the world that have disregarded this sacred day. America needs the blessing and guidance of the Lord today. We trust that all of our political forces will be working to strengthen our spiritual foundations."

Urging constructive leadership in this direction on the part of the National Chairmen, Rev. Jeanes said, "We know that your constructive leadership in this matter will be welcomed by millions of God fearing people in these United States."

LET THERE BE LIGHT

In the Genesis account of creation, the first act that God performed after His Spirit moved upon the face of the waters was the creation of light. "And God said, Let there be light: and there was light" (Genesis 1:3). Thus, light was given preeminence at the dawn of creation. Until man sinned, everything was in a state of perfection. Even the darkness of night held no fear or evil for man. After the fall, however, the scene changed. The light is contrasted with the darkness, and vice versa. The light becomes a symbol of righteousness and godness; the darkness, a symbol of evil.

Light dispels darkness. This is a natural law of God. Thus, God decreed that a greater Light should come into the world. This Light would not dispel the darkness of night; it would dispel the darkness of man's heart. John tells us that Jesus is "... the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:9). Today, as never before, there is a need for the true Light to shine. The darkness of evil is prevailing where once there was light. The prince of the power of the air, Satan, with the rulers of the darkness of this world have done much to darken man's heart. The light of goodness and righteousness is being engulfed by this darkness. The true Light is the answer.

The true Light will dispel the prejudice and hate that prevails in the land. Not since the Civil War has this country known such violence as that of recent months. This violence has had a breeding place—the prejudice in man's heart. How our enemies must glory in the midst of our turmoil! The Communists have found a medium through which they can thrive and thus accomplish much for their cause. The Christian must pray that the true Light will dispel the darkness of hate and prejudice.

The true Light will rid our land of its lawlessness and rebellion. To know Christ is to obey Him, and to obey Him makes one a good citizen. The Christian citizen is obedient to the laws of the land. He does not rebel against authority. How foolish so-called Christians must look in the eyes of the sinner when he flaunts the laws of the land.

The true Light will give man a purpose for living. The person without Christ has a purpose that is his own; it is self-centered. When the light of Jesus Christ shines in the heart, man's own purpose becomes blended to the will of Christ. The young person who gives his heart to Christ has a cause worth fighting for and dying for. If he is seeking excitement and fun that will bring eternal rewards, let him receive Christ. Then his energies and efforts can be channeled in the right direction. The mother and father who receive the true Light will bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. There will not be any delinquent problems that cannot be solved.

The true Light will relieve the tensions of this space age. Fewer nerve pills will be taken. The psychiatrist will lose many of his patients. Mental disorders will not be quite so common—if men would trust in Christ, the true Light.

Thus, it is the prayer of the concerned Christian that there be light—light that will once again win the favor and pleasure of God. God does not will that men walk in darkness. It is His will that men receive the Light. Many thousands have received Him, but many have not. If there is to be an improvement for righteousness in the world, the Light must shine in the hearts of men.

"... light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God" (John 3:19-21).

THERE ARE some answers to the importance question under the photo: Every parent throughout the world wants the best for his children—in character as well as in health, education, opportunity, and companionship.

In the best homes, the Bible has always been the cornerstone. The home is where the Bible was first used by Christians, and it still does its greatest work there.

Church schools and Bible study groups are important, of course. Wise parents will attend them, not only to encourage their children to go, but also to improve their own knowledge and love of the Bible. But far more can be done for the development of Christian character through the use of the Bible in the home than in any other place.

Children, like the rest of us, learn most readily from example. Parents must read, know and enjoy the Bible themselves if they hope to share it with their children. They must show by example as well as precept that the Bible is their guide and that they live their lives in accordance with its teachings. In this way then can most successfully “nurture (their) children in the chastening and admonition of the Lord.”

An excellent way to teach by example and at the same time train your children in the Bible reading habit is the practice of regular family devotions. The Bible can be read and enjoyed by young and old, for it speaks to the needs of every age group. Searching the Scriptures together for inspiration and guidance will strengthen the Christian character of every member of the family.

How often should you have family devotions? Every day, if possible—and with determination and careful planning, this is possible for most families, even those whose members lead the busiest lives. Devotions can be held at the morning or evening meal, immediately after rising or just before bedtime. The time of day is not important, regularity is. If you find you cannot hold devotions daily, then have them at least once a week—on Saturday, the eve of the Sabbath, or on Sunday, at a time when the whole family is at home.

Let the Bible be the center of your devotions. Each member of the household should have his own copy, in his own favorite version or translation. Each should share in the reading.

What should be read? A whole Book of the Bible, such as Mark, can be read straight through, a few verses each day. Or you can follow a schedule of suggested daily Bible readings, such as the one published each year by the American Bible Society. Readings related to church school lessons can be used to special advantage. The Bible Society publishes lists of Scripture references that may be helpful in deciding what to read, such as “Where to Look in the Bible,” “Young People Turn to the Bible,” “Forty Favorite Chapters,” “Stories of the Bible,” “Poetry of the Bible” and “Wisdom from the Bible.” Your pastor and your own denominational periodicals may also have readings to suggest. From time to time, various members of the family might read their own favorite Scripture passages.

There are many plans you can adopt. Choose one that is suited to your interests and needs, then read regularly and prayerfully together. Discuss the meaning of the passages you read, and their application to your own daily lives. Verses that seemed to “hit the nail on the head” can profitably be memorized.

Great hymns and pictures can be used to help illuminate the scriptural message. To develop familiarity with Biblical persons, places and events, informal quizzes can be used, each person challenging the others in turn to give correct answers to factual questions.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

Last week we closed our meditation by strongly insisting and proving by His Word that with the abundant life He gives, He also makes Himself accessible to His people directly and demands that we come to Him ourselves and not by any other. No one or no thing can come between us and Christ. No one can speak for Him; neither does anyone need transmit our petitions to Him.

The more abundant life given us by Christ can be enjoyed in a more abundant measure by the redeemed than it would have been if man had not fallen. This truth is beautifully illustrated by Christ in the story of the Prodigal Son. He said, when the wayward boy repented and returned, "For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to make merry" (Luke 15:24, and repeated in Verse 32).

God spoke by the prophet Zechariah, saying, "Turn you to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope; even to day do I declare that I will render double unto thee" (Zechariah 9:12). God here, through Christ, offers us a double measure of life. Christ came and gave life more abundantly. If man had never fallen, he could only have had very narrow and scanty views of God, when compared with those revealed of Him in and through the Lord Jesus Christ.

Bishop J. C. Ryle says, "Christ did not come to be only a teacher of new morality, or an example of holiness and self-denial, or a founder of new ceremonies, as some have vainly asserted. He left heaven, and dwelt for thirty-three years on earth for far higher ends than these. He came to procure eternal life for man, by the price of His own vicarious death. He came to be a mighty fountain of spiritual life for all mankind, to which sinners coming by faith might drink; and, drinking, might live for evermore. By Moses came laws, rules, ordinances, ceremonies. By Christ came grace, truth, and eternal life.

"... We must not suppose that eternal life was a thing entirely unknown until Christ came, or that the Old Testament saints were in utter darkness about the world to come. The way of life by faith in a Saviour was a way well known to Abraham and Moses and David. A Redeemer and a Sacrifice was the hope of all God's children from Abel down to John the Baptist: but their vision of these things was necessarily imperfect. They saw them afar off, and not distinctly. They saw them in outline only, and not completely. It was the coming of Christ which made all things plain, and caused the shadows to pass away. Life and immortality were brought into full light by the Gospel. In short, to use our Lord's own words, even those who had life had it 'more abundantly' when Christ came into the world."

Surely no one, in the light of these great truths, and in consideration of God's matchless and abounding love, can be satisfied without this life—life more abundantly. Knowing that the Son of the living God left the bosom of His Father, took on Himself our sinful nature and died on the Cross for us, can we be indifferent about the life He has purchased for us? We should not be satisfied with a small measure of life. Let Christ make it in you a life "more abundantly." No Christian should be content just to live, but should seek to live in the richest possible enjoyment of the divine favor. Christ came that we might have life "more abundantly." For this let's never cease to praise Him nor be careless in service in His blessed name.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time" (1 Peter 1:3-5).

Matthew

THE CHURCH AND ITS JOB

by JOHN B. ELLISTON

The Church is an organization unique in its character and in its purpose. It was formed by the act of the Lord in administering the baptism of the Holy Ghost to its members on the day of Pentecost, thereby forming a single body of baptized persons indwelt and guided by the Holy Spirit. It is unique in organization because it doesn't have a system of superiors and subordinates, but every member receives his instructions directly from the Head. It is unique in purpose because no other organization has ever had the same job to do which the church has.

We know that the Church was not formed at the time of the calling of the disciples because in Matthew 16:18, when Jesus was talking with His disciples, He said, ". . . upon this rock I will build my church; . . ." indicating that the time for building the Church was yet future. However, in Acts 2:47, Jesus having baptized the disciples with the Holy Spirit, thereby forming the Church, the statement is made that ". . . the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

The unique organization of the Church is made clear by Jesus in Matthew 23:8 when He forbids us to have authority one over another, "But be not ye called Rabbi (or Master): for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren." In many other places also Jesus pursued the same theme. See Matthew 20:15-28; Mark 10:42-45; Luke 22:25-27.

However, the uniqueness of the Church is shown more in its purpose than in its organization. The Church is an evangelistic agency, and has no other purpose for its existence. I am using the word evangelism here in its true sense, not in the narrow sense assigned to it by some to indicate a certain emotional type of preaching service. Evangelism means taking the good news that Christ died for all the world into all the world. Jesus made the purpose of the church very clear in Acts 1:8 when He said, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

The Church was born at Pentecost; and for only one purpose, to carry the witness of Christ into all the world. This is the only job that the Church has; and as soon as it is completed, the Church will be taken out of the world. In Matthew 24:14 Jesus makes this clear. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." If you have a desire to see the job of the Church done, you will be very active in fulfilling Acts 1:8. If you have no desire to evangelize the world, the reason is that the first part of Acts 1:8 has not yet been fulfilled in you. The Scripture says that ". . . Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed" (Romans 10:11).

If you have no desire to see the end of the Church age and to participate in the rapture of the Church, the job will be done without you; but you will be found to be an enemy of Christ, one who refuses to let Him reign over you. As such you must have your part in the tribulation which comes upon the whole earth. Are you now ready? Do you devote your thoughts and energies to evangelism in Jerusalem, in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth? If you cannot answer yes to that question, you have no part in the Church of Jesus Christ.

From the missionary effort now in progress in North Carolina, it is clear that not very many are taking evangelism seriously. Are you? You cannot answer for the others; neither can they answer for you. We know that when Christ gave His commandment, He meant it, and that He will make no exception for you. Are you obeying Him?

What Roanoke Rapids Mission Means to Me

by Mrs. Louis Whitford

This little mission has meant a lot to me — being a newcomer to Roanoke Rapids. It has been a place of close fellowship — a place to go and be with Christians. The pastor and his family make you feel that you are needed, appreciated, and loved. You don't find this kind of relationship in most churches today. There is never a visitor that leaves as a stranger. Humble as this little mission may be, you know and feel that the presence of God is there.

I am proud to be a part of this mission and hope that in some small way I can help to build it for the kingdom of God.

Central Missions Requests Help

The Rev. Raymond Sasser, secretary-treasurer of the Central Conference board of missions in North Carolina, calls to the attention of the pastors and men of the conference churches the need of help with the mission program as follows:

"(1) We are planning a work spell to erect the new metal building at Roanoke Rapids. Plans are to meet at the mission, 700 Franklin Street, Saturday morning, September 19. Bring your work tools, hammers, wrenches, saws, drills, etc., and let's give these people at our mission a helping hand. The State Woman's Auxiliary Convention has contributed the building for this and other worthy mission points where it will be used in years to come.

"(2) Please observe the treasurer's report of August 22, 1964, which was distributed at the union meetings and Sunday school conventions. Send a special offering as soon as possible to meet some pressing obligations. We must not let Mrs. Whitford and the other members of the mission down. Our missionary, the Rev. Noah Brown, has done a good job with limited worship space. He requests your prayers. Attendance the last Sunday morning in August was 54 for Sunday school and 64 for worship service . . . in a four-room house."

NEWS and NOTES

OF

DENOMINATIONAL INTEREST

Dawson's Grove Observes Homecoming

The Dawson's Grove Free Will Baptist Church of Scotland Neck, North Carolina, will observe its annual homecoming on Sunday, September 20.

Guest speaker for the day will be the Rev. Adrain Grubbs. Special music will be rendered by Mrs. J. F. Whichard and her granddaughters.

Following the worship service, a picnic lunch will be served in the fellowship building. All former pastors, members and friends of the church are invited to attend.

Missions Service at Dilda's Grove

On Saturday night, September 19, the Dilda's Grove Free Will Baptist Church, near Fountain, North Carolina, will have a special missions service. The Rev. James Lanier and Mrs. Lanier, missionaries to Arizona-Mexico, will be the speakers. Slides will be shown about the mission work in Mexico. The pastor is the Rev. Ray Harrison, Jr. All interested persons are invited to this service.

Sarecta Revival in Progress Followed with Homecoming

Revival services are in progress at Sarecta Free Will Baptist Church near Kenansville, North Carolina, with the Rev. Linwood Parker of Folkston, North Carolina, as the evangelist. Services began Monday evening, September 14, and will close Saturday evening, September 19. The pastor, the Rev. M. E. Godwin, and the church invite everyone to attend the remainder of these services which begin each evening at 7:30.

On Sunday, September 20, the Sarecta church will observe its annual homecoming. Services will begin with Sunday school at 10 a.m., followed with the worship service at eleven. A picnic lunch will be served on the church grounds at the noon hour. There will be special singing in the afternoon, and all singers are urged to come and participate. The pastor and the church invide the public to attend and bring a full basket of food.

Revival and Homecoming at Piney Grove Church

Revival services are scheduled for Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Beaufort County, North Carolina, for September 20-26. The Rev. Willis Wilson of Winterville, North Carolina, will be the guest evangelist. Services will begin each evening at 7:30.

On Sunday, September 27, the church will observe its annual homecoming with a picnic lunch served on the church grounds at the noon hour. The pastor, the Rev. P. C. Wiggs, and the church extend a cordial invitation to everyone to attend all these services.

Freedom

The Gospel does not put men on trial. It finds men condemned and sentenced, and brings to them a proclamation of freedom and everlasting life through the finished work of God's dear Son. It is God in the attitude of a suppliant, beseeching sinners to be reconciled to Himself. But the moment a man does believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, what a change takes place!

Instead of being regarded as one of those who took part in the murder and crucifixion of Christ, he is looked upon by God and reckoned by God as one for whom Christ died; as one who died with Christ, who was crucified with Christ.—Selected.

BETHLEHEM PRAYER GROUP

by MRS. ALVA CULBRETH
Shellman, Georgia

Prayer is needed everywhere, and God hears and answers prayer. James 5:16 says: "Confess your faults one to another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Our group sends out get-well cards, flowers; gifts; and, most of all, prayer for the sick, brokenhearted, and the unsaved. We visit around as much as we can and testify for the Lord in the things He does for us. Many times we meet at each other's homes and have prayer; then on Wednesday nights we meet at the church for our prayer meeting. We pray that others will join us and receive great blessings by praising God and doing His will.

We have had several to request prayer for them, and God has heard our prayers. The world needs more prayer groups to reach out and help the lost and brokenhearted.

"Cast thy burden upon the LORD, and he shall sustain thee: he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved" (Psalm 55:22).

A human mind can stand only so much weight. Soon, without God's help, you will reach a breaking point and cause serious trouble; but God will help you carry your burdens if you will call upon Him. He is willing to assume them and is perfectly able to do so. But, and this is most important, don't half give them. And don't take them back. Let God handle all your burdens. Know that God is actually with you.

We often sing "Prayer Changes Things," and the words of this title are so true. We have received so many blessings since we started our prayer group in 1962. It is our desire that others will take notice and form a prayer group in other communities. We don't all belong to the same denomination; but in small communities like ours, we count it a blessing to get together in a prayer group.

THE CHURCH - WORLD-WIDE

Haile Selassie Gives Building Site To Evangelical Congregation

BERLIN (EP)—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has given the German-language Evangelical congregation in Addis Abbaba a large building site for a church and a parish hall.

Construction of the church will begin immediately with financial aid for the Evangelical Church in Germany (EKID).

The German-language congregation comprises believers of German, Austrian and Swiss origin. They are served by missionaries of the West German Hermannsburg Missionary Society.

Admit 'Religious' Members, Communist League Urged

BELGRADE (EP)—When the Yugoslav League of Communists meets here in November it will discuss a proposed constitutional revision stipulating that profession of religion is no longer a bar to membership.

This was announced by Belgrade Radio—the same station which for several weeks had told listeners that membership in or practice of religion was incompatible with League membership.

The station did not say who proposed the constitutional change. Nor did it explain the apparent change of attitude among leaders of the organization.

Some observers here, however, said it might be connected with a recent series of meetings involving leaders of several religious bodies and the State Office for Religious Affairs. A communique following the meetings held that relations between the Communist regime and the various Churches were "developing favorably."

Communist Journal Warns of Church's Continuing Influence

BERLIN (EP)—Communist authorities are worried about the continued influence of the churches, especially among young people according to an East German publication.

Zeitschrift Fuer Philosophie (Journal for Philosophy) declared in an article that the policy of the church is "modern, psychologically well-balanced and effective. The church takes care of the immediate interests of the youths; sport, dance, jazz music are in its programs."

It also claimed the church is gaining new followers through cultural activities and called for intensification of the atheist campaign among East German youths "to counter the influence of the church."

Churches to Mark 'NAE Week' October 18—25

WHEATON, Ill. (EP)—Thousands of evangelical Protestant churches across the country will observe October 18—25 as "NAE Week" recognizing the spiritual unity they share through participation in the National Association of Evangelicals.

"Penetrating Our Culture for Christ" is the theme of this year's observance, according to the executive director of NAE, Dr. Arthur M. Climenhaga. He said many churches will feature messages on Christian unity in recognition of their NAE affiliation on Sunday, October 25.

Rescue Mission Rounds Out 87 Years

CHICAGO, Ill.—In October Pacific Garden Mission, second oldest rescue mission in the United States, rounds out 87 years of what Superintendent Harry G. Saulnier calls "our 87-year war on poverty."

During the past year the Mission has served 249,912 meals to needy people off the streets of Chicago, and 55,453 (not including 6,214 GIs) have been checked in for overnight lodging. Some 61,234 pieces of clothing were distributed. "But best of all," says Saulnier, "our war on poverty has resulted in 3,823 souls won to Jesus Christ."

Peyote Makes Navajos 'Immune' To Christianity, Missionary Says

ROCK DOOR CANYON, Utah (EP)—A religion based on the use of the hallucination-producing drug, Peyote, is capturing the loyalty of vast numbers of Indians of the Southwest, rendering them "immune" to Christianity, a Seventh-day Adventist medical missionary charged here.

Dr. J. Lloyd Mason, director of the Monument Valley Seventh-day Adventist Hospital, estimated that despite Tribal Council bars, 30,000 Navajos have joined the Native American Church, which uses peyote as an integral part of its religious ceremonies.

"Five years ago the use of peyote was virtually unknown in the Monument Valley area of southern Utah," Dr. Mason said. "Today, however, about half of all Navajos living in the area are peyote users."

Peyote, which contains mescaline, comes from "buttons" atop a kind of cactus grown in the Rio Grande valley. When ingested—usually in a kind of tea—it produces visions of astonishingly vivid colors. It is used in night-long religious ceremonies by the Native American Church, which claims it brings the user into closer touch with God.

Peyote is not classified as a narcotic under federal law. California has been one of the few states to ban its use.

California's Supreme Court, however, recently ruled that the use of peyote in religious rites does not violate the law.

Dr. Mason said that "in ways, the use of peyote is a good thing for the Navajo. It is a milder substitute for drunkenness. It gives pleasure through dreams to many Navajos who previously had known little but misery and poverty."

"Use of the drug renders the Navajo practically immune to conversion to Christianity, however," he added. "The pleasurable quality of peyote coupled with its rapidly increasing use by the Navajo is one of the greatest challenges the Christian church faces in all of Navajoland."

He Did Have Time!

LESLIE D. WEATHERHEAD

Some time ago I was called to see an old man over 80 years of age, who was dying and who was very frightened of death. When, as tenderly as I could, I tried to talk to him about God and religion and the soul, he said very bitterly and brokenly, "I have led a very busy life. I have never had time for that sort of thing . . ."

But he had had 4000 Sundays!—Presbyterian Journal.

WOMAN'S CRAGMONT CONFERENCE REPORT

Co-directors, Mrs. Carl Dudley and Mrs. J. C. Moye

"Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there for behold, the kingdom of God is within you" (Luke 17:21).

The theme of the woman's conference this year at Cragmont was taken from the above verse and was entitled "Building the Kingdom." Surely God saw and the women felt the kingdom of God within them during that wonderful, glorious week.

More than ever it seemed that the love of God was prevalent as manifested by the continuous rejoicing and harmony among all present. The classes were geared to the times, and hearts were challenged as never before to get on fire and be about the Father's business. Those present were made to realize that we are living in the end time and that there are so few days left to tell the story of redeeming grace through Christ for all people. Our women were called upon to publish the glad tidings of salvation by helping to make possible the sending of the message into all the world.

Each day was opened with an inspiring devotional led by different women. The manual study was taught by Mrs. C. F. Bowen, who challenged the women to sponsor missions, the very foundation of the woman's work. She also taught the ladies that when their hearts are right with God and they believe the Bible way and observe it, devotion and service will follow. "To serve Christ as He has asked us to and to build the kingdom in our hearts with full devotion and consecration to Him will lead to our having all the things we need to promote all causes of our denominational work," Mrs. Bowen stated.

Mrs. Bowen taught the women the duties of the officers as set up now by the state auxiliary convention. She also showed posters and gave ideas on how to enlist women and young people in this all-important work.

Mrs. Almond Warrick spoke each day on "Stewardship." Using Philippians as her Scripture, she discussed each day one verse which was printed on a poster board. She challenged each woman to let the mind of Christ be in her. She told the women that they could accomplish anything, concerning the stewardship of their lives, through Christ who would give them daily strength.

Mrs. J. C. Moye conducted a singspiration time using all types of hymns, choruses, and music for different occasions. Mrs. Ruth Taylor and the Rev. and Mrs. Wayne West very capably assisted her at the piano as well as rendering special music. What a blessing to all souls!

"Revelation, a book often misunderstood and pushed aside because of lack of understanding, is one of the greatest books of the Bible and is meant to be studied with the Holy Spirit as teacher and guide," the Rev. C. F. Bowen stated. Mr. Bowen taught the Book of Revelation morning and evening because of the interest in the book shown by the women.

Let the women speak for themselves. These are some of the comments made: "I have heard Revelation taught before but never understood it quite as clearly before." "I have studied and listened to different ones speak on Revelation, but never has it been brought down to my level where I could understand it as now. God has filled my soul." Another said, "Heaven must be a wonderful place, and hell a terrible place. And I am looking forward to meeting my Saviour more than ever." There was such keen interest shown in this study that requests were made to teach in the afternoons. However, the faculty deemed it wise to let the ladies rest and sight-see some so that they might view the wondrous things that God's hand has wrought.

A word of praise must be given to the staff at Cragmont who did a wonderful job of preparing meals and serving them. Everyone seemed cooperative.

A memorial service was held in which several ladies were remembered, but especially Mrs. Katie Sawyer Jackson who was the founder of our Anna Phillips Loan Fund for college students in North Carolina. She loved the movement so much that she requested at her death no flowers be sent, but rather the money be sent to this fund so that some worthy boy or girl might be able to further his education.

On Friday evening, with an open Bible and candles used as an interest center, Mr. Bowen spoke on missions. He challenged us once again to rededicate our lives to Christ so that we might win others. He also challenged us to give a liberal mission offering if we were willing to rededicate our lives as we gave; but if not, then it would be better not to respond because Christ wanted only the best of our lives.

Our offerings during the conference amounted to $586.66. Of this amount $214.48 was given to missions, $280.50 applied to a new water system at Cragmont, $78.68 spent for paint and $13.00 for the alumni building at Cragmont.

Was God present? Did He pour out blessings? Did He cause a closeness to Him perhaps not experienced by some for a long time? The answer is certainly a big yes because the "kingdom of God" was renewed in many hearts. Our women should plan now to attend the woman's conference next year and worship so very close to the heavens at Cragmont! Spiritual blessings await them, and may God bless all of them as they strive to work for the Master wherever they are.

Newport, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting Tuesday night, September 1, 1964. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Agnes Garner, who then turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Mrs. Pat Gurganus, who read the Scripture taken from Psalm 85. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Dorla Hill, followed with the group's singing "Revive Us Again." The program entitled, "Revival," was given by the hostess, Mrs. Nina Lee Kelly.

There was a short business session during which Mrs. Rena Kirk gave a very inspiring report on her recent trip to Cragmont with a youth from the church who received a very special blessing during the conference.

Mrs. Kathleen Slaughter dismissed the group with prayer and everyone enjoyed refreshments served by the hostess.

Bridgeton, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Sts. Delight Free Will Baptist Church met Monday evening, August 31, at the home of Mrs. Sadie Rice. The meeting was opened with the singing of the hymns, "Blessed Assurance" and "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning." Mrs. Dolly Gaskins led the group in prayer.

The program topic for the evening was "Except the Lord Build the House." The program was given by Mrs. Avon Gaskins, Mrs. Howard Gaskins, and Miss Dianne Jones. The program period was closed with the song, "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?" Following, the minutes were read by Mrs. Ruby Duell, secretary, and a call of the roll showed eleven members present. All routine business was transacted and the committee reports were given.

The auxiliary agreed to donate $10 to the Thousand Dollar Club at Mount Olive College and $10 to the Alice Lupton Scholarship Fund. Officers were then elected for the coming year.

Mrs. Vernon Ringgold and Mrs. Avon Gaskins were reelected in the offices of president and vice-president. Mrs. Ruby Duell also was reelected secretary with Mrs. Vernon Dixon assistant. Mrs. Sadie Rice remains in her office as treasurer; also Mrs. Clemens Jones as program-prayer chairman and Mrs. Howard Gaskins as youth chairman. For benevolence, Mrs. Avon Gaskins, Mrs. Clemens Jones, and Mrs. Howard Gaskins were elected to serve. Mrs. Willie Stilley will act as Children's Home chairman and Mrs. Howard Gaskins as publicity chairman.

The group was invited to meet with Mrs. Milton Rowe next week, and Mrs. Dolly Gaskins was appointed to bring the program. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Clemens Jones and the hostess, Mrs. Sadie Rice, served delicious refreshments.

"They desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God . . . hath prepared for them a city" (Heb. 11:16).

"Let us not be discouraged when the hand of God layeth heavy woes upon us."

GOSPEL HERALD

Little Things Count

Superjet, flight 900, left Athens, Greece enroute to Cairo, Egypt on time. Everything checked out perfectly, so the pilot thought.

I have a little prayer I always pray on every flight between the end of the runway and the time the ship is airborne. It's not said aloud but just a little chat with the Lord about how I want Him to reach down and lift the ship in the palm of His hand from His own green earth into His heavens above, guide us through His own clouds, in His own atmosphere and then set us down again on His own green earth—all in keeping with His own good will.

Well, I had prayed this prayer in confidence and, as I remember, I added a little extra that particular time, but I soon settled back and began to talk with friends beside me.

In about five minutes the "Fasten your seat belts" signal flashed on and the disturbed announcement came over the speaker, "There is no need for alarm. We are having some difficulty with the compression in the cabin and we find it necessary to return to the airport in Athens."

Some people around me began to appear disturbed, frightened. One man asked for oxygen. We did make almost a nosedive directly downward, for we had climbed to 16,000 feet, when just two little wires snapped loose and the passenger cabin began to lose the proper air balance.

I did notice that by the time we were on the ground the crew came rapidly out of their compartment and rushed us all quickly from the plane.

Three hours later we learned that two wires had broken other installations, and difficulties had developed until one spark in the channel from these wires could have caused a complete explosion of the entire plane in mid-air.

Only a little thing—but it might have caused the destruction of a five million dollar ship and the lives of 96 people!

What made the difference? Well, the constant vigilance of the crew, their concentration on their business, their prompt action when they were aware of trouble, their knowledge of the ship and what to do in case of an emergency.

Then, too, I like to think that our safe arrival back at the airport was because of prayer and God's grace. Little things, only two little wires—but they made all the difference in the world.—The Herald.

SEED THOUGHTS

"Every congregation owes its community the warmest kind of spiritual worship. A cold, dead, formal public worship is abomination. The services of God's house should be so fervent in spirit, so manifestly the flow and glow of hearts attuned to God, as to impress saint and sinner of the verity of the presence and fellowship of God. Real spiritual worship is the most desirable and enduring attraction of the house of God, and every congregation is debtor to its community to maintain such worship in the Lord's house.

"Every congregation owes its community the beauty, the strength, and the aroma of vital godliness in the everyday life of the individual members of the church. The most potent and convincing argument of the genuineness and virtue of the Christian religion is the Christ-likeness of the daily private and public life of His followers. The world expects church members to walk uprightly, deal justly, and to keep themselves from the defilements of sin. Not to meet this expectation tends to bring reproach on the cause of God. Every church owes its community the matchless influence of family religion. The ideal Christian home is one of the most important products and agencies of the gospel. The nation's best safeguard is the Christian home. Failure of the church to produce and maintain Christian homes would mean disaster to herself and the nation. The church is debtor to the world to preserve and emphasize the family altar and to promote piety and vital godliness in the home.—Henry F. Cope.

G. Campbel Morgan said, "The Gentile world is condemned for holding down the truth. There are orthodox men who hold the truth, not that they may use it, live it, shape their wills by it; but who by holding it, imprison it, hold it down, make it void in their own lives."

"My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons. For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment; And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool: Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts? Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him" (James 2:1-5). James further tells us that "If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, . . . But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convicted of the law as transgressors" (James 2:8, 9).

Jesus taught us to love one another, to love our neighbor as ourselves. This was one of my problems when I was a child; but when I committed everything to God, it was revealed in its fullness to my mind. First, I must love the Lord with all my soul, heart, and mind before I can love my neighbor. If I want to please God, I must want my neighbor to please God. I want to receive the blessings of God; I must want my neighbor to receive God's richest blessings. I want to do my part in order to receive these blessings; I must want my neighbor to do his part in order to receive the blessings. I want to be used for the glory of God; I must want my neighbor to be used for the glory of God. By faith and God's grace I want to reach heaven when life's work is done; also, I must want my neighbor to share the blessings of heaven. I want to be happy now in this present world in the service of my Lord as I have fellowship and work for the salvation of lost humanity; I must want my neighbor to be happy in the fellowship of my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. In fact, just what I want now and in eternity, I must want my neighbor to have. If my neighbor needs my assistance in any way for life or death, I must be as willing to give as to receive. Our love for our neighbor should force us to deny self in order to help him.

My dear reader, get your New Testament and read all the Epistle of James; absorb its teachings and live its teachings with all mankind, and you will

The Old Bent Tree

WALTER E. ISENHOUR

The tree was old and ugly bent
With knots about its trunk;
Its market value—not a cent,
'Twas only fit for junk;
But when the tree was but a sprout
Just shooting from the earth,
Had it been staked and straightened out
What might it have been worth?

It might have been a stately oak,
Quite charming in its height,
Whose fame the poets might have spoke
Because it stood aright;
Or maybe those who work in wood
Might with their many tools
Have put it where it could have stood
To bless our homes and schools.

Whereas the tree, so bent and old,
So knotty and so rough,
Could not to lumber plants be sold,
Because it was so tough;
Therefore it only filled some space
Within a wooded dell,
And no one praised it for its grace
So far as we can tell.

How much the old bent tree portrays
One's life that's spent in sin,
Who's old and full of wicked days
And never lets God in;
Who might have been a stalwart man,
So strong and great in truth,
If only he had sought God's plan
Back in the days of youth!

Oh, parents of our land today,
Help start the children straight,
By teaching them to watch and pray
Before it is too late;
By helping them to seek the Lord
Who saves by grace sublime,
And holds for them a great reward
Beyond the chores of time!

And yet there's hope for old bent lives
Far more than crooked trees,
If men will leave the devil's dives
And fall upon their knees,
And out of broken hearts repent
And seek God's mercy now,
That, somehow, pardon may be sent
To those who humbly bow.

be better prepared to live among you neighbors and to show to the world you love for Christ and His Church.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: In order for a Christian to reach the highest level of enjoyment and to be of the most use to the cause of Christ while in the world, what should his attitude to the world and worldly pleasures be?—B. P.

ANSWER: The Bible tells us: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17).

It also tells us: "Set your affection on things above not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Colossians 3:2, 3). In these verses we are first told what not to do; viz., love the world and that which pertains thereto, but the Bible does not leave us with a negative direction giving no positive grounds upon which to stand and act. It tells us "to set our affections on things above."

Now there are two reasons for this given: (1) "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God (or with Christ who is in God). (2) When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye (who are born from above and now in Christ) also appear with Him in glory" (Colossians 3:3, 4). Remember that this does not mean nominal church members. The Bible always depicts the world as being temporary. It tells us in understandable details that, because of sin, the world is under judgment of the most severe kind; that there is a day and an hour in which it will be completely destroyed; and that a new earth or place of abode will be created and presented to man in his redeemed state as a place he will own, occupy, and enjoy with God throughout all eternity.

The same thing the Bible calls worldly or worldliness it also calls flesh or fleshiness. It says, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Galatians 2:20). It requires that one live in relation to this world and all that pertains to it as if he were crucified, nailed fast and motionless to a tree of execution or judgment. It was the sin of man that brought this judgment of eternal condemnation to both the race of mankind and the world given him to enjoy. When a literally crucified man is thus permanently nailed to a tree, things of this world seem of little value to him.

When the rich man of Luke 16 died, opening his eyes in or becoming aware of being engulfed in an eternal hell of fire, he did not ask for any of the pleasures of the former life the flesh had had temporary enjoyment in, but only that his parching tongue be temporarily relieved and that his brothers be saved from the thing he in his life's activities and choices had gained for himself. He was out of commission so far as this world was concerned. So was the thief on the cross when he was crucified, and so are Christians who have crucified the flesh. "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh." The rich man of Luke 16, in his natural life, minded such things. He "fared sumptuously" (minded the things of the flesh) while his counterpart, Lazarus, only wished for enough crumbs to sustain him physically day by day.

"For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; . . . For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because (you see there is a reason) the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be" (Roman 8:5-7).

The carnal, worldly, or fleshly mind is that which belongs to a person who is not born again or that which is possessed by a person who has been crucified with Christ. The Bible says, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 2:5). To have the mind of Christ would enable us to act and speak like Christ.

The spiritual mind belongs only to one who is born again, crucified with Christ, and has put off the old man and put on the new man. The old man, or that which has only experienced the natural birth, is carnal only. He, in some cases, knows better than to do the wrong he does; but he is powerless to make the reform that common decency tells him he needs. What he needs is regeneration, a new life, faith, justification, salvation, sanctification, or whatever else the Bible may call it; and it does call it more than one thing so as to help man see and understand. But that in its initial state or step is not all he needs. For he needs to give continual and full recognition of who he now is and for what he is responsible. The Christian life is one that is closely disciplined in all details. "Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another; Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord" (Romans 12:9-11). "Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits. Recom-pense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men" (Romans 12:16, 17).

It is wonderful that God has a mysterious way by which He causes those whom He has set apart from the world to have unique experiences that indicate they no longer belong to the old way of life; but that's not sufficient in itself to keep the saint in line with his new name, nature, and obligations and in a fullness of joy that those who live obediently in line with the Word of God experience. Some, and in this day too many, let what they do speak so loudly that a lost world seldom sees what they profess in their everyday living. The bickering over nonessentials often causes the saints to act like those in the unconverted world. They let petty jealousies so dominate their thoughts that they forget to obey the word that indicates that love and kindness are dominating features of

BOYS and GIRLS

BEST OF ALL

Roy Bernard Jussell

THE very minute that Jeff heard his mother say, "Wake up now," Jeff scrambled out of bed. He rubbed his eyes with his knuckles, then yawned and stretched. That made him more awake; so wide awake that he remembered this was Monday.

"It's Monday!" He said it as if it were the most exciting thing ever. In no time, he'd scrubbed himself, dressed in neat clothes and, whistling, dashed into the friendly kitchen.

"Morning, Mom! I thought this day would never come!" His grin turned to laughter. Mom couldn't help but laugh with him. Dad had gone to work, and Lou Anne, Jeff's sister, had gone to her job at the library.

"It certainly is funny," Mom said, still laughing as she stirred the scrambled eggs in the hot pan. "I can imagine that most children wear long faces this morning, Jeff, and hate to go."

Jeff stood beside the range, drinking his orange juice. "Sure, Mom, they are angry and maybe scared."

"They don't know," Mom said, "that things are never as bad as they seem. Sit down, Jeff. It's ready."

After quietly thanking the Lord for his food, Jeff started to eat. "I can hardly wait to get there, Mom! We'll have a new teacher, too, and I'll see my old friends again." Jeff had spent his whole vacation on Uncle Fred's farm. That had been super, too.

He wiped his mouth with a yellow paper napkin, said, "Bye, Mom!" and hurried on to Chester Elementary School on Aspen Street, across from the green church.

The boys and girls were on the playgrounds, talking in groups, most of them looking sad and sleepy. But the little tots were having fun in swings and on slides, shouting and laughing.

Grinning, Jeff greeted his classmates. "Hi, Don . . . How you, Billie Joe? . . . Becky, you've grown inches! . . . Mike, you're as brown as a walnut . . . Lee, cheer up . . . Hi, Sandra!"

Then the loud gong rang, and Jeff hurried with the rest into his classroom.

Standing behind her big desk, the new teacher smiled and said, "I'm Miss Brighton. You may sit where you care to for the present." She went on smiling and said, "I'd like to see the corners of your mouths turn up."

Jeff grinned. What Miss Brighton meant was for everybody to look cheerful. He glanced at boys and girls around him and was glad to see some of them with mouth-corners toward the sun.

The teacher said, "I hope that all of you had a happy, useful vacation. The first thing we'll do is write a brief story. It should be about your vacations." She thought a minute and said, "It should be about what you learned. You see, we learn even when we're not in school."

Becky raised her hand and the teacher nodded to her. "Miss Brighton, maybe the story should be called 'What I Learned During Vacation.'"

"That's a very good title," said the smiling teacher. "Now let's all get busy and write it."

Jeff's grin went off. With wide eyes, he wondered what to write. Maybe his classmates wouldn't like to hear about Uncle Fred's farm again. He had been there every summer and told them all about it.

"I'll have to write something, he told himself, and started. All the others were busy writing. "My story won't be very good," Jeff told himself, but he wrote it.

The teacher said, "I see that we've all finished." She didn't have the pupils' names yet, so she had to nod to certain ones she wanted to read.

John Martine read his. He had learned the crawl stroke in swimming, and how to float. He'd learned to row a boat, too, and water ski.

"Very good," Miss Brighton said. "Every boy and girl should learn to swim."

"I took trumpet lessons all summer, Kenneth Day read from his sheet. "I practiced several times a day. You have to develop what is called a lip when you play a horn."

"That's fine," Miss Brighton told him. "Wouldn't it be wonderful if every boy and girl could play an instrument of some kind? That's better than sitting and watching TV. So much TV is a waste of time to watch."

Jeff knew that was true. He'd much rather play games and read good books.

Julia Jenkins read next. She had learned how to roast a chicken, bake pies and biscuits, and serve a nice dinner. She knew how to set the silverware properly beside the dinner plates, and serve the dinner in courses.

Miss Brighton said, "That's splendid. Every girl should learn to be a homemaker. Raise your hands, those girls who can prepare a dinner and serve it." Jeff noticed that most of the girls could.

He hoped the teacher wouldn't ask him to read his story.

Mary Matthew read her sheet next. She had taken organ lessons because she hoped to play in church some day.

"That is extra good," said the teacher. "Church organists are hard to find. Boys should learn organ, too."

Jeff listened while others read what they had learned during vacation. Then Miss Brighton looked right at Jeff and nodded. He felt all choked up, but he made himself read: "On my Uncle Fred's farm, where I go every summer, I learned to be a friend to the horses and cows and chickens. There was a black bulldog, too, and cats, and sparrows. When you are kind to God's creatures they understand, and are your good friends. I talked gently to them, and aloud together the Christmas message from the Gospel of Luke. Millions of families, encouraged to do so by their churches and by the American Bible Society, already have made this their annual custom. In the same way, you can join the nation's largest service on Easter Sunday by reading together the resurrection message from the Gospel of John. Each of these Scriptural messages has been published by the Bible Society in a small, attractive, inexpensive booklet.

Many homes have been helped by establishing a Bible corner or altar and keeping there a small family Bible, with family register pages faithfully kept, children's editions of the Scriptures, perhaps a Bible dictionary, a concordance, and other books that help toward an understanding of God's Word. Besides its practical convenience, such a Bible corner, through its visible presence, lays constant emphasis on the fact that the Bible is a very special Book, more important than any other book in the house.

Sooner or later, older children should be given an opportunity to learn something of the history of the Book of books—how it came to be written, and how it has come down to us through the ages in our own English language. The Bible Society publishes a small, inexpensive booklet, "Our Most Precious Heritage," that is ideal for this purpose. Illustrated with 16 full-page pictures, in full color, it tells the thrilling story of some of the people who have given their inspired efforts, and sometimes their lives, that we might have this Book.

Almost always, where the Bible has become the center of family life, it is the parents who have made it so. The effort to accomplish this, despite busy schedules and the competition of other interests, is uniquely worth while. When used reverently, intelligently and regularly, the Bible can transform and redeem the life of every person in the home. It can become an inexhaustible source of inspiration and knowledge and power for children and parents alike, a treasure without price, the foundation stone for lives that continually "grow in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man."

Contracts Authorized

The awarding of contracts for an academic building and a three-unit dormitory complex on the new campus of Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, contingent upon final negotiations with low bidders on deductive alternates, was authorized Wednesday by the college board of directors.

President W. Burkette Raper and board chairman Ralph A. Morris of New Bern were empowered to issue contracts as soon as bids can be brought within the proposed development fund budget. It is hoped that these negotiations can be completed within the next few days," President Raper reported.

Low bids and architectural and engineering services now total $375,885 for the academic building and $475,809 for the dormitories. Deductive alternates involving more than $40,000 are being studied, college architect G. Milton Small of Raleigh reported.

President Raper explained that bids exceeded college estimates by approximately ten percent, and that the college was seeking to close this gap through a combination of deductive alternates and an additional loan.

The academic building, with classroom capacity for 350 students, will be named in memory of the late Dr. C. C. Henderson of Mount Olive, leading college benefactor.

Rooming capacity of the dormitories will be 132 students. One of the units will be named the "Hart Dormitory" in memory of the late W. F. and Jesse T. Hart of Ayden, leading advocates of higher education in the Free Will Baptist denomination.

Both the academic building and the dormitories are expected to be ready for the fall semester in 1965.

Officers Reelected

The Mount Olive College board of directors has reelected its same officers for 1964-65, and added B. E. Bryan of Mount Olive to its executive committee.

The election of Bryan followed the adoption of a new set of bylaws which enlarged the executive committee from five to six members.

Other officers include Ralph A. Morris of New Bern, chairman; E. L. Jones of Walstonburg, vice-chairman; Mrs. Frances Cassick of Greenville, secretary; R. N. Hinnant of Bailey and W. P. Grant of Goldsboro, members of the executive committee.

The new bylaws provide for quarterly rather than semiannual meetings of the board.

Provisions were also made for the election of an advisory board which will include representatives from Free Will Baptist organizations and other friends of the college both within and outside the state of North Carolina.

Convocation Deferred

The annual fall convocation at Mount Olive College has been deferred one week, from September 13 to Sunday, September 20 at 4 p.m.

Dean Daniel W. Fagg will be the speaker for the program to be held in the First Methodist Church of Mount Olive.

The college will observe September 18-20 as a closed weekend for resident students. Professor Carl Bains, assistant professor of English at Emory University, will lecture on Friday and Saturday.

His Friday lecture, to be held in the college auditorium at 7:30 p.m., will be on the novel, To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee. Saturday morning Professor Bains will lecture on "The World of Charlie Brown."

The Saving Deeds of The Lord

Lesson Text: I Samuel 12:6-15

Memory Verse: Hebrews 11:39-40

I. INTRODUCTION

In our lesson for today, we have an instance of men rejecting that which God desires for them, and yet finding God present in their choice of a second-best alternative. This lesson also describes the establishment of the Hebrew monarchy. The judges had served their purpose well, and now the people desired a king to reign over them. The people had become more national minded during the days of Samuel and Eli. They observed that the other nations had kings, and they wanted to be like the other nations.

The people came before Samuel to voice their desire. Much of the dissatisfaction with the reign of a judge had been brought about because of the corruptness of Eli's and Samuel's sons. There was cause for dissatisfaction. Samuel, however, was greatly displeased at the suggestion of the elders who came before him. He knew they were desiring to depart from the pathways in which God would have them walk. Moses had told them (Deuteronomy 17:14-20) that they could have a king in due time, but the elders had acted without seeking God's counsel and will.

Samuel, being a man of great faith and a man of prayer, placed the matter before God. He had done his best for Israel, but as usual he did not consider himself. God warned Samuel of what the results of having a king would be: ". . . He will take your sons, and appoint them for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots. And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots. And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants" (I Samuel 8:11-14). In spite of this warning, the people refused to obey. They still wanted a king over them.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Samuel gave the Lord credit for the exodus from Egypt (v. 6).
2. He asked that the Israelites listen as he reasoned with them of the righteous acts of the Lord (v. 7).
3. Through Moses and Aaron the Lord delivered the Israelites from the Egyptian bondage (v. 8).
4. As soon as the chosen people began to prosper, they forgot the Lord (v. 9).
5. Their idolatry brought oppression from the enemy nations (v. 9).
6. Persecution usually brought the Israelites to a penitent attitude (v. 10).
7. As soon as His people returned to Him, God raised up those who delivered them from bondage (v. 11).
8. The people were given a king at their own request (v. 12).
9. Samuel told the Israelites that they and their king could have the continued blessings of the Lord by obeying His commandments (vv. 13, 14).
10. He also pointed out that their disobedience would bring curses upon them (v. 15).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. This lesson gives us an opportunity not only to review the history of Israel up to this point, but the opportunity to sum up some of the many lessons which may be learned from the history of the nation.

God has a plan for every life. This is brought out so vividly in the lives of Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and Saul. We can find the fullest measure of success and happiness only when we find God's will for our lives. However, it is possible to have God's blessings even upon the second best if we are faithful to His Word.

The history of Israel also shows the importance of Bible study. The Israelites were commanded to bind God's Word as frontlets before their eyes so that they would be constantly reminded to keep the words of the law. Joshua was given the promise that he would have good success if he followed the teachings of God's Word.

The psalmist said, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart that I might not sin against thee" (Psalm 119:11). Paul says, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts, to the Lord" (Colossians 3:16).

The importance of right choice is brought up again and again. Joshua begged the Israelites to make the choice of whom they would serve; this is a choice we have to make today. Will we serve the world with all of its enticements, or will we serve God?

Perhaps the greatest lesson of all to come from the history of the Israelites is the lesson of God's care for His people. Is it not marvelous the way God delivered them from Egyptian bondage, provided for them in the wilderness, and brought them to the promised land? Even when they were wicked and unworthy, God's mercy would supply every need. Even when the people murmured against Him, God provided.

"When the Israelites were dissatisfied, God sent them meat in abundance. But who is fully satisfied? To test this, an old man once put a sign in a vacant field saying, 'This lot to be given free to anyone who is completely satisfied in life.' A man riding by saw the sign and went in to claim the property. He was asked, 'Are you really satisfied in life?' He replied, 'I am well satisfied and have all I need in life.' The reply of the old man was, 'If you are completely satisfied, then why do you want this piece of property?' Some people are never satisfied with anything God does."—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

2. When Francis of Assisi was asked, "How can you accomplish so much?" he replied, "This may be why the Lord looked down from heaven upon the earth and said, 'Where can I find the weakest, the smallest, the meanest man on the face of the earth?' Then he saw ne and said, 'Now I've found him! I will work through him. He won't be proud of it. He will see that I am only using him because of his smallness and insignificance.'

Years ago a mighty earthquake rocked the city of Charleston, South Carolina. On that day an aged Negro was just beginning his sermon when the first tremor was felt. All in his congregation were silent for a moment. Then a second and mightier upheaval was felt. Lifting his eyes from his sermon notes the minister said, "God is now speaking! It is time for us to be silent before Him!"

George Whitefield prayed, "O Lord, give me souls, or take my soul!" Henry Martyn, kneeling on India's coral strands, cried out, "Here let me burn out for God!" David Brainerd sobbed, "Lord, to Thee I dedicate myself. Accept me and let me be Thine forever. Lord, I desire nothing else. I want nothing more!" Praying Hyde, missionary to India, pleaded, "Father, give me these souls or I die." John Hunt, missionary to the Fiji Islands, cried to God on his death bed: "Lord, save Fiji! Save Fiji! Save these people, O Lord! Have mercy upon Fiji! Save Fiji!"

"Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence" (Is. 62:6). "For as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children" (66:8).

Years ago Bishop Hedding asked the following searching questions of a volunteer for the foreign mission field: "Have you considered that you will have to go away from home and friends and live among strangers and enemies?" "I have," said the young man. "Have you considered that you will be a foreigner in a strange land where many will regard you with suspicion and prejudice?" "I have considered it all," he answered. "Have you considered that your health may fail and that you may be stricken with a fatal disease?" "Yes," he replied, "and if I had a thousand lives I would give them all to Jesus. Please don't ask me any more questions, but send me! Send me!"—Bible Expositor.

3. Good teachers know the value of using visual aids such as filmstrips in their teaching. Imagine that we have a projector here shining on a screen. Suppose we prepare a flimstrip based on Hebrews 11, with the great heroes of the faith shown in succession on the filmstrip. What an inspiring lineup of pictures we would have. Let the projector lamp represent God.

Because these heroes were faithful, light from God has illuminated their lives and in a sense projected them upon a screen so that the world may see and give God the glory. Unfortunately not all of God's people have given such a clear testimony of their faith. The Israelites were often so rebellious that they obscured God's love and concern for the world. But in spite of this the power of God is so great that even distorted lives may be projected upon the screen so as to teach valuable lessons. The Israelites, desiring a king so that they could be like their neighbors, rejected Samuel and, in effect rejected God too. But even though the people rejected God, He has used their later history to teach us valuable lessons.

While God did not approve of the people's motives for wanting a king, He choose one who could make a good king. But He still held the people responsible to Him (1 Samuel 12:14).

Today we can look at these pictures from the past and learn valuable lessons. We can learn that God punishes disobedience. But we can also learn that He offers forgiveness to the penitent. Above all, we can learn that all of us are responsible to God.

outstanding importance to the child of God in his every way of life. They major in minors and minor in majors, going to the extreme in the support of many pet peeves and old grudges which take up time needed in promoting the kingdom, praying selfishly, and requesting others to pray or vote in general church meetings for a selfish cause in which they hope to attain unto worldly prestige so as to call attention to the world of their high achievements.

Many Christians exhibit themselves in manners obnoxious as did Nebuchadnezzar when he said, ". . . Is not this great Babylon, that I have built . . ." (Daniel 4:30). One would never think from what some professed Christians say and do that God had any part in building or developing their life of service and devotion; they strut themselves like a peacock in displaying their importance. That kind of behavior is just as worldly or fleshly as can be. I am among those who condemn the public dance and movie, but those who attend these are not all the worldly people. Some preachers brag on their own good preaching, perhaps nonchalantly, so much that no one else in their presence has opportunity or time to comment on it. Some soul winners are so proud of and brag on their own success so much that no other sees, hears, or knows of anything to brag on. Other Christians are so pugilistic in attitude and expression that they forget to fight the enemy, the devil, while they seek to tear down or destroy a fellow Christian. There is a place in the experience of a true Christian to exhort, to rebuke, and finally to sever relations with a brother that persists in worldly conduct; but none have a right to do this except in keeping with the whole of the teaching of the Bible on the subject. Remember Romans 12:14-21; Ephesians 4:30, 31; 1 John 3:14-18.

It would be hard to convince a true believer who knows and practices what the Bible teaches that one is a matured Christian who generally displays himself as a professional pugilist. That of course does not mean that he should not fight sin anywhere and anytime the opportunity comes. He must do this in its every form; but when he does this in a Christ-like way, he will not be bragging in a way to call attention to himself. He will do it with tears in his voice and regret in his heart.

In short, then, one who is a Christian should attend no social functions that are of a worldly nature; neither should he display worldly tendencies in Christian assemblies. (See Luke 22:24-26.) If there is an abiding question as to whether or not things under consideration are of a worldly nature, the saint should stay away from them until he has sufficient facts for the Spirit to convince him that his attending such a social function will not displease his Lord or damage his testimony. The Bible tells us: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Corinthians 10:31). A Christian's new nature harmonizes with this. (See Ephesians 4.30, 31). This may seem hard and too binding for the so-called worldly Christian, but never to the one who is indeed crucified to the world and the world to him. Such a Christian will so live as to form fixed habits that cause him to refrain from careless gossip, uncanny jokes, vain expressions, and whatever else in his daily conduct that might hinder him from exemplifying Christ. Instead of taking any name of the Trinity in vain, his heart and lips will overflow with praise and gratitude to Christ for his redemptive work on Calvary.

they knew that I loved them, so they seemed to love me back."

Miss Brighton said, "Kindness and love toward God's creatures, which includes people, too, is one of the most worth-while things any boy or girl can learn."

Let Us Not Forget to Pray

TAMMY DELL ROGERS
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

We are living in the atomic age,
And in Life's book we turn a page;
As the sun goes down, we have lost a day,
If somehow we forget to pray.

We really don't have to worry and fret,
As God extends our time, and yet
We find all kinds of time to play;
But sometimes, I fear we forget to pray.

The whole world moves at such a pace,
Just living, it seems, has become a race;
When the cares of the day, we put away,
Please, let's not forget to pray.

When the Master sees fit to call us home,
When He sits in judgment, as we stand alone,

How many of us then will have to say,
"Oh, I wish I hadn't forgot to pray"?

First Blackout

A radio report stated that Egypt had had its "first" blackout. But this was not strictly correct. Egypt's very first blackout is recorded in the Bible—Exodus 10:22. It reads:

"And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days."—Maritime Baptist.

"I am writing to you in hopes that through our Free Will Baptist paper we might be able to help Mrs. Ruby Ferrell, widow of one of our deceased ministers, Brother Bunn Ferrell. For the past three years, Mrs. Ferrell has had to get blood transfusions at regular intervals, and at the present she is having to get four pints of blood every two weeks.

"Mr. Ferrell was well known and highly respected by those who knew him and I feel sure that some of the members of churches that he pastored, throughout Nash, Wilson, and Johnston counties, and maybe others, would count it a privilege to be able to donate some blood for Mrs. Ferrell.

"Anyone wishing to help should go to Park View Hospital in Rocky Mount and state that you wish to give blood for Mrs. Ferrell. This blood will be held in reserve until such time as it is needed. Any type of blood can be used.

CONVENTION PLEDGES GREATER SUPPORT

The North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists in its fifty-second annual session, meeting at Wilson on September 16, 1964, pledged itself to greater efforts and dedication in the growth and expansion of its several institutions and enterprises. Never in the history of the Convention has such an effort been required of its churches.

The Convention adopted the report of the Children's Home which officially launched the "Golden Anniversary Development Program." This program is to be executed during the period from September 1, 1964 through May 23, 1970—a six-year period. The goals to be reached by May 23, 1970 are: a Home properly equipped and adequately staffed to serve 100 children; a staff building to house staff members who need to live on campus, but who do not need to live in with the children; a new farm manager's home; a shop building; a boy's cottage for larger boys; a girl's cottage for larger girls; and other equipment and buildings as needed. In the field of public relations the program calls for "a constituency who fully understands and truly appreciates this ministry, an alert and loyal alumni, and the full confidence, respect, and cooperation of the business and professional community." The financial plans call for "an endowment adequate to guarantee the safety of this institution; a general fund income which would allow the Home to operate debt free; capital funds to provide necessary capital outlay, and a financial philosophy that is liberal enough to be progressive and conservative enough to be safe."

During each year of the program, dedications will be observed in which the Home will appropriately "recognize and honor those persons whose vision, dedication, efforts, and sacrifices have made this ministry a reality." The series of dedications will be climaxed on May 23, 1970 with a "Golden Anniversary Dedication Service," which will be held at the Home.

The Convention also approved the plans of Mount Olive College regarding its development program. The contractors have received a "notice to proceed on September 21 with construction of the first buildings" on the new 90-acre campus. These buildings include an academic building for 350 students and a dormitory complex for 132 students. These buildings are to be completed by September, 1965. When completed the campus will have a purchase price of $1,000,000. As acknowledged by Dr. W. Burkette Raper, this "is the most aspiring undertaking in the history of the denomination." The operating budget for the current fiscal year is $298,830. Free Will Baptists are called upon to contribute $60,650 to the general operating fund.

The Convention also adopted the proposed budget of the board of missions which totals $50,000, with a total recommended monthly budget of $4,166.66.

The reports of the various auxiliaries and other enterprises were marked by renewed interest and zeal. We are made to rejoice as we observe the blessings of God upon North Carolina Free Will Baptists. Let us not believe, however, that the road ahead is easy. Let us not think that the time will come when we can sit back and take it easy. The years ahead will be years of testing. Free Will Baptists will be called upon to give more and to work harder; therefore, there must be dedication beyond that which we have ever known before. When we are tempted to murmur, let us remember that the time is short and that we must work while we have the opportunity, for the night will come when no man can work.

A message delivered to the students of Mount Olive College during Orientation.

TEXT: Philippians 2:1-11.

by CHARLES SAPP
of

The Department of Religion
Mount Olive, North Carolina

YOU have read, or will do so, in your student handbook this statement which I should like to spend just a few minutes to emphasize: "Mount Olive Junior College considers the development of a sound Christian philosophy of life and Christian character to be an integral part of its educational objective." Someone has wisely said, "The heart of education is the education of the heart."

You have the right to ask what we mean by a Christian philosophy of life. Philosophy is easy to define. It is a love of wisdom. In a very restricted and scientific sense, it is the science that investigates the facts and principles of reality and of human nature and conduct. It comprises logic, ethics, aesthetics, metaphysics, and the theory of knowledge, or epistemology.

This ridged definition will not apply to us in any definite sense, but what we learn in each phase of our academic life will undoubtedly help us to build a philosophy even though we are not consciously or systematically studying it as a course or discipline.

We hope you will learn that wisdom is more than knowledge. Wisdom has to do with the ability to judge soundly and deal magnificently with facts, especially as they relate to life and conduct. But when we have said this, we have not completely defined the purpose of Mount Olive College or what its design for you will be. Because all that I have said is prefaced by Christian, we regard as our highest responsibility helping you to obtain a philosophy from the Christian point of view; which is to say, that all we do as a college is Christocentric. We desire to enable you in building a Christian way of approaching life.

Without going into detail, but as a broad and general statement, this means that we will endeavor to present to you an approach to life that is more than religious; it will be Christ centered. You might very well ask me what is the difference.

Religion may be spoken of in this context as man's reaching up to God. It is his endeavor, whatever shape it takes, however systematic or inconsistent. The Christ-centered approach is different. Its basic understanding is that God is the one who reaches down to us. In a unique way God entered into our experience in Jesus Christ in order to show us who He is and what He can enable us to become if we will but let Him.

We do not deny that you can see God in other ways. We will urge you to look for Him in every experience. We trust you will see Him in the nature of the universe around you; in your personal relations with those who claim to know Him. His ways are seen in the science laboratory, in the history of mankind, and, more specifically, in man's treatment of man. We believe that the good that comes from close relationship with others is the result of His presence more than any merit we may possess personally. But we will insist that He designs to come to you if you will let Him. It is for this reason alone that Mount Olive College asks every student to take Old and New Testament to satisfy your requirements in religion. For we find in the books of the Testaments the record of God's entrance into human experience in the person of His Son. The Old Testament tells of the preparation that was made for this central event of history, and the New Testament tells of the results of this event in subsequent history. We hope you will see that history is our own history and that is why it is so important for us to understand it. You have been accustomed to dividing life into youth and old age with intervals that come in between, but perhaps a more realistic view of life sees man as he is before Christ and afterwards. If we do not learn how to live as Christians while we are here, we will depart this place of learning still B.C. men and women.

Most of us were reared in homes and perhaps in churches as well, or have otherwise developed an attitude toward religion and life that keeps the two separated. That is, we have compartmentalized our faith so that it does not get in the way of our life. Christianity by its very nature must be an integral part of the whole of life. Jesus said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, soul, and strength." It will be our prayer and the aim of all we do to assist you in realizing this in your college life—hoping that what you learn here will carry over into your total life's experience. We want God to become a reality to you, a real person, who is not only interested in your performances here in this academic situation, but who wants to participate in the whole of your existence. He is not finished with you when you have attended chapel and other worship services faithfully and punctually. You must come to see the Lord searching out your life. His hand is upon you, and you cannot lightly shake Him away.

As a Christian school we have provided for you certain opportunities which are designed to encourage your spiritual life. They are the study of the Bible, chapel attendance, Sunday school, worship, Sunday evening fellowship, prayer

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

LIGHT AND LIFE

"I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness" (John 12:46)

"That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:9).

In the two previous meditations we were thinking of Christ as the source—the only source—of eternal life. This week we will think of Christ as the source—the only source—of spiritual light to those who have obtained from Him eternal life. This is abundantly true because He is, always has been, and ever will be, the only true Light.

In the dark and sinful world in which we live, we need "the true Light" to give us light in order that we may know how to live for Him and serve Him. In John 8:12 Jesus said, ". . . I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." That I may stress with the greatest possible emphasis the last words of Christ in this verse, let us notice that He said, "he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

The follower of Christ encounters trouble, as Peter did, when he follows afar off. We, as he did, begin to sink or drift away from Christ when we take our eyes off Him. With Peter it was the wind and waves caused by the boisterous storm. With so many today it is the pleasures of life, business, social activities, home, neglect or self-righteousness. When any of these, and many more things, or any combination of them, come between us and Christ, the light He wants to give is blotted out and we walk in darkness.

John said in his First Epistle, "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). Here, as in so many other Bible passages, the writer has reference to the Christian's daily life. In all cases the assurances are that the true Light who gave spiritual life, also gives daily spiritual light and guidance to His followers.

Isaiah, looking down through the ages to the coming of Christ and beyond into the dispensation of grace when we would be living our Christian lives by faith in the true Light, said, "The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory" (Isaiah 60:19).

As Simeon was praising God for blessing him with life to see the infant Christ, he said of Him, "Lord, now let test thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, While thou hast prepared before the face of all people; A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel" (Luke 2:29-32).

Charles Simeon, writing on this subject, said, "If at any time, through temptation or distress, this light burns dim he cries to his Lord and Saviour, who has promised to send him fresh supplies of his Spirit; and speedily does 'light arise to him in his obscurity, and his darkness becomes as the noon-day.' Thus guided through his whole life, he arrive at last at those blessed regions, 'where the Lamb is the light,' and where 'his Lord shall be an everlasting light, and his God his glory.'

"You can easily conceive the difference both in the feeling and the safety of one that walks in midnight darkness and of one that travels in the light of the noon-day sun. O that all would make a just application of this thought to their own case, and resolve without delay to become followers of Christ."

". . . and Christ shall give thee light" (Ephesians 5:14).

There are too many homes in America that have no standards, no high level of spiritual and moral living to which to summon the growing mind. In these secular homes, there is not enough to live up to, and too much to live on.—

YOUTH, BE READY

attended the funeral of a young man today who was instantly killed in a car wreck. He was so young to die—just twenty years of age. Seemingly, he should have lived fifty or sixty years longer, or more. So far as I know he left no testimony behind that he was ready to go, although the minister who spoke of his life and sudden departure seemed to hold out some hope of his eternal welfare.

While sitting in the church for the funeral, I thought of this message: "Youth, Be Ready." Then my mind went to this Scripture: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them" (Ecclesiastes 2:1). O that this text could register in the heart, mind, soul, and life of every youth of our country today, and all over the world! Remember God while young. Don't shut Him out of your life and let everything else keep you out of heaven.

Death comes oftentimes so suddenly and unexpectedly. Hence the great, great importance of being ready. Young people die as well as the old. There is no like period free from death. It comes to all classes, all ages, all colors, creeds, and kinds of people. However, by carelessness, thoughtlessness, useless adventure, recklessness, terrific driving, and in various other ways, people often hasten themselves into eternity ahead of the allotted time, I think.

I am sure there is a great tendency on the part of the majority of our youth today to neglect their soul's salvation. They think that, since they are in the very bloom of youth they have many years to live yet. They likewise think they can enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, and then go out in future years, of life and seek God and be saved. This is perhaps the greatest mistake that millions of our youth are making today. If they could just see and realize this, I think life to multitudes of them would be so different. They would first make sure, as much as possible, that they are remembering God, that they are heeding His commandments, that they are depending upon Him as their leader and guide through life, and that their soul's welfare is put first of all things; and they would want to help all their youthful friends, associates, classmates, roommates, and all others to live for God and reach heaven.

However, I feel sure that the vast majority of our youth today are thinking of everything else more than they think of salvation and everlasting life. Multitudes are bent on getting an education, which costs them years of study and maybe lots of money. They think of getting married and having a nice home in which to live; of having a fine automobile in which to ride; of filling some monied position so that they can have plenty of money with which to buy everything their hearts desire; of keeping up with the styles and fashions of the day; of standing high in society; and of becoming quite popular, or even famous, though apart from God and His righteousness and holy approval.

But, dear youth, let me speak to you from my heart. You never know what a day may bring forth. Today you may be well and strong and may be making your plans for tomorrow. However, please remember this: Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James 4:14). Jesus said, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matthew 6:33). In other words, Christ is telling you to be ready for anything that may happen today or tomorrow, lest being out of God's will, and unsaved, you lose your soul.

The height of all wisdom is to be a Christian and ready for our call from time to eternity. This applies to the youth as well as the old and decrepit. Whatever you may be aiming for, dear youth, or whatever your plans and purposes may be in life, the only safe thing is to live for God now and at all times. This is indeed sensible, reasonable, possible, commendable, and worthwhile. I'm sure God's holy Word bears this out.

What if you do miss some things the world offers you? What if you do have to turn from the thrills the devil offers you if you will follow and serve Him? What if some people turn up their noses at you, turn their backs to you, scoff and shun you? What if you do miss the ungodly dance, the wild parties where they drink beer and liquor, smoke and commit adultery? After all, what are you missing? Simply this: you are missing the way hellward; missing a wrecked and ruined character, possibly; missing heartaches and remorse that sin would bring to you, to your home, to your husband and children, or to your wife and children out in future years. Think of it! O may God help you to think! Not only that, but act on what God enables you to think. He knows best what you should do, how you should live, and what is in store for you if you live for Him, or against Him.

Yes, be wise, act wise, live wise. Prepare in early life for all that the future years may hold in store for you as a noble Christian. Then you can say with the psalmist: "Bless the LORD, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; Who giveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy mouth is renewed like the eagle's" (Psalm 103:1-5).

Oh, that I could take you into my confidence, dear youth, as a father, as an old-time minister of the gospel, and help guide your feet to the Celestial City! Anyway, I hope and pray to meet you there.

Strain and Stress Are Needed

Dr. Paul Dudley White, world-renowned heart specialist, said, "Physical and mental stress are needed to live a normal life. A 40-hour workweek is probably too little for healthy humans. We spend so much time trying to entertain ourselves in our leisure time that we are probably less culturally adapted than were our grandparents, who, fortunately for them, did not have automobiles and television—they walked and read. Our important challenge today is to begin with our children. Get them to walk to school again, and not get overfed as so many of our teenagers are. If we don't—well the handwriting is on the wall!"

In speaking of retirement, Dr. White said, "It is ridiculous to think that one must retire at middle age which should extend to 70 or perhaps even longer. Many intelligent leaders in every walk of life think nothing of continuing in their 70's to row, play tennis, climb mountains or walk many miles daily."

When we cease to be tense, we become past tense.—W. B. Knight.

Special Services Announced for Northeast

The Northeast Original Free Will Baptist Church at Mount Olive, North Carolina, extends a cordial invitation to friends near the church to attend revival services. The Rev. C .F. Bowen, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church in Wilson, will be the evangelist for this series to begin on September 28. The services will feature special music, choir singing, and a children's time. Each service will begin at 7:30 p.m., preceded by a prayer band at 7:00 o'clock.

Revival services end on Saturday night, but a special homecoming will be observed on Sunday, October 4. All former pastors, former members, present members, and friends of Northeast are invited. A special feature will be a church loyalty offering just prior to the lunch hour. Each person will have opportunities to make a gift, enjoy fellowship, renew friendships, and share a picnic lunch.

The pastor, H. A. Grubbs, joins the church in offering a cordial welcome to all friends to attend all services.

Revival and Homecoming At People's Chapel

Revival services will be held at People's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Elm City, North Carolina, September 27—October 3, with the Rev. Fred A. Rivenbark of Durham as the guest evangelist. The services will begin each evening at 7:45.

On Sunday, October 4, Mr. Rivenbark will deliver the morning message for the fourth annual homecoming service of the church. Following the eleven o'clock service, a picnic lunch will be served on the church grounds. During the afternoon there will be a song service with various singing groups participating.

The pastor, the Rev. Swade Benson, and the church extend a cordial invitation to everyone to attend these services and request your prayers for their success.

Dr. Raper to Deliver Homecoming Message

Dr. W. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive College, will be the guest speaker for the homecoming services at Arapahoe Free Will Baptist Church, Arapahoe, North Carolina, Sunday, September 27. The church extends a cordial invitation to all its friends to attend these services.

Officers Elected for Western District Youth Rally

At the August meeting of the Youth Rally of the Western District held at Little Rock Free Will Baptist Church, Lucama, North Carolina, new officers for the year, September 1964—September 1965, were elected. They are as follows: president, DeWayne Eates; vice-president, Linda Godwin; secretary, Margaret Pittman; treasurer, Gail Jones; chorus leaders, Jimmy Wooten and Hilda Pittman. The time for the rally to meet was changed from 8 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Each Free Will Baptist church in the Western District is urged to attend these services; the next one will be held on September 26 at St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Lucama, North Carolina. At this meeting the St. Mary's church will present a pageant entitled, "I Dreamed I Searched Heaven for You."

State Convention Well Attended

The North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, meeting at Wilson on September 16, 17, recorded a total registration of nearly 450 ministers and delegates, with more than that number attending as visitors. This number fell slightly below that of last year's jubilee session which was held at Memorial Auditorium in Raleigh.

The special missions service on Wednesday evening was attended by approximately 700 persons. A missions offering was received in the amount of $3,891.16. The Rev. and Mrs. James Lanier, missionaries from the Arizona-Mexico Missions appeared on the program, along with several ministers who are serving at various mission churches in the state. The Rev. Fred A. Rivenbark, pastor of the Sherron Acres church, and a member of the missions board delivered the message during the service.

The introductory sermon was delivered on Wednesday morning by the Rev. Willis Wilson, pastor of Reedy Branch church, Winterville. The Convention sermon was delivered by the Rev. Lloyd Vernon of Richlands.

Contributions to the Convention as listed on the annual report blanks totaled more than $2,030. More than $750 was received for the Paul Palmer Endowment Fund at Mount Olive College. The offering for the Children's Home, which was received during the Wednesday morning session, was $334.93. The offering for Mount Olive College on Thursday morning was $400.

Resolutions were adopted which called upon the "administrative board of the International Convention of Original Free Will Baptists to consider the return of the word fellowship to the name of the organization in the place of the word convention"; the executive committee was instructed to "advise companies publishing information of the errors and furnish them with correct information." This resolution was presented and adopted in view of the incorrect and incomplete information which was printed in Britannica Year Book, 1963, and Yearbook of American Churches, 1964, regarding the State Convention and the National Association.

The following officers were elected for the next two-year term: president, the Rev. Walter Reynolds; vice-president, the Rev. J. W. Everton; secretary, the Rev. C. H. Overman; assistant secretary, Oscar Webster; treasurer, Rom W. Malard; members of the executive committee, the Revs. Melvin K. Everington, Robert May, and Frank R. Harrison.

The Convention extended a rising vote of thanks and appreciation to the retiring officers, and especially to the former president, the Rev. C. L. Patrick. The 1965 session of the Convention will be held at the Children's Home.

Raymond Hardison to Conduct Ephesus Revival

The Rev. Raymond Hardison will be the evangelist for revival services to be held at Ephesus Free Will Baptist Church, Beaufort County, North Carolina, September 28 through October 3. The church and the pastor invite the public to attend these services.

Homecoming at Mt. Zion Church

The Mt. Zion Free Will Baptist Church in Nash County, North Carolina, announces homecoming services for Sunday, September 27. The day's activities will begin with Sunday school at 10 a.m., followed with the homecoming message by the pastor, the Rev. R. N. Hinnant, at eleven o'clock. A picnic lunch will be served on the church grounds at the noon hour. In the afternoon a song service will be held directed by the pastor. All singers who will be invited to come and participate in this service.

The pastor and the church membership invite all former pastors, members, and friends to attend all services and enjoy the fellowship together.

Revival in Progress at Hickory Grove Church

On Sunday, September 20, the Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Bethel, North Carolina, observed its annual homecoming with the pastor, the Rev. Hubert Burress, bringing the message, followed with a picnic lunch on the church grounds at the noon hour. Then that night revival services began which will continue through Saturday night, September 26. The Rev. C. D. Pierce, pastor of Winterville Free Will Baptist Church, is the evangelist. Services are beginning each evening at 7:45. The public is invited to attend the remainder of these services.

Revival in Progress at Daly's Chapel Church

Revival services began at Daly's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church near LaGrange, North Carolina, Monday evening, September 21, and will continue through Saturday evening, September 26. The Rev. Robert Fader of Kinston is the evangelist. The pastor, the Rev. J. Walter Stanley, and the church invite everyone to attend the remainder of these services.

On Sunday, September 27, the church will observe its annual homecoming with a picnic lunch served at the noon hour. The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

James Webster Ordained For the Ministry

The Trinity Free Will Baptist Church, Pantego, North Carolina, was the scene Tuesday, September 8, for the ordination service of the Rev. James N. Webster, a member of the church. The service was very impressive, and many who attended said it was the first time that they ever saw anyone ordained for the ministry.

The Rev. A. B. Chandler, pastor of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church at Pinetown, North Carolina, gave the charge, taking his text from the first chapter of Ezekiel. The Rev. Charlie Overton from Ahoskie presented the Bible; and the Rev. Willis Wilson, pastor of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church, Winterville, North Carolina, prayed the dedication prayer.

Mr. Webster's wife is the former Miss Winifred Averett, a member of the Reedy Branch church. They are both dedicated Christians ready to do or go wherever the Lord may lead.

The church states: "We pray God's richest blessings upon them and that they will always be found faithful to His calling."

St. Mary's Church to Host Western Conference

The seventy-eighth annual session of the Western Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina will be held with the St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church, Wilson County, on October 14 and 15. In convening with the St. Mary's church, the Western Conference will be returning to the place of its organization.

At its annual session in 1886, the General Conference passed an order granting the churches of its western portion permission to organize themselves into a separate conference. The provisions of this order were as follows:

"First, that the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad be the dividing line between the two conferences, provided that any church on either side of said road may represent in either conference at its option.

"Second, no changes shall be made in our book of discipline, without the concurrence of three fourths of both conferences."

In keeping with the above provisions the ministers and delegates assigned to the new conference met with the church at St. Mary's, Wilson County, on October 20, 1887, and organized the Western Conference. There were 19 ministers and 26 churches represented in the first session.

The pastor and members of St. Mary's are looking forward to having the conference convene with them this year.

Undisturbed

A certain man carried on a big business in the heart of London. As most businessmen do, he selected a telegraphic address to which the many "wires" connected with his business were to be addressed. And what do you think it was? It was this: "Undisturbed, London." And he lived up to it, too. No matter how worrying his work, in his heart all was calm, for he possessed the peace which Jesus bequeathed to His disciples (John 14:1-3).—Selected.

MISSIONS

Matthew
18:19, 20

THE ACADEMY IN SESSION

by JOHN B. ELLISTON

This morning, September 14, at 9:00 a.m., we invoked God's blessings on this term of the Nogales Academy as it began its fall term of the 1964-1965 school year. We had our hopes fulfilled that we could begin classes today, although we haven't yet completed all the things which we needed to do before school began. It was necessary for us to defer some of the courses in the Ministerial Training School until next semester because we were unable to buy all the necessary books so that we could begin at this time. However, we have hopes that we shall be able to procure the necessary books by the spring semester.

Inasmuch as many of our students had their spirits dampened somewhat by our postponing the opening of the school, after it had been announced quite widely to open on August 31, many of our students will be somewhat tardy in attending classes, waiting to see if we actually did begin today. However, a large number of students were on hand to help us get the classrooms arranged, books distributed, etc. Due to our limited help we must depend to a great extent upon help from the students. You all realize that there are only three of us to do all the work of preparation, teaching, etc., while continuing our missionary activities in Mexico, and the care of the church here in Nogales, Arizona.

Had it not been for the mercy of God in permitting Miss Barbara Becton to remain here this fall, it would have been impossible for us to have the school as we now have it. It is barely possible with her help. Without it, I am sure that it would be impossible to continue the school this year. Otherwise there would be no one but Sally and me to carry all the load.

We earnestly covet your prayers that the school may be operated to the glory of God, and that He will supply all the needs. Our need for sponsors of students is very great. We trust that very soon we can publish the list of students with their sponsors, and the list of students who are unsponsored. In the meantime you can pray that God will stir the hearts of some to sponsor. The cost to sponsor a student is twelve dollars ($12) per month, but it is quite possible to sponsor in part with six dollars, four dollars, or any amount.

Another great blessing which we received today was a check in the amount of two hundred dollars ($200) for the purchase of two one hundred dollar bonds. This is a great blessing, for now we can rough in the plumbing in the Memorial Building, and prepare to pour the concrete floor. Naturally, we cannot pour the floor until we receive more money, but it is a great blessing to be able to prepare for this. Please pray that other persons may be moved to invest some of their savings in this building program by purchasing bonds. When the Memorial Building is completed, I am sure that this property could command a price of more than fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) if we wished to sell it. There is no doubt that bond purchases in Arizona-Mexico Missions is a sound investment, while at the same time promoting missions.

We would not wish to seem to ignore those who have sent contributions to the memorial fund, or for other phases of the work. It is all very deeply appreciated. We especially appreciate the money sent simply to the general fund. This money can be used wherever needed. May God bless all of you as you give and as you pray for the work here.

"Pass up those back seats. They are not for you. They are for the late, the indifferent, the visitors, the parents of tiny babies. You are not a spectator anyway."—Fletcher Spruce.

When Gypsy Smith Was Converted

William J. Hart

Cornelius Smith, father of the great evangelist, Gypsy Rodney Smith, became greatly impressed with his need of salvation. On one of his journeys, he camped at Shepherd's Bush, and attending a service in a mission hall, he heard the people sing Cowper's stirring hymn: There is a fountain filled with blood Drawn from Immanuel's veins;

And sinners, plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains.

The chorus ran:

I do believe, I will believe,
That Jesus died for me,
That on the cross He shed His blood
From sin to set me free.

Soon the father, who was seeking salvation, exclaimed, "I am converted!" Reaching home, he told his motherless children what had happened, placed his arms around the five of them, kissed them, and fell on his knees and began to pray. That first prayer was never forgotten; and many years afterward Gypsy Smith said: "I still feel its sacred influence on my heart and soul." The next morning the converted man was pleading with others, and 13 Gypsies professed to find Christ that day.

When Gypsy Smith was a little older, he attended a service in a Primitive Methodist Chapel in Cambridge, and a prayer meeting followed the sermon. When an invitation was given, the Gypsy lad went forward. By a coincidence, the congregation sang the chorus which was sung when his father was converted:

I do believe, I will believe,
That Jesus died for me,
That on the cross He shed His blood
From sin to set me free.

There and then he trusted in Christ, and from that time he rejoiced in Him as his Saviour.—The Elim Evangel.

The story of this amazing man George Muller is full of paradoxes. In a sense he is inimitable, but it is also true, as he himself constantly asserted, that what he did others may do, if they too look for answers to their prayers.—Nancy Garton in George Muller and His Orphans (Fleming H. Revell Company).

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

Because of the fact that we are hearing in many testimonies words like these: "I thank God that He saved me, sanctified me, and baptized me with the Holy Ghost," and because those people, or most of them, claim that these things occurred at different times, I am compelled to write to let Free Will Baptists know that this is not a theology or a belief of Original Free Will Baptists; so we hope that as our readers read this message that they will grasp the truth as set forth in the Word of God.

THE PROMISE BY JOEL

"And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit" (Joel 2:28, 29). This promise was made also by Christ to the believers while He was here on earth: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26). May we note that the Holy Ghost was to come when Jesus spoke these words. Christ taught that the Holy Ghost was given to those who met the condition in asking: "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" (Luke 11:13). Thus the individual who feels his need of the Holy Ghost can get that need supplied by asking our heavenly Father.

Christ tells us more about the Holy Ghost in John 16:7-11. He says: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: Of sin, because they believe not on me; Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more; Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged." I call your attention to the personal pronouns used by Jesus in these verses. Jesus says, "I will send him." Also, the pronoun he is used twice in Verse 8. Thus Jesus tells us that the Holy Ghost is a person. In Ephesians 4:30 the writer says, ". . . grieve not the holy Spirit of God . . ." This also tells us that the Holy Ghost is a person. You cannot grieve an influence, but you can grieve a person. There are people who believe they influence theology. Again we refer you to John 14:26. From that verse we learn that the Holy Ghost is the Comforter and He teaches us all things and brings to our remembrance what Jesus said.

THE PROMISE OF HIS FULFILLED

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:1-4). The people had to be of one accord for the Holy Ghost to come. We, the church, can only be comforted by the Holy Spirit when we are in one accord. Notice that they were sitting, the sound filled the house, and the Holy Spirit filled the people.

NOTICE THE DIFFERENT NATIONALITIES

"And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galilaeans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?" (Acts 2:5-8). There were 17 or 18 nationalities represented, and they all heard and understood in their own language. This is often spoken of as the gift of tongues, but we believe that it was the gift of hearing. They all heard and understood. It was not an "unknown tongue." It was a language that everybody understood.

WHEN THE GOSPEL WENT TO THE GENTILES

Cornelius was visited by an angel who informed him that God had heard his prayers and that he should send to Joppa and find one Simon, whose surname was Peter. So Cornelius sent two of his servants to Joppa to invite Peter to appear at the home of Cornelius to tell him about what to do to be saved. Peter obeyed the Holy Spirit and went to see Cornelius. Now here is what Peter said about the Holy Spirit and the results of his preaching: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost" (Acts 11:15, 16). The beginning here was Pentecost when the believers were baptized into one body. Now the household of Cornelius was saved and baptized into Christ as the Pentecost for the Gentiles. Now listen as Peter continues to speak: "Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God? When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life" (Acts 11:17, 18). Let us notice that Peter said, "Then I remembered." What did Jesus say when He promised the Comforter? He said, "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." When Peter saw what was done to Cornelius and his household, the Holy Spirit jogged his memory to the fact that this was the baptism of the Holy Ghost with salvation. This proclaims the fact that these Gentiles were saved and baptized at the same time. From the salvation received by the household of Cornelius to now, and unto the end of the age, the requirement of faith in Jesus Christ is needed to be baptized.

HOW ABOUT A SECOND WORK?

The experience received by the church in Acts does not teach a second work. The Christians, as they were later called, now faithful believers and true disciples, were called into court by the enemies of Christ and threatened and warned not to preach any more in the name of Jesus Christ, "And being let go, they went to their own company, and

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: I understand from previous answers to questions that you object to fairs and socials as means to raise money to support the work of a church. Why? What is your objection based on? Why may such functions not be carried on in the church building? Also I would like for you to give your scriptural reason for objecting to gymnasiums, reading rooms, and other institutional features in connection with the church building.—Mrs. Clyde Ballenger, North Carolina.

ANSWER: I grant you that there is variety in Christian opinion on these questions, but I will also contend that we must evaluate opinion here on the bases of its scriptuality because of the fact that we are encountered with many groups and individuals whose activities and behavior are not in tune with the whole of the teaching of the Word of God. We cannot and we must not agree with them or act with them unless this action be completely controlled by the whole of what God's authoritative Word teaches us on this subject.

I can see no objection to ladies doing sewing, embroidery work, making pottery goods, and selling the products at a fair price in a legitimate way and giving the money to help pay church expenses; but the average church fair, etc., that I have heard of is not so simple and is not usually conducted with such features as their final or ultimate purpose. I have heard of frivolous, worldly, and even sensual activities being featured at these. In some instances storekeepers have been high pressured into contributing the materials and visitors into paying unfair prices for the products. This is never in line with all that the Bible teaches; therefore, such lowers the standards of conduct and dignity of the church and hurts its testimony. The church building should be dedicated to the worship service of the Lord, and in most cases it has been ceremonially presented to Him for this purpose. That means it must be limited to that use if we are true to the covenant entered into in this dedication. Why give God something for a sacred purpose and then prove to be an Indian giver by confiscating it to use it for a secular purpose. (See Acts 5:1-10.)

Dr. James M. Gray, in his book Bible Problems Explained in an answering a similar question has the following to say on Page 44: "If it is right to hold them at all, it can hardly be wrong, according to Protestant ideas of sacred places to hold them anywhere that may be found convenient, and yet even the most pronounced iconoclasts as to churchly veneration dislike to see and hear the concomitant of a bazaar in the same room where they are accustomed to meet to worship God in other ways and at other times."

You will note that he does not affirm that such has any place anywhere in the active life of a Bible-obeying Christian, but rather that, if Christians do something in line with the Word of God and the church, it is appropriate to do it in the church building. It is my understanding that unless we are endeavoring in everything in every way to conform in assuming ourselves to be, or in calling ourselves Christians, it is not appropriate to do. To be a Christian is to be Christlike, and to be Christlike is to act toward Him and what He said as He acted toward the heavenly Father while He was here in the likeness of the flesh. (See John 15:10; 1 John 2:3-6, 24.)

I believe that the fact that some sincere born-again, blood-washed Christians in our denomination think of means they have heard of another church using to secure funds for some needy purpose may be the reason why some Free Will Baptists resort to this and purpose such aids to financial help desiring the worldly, carnally, thrilling benefits, socially or otherwise connected with them. If and when this is the case we may be sure that the devil takes double toll. (See Revelation 18:4, 5; 1 Corinthians 6:14-18; 1 John 2:15-17.)

QUESTION: Why should Free Will Baptists object to infants being baptized when Jesus himself declared that "of such is the kingdom of heaven"?—R. I. Waterman, North Carolina.

ANSWER: Because it is our firm belief that baptism should always follow conversion. In our thinking it plays no part in salvation, but symbolizes that which is ours who accept the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ as the essentials to salvation; and when by faith we have been identified with Him in these, we are saved and should proclaim the wonderful news to a lost world as well as to the brethren by the means of this symbol. It is a happy occasion indeed for me when I see consecrated parents bringing their infant sons and daughters to be publicly dedicated to God as they, in renewed dedication, pledge themselves to the carrying out of the scriptural obligations the newly entrusted infant brings to them in their home.

Bringing an infant and thus dedicating him is neither baptism nor does it in anyway suffice for the teaching of the Scriptures concerning this sacred ordinance. Dedication of the infant by parents should follow the natural birth as closely as it is convenient for the parents. Baptism should follow the spiritual birth as closely as possible. Taking of the Lord's Supper and washing of the saints' feet should follow water baptism as closely as possible.

Words

Wilberforce, the great English preacher, said that Christianity could be condensed into four words: Admit, Submit, Commit, and Transmit. Let us use these four words in one sentence, expressing a great truth. When a man is ready to admit Christ into his life, and then submit himself to the will of Christ, commit his way unto the Lord, and transmit his knowledge to others, he puts himself in position to be of the largest possible service to God and humanity. Others are affected by what I am and say and do. And these others have also their sphere of influence. So that a single act of mine may spread in widening circles through a nation of humanity.—W. E. Channing.

STORIES

for our

BOYS and GIRLS

THE BUMPY BED

by Matilda Nordtverdt

MI, Mom!" Len said as he entered the kitchen. Without looking at his mother he hurried to his bedroom.

"What's wrong with Len?" mused Mother. "He's always in such a hurry lately and avoids looking at me. He seems to be hiding something underneath his coat, too."

The telephone rang and Mother went to answer it. By the time she was finished talking, Len had grabbed the cookies put out for him and run out to play. For the time being his mysterious behavior was forgotten.

Len was relieved when his mother had kissed him goodnight and snapped off the light that evening. At last he'd have a chance to read his comic books. Switching on his little flashlight he tunneled underneath his covers to the bottom of his bed. There they were!

Kneeling in his bed with covers making a tent over him, Len read one after another by the gleam of his flashlight. Some of the comics were funny and Len thought his mother wouldn't object too much to them, but the ones about crime and violence, well . . .

At last Len was so tired he had to go to sleep. Pushing his treasures down to the bottom of the bed he sank wearily on his pillow. His mind was so full of the exciting stories he had read he forgot all about his bedtime prayer.

Mother didn't notice the bumpy bed right away. Len always cleaned his own room on Saturdays, but during the week Mother would go in to dust up a little.

"Little boys never learn to make beds," she sighed as she tried to flatten out the bump. She pulled the blanket just underneath the bedspread, but the bump didn't budge.

"I suppose he's kicked his sheet down there," Mother said wearily.

A moment later she gaped with surprise when she saw what the bump was—comic books!

Sitting down on the edge of the bed she paged through a few. What she saw made her feel very sad. She didn't want her boy to be filling his mind with trash like this!

Mother bowed her head, "Lord, how can I help Len see that comic books like these are harmful to him?" she prayed. She sat quietly for a few minutes. Then she had her answer.

Putting the books back where they had been she pulled up the sheet and blankets, leaving the bumpy bed just as she had found it.

That afternoon Len entered the house in the same mysterious manner. This time Mother could see something bulging underneath his jacket, but she didn't say a word.

When Len came out of his room a few minutes later, Mother said, "Oh, Len, let's go fix your bumpy bed. I noticed it when I dusted."

"Oh, it's O.K., Mom."

"No," Mother insisted, "you're got to learn to make your bed without bumps."

"I'll do it myself then," offered Len uneasily.

"No, I'll help you," volunteered Mother leading the way to Len's room.

"What are you going to do?" he asked.

"Oh" I think we'd better take it all apart and start over," she suggested, starting to pull off the blankets.

"No, no!" cried Len. "Don't, don't!"

"Why, what's the matter, Len?" asked Mother innocently, "You don't want a bumpy bed, do you?"

With the next yank the comic books were exposed to view. Len hung his head in shame. He knew his mother had forbidden him to read them.

"Len," said Mother sternly, "where did you get these comic books?"

"From Skip," Len answered defensively. "He's got about a million, I guess, and he gave me some of his old ones."

"You take these books back to Skip right now, young man," Mother commanded, "or better still, put them in the incinerator."

Len knew his mother meant business. He quickly gathered up the books and started for Skip's.

When Len slipped into his place at the supper table, he noticed there was no plate set for him. How strange, he thought, just places for Dad, Mom, and Louise. Was his mother going to punish him by not giving him supper? The smell of the meatloaf tantalized Len.

Everyone sat down and grace was said. Len opened his mouth to tell his mother he had no plate, but before he could get the words out she did something very strange. Bringing the kitchen trash can over to Len she said nonchalantly, "Here's your supper."

Len looked at his mother in disbelief. "B-but, Mom, I can't eat this. There's potato peelings and egg shells and coffee grounds and everything."

"Go ahead and eat," insisted Mother.

"But I can't eat garbage," protested Len, close to tears, "It's all dirty and would make me sick!"

Mother came and took the trash can away, then sat down.

"You're right, Len, if you put dirty things in your stomach, you'll get sick. But what about your mind and heart? What happens when you fill them with dirty, trashy things?"

Len squirmed uncomfortably, remembering the comic books.

"When we look at and read about sinful things, our minds and hearts become unhealthy. That's even more serious than having a sick body."

Mother put a plate down in front of Len. Yes, he knew Mother was right. He hadn't really been happy since he'd started sneaking the comic books into his room.

"Mom," he pleaded when the others had left the table, "Will you forgive me? I'm going to ask Jesus to forgive me, too."

Christian Education

Two Development Dinners for College

Two benefit dinners for the Mount Olive College Development Fund will be held this week.

The Lenoir County dinner will be held Friday, September 25, 7:30 p.m., at King's Barbecue. The Rev. Melvin Everington of Deep Run is chairman of the county steering committee.

The Pamlico County benefit dinner will be held at the Masonic Hall in Bayboro on Saturday, September 26, 7 p.m. Mr. E. H. Holton of Vandemere is chairman of the Pamlico County steering committee.

Area Foundation September 29

The Mount Olive College Area Foundation will hold its first annual meeting on Tuesday, September 29, with a free barbecue dinner on the college campus. At 7 p.m., Mr. Bob Scott, candidate for Lieutenant Governor in North Carolina, will speak in the college auditorium on "The Role of Church-Related Colleges in the Educational Structure of North Carolina."

All friends of the college are invited to attend these activities.

Duplin County Plans Organizational Meet

An organizational meeting to plan the 1964 Duplin County Benefit Dinner for the Mount Olive College Development Fund will be held Monday, September 28, 7:30 p.m., in the Beulaville Free Will Baptist Church. President W. Burkette Raper will attend this meeting and discuss the proposed building program on the new campus.

Greene County Benefit Dinner

The Free Will Baptist churches of Greene County, North Carolina, have set Wednesday, November 11, as the date for their benefit dinner for the development fund of Mount Olive College.

Mrs. J. C. Moye of Snow Hill will serve as chairman of the county steering committee. Other members include Raeford Heath also of Snow Hill, Roy Forrest of Ayden, Jimmie Lee Jones of Farmville, and Mrs. H. L. Spivey of Maury.

Mrs. Moye reported that the county has accepted a goal of $7,500 for the dinner. The Greene County dinner is one of a series being held by Free Will Baptist churches throughout North Carolina to raise $100,000 for the building program on the new campus of Mount Olive College.

Practical Education

It seems that a young psychologist completed the work on his Ph.D. degree and joined the staff of a State University. He had a congenial personality and a good speaking voice, and soon was in much demand for speaking engagements in the area. His favorite speech was entitled "Ten Ways to Manage Your Children."

As usually happens, he met a young lady, they fell in love, and were married. After four or five years they had two children and the young psychologist was still in demand as a speaker. He still used the same speech, but had changed the title to "Ten Suggestions for Managing Your Children."

Another ten or twelve years passed and the children had grown to become teenagers. The not-quite-so-young psychologist was still making the same speech, except that he had again changed the title, now calling it, "Ten Questions on Managing Your Children."—Biblical Recorder.

Righteousness Without Works

William R. Newell

If God announces the gift of righteousness apart from works, why do you keep mourning over your bad works, your failures? Do you not see that it is because you still have hopes in these works of yours that you are depressed and discouraged by their failure? If you truly saw and believed that God is reckoning righteous the ungodly who believe on Him, you would fairly hate your struggles to be "better"; for you would see that your dreams of good works have not all commended you to God, and that your bad works do not at all hinder you from believing on Him, that justifieth the ungodly.

Therefore, on seeing your failures, you should say, I am nothing but a failure; but God is dealing with me on another principle altogether than my works—good or bad,—a principle not involving my works, but based only on the work of Christ for me. I am anxious, indeed, to be pleasing to God and to be filled with His Spirit; but I am not at all justified, or accounted righteous by these things. God, in justifying me, acted wholly and only on Christ's blood-shedding on my behalf.

Therefore I have this double attitude: first, I know that Christ is in heaven before God for me, and that I stand before God in the value of Christ's finished work; that God sees me nowhere else but in this dead, buried, and risen Christ, and that His favor is toward me in Christ, and is limitless and eternal. All the worth I have before Him is the value of the blood.

Then, second, toward the work of the Holy Spirit in me, my attitude is, a desire to be guided into the truth, to be obedient thereto, and to be chastened by God my Father if disobedient; to learn to pray in the Spirit, to walk by the Spirit, and to be filled with love for the Scriptures and for the saints and for all men.

Yet none of these things justifies me! I had justification from God as a sinner, not as a saint. My saintliness does not increase it, nor, praise God, do my failures decrease it.—Gospel Herald.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR OCTOBER 4

The Pastoral Epistles

LESSON TEXT: 1 Timothy 1:1-11

MEMORY VERSE: 1 Timothy 1:5

I. INTRODUCTION

This is the first of ten lessons to be taken from the Epistles in the New Testament that have, at least for a century, born the name, "The Pastoral Epistles"—1 and 2 Timothy and Titus. This distinguishes them from "The General Epistles" (James, Peter, John, and Jude), which were written to Christians in general, from others like Philippians and Colossians, which were addressed to certain churches or from personal Epistles such as Philemon.

These Epistles were written to men who had oversight of a Christian church. They contain some personal elements. However, they are of an official nature and designed to give guidance in church duty and care. They are, therefore, properly called "The Pastoral Epistles."

We need not doubt that these Epistles were written by the Apostle Paul in the last years of his life. In recent years, however, Paul's authorship has been questioned by some for the first time. The reason for this is perhaps the difficulty of finding a place for the writing of these Epistles in the life of Paul as it is recorded in the Book of Acts. In fact this is more than difficult; it is impossible for the historic and personal references contained in these letters show that they must have been written in a period subsequent to that treated by Luke in Acts. Luke closes his record of Paul's life with the mention of an imprisonment of two years' duration suffered by Paul in Rome. These Pastoral Epistles seem to reveal that Paul was later released, as he had expected; and that he continued his travels and has care of the churches.

One cannot determine definitely the exact order of events; but it seems that Paul, in resuming his missionary journeys, realized his expressed purpose of revisiting the churches in Asia Minor and possibly even journeyed to Spain. He went to Crete, where he left Titus to care for the infant church, and on his way to Macedonia he commissioned Timothy to take charge of the church at Ephesus. While on his way to Nicopolis he wrote this First Epistle to Timothy and the Epistle to Titus. Subsequently he was arrested, and from his dungeon in Rome he wrote the Second Epistle to Timothy. Soon after this Paul suffered the martyrdom which this last Epistle plainly foretold.

The purpose of this lesson for today is to help us in this generation to avoid the tragedy and futility of dissension and division in our churches.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul became an apostle of the Lord by the will and commandment of God (v. 1).

2. By leading Timothy to Christ, Paul considered him his son in the faith (v. 2).

3. Paul insisted that Timothy remain at Ephesus as a guard against unsound doctrine (v. 3).

4. No place is to be given to trivial things; the emphasis is to be on the gospel (v. 4).

5. Love is the acid test of one's relationship to God and his fellowmen (v. 5).

6. Many have turned aside from the truth to vain janglings (v. 6).

7. Some people desire to occupy places of responsibility when they are not willing to pay the price to become worthy of the office (v. 7).

8. The law is good when it is used for the purpose for which it was intended (v. 8).

9. The law does not lie against those who live for God, but it severely condemns the wicked (vv. 9, 10).

10. The law brings peace and good will among men and glory to God (v. 11).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Timothy was Paul's spiritual son Paul had won Timothy to Christ.

A policeman in Birmingham was joyously saved. At times he was greatly distressed by his continuous contact with sordid, sinful conditions. He earnestly prayed, "Lord, take me out of the police force. Give me some more congenial work." His prayer was unanswered—no other work opened to him. Finally he said to his wife, "I think I have been making a great mistake. I have been praying to be taken out of the police force. I am now beginning to believe that God has put me where I am to faithfully live for Him and witness to unsaved ones for Him."

That was the beginning of a new and joyous life for that policeman. His influence over his fellow officers was great. He had the joy of leading some of them to Christ. As he witnessed to lawbreakers and criminals, he won some of them, too, for Christ. Where God has put us is the place we can best witness for Him.

The Sunday School lesson was on Jesus' miraculous feeding of a hungry multitude with five loaves and two fishes. The teacher didn't believe in the literalness of the incident. She said, "Of course you will understand, children, that it does not mean that Jesus actually fed all those thousands with a few loaves and fishes. That would have been impossible. It only means that He so fed the people with His teaching that they forgot their bodily hunger and went home satisfied!" A thoughtful little girl asked, "But teacher, what was it that filled the twelve baskets of fragments left over?" "Let's not discuss that now," said the non-plussed teacher. Beware of allegorizing or treating God's Word as fable.

Years ago a traveler in China asked a native, "Have you ever heard the Gospel?" "No," he replied, "but I have seen it. There is a man in our village who was the terror of his neighborhood. He had a violent temper. He was an opium smoker, a criminal and a dangerous man. But the Gospel has made him gently and good. He no longer smokes opium. No, I have never heard the Gospel, but I have seen it and it is very good!"

As Tennyson passed the cottage of an aged lady, he asked, "What's the news this morning?" She replied, "Lord Tennyson, I know only one piece of news—the Good News of the Gospel, that Christ died for the sins of mankind!"

"That is old news, new news and good news," said Tennyson.

—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

2. Many people who drive like to belong to an automobile club. When they are planning a trip, they visit the club office to get travel information. There they will talk with people who have been on this trip and who know which roads are best. These experienced travelers will be able to indicate points of interest and good places to stop for the night. They probably have contact with automobile clubs in this area so that they know if there are detours or other hindrances.

Today we want to look rapidly over the pastoral letters of the New Testament. Here are people who have lived a Christian life, preached in many different places, worked with churches that have had various kinds of problems. These should serve as experts as we travel the Christian way.

Paul is, of course, a traveler quite capable of charting for us the course to follow, for he has finished the course. Note how he highlights important spots. Some of them are "charity out of a pure heart," "a good conscience," and "faith unfeigned." And he also calls attention to hindrances and detours, which may interfere with a faithful journey—"fables" and "endless genealogies."

As we read through these pastoral epistles, we find the way charted for people who live among unbelievers, for churches where there are disagreements and disputes, for young people trying to start living the Christian life, for church leaders, for individuals with personal problems. Each finds help in Paul's letters of experience and counsel.

—Standard Commentary.

3. The Word of God is a great blessing. Think how much it means to you personally and to the world as a whole. What a blessing! Yet this blessing carries with it a grave responsibility which we must not forget.

Paul was aware of the Church's responsibility with regard to the Word of God. So he instructed young Timothy not to be led astray by fables or false doctrines, but to faithfully preach the gospel of Christ.

"I am personally of the opinion that one of the causes of weakness in the churches today is the virtual disappearances from our pulpits of sound, steady, Scriptural, expository teaching, and that a widespread return to that desirable practice is essential to the solid building-up of our members in the faith. Here, then, are two fundamental items in the business of any church, or of its leaders—educating and edifying, and the two are really one. There are many other things that it is the church's business to do; but it is these particular duties that were incumbent upon the Ephesian teachers; and upon Timothy, who was to preside over them."—Guy H. King—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

I don't want to make my mind and heart dirty anymore."

"Of course I'll forgive you, Len," said Mother putting her arms around him. "From now on I hope you'll always choose good healthy food for your mind and heart instead of trash. Why don't we look for some right now?"

Len and his mother found several good, wholesome stories on his bookshelf. It would be cozy reading in the living room before the crackling fire with the rest of the family. Len turned at the door to look at his bed. It wasn't bumpy anymore!—My Pleasure.

Our Objective In Religious Education band, dormitory devotions, and Religious Emphasis Week.

We trust that these experiences will help you to come to know God yourself, and His purpose for you.

While determining what to say to you today, I looked over some of the things that have been said to other students like yourselves at this junction in earlier years at Mount Olive College. My research led me to believe that one of the statements made most frequently was by way of reminding students that fellowship with God is not a substitute for rigorous study and hard work. I think you will find that I too subscribe to that theory and do my best to practice it. We study because we are seeking truth. God is truth personified in Jesus Christ; therefore, we need not be afraid to seek the truth.

As you begin this search for truth, let me assure you of the interest, concern, and confidence the administration, faculty, and staff of the college place in you. Our prayers and hopes, as well as our labors, are investments in your future.

reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them. And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: . . . And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:23, 24, 31).

There is one baptism, but many fillings. In fact, we need to be filled and refilled to meet the threats of the enemies of the Church. The greatest need of the church today is a filling of the Holy Spirit. Satan is out with all his infidelity, with all his modernism, with all his churchanity, with all drunks and sex clubs; and the only way to meet these enemies is to have a Holy Ghost revival.

This message is in part a repetition of former writings, but I learned long ago that repetition is a good method of teaching. Jesus said, "Search the scriptures." Paul said, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15). Much confusion has been brought about by not dividing the Word according to the truth as planned by our Lord.

Jesus said ". . . Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). We believe that when we are born again we are baptized into Christ (baptism of the Holy Spirit). We are babes in Christ, and healthy babies grow; so we are to grow. How? We are to grow by praying, reading the Bible, working with Christ, and following the leadership of the Holy Spirit. Listen to this: "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen" (2 Peter 3:17, 18).

News Notes

Western Conference are urged to attend this session. Churches and union meetings are urged to be represented. Churches are entitled to one delegate for each one hundred members or fraction thereof, and union meetings are entitled to one delegate for each five hundred members or fraction thereof. Visitors are also invited to attend.

OBITUARIES

ROGER STOX

On September 5, 1964, God called Roger S. Stox to go beyond the sunset to be with Him in all His glory. Roger is beyond the hours of tribulations; beyond heartache, pain, and care. Through faith Roger reached up and took the Saviour's hand.

"There's an open gate at the end of the road
Through which each must go alone.
And there is a light we cannot see;
Our Father claims His own.
Beyond the gate your loved one finds happiness and rest;
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving God knows best."

A member of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church of Winterville, North Carolina, Roger served as a deacon for four and one-half years. He was very active in all the work of the church. His wonderful "How are you?" and his gentle smile will live on in our hearts.

We, the church family of Reedy Branch, will miss him so very much; and we would like to express our deepest sympathy to Roger's wife Louise; his daughters, Rachel and Janice; his grandchildren; and his mother, Mrs. Maggie Stox; and all the other members of his family.

As our pastor, the Rev. Willis Wilson, said, "Roger cannot come to us, but we can go to him." We, his church family, say, "God's way is the best way."

Chapters to Challenge the Christian:

- The Counterfeit Millennium
- The Menace of Moderatism
- No Substitute for Victory
- Have You Lost the Wonder?
- No Home Down Here

Using Scripture as his guide, the author reveals the devious pattern of hypocrisy lurking behind so many of the causes Christians embrace today. He questions the values and goals of modern Christians and offers a guide for those who seek to live a Christian life in this world as they find their way to the Kingdom of God.

Editorial—

YOU HAVE TO BE MORE

There was a time when the testimony, "I am a Christian," was sufficient evidence to earn the right of fellowship with all other Christians. Such is not the case anymore; that is, in the minds of many individuals you have to be more. Such attitudes exclude the mind and will of God for He accepts all who turn to Him in faith and it doesn't matter what other titles, or adjectives, may be added to the list.

Now let us be specific. During recent years, the true Christians (and there is only one kind) have distinguished themselves from mere professors by referring to themselves in such terms as Bible-believing, blood-bought, born-again, consecrated, dedicated, separated, children of God. There is nothing wrong with the terms. The fact is, however, that God knows the condition of man's heart; and so far as He is concerned, such terms add nothing to the reality of Christlikeness—being a Christian. So far as our fellowman is concerned, our lives will bear evidence to that which we profess. If such is not the case, then no amount of adjectives will help.

Denominations, and groups within denominations, have also found themselves floundering around for distinctiveness. It is not enough to say "I am a Free Will Baptist," or, "I am a Methodist," or, "I am a Holiness." In this day, you have to be more. You have to belong to some larger, more pronounced body; or you have to be affiliated and identified with someone else. Thus, we have such classifications as the following: fundamentalist, ultra-fundamentalist, conservatist, ultra-conservatist, orthodox, neo-orthodox, evangelical, evangelistic; and now there's the new evangelical. These classifications only include those who are fundamentalists, or conservatists, or something. Besides these there are all the liberal classifications.

The danger in this trend is that of identification with others rather than that of knowing what we actually believe, and thus standing on our own in the Christian world. Then there is the very real danger of becoming so narrow and sectarian that we refuse to accept anyone who belongs or becomes associated with, a group that does not meet our personal approval. Such a narrow concept overlooks what the individual actually believes and practices. Jesus ate with the publicans and sinners. The publicans were disliked by all other groups, but this did not change the beliefs or purposes of Christ. Perhaps such distinctiveness is necessary in this day of changing terms, but the most important consideration is that of knowing whereof we speak and believe. After all, in the final judgment Christ will not group us according to which group we belonged to on earth. The secret is personal knowledge of the Son as Saviour.

It is evident that much harm has been done to the fellowship of the saints (all saints) because of such narrow concepts. May God give us the Christian grace to recognize that there are faithful Christians in many denominations and groups. Their practices may be different from ours, but if they know the Saviour, then we are fellow Christians. In acknowledging this, we are not advocating the ecumenical precept, just consideration for other Christians.

By the way, this editor is a fundamentalist as compared to the modernist, or liberal. Someone else's definition of a fundamentalist, however may be different. So far as all those other terms are concerned, we haven't been able to bring them into focus. By the time we do so, maybe there will be a couple of new classifications. Then we can start all over again.

Golden Anniversary Development Program

by M. L. JOHNSON, Superintendent

(Note of explanation: The following is an outline of the Golden Anniversary Development Program of the Free Will Baptist Children's Home. This was adopted by the Board of Trustees on September 3 and endorsed by the State Convention on September 16, 1964. The reader is urged to clip and save this for future reference. For further information, contact the superintendent of the Children's Home.)

FIFTY YEARS AGO

The following is reprinted from Page 5 of the minutes of the second annual session of the State Convention of the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina, held with St. Mary's church, New Bern, North Carolina, September 16, 17, 18, 1964.

Resolution Regarding Orphanage Home: The following resolution was discussed and adopted:

We, the Convention, recommend that we at once take steps to locate and build an orphanage for the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina.

We further recommend to our various conferences that they arrange, at their next meeting, plans to put this matter before their people.

We also recommend that they confer or report to the next State Convention as to how they will push this purpose to perfection.

We further recommend that a copy of this report be read before the various conferences of the Free Will Baptist Church of North Carolina.

George W. Ferrell
Luke Wetherington
J. E. Dixon
W. J. Braxton

The reports received from the conferences, by the State Convention in September of 1915, were favorable. A board of trustees was elected and instructed to begin immediately to locate and build a home for boys and girls.

On January 1, 1916, the trustees accepted a gift of fifty acres of land on which our present campus is located. The first building was begun in the latter part of 1916. The original building program continued through 1917, 1918, and 1919.

The first applications for admission were approved on February 11, 1920, and the first children were admitted on May 23, 1920.

In view of the above historical facts and dates, September 1, 1964, through May 23, 1970, has been designated as our "Golden Anniversary" period and a "Development Program" has been outlined. The following is a general outline of the "Golden Anniversary Development Program" which we hope to complete by May 23, 1970.

* * *

In appreciation for the first fifty years of service by the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, we recognize the challenge to enlarge and strengthen this ministry. Therefore, we adopt the following Golden Anniversary Development Program to be executed during the period from September 1, 1964, through May 23, 1970.

GENERAL GOAL: (To Be Reached by May 23, 1970)

We believe our history, our current needs, our unparalleled opportunities, and sound judgment justify the establishment of the following general goals which we hope to reach by or before May 23, 1970 (the fiftieth anniversary of the admission of the first children to this Home).

I. Plant, Equipment, and Personnel
Our goal shall be a home properly equipped and adequately staffed to serve 100 children. We recognize, as a part of this goal, the need for at least the following:

A. Buildings

1. Staff Building (to house staff members who need to live on campus but who do not need to live in with children).
2. Farm Manager's Home (to replace present frame building).
3. Shop Building (for maintenance, and possible training program).
4. Boys' Cottage (for larger boys).
5. Girls' Cottage (for larger girls).
6. Necessary additions; such as, repairs and renovations of present buildings.
7. Other buildings as needed.

B. Equipment: Adequate equipment

C. Personnel: Competent personnel

II. Public Relations

- A. A constituency who fully understands and truly appreciates this ministry.
- B. An alert and loyal alumni.
- C. The full confidence, respect, and cooperation of the business and professional community.

III. Financial

- A. An endowment to guarantee the safety of this institution.
- B. A general fund income adequate to operate debt free.
- C. Capital funds to provide necessary capital outlay.
- D. A financial philosophy that is liberal enough to be progressive and conservative enough to be safe.

DEDICATIONS

We believe it is appropriate to recognize and honor those persons whose vision, dedication, efforts, and sacrifices have made this ministry a reality. Therefore, we establish the following program of dedications for the purpose of recognizing and honoring those included in each group listed. We will, during the periods designated, seek to recognize and honor these persons. This will be done through our public relations, in published articles, by suitable testimonials and memorials and by a historical review of the first fifty years of service by this Home.

- I. To Our Founders: September 1, 1964—August 31, 1965

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

GEMS

This week I am quoting some gems from different writers that have meant much to me, and I believe you will enjoy them also. May these words be to each of you a means of spiritual strength.

"JESUS"

"Jesus! How does the very word overflow with exceeding sweetness, and light and joy, and love and life; filling the air with odors, like precious ointment poured forth; irradiating the mind with a glory of truths in which no fear can live; soothing the wounds of the heart with a balm that turns the sharpest anguish into delicious peace; shedding through the soul a cordial of immortal strength! Jesus! the answer to all our doubt, the spring of all our courage, the earnest of all our hopes, the charm omnipotent against all our foes, the remedy for all our weakness, the supply of all our wants, the fullness of all our desires! Jesus! Melody to our ears, altogether lovely to our sight, manna to our taste, living water to our thirst, our shadow from the heat, our refuge from the storm, our pillar of fire by night, our morning star, our sun of righteousness. Jesus! at the mention of whose Name every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. Jesus! our power; Jesus! our righteousness; Jesus! our sanctification; Jesus! our redemption; Jesus! our elder brother—our blessed and only Redeemer. Thy Name is the most transporting theme of the Church, as they sing going up from the valley of tears to their home on the mounts of God: Thy Name shall ever be the richest chord in the harmony of heaven where the angels and the redeemed unite their exulting, adoring songs around the throne of God and the Lamb. Jesus! Thou only canst interpret Thy own Name, and Thou hast done it by Thy works on earth and Thy glory at the right hand of the Father."—Bethune.

OUR PRAYER

"God, make the door of this house we have raised to Thee wide enough to receive all who need human love and fellowship and a Father's care; and narrow enough to shut out all envy, pride and hate. Make its threshold smooth enough to be no stumbling block to children, weakness, or straying feet; but rugged and strong enough to turn back the Tempter's power. God, make the door of this house the gateway to Thy eternal kingdom."—Selected.

FIRST THINGS

"Keep a list of your friends, and let God be first on the list, however long it may be.

"Keep a list of the gifts you get, and let Christ, who is the Unspeakable Gift, be first.

"Keep a list of your mercies, and let pardon and life stand at the head.

"Keep a list of your joys, and let the joy unspeakable and full of glory be first.

"Keep a list of your hopes, and let the hope of glory be foremost.

"Keep a list of your sorrows, and let sorrow of sin be first.

"Keep a list of your enemies, and however many there may be, put down the 'old man' and the 'old serpent' first.

"Keep a list of your sins, and let the sin of unbelief be set down as first and worst of all."—G. S. Bowes.

GOD MOVES IN A MYSTERIOUS WAY

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants His footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm.

Deep in unfathomable mines
Of never-failing skill,
He treasures up His bright designs
And works His sovereign will.

Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
But trust Him for His grace;
Behind a frowning providence
He hides a smiling face.

Blind unbelief is sure to err
And scan His work in vain;
God is His own Interpreter
And He will make it plain.
—William Cowper.

This next gem is for pastors, choir leaders, and choirs:

THE THIRD VERSE

"I am the third verse. I have two older brothers and one younger brother. We all go to church. My brothers are recognized, respected and so well thought of that they are often asked to take part in the service. I am neglected, ignored and from all appearances considered good for nothing.

"One time, long ago, a minister spoke kindly of me. In fact, he said I was the most attractive one of my family. He said I was beautiful, and good, and the congregation agreed. That was the best day of my life. My heart went out to that man.

"I like to go to the Church because those people seem to think we of the whole family. They treat us alike, and sometimes if there is a cousin or two that goes along they receive equal attention also. I like those people for that. There is something harmonious about including all members of the family.

"I have felt so bad at times that I did not think life was worth while, but I have hopes that in the next world, when the leader of the celestial chorus raises his star-studded baton, in the paean of praise which shall ascend to the throne of God, the poor little third verse will not be omitted."—John Hunter Gill.

"God is looking for men who are big enough to be small enough to be used of God in a big way."—Selected.

". . . men ought always to pray and not to faint" (Luke 18:11).

OBITUARIES

MR. ERVIN BRICKHOUSE

The poem below was written in loving memory of Mr. Ervin Brickhouse of Columbia, North Carolina, a devoted husband and father, who departed this life on October 4, 1963.

Our home is now a lonely place
Since we no longer see your dear face:
'Til memories fade and life departs,
You will live forever within our hearts.
He was so true, unselfish, and kind;
Few in this world his equal you'll find.
A beautiful life has come to an end;
He died as he lived, everyone's friend.
Memories are treasures no one can steal;
Parting leaves heartaches only God can heal.

Christian Education

National Defense Student Loan Fund Approved

The United States Office of Education has approved a Federal Capital Contribution of $7,340 to the National Defense Student Loan Fund of Mount Olive College for the 1964-65 academic year.

Charles H. Harrell, college business manager, reported that this appropriation would bring to more than $37,000 the amount of financial assistance that has been made available through this fund to students at Mount Olive College.

The National Defense Student Loan Fund was established by Congress in 1958 for granting education loans to students who otherwise might not be able to attend college. No interest is charged to students while they are enrolled in college or in military service.

Repayment periods extend up to ten years beyond termination of their education, and a forgiveness clause for those who enter the teaching profession can cover up to one half of the loan.

One ninth of the National Defense Student Loan Fund is contributed by participating colleges.

President to Give Special Program At Holly Springs

President W. Burkette Raper will give special program on the development plans of Mount Olive College at Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church near Kenly, North Carolina, on Sunday, October 4, at 7 p.m. The program will include color slides of the first buildings planned for the new 90-acre campus.

The Rev. W. L. Poythress, pastor, has extended an invitation to all friends of the college in the Kenly area to attend this service.

The Free Will Baptist

Raper to Speak At Oak Grove Homecoming

President W. Burkette Raper of Mount Olive College will speak at the homecoming service of Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church in Sampson County, North Carolina, at 11 a.m., on Sunday, October 4.

The Rev. Felton Godwin, pastor, announced that a picnic lunch would be served and that all former members and pastors and friends of the church are invited.

Dr. Raper was pastor of Oak Grove church from 1946 to 1951.

Mount Olive College Day Set for October 4

The Free Will Baptist State Convention of North Carolina has called upon all churches of the state to observe Sunday, October 4, as "Mount Olive College Day."

The purpose of this observance is to ask all churches to offer special prayer for God's guidance upon the college during the 1964-65 academic year. It is also requested that the churches use this day to receive gifts for the general operation of the college.

It is expected that recommended quotas will be mailed to the churches by the end of September.

Enrollment at the college has reached an all-time high of 285 students from eight states and two foreign countries. Through Mount Olive College the Free Will Baptist Church has a unique opportunity for a Christian witness to young men and women who will fill places of leading responsibility in the years ahead.

The operating budget of Mount Olive College for the current school year is $298,830, and of this amount Free Will Baptists are asked to contribute $60,250. October 4 has been set as Mount Olive College Day to assist churches in helping the college to meet its operating budget. As our churches support Mount Olive College, they are helping to assure that there will be a Christian college for our children for generations to come.

Mount Olive College Benefit Dinners

Craven County Dinner

Mr. Ralph A. Morris, county chairman, has announced that the Craven County dinner will be held Thursday, October 1, 7 p.m., at Brinson Memorial School, located two miles from New Bern on the Old Cherry Point Highway. A goal of $5,200 to the college development fund has been set for the churches of Craven County.

Beaufort County Organizational Meeting

An organizational meeting to plan the Mount Olive College benefit dinner in Beaufort County has been set for Friday, October 2, at 7:30 p.m., at Free Union church near Pinetown. Each church is asked to send as many members of its committee as possible. President W. Burkette Raper will attend and show color slides of the first buildings planned for the new campus.

Edgecombe-Halifax Organizational Meeting

The churches of these two counties will meet Monday, October 5, 7:30 p.m., at the First Free Will Baptist Church of Tarboro to plan their 1964 benefit dinner. President W. Burkette Raper will attend and distribute information packets to churches for each member of their committee.

Durham County Dinner

The churches of Durham County will hold their 1964 benefit dinner for the college development fund on Friday, October 9, 7 p.m., at the Sherron Acres Community Building on Post Avenue. T. R. Register is chairman of the county steering committee.

Liberty will not descend to a people; a people must raise themselves to liberty. It is a blessing that must be earned before it can be enjoyed. — Benjamin Franklin.

NEWS and NOTES

OF

DENOMINATIONAL INTEREST

Dedication, Groundbreaking At Holly Springs

On Sunday, September 6, Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church near Newport, North Carolina, held a dedication and groundbreaking service. The dedication was for the $20,000 brick parsonage, and the groundbreaking was the first step in a $25,000 expansion program.

Participating in the dedication service were (pictured above left to right) the Rev. Jerry Rowe, pastor; the Revs. C. B. Hansley, M. L. Johnson, and J. C. Griffin, former pastors; Cecil Pringle, chairman of the trustees; and Roy Garner, chairman of the official board. Mr. Griffin brought the dedicatorial message. The service was well attended by members and friends of the church.

During the past two years the church has experienced both a spiritual and a physical revival. Sixty-two members have been baptized, and a number of others have joined by transfer of membership. The membership has grown to 321.

The church has enjoyed the best financial year in its history during 1963-64, with a total income of $15,621.99. Of that amount about $2,000 was given to denominational enterprises, and $7,481 was used to pay off indebtedness on the parsonage.

At the annual business meeting on September 2, the church adopted plans submitted by the building planning committee to renovate and expand its facilities. Serving on the planning committee were architect Mack Garner, Roy Garner, Dick Garner, Cecil Pringle, Jesse Fulcher, Clayton Cannon, and Quickman Cannon. Vernon Slaughter, chairman; Mack Garner; and John B. Kelly were elected as a building committee and were instructed to begin work as quickly as possible.

Spring Hill Revival In Progress

Revival services began at Spring Hill Free Will Baptist Church near Goldsboro, North Carolina, Sunday evening, September 27, at 7:30, and will continue each evening through Saturday, October 3. The Rev. Everette Bryan of Selma, North Carolina, is the evangelist.

The pastor, the Rev. Kenneth Carter, and the church invite everyone to attend the remainder of these services.

Aspen Grove Announces Revival

The Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Fountain, North Carolina, announces its fall revival to begin on October 5, continuing through October 9. The speaker for these services will be the Rev. Cedric D. Pierce, pastor of the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church. Services will begin at 7:45 p.m. throughout the week.

The first service will begin on Sunday evening, at 7:30 with the Rev. C. H. Overman, supply pastor, bringing the message. Regular worship services will be held on Sunday, October 11. Everyone is invited to attend these services.

Central Conference Ministers to Meet

The ministers of the Central Conference will meet for their regular fall meeting at the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church, East Third Street, Ayden, North Carolina, on Tuesday, October 6, at 10 a.m.

First Church, Goldsboro Announces Groundbreaking

The Rev. James A. Evans, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Goldsboro, North Carolina, announces that the church is planning a groundbreaking service for its new sanctuary on Sunday, October 4, at 12:30 p.m. Plans regarding the building program will be made at a later date.

Winterville Church Announces Homecoming and Revival

The Winterville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church announces the observance of homecoming service on Sunday, October 11. There will be a picnic lunch spread at the lunch hour. Although there will be no special service in the afternoon this year, a special hymn service will be held at the evening worship hour, 7:30 p.m. Former members and pastors are urged to attend the homecoming service; visitors are always welcome.

On Monday night a series of revival services will begin, and will continue through Saturday night, October 17.

Eastern District Woman's Auxiliary Convention

The theme for the Eastern District Woman's Auxiliary Convention, which met with the ladies of St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church, New Bern, North Carolina, Thursday, September 24, was "Building the Kingdom by Sharing our Hearts."

All thoughts for the day centered around the various ways the ladies may share their hearts. They heard how they might share their hearts with the seventy-seven children at the Children's Home and with two hundred eighty-five students at Mount Olive College. Projects were suggested for each of these institutions.

A narration story, "My Heart Is Jesus' Home," was presented by members of St. Mary's church. In this story Jesus was invited into the various rooms of the narrator's home. He helped her change the library, the dining room, the playroom, and the drawing room so that He might be worshiped in any of these rooms in the home. Finally, she gave to Him the keys to the closet in the hall. When this closet was emptied and cleaned, she was ready to give to Jesus her heart. She gave this to Him and asked Him to be the Lord of her life rather than just the guest in her home.

This narration was followed with beautiful music entitled, "Jesus Sets My Heart to Singing."

A most impressive memorial service was held in the afternoon. This was followed by awarding life membership to Miss Velma Morris and Mrs. Burkette Raper.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lanier told of the work of the Mexico-Arizona Missions. This is another way our hearts may be shared with others.

Macclesfield, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Edgewood Free Will Baptist Church met Saturday evening, September 12, at the home of Mrs. Jeane Wooten. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Jeane Webb, who then turned the meeting over to Mrs. Eleanor Trevathan, who took the place of the program chairman who was absent. Mrs. Arabellar Baker read the Scripture taken from Psalm 85, followed with the group's praying together the Lord's Prayer. Those taking part in the program were Mrs. Jeane Wooten, Mrs. Peggy Wooten, Mrs. Wiley Briley, Mrs. Eloise Brown, and Mrs. Eleanor Trevathan. The program was entitled "Building the Kingdom Through Revival" and was written by Mrs. Clyde Brown. Those on the program gave a very good discussion on each topic.

During the short business session it decided that the auxiliary grade a barn of tobacco each Saturday night to help on the payments of the fellowship building. Mrs. Eleanor Trevathan dismissed the group with prayer, and refreshments were served by the hostess and enjoyed by all.

Fountain, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Friday night, September 18, 1964, in the church. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, president, presided. The group joined together in singing "Revive Us Again." Mrs. David Hobgood used for the Scripture lesson Psalm 85, which was followed with prayer by Mrs. Robert Oakley.

The following took part on the program, "Building the Kingdom Through Revival," written by Mrs. Clyde Brown: Mrs. Leroy Owens, Mrs. Dick Smith, Mrs. Carlton Gardner, Mrs. Lester Gay, and Mrs. Ben Thigpen.

During the business session Mrs. Gardner presided and Mrs. Lester Gay, secretary-treasurer, called the roll and received the dues. She also read the minutes of the last meeting, and they were approved. This was followed with the treasurer's report.

A motion was made and seconded to remember Mrs. Ruby Strickland with a love gift. Mrs. Strickland has recently returned to her home from the hospital. A motion was made and seconded to send $10 to Arizona-Mexico Missions. Mrs. David Hobgood prayed the closing prayer.

Fountain, N. C.—The YPA of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met in the home of Cooper Goff Thursday night, September 17. Fifteen members attended.

Angie Owens, president, called the meeting to order. The roll was called, dues collected, and the minutes read and approved.

After the old and new business, the program was turned over to Mrs. David Hobgood, who gave a talk on "The Best Things Are from the Lord." She also had a "Question and Answer" quiz in which everyone participated. The group then sang several choruses.

After the benediction the group played games and were served delicious refreshments by Mrs. Bennie Goff.

Winterville, N. C.—The teen-agers of Bethany Free Will Baptist Church met with the pastor, the Rev. Wayne West, at the parsonage on Monday night, September 21, to organize a Youth Fellowship Auxiliary. Officers were elected as follows: president, Sonny McLawhorn; vice-president, Ann Dail; secretary-treasurer, Catherine Edwards; corresponding secretary, Randy Tyson; chaplain, Dail McLawhorn; and outreach chairman, Janie McLawhorn. The newly formed auxiliary decided to meet on Monday nights after the second and fourth Sundays of each month. The business session was followed by refreshments and a fun time. The pastor reports that there is great potential among the young people at Bethany, and he expects great things of them.

New British Paper Would Emphasize 'Good' Instead of Evil

LONDON (EP)—The Daily Leader, Ltd., a company which plans to launch a daily newspaper placing emphasis "on the good instead of the evil," has published a prospectus offering shares at $2.80 each.

Plans for the new paper were first announced in July 1963 by an establishment committee which said it hoped it would be welcomed by Jews, Anglicans, Free Church members and "all men and women of good will."

Five clergymen were named members of the committee: Ven. Edwards F. Carpenter, Anglican Archdeacon of Westminster; and the Rev. Wallace G. Harris, the Rev. Henry A. Jacquet, the Rev. Gordon Moody and the Rev. Harold S. Goodein. The others are Sir Adrian C. Boulton; H. Cecil Heath, a lawyer; and Terence Reardon, a chartered accountant.

The paper, it was announced, will be "wholly committed to the Christian religion, maintaining Christian principles, upholding Christian ideals, emphasizing the good and heroic and splendid in life, and underlining the duty of this generation to defend the Christian tradition."

Anglican Cathedral Pays Back Rent—For 96 Years

LONDON, Ont. (EP)—There wasn't too much dismay when the congregation of St. Paul's Anglican Cathedral here was found to owe 96 years back rent. The rental, according to a recently uncovered deed, was a mere "one peppercorn a year." The understanding landlord—the Anglican Diocese of Huron—hadn't even sent out a bill since 1868. Archivists dug into old records and found that only once had the Cathedral paid its annual rent. The cathedral is now a tenant in good standing. The Very Rev. K. B. Keefe, rector, has sent the Huron diocese 102 peppercorns—96 to cover the rent, plus 6 percent as reasonable interest.

Church Construction Boomed in July

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP)—New church construction during July topped the $91 million mark, making it the second month in a row to exceed the comparable month of 1963.

The $91 million boosted the seven-month total for which U. S. Department of Commerce figures are available to $556 million, just $9 million short of the same period for the preceding year.

Only June and July of 1964 have topped $80 million, whereas last year five of the seven months exceeded that mark. June's total was $85 million, while July was the first month to exceed the $90 million mark.

With the spurt showing signs of continuing, Commerce Department officials said they believe this year's church construction program should overcome the $9 million lag and push beyond the $1 billion mark for the second straight year. Last year total church construction amounted to slightly more than $1 billion, breaking the mark by some $7 million.

The Census Bureau, which handles the statistics under the Department of Commerce, does not break down the figures according to faith groups or denominations. The figures include totals for the Judeo-Christian faiths as well as other world religions represented in the U. S.

PERSEVERANCE

Perseverance of the saints has been from the beginning of the Original Free Will Baptists a firm faith and a cherished doctrine. It was preached by our forefathers, and is being preached by the true ministers of the Original Free Will Baptists.

Our North Carolina Statement of Faith says: "There are strong grounds to hope that the truly regenerate will persevere unto the end, and be saved, through the power of divine grace which is pledged for their support, but their future obedience and final salvation are neither determined nor certain, since through infirmity and manifold temptations they are in danger of falling; and they ought, therefore, to watch and pray lest they make shipwreck of their faith and be lost."

It is written in Romans 8:38, 39: "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." ". . . God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Corinthians 10:13). God says, ". . . My grace is sufficient for thee: . . ." (2 Corinthians 12:9). God has done everything possible to keep us right and in the heavenly way, but God does not take away from us the power of thought. He does not make us a machine that cannot be reversed.

Now let us notice some of the Scriptures which tell us of danger. ". . . The LORD is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you" (2 Chronicles 15:2). "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall" (2 Peter 1:10). There must be a danger of falling because Peter said, "If you do these things, ye shall never fall."

MORE WARNING

"When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby" (Ezekiel 33:18).

"If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned" (John 15:6).

"Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; And did all eat the same spiritual meat; And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ. But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness. Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted" (1 Corinthians 10:1-6). (Be sure to read the rest of the chapter.)

"For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Hebrews 6:4-6). May we remember that it is dangerous to put Christ "to an open shame."

Let us now consider the continuation of following Jesus, or continuing in the faith. Here is Scripture for our meditation: "And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence. For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell; And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled In the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in his sight: If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister" (Colossians 1:18-23).

May we notice the word continue. Continue what? It is plain that Paul is talking about faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Let us illustrate. A young fellow failed to graduate from high school. Why did he fail? He dropped out. He failed to continue to study. Had he continued and applied himself to study, he would have reached graduation. He failed to persevere. A few days back I, with others, started from my home in Bridge-ton to Wilson to attend the State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists. Mile after mile we traveled until we reached the place where the Convention convened. It took the last mile to reach the destination. No stopping was sufficient. It took the whole of the whole.

The faith by which we are saved must be kept in order for us to stay saved. We must retain a wholehearted faith in the keeping power of Christ as well as the beginning faith. Salvation is not repeated. It must be continued. Paul said, "I press forward."

Jesus said, "And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matthew 24:11-13).

We know of many who have waxed cold. We also know that false prophets come to our doors often. We see people who claim to be saved, but they live as the world lives. They belong to the church, but they drink unto drunkenness. They take God's name in vain. They commit adultery. They claim Christ but follow Satan. They are ruled by their flesh. They lie against their fellowman. They slander the name of many good people. Men stay out with other women while their wives look after the children and wonder where their husbands are. Women run out on their husbands.

I preach against these sins. I preach that without repentance and faith in Christ those who live this way will wake up in hell.

Faith is like fishing. You can throw the line in and sit all day, but unless you bait the hook you won't catch anything. Likewise you must bait your faith with prayer.—J. C.

Questions & Answers

QUESTION: Please explain "Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof" (Matthew 13:31, 32). What do the birds symbolize?—L. G. Ashborn, North Carolina.

ANSWER: When I have compared the several passages of Scripture that speak of birds in a similar way in which they appear in this passage of Scripture, it seems that these might be evil spirits or evil angels that lodge in the branches of this mustard plant. The parable which includes the mustard seed, the mustard plant, and the birds symbolize the abnormal growth gained by or resulting from the preaching of the gospel or good news of the kingdom, which, when proclaimed, gains the ear of many, and in time the many gained become attractive to the power and popularity seekers. Hence the worldly groups that branch off in many directions or divisions, but nevertheless become a vast structure that attracts many from all walks of life, is the plant. These many are attracted by the influence of the one who sows the seeds in the field, which is the world, as seen in the parable of the sower in Matthew 13:13-15, 24-30. The plant symbolizes abnormal growth or development. Jesus attracted the thousands who followed a little while because of such things as the loaves and fishes, but only two groups of 12 men in one and 70 men in another were ever useful enough, while He was here on earth, to be assigned specific tasks in view of the anticipated or potential kingdom.

Even though He fed them, that is the multitudes who followed for material gain, in as large groups as about 4,000 on one occasion and 5,000 on another, after He was resurrected 500 or a little over were the largest number the Bible tells about being present in His behalf or to see Him after the resurrection. What happened to the other 4,500 who wanted to take Him by force to make Him King after they were filled with loaves and fishes? Like all other worldly people who profess to get religion when it is popular to be religious and to be counted among the pious, they went back to former occupations and social activities. Jesus indicated what a small percent of genuine God-loving, devoted followers we might expect among those under man's influence and rule of any time of the age when He said: "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matthew 7:13, 14).

Having come from the smallest of all seed, the mustard plant becomes a mammoth tree with branches sufficient to give birds lodging and also the food they look for and want to use for their own natural growth and development but not that which is needed spiritually by Christians. God has given another symbol or figure something like this in His Word. The king of Babylon and his kingdom in Daniel's day were in their glory and stood out in splendor and greatness because of the special favor God had manifested to them as the Gentile power to subdue the Jews and rule the whole world; and yet, so far as I know, either from history or the Bible's message, neither was Nebuchadnezzar ever a Christian, nor his kingdom an environment conducive to men's becoming godly or obedient in the things that Daniel and his three Hebrew companions wanted them to be obedient in and taught them by example and word that they should heed.

"Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed; I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great. The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth: The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: the beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it. . . . Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation: It is thou, O King, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth" (Daniel 4:10-12, 21, 22). It would be well that you read the whole of Daniel 4 to see the comparison between the tree and the mustard plant and how in part, at least, the interpretation given the tree image might apply to the mustard plant. Both the tree and mustard plant, including the fowl in the branches, are abnormal in size and use; and both speak of something that falls short of that which God made possible in their antitype and which is expected or required of them.

The tree, or king and kingdom symbolized by the tree, in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, or vision, had potentials to carry out God's desired end for it; but because Nebuchadnezzar refused the way God directed him to take, giving himself to the natural instead of dedicating himself to and adhering to and producing the spiritual results he would have been capable of producing by acknowledging and following God's directions, as they came through Daniel and the three Hebrew children, he sought through the natural use of his God-given powers and achieved grand and glorious ends; such as, the hanging gardens of Babylon, the great and grand city with walls, and other features that were among the seven wonders of the world superior in any age. He just neglected to become a godly man as Daniel desired of him and admonished him to do; and therefore his kingdom, including its subjects and its achievements, was materialistic rather than spiritual or godly. "Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by (continued on page fifteen)

A HUNGRY BOY AND A SONG!

Esther Miller Paylor

KIM SUNG was always happy on market day. He liked riding in the bullock cart down the crowded road to the city from their farm in South Korea. He hummed a little song as he watched the rice fields so green and laced with water. He liked to watch the mist rising as if alive from the fields, toward the distant blue mountains. He liked to watch the crowds of people moving down the road into the city, or coming from it.

As soon as they got to market, Kim helped his father unload their vegetables and put them into neat piles. When the vegetables were almost sold, his father would give him a few wan to spend as he liked, saying: "Come back when the sun hits the top of the stalls."

"Thank you, Father," smiled Kim, flashing his white teeth and running into the open square. He slowed down trying to decide what to buy with his precious money. Kim looked longingly at the piles of sweet cookies. He could get one of these. How good they would taste! He licked his lips. He could buy a strip of that dark, sticky candy, or a handful of kimichi (pickled vegetables) which was so good and made your eyes water as you ate it.

Kim walked back and forth staring at the food and trying to decide which he would buy. He stopped before the old brown kimichi jar, and turned the coins in his hand. A thin ragged boy edged close to him. The boy's claw-like hand snatched the coins from Kim's hand. Kim shoved the boy and grabbed back his money. Kim snorted: "Why did you take my money?"

"I'm starving!" cried the boy. "I had no money for bread. I didn't eat since day before yesterday!"

"I can't help that!" snapped Kim. His mouth watered for the pickle as the lid was lifted from the jar by the market man. He wished the boy would not look at him with those hungry eyes.

"All right," said Kim. "I'll buy you bread!" It would cost all his money. But Kim brought the bread.

The boy snatched at it and shoved as much as he could get into his mouth. He did not thank Kim but darted away into the crowd. Kim wished he had money to buy something for himself, but felt good he had helped someone hungry. One winter during the war their family had been hungry and Kim knew how it hurt.

Kim glanced at the stalls. He still had time to look around down the long market road. He heard music and singing. Kim saw a blue truck. On the truck a white lady was playing a little organ. A group of clean Korean children were singing and a tall man was leading them. Kim stood and listened.

"Jesus loves me this I know
For the Bible tells me so,
Little ones to Him belong
They are weak, but He is strong.
Yes, Jesus loves me!
Yes, Jesus loves me!
Yes, Jesus loves me!
The Bible tells me so."

Next to him a voice joined in. It was the hungry boy. There were still crumbs on his lips. He smiled at Kim, pointing to the man: "Missionary tell of Jesus, the Friend of all. He feeds hungry people, too. The Bible is good Book he reads. See it in his hand!"

Kim listened as the man read. People stopped and listened. Kim forgot to look at the sun and stalls. He forgot the boy. He only listened to the words about Jesus who loved and wanted to help all. Kim wanted to hear more. When the man gave out papers with part of the Bible on it, and people gave the missionary wan for it, Kim wanted a paper but he had no money. The boy said: "Missionary will give you a paper even if you have no money." He shoved Kim into line.

When he came to the missionary, Kim said: "I have no money, but I would like to know more!"

The boy said: "He brought me bread that's why he has no money!"

The missionary smiled. "That was kind. Read this paper and come to see us any time. We're at the mission or here every market day. I would like to talk to you who act like a Christian without knowing."

Kim noticed the sun was way up on the buildings and past the top of the stalls. He ran as fast as he could but the crowds held him back. When he arrived where his father was, his father scolded: "Where have you been? It's late! We must get back to the farm to work!" Kim's father was angry.

As they rode home, Kim told him what happened. His father said: "We are Confucianists. We have rules to live. We do not need to be Christians. Tear the paper!"

"Please, let me read it!"

"No. You can't take time for reading or more school." Sick at heart Kim gave his father the paper. He tore the paper into tiny bits and scattered it on the road.

Kim did not look at the fields, mountains or men working as they passed. He was trying to think of the song the missionary sang. Kim determined he would find out more the next time. His father would not know when he got some part of the Bible. He would read and hide it.

The next market day Kim's father did not go, for he was sick. Kim was sent to the shaman (medicine man) to get snake meat pills for his father's indigestion. That took all the money they could scrape together. But the pills did no good. "Kim, take our vegetables to market," said his father. "Be careful."

Kim drove carefully, piled the vegetables and sold them. He dared not leave to go to the missionary's truck, although he wished to. He wanted to hear more of Jesus and get a Bible portion to read. As Kim was ready to leave, the hungry boy was standing there. "Hello," he said. "You didn't come to the truck. I looked for you last market day and today. I go to the mission school now and wanted you to come."

"My father won't let me. He does not want me to be a Christian. He says I cannot go to school more. He's sick and every day gets worse. I must do as he says."

"Where do you live?" asked the boy. "I'll bring the missionary doctor who has a hospital in the country."

Kim told the boy where he lived, then said: "Don't bring the Christian doctor. Father wouldn't let him in the house thinking he would bring bad luck!"

When Kim got home his father was roaring with pain. His mother and sister were wringing their hands and crying. "The shaman does not help!"

When it was dark someone knocked at the farm house door. Kim was afraid to open, but the knocking kept up. "Evil spirit's come to get me!" cried his father.

Kim opened the door. There was the hungry boy and the man Kim heard ringing on the truck. "Here's the doctor to see you," said Kim to his father.

"I'm afraid of doctor!" moaned the father. The mother and sister cried louder than ever.

The doctor talked quietly to his father. At last he let the doctor examine him. For a long time the doctor worked with Kim's father. The boy helped. When the doctor left he said: "I'll come back tomorrow. He's much better."

The missionary came every day for a week. Once the shaman saw him and threatened Kim's father, but he said something to the shaman Kim could not hear. The shaman hurried off angrily cursing. He did not come again.

One day when Kim came in from weeding the garden, he saw the missionary leaving. His father said nothing. Kim wondered if he dare ask again to go to mission school or at least get a Bible to read. Kim was afraid he would say no again and Kim wanted to so much.

When Kim lay down on his sleeping mat, his father said: "Sleep well, son. Tomorrow you go to mission school."

Kim thanked his father and was so happy he could not sleep for a long time. He was remembering the song "Jesus loves me this I know for the Bible tells me so." Maybe some day he and his

MISSIONS

Mission Organized In Norfolk, Virginia

The Rev. A. B. Bryan, director of missions for the State Convention of Original Free Will Baptist of North Carolina and members of the Convention's mission board, participated in an organizational meeting of a Free Will Baptist mission in Norfolk, Virginia, recently.

About the first of September, a Macedonian call came to the mission board from a group of loyal Original Free Will Baptists of Norfolk, Virginia. On September 21 the call was answered. Fourteen families, numbering more than fifty people, had united themselves together because they believed Free Will Baptists over the years had stood for and taught Bible doctrine which would stand the test when the secrets of all men's hearts are made manifest. They were persuaded that the Lord was leading them to organize and begin a church in a fast-growing section of the Virginia Beach area. In need of support, they extended an invitation to the North Carolina brethren to extend a helping hand. They knew the doctrine that the more than two hundred year old church in North Carolina believed and were persuaded that progress was continuing as the Lord sent the dew to water the efforts of the saints.

Upon receiving the petition, the North Carolina board reviewed the application. In the conclusion of the review one member of the board made the statement, "If we can extend a helping hand and organize these people into a church for the glory of God, I am all for it; otherwise, I do not want to have any part." All other members were in agreement that to extend a helping hand would be to advance the cause of Christ and to see souls saved and another Original Free family would be Christians and they could sing that song together!

Will Baptist church established for the glory of God.

Upon arriving on the scene in Norfolk, Virginia, on September 21, the board found a harmonious group of Christians already at work for Christ. With a large living room and two adjoining rooms occupied with people, and approximately seventeen automobiles lining the street outside, the organization was perfected with four deacons, three trustees, a finance committee, clerk, and treasurer. The Bible was presented as the only rule of faith and practice; the Statement of Faith and Discipline for Original Free Will Baptists was presented; the Church covenant was read and adopted; and a prayer of consecration was offered by the chairman of the North Carolina board, the Rev. R. H. Jackson. It was mutually agreed that the new mission would petition a conference for membership at a later date.

The Rev. A. B. Bryan states: "It is marvelous how God works, His mysteries to perform. We feel that this group in Norfolk, Virginia, has the sanction and blessings of the Lord. They plan to immediately move forward in a progressive program. Any Free Will Baptist in the area looking a church home would do well to contact this group which has the potentials of moving forward in a great way. You may do so by contacting the clerk, Mrs. Harry Scott, 901 Morfit Circle, Virginia Beach, Virginia."

The Free Will Baptist Press of Ayden, North Carolina, as usual, will supply the first quarter of literature free of charge, as has been its custom in the forming of missions or new churches. Again Original Free Will Baptists have demonstrated their willingness to help advance the cause of Christ by lending support when Christians desire to establish another church for the glory of God.

FOR OCTOBER 11

WHY JESUS CAME

LESSON TEXT: 1 Timothy 1:12-17; 2:1-7

MEMORY VERSE: 1 Timothy 1:15

I. INTRODUCTION

Jesus, according to His own testimony, came into the world for the purpose of seeking and saving the lost. Of course, during the short period of His earthly ministry, He was not privileged to testify to all who were lost, as all had sinned and come short of the glory of God. Jesus, however, before His departure from earth made arrangements for the carrying on of the work. These arrangements embraced the establishment of a Church which should be imbued with power from on high and charged with the responsibility of making the gospel known to the world.

There are several things that could be listed as reasons that led the Lord Jesus to come to the world, but all of these only serve to constitute one basic reason—man's need for a Saviour. The need for a Saviour existed, and only the Lord Jesus could supply that need; therefore, He took it upon Himself to become the Saviour of men. To do this, it was necessary that He come into the world and take upon Himself the likeness of man.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul was grateful that the Lord counted him worthy of the ministry (v. 12).

2. Prior to his conversion, the apostle was a blasphemer and a persecutor (v. 13).

3. The grace of God always abounds sufficiently for every occasion (v. 14).

4. The primary purpose of Christ's coming to earth was to save the lost (v. 15).

5. Paul, a blasphemer, obtained mercy that God might use him as a pattern to all believers (v. 16).

6. The apostle expressed gratitude for all God's goodness to Him, as well as to all men (v. 17).

7. Paul exhorted us to pray for one another in order that we might live a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty (vv. 1, 2).

8. Prayers for others are good and acceptable in the sight of God (v. 3).

9. God wills the salvation of all men, a fact that outlaws the idea that some are unconditionally and eternally damned (v. 4).

10. Jesus Christ is the one mediator between God and men who gave Himself a ransom for all (vv. 5, 6).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.)

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. A Christian worker calling at a hospital, sought to guide one of the patients, a young woman, to Christ. She says:

I asked, "Is that medicine in that glass?" She looked at me strangely for changing the subject so abruptly, but answered, "Yes Ma'am." I looked at her and asked firmly, "Do you really believe that is medicine?" She hesitated and with firmness answered, "Yes ma'am, I do."

"To say you believe there is medicine in the glass would it do you any good?" "Oh, no ma'am, I must take it in." "Just the same thing as believing there is medicine and believing there is a Jesus, neither one will do you good unless you take them in. It says your sins are laid on him and if you believe in him you shall have everlasting life."

"But I can't understand it." "No, I know you can't and no one else can understand why God should so love us as to give Jesus to die in our place, and when on the cross he said, 'It is finished,' that means that he made the way to heaven for you. Only believe in him. The Lord hath laid on him your sins, these are the words of God, do you believe them?" "Well," she said, "God cannot lie, and is it a sin for me not to believe him?" I quoted John 3:36. She then asked, "Do you ever believe anything you can't understand?" "Oh, yes I do, for God says a great many things which are true. And it doesn't matter if I understand or not, he only tells me to believe, and I do."

"Mustn't I do something so as to be saved?" "Yes," I said, "believe in the Lord Jesus Christ." She looked at the verse and said, "That says believe in him." "Yes, it means to believe a thing because God says so." I asked her if God would come to her, the God who knows her very thoughts, and tell her that all her sins were laid on Jesus, would she believe it?" "Yes," she said, "I would then." "Well, now the way God speaks to you is through this book, and says your sins are all laid on Jesus." "Must I believe in it just because it says so there?" I told her, "Yes for we would not know it if God wouldn't have written it down." I repeated very slowly several times, "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." She again said, "God cannot lie." I then asked, "Do you believe it?" "I do," she said firmly, "because God says so."

—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.)

2. "A mediator is one who acts between two. Christ Jesus is here said to be Mediator between God and man. God, as it were, allows the administration to go out of his hands, but it does not suffer in doing so; for it passes into the hand, not of many mediators with many administrations, but into the hands of one Mediator, by which there is preserved the grand equality and universality of the administration. Christ could mediate on the Divine side, being God himself, thus carrying into the administration the whole mind of him whom he represented. The remarkable thing which alone is noted was that, to mediate on the human side, he became man, being linked not to some men, but to all men, so that his mediation could be in the interest, not of some, but of all. It is matter for solemn thought to every man that Christ is linked to him, and linked to him with a view—according to the whole spirit of the administration—to his being saved."—Selected.

3. "Help! Help!" a swimmer may cry when he knows his strength is failing and he cannot make it back to shore. On the other hand, he may not realize his plight. An observer may notice the swimmer going down, and realize that help is needed. Most beaches and boats are equipped with life preservers, buoyant rings attached to long lines or ropes. One of these rings can be thrown to the drowning man. If he can put it around him, or even hold on to it, he can be pulled to safety. And, of course or the life preserver to be effective, it is necessary that someone hold tightly to the other end of the line.

Every sinner is like a swimmer drowning forever in a sea of wickedness and evil. Some sinners may call "Help!" "Help!" and ask for a way out of the sin. Others may not even recognize their need.

As the life preserver at the beach has just one purpose, so Jesus Christ, in love, came into the world for just one purpose—to save sinners. As the life preserver goes to the one in need from the one who will save him, and is secured by a line, so Jesus is the mediator between the sinner and God, who can save from sin.

God was the only one capable of providing such a life preserver to sinful man. With His Son as mediator, which was His purpose in living on earth, man could be saved from his wickedness and sin. "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave himself a ransom for all" (1 Timothy 2:5, 6).

—Standard Commentary.

4. In the midst of his message, one of God's servants said, "There may be someone in my audience today who is a humanly hopeless slave to alcohol, sin-racked, and demon-possessed. If there is such a person here today, I hasten to pray to that person that Christ can instantly set you free from the bondage of sin." Something occurred which the audience never forgot. A man stood and weepingly said, "I am the man you just described. Is there any hope for me? Can Christ save me from sin?" God's servant said, "Yes, my man. Christ can completely save you, if you will penitently turn from sin and pray, 'God be merciful to me a sinner!' You'll instantly become a new creature in Him." Humbly and penitently the man came to Christ and became an outstanding Christian worker in the Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago.

For thirty-seven years a man lived in atheistic darkness. His wife was a devout Christian. Daily through the years she knelt and tearfully implored God to save her husband. An evangelistic meeting was in progress. One night he entered the church and sat in a back seat. In spite of himself, he listened to the earnest plea of the evangelist for unsaved ones to come to Christ. He silently prayed, "If there is a God, make me to know You, and I will accept You!" God revealed Himself to the man and he became a

There are far more important things to fast from than bread and butter. The real fasting should be from wrong *will*ing, wrong *think*ing, wrong *feel*ing, and wrong *act*ing. In fasting from these things, it will not be done to be seen of men; but in secret to be seen of God. To fast from poisonous thoughts and emotions is to be rewarded openly with a new soul and a new life.—Starr Daily in The Magnificent Love (Fleming H. Revell Company).

Stone Walls But Not A Prison

REV. WALTER B. KNIGHT

For twelve long years Bunyan's lips were silenced in Bedford jail. It was there, however, that he did the greatest and best work of his life! There he wrote the book that has been most often read next to the Bible: Pilgrim's Progress. Bunyan said, "I was at home in prison and I sat me down and wrote, and wrote, for the joy did make me write!"

How Do You Occupy Space?

We must take the world as we find it; there is no avoiding that. But we ought not to leave the world as we found it. There would be no excuse for that. A large share of our proper work in life ought to be in the line of seeing to it that the world shall be better when we leave it than it was when we entered it.—Selected.

Consecration is not wrapping one's self in a holy web in the sanctuary and then coming forth after prayer and twilight meditation and saying, "There, I am consecrated." Consecration is going out into the world where God Almighty is and using every power for His glory. It is taking all advantages as trust funds—as confidential debts owed to God. It is simply dedicating one's life, in its whole flow, to God's service.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Bobby Richardson and the Bible

Bobby Richardson, Yankee baseball star, says this about the Bible: “Put a man in a baseball suit, give him a glove and a hat—but all that doesn't make him a star. Nor will all the practice in the world get some people into the major leagues. Something more is needed.

“It's also true if you put a man in church and give him a hymn book or a Bible; it doesn't make him a Christian. Not singing all the hymns in the world will do that—or even reading the Bible from cover to cover.

“That's why something more is needed when you read the Bible. We call it the Spirit. Read the Bible and let its message live in you, for 'not the readers of the law are just before God, but the doers shall be justified.'”

Bobby Richardson is also narrating this message as a one-minute television spot across the nation.—Bible Society Record.

Editorial—

IN DUE SEASON

In the past we have discussed the dangers of Communism in America. It is our opinion that these dangers still exist and that we must recognize these dangers.

It is difficult to discern the true facts today. It seems that with all the modern means of communication this would not be such a problem, but it is. This seems particularly so regarding the influence of Communism in our society, its influence on politics, religion, and social concerns. One politician, or political party, will declare that such and such is true. Another will declare the very opposite. At one instance one is made to feel that a Communist take-over is near, and the next moment we are made to feel that our nation is stronger than ever in its cold war against Communism.

Perhaps such misgivings are common for most of us during these days, but most of us had rather live without them. During the summer, when the rioting was going on in some of the northern cities, it was reported that a Communist agent readily admitted that he had several hundred Communist agents working in those places. Yet, during the weeks that have followed, very little if anything has been written or broadcast about the influence of Communism in those riots. Then the President ordered that the Federal Bureau of Investigation look into the matter to determine whether there was a definite pattern in these riots or not. They reported, a couple of weeks ago, that no pattern existed. The report was good news. We hope their report was an accurate conclusion. At least we have a great deal of confidence in the ability and judgment of J. Edgar Hoover and his department.

Since last November 22, the day that President Kennedy was assassinated, many Americans as well as people of other countries, have wondered if such was a plot instigated by the Communists. According to the now famed Warren Report, there is no credible evidence that such a plot existed. Thus, the conclusion is that Lee Harvey Oswald acted on his own.

It is our hope and prayer that our great nation is as free from the influence of Communism as some would have us to believe it is. It is difficult, however, to close our eyes and ignore the many things that seemingly offer evidence to the contrary. Too many things have happened, and are now happening, that often make us doubt.

Let us never forget that Communism has sworn to bury us. It thrives on discord and advocates revolution. Based upon the discord and turmoil which has existed in our nation during the past few years, Communism has a fertile place in which to work. Even Red China has boasted that by 1965 they will be celebrating their victories on the streets of San Francisco.

It is our conclusion that our nation must take a firmer stand against Communism. Unless we do, we face a great danger from within. As Christian Americans, we have been blessed above all peoples of the world. Let us pray that God will preserve us for His divine purpose and spare us from the evils of Communism. He will do this if our nation will continue to look to Him. Meanwhile, “. . . let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not” (Galatians 6:9).

WORDS 'UNDER GOD' UPHELD

The New York State Court of Appeals, according to the New York “Times,” upheld the inclusion of the words, “under God” in the pledge of allegiance to the flag recited in all New York schools. The phrase had been challenged by two parents on behalf of the Freethinkers of America. The decision of the court was unanimous.

HERE are four steps to membership in an Original Free Will Baptist church of North Carolina. These steps are (1) confession of faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour, (2) baptism by immersion, (3) reading and accepting the Church Covenant, and (4) right hand of fellowship upon consent of congregation.

The first two and last steps are well understood by most Free Will Baptists, but what is the meaning and significance of reading and receiving the Church Covenant? What is the meaning of church membership to Free Will Baptists anyway?

To answer these questions, let us first look at the definition of the word covenant. Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines this word as meaning "an agreement between two persons or parties."

The history of this word takes us back into the Old Testament where we find covenants made between God and man when God condescends to be a covenanting party.

God's covenant with man is a free promise on His part, generally based upon the fulfillment of certain conditions by man. God made a covenant with Adam and gave—continued life and favor upon the condition of obedience. There is the covenant with Noah, that Noah should be saved and that there would never be another flood to destroy the earth, the rainbow being the sign of the covenant. God made covenants with Abraham, the Children of Israel, and David. The covenant with David was that his children should forever occupy his throne.

So, we find from biblical background that a covenant is an agreement between persons, or between persons and God. In this context we present the Church Covenant for reading and accepting by those who wish to become members of the Free Will Baptist Church.

Too long we have taken people in one door of the church and sent them out of another door. There are those who join the church and nothing is required or really expected of them.

These people go to church for awhile; then they drift away as safely and quickly as they came.

It is time that we let people who join the church know what is expected of them. It is time that we let those who belong to the church know what is expected of them. We have many names on our church rolls; yet, to many of these people church membership is of no significant value or purpose! These people never go to church or support the church in any way. For this group of people, the church has no place in their lives except for convenience and historical value. The church and minister become objects to be used for weddings, baptizings, and sending the children on Sunday mornings. The church is looked upon, and given about the because we have lost our own experience with the Master.

Many of you are more faithful to other organizations to which you belong than you are to the church. You have more obligations to other organizations than you do to the church. In some organizations one must live up to the rules or he forfeits his membership. For example, if I belonged to the Woodmen of the World and failed to pay my insurance because of negligence and unconcern, I would lose my policy, standing, and membership.

Yet many of you belong to the church, do what you want to do, and never think anything about it. May I quote from Page 51 of our Discipline:

If a member absents himself from the meetings of the church, refuses to bear his proportionate part of the church's expenses, or casts his influence against the church, he is admonished. If he persists, his case is brought before the church as one for discipline.

If any member shall attend the race ground, ballroom, card table, shooting matches, or any other place of disorder with lawful business, such a member may be censured by the church.

If any member shall absent himself from the church on the days of quarterly conference or times of communion, he shall be liable to the censure of the church.

Upon joining a Free Will Baptist church, one makes a covenant, an agreement or contract, if you please. What is that agreement?

As a candidate for membership, he "... promise(s) by His grace to love and obey Him in all things, to avoid all appearance of evil, to abstain from all sinful amusements and unholy conformity to the world, from all sanction of the use and sale of intoxicating beverages, and to 'provide things honest in the sight of all men.'" This is just the second paragraph of the Church Covenant (Page 42 of Discipline).

When you join the church, you agree to accept the Church Covenant as a rule of your life. When was the last time you read it? The church agrees to accept you as a member upon condition that you take the Church Covenant (continued on page fifteen) same consideration, as the community building, and sometimes is given less consideration!

We do not expect to find the gospel of Jesus Christ centered in a burning conviction—a conviction which makes men and women change their lives through grace and remake the civilizations of the world. We want to live in the shadow of the church steeple, but there must be no commitments or obligations. We want all the blessings and benedictions of the church, but give nothing in return.

Our convictions, our commitments, our obligations, and our church membership are only superficial; and so we do not become involved in the fruit-bearing work of the church. We do not become witnesses for Jesus Christ

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

"And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint" (Luke 18:1).

Christ spoke these words pointing out the importance and privilege of prayer in the Christian's life. The first eight verses of this chapter give the parable of the judge and the importunate widow. Then follows the parable of the Pharisee and the publican in Verses 9 through 14. These parables are given to impress upon us the true characteristics of real praying. There are two characteristics without which true prayer is impossible—earnestness and humility. Both are taught in these parables, and, in fact, in many places in the Bible. In Ephesians 6:18 Paul says, "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints."

Prayer is the noblest and most blessed activity of man. Prayer is any communion of the human soul with God. In its highest sense, it is not merely petition, but is rather adoration, thanksgiving, and the quiet listening for what the Father has to say to His children.

Praying may be, and often is, hypocritical. Christ warned of this danger when He said, "And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward" (Matthew 6:5). I am told that the Greek word used here means, literally, an actor. Christ everywhere condemned sham, and no sham is worse than when the pretence is in religion when the heart is far from God.

The greatest privilege man has is the opportunity of prayer. The biggest mistake that Christians make is the failure to pray. These two statements are true because of what prayer means to a Christian. John Bunyan said, "Prayer will make a man cease from sin, or sin will entice a man to cease from prayer."

The true Christian life is begun in the spirit of prayer. We find many examples of conversions coming from prayer. The publican in the temple went home a changed man because in prayer he begged for mercy as a sinner. The best thing we can do for the unsaved is to get them to come in prayer to the Lord, repenting and asking for forgiveness.

The Christian life is guided by prayer, and through it we grow in grace and in the knowledge of God. We face temptations and perplexing problems, and many times we feel helpless; but as we pray, the Lord shows the way, and we become stronger because we have overcome the problem and have come to feel assured of the Lord's presence in the hour of need. From then on we walk with greater faith because, out of experience, we have come to know that the Lord is with us at all times.

In prayer the Christian finds the help needed in preparation for some hour of heavy responsibility. Before many of the great things Christ did while in the world, He went alone to pray, sometimes all night. Just before going to the Cross, Jesus went to the garden, where in agony, He sweat great drops of blood. He hungered for that hour of communion with the Father, and He was not disappointed. Washington went alone in the snow for prayer when he was facing a most serious hour. The best preparation we can make in the hour of need is to get alone with God who has all power and knowledge.

One of the most hazardous things that any system of education could do would be to give youth intellectual capacity without character. When a young man imbibes the knowledge of chemistry, he has a twofold capacity either to concoct a deadly poison or to make a healing medicine. Character determines which he shall do.—Louis H. The Little Brown Girl

Away on the other side of the world,
Lives a little brown girl, I know,
Where the people bow to their idol gods

And know neither cold nor snow.
I have a home that is bright and glad
She wanders where shadows lie;
Yes the same dear Father has made us both.

The little brown girl and I.

The little brown girl is to sorrow born
An orphan with none to care,
With no one to kiss her a sweet good night,

Or smooth out her tangled hair.
Perhaps she is needing my love today.
To stifle the orphan's cry,
Since we are one in the Father's heart,
The little brown girl and I.

The little brown girl has never heard
Of love that is over all,
Of a Father who cares with an equal care

For all who would heed His call.
Perhaps she is waiting for me to send
The news of this God on high,
That together we two may lift our prayers,

The little brown girl and I.

Then she, too, may go to the Father's house,

To the home where the angels are;
And for her and for me they will welcome speak,

And the gates of the home unbar.
I will take her hand on that blessed day,

In the mansions beyond the sky,
And we both will sit down at the Father's feet,

The little brown girl and I.

College $1,000,000 Program Inaugurated

The inauguration of a $1 million dollar development program on the new 90-acre campus of Mount Olive College is expected this week.

President W. Burkette Raper announced today that contracts have been issued in the amount of $445,866 for construction of a three-unit dormitory complex designed to accommodate 132 students.

The awarding of contracts in the amount of $368,916 on an academic building were announced by the college last week.

The dormitory complex will be financed primarily by a long-term loan in the amount of $412,000 from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Low bidders on the dormitories to whom contracts have been awarded were L. P. Cox Co. of Sanford, general construction, $296,635; Lenoir Plumbing and Heating Co. of Kinston, plumbing, $18,431; Watson Electric Construction Co. of Wilson, electrical contract, $38,426; and Kinston Plumbing and Heating Co., heating and air-conditioning, $68,613; architectural and engineering services were listed as $23,734.

Specifications for both the academic building and the dormitories call for completion within 334 calendar days. "Based on this schedule we plan to occupy these buildings for the fall semester of 1965," President Raper declared.

In addition to the construction costs which total $814,782, the college has invested $100,000 in the purchase of its new campus site on U. S. Highway 117 and anticipates an additional expenditure of approximately $100,000 for furniture, equipment, landscaping, and site utilities.

Present contracts represent the first phase of a long-range development program designed to permit the college to expand to an enrollment of 750 by 1970. Future buildings on the master plan include a chapel, library, student union-cafeteria, gymnasium, additional classroom buildings, athletic areas, and an administration building.

G. Milton Small and Associates of Raleigh is the architectural firm retained by the college.

services. On November 19, the church will celebrate its forty-second anniversary, being organized in 1922 as a result of a tent revival conducted in October of that year by the late Rev. R. V. (Bob) Self upon the invitation of the Rev. W. E. "Uncle Bill" Anderson, who did much of the ground work for the organization of the church.

Mr. Anderson was the first pastor and served the local congregation for one and a half years, during which time the present building site was secured and a temporary building was erected for worship services.

The first permanent building for worship was constructed during the pastorate of the Rev. E. C. Morris, who pastored the church from June, 1924, to October, 1929.

The present church building was constructed during the pastorate of the Rev. Henry Melvin. The construction of the building began on May 5, 1939. The present church building is 25 years old.

There are still some charter members of the church living and were present for the homecoming services at Edgemont, as they are almost every Sunday. Some of the charter members now living Dinner was served immediately following the morning worship services.

The Rev. Raymond Earl Jones is the pastor of the church.

OBITUARIES

NATHAN EDGAR HARRIS

"He was a good fellow, a fine man, a real friend, a Christian gentleman" are statements usually heard when one departs this life. You hear family, friends, and oftentimes general acquaintances making these statements. If we would stop to think, or evaluate, why we make these statements, our reasoning would perhaps go something like this:

"Well, he was a good husband and father; active in the program of his church; kind and generous in his relationship with relatives and friends; one who had definite convictions about the fundamental and profitable things of life."

Thus was our conversation when Edgar Harris died.

Brother Harris was a devoted husband and father. Converted in Union Grove (now Trinity) Free Will Baptist Church, he loved his church. After moving to Rocky Mount, North Carolina, in 1922 where there was no Free Will Baptist church, he began to hope for and to work for a church there. His efforts and those of others resulted in the organization of a church, of which he was a charter member.

He saw the well-being of that church threatened in the recent denomination dispute and rose to the occasion, giving of himself in ability and time, often at the risk of his own health, that the original purpose and practices of the church might be preserved. With the help of others, he was able to save the church; and he lived to see it serving to the glory of God.

Brother Harris was with the Atlantic Coastline Railroad for forty years. He gave liberally of his means to make the way of his friends and relatives less rough and more pleasant. He had many friends, whose testimony is that he never turned a deaf ear to a needy cause.

UNIQUE MINISTRY AT BLACK JACK

TWENTY-SIX people were anointed with oil "for the forgiveness of your sins, the comfort of your mind, and the healing of your body," at the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church, Pitt County, North Carolina, on Sunday night, August 30. The pastor, the Rev. Floyd B. Cherry, was in charge of the service.

Of the twenty-six who came, exactly half were men and half were women. The age range was from about thirty to the late seventies. Most of them were members of the Black Jack church; however, a few were from other churches. Only one man in the group showed any visible sign of illness at the time. He was crippled with arthritis. The group came at the invitation of the pastor without any persuasion or show of emotion. In fact, the pastor's daughter who is training to be a missionary brought the evening message and spoke on "The Call to Missions." These people came because they had troubled minds and suffering bodies and believed in the power and the willingness of God to help.

There was no singing; just the soft tones of the church organ. The pastor stood at the front and shook hands with each one as he came. He was then seated in a chair arranged for that purpose. After they had come—twenty-six of them—the pastor reminded them again that God was much more interested in their spiritual well-being than their physical. No one was asked to state his physical ailment or sign any kind of statement, nor was anyone asked to make any kind of statement after the service was over. There was a quiet dignity about the whole procedure.

The Rev. Cherry took a drop of olive oil from a bottle, anointing each one on the forehead, and repeating: "Because of your desire to be a whole person, and the faith you have manifest by coming here, I anoint thee my (brother or sister) with this oil for the forgiveness of your sins, the comfort of your mind, and the healing of your body, in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen."

The visitor could not help but be impressed by the calmness of the whole service. There were no promises or guarantees of healing held out to anyone. Although a few tears were visible in the group, there was no sound of weeping, no loud praying or pleading with the Lord for healing; just the calm coming and, in a matter-of-fact way, placing themselves in God's hands. The amount of talking and social visiting after the service was small as compared to other times. There appeared to be a holy hush over the people.

When asked about the service, one middle-aged woman replied, "I believe that all the healing comes from God. He may heal through the use of medicine or surgery; but sometimes He heals through the direct operation of His Spirit upon an individual's life. I believe that it is God's will for us to put ourselves into His hands."

A sixty-year old man was asked, "What promise or inducement did the pastor give to get so many to come forward?"

After thinking about the matter for a moment, he replied, "There was no promise or inducement. Our church has always believed in praying for the sick. In fact, the church treatise used to state that we believed in anointing with oil. I don't know why it was taken out. Our pastor has taught us that it is not always God's will to heal, but that it is always God's will to help, and if we put ourselves completely at His disposal, we will either be healed or given special grace to endure whatever pain we have to bear."

Because of the unusualness of this service, the following interview with the pastor of the Black Jack church, the Rev. Floyd B. Cherry, is recorded:

Question: Mr. Cherry, a service like the one you had in your church is unusual for Free Will Baptists. Would you mind telling us what prompted you to plan such a service for your church?

Answer: No, I am glad to discuss the whole matter. For many years, I have been interested in non-medical forms of healing. These include such things as psychotherapy, faith, etc. This interest has led me to make a special study of the Bible teaching on healing and prayer. As I have studied the matter, I have become more and more convinced that the church has a healing ministry to perform. God does not break an individual up in parts such as body, mind, and soul. He is interested in the whole man. I have come to believe that it is God's will for us to come to Him with all our problems regardless of their nature. This service was planned in keeping with this belief.

Question: Were you not afraid of the reaction to such a service in our church?

Answer: Yes, I had some misgivings. But my conviction that it was the right thing to do, plus the fact that at one time the anointing with oil was part of the Free Will Baptist treatise gave me courage.

Question: Mr. Cherry, would you mind giving our readers some scriptural basis for the anointing with oil? Most church people believe in praying for the sick, but this anointing with oil is something new.

Answer: I will be glad to. But first, may I say that the anointing with oil is not something new. For many years the Free Will Baptist treatise stated that we believed in anointing with oil. Many ministers have practiced it in private throughout the years. The whole tenor of the Scripture upholds it, but there are two particular passages that I would ask your readers to consider: Mark 6:13 and James 5:14, 15.

Question: What has been the result of this special service in your church?

Answer: We have seen no miracles performed. In fact, we have asked no one to give testimony as to whether they were blessed or not. However, we have had many people to come to us in private and tell us that they were blessed spiritually, mentally and physically by participating in the service. We feel that it has been a great blessing to our church and has opened up many opportunities for pastoral counseling that we would not have had otherwise. Isn't the ministry of the church to help people with their problems?

Question: Do you plan to have such services again in your church and do you recommend them for other churches?

Answer: We do plan to have another similar service on Sunday night, November 29. I recommend them to other churches and preachers only if the preacher has an honest conviction that it is the thing to do. Such a service should never be engaged in for the sake of attracting a crowd or to be sensational. In fact, we have made a special effort to avoid any special publicity or sensation in our service.

NOTES

AND

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

As in the past when we have failed to have time to write a message for one cause or another, we have resorted to some publication to keep our page up; so due to being overworked and feeling somewhat physically and mentally out of tune for writing, I am sending to you, our readers, a tract entitled "A Prodigal Girl Comes Home," published by the Pilgrim Tract Society, Randleman, North Carolina, hoping that if there is any prodigal girl who shall happen to see and read this message that the Holy Spirit will grip the life of that prodigal girl and lead her to safety and a righteous fellowship with Christ. Pray for the writer of "Notes and Quotes."

A PRODIGAL GIRL COMES HOME

Saved and Renewed, Mary Comes Home to Her Praying Mother

"Are you going out tonight, Mary?" The speaker, a frail, old woman seated in an old wooden rocker, looked wistfully into her daughter's face as she spoke, but she received no answer.

"You'll stay at home tonight, won't you, Mary?" she asked presently. Still no reply. The sad old face grew sadder still. She knew that Mary's going meant another night of dissipation in haunts of vice, another day of "sleeping off effects," while she must sit uncared for and neglected, hungry and thirsty, unless a kind neighbor chanced to come in.

"I'm so tired, Mary," she said by and by, "You'll put me to bed before you go, won't you?"

"No, I won't," she replied crossly, "I ain't got time. I'm afraid Jen'll be gone now before I get down there. I'll be back in time to put you to bed."

"Yes, you said that last night, but you didn't put me to bed. Mary, my back does ache so," pleaded the mother.

"O shut up, I ain't got time I tell you," and Mary caught up a gaudily trimmed hat and placing it on her head, hurried away.

The poor old woman buried her face in her hands and sobbed aloud. "O God, my Father," she cried, "how long? Have mercy, Lord, save my daughter. O give me back my Mary, my pure little girl."

Mary, returning for something she had forgotten, reached home just in time to hear those last words. They sank into her sin-hardened heart like a barbed arrow. She turned quickly away. She would not let her mother know that she was near. But how those words rang in her ears! Her eyes filled with tears, but she dashed them away savagely. "Pshaw!" she said, "What a softy I am! I must hurry up down to Jen's." But when she reached the house where her companion in sin lived, Jen had already gone. Mary stood irresolute. Like a wail of woe she heard again her mother's prayer, the pathetic, pleading look in the dim old eyes came vividly before and found somewhere in the hard heart a tender spot. "I might have put her to bed," she thought. "I wish I had. I'll go back and do it."

Her mind was busy as she walked toward home. She let her thoughts wander in the past when she was her mother's "pure little girl." That was before her father died, before mother had that terrible fall that made her a helpless cripple—oh, it was way, way back before they came to this wicked city. She remembered her first step into sin, and after that first step Satan had cunningly led her on and tightened and strengthened his cords about her heart until—ah, there was no trace of the "pure little girl" in this blighted, hardened, sin-stained woman. She stopped abruptly, "It's no use thinking of it," she muttered. "I'm too far gone—might as well go to the devil first as last. There's no help for me." And turning again, she walked rapidly down the street till she came to a low saloon which she entered. Besides the bartender there was only a bleary-eyed man lounging on a seat, smoking. He sprang up as she entered.

"Hello, Mol," he said, "come and have a drink. Here, Sam, two beers quick." She took the glass and eagerly drank its contents.

"Have you seen Jen tonight?" she asked presently.

"Yes," replied the man, "she was here a while ago. She was going up to the Rescue Mission to learn a new song."

"I'll go and find her," said Mary. "we'll be back soon."

When she reached the Mission the song service was over. She wondered if Jen was inside. She would just go in for a minute and see. So she slipped quietly into a back seat. A young man was reading Jer. 18:4. "And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter; so he made it again another vessel." Then in a short, earnest address the speaker applied this Scripture to the human lives which God the Potter intended for Himself—vessels of honor for His house, but who had been spoiled by sin. "It's the devil's business," he said, "to mar the clay, and how well he succeeds is proved by the lives of sin all about us—men and women upon whose faces is stamped the very image of Satan. But, O sin-bound soul, the Divine Potter is able to take the marred, stained and broken clay, and make it again, a beautiful clean, pure vessel. He longed to do it. Will you let Him take your fallen sinful life and make it over?"

Mary heard no more. She put her head down on the back of the seat in front to hide her tears. Oh, how hideous her life looked! how blackened, how broken, how marred! Was it indeed true that God could make anything out of it?

By and by they sang a hymn, and the service was dismissed with an earnest invitation to all who were tired of sin, all who wanted to give themselves to God to henceforth live for Him and let Him work in them to "will and do His good pleasure," to remain for the after meeting.

Mary's head was still bowed. Shall she go or stay? Somehow tonight she had grown suddenly sick of her life of sin. She longed for this new creation of which she had read tonight. Yes, she would stay. If God could make her new, pure and clean, she would give herself to Him.

She hardly knew how she reached home that night. There was in her heart such peace as she had never before known. At the door she paused a moment and looked at her mother. The poor old head had fallen forward in a painful position and she was sleeping. Mary quickly crossed the room and raised her in her arms.

"Is it Mary?" murmured the old woman sleepily.

"Yes, mother," cried Mary, as she kissed her over and over and then carried her to bed, "it's your Mary come back—the old Mary made pure and

QUESTION: Please explain "Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof" (Matthew 13:31, 32). What do the birds symbolize?—L. G. Ashborn, North Carolina.

The mustard seed and plant symbolize what all Christendom has done in the past 1500 years or so as it has developed into the grandest, the most glorious, the richest force for the achievement of material good, including scientific know-how of any move or organization yet known; and yet it is abnormal in that it has left God out of the picture to a large degree; and instead of its being now led and sponsored by Him who had nowhere to lay His head, it has developed into many branches—such as, Roman Catholics, Jehovah's Witness, The World Council of Protestant Churches, The National Council, etc., with millions, yea, even billions, of dollars' worth of property under their control much of which is not taxed even though protected like, and in some instances, more completely than that of private citizens. Then instead of this political and economic giant's being controlled by the Holy Spirit, who came with mighty power and so distinguished Himself on the Day of Pentecost that no one should mistake Him for another, it is largely controlled by one worldly man or another; and yet this realm of activity which I shall call here Christendom, is largely controlled by spirits who both disagree with and oppose the blessed Holy Spirit in all the office work he is here to perform in the name of and on the behalf of Christ. (See John 14:26; 16:7-14.)

It will require that here you give a little thought to church history such as the church's accomplishments and changes. There were only a hundred twenty or so among all those Jesus called out from the world before His death that even dared to gather together and wait for the Holy Spirit's coming as He required of them after His resurrection. They were poor people as a whole and had nowhere to meet except in the upper room of a friend's home. Not long after that glorious day of the Holy Spirit's descent, when He infilled them and caused them to be added to their number about three thousand people, the whole group was dispersed by persecution that caused several martyrs to be made of those in their number; but they went everywhere preaching the gospel so that in another short time even some of the members of the Caesar's household had become believers; and even as faraway as Europe there were those who preached, which preaching resulted in a church that extended beyond continental bounds. But about A.D. 300 or so, the church lost its impetus, not because of the many of her saints the Romans murdered, and they were indeed many, but because that when Rome saw that she was fighting a losing battle under the rule of Constantine the Great, she made the Christian religion the state religion and honored its adherents instead of persecuting them. The so-called church swung into an era of material prosperity that made all the rulers and authorities who surrendered to political demand surrender their rights, privileges, and powers to her wishes until the revolt that the Protestant Reformation fostered in the 15th and 16th centuries. Now Rome, with her wounded head revived to near recovery, is about ready to yawn and gulp in official Protestantism under the guise of church councils which are exerting their pressure to bring all the powers of Christendom under one head and to do away with the spirit and original purpose of the church. (See Revelation 13:3, also all of 13:1-10. Compare Revelation 17:1-18; also Daniel 7 and 8).

Jonh had this thing revealed to him as seen in Revelation so that we might not be asleep or inactive and complacent. The woman in the symbol portrays the religious power of the combined forces of religion; and her beast on which she rides, the combined political power of the secular rulers whose minds and wills she controls until sometime during the tribulation period when they are to revolt. Both wild birds and animals are used in the Scriptures to symbolize evil powers, including those displayed by evil spirits and evil angels which may be one and the same.

We find in the publication, Our Jewish Hope, the following comment on Matthew 13:31, 32: "This passage contains the parable of the mustard seed which typifies Christendom and its rapid growth. The birds of the air that lodge in the branches are the many false doctrines so prevalent today." This as well as my view could be correct; for when one takes under consideration the fact that the Holy Spirit inspired all Scripture and when one reads it, any part of it, or hears any part of it with sympathy and understanding, he hears the Holy Spirit whom Christ sent to the earth as another comforter as one that should take His place and propagate what He taught. Then it is easy to see that all contrary doctrine or teaching is inspired of the devil and his imps, for Jesus so taught. He indicated to His followers that the Jews who had rejected Him, who came in His Father's name, and had chosen spiritual darkness and blindness to the light which was in Him would follow the lawless one when he came. (See Revelation 13.) "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive" (John 5:43). The demon-possessed antichrist will, like Nimrod of old, glorify himself by acting counter to God's command. Evil spirits seek men's bodies to work through, for they have no power among men apart from men who yield to them.

Like the destructive starling among other birds, as they lodge when and where they man force themselves into their midst to destroy them, the evil spirits seek the hearts and minds of all who allow and move them to foster false teaching and false political and religious systems. BOYS and GIRLS

Love Is So Big

BY EDITH PALMER

DONNIE WAS excited. In fact, he was so excited that he couldn't sit still. He ran to the window and looked out again. Every time he heard a car, he ran to the front door to see if it had turned in at his driveway.

"Isn't she ever going to come?" asked Donnie.

"Just any time now," said Mother. "Mr. Johnson said he'd be here just about supper time."

And in a few minutes there she was! The sweetest little girl, just five years old, who had come to be a little sister to Donnie. Mary Ann didn't have a daddy and mother. Donnie didn't have any brothers or sisters, and now here she was—a real, live sister! He didn't know quite how to act. He just stood and stared at Mary Ann. She smiled shyly at Donnie.

Suddenly Donnie remembered that he was hungry. "Come on let's eat, Mary Ann. I've been waiting for you." Between mouthfuls he said, "Right after supper, I'll show you my cars and trucks. Do you like boy's things?"

"Sure," said Mary Ann. And she really did. Soon they were playing happily together on the rug, building roads and hauling tinkertoys in the trucks.

Later that evening, after the children were tucked in bed, Mother heard Donnie calling her. When Mother bent over Donnie's bed, he threw his arms around her neck and sobbed, "Mommie, do you still love me the best?" Mother hugged Donnie real tight. "Donnie, dear, Mother loves you just as much as ever—maybe even a little more. Mommie will always have all the love you need, but Mommie has enough love to give little Mary Ann all the love she needs, too. And Mary Ann does need a lot of love, doesn't she, Donnie? She hasn't had a mother and daddy for so long, that we must all love her very much."

"Sure!" said Donnie, giving a little sigh of relief. "I just wanted to be sure you still loved me."

A few days later, Mother and Daddy decided to take the children to visit Grandpa and Grandpa. "Fasten up your seat belts," said Daddy; "we're ready for the take-off." Donnie and Mary Ann laughed. "Daddy always pretends we're taking off in an airplane," Donnie told Mary Ann. It was so much fun to have a little sister in the back seat. He always had the whole back seat to himself before. Donnie showed Mary Ann all the cows and barns and pretty things he saw from the car window. "Soon we'll be on the expressway and go right through Chicago," Donnie announced. "We'll see big buildings, higher than you ever saw before, Mary Ann."

"Now we're on the Kennedy Expressway," shouted Donnie. "We're almost to Grandpa's now."

"We're almost to Grandpa's," echoed Mary Ann.

"He's not your Grandpa," snapped Donnie.

"He is, too!" snapped back Mary Ann.

"He is not your Grandpa," growled Donnie; "he is my very own special Grandpa, and not anybody else's, so there!" And Donnie curled right up on the back seat and pouted.

"Donnie, Donnie," said Daddy, "you're forgetting about sharing."

"Well, I'm not going to share Grandpa. He's my very own special property. Mary Ann can play with my toys and be my sister but I'm not going to let her have my Grandpa," half-sobbed Donnie.

"Don't you think Grandpa has enough love to share with both of you?" asked Mother.

"No, he just has enough for me," came the squeakily little answer from the back seat. After all, when you were a big six-year-old boy, you didn't let your sister see that you were crying.

"Donnie," said Daddy, "do you remember that little chorus you learned in Sunday school,

"Wide, wide as the ocean,
High as the heaven above,
Deep, deep as the deepest sea
Is my Saviour's love."

"Yes, I remember," answered Donnie.

"Well," continued Daddy, "an ocean is pretty wide. You can't even see across to the other side. And it is so deep we don't know where the bottom is. Donnie love is just that big. When Jesus put His love in our hearts, it is big real big—just like Jesus' love is. It makes us love everybody. That's what makes Daddy and Mother love you with all our hearts and still have a whole heart full of love to give to Mary Ann, too. Now I'm sure that Grandpa has that much love, too—enough to give you a whole ocean full and another ocean full for Mary Ann."

"Daddy," came a quiet little voice from the back seat, "do you think Jesus could give me a great big love like that in my heart?"

"Oh, yes, I know He can, Donnie."

In a few minutes, Daddy drove right up to Grandpa's back door. Grandpa came running out, with his arms stretched way out to give Donnie a big hug. "Here is my new sister, Grandpa. Give her a great big hug, too," said Donnie, as he turned his head and gave Daddy a great big smile.—The Free Methodist.

Easy With God

Are you cast down because, while others have shallows, you have depths—dark depths—depths of sorrow, and suffering, to pass through? Be it so: it is as easy for God to march His people through the wide, deep sea as across the bed of Jordan. Are your corruptions strong? Be it so: Samson found it as easy to snap a new-spun cable as withes fresh gathered on the river's bank; and believe me, it is as easy for God to break the tyrant's strongest as his lightest chain.—Selected.

Strange Things Happen

A. B. BRYAN

Director of North Carolina Missions

It is significant that in Norfolk, Virginia (July, 1961), Free Will Baptists (the National Association), in the midst of misunderstanding and improper information, hastily made its decision which has resulted in complete separation of North Carolina Original Free Will Baptists from the National Association and its program; yet, in that historical city, God, in His infinite wisdom, has convinced a group of believers that He is leading them to seek support from Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina.

With inroads being made by those with the doctrine of eternal security and other foreign doctrines and policies of groups being practiced in the name of Original Free Will Baptists, I have been convinced that in the years to come, if God allows Original Free Will Baptists to be a distinct people and to overcome this evil contamination, that there will be much dissension and breaking away from the dominating influence which controls the guiding philosophy of the so-called Free Will Baptist church headed by the National Association. I may be branded as a prophet of doom, but only history will tell the complete story. So beware true Free Will Baptists.

We publish the following letter, not boastfully, or to create further unrest, but with a bleeding heart and desire that true Free Will Baptists may question their faith and ask God's guidance on the future of the Original Free Will Baptist Church:

Norfolk, Virginia, and North Carolina State Mission Board of Free Will Baptists of North Carolina

Dear Sirs:

There is much interest by a number of Free Will Baptist families living in or near the Kempsville section of Virginia Beach, Virginia, for the beginning of a Free Will Baptist church.

We hear from our friends in North Carolina that the vision for missions is growing by leaps and bounds as the Lord leads and blesses the work and efforts of your present mission board.

We have been having prayer for many months that God would show us His will, and we now feel led of the Lord to contact you and request that you consider the need in this part of God's vineyard.

The Kempsville section is one of the most thickly populated residential sections of Virginia Beach, Virginia. The area is full of new families who are in need of a sound fundamental church.

The potential of church growth is limited only to the ability of Free Will Baptists to shoulder God's command to go into the fields and bring them in. The Lord will hold us all responsible if we fail to reach the unreached when the opportunity presents itself as it does in the Norfolk and Virginia Beach areas. There should be no less than fifteen new Free Will Baptist churches in this area right now; and then there would still be room for more expansion.

O, how my heart bleeds when I see other denominations with their modernist, luke-warm churches, spending great sums of money and time opening church after church, as each new area builds up and then lead these lost souls into a social gospel.

Sirs, members of the mission board, we here have a start, or a core to use as a beginning for a church, composed of Free Will Baptists. We all feel that the leading of the Lord would have us branch out and expand.

We believe that the Free Will Baptist doctrine is the true doctrine, teaching and preaching the whole Bible as the infallible Word of God from cover to cover, and we wish, with your help, to take this to others yet unreached.

We, the under named, do humbly lay this before you, and if it is the Lord's will, ask that you take action to meet with us in a group very soon.

Yours in Christ,
George T. Wood, Jr.

Fourteen family names representing more than fifty people appear on the petition.

May we request each of you reading this article to pause where you are and ask God what He would have you do about missions. Not only the above calls for help, but we urge you to consider the complete mission endeavor as a call from the Lord to serve.

We are dependent upon you for our present commitment, our future expansion, and our encouragement to answer the calls that come to us for help. Do not ask whether you can support missions or not. Ask yourself if, in answering the call of service, you can afford not to be a faithful mission supporter.

We need your good graces and best wishes. But if we move forward we must have your financial commitment. Invest your dollars in souls for Jesus sake. What else could be more important?

COURAGE

It's easy to float with the crowd—to be agreeable even when one doesn't agree inside. It takes something that is called courage coupled with conviction to stand for what one knows to be right, even though all around may disagree.

That is what is meant by the verse in II Corinthians 6 that runs like this, "WHEREFORE COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM, and be ye separate." When you are AMONG them, you are as isolated if you have convictions, as when you step up and speak out—only you are the only one that knows it.

The "them" of the verse speaks of the unequal yoke that believers try to carry with the unbelievers, the unrighteous, the children of darkness, the children of Belial, infidels, or idolators. Let's take God at His Word—we'll not be disappointed.—The Sawdust Trail.

Sunday Employment

"Christians do not want laws that compel people to attend church. Thoughtful Christians, however would not want to repeal laws that have protected multitudes of people from compulsory employment on the Lord's Day. We cannot have freedom of worship if a man can be compelled to work on the Lord's Day. But these Sunday laws are strong, not because they are religious, but because they have been written with the ink of concern for the welfare of all our citizens."

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR OCTOBER 18

Qualifications of Church Officers

LESSON TEXT: 1 Timothy 3:1-13

MEMORY VERSE: 1 Timothy 5:17

I. INTRODUCTION

The church is not a complicated organization. In fact, it is very simple. God, in His infinite wisdom and knowledge, intended for it to be so. So far as church officers are concerned, there should be just enough to carry on sufficiently the work of the church. Perhaps there are instances when there is too much organization—when things are complicated because of it.

Concerning offices in the Early Church, the Standard Lesson Commentary states: “. . . Nowhere in the New Testament does one find a listing of a complete slate of officers for the church. In Ephesians 4:11 one notes that apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers are designated. In Romans 12:6-8 those who prophesy, those who minister, those who teach, those who exhort, those who rule seem to show forth differing works in the church at Rome. In 1 Corinthians 12, 14 Paul again deals with special gifts granted to those in the church of the apostolic age, and he differentiates between apostles, prophets, teachers, miracles, gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. In Paul’s epistles before 1 Timothy only Ephesians 4:11 and Philippians 1:1 make mention of the elders (bishops or pastors) and deacons by name. It is no doubt true that he has the elders in mind when he refers to the pastors or speaks of those who ‘are over’ the Christians at Thessalonica (1 Thessalonians 5:12). In the book of Acts (14:23) one notes that from the first missionary journey of Paul through the rest of his labors, he was anxious to appoint elders in the various churches to carry on the work of the Lord.”

Since the Bible does not give specific instructions as to the number, or of the type of offices, we find many varying practices in the different denominations. In our own denomination, provision is made for the following church officers: (1) The board of trustees, whose responsibility is to hold title to the church property, maintain all legal rights to said property, and in most cases look after the business matters of the church. (2) The clerk, whose responsibility it is to keep a church book in which shall be recorded the names of the members, and the proceedings of the church. He is also given the responsibility of signing all letters and other communications made by the authority of the church. (3) The treasurer, whose responsibility it is to keep an accurate record of the church funds. He pays all the bills as authorized by the church and reports all receipts and disbursements to the church at designated times. (4) The deacons (we shall discuss the deacon’s duties later in this lesson). (5) The finance committee, who has the responsibility of promoting Christian stewardship, planning the budget of the church, and aiding the treasurer in the maintenance of competent records. Some churches have other officers and committeemen, depending on the size and need of the individual church.—Bible Student (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The office of bishop is one to be cherished (v. 1).

2. A minister’s life should be above reproach, and he should be capable of teaching (vv. 2, 3).

3. The minister and deacon should rule their houses well (vv. 4, 12).

4. He who knows not how to manage his own house cannot manage the house of God (v. 5).

5. Experience is vital in the office of minister and deacon (vv. 6, 10).

6. A minister’s life before his conversion should not be base and lewd (v. 7).

7. The qualifications for deacons are similar to those of ministers (v. 8).

8. Both ministers and deacons, as well as all Christians, should abstain from drinking alcoholic beverages (vv. 3, 8).

9. No recent convert should be given an office in church; he should first be proved (v. 10).

10. The right use of the deacon’s office brings many blessings to him (v. 13).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The first official leaders of the Church—the apostles themselves—were chosen by the Lord Jesus Christ Himself, the Head of the Church. In terms of the two classes of officers for the local church set forth later the apostles held the office of elder. Peter makes this clear when he exhorted “the elders” among his readers and spoke of himself as “also an elder” (1 Peter 5:1). The Apostle John also spoke of himself as “the elder” (2 John 1:1; 3 John 1:1). The apostolic office ceased with the men chosen by Christ, including Paul (Gal. 1:1; Acts 9:15), but elders were ordained in every locality where the church was established (Acts 14:23; Titus 1:5).

At first the apostles were responsible for the leadership of the Church in every area—material as well as spiritual. Undoubtedly other individual believers helped in the physical work, but the apostles were responsible and supervised. Before long a problem arose which made a division of labor necessary (Acts 6:1, 2). The apostles rightly continued their responsibility in the spiritual areas of church life—“prayer, and to the ministry of the word” (v. 4)—but they committed the responsibility for the temporal and physical needs of the church to men chosen by the believers (v. 3-6). The elders received the spiritual responsibility of the apostles in the local church, as the Golden Text states. The deacons exercise the responsibility in material spheres.

That any leader in the Christian Church should lead an exemplary life almost goes without saying. By virtue of being a leader a person is an example, and a leader in good things must set a good example. The text infers the required exemplary character of all elders by indicating that they should be honored. That all elders should be honored is implied by the statement that “elders that rule well” should “be counted worthy of double honour.” Honor is due to all and double honor to those who "rule well," especially the teaching elders.

God is not content to leave the matter with merely a general recognition that elders should be exemplary Christians. In the Bible through the Apostle Paul specifically He set forth a list of definite qualifications for elders (1 Tim. 3:1-7; Titus 1:6-9) and also for deacons (1 Tim. 3:8-13). Perhaps these qualifications can be summed up in the first one—"blameless." This word is sweeping enough to cover many of the detailed qualifications concerning personal life, inward attitudes, and social conduct. Some may criticize certain of these qualifications because they are negative, but negatives are often required to remove all doubt as to what is meant.—Bible Expositor.

2. Almost everyone is interested in cooking today, and good recipes are shared and tested and treasured. People like to experiment, to work out new recipes or add ingredients to old ones. Sometimes, amidst much advertising of recipes and ingredients, we see some marked "Quality Tested." If each ingredient put into a cake, for instance, is of high quality, then the finished product should be much better than one of inferior ingredients. So in a cake we might use quality-tested flour, quality-tested shortening, and quality-tested milk. Sugar should be highly refined; eggs should be fresh, baking powder of excellent quality, and flavoring genuine. Of course we assume that the cook will know exactly how to measure and mix those ingredients.

Paul's concern for church officers may be likened to this concern of a good cook for quality ingredients. Like the cake, the church itself can be only as good as the ingredients put into it, in this case the service and devotion of faithful men. Paul knew that the high quality of these church leaders must be insured. He insisted on setting up rules for "Quality-Tested" church officers and leaders.

Paul's directions are just as good today as they were for the early church. We must insist on high standards and devotion to duty. Moreover, as all the people make up the church, we must realize that every member also must try to live up to these specifications. Then we will have a congregation united in service and love as they witness for Jesus both in their church activities and in their everyday lives.—Standard Commentary.

The Meaning of the CHURCH COVENANT

as a rule of your life. Have you tried to keep that covenant today?

Woe unto church members and Christians who make a vow and do not keep it. "Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay!"

May God have mercy on us and grant us knowledge and responsibility of our vows and covenants with Him and His Church.

clean. The blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin. That's what they said at the mission. O mother, can you forgive me for all my cruelty to you?"

"Yes, my daughter!" exclaimed the old woman, "O, God be praised for all His goodness to me!"

Those were happy days that followed. Mary toiled unceasingly for her mother's comfort. A soft easy chair soon took the place of the hard, old rocker. Then, by and by a wheel chair opened to her an unthought-of source of pleasure, and every pleasant evening the two might be seen making their way to the mission where Mary had yielded herself to the Potter, to be made a vessel meet for the Master's use.—Mrs. H. Greenville Church Announces Revival and Homecoming Services

The First Free Will Baptist Church of Greenville, North Carolina, announces revival services to be held October 19-25. The Rev. D. W. Hansley, pastor-elect, of Kenly, assisted by the Rev. Wayne West of Winterville, will be the evangelist. Mr. Hansley will assume his pastoral duties at the church in December.

On Sunday, October 25, the church will observe its annual homecoming. Friends and former members of the church are invited to attend.

The Rev. Bruce Dudley of Raleigh and the Rev. Eugene Sumner, graduates of Mount Olive College and now seminary students at Wake Forest, are serving as interim pastors of the church.

Revival in Progress At Johnston Union

Revival services are in progress at Johnston Union Free Will Baptist Church, Clayton, North Carolina, with the Rev. Willis Wilson of Winterville, North Carolina, as the evangelist. Services each evening at 7:30 began Monday, October 5, and will continue through Saturday, October 10.

The pastor, the Rev. J. W. Everton, and the church extend a cordial invitation to everyone to attend the remainder of these services.

Howell Swamp Revival In Progress

Revival services are now in progress at Howell Swamp Free Will Baptist Church near Walstonburg, North Carolina, and will continue through Saturday night, October 10. The Rev. J. Garland Teasley, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Smithfield, is guest preacher for these services. The Rev. Bruce Dudley is pastor. Services begin each evening at 7:30.

Welcome Home Church Announces Homecoming

Welcome Home Original Free Will Baptist Church, Bettie, North Carolina, announces its annual homecoming services for Sunday, October 11. The services will begin with Sunday school at 10 a.m., followed with worship service at eleven. Special music will be rendered. A cordial welcome is extended to former pastors, members, and friends.

Revival At Pleasant Hill Church

Revival services are scheduled for Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist Church, Route 2, Pikeville, North Carolina, for the week of October 12-17, with the Rev. James A. Evans, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church, Goldsboro, North Carolina, as the evangelist. Services will begin each evening at 7:30, and each one will feature special music and good gospel preaching.

The pastor, the Rev. Jack Mayo, and the church extend a cordial invitation to everyone to attend these services.

Questions & Answers

tion of St. Matthew's Gospel, says: ". . . (called 'birds of the heaven') come (aorist to indicate the arrival) and go tenting in its branches (present tense to picture their sheltered stay). Only their stay is mentioned and not their eating of the seeds of this mustard tree. Since the mustard tree itself is the kingdom, all who belong to the kingdom are part of the tree. The wild birds who also go tenting in it are not members of the kingdom but men in general who find the church beneficial and enjoy its beneficent influence in the world."

Very few commentaries I have consulted even mention the birds in their comment on the parable; and these that do such, as the quotations will indicate, agree but slightly. Several of them point to the tree in Daniel 4, but those who briefly comment give a somewhat different view to that given by each of the others. My view as expressed here is not entirely different from that some writers express. I think it correct because I see less reason to suppose that it is out of line with all I understand the Bible to teach in general.

For years he was president of his local Brotherhood of Railroad Workers of America. In this capacity he served with profit and distinction in behalf of those he represented. Thus his fellow members were also his friends.

He was born in the Pungo community of Beaufort County in 1900. His parents were the late Lemuel and Florence Harris.

Surviving are his wife, Suphrona Craft Harris; a son, Wendell of Jacksonville, Florida; one grandson; three brothers, all of Pantego, North Carolina; and three sisters, two of Pantego and one of Newport News, Virginia.

Shortly after he died, his pastor, the Rev. Fred Powers, in a conversation with me, said, "He was my partner and was so active in the church. My, how I have missed him! He was my dear friend."

And so we all say, "He was a fine fellow, a good friend, a brother in Christ."

"Saints by the power of God are kept, 'Til his salvation come:

We walk by faith as strangers here, 'Til Christ shall call us home."

It's autumn now and biting frost
Has changed the color of the leaves
The farmers bring their harvest home
And garner in their golden sheaves.

The autumn is the harvest time,
That shows the goodness of our God.
For He it was who gave the yield
To bless each step the workman plod.

The Fayetteville Mission

It was this editor's happy privilege to visit our friend, Taylor Hill, director of First Free Will Baptist Mission of Fayetteville, North Carolina, on the weekend of October 4. As we have mentioned before, the Fayetteville mission and its director is endorsed by the First Free Will Baptist Church of Goldsboro. We were very much impressed with the work that is being done, and we were happy for the opportunity to bring the morning message.

The mission now has fourteen members, with more than thirty-five persons enrolled in Sunday school. Brother Hill informed us that every need of the mission has been met, and that the greatest support, other than those who belong to the mission, has come from interested persons who are not Free Will Baptists.

We met several of the mission's members and supporters. There was a true spirit of unity and brotherhood. We rejoice in the work that is being done. We feel that it will not be very long before even greater things are accomplished in Fayetteville.

Editorial—

THE NATIONAL TEXTBOOK

Based upon the truth that the Bible is the Word of God, we do not believe that America's recent opposition to the place of the Bible in our national life will go unnoticed by God. Mrs. Madalyn Murray's atheism has resulted in the banning of prayers and Bible reading from most of our public schools. Since this infamous action by the United States Supreme Court, much opposition has been expressed. We are confident that a large majority of American people oppose such action. It is doubtful that Mrs. Murray has found any measure of satisfaction in what she has done. To her, life must be miserable, as well as others of the "freethinkers."

There was a time when the Bible was recognized as our National Textbook. For many years it formed the major curriculum of our public schools, thus producing some of our nation's greatest statesmen—men who possessed a deep reverence for the Word. To prove the place the Bible held in the earlier days of our history, one only has to turn to the pages of history. For example when the Revolutionary War cut off the supply of Bibles from England in 1777, the Continental Congress took action to secure copies from Holland.

Clarence H. Benson, in his book "The Sunday School in Action," states:

"Recognition and encouragement of Bible instruction have not only been given by national statesmen and government officials too numerous to mention, but the Bible has been accorded the highest honors by Congress itself. In 1844, in 1866, and in 1874, the hall of the House of Representatives was opened to meetings in the interest of the American Bible Society. On the first occasion, the venerable John Quincy Adams was in the chair and delivered a masterly address. In 1866, the jubilee of the Bible Society was celebrated in the hall of the House of Representatives by several addresses on the influence of the Bible in the building of the nation."

It is also quite significant that in 1904 the following statement was signed by Theodore Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland, Chief Justice Brewer, Justice Fuller, Chauncey M. Depew, William Jennings Bryan, and many other great statesmen of the past:

"The social fabric of modern states has no surer foundation than the Bible, especially in a Republic like ours, which rests upon the moral character and adequate judgment of the individual. No thoughtful man can doubt that to decrease the circulation and use of the Bible among the people would seriously menace the highest interest of civilized humanity."

We are now living in a day when the use of the Bible among the people has been decreased. Thus, the highest interest of civilized humanity has been seriously menaced. Unless concerned Christians begin to pray and act in a more positive manner, America will reap the consequences of her folly. We cannot ignore the things of God and hope to get by with it.

Let us not despair, however, for there are many notable persons of great influence who recognize the authority and place of the Bible in their lives, and thus in the history of our great nation. At a time when atheists are seeking to destroy much of our religious heritage, we are thankful for the testimony of those who revere the Word of God, such as, Miss Vonda Kay Van Dyke, the Miss America of 1965, who testified that "the Bible is the most important book I own." In times like these, we need the faith and courage to stand up and be counted. We need more national leaders such as our country knew and recognized decades ago.

The problems of crime and juvenile delinquency would not be so great if we would fully recognize once again that the Bible must be our National Textbook.

GROUNDBREAKING FOR DORMITORIES

A groundbreaking ceremony for the first dormitories planned for the new campus of Mount Olive College will be held at 10:15 a.m. Thursday, October 15.

President W. Burkette Raper reported that special invitations to participate in the service have been extended to the families of T. F. Hart Sr., Frank Hart, and Mrs. Celia Hart Garris of Ayden, North Carolina. One of the three units will be named the "Hart Dormitory" in memory of the late W. F. and Jesse T. Hart for their pioneer work in Christian education among Free Will Baptists and in recognition of the support of Mount Olive College by their descendants.

Friends of the college are cordially invited to attend this service on the new campus.

DORMITORY COMPLEX

The dormitories planned for the new campus of Mount Olive Junior College are designed to encourage friendly relationships among students, desirable conditions for study, and helpful counseling services.

The first three-unit complex (pictured above) will accommodate 132 students. The central unit, with double rooms for 34 students, will have a master lounge for all three buildings and an apartment for a resident counselor. The side units will accommodate 49 students each, two students per room except one triple room. Each unit will be air-conditioned and will feature a TV lounge and a private study room.

Back of the public lounge in the central unit will be a private corridor running across the building and connecting with the other units, thus enabling the students to move about the dormitories and come to the counselor's quarters without entering the public area.

This housing program was designed to meet the educational philosophy of the college which emphasizes a close relationship among students and between students and faculty.

The exterior of the dormitories will be glass and precast stone and each room will have an outside view.

Contract cost of the first dormitory complex will be $445,000 plus furniture.

SCHEDULE OF BENEFIT DINNERS

A series of benefit dinners is being held throughout North Carolina for the purpose of giving the 35,000 Free Will Baptists of the state an opportunity to contribute to the development program on the new 90-acre campus of Mount Olive College.

In each county or area an organizational meeting is held approximately one month prior to the dinner for the purpose of electing a steering committee and designating local church chairmen.

President W. Burkette Raper is attending both the organizational meetings and the benefit dinners at which he outlines the $1,000,000 development program, distributes information packets to workers, and reports on the progress of the building program.

BENEFIT DINNERS

A partial schedule of forthcoming benefit dinners is given below.

Wayne County, Wednesday, October 14, 7 p.m., Wayne Center, Goldsboro, Hardy Talton, county chairman.

Jones County, Saturday, October 17, 7 p.m., King's Barbecue, Kinston, Roy Cauley, county chairman.

Beaufort County, Saturday, November 7, 7 p.m., Chocowinity School, Chowinity, Oscar Webster, chairman.

Johnston-Wake Counties, Monday, November 9, 7 p.m., Smithfield, Garland Teasley, chairman.

Pitt County, Tuesday, November 10, 7 p.m., Greenville, Randolph Harris, chairman.

Greene County, Wednesday, November 11, 7 p.m., Snow Hill, Mrs. J. C. Moyer Sr., chairman.

Duplin County, Thursday, November 12, 6:30 p.m., Beulaville Elementary School, Beulaville, William D. Thigpen, chairman.

Edgecombe-Halifax Counties, Tuesday, December 8, 7 p.m., First Free Will Baptist Church, Tarboro, Hubert Burgess, chairman.

ORGANIZATIONAL MEETINGS

Organizational meetings to plan benefit dinners have been scheduled as follows:

Nash County, Monday, October 19, 7:30 p.m., Free Union Free Will Baptist Church.

Wilson County, Sunday, October 25, 3 p.m., First Free Will Baptist Church, Wilson.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

THE LOAVES AND FISHES

(Read Matthew 14:15-21.)

"But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart; give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes. He said, Bring them hither to me" (Matthew 14:16-18).

We have before us one of the great miracles of Christ. This passage is full of deep meanings and many precious lessons for the Christians of this period of church progress.

Christ performed such mighty works as no other man did, or could. His miracles were numerous, for the greater part public, and full of mercy and compassion; they were performed by His own power and in His own name. But they were all for the glory of His Father in heaven and for the benefit of man.

As we study the miracle of the loaves and fishes, let us notice the occasion that made it necessary. Christ had been teaching the people the things of God and healing their infirmities. The multitude had been so deeply interested that they had forgotten the necessary wants and needs of their bodies. They were ready to faint for want of food.

It is of importance that we take into consideration the place where the miracle was wrought. The disciples said, "This is a desert place," which made it all the more needful that He dismiss them so that they could go and provide food for themselves. Had they been in a village or city where provisions could have been purchased, a miracle would have been unnecessary. Christ never wrought one unnecessary miracle, spoke one unnecessary word, nor did one unnecessary deed. Here it was necessary that He should convince His disciples that He could spread a table for the needy people even in a desert place. The disciples are to be commended for their anxiety. They desired that the people might be dismissed, that they might go away and buy for themselves victuals in the villages. This was a considerate and humane suggestion on their part. But Christ had other plans, as He so often does. We should never forget that our fellow creatures have bodies as well as souls; and the Bible teaches that if we see a brother or a sister destitute of food or raiment, and do nothing to relieve their need, how dwells the love of God in us?

Notice the surprising reply of the Redeemer. He said, "They need not depart." Not only was Christ in the midst of them to teach and to heal, but He must show them that He was the God of nature and of providence and that His hands were daily opened to the suffering of every living man with the good things of life. In the next part of the reply, which was a command to the disciples, was an even greater surprise, "Give ye them to eat." With but five loaves, or biscuits, and two fishes, barely enough for a lunch for one, He directed them to feed five thousand men besides women and children. How totally inadequate to the demands of the thousands, the hungry multitude! But we must observe another part of His command, "Bring them hither to me." All the things we have, great or small, should be brought to Christ. Just as He did not despise and cast away the loaves and fishes because they were few and probably small, but took them and made of them an abundant supply to the needs of the multitude, so will He receive us and ours, when offered, and with His almighty power use and multiply to His glory and the benefit of those about us.

The nineteenth verse has so many of the great teachings of the gospel that we will take a few moments to examine some of them. "And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to the disciples, and the disciples to the multitude." After they had brought the loaves and fishes to Christ, He first blessed them and then gave them back to the disciples. The disciples gave them to the multitude, "And they did all eat, and were filled." So, not only did they experience perfect satisfaction from a physical standpoint, but in so ministering to their needs Christ exhibited His own headship and authority; and at the same time He recommended His disciples to the people, as the almoners of His bounty, and as the officers of His kingdom.

At the command of Jesus, the disciples went forth, supplying each with an abundance; and as they distributed, it increased, so that five thousand men, besides, no doubt, as many or even more women and children, ate and were filled—completely satisfied; "and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full." That was many, many times more than they had to begin with. God is the source of abundance; but He will not sanction extravagance or waste in either material or spiritual things. God gives all we will use for His glory and the need of our fellows.

Now, for the remainder of the space allowed, let us consider some of the spiritual lessons presented to us in the story of this miracle. For one thing we see in that multitude of people a striking representation of the condition of the whole human family. We are in a desert world—starving for want of food—food no human means can supply.

In the provision of the people's need we see a true exhibition of the blessings of the gospel. Its source is Jesus. Its apparent insufficiency, yet its abundance, more than that, its inexhaustibility. Its freeness—without money and without price. Its satisfying nature—they all did eat, and were filled—and, yet there was more.

In the method of the distribution of the loaves and fishes we see the true nature of the office of the Christian minister. It is, to receive from Christ's hands the blessed bread of life and to give it to a dying world. It is His provision only that they are to distribute.

In the abundance remaining we see the boundlessness of gospel supplies.

"Enough for all, enough for each;
Enough for evermore."

Myriads have eaten and were filled, and yet the bread is undiminished.

We learn, too, from this miracle that a personal participation of the gospel provisions and blessings is necessary to our satisfaction, happiness, and growth. We must not only be of the multitude and hear and see and sit down with them; but we must also eat—receive Christ into our hearts by faith—for in this way only can we enjoy the blessings

Dr. Martin Luther King Has Audience with Pope

VATICAN CITY (EP)—Pope Paul VI was quoted here by the American civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., as having promised to issue a public pronouncement against racial segregation.

Dr. King, a Baptist minister, made the disclosure to newsmen after having been received by the Pope in a 25-minute private audience. He said the Pope spoke English part of the time; during the remainder of the audience Msgr. Paul Marcinkus of Chicago, an official of the Vatican Secretariat of State, acted as interpreter.

Pope Paul, Dr. King reported, "made it palpably clear that he is a friend of the Negro people, and asked me to tell the American Negroes that he is committed to the cause of civil rights in America."

Belief in God Held Test of Canadian Citizenship

OTTAWA, Ont. (EP)—A Dutch-born husband and wife have been denied Canadian citizenship on two occasions by a county court judge because the couple say they do not believe in God.

As a result, Canada's Department of Justice has been asked to rule whether it is necessary to believe in God to become a Canadian citizen. The country's Immigration Act states that foreign-born residents wishing to become citizens must take an oath of allegiance which ends in the affirmation, "So help me, God."

The couple refused to take the oath of allegiance because of its reference to God.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bergsma of Caledonia, Ont., told Judge W. W. Leach of Cayuga County Court that they regarded the Bible as a book of rules on how man should live on earth, that they had no religion, and that they did not attend church.

Mrs. Bergsma, who has four children, said she could not believe everything in the Bible, but respected it and had one in her home. "We live by its code, but we don't believe in God," she said.

In turning down the couple's citizenship application, Judge Leach remarked that although "they seemed like a decent couple," they could not become citizens unless they took the oath of allegiance.

He noted that the Canadian Bill of Rights states Canada "is founded on the principle of the active supremacy of God." The bill also said, he added, that there must be freedom of religion, but "doesn't say there shall be freedom to have no religion."

'Royal Hymn' Must Be Revised Because Queen Is a Lutheran

ATHENS (EP)—The "royal hymn" sung at all services of the Orthodox Church in Greece must be revised, at least temporarily, because the new Queen of Greece is a Lutheran.

Queen Anne-Marie, daughter of Denmark's royal family, is expected to embrace Orthodoxy after studying the Greek catechism under the supervision of Archbishop Chrysostomos of Athens and All Greece.

Until then, however, she will be known as the "Christ loving"—but not the "most devout"—Queen of Greece.

The Polychronion (royal hymn), before her marriage to young King Constantine, included these words: "We beseech the Lord to safeguard our most devout King Constantine, and the most devout Crown Princess Irene, and the most devout Queen Mother Fredrika . . ."

Until the Queen's conversion, the hymn will cite "our most devout King Constantine, and the Christ loving Queen Anne-Marie, and the most devout Crown Princess Irene, and the most devout Queen Mother Fredrika."

Open Graham Team Office in Atlanta

ATLANTA, Ga. (EP)—The staff of the recently-opened Billy Graham Team Office here has been announced by the Rev. Walter Smyth, director of crusade planning.

Members of the team who have already moved or are shortly moving to Atlanta include Dr. Robert Fern, director of research; Dr. Stanley Mooneyham, special assistant to Dr. Graham; Bob Root, administrative assistant, and John Dillon, field representative for the associate evangelists. A number of other team members are expected to move here in the future.

Mr. Smyth, who will be in charge of the office, said the initial staff of ten will be expanded as the office activities increase. There are about 25 members of the team and associate evangelists who will use the office as a base of operations. The scope of their activities will be worldwide.

Dr. Graham will also have an office here, but will continue to live in North Carolina. All of the functions relating to crusades and the evangelistic team will be handled in the new office. The international headquarters of the association, established 14 years ago in Minneapolis, Minnesota, will remain there. The Minneapolis office will continue to handle all business affairs and mail and is continuing to expand.

The new offices are located in the International Office Park, adjacent to Atlanta's International Airport.

The Power of a Hymn

A rich Japanese silk merchant sent for the missionaries in his town and entertained them most hospitably. He told how, as a child, he had attended a Sunday school. "Very often," he said, "right in the midst of my business the words of the hymn, 'Jesus loves me, this I know,' come to me, and try as I may I can't get them out of my mind." He then repeated the hymn from beginning to end, and added: "Though I've lived my life without religion, I feel that it is the most important thing there is, and I want my little girl to be a Christian. It is for that purpose," he added emphatically, "that I have placed her in the mission school, that she may become a Christian."—The S. S. Friend.

We are responsible for what service God is able to do through us.

The Free Will Baptist

October is Superannuation Month in N. C.

The following information will be helpful as you prepare to make your offering for superannuation this month and the months to come.

There are nine ministers on the superannuated list who receive together over one hundred dollars monthly, and nineteen ministers' widows receiving together over three hundred dollars quarterly. The board has life insurance on forty ministers with a monthly premium paid by the board of almost one hundred dollars. This life insurance amounts to $80,000. There are eighteen ministers' families and thirty-seven individual ministers and ministers' wives participating in the group hospital and life insurance program. The total monthly premium is almost five hundred dollars. There are fifty-one ministers enrolled in the "Ministerial Retirement System" in the amount of approximately $5,500, making the board liable for about $1,750 each year. This is to insure the retirement and death benefits of the "Ministerial Retirement System."

The superannuation board has two primary needs. The first is more funds to increase every phase of the superannuation work. It needs over $1,650 each month from the churches and ministers to reach the budget of $20,000 adopted by the State Convention. Second, there is a need for more and greater participation on the part of the ministers in the "Threefold Superannuation Program." There are almost two hundred ministers associated with the State Convention but only fifty-one have enrolled in all or a part of this program.

Revival and Homecoming at Cabin Church

Revival services are scheduled for Cabin Free Will Baptist Church near Beulaville, North Carolina, for the week of October 18-24, with the Rev. Joseph Ingram, pastor of Stoney Creek Free Will Baptist Church, as the visiting evangelist. The services will begin each evening at 7:30.

On Sunday, October 25, the church will observe its annual homecoming. Following the eleven o'clock worship service, conducted by the Rev. Joseph Ingram, a picnic lunch will be served.

The pastor, the Rev. Walter Sutton, and the church extend a cordial invitation to all former pastors, former members, and visitors to attend these services.

Pleasant Hill Church To Observe Homecoming

The Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist Church, Route 2, Pikeville, North Carolina, will observe its annual homecoming on Sunday, October 18. The day's activities will begin with Sunday school at 10 a.m., followed with the worship service at eleven. A former pastor, the Rev. G. C. Joyner of Smithfield, North Carolina, will deliver the homecoming message. A picnic lunch will be served at the noon hour. In the afternoon a memorial service honoring those who have passed away since the last homecoming will be conducted. This will be followed with a song service, featuring the local choir and visiting singers.

The pastor, the Rev. Jack Mayo, and the church membership extend a cordial invitation to all former pastors, former members, and friends to attend these services.

Missions Director In Hospital

The Rev. A. B. Bryan, missions director of the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists is hospitalized at Lenoir County Hospital in Kinston. He is suffering from a slipped disk, but is reported to be improving. Relative to the support given to the mission program, Mr. Bryan states:

"I want to thank the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina for making the month of September the greatest month in support of the mission work. Your continued support is humbly requested that we may ascend to greater heights."

C. F. Bowen Conducting Piney Grove Revival

Following the homecoming service at Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Kenly, North Carolina, on Sunday, October 11, the fall revival began that night with the Rev. C. F. Bowen of Wilson as the evangelist. A revival prayer service begins each evening at 7:15, and the revival preaching service at 7:40.

The pastor, the Rev. L. B. Woodall, Jr., and the church membership invite everyone to join them in the worship and fellowship for the remainder of the services.

Homecoming Planned at Moseley's Creek

Homecoming services are planned for Moseley's Creek Free Will Baptist Church, Dunn, North Carolina, Sunday, (continued on page fifteen)

CENTRAL AUXILIARY CONVENTION

The Woman's Auxiliary Convention of the Central Conference of North Carolina met on September 30 at the Hull Road church, near Snow Hill. The theme for the convention was "Wisdom in Diligent Service." The convention sermon was delivered by the Rev. N. B. Barrow, manager of the Free Will Baptist Press. During the message he stated, "Wisdom in service must be an acceptance of God and His Word. We must accept the fact that He not only inspired His Word, but He keeps it pure today. This truth must be applied as we give our time, talents, and money. It is hard to pay right unless we pray right."

The Life Membership award was given to Mrs. Carl Barrow of the Hull Road church who is the daughter of the late Levi Hill. Mrs. Wilton Ellis of Spring Branch church is president of the convention.

PEE DEE AUXILIARY CONVENTION

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Pee Dee Conference met on October 7 with the Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church of Bladenboro. The convention reports revealed that all phases of the denominational work is being supported by the different auxiliaries. Mrs. Hattie Adcox presided over the harmonious session.

Pikeville, N. C.—The Night Woman's Auxiliary of Pleasant Grove church met September 1 with Mrs. Mary Pender. Eleven members were present.

The program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" was presented by Mrs. Tempie Jones, Mrs. Lillie Mae Pender, Mrs. Mary Lee Pope, and Mrs. Colleen Jones. Prayer was led by Mrs. Mary Alice Howell.

During the business session the auxiliary decided to send all members of the auxiliary a subscription to The Free Will Baptist, a total of 18 which included 6 who were already taking the paper. Also the next meeting to be held was designated as "Guest Night," to which the members were to invite guests and encourage them to become members.

After the business the group was dismissed with prayer, and refreshments were served by the hostess.

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Mount Zion Free Will Baptist Church held its September meeting in the home of Mrs. Laudy Brewer with thirteen members present. The meeting opened with the singing of "Revive Us Again." The Scripture reading was taken from Psalm 85, followed with prayer by Mrs. Lillian Crocker. Mrs. Mary Martin was in charge of the program entitled "Building the Kingdom Through Revival." Assisting her with the program were Mrs. Geraldine Cockrell, Mrs. Crema Johnson, Mrs. Lillian Crocker, Mrs. Lois Boykin, and Mrs. Alonia Narron. Mrs. Nadine Crocker led the group in prayer. Following the singing of "Rescue the Perishing," the meeting adjourned with the group's praying the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Refreshments were served by the hostess during the social hour.

Bear Grass, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church held its September meeting on October 1, in the home of Mrs. Jeannette Wynne with eleven members present. Mrs. Wynne read the Scripture taken from Psalm 85. This was followed by the group's praying sentence prayers. The program, "Building the Kingdom Through Revival," was given by Mrs. Selma Cowan, Mrs. Mertie Coltrain, and Mrs. Peggy Bailey.

The dues were collected during the business session. The group voted to furnish the flowers for the fall revival October 4-10. The treasurer, Mrs. Selma Cowan, reported a balance in the treasury of $41.21. The meeting adjourned with prayer by Mrs. Cowan.

The hostess served delicious refreshments during the social hour.

Mount Olive, N. C.—The Emma Powell Circle of the Woman's Auxiliary of Snow Hill Free Will Baptist Church reports great progress for the past six months. The circle, with twenty members, sponsored a week's Bible school in the spring, sponsored the homecoming of the church in June, and sent $10 to Mount Olive College. In September the circle sent its second and final $50 to clothe the adopted boy at the Children's Home, and also sent him a little spending money on several occasions. Flowers, gifts, and cards have been sent to the sick members of the church. Seven of the ladies of the circle attended the auxiliary convention held in New Bern, North Carolina, in September.

The church will hold its fall revival the week of November 2-7 with the Rev. Clarence F. Bowen of Wilson as the evangelist.

Wilson, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Milbournie Free Will Baptist Church met Tuesday night, October 6, at the church with the president, Mrs. Bobby Lamm, presiding. The Scripture was read from Ezekiel 22:23-31, followed with the group's praying together the Lord's Prayer.

During the business session the secretary and treasurer gave their reports. It was decided to have a rummage sale on Saturday to raise funds for the auxiliary treasury. The new cookbook is due to go to press soon. All members were urged to turn in their recipes for the book as soon as possible. Plans were also made for the fall revival which is scheduled to begin October 19.

The program entitled "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" was presented by the program chairman, Mrs. Harold Williams. Mrs. Marvin Sullivan closed the program with prayer.

Following the program an auction sale was held with Mrs. Horace Finch and Mrs. Melton Lamm selling the various items the twelve members had donated. The sale netted $16.50.

THE TOWN WITHOUT A CHURCH

By J. L. Raye

FOR MANY years the town of Liberal, Missouri, did not have even one church. The reason is that the founder, George H. Walser, was an atheist.

This Illinois lawyer was a follower of Robert G. Ingersoll, the infamous agnostic leader. Walser, who was an officer in the Union Army, came to Lamar, Missouri, after the Civil War. He became Barton County's first superintendent of schools, later, prosecuting attorney and then a member of the legislature.

Walser had great skill in land speculation. Out of this came the realization of his dream—a town free of churches. With the help of G. W. Baldwin, an atheist financier, and many other atheists, agnostics, free-thinkers and later spiritualists, this town became a growing community.

Soon the town boasted a large pavilion and amphitheater, with an open stage and a well-kept race track.

Walser founded several schools, which later merged with the new Free thought University. Classes were held in the Universal Mental Liberty Hall. Famed mediums conducted seances in Spiritualist Hall.

Christians were not encouraged to settle in Liberal, Missouri. But they were determined to do something about this atheistic town. As a result they established the town of Denison, across the tracks of the Memphis and Fort Scott Railroad. A few merchants from Liberal moved into the new town.

The downfall of the atheistic experiment started during a major political battle. On the even of the 1888 presidential election, the community was assembled in Universal Mental Liberty Hall. Walser, a Republican, promoted Benjamin Harrison. Baldwin, a Democrat, spoke in favor of Grover Cleveland. After the meeting the hall was closed for repairs. It was never again opened by the infidels.

Later that year a well-known medium, Dr. J. B. Bouton, came to Spiritualist Hall. Bouton had the people write questions, addressed to deceased loved ones, on a slate. In each case the slate returned to the writer bearing an answer. But a strange event took place in the midst of the session. The building caught fire.

Dr. Bouton's two associates escaped by descending from the attic through a trap door. The two confessed they had been supplying the answers when the slates arrived in the attic.

The Christians of Denison soon began moving across the tracks. The Methodist Church purchased the Universal Mental Liberty Hall and converted it into a house of worship. The Denison Christian Church moved to Liberal.

By 1900, less than 20 years after founding of the town, the power of the founders had been broken. Churchmen reported that conversions of former atheists and agnostics numbered in the hundreds. Most of those, who were not converted, moved out of town.

Walser retired to a country home and became a writer of poetry.

Today, atheism is again on the rampage. Mrs. Madallyn Murray pressed the case which resulted in the banning of prayers and Bible reading in public schools.

God stopped atheism in Liberal because Christians were concerned. He can change the current situation in America.

"If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins and will heal their land" (2 Chronicles 7:14).

We know that "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." But the eternal truths of Almighty God are being twisted, distorted, and degraded until the average person in our nation has become confused as to what God's truths really are in contrast to the devil's lie. It is up to the Christian, minister and layman alike, to reveal to the unregenerate what God's Word and God's truth are concerning the sinner's need of a Saviour.—Christian Victory.

OCTOBER IS SUPERANNUATION MONTH

The following letter is being mailed out in the interest of the superannuation program of the North Carolina Free Will Baptist State Convention. Please take note of the message it contains.

October, 1964

TO: Co-workers in Original Free Will Baptist Churches

SUBJECT: "October Is Superannuation Month"

Dear Co-worker:

This letter is being addressed to you as a reminder that October is Superannuation Month. There are nine ministers receiving regular monthly pension checks and nineteen ministers' widows receiving regular quarterly pension checks.

The Board of Superannuation expresses its appreciation to all who have supported this phase of our denominational program. The support this year was good. However, we are aware that we should do much more than we are doing.

We have a twofold responsibility in our superannuation program. First, that of providing adequate retirement for the ministers now active in our denomination. Second, that of continuing our support for those ministers and minister's widows now on our superannuated list. The denomination that is adequately providing for the present and future needs of those who serve her is in the place where God has promised to bless. "And the Levite that is within thy gates; thou shalt not forsake him; for he hath no part nor inheritance with thee. At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates: and the Levite, . . . shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that the LORD thy God may bless thee . . ." (Deuteronomy 14:27-29) .

Can we count on you to help meet the needs?

What can you do? You can help meet the needs by receiving a special offering this month in your Sunday school, church, league, and other organizations of the church for superannuation. How much is your part? If all of our churches will send as much as 75c per member, we can meet our budget of $20,000. Can we afford to do less? Some will fail to do even this little. Will you help make it up by sending even more?

Don't fail—send your gifts for superannuation to: Walter Reynolds, Route 5, Dunn, North Carolina 28334.

Give regularly throughout the year to superannuation.

Very truly yours,

Walter Reynolds,
Chairman-Treasurer

A WONDERFUL MISSION SERVICE

The first Sunday night in October, the Rev. and Mrs. James L. Lanier came to our church here in Bridgeton with a message from God and the Arizona-Mexico Missions. Our people received the message with great joy. The weather was very inclement; rain and wind kept the congregation from being as large as it would have been. Our people, those who could attend, gave their wholehearted support in gifts to the cause of missions, prayerfully and financially; and a goodly number gave their names to be put on the mailing list to receive the mission paper; also a goodly number remained after the service to get a personal word with Mr. and Mrs. Lanier and to view the items of interest which they brought from Mexico.

ITINERARY PROFITABLE

We learned that in the service on Wednesday night of our State Convention about $4,000 was given to the mission cause, and now we have learned that the amount of offerings for missions has gone beyond $5,000. So we are thanking God for opening a door for us in Arizona-Mexico Missions. John writes about a door being opened to the Philadelphia church: ". . . behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it; for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name" (Revelation 3:8).

I believe that God opened the door in Arizona-Mexico Missions to the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina and the Free Will Baptists in other states who desire to cling to the old paths and to follow the "faith once delivered to the saints."

John said that the church at Philadelphia was not strong, but they had a "little strength." We Free Will Baptists have not denied the name of Jesus.

We are standing true to the doctrine, customs, and usages that our forefathers preached for more than two hundred years. We have not repudiated any part of the usages. We still discipline a minister when he walks contrary to the doctrine of the church. We deal with a church as our fathers did and as the Early Church did. We have missionaries both in the state and in a foreign country who believe in correcting the preacher and the church that deny the faith and preach that which is contrary to our Statement of Faith and Discipline. Perhaps there are some who call themselves Free Will Baptists who would like to be turned loose to preach anything that suits their minds and call it Free Will Baptist because of a selfish desire; there are about five different groups because they were and are not willing to follow the true doctrine.

Let all of us who are of the old school of true Free Will Baptists stick to and support our Arizona-Mexico Missions. May we support it with our prayers and finances, and God will do the rest.

MISS BECTON MAKING GOOD

We learned that Miss Barbara Becton is making good in her mission work in Arizona-Mexico work in Nogales. Let us pray much for Barbara. Missions are on this young lady's heart and mind. Satan will try to hinder her as he will all young people. May our prayers, letters, and finances keep her encouraged and happy.

THE EASTERN CONFERENCE

The Eastern Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina will hold its sixty-ninth annual session on October 21, 22. According to the records, the Eastern Conference was organized about 69 years ago. It was organized for convenience, not because some preacher wanted to get the lead over a conference, but so that the community in which the conference convened would not be overburdened. Before its organization it was a part of what is now the Central Conference, which is over two hundred years old. Our printing press is located in the Central Conference, and is known all over the nation. However, years ago I found a few people in the far west who were not acquainted with this fact; but they were learning.

OUR COLLEGE

Our Mount Olive Junior College is growing by leaps and bounds. Get the reports made at our State Convention and at some of our benefit suppers and you will see the marvelous growth of the past ten years. Ten years ago there were some people who opposed the institution and fought it; but today this institution is being recognized by the leading educational institutions of the United States. By the fall of 1965 we expect that the Henderson building will be ready for use; also one dormitory complex for about 132 students will be ready.

LET US BE MUCH IN PRAYER

Let us be friends to our program of work in North Carolina, and not only in North Carolina, but wherever there are those who are building for the cause of Christ and for Christian education that we stand in need of so much. Pray that God will put us over the top for the glory of God.

They Couldn't Sleep

Two missionaries went to a village in Korea where the Gospel had never been preached. It was noised abroad that they had come, and practically the whole population gathered to hear them.

The interest of the people was so great that the meeting continued until a late hour. Finally the missionaries closed the service, and were shown into an adjoining room for the night. But the people did not go away and the murmuring of their voices kept the missionaries from sleeping.

About two o'clock, one of them went back and said to the people: "Why do you not go home and go to sleep? It is very late, and we are tired."

The head man of the village answered, in substance: "How can we sleep? You have told us that the Supreme Power is not an evil spirit trying to injure us, but a loving God who gave His only begotten Son for our salvation; and that if we will turn away from our sins and trust Him, we may have deliverance from fear, guidance in our perplexities, comfort in our sorrow. How can we sleep after receiving a message such as this?"

How could they, indeed? The missionaries, forgetting their weariness, sat down with those poor people and communed with them until the morning dawned.—Gospel Banner.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Please explain, "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days" (Daniel 12:12).—O. L. C., Oklahoma.

ANSWER: Dr. A. U. Michelson, a converted Jew who lives in California and travels widely as a missionary working among the people of his own race, made the following comment on this verse: "The Bible does not explain the period of 1335 days mentioned in the verse. However, 1260 days is identified as the latter half of the Great Tribulation and the difference of 75 days is considered to be the time that will be required for the complete readjustment of the chaotic condition of the world at the beginning of the millennial reign of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Rev. Clarence Larkin in his book, The Book of Daniel, Page 266, says: "While Daniel heard the answer, he did not understand the meaning, so he himself repeated the question, but no explanation was vouchsafed him, and he was told to go his way for the words were 'closed up and sealed' till the 'time of the end,' when the 'wise shall understand.' Then two other measures of time were revealed to Daniel, 1290 and 1335 days. These days were to date from the time when the 'Daily Sacrifice' was taken away, and the 'Abomination of Desolation' set up, which we know will be in the 'Middle' of Daniel's 'Seventy Weeks' (Daniel 9:27). Thus we have three measures of time given in Daniel, all dating from the 'Middle' of his 'Seventieth Week.' First, the 2300 days of Daniel 8:13-14 and these three measures of 1290 and 1335 days. The termini of these three measures of time are respectively 1040, 30, and 75 days beyond the 'End' of Daniel's 'Seventieth Week.' The 2300 days have to do with the cleansing of the Sanctuary, but we are not told what events the other two measures of time lead up to. But we do know that after the return of the Lord at the 'End of the Week' there will be other events of national importance to the Jews, that will precede the setting up of the Millennial Kingdom."

The reason why I quote from these reliable sources is that I have never fully understood many of the statements concerning the Jews and the end time. This verse with all its background and all its implications somewhat puzzle me; for I do not understand why God would bring some things such as this and that seen by reading Revelation 10:3, 4 and 2 Corinthians 12:1-4 out in the forefront and let us know that there are wonders for the saints to come into full possession and full knowledge of in the future but they must remain a mystery to all that read until further revelation at Christ's second coming, unless it is that He wants us to see and understand that there is sufficient wonder and glory awaiting the faithful to cause them to remain faithful under all the odds and evil circumstances that now appear to be and to a great extent are working against us in the immediate activities we are responsible to Him in carrying out. It might be well for us at this point to remember that the Word says: "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (1 Corinthians 2:9). "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known" (1 Corinthians 13:12).

QUESTION: Please explain, "I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil. I the LORD do all these things" (Isaiah 45:7). In what sense does Jehovah create evil?—J. Gray, Illinois.

ANSWER: Evidently the reference is not to moral evil; that is, to sin as can be seen by "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man." There is also evidence that the expression has in mind wars, plagues, and other devastating means which God controls in the natural realm in a way so as to bring chastisement upon certain people who have not repented, to encourage repentance on their part or upon saved people who do not surrender or consecrate their lives as readily as they should. This which God brings or allows is in definite contrast to peace, quietness, and natural blessing or complacency as can be seen in the reading of the context from these verses. Persia, Babylon, Cyrus, and Nebuchadnezzar are compared. Here He purposes to give prosperity to the one and calamity to the other. The Persians, represented by Cyrus, believed in two coexistent, eternal principles, ever struggling with each other, light and darkness, or good and evil. Ormazd was the name of one god; Ahriman of the other. But Jehovah here asserts His sovereignty over both. It is He who does these things, creating light and darkness, good and evil; i.e., giving blessings in one place and the judgment or cursing in the other. Even though the Persians were far from being obedient to God as they may have been in keeping with the covenant, they had not gone as far in their rebellion as the Babylonians; so God would use them to destroy Babylon, and the Greeks to destroy Persia later.

A Habit That Kills

While visiting a military camp during the Civil War, President Lincoln said that he would rather see his two boys die on the spot than to grow up and become profane men.

Did you ever think of swearing as such a serious habit? Lincoln would rather have seen his boys die than to have them grow up with a habit that kills.

"Kills?" you say. "How can swearing kill?" First of all, this habit kills your self-respect. When you use profane language you begin to rate yourself too low. Second, you kill your regard for others. And third, you kill your reverence for God. You see, it is a habit that kills.—The Christian Messenger.

JUST A SISSY

Tom Young

FATTY PHILBERT wasn't really a sissy, but he knew it was practically impossible to prove that he wasn't to Freddy Rice and Frank Peterson.

"Come on, Fatty," Freddy shouted from across the vacant lot, "we're going over to the old saw mill."

Fatty leaped to his feet and dashed across the lot as fast as his short legs would carry him.

"Hurry up, Fatty," Frank yelled. "You run like a flabby old walrus."

"And if you're not careful, you'll lose a ton of extra weight," Freddy teased.

Fatty smiled sheepishly. "I'm sure sweating, and that's for sure," he admitted. "Maybe if I keep this up I'll get nice and lean like a bean pole."

Freddy and Frank laughed. After all Fatty was a good sport and they liked him. They couldn't help liking him.

"Let's see, tomorrow is Sunday," Freddy began as they walked along. "What are you going to do tomorrow Frank?"

"Going fishing, I guess," the tall, red-headed boy answered casually. "Dad said he's going to take me to Lake Trinidad."

"That's great!" Freddy observed. "What about you, Fatty?"

Fatty reddened at the question. He knew what was coming. "I'll be in Sunday School and church as usual," he answered as sincerely as possible. Frank snickered; Freddy laughed out loud.

"Does going to church help you gain weight?" he jeered. They they roared loudly. Fatty was hurt. He could stand to be teased about his weight and to be called "Fatty" when his real name was "Bruce," but he knew it was wrong to talk about church that way. Freddy was going too far!

Fatty said nothing. To get angry would only make matters worse. To hold his tongue was difficult, but it was the best.

He just kicked a loose piece of bark until the conversation changed to something else, and all the time he prayed silently that Freddy and Frank would receive the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. That would make a lot of difference, Fatty thought.

Almost before Fatty realized it, Freddy was standing behind him on a log.

"Look, Fatty! Here, catch it!"

Fatty looked just in time to see a medium-sized gopher snake hurtling through the air at his head. Of all things that Fatty feared, snakes were the most dreaded. He became practically petrified with terror. Then, horror of horrors! it slipped through his hands and wrapped itself partially around his neck. It was then that Fatty lost all sense of reason. To him that snake was a mortal enemy, and he threw himself fiercely into the battle.

But it didn't turn out to be much of a battle. Fatty slipped on a wet log, fell to his side and rolled to the ground unhurt, though stunned with fear. The snake slithered between two logs and disappeared. Freddy and Frank rolled with laughter.

"Haw, haw, haw!" Freddy howled. "Fatty's afraid of a little ole snake. Haw, haw, haw!"

Meanwhile Fatty crawled to his feet and sat on a stump with his back to the other boys. He was angry, but he was too ashamed to say anything. If he were only not afraid of snakes! As he sat there his heart sank as he thought of his testimony for the Lord. Now he'd never win Freddy and Frank for Christ! He was just a big sissy . . . that's all! Just a big sissy!

Half an hour later the three fellows started for home. Freddy was in the lead and Fatty, as usual, brought up the rear. No one felt like walking fast because of the sizzling hot sun; so they trudged slowly along. Suddenly there was a vicious whirr. Freddy yelled.

"Look out! A rattlesnake!"

Fatty saw Freddy leap to one side as the huge snake struck and the ugly head slashed aside of Freddy's leg. He had jumped in the nick of time. Then beads of perspiration burst out on Fatty's face as he saw Freddy's foot slide between two large boulders and become wedged. Freddy jerked, but he couldn't move, and the rattler was coiling to strike again. Frank tried to pull Freddy free but Fatty saw immediately that he'd never make it.

Something had to be done right then. That snake was going to strike! Without taking the time even to consider the danger, Fatty took three quick steps and flung himself at the snake. His aim was true and his strong, chubby fingers closed with a vice-like grip just below the reptile's head as its coils tightened to strike again at Freddy's leg. Fatty rolled over still holding his grip; the writhing rattler twisted itself around his arm. He crawled to his knees, then to his feet, twisted himself around to get leverage and threw the snake as far as he could.

Later as the boys stood around the snake, now beaten to a pulp with various sizes of rocks, Freddy said seriously, "Thanks, Fat . . . I mean Bruce. You saved my life."

Fatty grinned. "That's all right, Fred. You'd have done the same for me."

Freddy kicked at a rock as though he couldn't find words. "I . . . I'm sorry I've been teasing you," he finally confessed. "You . . . you're really a peach of a fellow. By the way, Bruce, when did you say I'd have to be ready to go with you to Sunday School and Church?"

FOR OCTOBER 25

DISCIPLINED CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT: 1 Timothy 3:14-16; 4:4-12, 16

MEMORY VERSE: I Timothy 4:7, 8

I. INTRODUCTION

Paul, instructing the young man Timothy in regards to the church and its officers, emphasized the need for personal discipline on the part of those that make up the church. We would do well to listen to Paul's words to Timothy indicating that he should take the time necessary to keep himself spiritually fit. This kind of discipline is a means to power. It is by discipline that one becomes skillful in any art or craft, and through that skill he exerts power. Discipline is the secret of the successful athlete, as well as the artist. However, one of our illusions, especially in the area of religious living, is the idea that important achievements will come without struggle or sacrifice. We think that we can have results without responsibilities. Christians need to know that it is not self-indulgence but self-discipline that accomplishes the great things.

If Christians are to exert spiritual power, discipline of thought is necessary. There is an old adage that says, "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." This being so, how necessary for a man to discipline his mind to proper thoughts.

A Christian should subject himself to discipline of purpose. Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." It requires discipline to put first things first, but without things in their proper order no success can be enjoyed.

Having a disciplined mind and purpose, a Christian then needs to have discipline of practice. There must be study and training. One must exert power to gain power. Give grace and you will receive grace. There are four training disciplines that are very necessary to the Christian life and faith. They are very simple: personal prayer and meditation; regular attendance to public worship; witnessing to the reality of the love of God in Christ; and generous, cheerful giving.

The purpose of this lesson is to reveal the need for self-discipline and to help us practice what we know.

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul instructed Timothy to behave himself in the house of God (v. 15).

2. The mystery of godliness is beyond the comprehension of man (v. 16).

3. Everything that God has made is good, and it should be received with thanksgiving and prayer (vv. 4, 5).

4. The good minister is duty bound to keep his people informed of impending dangers (v. 6).

5. There is no place in the church for fables and unimportant things (v. 7).

6. Rituals profit little, but efforts toward godliness are exceedingly important (v. 8).

7. The truths of the gospel are worthy of acceptance (v. 9).

8. God offers salvation to all men (v. 10).

9. Timothy was to be an example to all men (v. 12).

10. He was to give heed to his own relationship to God and to the doctrine that he preached (v. 16).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. A Christian blacksmith was going through the deep, dark waters of sorrow and suffering, trials and tribulations. An unbeliever said, "If God loves you, why does He not spare you from trials and suffering?" The blacksmith said, "I don't think I can account for these things to your satisfaction, but I can to my own. I often take a piece of iron and bring it to white heat. Then I put it on the anvil and strike it to see if it will take temper. If it will, I put it back in the fire again. If I find that it will not take temper, I throw it on the scrap heap. My heavenly Father has been testing me. Daily I have prayed, 'Lord, put me in the fire. Do anything you please but don't throw me on the scrap heap!'

2. A minister knelt at an altar beside a young woman who was bowed and weeping. She had gone forward seeking Christ and His forgiveness. The minister talked to her. She listened silently, her face cupped in her hands. "Have you surrendered your all to Christ?" asked the minister. "I have tried," sobbed the girl. "What is the trouble, then?" "It's the way Christian people have treated me. I'm afraid I'll have to give up my work as a servant. The man where I work now is so cross and impatient with me." "For whom do you work?" asked the minister. The girl raised her bowed head. The minister saw that the girl was the newly employed girl in his home! His quick, impulsive words, his impatience and his domineering spirit had blocked the way of a servant girl to Christ.—Adult Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. The First Epistle to Timothy contains much instruction concerning false teachers and methods of counteracting them. A study of Paul's own experiences with false teachers in Ephesus as recorded in Acts 19 helps one to see why he went into so much detail in I Timothy—and in II Timothy as well—concerning this aspect of testifying for Christ.

The more one can learn about Ephesus the better he is able to understand the appropriateness of Paul's exhortations to Timothy to maintain a disciplined Christian life with respect to sound doctrine. In his Biblical Theology of the New Testament, Ryrie says, "The temple of Diana, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, was like a magnet drawing people to a cesspool in Ephesus. . . . It was also, in the name of religion, a house of prostitution. . . . Superstition invariably accompanies idolatry, and so it was in Ephesus." Wherever Paul went, he unhesitatingly dealt with the contemporary scene as was necessary in order to preach the Gospel. He urged those he led to the Lord to imitate his own example of energetically furthering the Lord's work.

—Bible Expositor.

4. One way in which we judge a person's physical condition is body temperature. If a person is in good health, his temperature should be close to the established normal temperature. When he is ill, perhaps with some infection or virus, his temperature will be higher, and we may he has fever.

Christians need some measure of their habits and activities to keep them within the framework of good Christian living. Every Christian must hold a thermometer of Christian action up to his life at all times. He must control his impulses in order to live an exemplary Christian life. When he yields to an impulse or gives way to temptation, the temperature on his thermometer shoots up into the red section of danger. Just as fever is a sign of infection, so a red "danger" reading on the Christian thermometer indicates spiritual illness.

Keeping our Christian thermometer out of the red requires constant self-discipline. Paul gave specific instructions to Timothy: "in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity" (1 Timothy 4:12). This is not an easy way to live. It requires training. While an athlete must train to keep his body strong, and to resist disease and infection, the Christian must train to keep spiritually strong. This is another reason for keeping our Christian temperatures normal. Train yourselves in "godliness," Paul demands. Then it will be easier to resist the temptations of the world that might send our temperatures into the red. Training, self-discipline, control—all are essential to effective Christian living.—Standard Commentary.

OBITUARIES

INDA T. SANDERSON

On July the twenty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-four,
The death angel came and knocked at her door,
And called a dear mother and a faithful wife
Out of this world of sin and of strife.
She was my dear friend and my neighbor;
Side by side in life we walked and labored.
Words of comfort she would always give you;
No task seemed too great for her to do.
She shared all our sorrows and our treasures;
To help someone was always a pleasure.
She was always ready to lend a helping hand
To lift us out of the sinking sand.
She trusted her God from day to day
That in His presence she would always stay.
She asked for prayers when she was dying;
Our hearts were all sad, and we were crying.
God will someday wipe away all tears,
Sooth our sorrows and calm our fears;
We will meet our sister in heaven one day,
When all God's children go there to stay.

By a friend,
Mrs. Lemmie Taylor
Richlands, North Carolina

MR. FRED H. WAINWRIGHT

On July 30, 1964, Brother Fred H. Wainwright, age 74, deceased this life after a prolonged illness. He was a member of Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville, North Carolina. His funeral was conducted by his pastor, the Rev. James A. Howard, assisted by the Rev. E. C. Morris, pastor of Bethany Free Will Baptist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucy Avery Wainwright; four sons, Marvin L., F. Herman Jr., Horace Q., and K. Rex Wainwright; four daughters, Mrs. Johnnie R. Murphy, Mrs. William H. Yelverton, Mrs. I. V. Dixon, and Mrs.

Garland L. Beddard; and a brother, Jesse Wainwright.

Whereas, it pleased an all wise God to call from us this our brother in Christ, be it therefore resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to Him who doth all things well.

Second, that we extend to his family our deepest sympathy and love during their bereavement, and may they find comfort in Christ.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the Free Will Baptist paper for publication, and a copy be kept for the minutes.

MRS. ESTELLA SERMONS AVERY

On July 3, 1964, Sister Estella Sermons Avery, age 83, was called from our midst. She was a member of Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville, North Carolina. We desire to express our deepest sympathy to her family.

Mrs. Avery is survived by her husband, Mr. James R. Avery; two sons, Coy and J. R. Avery; two daughters, Mrs. David May and Mrs. Allen Stocks; a foster daughter, Mrs. Clarence Moor-ing; one brother and three sisters.

Mrs. Avery was a very good woman, and everyone was always welcomed in her home. Her funeral was held in the Farmville Funeral Chapel by the Rev. L. B. Manning.

We bow in humble submission to Him who doth all things well. May God bless her memory.

Call not back the dear departed,
Anchored safe where storms are o'er,
On the border land we left her;
Soon to meet to part no more.
When we leave this world of changes,
When we leave this world of night;
We shall meet our missing loved one
In our Father's mansion bright.

We submit that a copy of this be sent to the family, a copy to the Free Will Baptist paper for publication, and a copy kept for the minutes.

Raper To Deliver Homecoming Sermon

President W. Burkette Raper of Mount Olive College will deliver the homecoming sermon at Stoney Hill Free Will Baptist Church near Middlesex, North Carolina, Sunday, October 18, the Rev. L. M. Woodall, pastor, has announced.

Raper is a former pastor of the church.

Prayer

Prayer is a privilege that God has given To mortal man. Of all the gifts of heaven Few are greater, and none we use the less.

Prayer lifts the heavy burdens that would press

Upon the soul; it heals the broken heart, And worries, cares, and troubles all depart.

It calms the anxious, sets the mind at rest;

And he who really prays is truly blest.

Wherefore, O mortal man, lift up thy head,

And pray, and seek the face of Him who said,

"Come unto me . . . and I will give you rest."

Believe His Word and tell Him your request;

Be not cast down, but go to God in prayer;

He'll solve your problem, lift your every care.

BLESSED ASSURANCE

Nations, leaders, and powers of the world rise and fall. The pages of history record the names of many. Nations that in times past possessed great, worldwide recognition are referred to only in association with a certain period in history. Great, noble leaders of the past are revered no more. Evil, cruel tyrants are quickly forgotten. Man realizes that in any transition period he must look to the future; he cannot live in the past and he cannot suffice without a strength that is beyond himself.

Never, in any period of human history, has there been such fast-moving events as those in this day. We never know what the next day will bring, what changes will be brought to bear upon us. National events are also international events. Thus, when the news was flashed around the world that Nikita Khrushchev was being replaced as the leader of the Soviet Union, all the world was made to wonder what the effects will be. Months will pass before we really know. This even, however, is not the only one during recent months that has aroused a feeling of uneasiness throughout this nation and the world.

Christians, regardless of the outward circumstances, must not despair. Such problems have always occurred in the world; but in the midst of all these things, one truth is predominant—God has not changed. He is still on the throne. He has not turned His back on human events, nor will He do so. He is still the Lord God of heaven and earth. His will and purpose is supreme. No man is so great that the world will collapse at his passing, for God still rules.

Christians have the assurance that their Saviour is with them. In fact, He has promised that He will never forsake us. If the light of His divine presence grows dim, it will be due to our own lack of faith. This faith, that keeps assurance and hope alive, should become stronger when doubts begin to assail us. Faith produces assurance. Thus, if there is a lack of faith there will be a lack of assurance.

From time to time we need reassurance. For this reason, we must keep in touch with God. Just as it is natural for us to seek the reassurance of love from a loved one, so it is natural to seek the reassurance of God's love for us. Each Christian may have assurance that is "blessed," but we must possess faith in God—especially in these days.

THE TEST OF TIME

According to the "Baptist Standard," September 1964, an interesting observation regarding the Billy Graham type of revivals relative to its lasting effects is given. Opponents to this type of revival, as well as the opponents of the evangelical movement, have claimed that such would not stand the test of time. Quite the opposite seems to be true.

Five years ago, Billy Graham spent six days in New Zealand. As a result of these services, eighty-four "decision cards" were given the Presbyterian minister. All but three of the people began attending church immediately. Today, we are told, twenty-one are active members, twelve have changed churches (through marriage), five have died, and over half have moved to other cities. Thirty-four cards were given to the Anglican church. Today twelve of this number are actively engaged in church work, six attend services, four have left the city and nine are inactive.

If these statistics represent the average number of Graham's decisions who become active in the church, we must conclude that the average is as good as any single church or pastor can boast of. Many do fall by the wayside; but every effort is rewarded if only one soul is born into the kingdom.

The Lost Art of Anger

Stanley Baldwin

IN May 12, 1961, the bodies of two small children, Larry Jackson, 6, and his sister Martha, 4, were found broken and lifeless in the bottom of the Crooked River Gorge in Central Oregon. They had been thrown over the 360-foot sheer precipice in the Peter Skene Ogden State Park there. Evidence indicated they had been beaten with a tire iron. It seemed the work of a madman. It was, instead, the premeditated act of a 21-year-old woman, Jeannace June Freeman, who, together with the mother of the children, did it to rid themselves of the children who were a "hindrance." The mother told a hushed courtroom, during the trial, that she woman companion hurled the boy into the deep gorge "with a grin on her face," so the two women could be together undisturbed.

Does not the thought of such a crime make your blood boil? Perhaps if you saw the photos of the victims as they were shown to the jury, it would. Perhaps then you would understand why the jury's verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree" carried no recommendation of leniency and made the death penalty mandatory.

On September 19, 1962, the Oregon State Supreme Court unanimously affirmed Miss Freeman's death sentence saying she had had an "eminently fair" trial. Thus she was scheduled to become the first woman ever executed in Oregon.

From time to time a crime so heinous occurs that the anger of the public is aroused. But on the whole most of our people seem to have lost their capacity for righteous anger. Many are not even indignant about such an atrocity as this. Some might make excuses for the murderers and seek to find in her background some explanation for her terrible behavior. But even if she were not responsible (which the state wisely holds that she is), what should we think of a home, a school system, a society that would produce such a monster? And should we be less indignant when, according to this thinking, we have witnessed not only the wanton destruction of two innocent children by murder, but we have witnessed also the destruction of a third once-innocent child through abuse and neglect!

Let no one confuse the issue. This is no plea for hotheaded or ill-tempered extremism. Jesus Christ was meek and lowly in heart. Sinless, He never gave vent to outbursts of carnal rage. But when He saw the money-grabbers degrading the House of Prayer into a place of merchandise and a den of thieves, He was angry! "When he had made a course of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple . . . and overthrew the tables," putting an end to their shameful abuses. While others passively allowed that thing to go on, the moral character of our Lord was outraged, and He would not stand for it.

Today our nation, our very way of life is threatened by monstrous evils both without and within. The juvenile crime rate is soaring, and it is time we called it what it is—crime, not mere delinquency. The roots of this malady must, of course, be traced to earlier childhood. Some self-appointed "experts" have led many "progressive" educators and parents far astray. They say that we must not inhibit the little darlings. We must not punish them when they are bad . . . or at least, we must not be angry when we do. Many plausible arguments to support these views are presented. Thus some parents unwittingly condition themselves to permit all kinds of disrespect, disobedience, and other shameful behavior. And youthful criminals result!

Any youngster who defies his parents or speaks disrespectfully to them is a juvenile delinquent in the bud. His behavior is inexcusable. Any parent worthy of the name ought to get good and angry and deal with the little rebel in no uncertain terms. Of course, we are to love our children, to commend them for well-doing, and be kind to them. But we must also be angry with them when they are bad.

Another national shame is our lewdness and exhibitionist glorification of sex. Here, too, we are reaping what we have sown (or apathetically allowed to be sown) in the lives of our youth. Sophisticated 13-year-old girls begin dating (we call it courtship) and all too often end up as illegitimate mothers, unprepared brides, or teen-age divorcees. And largely to blame are parents without enough character to get angry—angry with filthy movies, angry with trashy love story magazines, and even obscene books on the shelves of some of our public school libraries.

Many parents sit back and watch with restrained disapproval while their young people are caught up in the maelstrom of modern popular sin. Teen-agers dress immodestly, make up like movie sirens, talk like barroom derelicts, and behave as if illicit sex were everything. Parents raise their eyebrows a little and say "It's just the day in which we are living. Things are different now than when we were young."

Indeed, things are different! And the fault lies squarely at the doorstep of parents who stand still for it. Away with this notion that we are helpless victims of the times in which we live! People with Christian character shape their times! What would become of the beautiful garden spots of our land if their caretakers would idly watch them being taken over by ugly and noxious weeds while they murmur to themselves, "Too bad! It used to be such a nice garden." It was nice for one reason only: the undesirable plants were mercilessly rooted out; and every care was given to the development of the desirable. How infinitely

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

THE CHURCH AND THE PASTOR

"And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; And to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves" (1 Thessalonians 5:12, 13).

No relationship is more solemn and important than that existing between the church and its pastor, except the relationship between Christ and the individual. It is a spiritual relationship also. It is a dignified relationship. It is a deep, responsible relationship. It is a relationship clearly defined in the Word of God. The duties of both the pastor and the people are comprehensively stated, and plainly placed before us. By taking heed to the inspired oracles, the Christian minister cannot mistake his duties and the way in which they should be discharged; and churches, by the same holy rule, will at once perceive the returns which they are to make to the minister God has placed with them. The Scripture quoted above refers both to the office of the minister and to the people of the church. The pastor is over the church as he labors in it; he is an under shepherd, who is to watch over the flock and to feed it. He is to rule over the church as Christ's servant by enforcing the authority of the truth and by instruction, exhortation, warning, and admonition; and he is to labor earnestly that he may present every one perfect in Christ Jesus. Now that the office and the duties of the pastor have been placed before you, let us consider the obligations of the church to the pastor.

In the text there are duties of the church to its pastor specified. It says, "And we beseech you, brethren to know them that labour among you and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you." To know them means more than acquaintanceship or personal recognition. It signifies that you are to acknowledge them as the servants of God, and to approve them as such; to receive them in their spiritual capacity and office, as your teachers and overseers in the Lord. Now, you are especially bound to do this, from the fact that your pastor is the man of your own choice, by majority vote of your church which believes in and practices majority rule. He has not been forced upon you by any bishop, synod, or presbytery. You elected him and called him to preach the gospel to you. Then you are to know and acknowledge him in his official character as the man of your own approval and choice.

The text continues, "And to esteem them very highly in love, for their work's sake." There must be great affectionate regard by the church for its pastor. You are to esteem him; to regard him of great worth, for so the Word signifies. You are to esteem him highly, very highly. You are to esteem one another. You are to esteem all the Lord's people everywhere; but your pastor must have a high place, and a deep place, and an extensive place in your regards. Someone has said that "next to Christ, he should have no equal, nor compcer in your hearts." Your esteem for your pastor should be in sincere affection—"very highly in love"—not cold admiration. Again I quote, "Esteem, without love, is like the light of the moon, cold, and will sure wane; but esteem grounded in love is like the beams of the great orb of day, cheering and delightful, and will encompass him with heavenly radiance every day." Now, if the conduct of the church toward the pastor is influenced by this high esteem in love, it will be evident; and it will produce a condition quite clear to all. On the other hand, if the contrary is the case, if there is coldness caused by a lack of love, that too will produce an adverse condition that will be just as clear.

Every church, every member of every church, should remember that their love to their pastor will be made manifest by their conduct more than by their words. There is no better way to show your love to your pastor than by your attendance at all services, when possible. If the minister is bound by God's command to preach to you God's Word, the obligation is equally binding upon the church to receive the Word he dispenses. Nothing will compensate for the neglect of this important privilege and duty. This is a great, yes, one of the greatest, evils in all churches. Many attend, at best, only occasionally. Many are once-a-day attenders. Others are travelers like the gypsies, apt to be any place except at home. It has always been the feeling of this writer that your church needs you more than any other, and that members can do more good in their own church than they can by going from place to place. Nothing will encourage and cheer your pastor more than to see you in your place in the house of God at every service possible.

Churches show their love to their pastors by cheerful and affectionate cooperation in his labors. The church is a family, and all members are to be usefully engaged in its work. God says to all His born-again children, "Son, go work today in my vineyard." There are many spheres of labor, and many demands on your talents. Your minister must take the lead, and you must rally around him to support him. But all must be done, by both pastor and church, in love and to the glory of God. Then it can be truly said of your minister, that he is laboring with a chosen people whose hearts God has touched.

There is no greater way for your church to show its love for your pastor than by giving him a constant place in your prayers and supplications. What stress the greatest of all the apostles laid on this when he said to the church at Colosse, "Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving; Withal praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am in bonds" (Colossians 4:2, 3). If Paul felt thus, with his learning, talents, inspiration, experience, usefulness, boldness, and determination, how much more we, who are placed in such inferior circumstances!

Pray for your pastor in the secret closet, in the family circle, as well as in the public services. Pray that he may be filled with knowledge, with great zeal and boldness, and that he may always be led by the Spirit of Christ. Pray for his continued success, and help God answer your prayers by doing all in your power to make his efforts successful. Let your pastor never, never be forgotten in your prayers. In this way you will prove that you highly esteem him in love.

Haitian Churches Damaged by Hurricane Cleo

AUX CAYES, Haiti (EP)—Twenty churches associated with the West Indies Missions here were damaged when Hurricane Cleo struck on August 24, 1964. Of the twenty damaged by Cleo, five had also been hit by Flora ten months earlier. The St. Jorges Church, rededicated on Sunday, August 23, lay in ruins on Monday after Cleo's assault.

The mission center near Aux Cayes was also devastated by Cleo, but the national workers and orphans as well as the missionary families escaped injury. The clinic, the Bible school, the orphanages, and the missionary homes will have to be rebuilt and reequipped.

Radio Station and Hospital Dedicated

LATACUNGA, Ecuador (EP)—The inauguration of Radio Station HCUE-6 and Hospital Runatacuayac of the Gospel Missionary Union was held here recently. The station will begin on a limited scale, broadcasting three hours each evening.

A Quichus believer from Peru has provided the station with many hymns and choruses in the pentatonic scale of the Incas, giving them a new kind of music for the Indian-oriented programs.

Bible Most Translated Book, Says Unesco Survey

NEW YORK (EP)—The Bible still is the most translated book in the world, topping translations of books about leading Communist figures, it was announced here by the American Bible Society.

The Society said figures in the latest UNESCO Index Translationum, for 1962, show 251 Bible translations during that year. The Index covers 70 nations.

Next in frequency were 206 books about Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and 182 about Vladimir Lenin. Khrushchev translations have shown a drop since 1959, it was noted, and Lenin translations have decreased steadily since 1955. Bible translations dropped slightly in 1961.

The Free Will Baptist

Translations of books about Joseph Stalin have taken the most marked drop, the Society said, from 200 in 1955 to only one in 1962. In the same period, Mao Tse-Tung translations slipped from 18 to three.

While 81 translations of Karl Marx were completed in 1956, the total was 55 in 1962.

Total translations for any one country were highest in the USSR, with Germany, Czechoslovakia, the Netherlands, Spain, France and the U.S.A. next in order. A total of 32,787 books were translated in the 70 reporting countries.

N.E.A.'s Taylor Calls for National Day of Prayer

WASHINGTON, D. C. (CNS) — A call for a national day of repentance and prayer on November 1 before voting was issued today by Dr. Clyde W. Taylor, general director for the National Association of Evangelicals.

Dr. Taylor said, "On the one hand we seem to have a total apathy toward our fellow men—morally, ethically and politically. But where our personal concerns are directly involved, expediency is the rule.

"The personal integrity of the candidates and their commitment to historic American principles along with an active concern for today's man in today's world," Dr. Taylor continued, "must be the only basis for candidate selection since great moral principles are at stake."

Dr. Taylor went on to review the state of the nation as characterized by the "low tide of morality, the perverted ethical standards of public figures and the total frustration of large segments of the nation's citizens as they approach the elections."

"For America, the greater patriotism is founded on our Christian heritage with a broad moral and ethical base," said Dr. Taylor. "I fear this foundation is in jeopardy and therefore now call upon all Christians to join in a national day of repentance and prayer on November 1 that the will of God may be effected in our national affairs."

Billy Graham Plans European Crusade

COPENHAGEN (EP) — Plans are being laid for two European crusades by evangelist Billy Graham.

Dr. Graham is expected to conduct a crusade in Copenhagen in May, 1965, and another in West Berlin on October, 1966. The Copenhagen crusade is believed to be his only scheduled engagement outside the United States during 1965.

Methodist Membership Now 10,304,184

EVANSTON, Ill. (EP)—A membership increase of 69,198 last year in The Methodist Church in the U.S. brought the grand total to 10,304,184.

The total does not include 1,812,493 preparatory members (baptized children) on local church rolls. But included are 28,988 ministers—a gain of 291 over a year ago—and 6,762 supply pastors.

Among ministers are 246 ordained women—a reduction of 28 in the past year. The denomination now has 38,908 organized local churches, about 80 fewer than were reported in 1963.

The statistics were released by Dr. Don A. Cooke, general secretary of the denomination's Council on World Service and Finance.

Church school membership was given as 6,768,170, a drop of about 69,000 from last year. Average Sunday school attendance for all age groups fell some 8,000 to 3,676,717.

The Gideons have done a great service to people away from home by placing Bibles in the rooms of America's hotels. There are many stories of the influence of these Gideon Bibles; somehow, we like best the one that tells of the message written on the flyleaf of one of these hotel Bibles by a passing guest: "Dear Lord, please help me to resist temptation—and linens belonging to the management of this hotel."—Frank S. Mead in 1963 Tarbell's Teachers' Guide (Fleming H. Revell Company).

If God and conviction lashes your conscience, it may be just the lashing that you need in order to save your soul. Better take heed to the lashing and repent with a broken heart and a contrite spirit.—Walter E. Isenhour.

Revival Services in Progress At Vanceboro Church

Revival services began at the First Free Will Baptist Church of Vanceboro, North Carolina, October 19, and will continue through October 24. The evangelist for these services is the Rev. W. A. Hales, pastor of First Free Will Baptist Church of Kinston. The Rev. Owen Arthur is pastor.

The public is cordially invited to attend the remaining services of this revival, which begin at 7:45 each evening.

More Than $4,000 Given To Development Fund

Fifteen Free Will Baptist churches in Wayne County contributed $4,152 Wednesday night to the development fund of Mount Olive College. The gifts were presented at the Wayne County benefit dinner held at the Wayne Center in Goldsboro with an attendance of approximately 200 people.

Gifts this year exceeded by more than $1,000 the amount given at the dinner last year, Charles H. Harrell, college business manager reported.

Hardy Talton of Pikeville served as chairman of the steering committee and the Rev. Joseph Ingram of Goldsboro presided. Other members of the steering committee included Mrs. Roy Outlaw of Dudley, Mrs. Ellsworth Sutton of Mount Olive, and W. P. Grant of Goldsboro.

President W. Burkette Raper reviewed the progress of the college during its first decade and outlined plans for the $1 million development program on the new 90-acre campus. He reported that work began Monday on an academic building and a dormitory complex for which contracts totaling $815,000 have been awarded.

The Wayne dinner was one of a series of benefit dinners being held by Free Will Baptists throughout North Carolina in a program to raise $115,000 for the new campus during the 1964-65 fiscal year.

A cordial welcome is extended former pastors, members and friends to attend. Especially are all singing groups invited to come and render special music.

Buffalo Hunt in East Rockingham Leagues

The Free Will Baptist leagues of the East Rockingham, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church held a Buffalo Hunt during the month of September in which all the leagues competed. The young people's leagues, "The Cowboys," competed against the adult leagues, "The Indians," in searching for Buffalo nickles which represented "meat." "The Cowboys" were victorious and enjoyed a party given by "The Indians." A total of 200 Buffalo nickles were found and a total of $11 was sent to the Children's Home at Middlesex.

A similar contest is being held in October and continuing through November 8, or Armistice Day, in which the leagues are searching for Liberty Head dimes. The proceeds from this search

OBITUARIES

CICERO SUMNER

On May 13, 1964, our brother in Christ, Cicero Sumner, passed away unexpectedly. He had been in declining health for several years. He was born July 19, 1891, making his stay on earth 73 years.

He took membership with Sandy Plain Free Will Baptist Church, Beulaville, North Carolin, at an early age and was ordained as a deacon December 15, 1938. He was very active as long as his health permitted.

We desire to express our deepest sympathy to his wife and others who feel keenly our loss and to pay loving tribute to his memory as a faithful servant of the Lord.

We, the members of Sandy Plain Free Will Baptist Church, hereby set forth expressions of mutual sorrow to his family.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. Claudie Sumner
Mrs. Coy Summer
Mrs. Frank Baker

MISS ALICE JOHNSON

We, the members of High Hill Free Baptist Church, Scranton, South Carolina, wish to express our deepest symapthy in the loss of our 'dear' Miss Alice Johnson who departed this life on August 20, 1964. She labored with joy in the church as a Sunday school teacher, president of the woman's auxiliary, assistant choir director, and a sa member of the finance committee. She is greatly missed, but her Christian ways have set a shining example for us to follow.

ATTENTION N. C. WOMAN'S AUXILIARIES!

Dear Co-worker:

Will you please allow me to give some information concerning the Anna Phillips Loan Fund? More than a quarter of a century ago some women in North Carolina saw the need of making some provisions to help further Christian education for our youth.

In 1938, Mrs. Katie Sawyer Jackson, Ayden, North Carolina, began by organizing a fund for the above purpose; and she decided to call it the "Anna Phillips Loan Fund" in honor of Mrs. Anna Phillips, wife of the Rev. E. T. Phillips, editor of our Free Will Baptist paper. Mrs. Phillips had been very faithful in helping students who attended the old Free Will Baptist Seminary at Ayden. She always had room in her home for them, helped in material ways as much as possible, and always helped with her prayers and encouragement. Since its organization many young men and women have been helped who otherwise might never have gone to college.

This fund today is sponsored by the North Carolina Free Will Baptist Woman's Auxiliary Convention and is administered by a committee elected by the said body and is financed by each local auxiliary making regular contributions. We have a chart, which may be purchased from the Press at Ayden, which when filled will be worth $20, and the money collected from the same should be sent to the chairman-treasurer so that a reserve fund will always be on hand when it is needed. We feel many auxiliaries can do even more. However, it seems some of the auxiliaries have forgotten that this is one of our opportunities and responsibilities as Christian women in laboring together with God.

May we, your committee, have your fullest support in sending funds for this most worthy cause? We need trained men and women in our denomination in all phases of life. There are those that are looking to us to help them in securing needed money to go to college. The fund can only help with what you provide it with. The committee can do what you let us do.

All applicants must be worthy Christians within our denomination and must reside in, and attend a college in North Carolina. The amount of any one loan is $500, which may be obtained in a lump sum or by installments. Application blanks and information may be secured by writing to the name and address below. All money should be sent directly to the treasurer for this loan fund. Send all mail to the chairman-treasurer, Mrs. Lillie Mac Sasser, Route 2, Box 97, Goldsboro, North Carolina 27530.

I shall be looking to you, dear co-worker, for immediate response.

Your servant and member of Loan Fund Committee,
Mrs. Hardy Talton

CENTRAL CONFERENCE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

The woman's auxiliaries of the Central Conference of North Carolina are sponsoring a Youth Fellowship meeting on October 30, 1964, at the Winterville school lunchroom. Registration will begin at 6:30 p.m. and supper will be served at 7. The meal will consist of barbecue, pie, and drink. The cost will be $1.00 per plate. Those who plan to attend are requested to contact Mrs. Norman Ard, Ayden, before or by October 27.

Those who are interested in organizing a youth auxiliary are invited to attend. The program will feature a chalk talk by Tommy Manning, magic time with the Rev. Norman Ard and the Rev.

Willis Wilson, a report of the promotional work by Mrs. D. W. Hansley, and chorus singing and special music.

WESTERN DISTRICT AUXILIARY CONVENTION

The ladies of Stencil's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church near Kenly, North Carolina, were host to the Western District Woman's Auxiliary Convention on Wednesday, October 7. The theme for the day was "Laborers Together With God." After a panel discussion concerning the various phases of the Christian Service Fund, the Rev. Fred Rivenbark delivered the convention message. He stated that there is a need for a common faith in God. He said, "This will produce a common zeal to preach and to serve because we will have a common love for God, for the brethren, and for the lost."

After a picnic lunch, Mrs. Deanna Ferrell was recognized as the oldest member of the convention. Mrs. H. G. Watson was also recognized for her fifty-eight years of service, and Mrs. Robert Langley as the youngest member. Each of these ladies was presented a lovely corsage.

CAPE FEAR AUXILIARY CONVENTION

The Cape Fear Woman's Auxiliary Convention met with Robert's Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Dunn, North Carolina, Wednesday, October 14. The convention theme was "Sowing Precious Seed." The Rev. Walter Reynolds, president of the North Carolina State Convention, was the speaker for the day. He told the convention that the growing unbelief, indifference, liberalism, and worldliness were a challenge for all people to fulfill the commission of Christ to go, teach, and baptize that people may be delivered from their sins. Mr. Reynolds said, "If this command of Christ is obeyed, He will keep His promise to be with us always. The secret of success for this work is love for Jesus, faith in God, and intercessory prayer. The result will be that many will receive the blessings of Christ, the only Saviour, as they take part in the various phases of our denominational work as presented at this convention." The closing challenge was, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields and see."

CONVENTION
EDUCATIONAL RECOMMENDATION

The North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, in its 1964 session, meeting at Wilson, September 16, 17, adopted the following report and recommendation from the Board of Christian Education:

Whereas the education level of our present society is ever increasing, and therefore the educational level of Free Will Baptists is also increasing, and

Whereas the future of our denomination depends in a great measure upon the ability of its leadership, and its leadership hinges upon the availability of a God-called, fully dedicated, prepared ministry; therefore, the Board of Christian Education recommends that the State Convention of churches of the Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina recommend to its member conferences and associations that two years of college (sixty-four semester hours or its equivalent) be required for all candidates under thirty-five years of age that come before them for ordination.

The following motion was also passed: "That the North Carolina State Convention explicitly state its position that compliance with the recommendation regarding two years of college education for ministers shall not be a requirement for membership in this Convention."

CONVINCED!

When William Gladstone was prime minister of Britain, he refused to appoint Dr. A. H. Sayce, a noted expert on Assyriology, as professor of history at Oxford University. Dr. Sayce held some critical views about the Bible, doubting the historical accuracy of some Old Testament stories.

When the great scholar went to the Near East and began to engage in archaeological research, he changed completely his views about the Bible. As he excavated the ruins of Bible lands, and discovered ancient records paralleling Bible incidents, he became convinced that the Bible is historically right. He openly acknowledged his firm belief in the accuracy and integrity of the Scriptures.

|| AND ||

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE UNCHANGING GOD

Listen to the unchanging God. He says: "For I am the LORD, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed" (Malachi 3:6). May we notice the mercy of God. God had promised Jacob the great blessings of life and prosperity, but the sons of Jacob had disobeyed God. They had "robbed" God. Jacob was a tither. He vowed at Bethel that if God would go with him and bring him safely back to his father's house that he would give the tenth of all his income unto the Lord. But the descendants of Jacob had backslidden to the point that they no longer obeyed the teaching of Jacob, the head of all Israel. They were not being led by Jacob; neither by the Lord God. The unchanging God said: "Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the LORD of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation" (Malachi 3:7-9). They were cursed but not consumed. Why? Because of the faithfulness of God.

I believe that we people of this day are suffering the curse of destructive calamities because of our robbing God. He demands one day out of seven for our rest and worship of Him. Instead of obeying God and worshiping Him on that one day out of seven, we have turned it into a day of sports. We had rather support a day of sports than a day of rest and worship. We leave the house of God and head for the field of sports. We carry our pocketbooks and checkbooks with us to the treasury of sports and neglect

God, and we make big gifts to carry on the sports of the world; and if we give anything to the church, it is a little pocket change.

God sent the flood upon the world because of the sin of the world. God sent destruction on Sodom and Gomorrah because of the sin of those wicked people. God had put a curse on the people in the days of Malachi. Now again may we notice that God says, "I am the LORD, I change not." God will not allow sin to go by without His judgment being sent to those who disobey and disrespect His commandments.

GOD'S WAY OUT

God told Israel, his elect people, the descendants of Jacob, how they could get from under the curse: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse (not a part, but all), that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

WILL HE STOP THERE?

No God goes further than a blessing for the present, but He looks after the future. Here it is: "And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts" (Malachi 3:11). I believe that God means just what He says; God has always punished sin. He says, "For the wages of sin is death; . . ." (Romans 6:23). We cannot sin and get by with it.

God has not done away with punishment for our sins. An individual sinner is sure to reap what he sows: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Galatians 6:7).

A man came to my door one day crying. He was drunk. His wife had left him because of his drinking and the life of sin in which he lived. His child had turned against him, he said. His heart seemed to be broken; however, he acknowledged that he was a drunken sinner. He was reaping what he had sown.

God does not only punish individuals who violate his commandments, but He punishes nations. When He had commanded Israel to bring their tithes into the storehouse, promised them a great outpouring of blessings, yet saw them disobey His commands, He scattered them into all nations; and they have been persecuted in all the nations except Great Britain and the United States.

NOW WHAT?

The United States have robbed God of the rightful worship, and have loved the world more than God; now the perilous times are upon us, and we, too, are hated by many nations. Socialism and Communism are pressing from every side, with the closing out date not faraway. Our only safety lies in a returning to God, putting God and His Church first in our daily life. If we do not return to God, destruction will come in spite of the powers of man.

No President or Congress can survive and give us victory over Socialism and Communism without God. We have tried to buy friendship from these powers, but Satan is in control; and God says: ". . . when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn" (Proverbs 29:2). From here it looks as though the world is in for a state of mourning. You, my readers, may disagree with this writer; but I say that without a repentance and returning to God and His Church, the man who said "I will bury you" will fill the grave. Now don't get mad; I tell you the truth.

"ITCHING EARS"

Years ago Dr. Len G. Broughton held a series of meetings in a church in the West. One night a committee from a prominent church without a pastor came to the service. Dr. Broughton didn't know of their presence. He preached on the coming judgment. The next night, he preached on hell. The following night, he preached on the cross. Each night, the committee was there. Dr. Broughton learned this later.

The committee met and discussed Dr. Broughton as a prospective pastor. Of the 12 on the committee, two voted for Dr. Broughton. The chairman wrote him a letter, saying, "We enjoyed your messages, and we are glad that you have been in our section of the country. Your theology, however, has too much blood, wrath and judgment in it. We are living today under love and not under wrath!"

The following verses summarize the situation: "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness" (1 Corinthians 1:18); "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, turned unto fables" (2 Timothy 4:3, 4).

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Some of the people of some local churches seem to have a weird notion of their membership in their particular church and to think that this belonging distinguishes them as being different from us who do not belong to the particular persuasion they do. I have informed them that members of the true church are members of Christ's body and that this is all that counts and that each local church, if it is correct in referring to itself as a church, is composed of members of the true church. Am I correct?—J. R. C.

ANSWER: Yes, I think that you are correct for that is the very thing I believe the Scriptures teach concerning the church and its members. They say: "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another" (Romans 12:4, 5). "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit" (1 Corinthians 12:12, 13). "And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues" (1 Corinthians 12:26-28).

In the first place you could have a wrong conception or may wrongly interpret what your church-going friends do and say. They may be genuine and sincere and zealous to have such a friend as you participate with them in worship and in carrying on in His kingdom work as you and they worship Christ together, but they may not be well versed in the teaching of His Word; and therefore, in their zeal to help you and to have you join them in their effort, they make the common blunder of so many Christians that try to win adherents to Christ and to their particular group.

On the other hand, it is possible that you think these are modernistic church members that actually do not know Christ as their personal Saviour, which, if true, is a tragedy of the most pathetic nature; in which case, if you are sure that you are a born-again member of the body of Christ, you should be able in a tactful way to point them to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world" and see them saved. It is your duty to so do if you are a Christian and they are not. Remember that Acts 1:8 is the commission to the whole body of Christ or the members of the true church, so now is your chance, if you know Christ in the forgiveness of your sins, to help someone else gain this standing.

Again it is indeed possible that both you and these friends who have membership in the local organization called a church are all without the saving knowledge of Christ; in which case I would urge that you flee without delay to the arms of Him who bids you, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:28-30).

Now remember that as you do this you are to act and labor henceforth as a true yoke fellow with both Christ and all believers that have set themselves in motion at the task of doing all that is possible to evangelize the whole lost world. We have not been saved only to be ornaments in the church of Christ or to act as wallflowers; but we are to be co-laborers in His kingdom work. The Scriptures exhort us to work while it is day. They further remind us that no work can be done when the long night of eternal judgment has been set against the world of unbelievers. There is no easy task for the born-again Christian from the natural point of view. "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another" (Galatians 5:24-26). "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (2 Timothy 3:12).

The only reason why the yoke is easy and the burden light for the Christian is that Christ does not only carry the hard end of the yoke, but also those that are yoked together with Him. We, like Paul, may do the impossible in this relation to Him, not because of our strength independent of Christ and the Word, but because of the strength of Him in whom we work, having Him living, moving, and having His being in us. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. . . . But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:13, 19). We should never forget that, in giving the commission to all of us who are His members, He promised the needed power as He said, "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28:18-20). In Verse 18 He shows us why He can make the promise that is given in Verse 20. If this is not enough for any person, it is because he is not saved, or because that having been saved he has given himself over to a lethargy of disobedience; and this, of course, you do not want; neither do you want its results.

BOYS and GIRLS

GEORGE AND WILLA'S NEW NEIGHBOR

MARGARET N. FREEMAN

GEORGE and Willa watched breathlessly as the big yellow moving van backed up to the front porch of the house across the way that had been empty so long.

Willa jumped up and down, her voice an excited squeak. "I hope there's a girl just my size!"

George said: "And how I do hope they've got a boy or two! Even one boy living across the street would be great," he said, his busy brown eyes on the activity across the street.

A taxi swung up behind the van. "Here they come!" Willa said. A lady got out. "She's an old lady," Willa said, "and she's alone."

"She's alone all right, but I don't think she's so old," George said. She doesn't act it. Look how fast she's walking. Ssh!" he broke off, "listen—!"

The lady was telling the movers where to put the furniture. Her voice was so sharp it carried clear across the street to George and Willa.

"She sounds cross!" Willa said.

"Yes, she does," George agreed, "but remember, Mom always says we shouldn't judge people ever, and especially before we know them." George was 11 but Willa was only six.

"Well, I'm not glad," Willa said tearfully. "I wanted a little girl neighbor."

"Maybe she's a visiting grandmother coming ahead to straighten things up. Maybe there's a whole family coming later," George said hopefully. "Anyway," he added, "grandmothers are awfully nice. Ours is!"

"This one doesn't sound nice!" Willa said.

Their mother came to the doorway.

"I've just taken a casserole out of the oven for our lunch, but I believe I'll share it with the new neighbors instead. You won't mind having soup, will you?" she smiled at George and Willa.

She soon came back with a tiny frown criss-crossed between her brown eyes.

George and Willa waited to bombard her with questions: "Are any boys and girls going to live there, Mommy? What's our new neighbor's name?"

"No, dears," their mother answered, "no boys and girls. Mrs. Downs is a widow. She will live alone. She doesn't seem to be very well, so you children must try especially not to annoy her or make too much noise when you are near her yard."

That afternoon George was kicking his football and Willa was retrieving it for him. Once it flew across the street and landed in Mrs. Down's yard. As Willa ran to get it, Mrs. Downs called crossly: "I don't want you running across my yard. It makes ugly tracks in the grass. Keep your ball away from here, or you'll break my windows next!" Willa heard her muttering as she walked away.

"Mommy," Willa asked her mother, "what's a nuisance?"

Her mother laughed as she said, "A nuisance is a bother."

"Mrs. Downs said George and I would probably be real nuisances. She doesn't like us. Why did she have to be the one who is our new neighbor?" wailed Willa.

Her mother's lips tightened but she answered gently. "Willa, I know it hurts for you and George to be called a nuisance, and sometimes it won't be easy to feel kindly toward Mrs. Downs. But Jesus often asks us to do hard things for Him, and there is one special thing we can do for Mrs. Downs. Do you know what it is?"

Willa thought a minute. "Pray?" she asked.

"Yes," her mother nodded, "do you want to do that?"

"I don't know!" Willa's lower lip was still dragging. Was she thinking, "If she thinks I'm a bother, why should I?"

"She doesn't really know either you or George. When she does, she'll learn how good and sweet you both are. Remember Jesus. He prayed for people and He never paid anyone back for unkindness to Him."

"I'll do my best," George said seriously. "Maybe I can be kind with Jesus helping me."

"I'll do my best, too," Willa promised, starting to smile again.

George and Willa did not forget to pray for Mrs. Downs. They smiled and spoke politely when they passed her house. On Sunday morning when George and Willa and their parents went to Sunday School and church, Mrs. Downs was picking twigs and branches off her yard that the rain-storm had scattered around in the night. When they came home, she was sitting in the porch swing.

"Evidently Mrs. Downs has not found a church to attend yet," said their father.

"I'll ask her to visit ours. I'll go over tomorrow," said Mother. But when she invited Mrs. Downs to go along with them the next Sunday, Mrs. Downs said in a sharp voice: "If I want to go, I can call a cab. No need for you to bother with me."

"She won't even let us do nice things for her," Willa said. "She never will like us."

"She tells us to run along home when we go near her place," George added.

"We'll watch and wait and pray and be good neighbors," said Mother. "Someday she may need us. We know she needs Jesus."

As George dashed past on the sidewalk on his way home from school a couple of days later, he almost tripped over Mrs. Downs sitting on the bottom step of her sidewalk. He stared and

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR NOVEMBER 1

STEWARDSHIP OF POSSESSIONS

LESSON TEXT: 1 Timothy 6:6-12, 17-19

MEMORY VERSE: 1 Timothy 6:17

1. INTRODUCTION

The Christian does not regard his ownership in the same light as the non-Christian. The child of God recognizes that he is a co-owner with God. He realizes that all things come from God, that without His blessings he would have nothing.

There is much danger, however, that the Christian will fail to recognize the blessings of God. The Christian stands in danger of becoming entangled with the affairs of this life to the point that he becomes self-centered. In such a state he does not recognize the hand of God in his life.

God expects each Christian to be a good steward. The faithful and wise steward is one who rules well the household which has been entrusted to him. (See Luke 12:41-48).

The lesson warns against the love of riches. We must guard against the temptations of wealth. We must also recognize that many personal blessings can be shared with God in the relief of others' miseries.

11. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The possession of godliness with contentment is considered a great gain (v. 6).

2. No one is able to bring anything into this world or to carry anything out (v. 7).

3. The Christian should be content with the things necessary to carry out God's will for his life (v. 8).

4. The person who wishes to become rich usually yields to many foolish and lustful temptations (v. 9).

5. The love of money is the root of all evil (v. 10).

6. The man of God should flee all the temptations that the love of money brings (v. 11).

7. The minister should strive diligently to carry out the duties to which he is called (v. 12).

8. The rich must not put their trust in uncertain riches (v. 17).

9. The wealthy should distribute their possessions to good causes (v. 18).

10. Wealthy people should make preparation for eternity by trusting Christ as their Saviour (v. 19).

111. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Because so many of our people are farmers and because so many of them feel that a farmer cannot tithe, we are reprinting a tract entitled, "Why Should a Farmer Tithe?" This tract was written by Sam W. Scantlan and was published by the Southern Baptist Convention a few years ago.

"It is peculiar, but true that the farmer often believes sincerely that it is a much easier task for the salaried man to tithe than for the man who wrests his living from the soil.

"In the beginning all men were farmers and the 'tithe of the land' is especially pointed out in God's Holy Word. There is no place in the Scripture where our Heavenly Father gives any group an alibi, or excuse, to ignore the plain teaching of his Holy Word.

"GOD EXPECTS THE FARMER TO TITHE: If that statement is true (and it is), then the man on the farm must give an account to his God for that which grows from his soils.

"In Leviticus 27:30 we read, 'And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's: it is holy unto the Lord.'

"When did God ever change that? The tithe is moral and not ceremonial law. It stands beside the Ten Commandments in value.

"During the evil reign of King Ahaz, the temple doors were closed to worship, altars were broken down, tithing ceased, and the people turned their backs upon God. Israel suffered untold hardships under the heathen influence.

"When the good king Hezekiah came to the throne, he restored public worship, including paying the tithes and his people were greatly blessed. In 2 Chronicles 31:5-10 we find some very interesting testimonies concerning tithing: The farmers 'brought in abundance the firstfruits of corn, wine and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field: and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly . . . and laid them by heaps.' Then Hezekiah questioned the priests and Levites concerning the heaps, and Azariah said, 'Since the people begin to bring the offering into the house of the Lord, we have enough to eat, and have left plenty: for the Lord hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.'

"THE FARMER EXPECTS GOD TO GIVE: What farmer has not secretly prayed God for rain as he viewed the dry, thirsty land and the withering crops? What music is sweeter to the farmer's ear than the 'rain upon the corn.'

"The farmer plows in hope, he plants in hope, he cultivates in hope, and expects to be 'partaker of the hope.'

"The truth is that we are often very ungrateful for what our Heavenly Father gives us from his bountiful hand. 'A gratitude unexpressed, becomes ingratitude.' The man who refuses to pay his rent is always in trouble with his landlord. The farmer who refuses to tithe expects as much from God as the one who obeys, but he should read the sobering, straightforward message in the third chapter of Malachi. I do not see how any farmer could believe that he is not included: 'Will a man rob God? . . . In tithes and offerings . . . ye are cursed with curse . . . bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse . . . prove me now . . . I will . . . pour you out a blessing . . . I will rebuke the devourer . . . he shall not destroy your fruits . . . and all nations shall call you blessed.' Certainly God does expect the farmer to tithe.

"GOD IS A GOOD COLLECTOR: When a hail storm comes; when disease strikes the live stock; when accidents happen; when lightning strikes; when floods come; etc., do you have 'an acusin' feelin' way down in your heart' that it came because you failed to treat God right? Those things often come to the tither, but he has a clear conscience on the matter.

"Once a young farmer deacon told the following story: He had three big gray horses and wanted to buy another. He had received a check for some work which amounted to $900.00. He was a tither, but in conversation with his young wife they decided not to tithe the check because $90.00 was too much money to give to the little half-time Baptist church.

"Soon afterwards he purchased a big gray horse to complete his teams. He said he thought of his tithe upon paying exactly $90.00 for the mare. Arriving home with his new mare the young deacon went to the barn lot where he had left his other horses. One was lying down in a rather peculiar position. Going over he kicked it and called to it but no response. The horse was dead. He called to his wife. She came running. They still had only three horses. The $90.00 was gone. Their hearts were condemned. "There is our tithe, God is a good collector," he said slowly. "That's right," was her answer."

2. Chlorine is an element that is very useful to man. A few drops of Chlorine will help purify the water supply of a large city. When you draw water from a faucet, it is probable that chlorine has been used to disinfect and purify the water. When you swim in a public swimming pool, your eyes may smart from the chlorine in the water. The chlorine was added to purify the water and to lessen the dangers of infection. When you want to bleach your clothes you pour a solution, probably containing chlorine, into your washing machine. In all these ways chlorine serves us to protect us from disease and to keep us clean and healthy. Certainly we would consider this a very useful element.

Yet if someone gave you a jar containing the heavy, yellow-green chlorine gas, you should know that this is a deadly poison.

This is the way with many of God's gifts. Used with intelligence and moderation, they can be of great benefit. Used indiscriminately and immoderately, they can be deadly.

Money itself is not bad. But "the love of money is the root of all evil" (1 Timothy 6:10). This is true for both the rich and the poor. Those who are rich may suffer spiritually from grasping or using the money in luxurious or wicked ways. Those who love money, and are poor, may fall prey to all manner of temptations in order to get money.

Like the element chlorine, money can be of great benefit. It can be used to spread the gospel, to feed the poor, to build church buildings, and to supply Bibles to those who have them not. But it can also be deadly to the spiritual life. Let us use it wisely for Christ's sake.

Rev. Raymond Hardison and the Rev. Corbin Cooper, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Morehead City. Burial followed in the Gales Creek Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ampie Garner Lewis; four daughters: Mrs. Ada Guthrie of the home, Mrs. Oscar Laney and Mrs. Lena Willis of Morehead City, and Mrs. Etta Willis of Atlantic Beach, North Carolina; two sons: Robert L. Lewis, Newport, and Jack Lewis, Ft. Belvoir, Virginia; eight grandchildren; and eleven great-grandchildren.

I truly believe our loss is heaven's gain. We surely did love him very much and miss him very greatly.

Written by his daughter,

W. F. "BILL" FERGUSON

Hearts filled with love for Willie F. "Bill" Ferguson of Dover, Georgia, bowed in reverence September 12, 1964, as God drew the curtain on Bill's earthly life.

Remaining with his wife, Alice Avera Ferguson, are four daughters, two sons-in-law, and one granddaughter: Mr. and Mrs. William Barnes and daughter Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Daniels, and Misses Phyliss and Elaine Ferguson; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ferguson; six sisters; three brothers; and a host of nieces, nephews, and friends.

We have experienced a great loss; yet, vivid before us are the fingerprints of love, devotion, and service that Bill left on the hearts and lives of all who knew him. His influence for good is unmeasured as simple daily life reveals and unfolds his countless acts of kindness and service to the community in which he lived.

Bill, born July 3, 1915, became an active Mason in 1949, and served for 28 years as a deacon, a good portion of which he was a senior deacon, of Bethlehem Free Will Baptist Church. Here, too, he wore the crown of "friend, advisor, and beloved."

At the sound of his name come endless words of praise for the manner in which he labored throughout his life for God, his family, and his friends.

Could we for a moment look past the veil of sorrow and loss, we would surely glimpse in paradise a triumphant Bill, wearing his crown, "well done!"

BILL'S JOB

They ask the question daily—
Concern within each heart:
"Who can we get for Bill's job?
He played so great a part."

The place he held is empty—
Needing to be filled;
The voice that gave it meaning
Was so quickly stilled.

The reach to find another
Now to fill his place
Remains so much a question,
Written on their face.

But God has given each of us
A special job to do;
And when He calls us home to Him,
We'll know that job is through.

So let me share this thought with you—
That for Bill's place there is none;
The job he did so lovingly
Has been completely done!

MARSHALL KENNEDY

It is with sympathy that we, the members of Sandy Plain Free Will Baptist Church, Beulaville, North Carolina, wish to pay tribute to the memory of Brother Marshall Kennedy, who was born September 7, 1895, and passed away October 23, 1963.

We desire to submit the following resolutions:

First, we pray God's richest blessings on each one of his family and commit them to our heavenly Father for comfort and consolation.

Second, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to "The Free Will Baptist" for publication, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be put in the church records.

Respectfully submitted, then started off again for Mrs. Downs always made him feel a little frightened. But looking back, he saw Mrs. Downs looked strange. Her face was white and her breath came in little puffs. "What's—what's the matter, Mrs. Downs?" he asked.

"I can't move, boy," she said. "Don't just stand there. Go and ask your mother if she'll help me into my house. I stumbled over the rake and twisted my ankle."

George and his mother helped Mrs. Downs into the house and into bed. George's mother called the doctor. George went out, picked up the rake and made a neat pile of leaves and made a bonfire. His mother went home and made soup and apple dumplings. Willa brought some of it over for Mrs. Down's supper. "Now we can do something nice for Mrs. Downs," Willa said, her eyes sparkling.

"I don't think she likes it much having to ask us to do things for her," George said, "but she doesn't have any choice because she's all alone."

"The doctor said she has to stay off her ankle a whole week," Willa said. She was busy running back and forth with meals and to see if Mrs. Downs needed anything. George swept the walks and kept her yard neat and went to the store. Their mother prepared food and dusted and swept Mrs. Downs' house.

George said one evening: "Mrs. Downs is as grumpy as ever. Maybe she still thinks we're nuisances."

"It's hard to tell," Mother said, "but we'll keep on doing our best for her while we can."

Willa got out her crayons and paper and made an "I'm-glad-you're better" card. "I'll put a picture of Jesus on it," Willa said.

Mrs. Downs looked at the card Willa had colored so carefully. "It's very nice," she said.

"I put a picture of Jesus on it, because He has made you well again," Willa told her. "Won't you come to church next Sunday? Mother said you could have dinner with us afterwards. Please, Mrs. Downs?"

"I don't know what to say," Mrs. Downs said slowly. Both George and Willa were sure she was going to say "no." When she spoke at last, she met George's waiting look and Willa's anxious gaze.

"As you say, I am well again, and I am thankful," she said. "Oh, what can I say but 'yes,'" she smiled suddenly, "when you've been such wonderful neighbors?"

Woman's Auxiliary

tist Church met on Friday, October 9, at 4 p.m., in the home of Diane Briley for its monthly meeting. The meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Vonnie Williamson. The opening song was followed with prayer by Pattie Williamson. The group repeated the watchword, which is taken from Psalm 143:8-10, and the motto which is taken from Ephesians 4:15. Vonnie Williamson read the devotional reading which was Romans 7:7-14.

During the business session, the treasurer gave her report which showed a balance of $4.14. A total of $1.20 was then collected, making a total of $5.34 in the treasury. The secretary read the minutes of the last meeting, and they were approved. The roll was called with 17 members present.

Randall Williamson, Mike Griffin, Donna Briley, and Nancy Garris had parts on the program. The next meeting will be with Nancy Garris. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Gerald Briley.

Newport, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting Tuesday night, October 6, at the home of Mrs. Reta Cannon. The meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Mrs. Jean Rowe, who read the Scripture taken from Ezekial 22:23-31. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Rena Kirk. The program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" was given by Mrs. Pat Gurganus, Mrs. Teresa Mann, Mrs. Brantly Meers, and Mrs. Dorothy Riggs.

The group sang "Wherever He leads I'll Go." There was a short business session, followed with another song, "Take My Life and Let It Be." Mrs. Nina Lee Kelly dismissed the group with prayer, and the hostess served delicious refreshments.

greater the tragedy when the once beautiful garden of the child-soul goes to ruin because the God-appointed caretaker, the parent, is too soft to pull weeds!

The times call for angry men. The monstrous wrongs of our day will never be corrected by a slap on the wrist from mildly displeased parents and leaders. "Be ye angry, and sin not" (Ephesians 4:26). Anger motivates. The wrath of man moves men to curse, to shout, to fight. But righteous angry will move us, like our Lord, to show zeal and strength for God and right. We hear a great deal about following our Lord's example in meekness and grace, and certainly we need a lot more meekness and grace among Christians today. But what of our Lord's holy hatred for sin? What of His example of anger? Where are those who will emulate the Lord in this? Where are those disciples of the Christ who will do something about the evils that others tolerate? Anger is a God-given capacity. Let us use it for Him.—Gospel Herald.

Bits From Bulletins

October 15 is a date to be long remembered. Ten years ago hurricane Hazel came to our section of the state. This year Isbell came close and the Russian leaders used this date to make sweeping changes in the head of their party. The people had no opportunity to discuss and vote. Editorial—

THE CHOICE IS YOURS

On November 3, millions of Americans will be given an opportunity that is not afforded all peoples of the world. We shall elect a man—one of two choices—as the next President of the United States. Each voting American will help to determine the choice.

In the election of four years ago, an issue was the fact that John F. Kennedy was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. At that time, this editor took a firm, uncompromising stand against the election of a Roman Catholic to the highest post in the land. Upon the election of Mr. Kennedy, however, we accepted him as our President. During his nearly three years in office, we learned to love and appreciate him as our President. We shared the tragedy and sorrow of his assassination. As of this date, however, our convictions have not changed. Thus, we cannot wholeheartedly support any political candidate or system in which Roman Catholicism is involved. To be sure, in years to come, another son of the Roman Catholic Church will run for President of the United States. However, as stated in an editorial of our writing on November 16, 1960, ". . . Roman Catholicism will never again be a major issue in the United States of America."

The two men who are our choices on November 3 are, so far as we are personally concerned, two distinct choices. President Johnson represents the liberal Democrats. Senator Goldwater represents the conservative Republicans. Quite frankly, we are reluctant to predict the outcome. Whichever the choice may be, he will be our President. We shall pray for him and support him. The choice is yours and mine. There are clear-cut issues at stake. Learn what they are and vote accordingly. If you would like to see a firmer stand against the encroachments of Communism (that is, according to campaign promises), then you have a definite choice. If, on the other hand, you feel that a more liberal policy, with a dedicated effort to understand our enemies, is the best answer to the Communistic threat, you also have a definite choice. Just remember—be sure to vote on November 3.

CARDINAL LAUDS GRAHAM

According to a recent Evangelical Press news item, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston, Richard Cardinal Cushing, has nothing but praise for Evangelist Billy Graham.

Mr. Graham recently visited the cardinal at his home in Boston and heard the Catholic leader "laud the effectiveness of the Boston Crusade."

The cardinal told newsmen, "I only wish we had a half-dozen men of his caliber to go forth and preach the gospel."

He said that he had seldom seen a religious crusade so effective as that led by Mr. Graham. Cardinal Cushing urged Catholic college students in the Boston area to attend the crusade "because his message is one of Christ's crucifixion and no Catholic can do anything but become a better Catholic from hearing him." The cardinal stated further, "I'm 100 percent for Billy Graham. He is extraordinarily gifted."

Mr. Graham thanked the Catholic prelate for the "generous welcome" he had extended to the crusade in his statement and in "The Pilot," archdiocesan newspaper.

The evangelist said that he had also thanked the cardinal for an editorial, "Bravo, Billy!" which had appeared in the archdiocesan weekly in 1950. He said that the salute 14 years ago from a highly influential Catholic publication had "created a good impression among Christians around the world."

In view of the usual policy of Catholic leaders regarding the work of Protestants, we can only say, "How about that!"

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment One)

BEFORE WE can intelligently discuss this question, it will be necessary to endeavor to establish just what group, or groups, of people we are talking about. In other words, who are the true Original Free Will Baptists of today? Let us see, first, the answer history gives us.

It is generally conceded by historians that there were Baptists holding to the principle doctrines confessed by modern Original Free Will Baptists in existence in North Carolina, Maryland, and Virginia, and perhaps in some other states, as early as 1690; and that there was some kind of general organization of these churches in existence around the year 1699. However, the names of those who established these churches, along with most of the facts about them, have been lost in the dim light of early records.

The date generally accepted by historians as the beginning of our history, as a people separate and apart from other denominations, is 1727, in which year a church known as Shiloh was organized on the Chowan River in Perquimans County, North Carolina, by Paul Palmer. From this beginning, we have a continuing historical account of churches "united in like faith and interests" to the present.

A general organization of these churches is known to have been in existence around the year 1748, which was prior to the founding of a church of similar faith by Benjamin Randall in New Durham, New Hampshire, in 1780. Apparently, the use of the name Free Will began around the year 1750, when ministers preaching our faith were referred to as being "of the Free Will order."

The year 1755 saw the beginning of a tremendous effort upon the part of the Calvinists to bring these churches back into line with Calvinism. There were eighteen churches in existence at that time; and, fortunately, historians have recorded for us the names of thirteen of them. This list includes only three that have survived until the present—Gum Swamp, in Pitt County, North Carolina, and Little Creek and Grimsley, in Greene County, North Carolina. All the others of the original group were either lost to the denomination or were eventually disbanded.

Let us follow the course of these three churches which survived the early proselyting efforts of other sects. Following the confusion resulting from the so-called Calvinist revival of 1775, there were about ten churches that refused to go into the Kekukee Association (Calvinist), and eventually became members of the General Conference of North Carolina, which in time was divided into two and then four conferences. After churches were lettered out to form the Western, Eastern, and Cape Fear Conferences, the remaining part of the Old or General Conference, changed its name to the Central Conference—which today is the true continuation of the original organization of Free Will Baptists. The three churches whose history dates back to within one or two years of the founding of the first, or original, Free Will Baptist church, and which have belonged at all times to successive organizations of the original churches, are now members of the Central Conference—the "mother conference" of Original Free Will Baptists. They are the only churches which have been continually united in "like faith and interest" from the beginning.

Our basic conclusion concerning who the Original Free Will Baptists are would be: They are Gum Swamp, Little Creek; and Grimsley Free Will Baptist Churches of North Carolina, and all those who are united with them in "like faith and interest" throughout the world.

(In next week's installment, we will endeavor to show how Original Free Will Baptists have survived several unfortunate relationships, and efforts of enemies within to destroy them, and enemies without to consume them.)

The pastor of a large, urban church preached an eloquent, moving missionary sermon one Sunday on the theme, "Here am I, send me." After the service was over and the family had returned to their home, the minister's lovely young daughter came to him and said; "After that sermon, Dad, I have decided to go as a foreign missionary." Without realizing what he was saying, the minister exclaimed, "But, darling, I didn't mean you!" Christ challenges us to give our nearest and dearest. Only so can we be worthy of Him.—Helen Kingsbury Wallace in Meditations on New Testament Symbols (Fleming H. Revell Company).

One of the water spiders fashions a balloon-shaped nest of cobweb filaments and attaches it to some object under water. Then she ingeniously entangles an air bubble in the hairs of her underbody, carries it into the water, and releases it under the nest. This performance is repeated until the nest is inflated, when the spider proceeds to bring forth and raise her young—safe from attack by air. Here we have a synthesis of engineering, construction, and aeronautics . . . To me, this is a distinct manifestation of the goodness and greatness of God.—A. Cressy Morrison, in Seven Reasons Why a Scientist Believes in God (Fleming H. Revell Company).

WHY THEY DON'T LISTEN

by MILO L. ARNOLD

THERE'S a reason why children pay no attention when parents speak, and why husbands or wives seem to ignore the voice of their mates. It is natural for children to want to hear their parents, and it is natural for a man or woman to be eager to hear the voice of one he loves. Why is it, then, that parents complain that they must speak repeatedly to their children, or a woman that she can tell her husband a thing one minute, and he vows the next that she did not tell him?

The fault is not usually with the person who ignores what is spoken so much as with the one speaking. By some means he has made his voice annoying to the person spoken to, who protects himself by non-attention. A man working in a noisy factory can habituate himself to the noise so that it does not annoy him. The woman living in a house beside a busy thoroughfare would be annoyed terribly by the sound of the roaring, screeching traffic if she continually listened to it; but she teaches herself to ignore it. Thus she can live contentedly and serenely in the midst of the confusion.

When a mother repeatedly speaks to her child in a complaining, nagging, unpleasant voice, or finds fault with him almost every time she talks to him, her voice becomes annoying. The child is disturbed and made nervous by it, and to protect his health he builds a wall about himself. He cannot run away from home to escape the irritating voice, so he pays no attention to it. The mother, finding that the child ignores her, makes her voice yet more irritating in order to get over the barrier. She speaks more sharply and loudly, which causes the child to unconsciously build a higher wall of self-protection.

The wife who constantly whines or nags, finding fault, criticizing others, or pitying herself, would cause her husband's nerves to break if he did not do the one thing God enabled him to do—pay no attention to it, just as he would do if he worked in a noisy factory.

If we want to be heard, we must make our voice pleasing to those to whom we speak. We should cultivate a soft, low-pitched tone which will not be tiring, and we must speak slowly enough that we can be understood. We should let our loved ones hear us laugh and sing about the house. We should tell pleasant things and share enjoyable experiences. We should plan pleasant conversation for mealtimes, and keep smiling voices.

Today we are about to forget the fine art of conversation in the home. Our children are entertained by outside interests until they come home, and when they are inside the door, they are entertained by the TV or the radio. Parents do not speak to them until time to tell them to prepare for supper. They seldom communicate with their children save to instruct them, scold them, or hurry them. If parents visited with their children, read them stories, told interesting things, and shared their pleasures, they would listen eagerly.

Non-attention is not natural. By nature we are eager to hear the voices of persons we love. If you find that members of the family are paying too little attention to what you say, study your habits. Do you speak pleasantly at least ten times for each time you must instruct or scold? Do you keep your voice cheerful and gay? Do you laugh or sing? Do you treat your loved ones as though they were important? Do you listen to what they say to you? Could it be that your voice is ignored rather than their duties? Find out the reason why they do not listen, and correct it.—Herald of Holiness.

America's First Miss

Great lights swept the stage: band music grew soft; 50 girls and a vast audience held their breath as Emcee Bert Parks announced the winner of the annual "Miss America" contest in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

"The winner and 'Miss America' for 1965 is . . ."

Among the five finalists stood Miss Vonda Kay Van Dyke, representing Arizona, the forty-eighth state. Minutes before, she was asked if she carried a good luck charm.

"No," the 21-year-old Methodist Sunday school teacher had replied, "but I always carry a Bible with me. It is the most important book I own. I consider my companionship with God not as a religion but as a faith. . . . I trust in God and feel that His will may be done here tonight."

What of the future after the contest? "I leave my future in God's hands and follow His will," she said. "This contest is part of it."

Did she consider herself the "ideal American girl"? "No," she answered, "I wouldn't say I was the ideal of all America. I only hope to be that some day."

What does she look for in a man? "The first thing I look for is a Christian young man because I think this is the most important thing for me. Then I would ask God's help in choosing the young man. . . ."

Miss Arizona, a member of Central Methodist Church, Phoenix, plays the lead in a Christian movie called "Teenage Diary," filmed by Dave Grant Productions. Recently she gave testimony to her faith before some 23,500 people in Balboa Stadium, San Diego, California, during Billy Graham's San Diego County Crusade.

A graduate of Phoenix Christian High School (nondenominational), she is a senior at Arizona State University, where she is studying for a masters degree in speech education. She plans to become a speech teacher.

Earlier in the week at Atlantic City, Miss Van Dyke had been chosen "Miss Congeniality" and received a $1,000 scholarship. She had also performed with her dummy, "Kurley Q," in the talent phase of the contest. Ventriloquism has been her pursuit since she was six and she performs as a singer as well.

"Ladies and gentlemen," the emcee cried, "the winner of our $10,000 scholarship and the girl to be 'Miss America of 1965' is Miss Arizona . . .

"Vonda Kay Van Dyke!"

Backstage a call came through from Billy Graham (who went to see her in New York the following day). She was immediately engaged by Ed Sullivan for appearance on his September 27 show. An apartment on Park Avenue, New York City, was reserved for her. Engagements up and down the length and breadth of North America and across the seas began pouring in. School plans were cancelled.

Her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Van Dyke, arrived home in Phoenix September 20 after seeing their only child win the honor.

"We were just as surprised as Vonda," said Dr. Van Dyke, an osteopath. "This is a wonderful opportunity for her and will no doubt be the greatest year of her life."

"Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."—Norman B. Rohrer, EP News Service.

THE CHURCH - WORLD-WIDE

Mass Evangelistic Effort In Nigeria

KITCHENER, Ontario (EP)—Twenty-four missionaries from the United Missionary Church and over 40 college students will cooperate in a simultaneous evangelistic effort in the denomination's 21 churches in the Yoruba District of Nigeria during the last weekend in October.

The project will not only help the evangelistic outreach of the Yoruba churches, but will also provide valuable experience in evangelism for students from the U. M. Theological College at Ilorin.

Later, in November, three workers from the United Missionary Church will participate in a week of meetings at University College, Ibadan, Nigeria. The Student Christian organization of the university is allowed to sponsor a series of meetings every three years so that all students may hear the gospel once during their stay at the university. This year's meetings will be held November 24-29.

British Missionaries Rescued in Congo

LEOPOLDVILLE, Congo (EP)—Fourteen British Protestant missionaries and their families were liberated by advancing Congolese troops at Lulumba in North Katanga. They had been held since June when rebel forces took control of the area.

The missionaries, all said to belong to the Pentecostal Missionary Society of Great Britain and Ireland, arrived safely in Albertville, where they were to board a plane for Bujumbura in Burundi.

Brought first to Elizabethville, the missionaries reported that in the beginning they were roughly treated by the rebels, but their condition improved after the British Consul intervened in their behalf.

It was reported that six Norwegian Protestant missionaries and their families were still missing in rebel-held Uelc province.

The last news of them was on September 13, according to Asa Kristiansen, secretary general of the Norwegian Baptist Society, whose headquarters are in Oslo. The Norwegian Consul in the Congo is organizing a search.

Pope Says Olympics Can Promote Peace in World

VATICAN CITY (EP)—Pope Paul VI sent a message to Peter Tatsuo Cardinal Doi, Archbishop of Tokyo, expressing his wishes for the success of the Olympic Games in the Japanese capital.

After extending "deferential and respectful greetings to the authorities of the nation," the Pope voiced his "paternal, sincere and fervent good wishes" to the directors of the Games and the competing athletes.

In his message, the pontiff said the Olympiad could produce new and lasting friendships between competitors, thus contributing to world peace.

Pope Paul expressed hope that the athletes, "realizing that they are brothers though from different races and nations, may so act in their professional lives as to contribute fully to honor in behavior, to social progress, to mutual understanding, and to peace in the world."

Japanese Missionary Sent to Egypt

OSAKA, Japan (EP)—A Japanese pastor has become the first Christian missionary from this country to serve in an African nation.

For the next four years, the Rev. Moritada Murayama will work in Cairo, Egypt, at the request of the Coptic Evangelical Church to help it develop a program of occupational evangelism.

A minister of the United Church of Christ in Japan (Kyodan), Mr. Murayama and his wife and two children will be supported during his tour of duty in Egypt by the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Mr. Murayama has been pastor of the Yamato Koriyama Church here and has worked with the Kansai Labor Evangelism Group. The latter is internationally known for its pioneering work in evangelism and social action in the Osaka-Kobe-Kyoto area.

Although Mr. Murayama is the first Japanese missionary to an African nation, he is the fourteenth UCCJ pastor to enter evangelistic work outside Japan.

The United Church of Christ in Japan is an outgrowth of the combined missionary efforts in that country of the United Church of Canada, the Evangelical United Brethren Church, The Methodist Church, the Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ), the Reformed Church in America, the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., and the United Church of Christ.

Clergyman Charges Gross Immorality Among Troops Assigned to Korea

SEOUL, Korea (EP)—Nearly 90 percent of all American military personnel serving here are involved in sexual immorality during their Korean tour of duty, an American Clergyman in charge of the Lutheran Service Center has informed fellow pastors in the U. S.

Many GI's "have their steadies," said the former Army chaplain, the Rev. Ernst W. Karsten. "Some of them 'own' their girls, complete with hooch (Korean dwelling) and furniture. Before leaving Korea they sell the package to a man who is just coming in."

The service men themselves consistently use the figure of 90 percent in estimating the prevalence of illicit sex, Mr. Karsten said. "The men who live in the barracks know best what's going on and it is significant that there is almost universal agreement on a figure somewhere near 90 percent."

Mr. Karsten's three-page letter was sent to some 12,000 Lutheran pastors in the United States by the National Lutheran Council's Division of Service to Military Personnel, at whose request he wrote it.

He admonished his stateside fellow pastors to prepare the young men in their congregations "for what they will be facing—the age-old dangers of women and liquor."

"What's new about them in Korea is their great abundance coupled with an almost universal attitude: 'It isn't immoral; everybody does it,' or the companion attitude, 'At home we wouldn't do it but in Korea it's all right.'"

These attitudes aren't new either, he

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

We, the members of the Shiloh Woman's Auxiliary and the Shiloh Original Free Will Baptist Church of Pinctown, North Carolina, would like to take this opportunity to express our love and appreciation to our former pastor, the Rev. John Grimsley. Brother Grimsley came to us at one of the most trying times we have ever experienced in our church. We sincerely feel that only a real dedicated man of God would have helped and led us through these times. We sincerely pray that God will bestow His richest blessings upon Brother Grimsley wherever he goes.

We are prayerfully looking forward to a new year and our new pastor, the Rev. Horace Medlin of Bailey, North Carolina.

Written this day, October 19, 1964, by order of the Woman's Auxiliary of Shiloh Free Will Baptist Church.

Mrs. Hallet H. Harris,
Church Clerk and Reporter

Kinston, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Kinston met on Monday night, October 5, in the educational building. The meeting began with an enlistment supper at 6:30 with approximately 40 persons present. Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. James L. Lanier of the Arizona-Mexico Missions, and the Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Hales, the new pastor of the church and his wife. Preceding the meal, a trio consisting of Mrs. Fred Register, Mrs. Issac Hines, and Mrs. Joe Etheridge, rendered a beautiful number in song. The program, "Who Will Stand the Gap?" was presented by Mrs. Joe Etheridge. Mr. Hales led the group in prayer and returned thanks for the meal.

Following the supper, the business session was held with the president, Mrs. James C. Lucas, presiding. The roll was called by the secretary, Mrs. William E. Tyndall, and the minutes were read and approved. The recommendations of the executive committee were presented to the auxiliary were adopted. A motion was made, seconded, and carried that the cottage prayer services to be held the week preceding the revival to take the place of the pre-Thanksgiving week of services.

Following the business session, Mr. and Mrs. Lanier showed a most interesting and informative film on their mission work. This was followed with a short discussion period. The meeting adjourned with the auxiliary motto.

Columbia, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Gum Neck Free Will Baptist Church met at the church for its monthly meeting on October 13 with eight members present. The president, Mrs. Allen Jones, presided over the meeting. The group joined together in singing "Tell Me the Story of Jesus," followed with the Scripture reading taken from Ezekiel 22:23-31. The group then prayed together the Lord's Prayer. The secretary, Mrs. Mary Basnight, read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved. Those taking part on the program were Mrs. Allen Jones, Mrs. Polly Ann Everton, Mrs. Violet Liverman, and Mrs. Thelma Basnight. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Mae Cahoon.

Fountain, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Friday night, October 16, in the church. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, president, presided. The group joined together in singing "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." The program chairman, Mrs. Eugene Baker, used Ezekiel 22:23-31 for her Scripture lesson; followed with prayer by Mrs. Robert Oakley. The following took part on the program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" written by Mrs. Paul W. Thompson: Mrs. Eugene Baker, Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, Mrs. Carlton Gardner, and Mrs. Robert Oakley. Mrs. Baker closed by reading a poem, "The Second Mile."

During the business session Mrs. Gardner presided and in the absence of the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Lester Gay, Mrs. Robert Oakley called the roll and received the dues. She also read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved. This was followed with the treasurer's report. A motion was made and seconded to give $10 to superannuation. Mrs. Gardner read a thank you note and prayed the closing prayer.

Fountain, N. C.—The Young People's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Thursday night, October 15, in the home of Dana Paul Oakley. The meeting was called to order by the president, Angie Owens, followed with prayer by the Rev. C. H. Overman. Brenda Goff, program chairman, gave the program entitled "The Measuring Day."

During the business session Linda Morgan called the roll and gave the secretary's report. Dues received were $2.16, which made a total of $20.54 in the treasury. New officers were elected, and appointments were made to different classes for Youth Sunday, which will be Sunday, October 25. The young people will be in charge of Sunday school at ten o'clock and also the eleven o'clock service. The new officers are as follows: President, Judy Carol Bridgers; vice-president, Edna Murray; secretary, Deborah Owens; treasurer, Cooper Goff; and program chairman, Linda Morgan. The meeting will be held next month in the home of Judy Carol Bridgers.

At the conclusion of the business session the hostess, Mrs. Robert Oakley, served refreshments.

Divine Healing

Divine healing is not giving up medicines, nor fighting with physicians, nor against remedies. It is not even believing in prayer, or the prayer of faith, or in the men and women who teach divine healing. It is not even believing the doctrine to be true. But it is really receiving the personal life of Christ to be in us as the supernatural strength of our body and the supply of our physical life. It is a living fact, and not a mere theory or doctrine.—A. B. Simpson.

JONES COUNTY CHURCHES RAISE $1,814 FOR COLLEGE

The three Free Will Baptist churches of Jones County raised $1,814 Saturday night at their benefit dinner for the development fund of Mount Olive College.

Contributions this year were $400 above last year, the Rev. Roy Cauley, county chairman, reported.

Participating churches and the amount of their gifts were Friendship church near Trenton, $1,244, Mrs. Rom W. Mallard, chairman; Pilgrim's Home church near Dover, $344, Mrs. Thomas Hood, chairman; and Whaley's Chapel near Richlands, $262, Fountain Taylor Sr., chairman.

Arrangements for the dinner, which was held in Kinston, were made by Miss Margaret Carol Banks of Trenton.

President W. Burkette Raper illustrated the building program on the new campus with color slides of the first buildings.

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS ON NEW CAMPUS

Foundation work began October 9 on the first buildings planned for the new 90-acre campus of Mount Olive College. Wet ground resulting from a recent hurricane has retarded progress, but it is hoped that more favorable weather conditions will permit workmen to proceed on schedule.

Included in the first phase of construction are an academic building and three small dormitories. Specifications call for the completion of these building by the end of August, 1965.

WILSON COUNTY ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING

The Free Will Baptist churches of Wilson County met Sunday, October 25, at 3 p.m., in the First Free Will Baptist Church in Wilson and planned their 1964 benefit dinner for the development fund of Mount Olive College.

SUNDAY SCHOOL FELLOWSHIP MEETING

Mount Olive College was host to the quarterly meeting of the Wayne County Fellowship Supper on Monday, October 26, at 7 p.m. The meal was served in the cafeteria and the program followed in the college auditorium.

College Holds Groundbreaking for Dormitories

A groundbreaking ceremony for the first dormitories on the new campus of Mount Olive College was held October 15 with members of the Hart family of Ayden, North Carolina, as special guests.

One of the three dormitories will be named in memory of the late J. T. and W. F. Hart in recognition of their pioneer work in Christian education among Free Will Baptists. The Hart descendants are helping to sponsor the dormitory which will bear their family name.

Members of the Hart family who attended the groundbreaking service included, left to right, Thelbert Hart, T. F. Hart Sr., Mrs. Celia Hart Garris, Edward Hill, Mrs. Anna Hart Hill, Bobby Sanders, all of Ayden; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hales of Zebulon; Mrs. Cora Hart Spivey of Maury; Mrs. Mae Hart Barrow of Ayden; Mr. and Mrs. Lynell Spivey and son of Maury.

President W. Burkette Raper, who conducted the service, is shown in the background.

The three dormitories, which will be joined in a complex, will accommodate 132 students and are scheduled to be ready for the fall semester of 1965.

Beaufort County Benefit Dinner

The Free Will Baptist churches of Beaufort County, North Carolina, will hold their 1964 benefit dinner for the development fund of Mount Olive College on Saturday, November 7, 7 p.m., at the Chocowinity School lunchroom.

Members of the county steering committee are Oscar Webster of Pinetown, chairman, Ernest Cutler of Blounts Creek, and Mrs. Mary Webster of Pinetown.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

WE CANNOT TELL WHAT TOMORROW WILL BRING

"Go to now, ye that say, To day or to morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain: Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James 4:13, 14).

Recently in our quotes we mentioned the saying of a certain man who said, in speaking of the United States, "I will bury you." Most people know who said those words. Now the news comes to us that his comrades have buried him politically, and in the near future they may put him in the ground. At least he is buried politically.

However, those who took up the work that he was relieved of may seek to carry out the wishes of Khrushchev and, if possible, "bury" not only the United States, but all democratic nations. I cannot trust Communism for its coexistence with free democratic people. Though Khrushchev is no longer premier, his successors are trained and brainwashed with the same ungodly ideology.

But God is still on His throne, and I honestly believe that if Christians would get right with God and pray as the Early Church prayed, and as Elijah prayed, that all the powers of the Communist world cannot conquer the Free nations of the world. I mean just church members—people who belong to some religious body that call themselves Christians, but who drink and get drunk, scrap their marriage vows and live in adultery, curse and swear and lie one to another and to God, commit all sorts of sinful activities and then play as a Christian on the Lord's Day but live like the devil on Monday, and never attend the hour of worship in the house of God except occasionally. When it is absolutely favorable to their wishes and there is no car racing or ball game or beach convenient, or no special TV episode, or any other worldly affair on hand, and as long as these things are prevalent in the so-called church practiced by some leaders who call themselves Christians, we will continue to have trouble and sorrows and heartaches, floods and disastrous times, highway wrecks in which lives are snuffed out by liquor in the stomach and under the wheel.

BUT WHO IS TO BLAME?

Years ago the majority of the people of the United States voted to give us more liquor. Some people said, "With more we will drink less." One politician told me that our taxes would be less. But he was mistaken, or he lied to carry his point. Another said, "We will do away with bootleggers"; but his prophecy failed. We still have bootleggers. We have more drinking then ever. Women drink unto drunkenness. Because of sinful, drinking women, little children are brought into the world diseased; and they are dragged around and forced to school without breakfast and with no money to get lunch.

The profit that the politicians preached to us that would help to run our government has not come, nor will it ever come. You cannot drink yourself into prosperity.

We are a nation of drunkards. Listen to what God says about your drinking: "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes?" (Proverbs 23:29). The writer of Proverbs answers these questions thus: "They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine" (v. 30). After the writer tells us what the cause of the conditions posed by the questions is, he warns us: "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things" (vv. 31-33). Most drunkards, both men and women, seek strange men and women. The evidence is that a drunken man wants to fellowship with women of his kind; and all manner of lustful, sexual fellowship is practiced. Not only is this so with men, but it so with women. Yet, we have in North Carolina both men and women who vote for more liquor and drink and they drink and in a state of drunkenness drive automobiles and murder others by their damnable drunken state. Moreover, there are people who sing "Oh, How I Love Jesus" on Sunday, if they are not too drunk to get out of bed. These are the things that will keep man away from God.

THINGS OF THE FLESH

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, Envy, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (Galatians 5:19-21).

A true believer, regenerated and born of the Holy Spirit, will not let the flesh control his life. All the things of the flesh are under the control of Satan. Satan runs the shows, the liquor stores, the houses of ill fame, and breaks up home and damns the souls of men and women. If all that is spent for wine, beer, and hard liquor in North Carolina alone were given to missions, the gospel of Jesus Christ could go to all the world. The drunkard should look out and get right with God, or he will hear the words of Jesus as He says, ". . . Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matthew 25:41).

Have faith in God! Do not have faith in fear!

Add this commandment to the list of ten! Let the commandment be: "Thou shalt not fear!"

And when you've said it once, say it again!

"Fear not, for I am with you!" saith the Lord.

What better place for faith than in God's Word?

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Some of the people of some local churches seem to have a weird notion of their membership in their particular church and to think that this belonging distinguishes them as being different from us who do not belong to the particular persuasion they do. I have informed them that members of the true church are members of Christ's body and that this is all that counts and that each local church, if it is correct in referring to itself as a church, is composed of members of the true church. Am I correct?—J. R. C.

If I understand your view of the local church, it is correct; for it is only a group of baptized believers that have consented to a set of regulations that are found in the New Testament to govern their lives as they work together in promoting Christ's kingdom work while they worship and fellowship in this common cause. If a group should find that some members disagree in the interpretation of these doctrines or rules that should govern them while they work together, those who have a different view should withdraw rather than cause a kind of friction that hinders the fellowship, worship, and work.

I remember an occasion when the distance from the nearest local church of our persuasion made it inconvenient for me to attend; therefore, I fell in line with one of another denomination that was conveniently located and claimed to believe and teach largely as we do. A few days after I began attending this local church it participated in a city-wide religious census. I volunteered to help and was teamed up with a business man whose salvation I question. He objected to my presenting Christ to those whom we visited and informed me that all churches were participating and that we had no right to do anything to try to influence those who did not attend one of the churches regularly to attend the church they preferred. In the Sunday school and church services I discovered the same attitude. In a few Sundays I learned that the preacher, the officers, and other members of that church were alike in thinking good works, such as church attendance with all of its auxiliaries and conforming to the pattern they had for such, including taking the Lord's Supper each Lord's Day was all means of grace that anyone needed, that none were actually saved while here on the earth, etc. I soon found a church of orthodox persuasion no further from the dorm where I lived; and even though I did not fully agree with them in matters of church polity, the same gospel of the saving grace of Christ was preached each Sunday as that I believe and that my denomination teaches, and I attended the rest of the school year.

Many Christians have found themselves more comfortable and at home in worship and work with a group different in doctrine and polity than the first they were with after becoming a Christian, and it should be the privilege of all such to change to the teammates with which they can best worship and work while satisfying a correctly Bible taught Holy Ghost sanctioned conscience.

Now coming to another part of your discussion, I am fully convinced that you are entirely wrong to suppose that denominations are devices of the devil and that they hinder rather than help any Christian. Just as individual Christians join together in a common cause and purpose in a local church to help each other, in the same way and according to the same principle, local churches may and have done this from the very early days of the church's activities. They join together in a effort to propagate their beliefs and interpretation of the Bible and to send the gospel everywhere. The church in Rome to which Paul wrote was not just one local group, but several of these located in that city. The seven to which John in the Book of Revelation wrote were among the many churches in Asia Minor, a province of Asia at that time.

The Protestants first tried to reform Rome; when this proved impossible, they began worshiping apart from Rome. The different groups that are now called by different names, such as the Methodist and several Baptist groups, became separated from other groups as they emphasized scriptural teachings as they saw them and thought them to be neglected or not correctly emphasized by the group from which they came.

Wesley and his cohorts did not think that others were methodical or evangelistic enough, not at all aiming to form a denomination, but that is what they did. The Baptists, at least in part, thought that immersion should be the only mode of baptism and that there should be a return to New Testament simplicity in church polity. Many other groups found what they thought lacking, or found something they thought was inserted that was not scriptural to which they objected. Just as it is with those whose views varied enough to hinder fellowship today and such who could not continue with the group that has more or less stereotyped regulations and will not change to the new pattern of the newcomer's opinion of by-gone days, allowed such newcomer to find those with whom he could fellowship. We now call all these groups denominations. If you fit in with no one so that in trying to fellowship with them you find yourself at a disadvantage, then win souls, find individuals among them, and where else you can, that are able to worship with you without undue friction. When you have thus done, yours will be another denomination. You are, don't forget, admonished in the Word to not forsake the assembling of yourselves together. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Hebrews 10:25).

If your different view is worthwhile, you will not find it too hard to lead your new converts to see it. In the words of a pastor of a Baptist church in Sanatone, Texas, "Don't resort to the low crime of sheep stealing"; win your own.

Don't cut across the corner and trespass on the devil's territory in your anxiety to reach a worthy goal.—Selected.

BOYS and GIRLS

THE LIGHTNING BUGS

by Grace Abbott

OF COURSE you've caught lightning bugs. You've done just what little Brucie Morgan did the other night. You've come in the house, all out of breath from running, and said, Mom, mom, I need somethin' to put my lightning bugs in . . . quick!" And you couldn't undouble your fist to take the lid off the jar Mom gave you, because it was full of lightning bugs. So Mom unscrewed the lid, and helped you hurry the bugs into the jar. Then she poked holes in the top so the bugs wouldn't die (not right away, at least).

Brucie had a whole fist full when he came in the house. He even had two or three crawling up his sleeve that had managed to wriggle out of his tight little fist.

Bruce wanted to know something, so he asked Mom, "Why do lightning bugs have little lights in their tails?" Then, after he thought a second, he said, "We don't." Mom thought probably lightning bugs had lights in their tails because that's the way God made them, and probably boys and girls don't have lights because God didn't make them any.

Bruce thought it would have been nice if God had made a little light in him somewhere so he could see his way around in the yard at night. But then, Mom figured out something. Moms always do this, Bruce thought. She figured that if Brucie had a built-in light, like the lightning bugs, he'd never want to come in the house at night, and it would be all the harder to find bedtime.

So, after Bruce couldn't see any longer to catch the lightning bugs, he came in. He was tired and dirty and hot. While Mom helped him get into the bathtub they talked about the lightning bugs some more. Bruce wanted to know,

"How do they know when to turn on their lights?" Mom said, "God made them so they know how to light up, and when." Then Bruce wondered, "Where do they go when it's day?" Mom thought maybe they hid in the tall grass, or in the raspberry bushes, but she wasn't sure. She said, "I know wherever they go, though, they are probably asleep in the day so they fly around at night." This brought a whole new bunch of questions from Brucie, "Why don't we sleep in the day?" "Jonie's daddy sleeps in the day. He goes to work at night." "Why doesn't our daddy sleep in the day and then go to work at night?"

Mom tried to answer all the questions. Then, she decided to ask a few herself. "Do you know about owls, Brucie?"

"Sure."

"They sleep in the daytime, and stay awake at night, too."

"I know. What else does?"

"I'm not sure," Mom said; "let's get you dried now. Then you can get your pajamas on, and go ask Daddy. Maybe he knows some more."

When she tucked him into bed, Mom asked, "Are you pretty tired?" He wasn't. But his eyes were almost shut already! Mom thought he had fallen asleep, so she tiptoed out of the bedroom. She was closing the door when she heard a sleepy little voice calling her back.

"Mommy, I wish I was a lightning bug," the sleepy voice said.

"But, honey, if you were a lightning bug, I wouldn't have a little boy!"

"You could be the mother lightning bug. They have mothers, don't they?"

"Oh, I'm sure they do," Mother declared; "but I'd much rather be the mother of boys and girls than lightning bugs. I do think it's nice the way God made them with little lights, though. It would be fun to fly around and have a little light to turn off and on, like they do, wouldn't it?"

Brucie could hardly hold his eyes open or get his voice to talk, he was so sleepy, but he said, "Yeah. They're neat."

Mother patted a freshly-scrubbed cheek. "I think it's 'neat' the way God made all of the things He made. Lightning bugs that light up, owls that screech, lions and tigers strong and fierce, puppy dogs small and gentle, birds that sing and fly, but best of all, I'm glad He made little boys and girls to live with Daddies and Mothers. Because I love you. Now, go to sleep."

Mother went out into the living room. Eight-year-old Ellen had just come in from outside. "Mama, where's something I can put my lightning bugs in?"

Mother went to the kitchen to help Ellen. From the stairway she heard Davy's radio upstairs, and Susan's record-player in the den. Baby Carol was asleep in the nursery.

"Ellen," mother mused, "I wonder if mother lightning bugs have as much fun with their children as I have with you."

Ellen thought probably the lightning-bug mothers would be looking for their children when morning came, and since she might have captured some of them, she took her lightning bugs outdoors and let them fly away.

"Mom," Ellen said, thoughtfully, returning to the kitchen where Mother was, "I'm glad God made lightning bugs. They're such fun to watch. And fun to catch. But I think the nicest thing God did was make families."—Free Methodist.

MISSIONS

Matthew

Central Conference Mission Work Growing

Through the efforts of the churches of the North Carolina Central Conference, the recently organized church at Weldon was able to build a fine educational building, pictured above. It has five classrooms, baths, and a large sanctuary for worship as pictured below.

When the next building project is completed, there will be a sanctuary and the present building will be used for Sunday school and other auxiliary work of the church. Attendance at all services has more than doubled since worship services began in the new building. The Rev. Vance Link is pastor.

This, and the new mission work at Roanoke Rapids, has made it necessary for the Central Conference Mission Board to go in debt for some building materials. The churches of the conference are urged to send a special offering right away for this purpose. The Rev. Noah Brown is the conference missionary.

The church at Roanoke Rapids is in the process of erecting a new metal building to provide a temporary chapel for the growing congregation. This will serve the immediate needs until a permanent building is erected. The metal building is the property of the State Mission Board, a gift of the Woman's Auxiliary Convention.

An open house program is being planned at a later date to give our people the opportunity to see the progress that is being made, and to rejoice with these two fine congregations.

The Central Conference Mission Board is sincerely grateful for the splendid cooperation and offerings during this conference year. It is hoped that each church will review its record, and if possible send an extra offering right away. It is also hoped that each church in the conference will become a part of this phase of the work. If your church has not sent an offering, and would like to do so in time to have it included in this year's report to the conference, the checks should be mailed to the treasurer, the Rev. Raymond T. Sasser, 112 Hope Lodge Street, Tarboro, North Carolina, not later than Thursday morning, October 29.

"Stir My Heart, O, Lord"

Demographic Yearbook (1963) of the United Nations reveals that the world's population is growing at the rate of more than 46 million people annually. Last year the global increase was a whopping 63 million. It is alarming to discover that countries with the fewest natural resources, lowest food production, and minimal medical and sanitary services are growing the fastest.

What does this say to Christians in this country who enjoy an abundance of material and spiritual sustenance? Does it not strengthen our concern for Christian stewardship? While the average American lavishly spends enough on himself to amply sustain a soul in countries where millions barely survive, while we in America feed our dogs a better diet than the average underprivileged country provides for its citizens, we proudly display as our motto "In God We Trust."

We are nourished spiritually to the point of abundance through the preaching of the Word of God through audible voice and through the printed page. We need to awake to the realization that the population explosion should not be watched with unconcern, but with more prayerful giving.

When Cain answered the Lord with the exacting question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" it was measured out to him in unforgettable language "... the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground ... which has opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand" (Genesis 4:9-11).

The New Testament speaks numerous times about disregard for human need. "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" (1 John 3:17). By parable and by action, our Lord taught that to be Christian one must recognize his obligation of helping the needy.

But the great cry of the world transcends the groanings of the hungry and diseased. Its deepest and most urgent cry is spiritual. The church must answer the call by faithful preaching of the Word of God. This includes both the evangelistic and prophetic aspects of the inspired Word. The church must look thoughtfully at its entire program of evangelism, missions, and education. According to the Bible, the church is basically committed to the proclamation of the gospel. Along with its message, the church, through its redeemed members, is obligated to be the salt of the earth.

Multitudes who lack adequate food and shelter are literally starving for the bread of life. The number of human beings who have never heard of Christ is soaring far beyond the number who

FEARLESS WITNESS

LESSON TEXT: 2 Timothy 1:6-14

MEMORY VERSE: 2 Timothy 1:7

I. INTRODUCTION

Good or bad news usually is passed very rapidly from one person to another. We are witnessed to and in turn we will witness to someone else. This is the way the Lord intended the lost to learn of the gift of salvation that is being offered to them. Those of us who have accepted the witness of the good news of salvation are responsible to witness to others that they might accept.

There are two simple reasons why Christians should be witnesses for the Lord. First, Christ commands it and expects it. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15); "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8); "To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (2 Corinthians 5:19, 20). The second reason is that men without Christ are lost. If a house was on fire and you knew someone was inside, you would warn them of the danger. Without Christ as personal Saviour, men are destined for danger in a Christless eternity. They should be warned! "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:23); "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8).

The purpose of our lesson today is to help young people to see the need and the way to be fearless, unashamed witnesses for the Lord.—Teen-Age Teacher (F. W. B.).

II HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul charged Timothy to stir up the gift of God that was in him; that is, he was to live for God daily (v. 6).

2. The gift of the Holy Spirit accompanied the laying on of hands by the apostles (v. 6).

3. God's gift brings the spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind (v. 7).

4. No one should be ashamed of the gospel or of the one who proclaims it (v. 8).

5. Salvation is the gift of God which was purposed through Christ before the world began (v. 9).

6. Through His own death, Christ abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel (v. 10).

7. Paul was called of God to preach the gospel to the Gentiles (v. 11).

8. Although Paul suffered for Christ, he was not ashamed of Him (v. 12).

9. The apostle again charged Timothy to hold fast to his hope of the gospel (vv. 13, 14).

—Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. "A witness is one who knows something by experience, not through logic or scientific calculation, though much of this is reliable. A witness was there when it happened. One may use this to question the reliability of the Christian pulpit, for there is a supernatural experience, a 'know-so salvation,' which qualified the first generation of preachers and has never ceased to be available. When Paul gave the words of Christ's commission as he received it; he quotes Jesus: 'I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness' (Acts 26:16). This commission is not confined to ordain ministers. It is the duty of every one who receives a New Testament experience of regeneration to witness by letting his light shine as the Lord gives wisdom

—Higley Commentaries

2. "A sailor in Gloucester, Mass., had been wounded in a wreck and was brought ashore. The fever was great and he was dying. His comrades gathered around him in a little fishing house and the physician said: 'He won't live long.' The sailor was out of his mind until near the end. But within a few minutes of his death he looked around and called one comrade after another and bade them goodbye, and then sank to sleep. Finally as it was time for the medicine again, one of the sailors rousing him, said, 'Mate, how are you now?' He looked up to the face of his friend and said, 'My anchor holds! These were his last words. And when they called upon a friend of mine to take charge of the funeral service, his powerful was the impression made upon his hearers when he quoted the dying words: 'My anchor holds!'"—Selected

3. A satellite that is put into orbit around the earth is a witness to the knowledge and the power of the man who put it there. It does not have to say anything, or even to serve any purpose other than stay in its orbit as planned. Still it is a powerful witness.

When a man goes up in a spacecraft and returns to earth unharmed, he has much to say about the men who made this possible, the experience itself, and the knowledge gained from it.

In return for the privilege of going to the spaceman must be willing to face all kinds of criticism. He must be willing to accept such criticism, and, with level head look over it and beyond it to an understanding of the task and a concern for its importance.

Every Christian has much the same obligation as the spaceman. Having received the gospel of Christ and made it part of his life, he must witness of this to others. Actually everything we do as Christians is a kind of witness. Like the satellite that merely goes around the earth, just being Christians makes us witnesses of one kind or another, and we want our witness to be good. We may be criticized in many ways. But we must be willing to accept the criticism with no bitterness, and continue our witness to the gospel.

While the spaceman is backed by thousands of scientists and technicians, we have an even more powerful backing: the Spirit of God. He will give us the courage to speak, and help us find words to use. The gospel message is too important to be limited by our abilities. We must trust God for help, and become unashamed witnesses for the gospel.—Standard Commentary.

4. Imagine you are in a courtroom. The judge is sitting at his bench. The jury has taken its place behind the low railing. Witnesses are called to testify. There has been an automobile accident and a subsequent lawsuit. How did it happen? Who was at fault?

Witnesses are people who were present and saw the accident with their own eyes and heard with their own ears the crash. The testimony of those who know the case only by hearsay, or from what they have read, will not be heard.

"Ye shall be witnesses," Jesus said to His followers (Acts 1:8). They had been with Him during His ministry and had personally seen Him and known Him. Now the word "witness" was to acquire new dimension. The witnesses were to become missionaries. What they had seen they were to share with others. That is a service to which God will call us.

Jesus told His disciples to let their light shine before men (Matt. 5:16). A shining light is worth more than ten thousand sermons. The Gospel according to you, that is, your life, is worth more than ten thousand words you might speak.

A man seeking baptism came from Ningpo, China, to a missionary. The missionary inquired whether or not he had ever heard the Gospel. "I have never heard the Gospel," was the astounding reply, "but I have seen it!" There had been an opium smoker in Ningpo with a bad temper who had learned about the Christian religion and whose life had been completely changed by its message.

Not all Christians are to be pastors and missionaries professionally. But all Christians are expected to be dedicated lay workers for God. Each of us are to be witnesses for Christ no matter where or how we make our living.

A pastor made this comment to an elderly lady who thought her life was least usefulness: "You are doing a great deal for God. You help me preach every Lord's Day." "How is that?" she exclaimed. "In the first place," he said, conceded, except for their "frightening prevalence."

"It's hearing good church people say such things," he added, "that has me frightened more than anything else."

He warned pastors at home against writing their Congressmen of the problem, thereby causing "undeserved" embarrassment to military officials.

Court Rules Prison Must Permit Worship by Black Muslim Inmates

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (EP) — The 4th District Federal Court has ruled that Black Muslim inmates at the nearby Lorton Youth Center should be permitted to resume spiritual worship there. The penal institution, operated by the District of Columbia, was the scene of two violent riots in 1962, said by prison officials to be caused by Black Muslim inmates.

Judge Oren R. Lewis, in handing down the decision, said:

"To justify the prohibition of the practice of an established religion at the youth center, the prison officials must prove by satisfactory evidence that the teaching and practice of the sect creates a clear and present danger to the orderly functioning of the institution. This they have not done."

Disciples Historical Society Receives Microfilm of Writings by Founder

DETROIT (EP) — A microfilmed collection of early writings of Alexander Campbell, one of the founders of the Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ), has been presented here to the denomination's Historical Society.

The rare materials, including a diary started in 1809 and several manuscripts, recently were found in an old trunk in an Australian farm house by a great-granddaughter of Campbell. It had been thought for many years that a fire which struck the farm had destroyed the writings.

The descendant of the Disciples' founder, Mrs. A. A. Andrews, gave permission for the materials to be microfilmed. The films were presented here to the historical society at a dinner meeting during the denomination's 115th assembly.

Dr. Claude E. Spencer, historical society curator, called the discovery "the greatest find of primary source material" since the historical society was formed. He said "it is expected to give us deeper insight into Alexander Campbell's earlier religious thought."

The materials were taken to Australia by Mrs. Andrews' father in 1919. His mother, Campbell's daughter, had just died and he packed the writings in a trunk. In later years fire struck the farm, 19 miles from Adelaide.

It was reported that the original materials eventually will be delivered to the Disciples Historical Society headquarters in Nashville, Tennessee.

Burma Road

"Ann and Adoniram Judson opened Burma to the Gospel. They gave the Burmese the Bible in their own language," writes Brother Peter Loo, from Rangoon, Burma. "But Burma has declared itself a Buddhist nation. What a great tragedy this is! We labor in Rangoon, and out in the primitive jungle areas, telling the story of the Master. Daily we face great opposition from the fanatical Buddhists. Deep in the interior it is oftentimes unsafe to preach the Gospel of Christ . . .".

Brother Loo tells how he labors with the Burmese, preaching the Gospel by every possible means. Street preaching is dangerous. He passes out Gospel portions, tracts, Christian literature, conducts services and spreads the Gospel by every possible means.

Dear Friends, I am concerned for the people on what was known as the Burma Road. Will you help take Christ to the interior regions of this heathen nation?

Buddhism is gaining ground. In time, Buddhists will make it difficult for Christian churches to long continue to exist. Schools under Christian influence will be curtailed. It is now or never on the Burma Road—Worldwide Missions

But you know what's wrong with a pumpkinhead! It's hollow!

The day after Halloween you throw it away, and it will soon rot and die. It glows and seems alive only when it has a light inside.

You aren't a pumpkin, but all of us are something like one. We may grin and look alive, but we will someday die. But we can have a light inside that will truly make us alive! This real light is Jesus. Did you ever hear of Him? He is the Son of God who was born on the first Christmas many years ago.

He was born into this world to die for our sins. And now He wants to live inside you! Isn't that strange? But remember, He is God. Although He died, He arose from the dead. And now by loving Him, receiving Him, believing on Him, and following Him, He lives inside you. Then you will glow! You will want to please Jesus, to help others, and to tell them about your Friend. Then you will be truly alive!

Jesus said: "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:12).

"God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (2 Corinthians 4:6).

Would you really like to shine like the stars? Do you want to really glow? Then receive the Light of the world, Jesus Christ. Don't be a pumpkinhead! Have the Light of life in your heart.

"And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever" (Daniel 12:3).—Tract.

Let Us Learn

That evil is not of God. God creates nothing sinful. Sin comes from the creature, not from the Creator; from beneath, not from above.—Horatius Bonar, D. D.

have been evangelized. It appears that the Christians in this land should be compelled to rethink their stewardship in bitter tears.

In a lost, suffering, and sinful world none of us has the right to lavishly hug to himself his material prosperity, and to enjoy only in his immediate fellowship the unsearchable riches of Christ. To share in healing the sick and feeding the hungry in disobedience of the Great Commission are only an affront to the God who gave His only Son for the lost world. The basic philosophy of Christian missions must be clearly understood if the church is to fulfill its legitimate role in the world. The church must not only sow the divine seed; but when the seed takes root and grows into eternal life, it must be nurtured to maturity. The fundamental issue is not whether we are going to exist and be a distinct church, but whether we are to witness for Christ and help reach the unreached for Christ.

HOW THE SANTA ANA MISSION STARTED

by REV. JOSE GUZMAN

For some time I have been going every week to Magdalena to have services there. About two months ago one of the members of the church in Nogales, Sonora, which I pastor, moved to Santa Ana, Sonora, which is about ten miles farther south from Magdalena. This lady brought up the idea of my going to Santa Ana for a visit, and to see if I could start holding services in her house.

On September 28, I went down to Santa Ana to visit with this family. I visited through the afternoon, and just as it began to grow dark, the woman said, "A great number of people said that they were coming to service tonight, but nobody has come yet."

I was standing there with my guitar in my hands when two little girls came in and said, "We are also Aleluyas." Then

I asked them some questions and they answered fine. Then people started coming until about forty had assembled.

We sang one song; then had prayer. Then we sang another song, after which I started telling them how in the beginning God made man, and on down to the flood. Then we had another song, and I told them about the Bible from the flood to Christ, and how He died on the Cross of Calvary to pay what they and I owed to God.

We had another song, and then I made clear to them their need for a Saviour, and how Christ wants to save us. Then I gave the invitation, but nobody came. After that we dismissed with prayer, but everybody still stayed there. Since everyone was still there, I asked how many had enjoyed the lesson; and all of them raised their hands.

Then I asked how many would like for me to come down again and have services, and all of them raised their hands. I then said, "How many are going to pray for me so that I can come again?" And all of them said, "I will."

I am praising the Lord for what He has done for me, and that He has permitted me to see another mission started for the glory of His name. Please pray for me and for the works which the Lord has commended to my hands. Pray that I may always be faithful in His work. Praise His holy name!

A man peered out his study window, deeply perplexed by his problems. A sudden movement attracted his glance. A hungry hawk was pursuing a little songbird. Desperately, the bird fluttered through the open window and straight into the arms of the startled man, where it found safety. Pondering the incident, the man thought that in much the same manner the soul of man must flee to Christ in doubts and fears. From this strange experience Charles Wesley penned the hymn which begins: "Jesus, Lover of my soul Let Me to Thy bosom fly."—Michael Daves in Famous Hymns and Their Writers (Fleming H. Revell Company).

Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist'

According to information received from the Rev. Thomas E. Beaman, the Goldsboro Free Will Baptist Church, Goldsboro, North Carolina, burned Sunday, November 7, 1964. The main auditorium and the original Sunday school rooms, together with several thousand dollars' worth of modern equipment, were completely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

In the Editor's Mail

"I am not a member of your denomination, and neither is anyone in my family. However, sometime ago I heard about the Rev. B. F. Ringgold of New Bern, North Carolina, who was doing a wonderful job as a marriage counselor. My husband and I made an appointment to see him. . . .

"As we were interviewed by Brother Ringgold, we found him to be a very influential man, with contacts with a good many important people. He has had multiple sclerosis for some five years, yet he is one of the happiest men I have ever met. He told us that he has taped his own funeral service and that he was ready for that happy hour.

"This is to certify that the Rev. B. F. Ringgold has been in our home, has counseled with us, and has solved a marriage problem that has troubled our marriage for thirty-one years. We feel that through the power of God in the life and work of Brother Ringgold our precious little family has been brought back together again. We feel that any couple with a marriage problem will find help by contacting this man. . . ."

Editorial—

EPISTLES KNOWN AND READ

Adolph Bedsole, in the introduction to his book, "The Pastor in Profile," states: "Preachers as a group are the greatest souls on God's good earth. Personally and individually, they are the choice spirits of all the ages. I'd rather be a good pastor of a progressive church than to be a great president of the United States . . . Preachers have contributed more to the cultivation of a decent and honorable society than any other group in human history."

Mr. Bedsole further states that there are a few "black sheep" in the ministry, and that among the ministry are those with sins and shortcomings. Each minister of the gospel, if he is honest with himself, recognizes these facts. For the sake of this editorial, however, let us think in terms that will help the minister to see wherein he has failed and thus has brought reproach upon the cause of Christ.

The minister, more than any other, is expected to be an example. Some would argue that no more should be expected of the minister than any other Christian. However, such is not the case. Ministers are living epistles ". . . known and read of all men" (2 Corinthians 3:2). They are looked upon as leaders. As such, much is expected of them. Yet, those in the ministry often fail to live up to their duties and responsibilities.

The humble minister will recognize his unworthiness. The closer he draws to the divine, the more he sees his own wretchedness. The Apostle Paul, in such a moment, cried out, "O wretched man that I am." Such an utterance resulted in daily crucifixion of self until finally he could say, "I am crucified with Christ: . . ." (Galatians 2:20). Paul lost himself in a cause, and that cause was the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The humble minister will be faithful. He will be a living example of righteousness. There will be trials, temptations, and testings. When they come upon him, he will remember that more is involved than just his own soul. He will remember that others are looking at him. If he stumbles and falls, others will stumble and fall. Therefore, it is absolutely essential that he walk uprightly.

The humble minister will be faithful to his denomination. He will support its causes. If he does not believe in its doctrines and programs, he has no right to claim its name. He will view its errors with a desire for improvement instead of a desire for its failure.

He will also attend to his duties in the conference of which he is a member. He will attend its sessions unless he is providentially hindered. He will respect his fellow ministers. He will not "run out" on them when the sermon is to be preached. It is little wonder that our laymen have failed to respect ministers as they ought, for ministers often leave themselves open for scrutiny and even criticism. Honesty will result in an admission that something is spiritually out of focus when ministers are not willing to do that which he expects others to do. Preachers should remember this the next Sunday morning when some people leave after Sunday school.

The minister cannot afford to do many of the things that others do. His personal conduct and daily walk must exemplify his calling and his Saviour. If he cannot conduct himself thusly, he does not deserve the honor of being one of God's servants. On the other hand, he cannot live to satisfy everyone; therefore, he must seek to please Christ.

"Whatever the preacher does will be wrong for some people. If he stays in his study and tries to prepare his work well, there are some who will criticize him. If he visits a great deal, others will call him a gadabout. If he tries to accumulate a little money for hard times, or for old age, he is mercenary; but if he does not, he is indolent, and sluggard and thriftless."—W. W. Melton in "The Making of a Preacher."

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment Two)

THE FIRST effort to unite the Baptists holding common views on communion, freedom of the will, and other doctrines still cherished by Free Will Baptists, into a nationwide organization was made by the Randall group of the North. A General Conference of Freewill (later to be called Free) Baptists was formed at Turnbridge, Vermont, on October 11, 1827.

In 1831, a motion was made to allow two conferences then existing in North Carolina, and known as "Free Will Baptists," to represent in the General Conference of Freewill Baptists with one delegate each. This affiliation was never very popular among the North Carolina churches, and in a few years it was dissolved, apparently by the North Carolina groups being dropped for some cause not clearly shown. During later years, occasional fraternal delegates were sent to meetings of the General Conference. In their zeal for building up a large con-nection, the Randall organization early adopted a very liberal policy with respect to admitting groups to their fellowship. In 1841, they passed a resolution declaring that the terms "Free Baptist, Free Communion Baptists, Freewill Baptists, and Open Communion Baptists" all designated the same people.

This liberal policy was an encouragement to more and more groups inclined toward Calviaism to come into the connection. It also encouraged a laxing of emphasis upon such doctrines as feet washing, freedom of the will, believers' baptism, etc. In 1911, the General Conference of Free Baptist united with the Northern Baptist Convention. A gradual centralization of authority in the General Conference over constituting bodies had by this time reached the point where the leaders were able to carry with them into the union practically all the property of the denomination, which now is controlled by the regular, or Missionary Baptists.

This 1911 union left Free Will Baptists without any kind of definite national organization. The nearest thing to a general organization left was the Southwestern Convention of Freewill Baptists, made up of associations in Texas and Oklahoma, with other southwestern bodies occasionally sending fraternal delegations. The Randall body (the General Conference) made a number of attempts to get these Freewill Baptists into their conference, and held at least one meeting in the area. But this Southwestern Convention chose to remain outside of the larger body. Efforts to unite the western states generally in the organization met with little success.

During the years that the Randall Free Baptists were working to build up a great organization and at the same time laying the groundwork for a sell out to another denomination, Free Will Baptists of the South, and especially of North and South Carolina, were having internal troubles. During the later years of the last century and running over into the early years of the present century, there developed within the denomination a holiness movement, which brought about division in several conferences and resulted in the deflection of many of the churches to form a new denomination, now generally known as the "Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church." It also brought into general use the name "Original Free Will Baptists" to designate those who refused to compromise the original faith and practices of the denomination. Much bitterness in many communities, and even between members of the same family, was generated by the contentions of these years. The Original Free Will Baptists were weakened and discouraged; but the same spirit that had sustained Gum Swamp, Little Creek, and Grimsley churches to brave the onslaughts of the Calvinists in 1855 helped these and the other Original Free Will Baptist churches to survive the rupture over a misconception of holiness and go on building on the foundation of "the faith once delivered unto the saints."

On December 27, 1916, representatives of organizations in four western states which had refused to go along with the Randall movement merger with the Northern Baptists met at Philadelphia Church in Missouri and organized the "Co-Operative General Association of Freewill Baptists."

Like its predecessors, this organization sought to offer itself as a medium through which unity might be effected between all bodies holding common faith on open communion, freedom of the will, and other tenets of Free Will Baptist doctrines. When the association held its second session in 1917, at Tecumseh, Oklahoma, it looked as if they might succeed. Two additional western states were represented and Georgia and North Carolina of the southern group were received into membership. However, the Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina soon found their fellowship marred by the attitude of the new body toward the doctrine of feet washing and withdrew. Through the years, the Co-Operative Association became more and more a western movement. Some fine people were among its leadership, and its profession of faith was generally sound; but Original Free Will Baptists found too much of a trend toward the policies and spirit of the old General Conference of the North to find the relationship a fully happy one. Freewill Baptists were found to be not quite the same as Original Free Will Baptists.

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

GOD'S OWN CAUSE

"Arise, O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily" (Psalm 74:22).

Here is a prayer that God would plead His own cause. This prayer was made in a time in the life of the psalmist when wickedness so engrossed the hearts of those who were supposed to be His advocates, and when so many were His actual and active enemies that the only way, as far as he could see, was for God to plead His own cause.

Prayer is the atmosphere the Christian breathes. No man can be a Christian and do without prayer, and retain his spiritual life, any more than the body can exist without air and food. He has many, very many, inducements to this holy exercise of prayer. He has many needs to be supplied, many temptations to overcome, many enemies to conquer, and many duties to perform. Strength for these is obtained only by offering believing prayer to God, who is the only source of help, and the Father of all our mercies.

The Christian, therefore, feels the importance of prayer, and prays for himself and for his work. He likewise prays for others. He necessarily feels interested in the salvation and happiness of his kindred and friends. He feels deeply concerned that these should partake of the love of God in Christ, and be joint heirs with himself of the grace of God in his Christian life. He not only prays for himself and his friends according to the flesh, but he likewise feels deeply concerned in the affairs of Zion, and for her welfare and prosperity he presents his supplications to God. Sooner would he that his right hand should forget its cunning or become paralyzed, than that he should ever forget his church, or that she should ever cease to be his chief joy. The breathings of his soul are, "Arise, O God, plead thine own cause."

The cause specified here is the cause of God's holy Church; the cause identified with the interests of redeeming love; the cause which is significantly set forth in the New Testament under the titles—kingdom of God, kingdom of heaven, and kingdom of righteousness! It is that spiritual dispensation, of which Jesus Christ is the Head, of which true believers are the subjects, and which is destined to overthrow the works of darkness in the earth and to fill the whole world with the knowledge and glory of God.

This cause is distinguished for its divinity; for it is God's own cause. It is the result of His infinite skill, the production of His almighty power, and the effect of His unsearchable grace. It is the cause of His eternal counsels and purposes. It is the cause of unbounding mercy and love to mankind. Viewed as a kingdom, He is its legitimate sovereign; as a nation, He is its only ruler; as a family, He is its father and head.

The cause of God is the cause of righteousness. Its founder is the righteous Jehovah. It originated in righteousness, and He wants it to continue in the righteous lives of His people. It was effected by the righteousness of the Messiah and by His bearing in Himself the just demerit of unrighteousness, that, by suffering the just for the unjust, He might bring us to God. Its principles and doctrines are all righteous, and it impresses the righteous image of God on the heart of man and makes his life holy and unblameable in His sight.

God's own cause is a benevolent cause. Its designs are truly philanthropic. It presents a true and full remedy for all the ills of humanity. It elevates the soul from the deepest debasement to the heights of celestial dignity and purity. It delivers the mind from the thralldom and slavery of vice into the liberty of the children of God. It is not only a blessing to mankind, but it makes man a blessing to his fellow. It is, in short, the light, the life, and the happiness of the world, which makes the child of God breathe out: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

God's own cause is distinguished for its unity. It is emphatically one. It has been presented to the world in various dispensations. There have been the patriarchal, the Mosaic, the prophetic, and the gospel dispensations; but all have been based on the central foundation. The whole of these dispensations have formed but one period in God's own cause.

The cause of God has been distinguished by many names, and has been presented to our view under various forms; but still there is only one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one church. Christ has but one flock, one fold, one spiritual kingdom; and all His people are journeying one way to the only one true rest, which remaineth for the people of God.

Having considered some of the things that the cause of God specifies, we will now turn our attention to the prayer offered for that cause. This prayer implies that God's cause has its opponents, and facts fully bear out this truth. It has been opposed in every age in the history of the world. Cain opposed it in the period when he slew Abel. The antediluvians opposed it in the days of Noah. The wicked inhabitants of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah opposed it in the days of Abraham and Lot. The idolatrous nations opposed it in the time of the prophets. The Jews opposed it during the time of Christ. The philosophizing Greeks and barbarous pagans opposed it in the period when the apostles and leaders of the Early Church were presenting the crucified and risen Christ as the only hope of a lost world. Infidels, hypocrites, false-hearted friends, so-called, and the men of this world, have opposed, and still oppose it, even until now. We have seen it in recent years opposed by agencies of our own government—the government of a nation that in the lifetime of many of us was called a Christian nation. How long can the nation that was founded on the Bible and freedom stand with the foundation of truth and righteousness being pried from under it by the highest agencies of its government to satisfy the whims of infidels and enemies of all that is good? The cause of God is opposed, too, by "the prince of the power of the air" and by those numerous legions of spirits of crime which he leads.

When your temptations let you alone, let not God alone. But lay up prayers and the blessings of a constant devotion against the day of trial.—Free Methodist.

THE CHURCH - WORLD-WIDE

Spanish Prelate's Freedom Views 'Disappointing' to Protestants

MADRID (EP)—Protestant circles have voiced "disappointment" over a statement on the question of religious liberty made in Rome by a Spanish prelate attending the Second Vatican Council.

As the Council debate on a religious freedom declaration, Archbishop Casimiro Gonzalez of Madrid, an interview with a representative of EFE, Spanish foreign news agency, was reported to have defended restrictions on Protestant "proselytizing" in this country.

The archbishop was quoted as stating that in regard to a projected law to regularize the status of the Protestant minority in Spain, "the state has undeniably shown goodwill, and the Church also has faced up to realities by not overlooking the fact that there is a small number of non-Catholic Spaniards, not to mention non-Catholic foreigners either living or transient in Spain."

However, he went on to defend the "limitations, if they may be so called, on the liberty of non-Catholics" in Spain such as the restriction on all proselytizing, saying this was "in accordance with accepted doctrine on which we Christians, Catholic and non-Catholic alike are agreed, while granting to the latter (non-Catholics) whatever may be necessary for the development of their religious life."

Protestant sources said they hoped to get a more complete report of Archbishop Gonzalez' remarks, but meanwhile they could not but be disappointed over what had already been reported.

They said the Vatican Council's discussion of religious liberty had only just begun and held that the archbishop's observations would appear to prejudice the outcome of the Council's deliberations so far as the issue of religious liberty in Spain was concerned.

Loss of Missionary Concern Cited in 'Sending' Churches

SUVA, Fiji Islands (EP)—Anglican Bishop John C. Vockler of Polynesia declared here at a diocesan synod that "a loss of missionary concern in the older, former 'sending' Churches" is a key threat to "our whole Christian enterprise."

The bishop, in a call for "deep self-examination" throughout the Church, said mission efforts are facing a variety of challenges.

These, he said, include "nationalism, resurgent non-Christian religions, the reassertion of local cultures against Europeanization and by those who seek to combine what is 'good' in all religions . . ."

Open-Air Mission Work Forbidden in Jordan

AMMAN, Jordan (EP) — Interior Minister Muhammad Nazzal al-Armouti of Jordan has banned all open-air missionary activities in this predominantly Moslem country.

His decree stressed that full freedom of worship existed for non-Moslems inside churches and other houses of prayer, but that no outside preaching would be permitted.

Scientist, Once Communist, Ordained As Anglican Priest

CHESTER, England (EP)—Dr. Ian Campbell, a nuclear scientist and former member of the Communist Party, was ordained in the cathedral here by Anglican Bishop Gerald A. Ellison.

He is currently senior lecturer in radio chemistry at Manchester University but was to resign shortly to become curate at St. George's Church in nearby Stockport.

Dr. Campbell told newsmen he ceased to have Communist sympathies five years ago and has lost all contacts with the party. For eight years, until 1959, he was a nuclear research worker in Poland. He said he first realized the impact of the Christian faith three years ago.

Ban on Conversions to Judaism, or Check on Converts, Proposed FALLSBURG, N. Y. (EP)—Alternative proposals—to ban conversions to Judaism or to set up an agency that would pass on the sincerity of would-be converts—was proposed by an Orthodox rabbi concerned about expediency conversions of non-Jewish partners in mixed marriages.

Rabbi David L. Silver of Harrisburg, Pa., suggested to the 21st annual convention of the Yeshiva University Rabbinic Alumni that "all rabbinic organizations in the United States declare a general ban on all conversions in order to stem the tide."

"The situation has reached such dangerous proportions," he said, "that unless there be a mighty counterthrust, the American Jewish community will be snowed under by an avalanche of part Jews."

Discussing the problems of Jewish intermarriage, Dr. Silver offered as a counter-proposal establishment of a central agency that "would be able to proceed with the adequate probings and testings as to fitness and dependability. It could set up periods of probation of sufficient duration to ascertain whether the person in question really intends to live an observant Jewish life."

New Bible Translation Reflects Archeological, Linguistic Findings

NEW YORK (EP)—The first two volumes of a new translation of the Bible—the work of distinguished Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish scholars and reflecting archeological and linguistic discoveries of the last 50 years—have gone into publication here.

Called the Anchor Bible and published by Doubleday & Co., the initial volumes were issued in conjunction with the start of National Bible Week (October 19-25).

Launched with Genesis and the Epistles of James, Peter and Jude, the complete Bible will have 38 volumes. Other volumes will be published at the rate of six each year.

Council Votes Common Prayer in Interest of Ecumenism

VATICAN CITY (EP)—The Second Vatican Council, in an historic gesture, approved common prayer with non-Catholic Christians in the interest of Christian unity.

NEWS and NOTES

OF

DENOMINATIONAL INTEREST

Robert's Grove Observed Homecoming and Harvest Day

On Sunday, October 4, Robert's Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Dunn, North Carolina, observed homecoming and harvest day. Maybe the sun wasn't shining on the outside that day, but it was obvious that the Son of God was shining in the faces of the people as they gathered at the church for the services. Sunday school began at 9:50 a.m., under the direction of the new superintendent, Mr. J. T. Faireloth, a very young but dedicated man. The homecoming message was brought by the Rev. R. H. Jackson of Sims, North Carolinian, one of Robert's Grove very own, who began his ministry in this church. The message will long be remembered by those who heard it. Then came the time when everyone present had a chance to participate in the services as they were given the opportunity to give back a portion of the material blessings which God had so richly bestowed on them this year.

The lunch hour was a period of greetings, handshakes, and fellowship around a table that was so bountifully filled.

The afternoon services included a talk by Dr. W. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive College. Special music was rendered by the church choir and trio.

Mrs. James Spill, publicity chairman of the church, reports as follows: "The harvest day offering totaled $3,740. To an outsider maybe this doesn't stand out quite as big as compared to what we did last year. But on November 13, 1963, a few members gathered at the church for groundbreaking ceremonies for our new educational building. This has been near enough completed that we can use the building. Even though homecoming day was rainy, we were very fortunate in being able to set up our tables in the recreation hall and spread our lunches.

"On October 14, we served a plate lunch to the District Auxiliary Convention from our beautiful kitchen, of which we are very proud and thankful.

"On Sunday night, October 18, the church held its first baptismal service in the newly installed baptistery. There were thirteen candidates.

"In behalf of the church and its pastor, the Rev. David C. Hansley, may we say thanks to God for the many showers of material blessings, and for such a beautiful place to which we can come and worship."

Pastor Conducting Reedy Branch Revival

Revival services are in progress at Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church near Winterville, North Carolina, with the pastor, the Rev. Willis Wilson, bringing the messages. The services began on Sunday night, November 1, and will continue through Saturday night, November 7. Services are beginning each evening at 7:30 and are featuring special music and a sermonette for the children. The public is cordially invited to attend the remainder of these services.

Revival Services in Progress at Dilda's Grove

Revival services began Monday night, November 2, at Dilda's Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Fountain, North Carolina, and will continue through Saturday night, November 7. The Rev. Robert Lee Norville is the evangelist. Each service is filled with good gospel preaching and special singing. Services begin at 7:30 each night.

The pastor, the Rev. Ray Harrison, and the church invite the public to the remainder of these services.

Ashland Street Church Revival in Progress

The Ashland Street Free Will Baptist Church, Archdale, North Carolina, began a series of revival services Monday evening at 7:30, which will continue through Sunday, November 8. The evangelists for this meeting are the Revs. Austin Frye and Ruble Spencer. This church is located four miles south of High Point, North Carolina.

The pastor, the Rev. Grayson L. Spencer, sends these words of welcome: "Whosoever will let him come, and let us worship together." You are cordially invited to attend the remainder of these services.

STORY OF TWO BOYS

by TOMMY MANNING

I'll tell you a story of Johnny and Bill, Steady and bright, and good boys until

One day on life's journey they happened to meet

A bottle of liquid that claimed to be sweet.

The bottle of liquid by some was called beer;

It boasted of joy and freedom from fear;

And friendship with Johnny and Bill through disguise—

The bottle of liquid thought both boys a prize.

"Listen now closely young fellows," said he;

"Love me and use me, and young men you'll be;

I offer you courage and liberty's door;
Use me just once and you'll surely want more."

Intently Bill listened and thought himself smart

To yield to the bottle and take him a part;

But Johnny knew better and thought it not wise;

He challenged the bottle; accused it of lies.

"A coward is Johnny," said Bill to the
beer;

"I'll use you and love you in spite of his fear;

A man of strength and wisdom I'll be—
And Johnny so soon will be jealous of me."

A few years had passed and time made it be

When manhood for Johnny and Bill would we see;

The same two young fellows we'd seen on life's road,

Stopped for a moment to rest of their load.

"Hi, Billy," said Johnny—and tall did
he stand;

Fearless and brave, he stood as a man;

"Hi, Johnny," said Bill with pain in his eyes;

He remembered the beer he'd considered a prize.

Thin and dismantled, and stooped did
he stand;

No one would cheer this model of
man;

Yet on life's journey he'd thought it so dear

To love and to cherish that bottle of beer.

Life for our Johnny will now just begin;

Strength and vict'ry and peace will he win;

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church met in the home of Mrs. L. B. Woodall Jr. for its October meeting. There were thirteen members and one visitor present. Mrs. Lawrence Cud-dington presided over the meeting which opened with the group's singing "The Kingdom Is Coming." Mrs. Charles Ray Pope read the designated Scripture and Mrs. Lucy Jones offered the prayer. The program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" was given by Mrs. Claude Bass, Mrs. Joe Sasser, Mrs. Winston Crumpler, and Mrs. Glenn Parnell.

During the business session the various officers reported. Mrs. Joe Sasser, a recent delegate to the Woman's Auxiliary Convention held at Stancil's Chapel church, presented some very important facts and figures to the auxiliary. The auxiliary voted to send $10 to the Children's Home for the purchase of beds, $10 to Mount Olive College for the activity bus, and $5 to the state mission project for Jose Guzman's salary. The

But Bill in his boldness had ventured to be

A man with no wisdom—now sickly was he.

The bottle of liquid now was his rule;
Brave little Billy was surely a fool

To listen and yield to that bottle of beer;

Life now was bitter, and death was so near.

The bottle of beer—a demon indeed;
On bright little minds it continues to feed

'Til more lives it ruins and hearts it does break

Promising joy and manhood to make.

We've told you our story as well as we can;

The bottle of liquid can hurt any man;

Out on life's pathway, we think of it still—

Happy is Johnny, but so sad is Bill!

adopted daughter at the Children's Home was remembered on her birthday with a coat. She was also the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Parnell and daughter Frances, for the weekend. The corresponding secretary reported she had mailed eighteen cards during the past month; also that each shut-in receives a card once a month from the auxiliary. A nominating committee was appointed to select new officers for the new year. They are Mrs. L. B. Woodall Jr., Mrs. Charles Ray Pope, and Mrs. Calvin Medlin. The meeting adjourned with the members praying the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The hostess served delicious coconut cream pie topped with ice cream.

Wilson, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Calvary Free Will Baptist Church met on Tuesday night, October 20, at the home of Mrs. Leslie Harrell for its monthly meeting. The program began with the group's singing "Send the Light." The Scripture was read by the president, Mrs. Harvey Pittman; and prayer was offered by Mrs. Alvin Murray. Mrs. Allen Bartlett gave a report of the recent Woman's Auxiliary Convention, and the various committees gave their reports. The business session closed with prayer by Mrs. Leslie Harrell.

The program for the evening was given by Mrs. Paul W. Thompson of the Marsh Swamp Woman's Auxiliary, Rock Ridge, North Carolina. Mrs. Thompson was the writer of the program for October, and the auxiliary was very fortunate to have her to present it for them. She was accompanied by Mrs. Doris Lee Boyette, president of the Marsh Swamp Woman's Auxiliary.

The closing prayer was by Mrs. Thompson, after which refreshments were served by the hostess.

November Is Children's Home Month In North Carolina

by M. L. JOHNSTON, Superintendent

I wish I could speak to each one of you in person to discuss the current needs and opportunities of our Children's Home. Since this is not practical, I hope you will take time to read, and carefully consider this article.

Much of the success of our November Campaign depends upon those who read The Free Will Baptist. The very fact that you are reading this article indicates your interest in our denominational programs. I sincerely hope you will do your very best for this ministry.

Free Will Baptists have every right to take humble pride in the record of this Home during the past fifty years; but rejoicing in the past alone will not meet the needs and challenge of the present. For us to fail in our present opportunities would be to fail those who have served so well in the past, and the children who look to us now and those who will look to us in years to come. We must continue—in keeping with the dedication of those who have gone before.

Most of our plans for improvements and expansion for the next five years are incorporated in our "Golden Anniversary Development Program." This program has been endorsed by our State Convention and has met with the enthusiastic approval of our people throughout this state. However, the execution of this program is dependent upon how well our churches raise their quotas this fall, and during the next five years.

The quotas for this year are being mailed to the church clerks. In some cases, the new quotas represent an increase over last year. However, the new quotas are based upon our needs for general operating funds and are to help reach the goals of our development program.

We must continue our general operation and provide for our improvements and expansion. We hope to be able to carry out our development and expansion without a special building fund campaign or the use of special building fund quotas. We also hope to do this without "going in debt." We can do all of this if our churches will raise their suggested quotas.

Please check with your church clerk for the information about the quota for your church, and do all you can to help raise that quota. If you need further information about your quota and our development program, or if we can assist you in any way, we will be glad to hear from you. Gifts by individual members will be credited on the quota for the church.

As in the past, we are requesting that as much of the quota as possible be raised by Thanksgiving and brought to the Children's Home on Thanksgiving Day, or mailed if no one can come to bring it. Also, as in the past, gifts from all sources within the church will be credited on the church quota.

Please try to reach your quota so that we can reach our goals!

Have you lost in earth's riches? Then for the best riches, seek spiritual gold.—L. H.

Life without Christ, what chaos! Life with Christ what blessing!—L. H.

THE CONFUSED WORLD

This world is in a state of confusion; people in every walk of life are confused. In every group in which you come in contact, there is arguing as to what is right; and almost everyone has a solution. This is so in politics and in economics. We hear a great deal about the economy of the business world, and everybody seems to differ in the best method of promoting the necessary method to fit our economy best.

The Christian world is all up in the air, and is making great changes. Part of the world is crying, "Give us one world church"; others are preaching and practicing church division and are splitting church groups, and certainly that is great disturbance. Some preachers and churches are condemning everyone to the flames of eternal fire who disagrees with them.

I believe the Bible. When I was a boy, I knew only about three or four denominations; and when anyone of these churches had what some called a "protracted meeting," others used the term that most of us use today, "revival," there was but very little confusion. The real object in the community where I was reared was to get sinners converted and church members revived, but it is different in the churches today. It seems that the real desire and work in most so-called revivals is to get church members. Now church membership is a part of our religious economy; but when there is no more than church membership, it is a sad affair. An unsaved church member is a hindrance to the salvation of souls and the best interest of the local church, and is universally so. We have people who claim great religious fellowship with God and with all who witness as they witness.

We find that the Bible says that "... God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, . . ." (1 Corinthians 14:33). Then if God is not the author of confusion, Satan is stirring up a lot of confusion. This is true in politics, in religion, in social circles, and in racial affairs throughout the world. The Apostle Paul said "... that in the last days perilous times shall come" (2 Timothy 3:1). Jesus said, "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be" (Matthew 24:37). Let us see some of the things which Jesus said would come to pass: "... Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrow. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matthew 24:4-13).

Everything mentioned by Jesus in the above quoted Scripture has come to pass. In recent years Christians have been afflicted in Spain, Russia, South America, and in all Communist nations. Let me repeat, everyone of these things that Jesus said would come have already come; and Christians are hated not only by some of the infidels of the United States, but also by infidels all over the world. But we thank God that Jesus said, "He that shall endure to the end shall be saved." So we are looking for Christ to come any day.

Friends, if you believe that Christ is the only begotten Son of God and that He came to save sinners, whosoever believeth in Him is saved. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36).

Pay no attention to the false prophets nor infidels, for God will attend to all unbelievers. God says, and I quote: "And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness" (2 Thessalonians 2:10-12).

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THOSE WHO KNOW NOT

A quotation from the minutes of the Western Conference which convened with Union Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Wayne County, October, 1910, says, "We, your Examining Board, met and examined Bros. N. B. Wall, J. C. Griffin, and L. B. Brice. We recommend that their names appear on the list of ordained ministers. Signed P. T. Lucas, J. H. Worley, C. D. Howell, R. F. Pittman, and L. T. Phillips." These dear brethren did not give you a written examination; it was on oral, sharp-shooting examination—one question after another. They wanted to know what you knew about the Bible and the doctrine of the Free Will Baptist Church. They expected a promise that you would follow the teaching of the Bible and preach the doctrine as preached by our forefathers. One very important question that they asked was, "Do you believe in the call of God to preach, and how do you know that you are called?" Those dear precious servants of God believed that God called ministers and that the ministry was more than a profession. We still believe that preachers are called by the Holy Spirit.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Please explain, "That the sons of God saw the daughters of man that they were fair; and they took them wives of all they chose" (Genesis 6:2); "Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them" (Job 1:6); "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" (Job 38:7). Who are the sons of God when they are mentioned in the Old Testament?—James Gray, Illinois.

ANSWER: In some passages in the Bible these, who are called the sons of God, without doubt are angels; whereas, in others it seems quite obvious that they are men. In the passage above quoted from Genesis 6:2, I believe the creatures are the sons of Seth, the son of Adam and Eve, whom God gave to take the place of righteous Abel that Cain murdered. There are noted Bible scholars, however, who do not so believe, among whom is the late Dr. James M. Gray.

Dr. P. B. Fitzwater, who was dean of the Moody Bible Institute under Dr. Gray, believed that the creatures referred to in Genesis 6:2 were the sons of Seth who was a godly man and that they were thus referred to, to emphasize their contrast in character and spiritual standing before God with the character and standing of the descendants of Cain and his kind who were disobedient murderers in their appearance before God. (See Genesis 4:16-24.)

Adam is referred to as the son of God, and so were Enos and Seth. "Which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God" (Luke 3:38). The Hebrews as a nation were so referred to, "And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, Israel is my son, even my firstborn" (Exodus 4:22). It is used in application to certain kings, "I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men" (2 Samuel 7:14). Then in the New Testament it is used to apply to all saints, "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:12).

Dr. Fitzwater says concerning the use of the expression, sons of God, on Page 112, in his book, Christian Theology, "It means oneness of nature with God." "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him" (John 1:18). Jesus refers to Himself as the only begotten Son and, as such, the only one to reveal the Father: "All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him" (Matthew 11:27). "All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him" (Luke 10:22), which is unique and is to be contrasted with the expression sons of God referred to above.

The descendants of Cain were segregated by God from the Sethites, or all the rest of the human race, just like the Jews were from all Gentiles when they were taken from under the domain of Pharaoh in Egypt and brought into the promised land. The descendants of Cain were sent away from the other humans into the land of Nod so that they might not be able to reach and penetrate them by their sinful influence. By that time we have no way of knowing the number of either Cain's descendants or of those that were the descendants or of the rest of those who descended from Adam and Eve. Both divisions probably numbered into the thousands. But it is indeed likely that the rest who followed Seth in a gigantic move back to God outnumbered the followers of Cain in a great number. As it was in the days of Cain's rebellion and as it was in the day when through Moses God led His people from Egyptian bondage, so is it today. God never has wanted and never will want His people to mix with the people of the devil—the world—as if they were all the children of God. "And I will put a division between my people and thy people: to morrow shall this sign be" (Exodus 8:23). That difference is just as definite in the Christian's pursuits of today as then, and the penalty for a violation of the law of separation is no less severe today than then. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people" (1 Corinthians 6:14-16).

Notice that the conditions of sonship are given in Verses 17 and 18 of this same chapter. One, if to be a son, must not contaminate himself by the slightest contact with worldliness. He is not to come in contact with or to touch those that have not been cleansed by the blood in a way to suggest that there is any kind of basis of spiritual fellowship between them. Christ, as depicted in God's Word, is the only basis. He must be appropriated as this. We can have no fellowship with Jews, Roman Catholics, Seventh Day Adventists, Jehovah's Witnesses, or those of any unsaved group until they are saved by appropriating Christ as the only means of salvation and have repudiated all former fellowships that kept them apart from the fellowship we that are born again and walk obediently before Christ, have condemning thereby a whole lost world.

BOYS and GIRLS

JILL FINDS HAPPINESS

Hannah Moor

JILL shut the door quickly as two big tears splashed on her cheeks. She hadn't let the other girls see her cry but now at last she was home. Maybe Mom would understand.

Big brother Jack came into the room. "Why, what's the matter with little cry baby? You sound like our wee sister Donna. Shall I warm you a bottle of milk?"

"I am not a cry baby, Jack, and you just leave me alone," sobbed Jill, "if you had troubles like I have troubles, you would cry, too."

"What? Me shed tears? That's real funny. Don't you know it's only foolish girls that do things like that?"

"Jack, you take this list and go down to the market." Mrs. Anderson looked next at Jill. "Now, dear, what are your troubles?"

"Well, Mom, maybe it won't seem like such a problem to you, but to me it seems 'normous." Jill stumbled over the new word she had learned. "June Thurston always come first in our grade, and Beverly Janes draws such real pretty pictures, and Diana Barnes makes lovely brooches with shells, and I—I just can't do anything. I've tried so hard to paint pictures and things. I guess I never will be able to do anything at all. I'm just useless."

Mrs. Anderson smiled to herself. "Jill, do you remember your Sunday school lesson two weeks ago? Wasn't it something about talents? Some were given more than others, but all God required was that each would use that talent for Him."

"But, Mom, that's what I'm trying to say, I haven't any talents. I guess you don't understand after all."

"Yes, I do, Jill. You dry your eyes and play awhile before supper. I'm sure if you watch you'll find something you can do better than anyone else."

"No, Mother doesn't understand," Jill thought to herself. "I'll go visit Mary Jane and see how she is today." Mary Jane was a cripple. Because she couldn't walk and play most of the girls left her alone. After talking to her friend of many lovely things Jill prepared to leave.

"Oh, Jill," said the crippled girl, "I don't know what I'd do without you. You'll never know the joy you've brought to me. Most people can do so many things they never think of some of us who can't. Thanks so much."

As Jill walked toward home she felt better.

The traffic was thick along the street as it was now after five o'clock. Jill's attention was drawn to a car that had slowed a little then had driven on. At the side of the street was a small puppy—one leg hanging limp.

"Oh, you poor dog," Jill cried. "And that bad man didn't even stop."

Reaching home she lovingly bandaged the leg, first fixing little sticks for splints. The puppy looked at her with such pleading eyes that Jill patted him gently.

After supper Jill thought her mother looked tired so she took little Donna outside to play awhile, then washed her and tucked her into bed.

"Donna loves Jill," the wee one put her arms around her sister's neck and squeezed. "Donna loves Jill a real lot."

As Jill entered the living room Mrs. Anderson spoke quietly. "Well Jill, have you found anything yet that you can do well?"

"No, Mother, I haven't. But I've been so busy that I had forgotten about it for awhile."

"Yes, I know," Mrs. Anderson smiled. "You visited Mary Jane, the crippled girl, and brought joy into her day; you cared for a small puppy that had been thrown on the street and then hit by a car; you looked after wee Donna when she was cross and let Mother rest. I think, Jill, maybe you have been given the talent of bringing happiness to others, and I do feel it is greater than painting lovely pictures."

"Maybe I was counting things up wrong, Mom, but . . ." giving her mother a hug, "I'll work so hard now using the talent I have that I hope I'll never find time to be jealous of the other girls again."—Gospel Herald.

GIVEN TO JESUS

Olive W. Mumert

MOMMY, was I dedicated?" asked Sally.

"Yes, you were," answered Mother, "but not in a church as Cathy was. You see, there was no church near where we lived when you were a baby, so we knelt down in our own home and gave you to the Lord."

"But Cathy's not a baby either. Can't I be dedicated in the church now as Cathy was?" Sally asked eagerly.

"Do you know what dedication means, dear?" Mother asked.

"No," said Sally, suddenly wondering. "What does it mean?"

"Well, dear," explained Mother, "a thing, or a person is dedicated when he is set apart for the Lord. Now that you are old enough to understand, you are old enough to dedicate yourself. That is called consecration."

"But I gave the Lord Jesus my heart when I asked Him into my heart, didn't I?" Sally asked. "I belong to Jesus already, Mommy, isn't that the same?"

"Not quite," answered Mother quietly. "In order to save you, and prepare you for heaven the Lord Jesus Christ gave His life on the cross for you. Now, in order that you may be of service to Him,

MISSIONS

Matthew

OUR MISSION IN MEXICO

by John B. Elliston

As most of you know by now our Mexican missionary force has been badly depleted by the failure of some of those in whom we had confidence to remain faithful to their trust. We try our best to avoid such things, but we are only human; so we can be fooled by people. After all, the only way in which we can know whether a person is trustworthy is to give him a position of trust and observe him to see how well he fulfills his responsibilities.

However, the work in Mexico is continuing and growing. The Rev. and Mrs. James L. Lanier are now caring for the work in Cananea and Buena Vista. They go down once each week and conduct services in the missions in Cananea and in Buena Vista. Of course this is not an ideal method of conducting the work there, but it is vastly better than having a person who is supposed to be conducting services but isn't. The Laniers have to make a round trip journey of around 180 miles over Mexican roads to go and return. About 120 miles of that is over dirt roads which are very seldom subjected to any sort of maintenance work. Until God provides other workers this seems to be the only way to carry on the work there.

This method of carrying on the work in Cananea and Buena Vista costs as much as it formerly was costing for a worker there. However, it is more certain, because the services are actually being conducted instead of being neglected. The cost of operating the Cananea and Buena Vista missions is about $65 per month. Most of this is travel cost, but part is for rent and utilities there in Cananea.

The Laniers are also carrying on the mission in Uruguay Street (or Puerto Rico Street) in Nogales, Sonora. We are very happy to say that the costs of this mission are being underwritten.

The Rev. Jose Guzman is carrying on the missions in Magdalena and Santa Ana. The cost of operating these two missions runs about $55 per month. This is for travel, rent, etc., involved in operating these missions. As you know, Mr. Guzman goes down and conducts services in these two places once each week. In addition to the Magdalena and Santa Ana missions, Mr. Guzman pastors the church in Nogales, Sonora, and conducts two missions there.

Fabian is conducting a Bible Club on Saturday, as well as caring for a mission in Nogales, Sonora, while attending school in the Christian Worker's Course in the Nogales Academy.

Except for the Bible Club being conducted by Miss Barbara Becton, this gives a fairly good run-down on the various work being carried on in Mexico by the group working here with Arizona-Mexico Missions. There is also an International Youth Fellowship which meets in a different Free Will Baptist church or mission every Friday night. It is in Mexico three fourths of the time, and in Arizona the other one fourth of the time.

Here in Arizona we have a church and the Academy. In addition we have the International Headquarters of Arizona-Mexico Missions located here. We are kept extremely busy trying to operate the Academy, promote finances for all the work throughout the United States, and direct the missionary activities.

Please continue to remember us in your prayers and with your finances. Give generously to the whole program of missions. The missions budget adopted at the North Carolina State Convention was $50,000 for the coming year. This includes 60 percent of the budget for Arizona-Mexico Missions. That is less than $2 for the year for each Free Will Baptist affiliated with the State Convention. I feel sure that all of you will rally to the cause and oversubscribe the budget long before the year is finished. Let's all get behind it and put it over the top. Remember that you are not doing it for men, but for the Lord.

Send offerings to North Carolina Mission Board, c/o The Rev. A. B. Bryan, P. O. Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513. If your offering is for Arizona-Mexico Missions, please so designate it; but remember that it will still apply on the 60 percent of the budget underwritten by the convention. Please pray for us! May God bless you is our prayer.

THE CHURCH AND ITS PRIVILEGE

by J. E. Timmons

We are reminded of the message found in Psalm 107:2, "Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy." I have come to the place in my ministry that I realize the value of answered prayer and the privilege to be a partaker in the work of the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. The privilege you and I have, dear friends, that God has set before us as Free Will Baptists, is as an open door. Will we enter in, in Jesus' name, or will we falter and fail, and permit omission to keep us from claiming Mexico for Christ?

As I remember, some years ago I prayed that God would somehow give me the privilege of working with, and in full fellowship with, true Free Will Baptists. God answered my prayer in a most wonderful way, and now I am privileged to be with the church and the people of my choosing and beliefs. How complete is my joy! Well can I remember some years ago when I was pastoring in another denomination and of the unhappy state of my heart for the fact of Calvinism and the worldly compromising that existed. But when I began to preach the Free Will Baptist truths God sent a revival that did not end in two weeks but continued on, and over thirty were converted from their sin and unbelief.

I realize that I am hardly known to most of our pastors and churches in North Carolina and elsewhere, but there is one great consolation; you and I know the same Christ as our Lord and Saviour. Our privilege is to unite our efforts and all that we have under God to stand for the cause of missions, and with God's

FOR NOVEMBER 15

EQUIPPED FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT: 2 Timothy 2:8-15; 3:14-17

MEMORY VERSE: 2 Timothy 2:15

I. INTRODUCTION

To do any less than our best is wrong. Young people need to recognize this truth and apply it to every phase of life. When we fail to do our best, we are, in reality, cheating ourselves; and we are the ones who will suffer eventually. The young person who fails to do his best in school will not be able to reach his greatest potential in later years. The Christian who fails to do his best for the Lord will not reach his greatest potential of service and joy. Every Christian should do his best to live up to his profession, but so many times we fail as the following illustration reveals: "Songs Need to Be Lived." In Charles M. Sheldon's 'In His Steps,' the people of a fashionable downtown church are startled one Sunday morning to see a tramp come down to the front of the auditorium and ask to be allowed to say a few words.

"He explained that he was not a professional tramp; he was just a man who had been out of work for a long time and couldn't find anything to do. His wife had died in an ugly tenement house in New York City, and his little child even now did not have the care she needed.

"'Somehow I get puzzled,' he said, 'when I see so many Christians living in luxury and singing, "Jesus, I my cross have taken, all to leave and follow Thee," and remember how my wife died . . . gasping for air and asking God to take my little girl, too. Of course, I don't expect you people can prevent every one from dying of starvation, lack of proper nourishment and tenement air, but what does following Jesus mean? I understand that Christian people own a good many of the tenements. A member of a church was the owner of the one where my wife died, and I have wondered if following Jesus all the way was true in his case. I heard some people singing at a church prayer meeting the other night,

"All for Jesus, all for Jesus,
All my being's ransomed powers,
All my thoughts, and all my doings,
All my days, and all my hours," and I kept wondering as I sat on the steps outside just what they meant by it. It seems to me there's an awful lot of trouble in the world that somehow wouldn't exist if all the people who sing such songs went and lived them.'"—Illustrations from Great Literature.

The purpose of this lesson is to appeal to young people to do their best and to understand that the motive for doing one's best is to receive the approval of God.—Teen-Age Teacher (F. W. B.)

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The gospel Paul preached was based on the resurrection of Jesus Christ (v. 8).
2. Because Paul was faithful to his call, the enemies of the Lord persecuted him (v. 9).
3. So that others might be saved, Paul willingly endured his sufferings (v. 10).
4. Those who die to self and the world shall live with Christ (v. 11).
5. Sincere suffering for Christ earns the sufferer a place of honor with Christ (v. 12).
6. Those who deny Christ will be denied by Him (vv. 12, 13).
7. The believers should sincerely and earnestly study the Word so that he may rightly teach it (v. 15).
8. The believers should continue in the doctrine that brought him to Christ (vv. 14, 15).
9. The entire Bible was inspired of God (v. 16).
10. The purpose of Scripture is to bring men to Christ and then equip them for service (v. 17).—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

I. Three things are necessary to make a Christian worker who is "approved of the Lord."

First, the worker must have a spiritual memory (2 Timothy 2:8). This serves a twofold purpose. It keeps him humble and makes him grateful. How can we be anything but humble when we realize from whence we came? How can we be anything but grateful when we realize what God has done for us?

Second, the Christian worker must suffer (2 Timothy 2:11-13). There is no virtue in suffering itself; but if we are Christians, we will suffer. We will suffer the misunderstanding and persecution of the world even as Christ did. However, as we share His suffering, we shall also reign with Him.

Third, the Christian worker must study (2 Timothy 2:15). Someone has said that if we expect to do God's work we must have God's power. To have God's power, we must study God's Word. Knowledge about many things is important to the Christian worker, but a knowledge of God's Word is basic. There is no substitute for it.—Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.)

2. Two Kentucky pioneers were out hunting with their skinny dogs on a bleak February morning. When they met, one asked, "What's new out here, neighbor?" The other replied, "Nuthin' at all! Nuthin' at all, 'cept for a new baby boy down t' Tom Lincoln's. Nothin' ever happens out here." Something had happened of historic significance—Abraham Lincoln was born!

Limitless potentialities, either for good or evil, are wrapped up in every newborn baby. How essential it is to turn early their feet into the pathway of righteousness. How serious it is to cause to stumble a little one who believes in Jesus (cf. Matthew 18:6).

One asked Thomas A. Edison about the results of his many experiments. Edison replied, "Results? Why, I have gotten a lot of results. I know several thousand things that won't work!"

Said Harriet Beecher Stowe: "When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you until it seems you cannot hold on a minute longer, never give up then. That is just the place and time when the tide will turn!"

When being examined for ordination to the ministry, young Manning Duncan was asked, "If you were to preach ten years and see no results, what would you do?" He flashed, "I would preach ten more years!"—Bible Expositor.

3. Today a young man who wants to be a farmer will probably attend agricultural college. He will be a better farm manager if he knows something about geology, botany, chemistry, and mechanical engineering. While he may gain practical experience working on a farm, his college studies will help him understand and analyze his land, crops, cattle, and equipment.

Even after earning a college degree, he will not be able to forget about learning. He will need to read farm journals to keep up with recent developments. He will need to experiment with crops, animals, machinery.

While we recognize the need to "keep up to date" in every occupation, we tend to neglect the same need as Christians. We cannot be useful workmen for God if we do not further our knowledge of the Scriptures. Our storehouses of Bible knowledge must provide us with supplies for our work of service. We must know our equipment—our talents, our teaching supplies, our musical instruments. We must know the fields where we will find the harvest. Perhaps it will be among young people, new neighbors, or faraway lands.

Constant study will be required for us to keep up with our work. We must keep up with improved developments in religious education and Christian service. Whatever our day-to-day occupation, as Christian workmen we must be diligent to show ourselves approved, so that we need not be ashamed of our service to Christ.—Standard Commentary.

He wants you to give yourself to Him, your heart, your life, and everything."

"I don't understand, Mommy," Sally sighed. "How could a little girl be used of the Lord Jesus? You have to be big to be a missionary, or a Sunday school teacher."

"I'll try to explain it better, dear," said Mother. "You see, you were my child when you were born, but you haven't always tried to do what I wanted you to, have you? You don't always want to do what I like you to, do you?"

"Sometimes I don't," Sally confessed. So much of the time Mommy wanted her to do the things she didn't like doing.

"Well, it is much the same in God's family," explained Mother. "When you trusted in the Lord Jesus Christ you became God's child. You belong to Him, but do you always love Him enough to do everything that He wants you to do?"

"No," answered Sally truthfully "lots of times I do naughty things when I know better. Maybe I'm too little to con—, con—s'crate me to God? I can't seem to be good all the time."

"Oh, sweetheart," said Mother, softly, "none of us is good all the time. We all need God's help in order to do what is right. If you love the Lord enough to want to do His will, to please Him all the time, then you can give your life to Him, and He will help you to do right."

"But, Mommy," Sally sighed tearfully, "I do love the Lord Jesus, but lots of times I don't feel like I want to do what I should."

"We all feel that way sometimes, darling," explained Mother. "That is because Satan tempts us. He makes us want to do what is wrong, but if we pray, God will help us to want to do right. We do not need to be afraid. God is always ready to forgive when we do wrong, and to help us to do right."

"Then, can I give myself to Him right now, Mommy?" Sally asked wistfully, "or will I have to wait until I go to church?"

"You don't have to wait at all, dear," said Mother smiling, "God wants you to give Him your life right now. Do you want to kneel down right here and tell Him that you are ready to give yourself to Him now?"

Perhaps she wasn't so very big, but she did want to serve the Lord Jesus. It would be hard sometimes, but Mommy said God would help her, so she said, "Yes, please, Mommy. I want to give myself to Him now."—Gospel Herald.

help we can. I am standing in your stead Brother Pastor, Brother Deacon, Brother Layman, and beloved church member.

Right now I want to thank each of you for your prayers for me and the work in Mexico. I have seen the evidence and have felt the hand of God on this work.

We are happy to report that the mission in Piedras, Negras, is having good attendance. However, we do not have enough benches for those attending. There are many children and adults, all Catholics, that are attending every service. One elderly man that does not hear too well stands by me as I preach in order not to miss any of the message. Many of the children sit in the doorway as there is no place else for them to sit; while many remain outside the building and listen to the hymns and message. Most of these people are poor, some are hungry, and none of them know of God's love. Please remember, dear Christian friend, that I represent you as I work with these people in this mission.

Do we have any needs? Yes, there are many. We need kerosine lamps and lanterns very badly for all our missions except one. We also need used clothing very badly. Only one church through its Woman's Auxiliary has sent us any used clothes this year, the Edgewood church. How we would appreciate a note from you telling us that at least you will be a prayer partner for our work. It is most important that we pray, give, and do while you and I are still stewards, for the day will soon come when someone else will take our place.

Support missions with your prayers and offerings. Send all offerings to the Rev. A. B. Bryan, P. O. Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513.

(Note: Used clothing for the mission work under the Rev. J. E. Timmons must be sent postpaid to P. O. Box 517, Eagle Pass, Texas 78852, as no clothing can be sent "deadhead" or "charity" to this location because of no volunteer service. However, we encourage the sending of same if they are good used clothes. If auxiliaries or organizations are sending clothing to P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona, "deadhead" or "charity," it will be taken free of charge by any McLean Truck Line, Inc. McLean has branch offices in Kinston and Rocky Mount, North Carolina, and in many other towns in the East.—A. B. Bryan, Missions Director.)

I look upon death to be as necessary to our constitution as sleep. We shall rise refreshed in the morning.—Free Methodist.

Will Original Free Will Baptists Survive?

The year, 1920, found most of the Original Free Will Baptists in isolated state, conference, and associational groups throughout the South, with but little communication between them. It also found pressure being brought upon them from a number of other denominations for unity and cooperative agreements which would have robbed them of their identity as a separate religious group. And so, for at least the third time in their history, the question of their survival became a serious one.

(Next week we will explore what has been considered by many as the most promising general cooperative relationship enjoyed by Original Free Will Baptists in their history up to the present, as we take a look at the General Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of the United States.)

ers voted favorably on eight articles of chapter two of the schema on ecumenism. The first chapter of the schema, outlining the Catholic principles of ecumenism, was approved the previous day by a vote of 1,926 to 30, with 209 Fathers voting "yes" but with reservations.

Voting on the articles took place after Bishop Charles H. Helmsing of Kansas City, Missouri, had presented a report dealing with chapter two. He is a member of the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity which drafted the schema.

Bishop Helmsing had explained that "since many Fathers have asked for the formulation of a positive principle guiding participation in non-Catholic religious services, the text proposes that it would be within episcopal authority—that is, the local Ordinary or national episcopal conference—to determine when Catholics may partake in religious services with non-Catholics."

"Only a general principle can be laid down here," he said, "because of the great diversity encountered in different nations. But it would be such as to allow bishops to pass judgment on individual cases and to instruct the faithful accordingly."

No one is free from error, and this is especially true in the printing and publishing business. Some errors, however, are more obvious than others. Such was the case last week on this editorial page. In the above column, "Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist,'" the date of ten years ago relative to the destruction of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Goldsboro by fire, should have been dated November 7, 1954, instead of 1964. Our apologies to the church at Goldsboro and to their pastor, the Rev. James A. Evans. We'll just try to be more careful.

Editorial—

TO BE CONTENT

The great Apostle Paul had learned a valuable lesson of life when he said, ". . . I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content" (Philippians 4:11). Such a lesson is not learned in a short time. It is learned through years of experience. In order for Paul to be able to make such a statement, he must have accepted certain conditions that remained the same wherever he found himself.

First, he realized that there would always be problems to face and solve. There must have been many times when he anticipated perfect conditions, but they never came. Thus, he learned to accept all circumstances. Wherever he went problems arose. This is most evident as we read his epistles. In Corinth, the people had become divided into specific parties with specific leaders. There was also the problem of immorality in Corinth. In Galatia, the people had forsaken the true gospel for another. In Thessalonica, the Christians had misunderstood the Second Coming of Christ. Paul, however, did not run from these issues. He faced them; and in so doing, he delivered his own soul.

A change is often necessary in life. We do not deny this fact, but we oftentimes swap one problem for another. This is especially so in the field of ministerial service. No pastor will ever find a perfect church, and no church will ever find a perfect pastor. The reason—we are all human. Surely an acceptance of this fact on the part of our ministers and churches would still much of the unrest that now exists and has existed for several years. It is our opinion that there have been too many pastoral changes in the past few years for the good of our churches and our ministers. It is true, on the other hand, that the grass always looks greener on the other side of the hill.

There are many churches that could be cited to prove that their success and growth has been largely due to the long tenure of their ministers. Dr. W. D. Melton, in his book, "The Making of a Preacher," states: "After a pastorate of about thirty years, a man asked me if I ever thought of moving. I said, 'Yes, I have thought about it many times. In fact, if I had moved just a mile every time I had thought about it, I probably would be in the middle of the ocean by now.' When I thought about moving, I always asked myself why I wanted to move. It was always the same answer. There was some petty difficulty that had made me restless, and my first thought was to move. But I thought further. I said to myself, 'I will settle this difficulty and then move,' but when I got the difficulty settled, I did not want to move."

Next, Paul had learned that you can't please all men. Such an achievement is impossible. Each minister, however, has his close friends; but he has also had those who are not so close. Such will always be true on this side of heaven.

It is our judgment that the lay people should be more considerate of the minister's position and calling. Perhaps the minister is largely at fault, but not solely. There must be a blending of the dislikes as well as the likes. It seems that Free Will Baptists are more critical of the ministry than many other religious bodies. For instance, you seldom hear of a Roman Catholic criticizing the priest; or a Jew criticizing the Rabbi. Again, this may be the fault of the minister; but with a little more understanding and consideration such conditions could be alleviated. The minister must accept the fact that he can't please all men, and the layman must learn the same.

Last, Paul realized that to please Christ is of the utmost important consideration. Faithful service to the Master is what really counts. Meanwhile, let us learn the meaning of contentment as expressed by Paul; let us strive for faithfulness to the one who redeemed us.

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment Three)

IN May 26, 1921, a delegation of Free Will Baptists from North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama met in Nashville, Tennessee, and formed an organization which they named the General Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of the United States. This was the first organization formed on a national level to bear the name Original Free Will Baptists. It was also the first organization whose constitution carried the term, "like bodies of the same faith and practice," as a qualification for membership. The foundation principles of the new organization as spelled out in the first and succeeding sessions appear to have been the same principles upon which organizations now associated with the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists stand today. The independence of the local church in matters pertaining to its internal affairs was recognized, but "not as a law of isolation." The right of groups of churches to form area organizations and to delegate to them necessary authority to regulate and maintain these denominational relationships was also recognized. (Incidentally, these principles have been upheld by the Supreme Court of North Carolina as being the "traditional" principles of government in the Original Free Will Baptist denomination.)

Some very significant developments in the second session of the General Conference, held in Marshall, North Carolina, marked the organization as giving promise for the future of Original Free Will Baptists. One of these was the approving of the Free Will Baptist League movement, already in operation in North Carolina and Tennessee, as the official training service for the denomination, and the setting up of a board to promote the youth organization. Another was the reception of a number of new bodies into the general organization.

Perhaps the thing that happened in this second session which most distinctly marked this as a true Original Free Will Baptist organization was the passing of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That this Conference go on record and pledge itself to stand by and support in case of division that part of any church, conference, or association that contends for the original faith and practices of the Free Will Baptist Church, even though it be in the minority, when such division is caused by the advent of new doctrines, which might disturb and destroy the harmony and life of the church."

Since this is not intended to be in any sense a detailed history of the General Conference, we shall pass over several sessions which saw an enlargement of the body and the beginning of movements in the interest of foreign missions and Christian education and come to the point where, in the opinion of many, a mistake was made which has been costly to the interests of Original Free Will Baptists.

During the year 1933, a movement was started for a cooperative union between the General Conference of Original Free Will Baptists and the Co-Operative National Association of Freewill Baptists. The original plan was for the two organizations to continue, one for the eastern Free Will Baptists and the other for the western Freewill Baptists, but meet together every third year as a National Association to confer on matters of mutual concern to both. It was upon this basis of agreement that the General Conference became part of the National Association in 1935. However, after a few years the original plan for a cooperative relationship between the two bodies was dropped, and an organic union was formed.

There are many who believe that we would have been better off today in the matter of congenial fellowship, and no worse off in the matter of worldwide promotion of our common interests, if the first plan had been followed. The Original Free Will Baptists of the East and the Freewill Baptists of the West had enough in common to justify a cooperative relationship, but there were too many differences respecting both doctrine and practices to make safe an organic union between the two groups. We believe that those in both organizations who worked for an absolute union thought that in time all differences could be overcome and harmonious agreements could be reached on all points of doctrine and practices. With anticipation of this, all parties agreed to a provision that all bodies composing the National Association should remain free to promote their internal interests according to their traditional forms of government and practices. The repudiation of this provision by the National Association in 1961 was one of the big factors in bringing about a disruption of that organization. However, this was only one of several developments leading up to the present state of affairs among Free Will Baptists, and a survey of these developments must await a future article in this series.

Many stand ready to agree today that in some ways the relationship of Original Free Will Baptists in the General Conference of Original Free Will Baptists from 1921 until the final organic merger with the National Association was the most satisfying fellowship we have ever enjoyed, and that our fellowship in the National Association, though enriched by many precious memories,

The Lighted Pathway

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

As we closed last week we were beginning to consider the prayer offered for the cause of God, after we had thought about what the cause specified. We found that God's cause has in all ages had its enemies, and that so many of the professed friends of His cause become so careless about it that He has to plead His own cause in the midst of our failure.

Let us again read and consider in our own minds the text-prayer: "Arise, O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily" (Psalm 74:22). Now we go on with our subject.

This prayer implies that this cause depends, in such times, upon God, and not man, for success. The prayer is, "Arise, O God, plead thine own cause." And then, as if to make it more urgent, "remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily."

A moment's reflection upon its enemies is sufficient to establish this sentiment. All merely human resources must of necessity fail. Human knowledge, learning, riches, eloquence, and genius would be alike unavailing. It requires the almighty power of God, with or without His people, to shield it; an all-wise deity to direct it; an omniscient eye to watch over it; and an ever-flowing Fountain to supply its wants. It is ". . . Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the LORD of hosts" (Zechariah 4:6).

This prayer also implies that, notwithstanding its dependence upon God, He expects His people to intercede in its behalf. He expects this from His people on account of their great obligations to His cause, on account of their professed attachment to it, and on account of the inseparable connection between Zion's progress and their own happiness. The true people of God have always displayed their love for God's cause by offering up prayers in its behalf. We have striking examples of this in Moses, Abraham, David, Solomon, Jeremiah, and in our blessed Redeemer himself, and in His apostles and early followers! God has laid this upon the hearts of His people, and has enforced it by divine promise—"Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee" (Psalm 122:6).

In what way does God regard the prayers of His servants on behalf of His cause? How does He answer their requests? Sometimes He does this by striking interpositions of His providence. We see how He interposed on behalf of Israel of old in Egypt—at the Red Sea—in their conflicts with the nations. We see how He did this in the days of Haman, Nehemiah, and Daniel. We see how He did it in case of Peter when He delivered him from prison and death. We have only to look at the reformation to see His interposing power working with His servants for His own cause.

He answers their prayers by raising up useful instruments for their work. In this way He raised up Moses, and brought him from tending his flocks, to be the deliverer of Israel. In this same way He raised up Joshua, Jephthah, Daniel, David, Solomon, and Cyrus. It was for His cause that Jeremiah was sanctified in the womb, and for it was Paul elected by the Holy Spirit to be an apostle that he might make known to the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ.

He pleads His own cause by pouring out His Spirit upon the means employed by His servants. It was in this way that the first preachers were qualified for going forth to proclaim with success the gospel of the grace of God. And it was this that caused the planting of Paul and the watering of Apollos to succeed—for he that planteth is nothing, nor he that watereth, but God who giveth the increase. The weapons of our warfare are only effective through God, to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan. The gospel is the power of God, not the power of eloquence or human influence, to everyone that believes. It is His heavenly rain that mollifies the earth, and prepares it for vegetating, and for bringing forth fruit—"thirty, sixty, and an hundred fold."

There are three classes of people, and each is differently affected in respect to God's own cause. Let us consider briefly each class.

There are some who hate it. Some of those were mentioned last week. If possible they would annihilate it. All their powers are directed against it. They libel it, they sneer at it, and they profess to disbelieve it. They seem never to consider how wicked is such a state, or what folly it is to persist in such a course. Who has hardened himself against God and prospered? Can they hope to succeed? I am not thinking altogether of material prosperity or worldly success! As soon might they try to quench the orb of day, or drive the chariot wheels of the queen of night! To all such let us say: Awake, awake to your true state and immediately escape with all earnestness to that mercy which, in spite of all your infidelity and blasphemy, has offered and provided salvation for you.

There are some who seemingly think or care nothing about the cause of God. They care about how they shall eat, drink, and be clothed. They care for their health, character, business, and families. But they are careless about God's holy and blessed cause. How thoughtless! how ungrateful! how foolish they really are before the God who lets them exist and bestows His blessings upon them daily! To undervalue the precious blood of Christ, to despise the richest boon of heaven, to trifle with all that is sacred in time and solemn in eternity is of the greatest of crimes! To all such we warn: "Consider your ways, and be wise." And again: "Today, if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."

The third class are those who love the cause of God and manifest it in many ways. They love God's Word and His Church. They are found doing what He commands. They rally around the standards of His cause. They speak of it and for it. They give it all their influence. Their joys and sorrows abound as it is in circumstances of prosperity or adversity. To such we give words of consolation. God will not forget your work of faith, your patience of hope, and your labor of love. On these we press the importance of the text, and in every time of trouble or calamity, to employ the prayer found in it:

"Arise, O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily."

Four Protestant Bodies Sponsor Seminary

BAREILLY, North India (EP) — A new interdenominational theological seminary, sponsored by four Protestant bodies, is scheduled to open here in July, 1965.

To be known as the North India Theological College, it will be formed by a union of three seminaries which were formerly located at Indore, Saharanpur, and Bareilly.

Representative of the Baptist Union of North India; the Methodist Church; the Church of India, Burma, and Ceylon (Anglican); and the United Church of Northern India (Presbyterian, American United Church of Christ and the Moravian Brethren) will comprise the Board of Governors of the new college.

Dr. C. S. Thoburn, a Methodist, has been named principal. The college, which hopes to integrate theological education in the Hindu-speaking areas, will hold membership on the Board of Theological Education and India's National Christian Council.

Bareilly is located in northern India, about 200 miles from New Delhi.

Denominations sponsoring the new institution are all participants in discussions, which have been underway for some 30 years, looking toward the formation of the United Churches of North India and Pakistan. Two other bodies are also involved in the union negotiation—the Church of the Brethren and the Disciples of Christ.

Radio School Broadens Outreach

MARSEILLE, France (EP) — The Radio School of the Bible (Ecole Radio Biblique), which was founded at the beginning of this year, has taken over the Bible Correspondence Courses formerly handled by the North Africa Mission. These courses are now going out over a much wider area of the world and are in English, French and Arabic languages.

The Radio School of the Bible plans to carry its program over the air as well. Up to the present time there has been a limited experimental broadcast program of 15 minutes per week but its directors hope that by summer 1965 a steady radio program of much greater volume will be in operation supplementing and supporting the present Bible Courses by Correspondence.

“It is safe to say that 99 percent of the possible number of listeners would never hear the good news of Salvation otherwise,” reports Gordon Beacham, administrative secretary of the North Africa Mission. “This can be done as the Lord enables. We trust that Christians everywhere will take the challenge upon their hearts for prayer and support.”

President Lauds Bible Week As Strengthening Nation

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP) — President Johnson, in an endorsement of National Bible Week, lauded the encouragement of Bible reading “in this era of international tension.”

Adherence to Biblical principles, he said, “stands as a fine contribution to the strengthening of our nation's spiritual foundations and to the furtherance of world peace.”

Fuller Seminary, Winona Lake School of Theology Discontinue Trial Merger Agreement

PASADENA, Calif. (EP) — Fuller Theological Seminary President, David A. Hubbard, announced with regret that the 10-year trial merger agreement with the Winona Lake School of Theology is being dissolved at the request of the Winona Lake Board. He added that continuing fiscal and administrative difficulties make it impossible to carry out what was hoped would be a strategic alliance between these two schools. Varying viewpoints regarding the academic program and failure of the Winona Board to understand Fuller Seminary's full commitment to the authority and inspiration of Scripture were other factors which contributed to the dissolution of the merger.

Hubbard further stated that negotiations between the schools are continuing in order that the substantial financial obligations of the Winona program to Fuller Seminary may be met so that the Winona campus to which Fuller holds full title, may be returned to the Winona Board under the terms of the trial agreement which had been in operation since January, 1963. Dr. Hubbard went on to say, “I sincerely hope the 40-year program of the Winona Lake School of Theology will continue to make its unique contribution to the preparation of Christian ministers.”

Baylor Gets Rare Law Books Gift

WACO, Tex. (EP) — A volume of books regarded as “the rarest of printed law books” has been given to Baylor University Law School here.

The Code of Justinian, a volume printed in 1475 just 19 years after publication of the Gutenberg Bible, was presented to the Baptist school by former U. S. Sen. William A. Blakely of Dallas.

There are only three other known copies of the Code of Justinian—one in Britain, one in France and one in Germany.

Interreligious Group Asks President for Investigation of Pornography

NEW YORK (EP)—President Johnson has been asked by a group of Christian and Jewish leaders to appoint a special commission of experts to study the traffic in pornography among American children and recommend a “swift and permanent solution” to the problem.

They also called for an investigation by the FBI to find the sources of pornography production and urged that the “facts be made public so that the American people will know who is responsible for this corruption.”

Stressing that the “situation is in the crisis stage,” the signers declared that “we cannot emphasize too strongly the pressing need for these two actions.”

Fair's Religious Pavilions Drew 22.5 Million in First Season

NEW YORK (EP) — Religious pavilions at the New York World's Fair, which drew their share of both praise and brickbats during the first season of the exposition, from a statistical standpoint could only be counted as among the most popular features of the event.

Bethlehem Church to Observe Homecoming

On Sunday, November 22, the Bethlehem Free Will Baptist Church near Beulaville, North Carolina, will observe its annual homecoming with the pastor, the Rev. N. B. Barrow, bringing the homecoming message. The usual picnic lunch will be served at the noon hour. A cordial invitation is extended everyone to attend this service.

On Wednesday evening, November 25, the pre-Thanksgiving service will be held. The pastor is also in charge of this service.

Cedric Pierce Conducting Oak Grove Revival

The Rev. Cedric Pierce of Winterville, North Carolina, is conducting a series of revival services at the Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Vanceboro, North Carolina, this week. Services began on Monday night, November 9, and will continue through Saturday night, November 14. Each service begins at 7:30 each evening.

The public is cordially invited to these services and, most of all, are asked to pray that the Lord might truly bless in each of the remaining nights of this meeting.

AN URGENT NEED

To Co-Workers in Original Free Baptist Churches

This article is being printed because we are sure we can count on your help. On October 12, 1964, the Board of Directors of Cragmont Assembly, Inc., Black Mountain, North Carolina, took a ninety-day option on the lease now being held by the Rev. Johnny Floyd. We promised to pay him $3,850 for his cottage built on the lot leased by him. Brother Floyd is not in fellowship with the Original Free Will Baptists of the North Carolina State Convention; he is a member of the newly formed State Association and the National Association. Thus to prevent any further friction or difficulty, the board has agreed to buy his lease.

All we need now is the money to pay for the lease. This is where YOU can HELP us! If all Original Free Will Baptists would send a generous gift within this short time, we could raise this $3,850.

The ninety days are passing swiftly. If you haven't already sent us an offering, PLEASE do so right away. If your church has already sent an offering, will YOU send a personal gift? Every gift will help to make up the total of $3,850. Just send your contributions to Cragmont Assembly, Inc., Mrs. Fountain Taylor Sr., treasurer, Route 2, Richlands, North Carolina.

OUR FOUNDERS: "Through the Vision of Their Faith They Still Live"

The program of dedications of our current "Golden Anniversary Development Program" dedicates this year, and the progress we make, to our founders under the above listed theme. It is most appropriate that this first year of our development program should be dedicated to those who laid our foundation so well. Our founders still live through the ministry of this Home during the past fifty years and in the unparalleled opportunities now before us. Without the vision of their faith this Home could not have been founded.

During this year we hope to properly identify all who should be included as our founders. Their names are to be so recorded in the Historical Review now being prepared. We also hope to recognize and honor them through suitable testimonials and memorials. The program of the 1965 session of our State Convention will include a Founder's Day observance.

WHO WERE OUR FOUNDERS?

We know who some of the founders of this Home were. However, we need to make sure we include all who should be included. We need any information that will help us to properly identify all the actual founders of this Home. The reader is urged to consider the following and to furnish any additional information that will help us properly identify others who should be so listed. Please use the form at the close of this article to list the names and give the necessary information.

THESE WE KNOW

The first formal resolution calling for the establishing of an orphanage was adopted by our State Convention on September 17, 1914, and was signed by George W. Ferrell, Luke Wetherington, J. E. Davis, and W. J. Braxton.

The first committee to represent the orphanage at their various conferences was also appointed on September 17, 1914, as follows: To Eastern—Elder Luke Wetherington; to Western—Elder J. E. Davis; to Central—Elder J. T. Butler; to Cape Fear—Elder J. F. Casey.

The following is also taken from the minutes of the second session of our State Convention for 1914:

"Brother W. A. Jackson stated that the Cape Fear Conference was taking some steps toward an Orphanage Home."

It is a matter of general knowledge that Brother Jackson was able to lead the people of his conference to join with the other conferences in establishing our present Children's Home.

The first board of trustees was elected on September 15, 1915, as follows: J. F. Casey, chairman, Goldsboro, North Carolina; J. E. Davis, Pikeville, North Carolina; W. R. Coates, Four Oaks, North Carolina; W. J. Braxton, Winterville, North Carolina; M. C. Prescott, Ayden, North Carolina.

The first committee to canvass for the orphanage was also appointed on September 15, 1915, as follows: Elder W. R. Coates, the Cape Fear Conference; Elder J. E. Davis, the Western; Elder D. W. Alexander, the Central; Elder Luke Wetherington, the Eastern.

THE PRACTICE OF PEACE

Lewis J. Willis

"Blessed are the peacemakers: . . ." (Matthew 5:9).

I SAAC'S LIFE was like the valley of calmness between two great waves. He lived between the great Abraham and the notable Jacob. While he did not shake the pages of history with a greatness such as that of his father, or a guile such as that of his son, Isaac did leave for posterity a vital lesson in the art of living. Isaac was a peacemaker.

Perhaps Abraham's followers laid his body in the tomb with serious misgivings. Because Isaac was neither as strong nor as forcible as his father, they may have felt that the divine enterprise begun when God called Abram in Ur of Chal-dees was destined to failure. However, one generation must follow another, and ultimately their fears proved false. Abraham had been a pioneer. It became Isaac's task to consolidate his father's gains.

Even as Abraham had been the right man to organize and promote the migration into this new land. Isaac became the man to incorporate it by merging the nomadic life with that of agriculture. In spite of the fact that he encountered open hostilities from the Philistine neighbors, Isaac pursued the occupation of farming in peace and with success.

A man of a less sedate nature would probably have become involved in serious conflict with the Philistines. The Philistines being much more numerous and ready for an excuse to attack, however, would doubtlessly have destroyed the Israelites if such battles had developed. Being a man of peace, Isaac led his people through this period of grave danger and ultimately won a great victory. He proved that by practicing peace, the hostility of an enemy could be met and overcome.

The Philistines manifested their bitterness toward Isaac by filling the wells his father Abraham had dug. They hoped by this destruction of property to drive him from the country. Isaac, however, met this challenge with characteristic patience. Although the Philistines had maliciously filled them with Bear Grass, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church held its October meeting in the home of Mrs. Beck Wynne and Miss Ernie Wynne with eleven members present. Mrs. Annie Cratt read the Scripture taken from Ezekiel 22:23-31, and Mrs. Selma Cowan led the group in prayer. Mrs. Beck Wynne gave the program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" The next meeting will be held on November 19 in the home of Mrs. Fessie Bailey. Mrs. Magonia Bailey dismissed the group with prayer.

The hostesses served delicious refreshments.

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Mount Zion Free Will Baptist Church met October 27 in the home of Mrs. Sara Lou Crocker. The meeting was called to order by the singing of "Standing on the Promises," followed with prayer by Mrs. Nadine Crocker. Mrs. Geraldine Cockrell, the program chairman, was in charge of the program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" Assisting her with the program were Mrs. Eloise Sutton, Mrs. Nadine Crocker, Mrs. Alonia Narron, Mrs. Anna Johnson, and Mrs. Lois Boykin.

During the business session it was voted and agreed upon to send $20 to the Children's Home at Middlesex for a new mattress. The meeting was brought to a close with the praying of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The hostess served delicious refreshments which were enjoyed by everyone. The November meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Mary Martin.

Beaufort, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Welcome Home Free Will Baptist Church met on Monday night, November 2, in the home of Mrs. Luther T. Salter with eight members and three visitors present. The president, Mrs. Emily Gillikin, called the meeting to order and the group sang "Blessed Assurance." Mrs. Gillikin read for the Scripture lesson Psalm 19. Mrs. Mary A. Gillikin, the program chairman, was unable to be present because of illness. The program, "Blueprints for Victory," was given by Mrs. Lela Golden, Mrs. Louise Lawrence, Mrs. Etta Gillikin, Mrs. Cora Salter, and Mrs. Sandra Lewis. After the business session the group prayed together the Lord's Prayer.

It was reported that Mrs. Agnes Baker, wife of the pastor, the Rev. Graham Baker, was unable to attend due to the illness of her husband. Mr. Baker is a patient in the Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. However, the last report was that he was some better. The auxiliary request your continued prayers for Mr. Baker and his family.

FOR STANDING TRUE

 ONE day in a factory, word was brought to the head tailor that a certain man had called to see him. Addressing the girl nearest him, he said: "Go and tell him I'm out."

"I can't do that," she replied quietly.

"Why not?" he demanded.

"I'm a Christian," she said. "I can't tell a lie."

With a curse he flung himself out of the room and interviewed the caller.

A week later this girl was called to the private office of her employer. She went, fully expecting to be fired. To her surprise, she was promoted to the position of supervisor over the other girls. The manager told her that men and women of her stamp were what he wanted to look after his business—Selected.

A FRIEND TO JESUS

Often we hear over radio and TV and in church meetings various groups singing "I'll Be a Friend to Jesus." Now singing that song is fine, but it is much better to live as a friend to Jesus. The Bible says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 7:21). We cannot depend on what is always said, but on what we see. Now the Bible further says, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9).

May we notice that God is not willing for men to be lost. He showed His will in giving His only begotten Son to die on the cruel Cross for our sins. We want to repeat what we have said before. We may not use the same words as used before, but words to convey what we want to get across.

It was not the Jews alone who nailed Jesus to the Cross. It was not the Gentiles alone. It was not one man or a group of Roman soldiers. Let us tell you again who it was that crucified the Lord Jesus: "For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, who thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done" (Acts 4:27, 28). May we notice "For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determine to be done." This reveals to us exactly for whom and why Christ died.

GOD'S LOVE

It was God's wonderful, amazing love for lost sinners: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Why did Christ die? He died for you and for me. When did God love us? While we were yet sinners. Again, Why did God love us? Because we were lost and He wanted us saved. In 2 Peter 3:9 we are told that God is not willing for anyone to perish. Because He loved us He sent His Son to earth that sinful man might believe in Christ and accept Him as Lord and Master. This was the last thing that God could do to save sinners. No other way was there for man to get to God. The only way is by Christ. Stop here and pray that you may know the way.

In answer to Thomas' question, Jesus said, ". . . I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). This settles the matter. Our good works will not do the job; our church membership will not do the job. Our benevolence will not suffice. Paul says, "And though I bestow all my good to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing" (1 Corinthians 13:3). To have charity (love), we must have Christ and Christ must have us.

We sing in our local church where I pastor "Now I belong to Jesus and Jesus belongs to me." If we do not have Christ as Saviour and Lord, there is no salvation; we are lost without Christ. But we believe that, if Christ owns us and we are absolutely His, we will do much for the salvation of others. I cannot believe that a genuine child of God can be satisfied to stay out of the actual fellowship and service of Christ in missions, in support of Christian education work, in feeding and clothing the needy. We believe that he will unite with those who are joined together in promoting the gospel of Jesus Christ in all the church activities and the commands of Jesus Christ.

When I accepted Christ as my Saviour, I accepted Him as my Lord; and because He is my Lord, I fell in love with God's people and wanted fellowship—visible fellowship. I had heavenly fellowship the very moment I believed, and I knew it better than any earthly being. The angels rejoiced, God was pleased, the atonement was perfected, and I was happy. I did not, nor do I now, understand how a holy God could love a sinner like me. In was a realization of amazing grace. The sound is still sweet.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

I humbly say that I could not be satisfied to stay out of the visible body of the Church. Therefore I offered myself for the connection and fellowship of believers. I yielded myself to Christ as our church covenant says, "Having given ourselves to God, by faith in Christ, and adopted the Word of God as our rule of faith and practice, we now give ourselves to one another, by the will of God in this solemn covenant." If we believe the Word of God and if we were sincerely truthful when we accepted God and gave ourselves to Him, I cannot see how we can do anything displeasing to God, our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. Remember, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." I repeat that verse because I want to impress you who read to take no substitute for the gospel of my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Stick to the Word of God, not to any man's word that leaves any part of the Bible out, saying that it does not mean what it says. I believe it all—from Genesis to and through Revelation.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Please explain, "That the sons of God saw the daughters of man that they were fair; and they took them wives of all they chose" (Genesis 6:2); "Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them" (Job 1:6); "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" (Job 38:7). Who are the sons of God when they are mentioned in the Old Testament?—James Gray, Illinois.

The Sethites evidently held the line of separation for a long time sufficiently distinct to gain for them the title "sons of God." During that time Enoch walked so closely with God for 300 years that God took him into the environment of heaven for better fellowship and Noah, his descendants, gained the title, preacher of righteousness; but other Sethites were overcome when they disregarded God's line of separation. When the descendants of the godly people, the sons of God, disregarded God's rules of segregation, those observed by their forefathers, this incurred God's wrath upon them in the form of the flood. (See Genesis 6:1-3.) Does that, in these verses, not sound like current news? Both men and women who profess to be Christians and who are descendants from a noble ancestry of mothers and fathers that for generations have respected, obeyed, and followed the example of their ancestors and obeyed the precepts of their godly parents seem now to throw all caution to the winds of evil to associate with, court, and marry whom they will.

There is much sadness and bitterness experienced in many of the family circles today just simply because the spirit of rebellion against God's authority prevails. Jesus warned of it, telling His disciples, and us through them by the words they wrote in the Bible, that when this age is about to come to a close the conditions that preceded the flood and those that preceded the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah would prevail. To me these words sound like today's newspaper accounts of current events. "For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together. Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken" (Matthew 24:28, 29). Read the whole context and look up references on these astounding statements and compare what the Bible has to say on that which must precede the coming of Christ and judge for yourself whether or not you need to be alarmed and flee the wrath of God that is to come, is near, even at the door.

Sinners, whether professed Christians or infidels, need to be alerted to the fact that "today is the day of salvation" and that tomorrow may be everlastingly too late. We who are born-again Christians are the sons of God. They of the world are the sons of the devil. "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it" (John 8:44). Compare this verse with, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure" (1 John 3:2, 3). All this difference is experienced when one believes in and appropriates Christ as Lord. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son

THE WAGES OF SIN

S. D. Gordon

"For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:23).

There are seven simple facts that everyone ought to know about sin: First, sin earns wages.

Second, sin pays wages.

Third, sin insists on paying. You may be willing to let the account go, but sin insists on paying.

Fourth, sin pays its wages in kind. Sin against the body pays wages in the body.

Fifth, sin pays in installments.

Sixth, sin pays in full, unless the blood of Jesus washes away the sin.

Seventh, sin pays its own bills. Sin has bound up in itself all the terrible consequences that come.

The logical result of sin is death—death to the body, death to the mind, death to the soul!—Gospel Herald.

It is said the Patrick Henry, the great patriot, incorporated these words in his will: "I have now disposed of all my property to my family. There is one thing I wish I could give them, and that is the Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling, they would be rich."—Christian Messenger.

Some people seem to have a special disposition to be critical. Well, it never makes them happy; neither does it make others happy, and never lifts one to a higher and holier plane of living. Dear critic, better change about and do some uplifting.—Walter E. Isenhour.

He that puts his confidence in God only is neither overjoyed in any great good things of this life, nor sorrowful for a little thing.—Jeremy Taylor.

shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36).

BOYS and GIRLS

A SOUVENIR FOR MARGARET

AGNES RANNEY

MARGARET stood at the window, watching the snowflakes drift down through the leafless branches of the maple tree in the front yard. Her head ached, and her throat hurt. But it wasn't her sore throat that brought the tears to her eyes—it was the pain in her heart.

She had tried to be very brave when Mother and Dick, her older brother, left for the rally.

"I'm sorry to leave you alone, dear," Mother had said, "but I promised to take the children in my Sunday-School class to the rally. I don't like to disappoint them."

"I'll stay home if you want me to," Dick offered. But Margaret knew he had looked forward to this Saturday morning when they would see the pictures of the Holy Land just as much as she had.

"I don't mind staying," she said. "There's no need for anyone else to miss the rally, just because I have a cold. Besides, Mrs. Gray is in the apartment upstairs, so I'm not really alone."

Now Mother and Dick were gone. Soon they would be picking up Mother's Sunday-School children. Then, with hundreds of other boys and girls from all over town, they'd gather in the big church basement to see the wonderful pictures Mrs. Wilson had taken in Palestine.

There was a knock at the door. Who could it be?

"Why, Aunt Nellie!" Margaret cried. "I didn't know you were coming over!" Aunt Nellie—she was really Margaret's great-aunt—looked too frail to be out in the snow. But Margaret knew she had been through many a real storm in her years as a missionary in Africa. Aunt Nellie was retired now, and lived near enough to drop in often.

"What a cheery fire!" Aunt Nellie said. "Your mother stopped to tell me you were alone, so I came for a little visit. I'm sorry about your cold. I know you were looking forward to the rally."

"It's not just the rally," Margaret said. "What I really wanted was one of the souvenirs Mrs. Wilson is giving each boy and girl who goes."

"Souvenirs?"

"They're little cards with a picture of the Sea of Galilee, and on each one is a pressed flower that grew in the Holy Land—the very same kind of flowers that were growing when Jesus lived there!"

"That would be interesting," said Aunt Nellie.

"Interesting! Why, it would be wonderful!" Margaret couldn't understand why Aunt Nellie wasn't more excited. She felt a card like that would have something—well, almost magical about it. "Just think—the very same kind of flowers Jesus walked through! I'd—I'd just give 'most anything to have one! Wouldn't you?"

"Well—no, dear. As I said, it would be interesting to see one. But you shouldn't feel too bad at not having a souvenir, when you have something so much better."

"Better?" Margaret asked.

"Yes, much better," Aunt Nellie repeated, smiling, with a hint of a twinkle in her blue eyes. "Let me tell you about a little boy I knew once in Africa."

"Please do!" said Margaret.

"The little boy's name was Sombi. He was a bright-eyed little African boy, not quite as old as you. He was always interested in the Bible stories and choruses. We became good friends. One day Sombi showed me his greatest treasure."

"A treasure? What was it?"

"You wouldn't have thought it such a treasure. It was just a little rock Sombi had found on the edge of a stream. It had been polished smooth by the water, and had red and black streaks running through it. But it was different from any rock Sombi had ever seen. He was sure it had some magical power, and that as long as he kept it no evil spirit could harm him, and he would have good luck."

"Did he always keep it?" asked Margaret.

"No—not always. One day we talked about the Lord Jesus, Sombi and I, and how He wanted boys and girls to belong to Him. Sombi made up his mind to give his heart to the Lord. I told him that even though his family and friends might make fun of him, or even be angry with him for becoming a Christian, Jesus' Holy Spirit would be with him always. I showed him how Jesus would help him to do the right things and to understand the Scripture verses he was learning. Sombi's face was shining with joy when he went home.

"Soon afterward I went out of my hut to bring wood for my fire. There in the middle of the dusty path was Sombi's magic rock. I picked it up and kept it for him. But when I held it out to him the next day, he just shook his head. 'Jesus is with me now—I don't need the magic,' he said. You see, Jesus was very real to Sombi. He had found something much better than his magic rock."

"I see what you mean, Aunt Nellie," she said at last. "We have Jesus Himself with us. Having Him is better than Sombi's magic—or anything we can see or touch."

"And isn't it wonderful that He sent His Holy Spirit to be with us?" Aunt Nellie said. "When Jesus was here on earth He could be with only a few people at a time. Palestine is a tiny country. Yet not nearly all the people even in that small place saw Him or heard

A storm at sea tossed the boat like a piece of driftwood. John Newton could barely manage to keep his footing on the rain-swept deck. The wind screamed around him, and the wet hands of the ocean seemed to be pulling him from the boat. . . . He cried out, "God, get me safely to port, and I'll be your slave forever!" The storm subsided, and John Newton made his promise true. Today his hymns are sung and loved by every Christian congregation. —Michael Daves in Famous Hymns and Their Writers (Fleming H. OBITUARIES

MRS. NELLIE ELLEN WHITE

Mrs. Nellie Ellen White died at her home in Bertie County, North Carolina, July 31, 1964. She was born on October 12, 1897, the daughter of the late Paul and Fannie Faust. She was married on December 10, 1913, to Duncan White and to this union were born one son and two daughters.

Mrs. White was a charter member of the Plymouth, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church. She was kind and nice to everyone at all times regardless of the conditions. In the last years of her life she was very feeble, but she often used the words of the faithful Abraham of old, "The Lord will provide." She was in church the last Sunday night she lived on this earth. We can all rest assured that our loss was heaven's gain.

She is survived by her husband; one son, Connie White of Norfolk, Virginia; two daughters, Mrs. Edna Phelps, Plymouth, and Mrs. Fannie Wolf, Norfolk, Virginia; six grandchildren; three great-grandchildren; and a host of friends and relatives. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, the Rev. Earl Minchew, assisted by the Revs. Calvin Craddock and Wayne West. She was laid to rest in the Hillside Memorial Garden at Plymouth.

MRS BESSIE OWENS GOFF

We, the members of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Fountain, North Carolina, wish to express our deepest sympathy in the loss of our dear friend, Mrs. Bessie Owens Goff, who departed this life on April 12, 1964. Remaining are one daughter, Brenda, and one son, Travis, of the home; one brother, Mark W. Owens of Fountain; and a host of friends.

She was a faithful member of our church, president of our woman's auxiliary, and one of our league instructors. We miss her Christian guidance and loving smile, but we realize our loss is God's gain. On April 14, 1964, she was laid to rest in the Fountain Cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers.

KEEP THE FAITH

LESSON TEXT: 2 Timothy 3:10-13; 4:1-8, 17, 18

MEMORY VERSE: 2 Timothy 4:7, 8

I. INTRODUCTION

All of Paul's efforts as a Christian were centered upon one basic goal, or aim—to keep the faith. This purpose was not only for himself, but in the interest of all other Christians. The admonitions and advice that he offered Timothy centered around this purpose. When he called attention to his own personal experiences, it was for the purpose of preserving the faith.

Down through the centuries there have been those who became spiritual bulwarks against those who would destroy the faith once delivered unto the saints. We are thankful for the life and testimony of each one.

This present age stands in need of such faithful souls, for we are truly living in perilous times, spiritually speaking. Paul speaks of these times in the first ten verses of Second Timothy, Chapter 3. "In the last days perilous times will come," he wrote. Indications are that the last days which he describes are upon us. It is believed that his reference was to perilous spiritual times. Several of the New Testament writers refer to a falling away; that is, a time of apostasy, or a forsaking of the faith.

There are those today who reject some of the fundamental doctrines and teachings of the Bible. There are those who reject the fact of the virgin birth. There are those who reject the fact that the Bible is the inspired Word of God. There are those who do not believe in the creation story as recorded in the Book of Genesis. There are those who believe in evolution to the extent that man evolved from a lower creature. There are those who reject the miracles of the Bible. In view of these liberal trends which seem so predominant today, the Christian must determine to keep the faith. He must know what the Bible teaches, and he must accept the Bible as a true account of God's revelation to man.

There are other "isms" that pose a great threat to Christendom; such as, secularism, materialism, modernism, and Communism. The true faith must be guarded against these evils.—Bible Student (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul's life and testimony served as an example to Timothy (vv. 10, 11).

2. The apostle declared that all who faithfully serve Christ can expect to suffer persecutions (v. 12).

3. Men without Christ will become worse and worse (v. 13).

4. Paul appealed to Timothy on the merits of Christ (v. 1).

5. He charged him to preach the Word whenever it was possible for him to do so (v. 2).

6. The time will come when men will despise the Word, and they will seek that which will tickle their fancy (v. 3).

7. They will turn away from the truth to follow false doctrines (v. 4).

8. Timothy was to be faithful and give full proof of the fact that he was God's minister (v. 5).

9. In view of the fact that Paul had completed his work for God, he was ready for his reward (vv. 6-8).

10. No matter what the persecutions, Paul knew that God would stand by him through it all (vv. 17, 18).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. There are at least four ways in which Paul gave his testimony. Let us examine each of these more clearly.

First, Paul gave his testimony by his character. Of course, a man's character is what he really is. So in a way this encompasses all of the other methods used by Paul to give his testimony for Christ. Someone has wisely made the statement, "What you are speaks so loud that I cannot hear what you say." Paul's motives and morals were above reproach. His character and his confession rang true.

Second, Paul gave testimony to God's grace in his daily conversation. Too often Christians expect to talk about everything under the sun except the Lord and then have their lives count for God. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." So if our hearts and minds are stayed on the Lord, our conversation will show it.

During the War between the States, General Grant was seated in a tent with a group of officers when one of the officers said, "Since there are no leaders present I have a story to tell."

Immediately, General Grant replied, "There are no leaders present, but there are gentlemen present." The story was not told.

Third, Paul gave testimony with his daily conduct. One may ask the question, What is the difference in conduct and character? As we have pointed out, character embraces all of the other ways of giving our testimony. However, we think of character as being basically motives and morals; whereas, conduct does not always adequately express these. We should be careful about the influence of our conduct. Sometimes the little things we do make a great deal of difference.

Fourth, Paul gave testimony by the preaching of the gospel. Every record we have of Paul's preaching shows that it was Christ centered. He sought above everything else to exalt Christ.

If those of us who profess to be Christians today would give the kind of testimony that Paul gave, many more would be won to Christ.—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.).

2. Nebuchadnezzar, a heathen king, testified: "There is no other God that can deliver after this sort" (Daniel 3: 29).

A Shantyman missionary was speaking in an open-air meeting in British Columbia. A drunken cowboy spurred his horse in a headlong gallop directly toward the missionary. Instantly the missionary prayed, "Lord, you are able to protect me. If you permit that horse and rider to run me down, Thy will be done!" Suddenly the horse reared on its hind legs as if encountering an invisible wall of divine protection. Three times the liquor-crazed rider spurred his mount at the missionary.

Three times the horse refused to take the final, fatal leap that would have seriously injured or killed the Shantyman. The promise is sure: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them" (Psalm 34:7).

Have we accepted Paul's fervent challenge to join in the work of propagating the Gospel? The world today is overflowing with false religious teachers. Their errors are circulated in countless printed pages. Their voices go out constantly over the airways. As older Christians today go home to glory upon completion of their ministries on earth, will you rise up at God's command, like Timothy, to help fill the vacancies they leave?—Bible Expositor.

3. Have you ever watched a little stream run along a rocky mountain course? A large boulder may stand in its path. The stream detours around the boulder, but goes on its way. Some broken logs may have fallen across its path. With a rush and a splash into the air, the stream hits the logs, and flows over, under, around them. Perhaps a landslide has piled rubble into the stream bed. The stream must go around it, but it goes on its way. The beavers may build a dam to make a small lake; but after slowing down, the stream spills over and is off again. By now, in spite of obstacles to its progress, it is a bigger stream. Fewer things can stop it. Eventually it flows into a river, losing its own identity, but becoming part of a larger, more important force of water.

Paul's life was constantly beset by obstacles. He suffered almost constant persecution. At the end, he faced martyrdom. Nothing stopped his devotion to his Saviour.

All of this opposition was meaningless to Paul because he was assured that he was doing God's will. He could keep going despite all obstacles because he knew that there was laid up for him a crown of righteousness. When Paul died in the service of Christ, the rush of the stream was at an end. But his life, like the stream, had grown in importance and magnitude. And as the stream became lost in the waters of the river, Paul's service became part of the growing tide of Christianity. His years of service were finished. But because of his faithfulness, his influence would extend through the centuries, providing guidance and advice and inspiration to Christians of all ages.—Standard Commentary.

Him speak. But now, through the Holy Spirit, He can be with each one of us. He is with your mother and Dick at the rally, and with us here by the fire. He can be with a minister in New York and with a little boy in the African jungle."

"I hadn't thought of it like that," Margaret said. "He's a real Person, isn't He? Not just a memory of Someone who lived a long time ago. If we have Him, we don't really need a souvenir to remind us of Him."

The door opened and Mother and Dick hurried in, shaking the snow from their hair.

"Here, Margaret—I brought you a souvenir," Dick said, after greeting Aunt Nellie.

Margaret's eyes met Aunt Nellie's over the little card with the fragile pressed blossom under its transparent window. She would keep it always. But it wasn't magical or miraculous. The best thing it would do for Margaret would be to remind her that the real, personal Lord Jesus was with her, every hour of every day, through the Holy Spirit—and that He was far more wonderful than any souvenir.—Junior Journeys.

NSSA to Sponsor 'Youth Week'

CHICAGO (EP) — Thousands of churches and Sunday Schools across the country will participate in "National Youth Week," January 31—February 7, 1965, sponsored by the National Sunday School Association.

The theme of the year's Youth Week is "My All For Christ" and has been instituted to challenge the youth of today to "face the moral and spiritual battles in life with the never failing Lord" at their side.

School Boards, Superintendents Would Upset Prayer Ruling

CONCORD, N. H. (EP) — New Hampshire's school officials voted, 47 to 3 here against the U. S. Supreme Court's decision banning prayers in public schools.

The vote was taken at the 19th annual conference of the New Hampshire School Boards Association and the New Hampshire School Superintendents' Association.

With 13 persons abstaining, they voted on a resolution which asked: "How many would like to have a reversal of the Supreme Court decision on prayers in the schools?"

John Billings said, "I'd rather know a few things for certain than be sure of a lot of things that ain't so." The tragedy of the times is that we are so obsessed with the temporal that we are ignorant of the eternal. We travel so fast that we never see the scenery.—Vance Havner in Peace in the Valley (Fleming H. Revell Company).

The Practice Of Peace

earth, Isaac resolved to open them again. He moved a short distance from the city to the "valley of Gerar" and began to re-dig the wells.

Not only did Isaac open old wells, but he also dug new ones. Although one should avail himself of the advantages achieved by his forefathers, he should be determined to make further progress in spite of all opposition. By persistent digging Isaac's servants found "springing water." This was a real prize, for the spring made it unnecessary for them to draw the water.

The persecution of the Philistines was as persistent as Isaac's patience was perfect. As quickly as they had dug the well of springing water, the Philistines claimed it as their own. Isaac became an example of resistance through non-resistance. He not only desired peace, but also exerted every effort possible to live with his neighbors without fighting. After naming the well "Esek" or "strife" as a gentle rebuke to his adversaries, he let them have it.

Isaac moved away from the wells of strife and hatred, confident that the way to keep peace was to pursue it, not to fight for it. He dug the next well about forty miles from Gerar. He called the name of this well "Rehoboth," which means "room enough." The Philistines did not molest him at this place. Those who will seek peace will eventually find it. Not only are the peacemakers called the "children of God," but the "meek shall inherit the earth."

Perhaps we should observe that although Isaac was known for his composed and placid temperament, he did not compromise his ideals or faith in order to receive the favor of his neighbors. There were many times when he was required to yield his principles or move on to greater sacrifice. Had he been willing to forsake his religion and become a Philistine, he would doubtlessly have escaped much trouble. He remained true to himself, however, and refused to mar his integrity. It is very doubtful that he would ever have gained the respect of his enemies if he had wavered in his determined policy of peacemaking. His refusal to alter his practices to any degree proved him a crusader instead of a coward. May God help us to understand that the greatest people are not necessarily those who "stand up for their rights," but those who preserve right, even at the cost of personal sacrifice.

Almost two thousand years before Christ gave His notable sermon on the mount in which He set forth the moral of peacemaking and its rewards, Isaac practiced it and found that it was true. Today amid the strife and war that have bathed the world in tears and blood, there is a desperate need for those who will become peacemakers. Perhaps there could be no action which could earn one the benediction of "child of God" more quickly than the practice of peace.

JUST THINKING

MRS. BRUCE JOHNSON
SHELLMAN, GEORGIA

LIVING in a rural community is a blessing to me. In the mad rush of life, I have often thought of the great effect the environment in which we live has on our spiritual well-being.

Truly we are in the midst of harvest season. My neighbor has a cotton field that I have observed all year. "For every thing there is a season," and at last it is harvest season. Many are in the field with just a cotton sack as they toil from row to row. In this particular cotton field, the cotton continued to open until it seemed that the entire field was one white blanket, spread over the field. It was at this stage that the cotton picker came and worked all through the day and into the night. Our ten-year-old son spoke of how good a job the picker was doing.

In thinking about his remark, I would like to pass on to you that another harvest field is seen daily. I am just the common laborer, toiling from day to day. It is my desire to do more as I see God's great "harvest machine" as it rolls in the field of lost souls. I realize it's an expensive machine, taking more than a desire to purchase. All of self must be forgotten and nothing short of a perfectly yielded life can pay the price to come in possession of this mighty weapon. Even then the machine could not operate unless it is daily filled with the Holy Spirit, with grace and wisdom for each day's work. Then we must go back from time to time for more fuel. Once we have the weapon, and are ready to get the job done, we must avoid anything that could cause a spiritual disaster. "Shew me thy ways, O LORD; teach me thy paths" (Psalm 25:4).

Too often we are not willing to work overtime. Could it be that we do not really realize the seriousness of the day in which we live. The fields are white. The storms of life are blowing. In Matthew 9:36-38 we read these words:

"But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest."

I have said to many people, "Read one of the four Gospels ten times. Read it thoughtfully and prayerfully each time, and it will have a deep and abiding influence upon your life." Many have reported thrilling results of such a reading. Jesus Christ is so wonderful that even from the cold type of the printed page His power is felt by one who reads.—Charles L. Allen in The Life of Christ (Fleming H. Revell Company).

Seed—even good seed—can prove worthless if they are kept in close confinement; but may prove to be very valuable if sown and well cultivated. Thus it is with one's talents.—Walter E. Isenhour.

THOU MUST

Thou must be true thyself,
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow if thou
Another's soul wouldst reach:
It takes the overflow of heart
To give the lips full speech.

Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and each word of

Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

In the Editor's Mail

"Having been a chief among sinners myself, I feel unjustified to speak out in the name of our Lord, but after reading today's issue of The Free Will Baptist my heart became very heavy.

"As many of you know, the Fayetteville mission postponed our request for financial assistance from the state mission board so that less fortunate missions needs might be met. I think it is a sad situation indeed that our Free Will Baptists will stand by and not care for our own people.

"I hope every Free Will Baptist will act today and give something to our less fortunate brothers and sisters in Arizona and Mexico. . . . I am going to ask our mission members to send a personal check to our mission directors and ask them to use it immediately for missions, caring for our people and let us know when they need more."—Taylor Hill, Director of First Free Will Baptist Mission, Fayetteville, North Carolina.

Editorial—

THE CHURCH-RELATED COLLEGE

Never in the course of human history has such an emphasis been put upon education as in our day. In fact, there is a feeling in some cases that the emphasis is too strong, that too much is required of our young people in this era of knowledge and learning. At any rate, education is the order of the day. Without it, we are told, a person is handicapped. Thus, the number of young people entering college increases each fall.

This trend toward education has resulted in a leaning toward the secular aspects of learning and less and less to the spiritual aspects. It must be understood that both are necessary, but the secular must be centered around that which is spiritual, or religious. This trend toward the secular is evidenced by the growth of the state-supported college and university. The largest of these can scarcely build fast enough to meet the increase in enrollment.

These facts serve as a challenge to the church-related college. There have been opinions expressed that the church-related college stands in danger of being engulfed in the struggle for knowledge. If such is only slightly possible, the challenge becomes even greater and must be met at all costs.

There are many purposes for the existence of the church-related college. It is not our intention to enter a discussion of these purposes; however, we must realize that one primary purpose is the propagation of the denomination's historical biblical beliefs. (The carrying out of this purpose is based upon the premise that the Christian spirit pervades in all decisions and actions.) If this purpose does not permeate its every decision and action, then it has no justification for existing as a product of its denomination. Without this purpose, the church-related college loses its distinctiveness and becomes more like the state-supported college.

In other words, the church-related college does not exist to formulate, or renovate, or alter, the policies, practices, and doctrines of its denomination; but to carry out the same. It is the responsibility of the denomination to see that this is done.

Church-related colleges are one of the means of a denomination's growth. When the denomination grows, the college will grow. Each is an unmeasurable asset to the other—if things remain in their proper perspective. This brings us now to the subject of the college alumni.

Each college, of whatever sort it may be, recognizes that a great deal of its success is dependent upon its alumni. With the church-related college, there is always an increase in giving from a church when that church is pastored by an alumnus, or when a graduate of the denomination's college is active in church work. The giving, however, may decrease if the alumni fail to portray the historical biblical witness of the denomination; for such is a reflection on the college.

A college cannot always channel the course of life for its alumni, anymore than a parent does the child. It is the alumni who, in the course of time, determine the future of a college. It is both logical and reasonable that a college will constantly be under the scrutiny of its constituency. If its alumni digress, or stray, from the beaten, time-tested paths, the college will suffer the consequences.

We must conclude then that the existence of the church-related college is a must. It has been our privilege to attend two church-related colleges, both of which meant much. We believe there is a difference and that this difference is clearly marked in the pages of history, for the church-related college has played a vital part in our country's development and progress.

What It Means to be Lost!

*We rejoice that everyone who is saved is going to heaven.
Do we grieve that everyone who is lost is going to hell?*

LOST: One planet with some people still on it. Man overboard in a sea of space and the man is Everyman . . . Lost: Last seen somewhere east of Eden, a man whose name is Adam. Lost: His God, His Garden, His Way." Thus eloquently does David A. Redding commence his book on the parables of Jesus Christ. He mentions first a lost world, a prodigal planet, then more personally singles out a lost man.

All of us need to experience the same transition of thought. Every Christian pays lip service to the proposition that the world is lost in sin, that everyone is, or was until conversion, lost. But how seriously do we translate that concept to the cases of individual acquaintances? All sinners are lost, to be sure, but what about the particular sinner you rub elbows with at work, or school, or home, or even at church? Do you look upon him as lost? Or does some other quality or characteristic he reflects obscure his spiritual condition?

Do you understand what it means to be lost?

We all have experienced to some extent the loss of property or loved ones. Then, of course, what is lost makes a considerable difference so far as efforts to find it are concerned. No one gets excited particularly if his neighbors lose a cat or dog. But there are losses which spur spectacular exertions.

Several times each year hundreds of men fan out on the shoulders of Mount Hood in Oregon. Helicopters hover overhead if visibility permits. The Mountain Rescue Council works around the clock, whether weather is fair or foul. All these activities are coordinated in the search for lost people, skiers, campers, hikers, or hunters. Even if only one person is reported lost on the mountain all the rescue efforts are shifted into high gear and kept there until the lost is found or until all reasonable hope of rescue is exhausted.

All Oregon recognizes what a terrible thing it is for a man to be lost on a mountain. All Christians need to understand what it means for a man to be lost in sin!

What does it mean to be lost?

To be lost spiritually means to be sentenced to hell.

To be lost means the opposite of salvation. The person who is saved enjoys an earnest of heaven. "After that ye believed," explains the Apostle Paul, "ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession" (Ephesians 1:13, 14). "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: . . ." (John 3:36). That is what it means to be saved. The rest of the verse details what it means to be lost: ". . . and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Note the tenses of the verbs. The Christian has life already. The sinner has wrath already. The wrath of God abides on him now, already, not just after the last judgment, but now. Like the sword that threatened Damocles, hanging suspended by a string over his head at a banquet in ancient Syracuse, so the wrath of God abides on all who are lost. "He that believeth not is condemned already," states John 3:18. Again the tense is present. The sinner is not about to be condemned, not in danger of being condemned, not just going to be condemned. He is already condemned. To be condemned is to be sentenced to hell. To be lost means to be sentenced already to perdition.

Do you understand what it means to be sentenced to hell?

There is one way in which I pray you will never understand.

May God grant that you never understand by experience what it means to be lost, for you would have to go to hell for that understanding. Yet that is exactly how people who are ultimately lost will get to understand what it means to be lost!

Christians will never understand hell by experience. Yet one wonders if a sample might help increase our concern for the lost. General William Booth, Founder of the Salvation Army, reportedly shocked a class of his students with the remark, "I wish I could send you all to hell for a week!"

Actually an hour would be enough to arouse most believers to a burden for the lost! Coming back to earth from an hour in hell, a Christian would never again look a sinner in the face and ignore his lost condition.

But the person who enters perdition arrives there for keeps. No return after an hour or week is possible. To be lost means to be sentenced to stay forever in hell. Christians might be better soul-winners after a visit to perdition, but God does not in such a manner promote a concern for the lost.

It should be enough for Christians to know that an unbeliever is headed for hell to arouse extreme exertions to save him.

Theologically we believe in hell, but actually do we? Do we really believe in hell—to the same extent that we believe in heaven? We rejoice that everyone who is saved is going to heaven. Do we grieve that everyone who is lost is going to hell?

If heaven is real, hell is real. If heaven is eternal, hell is eternal. Between the two a great gulf is fixed, an impassible chasm. You believe in heaven, but do you really believe in hell? In order to understand what it means to be lost one must realize that every unbeliever is already condemned, already sentenced to perdition, already in the "death house" spiritually.

REPORT OF DEVELOPMENT FUND GIFTS

Four benefit dinners within the past five days have brought $22,413 in gifts to the development fund of Mount Olive College.

These dinners are a part of a series of dinners being sponsored throughout eastern North Carolina by Free Will Baptist churches to raise funds for the building program on the new 90-acre campus of the college.

Recent dinners and the amount of their contributions included Beaufort County, $2,064, Oscar Webster of Pine-town, chairman; Johnston-Wake Counties, $6,117, the Rev. J. Garland Teasley of Smithfield, chairman; Pitt County, $10,164, Randolph Harris of Winterville, chairman; and Greene County, $4,607, Mrs. J. C. Moye of Snow, chairman.

President W. Burkette Raper reported that eleven benefit dinners have been held this year from which the college has received $38,098.

Seven additional dinners are scheduled for the fall, including Duplin County November 12, in Beulaville; an Albemarle Area dinner for Washington Tyrell, Martin, and Pasquotank Counties on November 16 in Plymouth; Nash County, November 18, in Spring Hope; Sampson and Harnett Counties, November 20, at Midway School; Onslow and New Hanover Counties, November 21, at Dixon High School near Holly Ridge; Wilson County, November 23, in Wilson; and Edgecombe-Halifax Counties December 8, in Tarboro.

In September the college awarded contracts totaling $815,000 for the first buildings on its new campus.

PLAIN GOODNESS

Christianity is not a voice of the wilderness, but a life in the world. It is not an idea in the air, but feet on the ground, going God's way. It is not an exotic flower to be kept under glass, but a hardy plant to bear all kinds of fruit in all kinds of weather. Fidelity to duty is its root.

Nothing we can say to the Lord—no calling Him by great or dear names—can take the place of doing His will. We may cry out about the beauty of eating bread with Him in His kingdom, but it is wasted breath and a rootless hope unless we plow and plant in His kingdom here and now. There is no substitute for plain, everyday Christianity.—The War Cry.

If you are trying to pull somebody else down, just realize that you have to be beneath him in order to do so; but to lift him up you have to be above him, or by his side. A good uplifter is far better than a bad downpuller.—Walter E. Isenhour.

The insects have no lungs such as man possesses, but breathe through tubes. When insects grow large the tubes cannot grow in ratio to the increasing size of the body of the insect. Hence there has never been an insect more than inches long . . . there never could be an insect of great size. This limit holds all insects in check and prevents them from dominating the world. If this physical check had not been provided, man could not exist. Imagine a primitive man meeting a hornet as big as a lion. . . To my mind, the guards and controls which keep all life in balance reveal the planning of infinite wisdom.—A. Cressy Morrison in Seven Reasons Why a Scientist Believes in God (Fleming H. Revell Company).

It is better to grasp a little opportunity to do good than let a great opportunity pass unaccepted. Opportunities, small or great, can be loaded with blessings when graciously accepted, or fall worthless at your feet if turned down.—Walter E. Isenhour.

THE CHURCH - WORLD-WIDE

Chinese Evangelist in Pre-Olympics Crusade

TOKYO (EP) — Chinese Evangelist Timothy Dzaio of Hong Kong was the featured speaker in the pre-Olympic International Christian Crusade here October 4—9.

The meetings were held in Tokyo's 10,000-seat Kyoritsu Kodo Auditorium in Yamanashi and was sponsored by conservative ministers, missionaries and churches.

The Korean Gospel Choir sang, assisted by American, Australian, British and European missionaries. There were also a series of testimonies from Christian Olympic-related athletes.

The crusade followed Evangelist Honjo's Tokyo Gospel Crusade held at the Yamanashi Public Hall where over 20,000 gathered from September 5—13 among whom 1,800 made public decisions for Christ.

Unholy Proselytism in Israel, Envoy Advises Missionaries

TORONTO, Ont. (EP) — Israeli Ambassador Gershon Avner was frank in his address here to 150 Christian missionaries which cautioned against proselytizing in his country.

Invited to speak at the annual convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance here, Ambassador Avner said:

"Leave us alone. There's no earthly chance of us abandoning our faith."

The envoy told delegates of the "not unnatural resentment" felt by those Israelis who were victims of Nazi tortures towards any Christians.

He said that recently an Israeli cabinet minister declared he would rather return to the horror of Auschwitz concentration camp than change his Jewish faith.

Mr. Avner said his country has the greatest respect for Christian missionaries and would never outlaw their work. "But I'm pleading in a spirit of brotherly comradeship. Leave us alone and let us rehabilitate ourselves, our broken people."

The ambassador noted that Israel's population includes 180,000 Moslems and some 50,000 Christians.

Religious Themes Test High School Applicants

JERUSALEM (EP) — Pre-high school examinations throughout Israel directed applicants to prepare compositions of a religious nature. Jewish students were expected to write about Joshua's personality and feats, Christians were told to submit a composition about St. Paul, and Moslems were directed to prepare a theme on Caliph Omar Ibn-el Khattab, the 7th Century conqueror of the Holy Land. Arab students were permitted to write in their own language.

Says Americans Losing Sense of Values and Purpose

ATLANTA (EP) — United States citizens as a whole no longer possess "a high sense of national and individual purpose," Dr. Gerald H. Read, professor of comparative education at Kent (Ohio) State University, charged here.

He told fellow educators, ministers and laymen participating in an Institute on Public Education and Religion that he had in the past four months traveled over the globe "observing students, teachers, parents and governments in their relation to the educative process," analyzing curricula and teaching methods.

Moving from the "open" Western European capitalistic societies to the "closed" Eastern European Communist nations as far away as Outer Mongolia and then into South and East Asia, he said, he found questions being put to him "which we Americans forget to ask or perhaps are incapable of asking ourselves."

In the U. S., Dr. Read said, he found "a strange unmooring of values and a gray imprecision of purpose."

"Perhaps this is why there are so many advocates and foes among us who stir such violent hates and fears," he added. "It is to our shame as educated people that we seem to know much more about the descriptions and classification of knowledge of our physical world than we do about the realm of human values."

Mufti's Religious Decree Bans Sale of Land to Christians

JERUSALEM (EP) — Grand Mufti Sheikh Abdullah Ghawshah issued a religious ruling banning the sale of Moslem property in Old Jerusalem and other Holy Land areas in Jordan to so-called foreigners.

The ruling said that any person selling such land is to be branded a "traitor to his religion and nation."

Moslem leaders have been urging the Jordanian government to issue an official decree forbidding the transfer of Holy Land property to "foreigners" or "Christian Churches." They claim that such transfers are a "danger to the Arabic and Islamic character of the Holy City."

It was reported that the Jordanian Parliament has a bill designed to end Holy Land sales. According to observers, the protests arose after it was announced that the Vatican plans to build a school for deaf children in the Old City.

BILLY GRAHAM HONORED IN RALEIGH

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Billy Graham, world evangelist, is to be honored in Raleigh, North Carolina, his home state, on Wednesday evening, November 18, on the occasion of his winning the 1964 Upper Room Citation.

The Rev. Dr. J. Manning Potts, editor of The Upper Room, in making the announcement said the annual Upper Room Citation dinner, is to be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh.

"The award is given to Dr. Graham," said Dr. Potts, "for his outstanding contribution to world Christian fellowship. He is a compelling minister of the gospel. He has preached to more people in person and has worked with more Christians of many denominations than anyone else. His work has been on all of the continents and on many islands of the sea."

The Upper Room is an interdenominational daily devotional guide published bimonthly in 36 languages and 42 editions. It is distributed in some 120 countries of the world. Its readership

Constitution of International Convention Revised

The administrative committee of the International Convention of Original Free Will Baptists met in the conference room of Mount Olive College, Saturday, November 7, 1964, to revise the convention's provisional constitution. The committee was requested to do this revision in the annual session of the convention held in Marianna, Florida, July, 1964.

The next meeting of the administrative committee will be held at the Holiday Inn Motel on U.S. Highway 1, East Rockingham, North Carolina, at 5:30 p.m., January 14, 1965. All members of the committee are encouraged to be present at the East Rockingham meeting.

Central Conference Officers Elected

At its two hundred sixteenth annual session, the Central Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina, meeting at the First Free Will Baptist Church of Tarboro on November 4, and Spring Branch Free Will Baptist Church near Walstonburg on November 5, elected the following officers to two-year term: moderator, the Rev. I. B. Cherry, pastor of Black Jack church, Greenville; assistant moderator, the Rev. N. B. Barrow, manager of the Free Will Baptist Press; secretary, the Rev. Hubert Burress, pastor of Peace church, Pinetops; treasurer, the Rev. C. J. Harri Greenville; member at large, the Rev. L. B. Manning, pastor of King's Cross Roads church, Farmville.

More than a hundred ministers and delegates from the churches within the conference attended this session with more than an equal number of visitors. The Central Conference has a total membership of more than 8,000, with forty-seven churches and one mission. The 1965 session will be held in November at the Marlboro church, Farmville.

Central Conference Adopts Recommendations

The Central Conference of Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina, meeting at the First church of Tarboro on November 4, adopted the following recommendations as presented by the conference missions board:

1. That each church continue to give as much, or more, support next year as they have this year.
2. That each church raise a special offering of $50.00 or more to pay bills that are now due. This money is needed right away.
3. That each church send a delegation for open house to be held as soon as the metal building is erected at Roanoke Rapids.

MANNING TO SPEAK AT THE ANNUAL THANKSGIVING SERVICE

By M. L. JOHNSON, Superintendent

The annual Thanksgiving Service will be held at the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, on Thanksgiving Day, November 25. The program will begin in Memorial Chapel at 10:30 a.m., and will conclude with a picnic lunch served on the campus at noon.

The Rev. L. B. Manning, pastor of Kings Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church and a former president of our North Carolina State Convention, will deliver the Thanksgiving message. The selection of Brother Manning as the principal speaker for this occasion is in recognition of his faithful promotion of the Children's Home, and the liberal support to the Home by his church for many years. Special music for the service will be furnished by groups from Kings Cross Roads and by the children of the Home.

This traditional Thanksgiving service has come to be one of the special occasions in the lives of the children and staff of the Children's Home, as well as to hundreds of Original Free Will Baptists throughout the state. All Original Free Will Baptists and their friends are invited to attend the service this year and to bring a generous Thanksgiving offering and a picnic lunch, thereby making this an extra special event.

Representatives from the statewide conventions, annual conferences, and denominational institutions of Original Free Will Baptists are invited to attend; and they will be recognized to bring greetings from their respective organizations or institutions.

The Children's Home has enjoyed a very good year and desires the presence of as many of its supporters as possible to join in sincere Thanksgiving for the many blessings received during the year.

OBITUARIES

EDWARD DENNIE BASDEN

We the members of Sandy Plain Original Free Will Baptist Church, Beulaville, North Carolina, have been decimated by the passing of our beloved brother in Christ, Brother Edward Basden. We know that God in His heavenly place and divine knowledge knows what is best for us, His children.

Brother Basden was born August 16, 1904. He was suddenly taken from us in an accident of October 2, 1964.

In March, 1952, he took membership with our church, and was later appointed to serve as trustee, also was president of the adult Sunday school class, and had recently been elected as assistant teacher. He certainly, beyond doubt, served his Lord without considering any earthly remuneration. He will always be remembered for his consistent service of the church, his home, and community.

We submit that a copy of this be sent to the family, a copy be sent to The Free Will Baptist for publication, and a copy be kept for the church minutes.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. Coy Sumner
 Mrs. Claudie Sumner
 Mrs. Frank Baker

IN DISCUSSING the relationship between the Original Free Will Baptists and other groups in the National Association between the years 1935 and 1961, it is not our purpose to deal especially with the particular events taking place in the years 1960 and 1961 which are generally credited with bringing about the rupture with the national body, but rather to take note of the things which, down through the years, had hindered a satisfying fellowship within the National Association. It is our opinion that if there had existed during these years a good fellowship, based upon mutual confidence and true Christian love and tolerance, the special matters over which bitter controversy arose in 1961 would have been evaluated with reason and calmness and would have been found insufficient to justify the division that took place. But, because of the atmosphere of misunderstanding, distrust, and unrest which had developed over the years, we doubt if very many people acted in 1961 without some prejudice influencing their actions.

One thing that has been a source of agitation among Free Will Baptists during the most of the present century is the matter of literature, and particularly of Sunday school helps, for the denomination.

At the time, and for many years following the merger of the General Conference of Free Baptists with the North Conference of Free Will Baptists with the Northern Baptist Convention in 1911, the only source of literature for the denomination was the Free Will Baptist Printing Company (later called the Free Will Baptist Press) at Ayden, North Carolina. This was a stock company, and was not under the direct control of any organized body of Free Will Baptists; therefore, the question often arose as to whether or not the Press should be considered the "denominational publishing house." Among the Freewill Baptists of the West there was especially a concern for the West there was especially a institution as the publishing agency of the denomination.

When the Co-Operative Association was organized in 1917, the body did endorse the Press as the source for Sunday school helps, but did not accept The Free Will Baptist as the official organ of the new organization; it adopted the New Morning Star, which had been started at Weatherford, Texas, as an attempt to "resurrect" the old Morning Star, which had been lost to the denomination in the 1911 merger, as the "official organ" for the Co-Operative Association.

As the need for enlarging the literature program grew, dissatisfaction over the publications offered by the Ayden publishing house seemed to increase. Let us concede that perhaps those in control of the Press at that time were a bit fearful of venturing out into the field of more and more costly publications. This was not unnatural. These men had lived through very trying times for the struggling publishing house. They had seen the time when they had to go from meeting to meeting and from church to church seeking donations to pay off the small salaries promised to the few employees who were overworked to turn out the literature, always sold at a minimum price to our people. Those of us who know the real conditions under which they labored know that the Rev. J. C. Griffin, Mr. C. K. Dunn, and others who labored during the years of "the dawn"—when the Press was striving to become soundly established—did a wonderful job.

But people in distant states could not be expected to have the same understanding of those who observed from close range. It was as natural that they should expect to see a more rapid progress toward improved publications. They became impatient, and their impatience magnified their reluctance to accept "stock company" as the publishing agency for the denomination. Efforts began to develop here and there for more centralized, more denominationally controlled, publishing agency. Perhaps belatedly, the ones in control of the Press sensed this discontent and rallied to try to offset it. New publications were launched; new writers who represented a wider area of the denominational life were employed. But the roots of prejudice toward the North Carolina concern had gone deep. Year by year dissatisfaction and disagreements over the literature program sapped much of the spirit out of the fellowship throughout the denomination.

While no official actions were taken, discussions and disagreements over the literature program disturbed the fellowship during the sessions of the National Association at Nashville, Tennessee, in 1951; at Shawnee, Oklahoma, in 1952; at Mt. Vernon, Illinois, in 1953; and particularly at Spartanburg, South Carolina, in 1954. A contract agreement between the Sunday school and league boards in 1954, by which the Free Will Baptist Press agreed to share income from the sale of Sunday school and league literature in return for a more definite promotion of the publication by the respective boards, eased the tension somewhat for a time. But discontent here and there continued to hinder a perfect fellowship.

In 1957, the Sunday School Board of the National Association, yielding to pressure from those dissatisfied with the publications of the Free Will Baptist Press, launched its own literature program. (continued on page sixteen)

MEDICAL REPORT ON THE NOGALES ACADEMY

by Mary B. Lanier

I am very happy to be writing once again to all of you, our fine Christian friends.

We want to thank each of you who made our itinerary more pleasant while we were traveling about. Though we enjoyed being with all of you, and although we thoroughly enjoyed our services and contacts, we were mighty glad to get back home. Since we have returned, such a great deal has happened that I hardly know where to begin.

Soon after we arrived, as we were practicing in our music class, for which I play the piano, it was brought to our attention that one of the girls, a thirteen-year-old named Amanda Jimenez, could hardly see. We made an appointment with the county nurse to have her eyes examined. The county nurse always is willing to help our school children. Amanda showed up so poorly on the eye test administered by the county nurse, that she wouldn't rate her. She made an appointment for her to consult an eye specialist.

The eye specialist rated Amanda as 20/400 in both eyes. As you know, 20/200 is legally blind. The poor girl could see only half so well as a legally blind person. The eye specialist felt that she could correct Amanda's eyes to 20/40 at this time, and she hopes that they can be completely corrected in time. She charged us nothing for her professional services, and naturally the county nurse charged us nothing, but it still cost practically twenty dollars to pay for the glasses. This is just one example of the many medical needs which we must meet.

There is the ever present need for sufficient money to take care of the medical needs of the children. This item was overlooked in preparing the budget for operation of the school. We need your help that the boys and girls who attend the Academy may have glasses if they need them. Also, at this time there are many of the children who need dental work. We need to be able to have their teeth pulled or filled as needed, and for other medical care as well. We ask you to please help us to keep the children attending school in good health.

You may help by sending items such as toothbrushes, toothpaste, wash cloths, towels, hand soap, combs, hairbrushes (for both boys and girls), shampoo, deodorant, and vitamins if you have them. We wish to thank you very much, those of you who have been sending dried foods, such as dried beans, powdered milk, rice, flour, meal, powdered eggs, etc. All of these things are a great help in combating the malnutrition which plagues so many of our children. There may be others of you who have some of those commodities which you don't use. If so, and if you send them, they can be put to great use here. None of them will be sold.

Also, you may help by sending money designated for the medical needs of the students, the boys and girls in the Academy. Please send all commodities and all medical offerings directly to Arizona-Mexico Missions, Inc., P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona 85621. These things can be sent in connection with used clothing deadhead, by contacting McLean Truck Lines, Western Gillette, and others.

Perhaps some of the Sunday school classes, or other groups, would like to prepare some of these items for Christmas, also used toys, and other things. May God bless and guide you!

Don't consider yourself important if your position in life is to do more harm than good. Important people are those who live for God and bless mankind along life's journey.—Walter E. Isenhour.

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

about peace without the Lord Jesus Christ and God the Father is of Satan.

WHY ASSEMBLE TO WORSHIP GOD?

I have recently listened to a message on religion; and as I listened, I thought of the difference between religion and Christianity. May I say, as I have often said, Satan has religion, but he can never have Christianity. James says, "Thou believest that there is one God; . . . the devils also believe, and tremble" (James 2:19).

I have talked with many drunkards, and all that I ever talked with had religion. But the Bible says that the drunkard cannot enter the kingdom (Galatians 5:21). Though the drunkard has religion, he does not have Christ; for if we have Christ, we have more than a religion. With Christ living in us we have Christianity. We have known many drunkards to be saved; and when they were saved, they were no longer drunkards. When a drunkard is saved, he hates drunkenness. Why? Because he is a "new creature." "For in Christ Jesus . . . a new creature" (Galatians 6:15). "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Ephesians 2:10).

God can make a righteous man out of a drunkard. Satan makes drunkards; God makes Christians. Yes, a man or woman who is a drunkard can have religion, but not Christianity. Now a drunkard can be a church member so far as visibility of the flesh is concerned. At least many drunkards are allowed to be members of a church, but they are not Christians; they are just stumbling blocks in the way of others who do believe. Many young people are straying out in the world because of these drunkards. Without repenting and being "born of the water and of the Spirit," both the drunkard and the person who will not accept Christ and confess Him before men and join other Christians in fighting Satan and lifting Christ up to a lost world will get together in a demon's hell. Millions of mothers and fathers are leading their own children to hellfire, but these mothers and fathers have religion—a religion that damns instead of saves.

I remember well when there was a time that if a man or woman was caught drunk he was dealt with by the church; and if this person did not confess his sin, he was turned out of the church and not allowed to have fellowship in the communion. In those days we had churches that in general were clean. We worked for Christ in making Christians. Now we have some so-called Christians who run around to get church members; many of them seek to increase their own church membership by stealing members out of other churches. A man who I believe is a Christian gentleman said to me a few years ago, "I am withdrawing membership from my church." I asked him why. His answer was that the church is more interested in getting members than in getting people saved. An unsaved church member is a big tool in the hands of Satan in preparing people for hell.

Tolerating sinful acts has not just brought about weakness in the church; it has been so from the beginning. Let us notice. John writes: "Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time. They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us. But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things. I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth. Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son. Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: (but) he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also" (1 John 2:18-23).

According to the Bible all infidels are liars. I believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God; for Paul says, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Timothy 3:16, 17).

Infidels have caused the prayers to be driven out of the public schools. Now they are after taxing the churches and church property. They are against the motto that we have on our coins, "In God We Trust," and plan to have it removed. These infidels are against everything that names God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Shall we Christians sit idle and let these infidels take over our government? They are at work.

TO WORSHIP GOD'S COMMAND

Why worship God? Our answer is because He is God. We should worship Him because He is a God of love. We are told that "God is love" (see I John 4:7).

HE IS A SPIRIT

Our love for God should cause us to assemble regularly to worship Him. Today thousands are not at their regular job because it is Veterans' Day (November 11). We as a people have the privilege to visit others, often some of those with whom we served in past wars. We enjoy these friendly visits. Why? Because we, the people of the United States, want to keep in memory our fellowship as veterans. We should, I believe, praise God that we were able by the grace of God to survive those trying days in which many people suffered and died to give to us what we called "victory" to bring peace to the earth; but peace has not come. Many people, however, believed that it was a war to bring peace. But may I say again, those wars of the past did not, nor will they ever, bring to us a peace. Jeremiah said, "They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace" (Jeremiah 6:14).

The U. N. has not brought peace. It has healed in part the hurt that Jeremiah was speaking of, but the U. N. will never bring peace—a lasting peace. It was organized by the will of man. God was left out. The leaders, out of respect of ungodly infidels would not offer prayer to Almighty God. Any organization that is brought about without the leadership of God cannot bring peace, nor can it ever drive war from the face of the earth. My friend, don't let politicians fool you, for the talk of man QUESTION: Please explain, "But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God" (Luke 9:27). In what sense would these present not taste of death until they should see the kingdom of God?—M. Gray, Illinois.

ANSWER: I think this is well illustrated by what followed the speaking of these words of Jesus. Only a little more than a week later three of Christ's most intimate disciples witnessed with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration a scene of authority or power that caused them to want to build residential headquarters for the hallowed personnel of the scene. The word used to translate the expression, kingdom of God, could have been rendered: power, authority, rule, or domain, as well as kingdom. "And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening. And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias: Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem" (Luke 9:28-31).

Peter, one of the three who were privileged to witness this scene of transfiguration, uses his experience in it to prove the authenticity of his apostleship. "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount" (2 Peter 1:16-18).

The Scriptures correct one erroneous view concerning the coming of Christ that spread abroad among some disciples that did not fully understand Jesus' words from Jesus making special mention of John the brother of James, also called the disciple whom Jesus loved. "Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord which is he that betrayeth thee? Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me. Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that the disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" (John 21:20-23). Jesus told His followers on various occasions that it was because of the hardness of their hearts that they failed in fully understanding His words. He also told them that they would be able to overcome this in the power of the Holy Spirit when He should come. So can we.

In 1868 Fanny Crosby visited a prison to address the convicts. While she was pleading that they accept Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, one of the convicts stood up and cried out, "Good Lord, don't pass me by!" His prayer was answered. . . . The prisoner's agonized plea made a deep impresson on Fanny Crosby. When she returned home, she wrote the now-famous words: "Pass me not, O gentle Saviour . . . DOREEN saw a flash of bright sweater and a familiar plaid skirt disappearing down the hall.

"Avis! Avis!" she called, "Wait! I have thrilling news!"

Avis stopped expectantly and waited until Doreen reached her side.

"You know that music contest I sang in the other evening over the radio station?" she asked breathlessly.

Avis nodded. "Did you win, Doreen?" she gasped.

Doreen squealed: "I'm in the finals. I am to compete with three others Sunday night. Not bragging or anything, Mr. Masters, the music teacher, says I have a very good chance to win!"

"That's wonderful, Doreen!" Avis enthused. Then she said slowly: "Sunday night, but didn't you—?"

"Oh! that's right," Doreen said, "I forgot all about it. How could I? I asked you to come to our special meeting with me!"

"Well, don't think a thing about it!" Avis assured her. "I'll go with you to the radio station instead. You have those evangelistic services all next week, don't you?"

"Yes," Doreen said slowly.

"So I'll go with you some other night. O. K.?"

"Of course, it will be O. K.," Doreen assured her friend. Why did she have to feel this little nagging guilt tugging away at her? After all, wasn't this the chance she'd prayed about? Surely the Lord wanted her to rejoice and be happy in it!

She smiled gaily: "I'll come by for you around seven."

"What does it mean if you do win?" Avis asked.

"It means the start of a career in radio singing," Doreen said, with shining eyes. Starting out with a quarter-hour daily program, and you know how I've been longing to have a gospel song program."

Avis nodded, "Then it will be just what you want?"

"Not exactly!" Doreen admitted. "At first, that is. I'll have to sing two or three request numbers, which will probably be pop tunes, but you may be sure I'll sing hymns, too."

"Oh!" Avis' voice lowered flatly, "I thought you would only sing hymns."

"Well, naturally," Doreen told her, "that's what I want to sing. Since I became a Christian, naturally the songs I desire to sing should honor my Lord. This program will only be a steppingstone to the kind of thing I want to do. Avis, dear, I'll be so happy if you'd become a Christian, too!"

Avis' eyes meeting hers were disconcertingly clear. She gathered her books together. "I think I am a Christian!" she said coolly, turning on the heel of her scuffed saddle shoe and walking into English Lit.

Doreen stood, surprise rooting her to the spot for a moment. "When," she puzzled, "had Avis decided to follow the Lord?" She had been hoping and praying for that for many months. "If Avis had become a Christian, why hadn't she said something? Why didn't she act different?" Doreen's mind buzzed with questions. There was something in the measuring look Avis had given her that bothered her, too. She had difficulty in concentration on her studies all the rest of the day, but when school was dismissed Doreen and Avis walked down the street arm in arm as usual.

"Let's go in and have some ice cream," Avis suggested outside the drug store.

"O. K.!" agreed Doreen. "That will taste good."

As she toyed with her spoon, she ventured the troubling question: "Avis, you said today you thought you were a Christian. When did you—I mean are you sure?" Doreen burst out.

"Oh, yes!" Avis answered calmly. "I think I am!"

Doreen shook her head soberly, "But, Avis, you mustn't just think—you must be sure—"

"Well, hello, girls!" It was Pastor Jensen's jovial greeting. "How are you both? I'm particularly glad I ran into you, because, Doreen, I have a favor to ask of you. We want you to sing at the meeting Sunday evening."

"I—I'm sorry," Doreen stammered, "I can't Sunday evening. I—I have other plans. I'll be glad to some other time though," she promised brightly, hoping to ease Pastor Jensen's disappointed look.

Somehow she floundered through the rest of the conversation with Pastor Jensen, uncomfortably aware of Avis' listening ears.

Sleep simply wouldn't come that night. Doreen punched her pillow under her aching head. She turned it over, trying to rest on the coolness of the other side. She tossed. She turned. Everywhere she looked Avis' eyes seemed to be looking at her—measuring her. She heard over and over Avis' cool reply: "I think I am a Christian!"

"When she hears that evangelist speak, she'll know for sure whether or not she's one," Doreen told herself. "But she won't be going Sunday night! She said she'd go with me to the radio station," Doreen reminded herself, "and maybe after that she'll lose interest so she won't want to go."

Doreen thought with horror. "Oh, I'm wrong, wrong not to put Christ first in my life! I know it's wrong for me to take a compromising job. I must have lived so careless a Christian life that I'm a stumbling block to Avis! I, a stumbling block, when I want so much to see her saved!"

"She can't see any difference in the way we live," she thought miserably.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Vanceboro, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Juniper Chapel Free Will Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. Oleda Boyd on November 3 for its regular meeting. The roll was called with twenty-seven members, one new member, and three visitors present. The meeting was opened by the vice-president, Mrs. Mable Rowe, with the group's singing "In the Service of the King." This was followed with prayer by Mrs. Annie Haddock. An offering was taken in the amount of $32.39, plus $11 given for a Christmas gift for the adopted boy at the Children's Home. Each committee gave its report. The nominating committee's report was given and accepted. Those nominated pledged themselves to serve as best they could with God's help.

The program chairman, Mrs. Walter Taylor, took charge of the program. Mrs. Margaret McGowan offered the prayer, and Mrs. Taylor read the Scripture taken from Psalm 19; she also gave the introduction. Those taking part on the program were Mrs. Albert Jones, Mrs. John Wilson, and Mrs. Mable Rowe. After the program the group stood with joined hands and sang "Breathe on Me" and "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." Mrs. John Wilson dismissed the group with prayer for God's blessings on each one.

Deep Run, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Gray Branch Free Will Baptist Church met recently at the church for its October meeting. The president, Mrs. Ada Hines, presided over the meeting which opened with the group's singing "He Hideth My Soul." Mrs. Nora Smith offered the opening prayer, and Mrs. Laura Boyette read the Scripture taken from Ezekial 22:23-31 and Nehemiah 2:17. Mrs. Boyette also presented an inspiring program on missions, closing with a special prayer concerning the mission work.

During the business session a discussion was held concerning the building of an education building with the auxiliary starting it off with a gift of $100.

The thirteen members present enjoyed refreshments served by the hostesses, Mrs. Alvin Deaver and Mrs. Ruth Hines. The president pronounced the benediction.

Wastonburg, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church holds its October meeting at the church on Monday night, October 26, with forty-five members and one visitor present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Raeford Heath. The group sang "The Kingdom Is Coming," followed with the devotional by the president, reading for the Scripture lesson John 4:31-38. Mrs. R. A. Heath offered the evening prayer.

There were no minutes read because of the absence of the secretary. The treasurer's report was given with a yearly report of all the money taken in and disbursed by the auxiliary. Mrs. Jimmie Taylor reported on the district convention held at Hull Road church on September 30.

The Friendship Circle reported that it planned to have a miscellaneous show for a needy family in the community. All the members of the auxiliary were invited to participate in this. Plans were also made for "Missions Day" to be held on Tuesday, November 17, at which time used clothing and other usable items will be packed and shipped to the missionaries in Mexico to be distributed to the needy there.

The program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" was presented by the Patrick Circle. The president dismissed the group with prayer.

Chinquapin, N. C.—The AFC of Bethlehem Free Will Baptist Church sponsored a Halloween party for the boys and girls of the Sunday school in the basement of the church on October 23. Approximately twenty boys and girls gathered in the basement dressed in customary Halloween costumes. After the playing of several games, refreshment of cookies, cupcakes, potato chips, candy, and punch were enjoyed by the group. After the refreshments the boys and girls enjoyed a period of riddles and Bible quizzes.

Davis, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Davis Original Free Will Baptist Church met Monday, November 2, for its regular monthly meeting. The meeting opened with the group's singing "Amazing Grace." The president, Mrs. Sara Styron, gave the devotional, using for her Scripture Psalm 19.

The business session opened with the secretary reading the minutes of the last meeting. A nominating committee was appointed to select the new officers for the coming year. The committee is Mrs. Harold Willis and Mrs. Claude Willis. Plans were discussed and formulated for the coming Christmas season. Also plans were made for the pre-Thanksgiving week of prayer to be held in the members' homes the third week in November.

The program chairman, Mrs. William A. Davis, presented the program, "Blueprints for Victory." A prayer of dedication was offered by Mrs. Hubert Willis, a visitor.

Following the benediction, the sixteen members and two visitors present were served pie and coffee by the hostess, Mrs. Harold Willis.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR NOVEMBER 29

THE GOSPEL OF GOD'S GRACE

LESSON TEXT: Titus 1:1-3; 2:11-14; 3:4-8

MEMORY VERSE: Titus 3:5

I. INTRODUCTION

Our lesson text taken from the three chapters of Titus present, in a brief way, the essence of the gospel of Jesus Christ. This letter to Titus, it is thought, was written about the same time as First Timothy; for they deal with the same general subject.

There seems to have been a very close bond of affection between Paul and Titus. In the Book of Second Corinthians Paul mentions Titus some nine times. When he was on his third missionary journey, during his long stay at Ephesus, Paul sent Titus to Corinth to deal with a number of difficult problems. The nature of this task reveals the confidence Paul had in the capability of Titus. The Corinthian Christians were divided, guilty of immorality, irreverent in worship, and perplexed by false teachers. Along with trying to correct irregularities, Titus was to collect a fund for the relief of the poor saints at Jerusalem. His success in Corinth was certainly a compliment and a tribute to his tact, courage, and strength.

The nucleus of the church in Crete was probably started by the Cretans who were at Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost. There is no mention of an apostolic visit to Crete other than by Paul on his way to Rome (Acts 27) and the visit implied here in the Book of Titus at which time he was left to assist the church. He was to set the church in order and ordain elders in every place. While Titus was in Crete, Paul wrote him this Epistle. It was probably sent to him by the hands of Zenas and Apollos who were to assist him in his difficult task in Crete.

The purpose of this lesson is to show that faith in Jesus Christ is the gateway into eternal life.—Teen Age Teacher (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Paul considered himself to be a servant of God the Father and of the Lord Jesus Christ (v. 1).

2. God, who cannot lie, promised eternal life to believers from the foundation of the world (v. 2).

3. When things were in keeping with His plan, God manifested His Word through preaching (v. 3).

4. The grace of God has been made available to all men everywhere (v. 11).

5. Believers should deny ungodliness and worldly lusts so that they may live successfully for God (v. 12).

6. Eternal life is the blessed hope of every true believer (v. 13).

7. Christ gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity (v. 14).

8. Salvation is the gift of God, not by works of righteousness which we have done (v. 5).

9. Salvation is available only through Jesus Christ (vv. 6, 7).

10. The Christian should promote all the doctrines of the gospel of Christ (v. 8).—Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III ADDITIONAL

1. My grace is sufficient, O lost one!
Thy soul to redeem from its woe,
To give you a perfect salvation,
To keep you wherever you go.

My grace is sufficient, O weak one!
The bondage of sin to remove;
My strength is made perfect in weakness,
Then seek for this strength from above.

My grace is sufficient, O tried one!
To meet every testing and need;
Whatever may be the requirement,
My grace is sufficient indeed.

My grace is sufficient, O dear one!
Yes, even for death's trying hour;
This foe I have met and have vanished;
No need, then, to fear its dread power.

—Fred Scott Shepherd.

2. The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men: Salvation is for all men. Not all men have heard the Gospel, unfortunately, but all men were included in the provision for salvation. There is not a sinner in the world excluded from the benefits of the death of Christ on the cross. Jesus included every one.

Salvation is not given on a basis of merit, otherwise few, if any, could be saved. Salvation is given on the basis of grace: unmerited favor, through the love of God.

Teachings us . . . we should live . . . righteously: Though salvation is by grace, apart from works, a good life is definitely the fruit of salvation. Salvation and good works are inseparable, but "their works do follow them" and are not the source of salvation. We are not saved by good works, but we are saved "unto good works."

A horse and a buggy go down the street together, and the one is harnessed to the other. Someone might observe, "Look at that buggy pushing the horse!" No, the buggy isn't pushing the horse; rather, the horse is pulling the buggy. But we must admit they go together. Likewise, salvation is not caused by good works, but good works always follow salvation. We are known by our fruits, but we are not saved by our fruits.—Bible Expositor.

3. Presenting the gospel in brief, let us show faith in Christ as the gateway into eternal life. An understanding of the gospel of Christ is necessary to establish this faith in our hearts. Our understanding of the gospel may be brief or it may be thorough. In any event, we must accept the gospel and have steadfast faith in Christ.

Still, just by being good, and knowing the gospel, and doing as Jesus taught us, we could not get through to eternal life. The key that opens the lock in the gate is the grace of God. "Being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs" (Titus 3:7). This grace, like the gospel, is for all: "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men" (Titus 2:11).

We like to emphasize that the gospel message is simple enough for everyone to understand. And it is. But it is also very profound. These twelve verses from Titus contain the gospel in brief. It is useful and impressive to summarize like this. It took writers inspired of God to say so much, so completely, in such a few sentences. But in using such passages we must recognize that there are others to be studied and understood, that each concept mentioned could start us on a lifetime of study.

In any study, we must learn and understand the simple truths before we can absorb more difficult problems. So it is with the Christian faith. As we hear the gospel in brief and realize its importance to us, we will want to study faithfully so that we can come to understand more about the Christian faith.—Standard Commentary.

4. The grace of God is sufficient for all human needs (2 Corinthians 12:9). Let us not abuse this wonderful gift, that grace may abound?" (Romans 6:1). On this subject Dr. Chalmers commented: "There are few things which Paul asked, 'Shall we continue in sin, could make Paul weep. The Roman scourge on his bare back was received with a smile. The storm which cast him on a shipwrecked shore only drove him to prayer! The executioner's sword gleaming in the distance only caused him to say, 'I have fought a good fight . . . I have kept the faith' (2 Timothy 4:7). But the one thing that did make Paul weep was when he saw people taking the Gospel of God's grace and making it an excuse for sin, saying, 'Let us sin that grace may abound.' Of them he said, 'I . . . tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ' (Philippians 3:18).—Senior Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

She stumbled out of bed, and fumbled for the light switch. Her Bible lay on the table. She opened it, searching for peace. As she leafed through, hunting for comfort, it seemed she found only reproach.

"A double minded man is unstable in all his ways," she read.

"Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted?"

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Dropping to her knees, Doreen knelt, deep in prayer. At last she had her solution.

Dropping back into the bed, the sleep of utter exhaustion came. The next day she sought Avis out. "I'm not going to sing at the radio station, after all, Sunday night. I'm forgetting about the contest. Please come with me to church," she begged.

"Not going?" Avis said. "How utterly ridiculous! You mean you're giving up a chance like that to sing at church?"

"I really must run for class now," Doreen interrupted, "just please say you'll come. It's important!"

"Oh, all right," Avis grumbled, "but it won't be nearly as much fun!"

Doreen prayed earnestly before that Sunday evening service; prayed for victory in her own life that her testimony might be unspotted; that her light might shine to attract others to the Lord Jesus, not away from Him. She prayed for the evangelist and for Avis.

Doreen and Avis sat side by side in the church pew. When Doreen got up to sing her solo, she whispered in Avis' ear—"I'm singing about my steppingstone to the success I want in my life. Listen carefully to the words of the song, Avis dear."

And she sang:

"My hope is built on nothing less Than Jesus' blood and righteousness:
I dare not trust the sweetest frame,
But wholly lean on Jesus' name.

"Oh Christ, the solid Rock I stand;
All other ground is sinking sand,
All other ground is sinking sand."

After the service, Avis said thoughtfully: "Do you really believe the words you sang, Doreen?"

"With all my heart," Doreen said promptly. "I'm sorry my wavering Christian life was a stumbling block to you."

Avis smiled gently. "Perhaps it was, but the way you're living it now, it has become a steppingstone for me, because you have shown me I need to live a consecrated Christian life, too."

"Say, young lady!" The evangelist touched Doreen lightly on the shoulder as he smiled at her. "I liked that song and the way you sang it with such beautiful feeling. I'm starting a youth radio program soon. Would you be interested in helping out with some gospel music?"

"Would I? Oh, yes!" Doreen gasped, smiling radiantly first at him, then at Avis who stood with a look of awe on her face. "Oh, it's exactly what I'd like to do!" she said happily, while her heart brimmed thanks to Him from whom comes every good and perfect gift.—My Delight.

What It Means To Be Lost!

Everyone who is not saved is lost! Everyone! Everyone in heathen lands! Everyone in Christian countries! Everyone in America! Everyone in your home town! Everyone in your neighborhood! Everyone in your school! Everyone in your place of employment! Everyone you pass on the street! Everyone in your home! Everyone who is not saved is lost. Lost already! Not going to be lost after death, but lost right now! Lost forever! But not quite lost beyond hope!

While a lost man lives he can be saved! He may not know he is lost, but you know! He may not be concerned about his condition, but you can be concerned! One reason why sinners show so little concern about their lost condition is because Christians show so little concern! A lost soul rates more concern than a man lost on the mountain, but hundreds turn out to rescue the man on the mountain while Christians often ignore the lost soul with whom they have contact perhaps every day! May God stir us, and may we stir ourselves, to the understanding of what it really means to be lost, and then to soul-winning action!—Gospel Herald.

The world is exceedingly dark now with wars and rumors of wars, nuclear tests, and burgeoning clouds of atomic fallout. Outer space is cluttered with satellites and stages of rockets. But above and beyond all this, the Day Star shines brightly, drawing the gaze of all men to Him. He is still the hope of the world and Gentiles are still coming to His light and kings to the brightness of His rising.—Helen Kingsbury Wallace in Meditations on New Testament Symbols (Fleming H. Revell Company).

Will Original Free Will Baptists Survive?

gram. It consisted of some publications written by denominational writers and other publications of an independent publishing house used with Free Will Baptist imprints. This program had to be abandoned in 1959, and left the board deeply in debt. The existence of two competitive literature programs added much to the disruption of fellowship within the denomination.

At the National Association meeting in Asheville, North Carolina, in 1959, a new contract between the National Sunday School Board and the Free Will Baptist Press was approved, and at the time it looked as if prospects of a harmonious solution of the literature program were in sight. A spirit of "forgive and forget" seemed to prevail. But in 1961, things not directly related to the literature program destroyed this harmony, and resulted in the breaking of the contract between the Press and the National Sunday School Board.

(Our exploration of the breakdown in fellowship caused by differences over the denominational education program must be carried over for our next installment in this series.)

Shoes divide men into three classes. Some men wear their father's shoes. They make no decisions of their own. Some are unthinkingly shod by the crowd. The strong man is his own cobbler. He insists on making his own choices. He walks in his own shoes.—S. D. Gordon, quoted in 1963 Tarbell's Teachers' Guide (Fleming H. Revell Company).

The price that one pays for strong drink may be very costly in dollars and cents; but it is far more costly in morals, manhood, womanhood, health, and the loss of the immortal soul.—Walter E. Isenhour.

THANKSGIVING ISSUE

The One Hundred Third Psalm

BLESS the LORD, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

2 Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits:

3 Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;

4 Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies;

5 Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.

6 The LORD executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.

7 He made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of Israel.

8 The LORD is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.

9 He will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger for ever.

10 He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.

12 As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.

13 Like as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

14 For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust.

15 As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

16 For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.

17 But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children;

18 To such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.

Editorial—

THE CITY WHERE THE PILGRIMS LIVED

Nearly forty miles southeast of Boston on the highway leading to Cape Cod and Provincetown, along the bay and for some distance inland, lies the old town of Plymouth, Massachusetts, to which thousands of pilgrims journey each year for the sake of viewing the landing place and first home of those other pilgrims of long ago.

Although Plymouth is an industrial center, having the largest cordage works in the world, and with a neighboring town harvesting a large percentage of cranberries in our country, the noise of these industries does not intrude upon the older section of the town, which is very quiet and restful and very much as one would expect to find it.

While Court Street, the main thoroughfare of the town, is very lovely with its magnificent trees lining each side and its fine old houses with their unique chimneys, it does not bear the distinction of being the oldest street in Plymouth. That honor goes to Leyden, the first thoroughfare to be laid out in New England, although it was nameless until 1802 when the name it now so appropriately bears was given. Along this street the Pilgrims built their little settlement and began life in the New World, undergoing many hardships and dangers.

Many of the personal belongings of these first brave settlers are to be found in Pilgrim Hall, a granite structure resembling a Greek temple which was erected on Court Street many years ago for the purpose of housing these priceless relics. Among these are Governor Bradford's Bible, the famous broadsword of Captain Miles Standish, Elder Brewster's chair, and the queer little cradle made of wicker with rockers of wood in which Peregrine Whitt, the boy born on the Mayflower while the ship was anchored in Provincetown harbor, was later rocked by his Pilgrim mother.

Leyden Street leads to Burial Hill, on whose summit stood the old fort and watchtower, built as protection for the early settlers, the sites being now suitably marked. Here lie buried many of the Pilgrim band and their decendants. Among the many interesting markers is a great boulder erected to the memory of Thomas Clark, the mate of the Mayflower, who died in 1695 at the age of ninety-eight. Another is the grave of Tobitha Plaskett, the first woman school teacher in America, who wrote the quaint epitaph for her own stone.

It was on Coles Hill, nearer the water front, however, that fifty of those who perished during the first hard winter of three centuries and more ago were buried. So that the Indians might not know how few remained, the last sad rites were performed at night; then the earth was leveled so that no trace of graves could be seen. A handsome monument covers the spot.—Reprinted from the November 15, 1950, issue of "The Free Will Baptist."

PRAISE AND PRAYER

Each sincere prayer carries a message of praise to our Maker. We may often pray selfishly, without any recognition of the blessings of God upon us. We may sometimes feel that life has been too difficult to leave room for praise. The true spirit of humility, however, will make us conscious of God's goodness regardless of the outward circumstances.

Prayer is essential in the life of each Christian. It is the "soul's sincere desire uttered or unexpressed." Never in the course of human history has the urgency of prayer been so great. The dangers that face us are astounding. Regardless of what may happen, we must not forget to praise God for His tender mercies and benefits. Praise must accompany prayer in these trying days.

It will be the selfish individual who will not give praise and thanksgiving to God during this Thanksgiving season. The truly grateful will praise Him, the Maker of heaven and earth and all that is therein.

Blessings Bear Obligations

by THEODORE JOHNSON

MAKING any blessing for granted and demanding it as a right evidences a lack of appreciativeness, and will eventually lead to the loss of that blessing.

Concerning the benefits of Roman citizenship, the arresting captain said, "With great sum obtained I this freedom!" to which Paul replied, "But I was free born." Both of these men spoke respectfully of Roman citizenship, and considered it a privilege. When, to Romans, it ceased to be a privilege to be a Roman citizen, and they demanded it as their right without the willingness to fulfill the obligations, they lost both the right and privilege of it.

A right bears the idea of something due me, which I can demand. A privilege bears the idea of a concession, but places an obligation upon me.

Mankind by nature is selfish and demanding, and soon takes his blessings for granted. If what were privileges yesterday become only rights today, they may be lost tomorrow. The way to retain our blessings is to consider them as privileges under God, and to fulfill the obligations that go with them.

How wisely have our Presidents proclaimed a national day of Thanksgiving even in the dark days of war, civil strife, and uncertainty! These proclamations hold before our eyes two facts: 1. Our rights are really obligations bearing privileges; and 2. God is not only the giver of our national blessings, but He will succor and save those who trust in Him and do good.

We ought to be thankful to God not only for our blessings, but also for the obligations that go with them. When "a new generation arose that knew not God," Israel soon lost the blessings, both spiritual and material, of their fathers. Wisely God required, "Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year" (Exodus 23:14), to hold before them the fact that all of their blessings—bountiful harvests, fruitful vineyards, peaceful habitations, victory over their enemies—were the blessings of privilege and bore a corresponding obligation to "the giver of every good and perfect gift."

Landing late in the fall of 1620, those of the Pilgrim Fathers who were able to work toiled through the cold, cheerless winter months building homes and hunting food. Many sickened and died. Before spring, half of the little band had perished. Not a home was spared by the death angel. Late frosts and dry weather cut their corn crop in half. They knew that they did not have sufficient food to go through the long winter. Frequent fasts were observed to mourn their losses and to implore divine favor, until their bodies had grown weak and their tempers short. In such apparently bleak and hopeless circumstances, one of their number proposed a feast day instead of more fast days, days of mourning and self-affliction. The results were little short of miraculous; as they forgot their woes in feasting and thanksgiving to God, they saw again that there also had been blessings: Squanto had taught the little group of English country people how to make effective use of the resources of sea, forest, and soil; the Indians were friendly; they were free men; and, best of all, God was with them.

What lessons and warnings there are for us here!

Our homes are fraught with blessings; but it is a privilege to be a spouse, a parent, or a child. To become unthankful and demanding of our home rights is to lose them.

To be a Christian is a blood-bought privilege. We should consider it a sacred privilege to belong to the church. We should love her doctrines, her altars, her offerings, and be thankful for the grace of God that has been brought to us through her ministry, and happily bear the responsibilities of church membership.

As we observe this Thanksgiving season, let us remember that our blessings bear an obligation, and, conversely, that our obligations bear an obligation, and, conversely, that our obligations become our blessings. Let us be thankful for our obligations of work, family, church, and American citizenship. These are our blessings, not our doom. He who would live without obligations would soon have no blessings. Before the farmer can have the blessings of a harvest, he must bear the responsibility of plowing, fertilizing, planting, and cultivating.

Discouraged heart, struggling under what you consider to be "the cares of life" and the obligations imposed upon you; when you are tempted to say, "What do I have to be thankful for?" be thankful for your obligations! Count them as blessings. God saw the Pilgrims through that second winter. Their faith and thankfulness have become the seed-basis of our Thanksgiving Day.—The Free Methodist.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

CHRISTIAN GROWTH

"But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ" (Ephesians 4:15).

This week I am giving you a number of poems on the subject announced above.

MORE AND MORE

Purer yet and purer
I would be in mind,
Dearer yet and dearer
Every duty find;
Hoping still and trusting
God without a fear,
Patiently believing
He will make it clear.

Calmer yet and calmer
Trials bear and pain,
Surer yet and surer
Peace at last to gain;
Suffering still and doing,
To His will resigned,
And to God subduing
Heart and will and mind.

Higher yet and higher
Out of clouds and night
Nearer yet and nearer
Rising to the light—
Light serene and holy—
Where my soul may rest
Purified and lowly,
Sanctified and blest.

—Johann W. von Goethe.

O JESUS CHRIST, GROW THOU IN ME

O Jesus Christ, grow thou in me,
And all things else recede!
My heart be daily nearer thee,
From sin be daily freed.

Each day let Thy supporting might
My weakness still embrace;
My darkness vanish in thy light,
Thy life my death efface.

In thy bright beams which on me fall
Fade every evil thought;
That I am nothing, Thou art all,
I would be daily taught.

More of thy glory let me see,
Thou holy, wise and true,
I would thy living image be,
In joy and sorrow too.

Fill me with gladness from above,
Hold me by strength divine;
Lord, let the glow of thy great love
Through my whole being shine.

Make this poor self grow less and less,
Be thou my life and aim;
Oh, make me daily through thy grace
More meet to bear thy name!

Let faith in Thee and in thy might
My every motive move;
Be thou alone my soul's delight,
My passion and my love.

—Henry B. Smith.

DAY BY DAY

Looking upward every day,
Sunshine on our faces,
Pressing onward every day
Toward the heavenly places;
Growing every day in awe,
For thy name is holy;
Learning every day to love
With a love more lowly.

Walking every day more close
To our Elder Brother;
Growing every day more true
Unto one another;
Every day more gratefully Kindnesses receiving;
Every day more readily
Injuries forgiving.

Leaving every day behind
Something which might hinder;
Running swifter every day,
Growing purer, kinder—
Lord, so pray we every day;
Hear us in thy pity,
That we enter in at last
To the holy city.

—Mary Butler.

INDWELLING

O dwell in me, my Lord,
That I in thee may dwell;
Fulfill thy tender word,
That thy evangelists tell;
In me Thou, I in thee,
By thy sweet courtesy.

But wilt thou my guest be,
In this poor heart of mine?
Thy guest? Is this for me
In that pure heart of thine?
In me Thou, I in thee,
By thy sweet courtesy.

My chamber, Lord, prepare
Whither thou deignest come;
I may not seek to share
The making of thy home;
In me Thou, I in thee,
By thy sweet courtesy.

Thy gracious gifts bestow,
Humility and love;
O cause my heart to glow
By fire sent from above.
In me Thou, I in thee,
By thy sweet courtesy.

—Alexander B. Grosart.

MORE HOLINESS

More holiness give me;
More strivings within,
More patience in suffering,
More sorrow for sin.
More faith in my Saviour,
More sense of His care,
More joy in His service,
More purpose in prayer.

More gratitude give me,
More trust in the Lord,
More pride in His glory,
More hope in His word.
More tears for His sorrows,
More pain at His grief,
More meekness in trial,
More praise for relief.

More purity give me,
More strength to o'ercome,
More freedom from earth-stains,
More longings for home;
More fit for the kingdom,
More used I would be,
More blessed and holy—
More, Saviour, like thee.
—Philip Paul Bliss.

1964 DINNERS HAVE TOTALED $41,720

The Free Will Baptist churches of Duplin County contributed $3,622 to the development fund of Mount Olive College Thursday night November 12, at their annual benefit dinner, William D. Thigpen of Beulaville, chairman of the county steering committee, reported.

The Duplin County gifts brought to $41,720 the amount the college has received from twelve benefit dinners during 1964.

Participating churches in Duplin County, the amount of their gifts and their chairmen included: Bethlehem, $62, Mrs. Doris Wood, Beulaville, $1,214, William D. Thigpen; Cabin, $346, Leslie Kennedy; Lanier's Chapel, $25, Mrs. Roy Lanier; Long Ridge, $217, John Kornegay; Pearsall's Chapel, $551, D. F. Chambers and Mrs. Carl Powell; Rooty Branch, $266, Leslie Bell Sandy Plain, $172, Ralph Sumner; Sarecta, $413, Archie Benson; Snow Hill, $269, Mrs. Beatrice Wallace; Warsaw, $24, Mrs. Ben Sutton; and Piney Grove, $63, Mrs. Mattie Newsome.

I do not know that I shall live to see a single convert, but I would not leave my present field of labor to be made king of the greatest empire on the globe.—Adoniram Judson.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Ayden, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church met in the home of Mrs. Evelyn Parrisher for its October meeting. Mrs. Thelma Reaves, vice-president, presided over the meeting. The group sang the chorus, "My Lord Knows the Way," followed with the Scripture reading by Mrs. Eva Worthington taken from Ezekiel 22:23-31.

During the business period the roll was called and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. The treasurer also gave her report. The group decided to again serve dinner at Grifton.

The program, "Who Will Stand in the Gap?" was given by Velma McLawhorn, Annie Eliza Chappell, Elma Beddard, and Evelyn Parrisher. The meeting closed with the singing of "Lead Me to Some Soul Today" and prayer by Mrs. Kara Wingate.

Deep Run, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Deep Run Free Will Baptist Church met November 11 with twenty-two members and one new member present. The meeting opened with a song, "Praise Him, Praise Him," followed with a silent prayer in memory of a deceased member, Mrs. Sybil Davenport.

During the business session the treasurer reported a balance in the treasury of $463.57. This money is to be used to tile the floor in the educational building. The newly elected officers for 1965 are as follows: president, Mrs. Bill Kennedy; vice-president, Mrs. George Benson; treasurer, Mrs. Harold Hardison; secretary, Mrs. Alex Barwick; program chairman, Mrs. William R. Davenport; youth chairmen, Mrs. Melvin Everington and Mrs. Jack Hill; mission chairman, Mrs. Margerite Hill; study course chairman, Mrs. Roy Hill, benevolence chairman, Mrs. Roger Davis; and Children's Home chairman, Miss Verdie Davenport.

It was decided to send a book to Mount Olive College in memory of Mrs. Sybil Davenport. This plan was adopted in case of any deceased member instead of sending a flower arrangement.

A report from the kitchen shower committee showed a balance of $84. A $50 donation was made to this by Mr. William R. Davenport in memory of his mother. Needed utensils and curtains for the kitchen will be purchased with this.

The devotional program was presented by Mrs. Phyllis Davenport. The group prayed the Lord's Prayer for the benediction.

Kenly, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church met on Tuesday night, November 10, in the home of Mrs. Winston Crumpler with sixteen members present. Mrs. Lawrence Cuddington presided over the meeting. The meeting opened with the group's singing "Praise Him, Praise Him," followed with the Scripture reading from Psalm 19 by Mrs. Lucy Jones. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Leon Edwards. Mrs. Claude Bass introduced the program, "Blueprints for Victory," assisted by Mrs. Calvin Medlin, Mrs. Cuddington, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Frank Waddell, and Mrs. L. B. Woodall. Mrs. Waddell closed the program with prayer.

During the business session the roll was called and the minutes read by the secretary and approved. Mrs. Woodall, mission chairman, suggested that the auxiliary try to get together another box of clothing for the Arizona-Mexico Missions in the immediate future. It was announced that fourth Sunday in November had been designated as Building Fund Sunday for the church, and all offerings on that date will go toward that purpose. The pre-Thanksgiving service will be combined with the regular Wednesday night prayer service with the pastor, the Rev. L. B. Woodall, speaker. Approximately twenty sunshine baskets will be prepared for various individuals in the community by members of the auxiliary during the Thanksgiving-Christmas season.

New officers for 1965 were elected as follows: president, Mrs. Roy Stanford; vice-president, Mrs. Lawrence Cuddington; secretary, Mrs. Calvin Medlin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Winston Crumpler; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Waddell; Children's Home chairman, Mrs. Joe Sasser; program chairman, Mrs. Claude Bass; mission chairman, Mrs. L. B. Woodall; youth chairmen, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Crumpler; AFC chairmen, Mrs. Rufus Daniels, and Mrs. Selby Vick; study course chairman, Mrs. Glenn Parnell; benevolent committee, Mrs. Wilbert Bass, Mrs. Lucy Jones, and Mrs. Leon Edwards.

Following the benediction prayer, refreshments of strawberries, cake, and ice cream were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Wilbert Bass and Mrs. Donald Ray Crumpler.

Fountain, N. C.—The YFA of the Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Thursday night, November 12, 1964, in the home of Judy Carol Bridgers. After the business session, Brendy Kay Ellis gave a very interesting program, taking her Scripture from Luke 1:76-80. The group learned several choruses which were directed by Mrs. Peggy Hobgood.

At the close of the meeting, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. There were fifteen members present.

Fountain, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church met Friday night, November 13, 1964, at the church. Mrs. Lovelace Gardner, president, presided. The group joined together in singing "Glory to His Name." Mrs. David Hobgood used for her Scripture lesson Psalm 19, followed with prayer by Mrs. Gardner. Mrs. Hobgood gave the program, "Blueprints for Victory," written by Mrs. S. T. Dunning. The program closed with the group's joining together in the singing of the first verse of "Breathe on Me."

During the business session, Mrs. Lester Gay, secretary-treasurer, called the roll and received the dues. She also read the minutes of the last meeting, and they were approved. This was followed with the treasurer's report.

A motion was made and carried to remember Mrs. Ida Webb with a get-well card and love offering. A motion

INCREASED SUPPORT NEEDED BY THE FREE WILL BAPTIST CHILDREN'S HOME

By M. L. JOHNSON, Superintendent

It is imperative that we increase our gifts from Free Will Baptists in order to continue our general operations and to add the needed facilities and services for which we have planned. We can continue to operate on the same amount our people have been giving, but we cannot make the new additions which are needed on this amount.

QUOTAS FOR 1964-65 NEEDED

Suggested quotas for 1964-1965 have been sent to our churches. These quotas are based upon our actual needs to continue our general operation and reach the goals established in our "Golden Anniversary Development Program." If all our churches will raise their suggested quotas during the next five years, we will be able to do the things we have planned without the use of a special building fund campaign, the use of special building fund quotas, or the need to "go in debt."

The extent to which our churches fail to reach their quotas will determine how much we must "leave off."

INDIVIDUAL DONATIONS INVITED

One way to increase gifts from Free Will Baptists is through individual donations. Those who are able to do so are urged to send such gifts before the end of this year. Individual donations are credited to the individual and are applied on the quota for the local church of which the donor is a member. Such gifts are also deductible for state and federal income tax purposes. In-

CAMPAIGNS TO CONTINUE AFTER THANKSGIVING

Some churches did not complete their campaign for funds for the Children's Home before Thanksgiving and are continuing their campaign. We urge all those churches who did not raise as much as they think they can, or who did not reach their quotas, through their Thanksgiving offerings to continue their efforts into December. The response we get Thanksgiving and in December will help determine how much of our Development Program we can begin after the first of the year.

was made and seconded to give $15 for the Mount Olive College benefit supper, and to invite three of the members to attend the benefit supper on November 23, at 7 p.m., at the American Legion Building in Wilson.

The following officers were elected for the next year: president, Mrs. Mary Oakley; vice-president, Mrs. Mary Smith; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Adell Summerlin; program-prayer chairman, Mrs. Ruby Gardner; program committee, Mrs. Louise Thigpen, Mrs. Odell Gardner, Mrs. Walena Bell, Mrs. Elizabeth Langely, Mrs. Louise Owens; enlistment committee, Mrs. Garnet Gay and Mrs. Ruby Mangum; youth chairman, Mrs. Peggy Hobgood; mission chairmen, Mrs. Emily Langley, Mrs. Dortha Baker, Mrs. Lille Baker.

Each member drew names to bring a Christmas gift to the next meeting. Plans were made to invite the members' families, the pastor, and his family to attend the Christmas program on Friday night, December 18.

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment Five)

IN OUR LAST installment we discussed the disturbances of the fellowship of the National Association over differences about the denominational literature program. Today we take a look at differences over our educational program, and endeavor to survey the extent to which these differences disrupted our fellowship.

Christian education was one of the first things to claim the attention of the National Association after its founding in 1935. At this time, neither the eastern nor the western general organizations boasted an educational institution of any credit. The Original Free Will Baptists had operated the Free Will Baptist Seminary at Ayden, North Carolina, from 1896 until 1924, at which time the seminary became Eureka College and moved into the first of a number of modern buildings planned for the enlarged institution. But fire destroyed the building in 1931, leaving this group without a school of any kind, and so deeply in debt and discouraged that all efforts to reorganize the program failed. The Co-Operative Association had established Tecumseh College in Oklahoma as its very first project after its organization in 1917. But this college also was lost by fire about the same time that the Ayden school burned.

The years during which the denomination had no schools had awakened many to the need for educational institutions for Free Will Baptists, and all seemed to join together with a very good spirit in launching a Christian education program, which resulted in the establishment of the Free Will Baptist Bible College at Nashville, Tennessee, in 1942.

Everybody seemed well pleased that at last Free Will Baptists at large had an educational program, and all worked together in a commendable way until Mount Olive Junior College was started by the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists in 1952. Almost immediately, dissention arose over the new school. Some who were committed to the idea of an expanded educational program were conscientiously of the opinion that the time had not come for expansion, and that all should work together for the Bible College until it became well and firmly established, with a plant sufficient for the need of a growing training school. But objection on these grounds was a minor thing, and would soon have disappeared without interfering seriously with our fellowship if it had been the only basis.

However, many of those who have observed the growing disruption of fellowship over the educational program must agree that most of it has been caused by three things: misunderstandings, differences over the educational philosophies of the two school, and jealousy. We will start in the middle to consider these.

Those who conceived and gave birth to Mount Olive College felt that the big need of the denomination was for a "liberal arts college in a spiritual atmosphere," rather than another Bible school of the same type of the Bible College at Nashville, which was following the general trend of schools devoted exclusively, or almost exclusively, to religious instruction. Against this was the idea prevailing among many Free Will Baptists, that the responsibility of the church in the educational world was only to provide institutions to teach the doctrines and truths of the Bible and that all other kinds of education was the responsibility of the state or of private schools. When Mount Olive College proclaimed its purpose not to become a strictly sectarian institution, but, while emphasizing Free Will Baptist doctrine, to provide a more general religious instruction as well, which might appeal to students other than Free Will Baptists, along with liberal arts courses, there was heard from many the cries of "modernism," "liberal thinking," and other similar descriptions of the new institution. How much foundation, or lack of foundation, there was for such appraisals of Mount Olive College, many of those who cried out will never really know; for they, in most cases, made no special effort to find out the truth. This leads us to a brief consideration of the question of misunderstandings. Making all reasonable allowance for any trend toward "modernism" or "liberal thinking" that may have been in the minds of any individuals connected with the new college (and in fact we know of none), we can certainly say that much was misunderstood about the avowed purpose of Mount Olive College; and this misunderstanding helped to break fellowship among Free Will Baptists.

Another cause of antagonism toward Mount Olive College was a number of rumors widely circulated during the years 1960 and 1961. Word was spread around that the college allowed girl students to wear shorts around the campus and endorsed attendance of students at local moving picture houses and other things labeled "worldly" or "sinful." A big percentage of these rumors came through a very few people, who had always heard them from somebody else. At the time, this writer visited the college campus several times, usually unannounced, and was never able to nail down any of the rumors as true. Many of the students at that time were close enough to the writer to give him

ONLY ONCE A YEAR?

Norma Cournow

WHAT WOULD life be like without the malt shop, the record store and the shopping center? Not very many years ago that was just the situation.

The first settlers in America landed in a place of trees and Indians. There were no shopping centers, split-level homes or flashy cars. They had to build a house from trees and struggle with the rocky ground to make the crops grow. Sometimes they barely had enough to eat. When the crops failed, they had no supermarkets to run to for bread and canned goods. Sometimes the Indians helped them, but at times they were not friendly. Often the people were sick because of the cold, damp weather. The settlers had little clothing and most of it was drab. They couldn't change into a different dress or shirt when they got tired of the color or design of what they were wearing. They had only necessary clothing to keep them warm.

They had so little. But they were thankful for everything. The settlers in Massachusetts even set aside a special day to thank God for their blessings of the first harvest. The year was 1621 and that was the first Thanksgiving Day. Now we celebrate this holiday once a year. But it is very sad that some people only remember once a year to count their blessings and give thanks to God for them. How often do you thank God for all He gives you?

Suppose you gave your mother a birthday present and she didn't say anything. You gave her a Christmas present, and she said nothing. Finally you gave her flowers for Easter and she took them and wore them. Would you decide she did not like your gifts since she did not thank you? Then finally Thanksgiving Day came, and your mother thanked you for all the gifts. I don't think you would like this system at all. I wonder what God thinks if you only thank Him once a year.

Look around you at all the wonderful things God has provided. You have plenty of food at home and money to buy candy and ice cream at the corner store. Starvation is not something you fear. You have clothes for playing, for school and for church, and you change for every event. You have a home, family and friends. What wonderful

THANKS BE TO GOD

"In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you" (1 Thessalonians 5:18).

Thanks be to God for all His countless blessings
Which fall upon us daily like a shower of rain.
Like rain, some blessings fall upon the barren lands
Which lie in want of both fertility and care.
Like rain, some blessings fall upon the sloping hills
Too perpendicular for drops to penetrate,
And so the water falls upon them but to rush
Along their sloping sides to seek the fertile land
Which lies within the valley just beyond the hills.
Like rain, some blessings fall into the stagnant pools
To quickly lose their usefulness through idle waste.
The barren lands—the lives of men grown hardened through
The quest for life without the beauty of God's love.
The sloping hills—the men who tend to ward off God, Ignoring Him as giver of each blessing which
They vainly try to credit to some personal trait.
The stagnant pools—the men surrounded by rich gifts
Of opportunity and talents, but which lie unused.
Through thanklessness these gifts shall be destroyed.
Thanks be to God for all His countless blessings
Which fall upon us daily like a shower of rain.
Like rain, some blessings fall upon the open field
Which yield a harvest of rich grain year after year.
So like the men who daily speak their gratitude
And lift their hearts in praise to God acknowledging Him source and giver of each blessing in this life.
Thanks be to God for all His countless blessings.

things has God given you? Do you thank Him every day for your blessings?—Selected.

THANKSGIVING

Once again our loving Heavenly Father has blessed us with bountiful crops, and it is entirely fitting and proper that a day be set aside to thank and to praise the dear Lord for His many blessings unto us. First of all, we should thank Him for the gift of His dear Son, which brought us salvation full and free from sin and gives us the power to live pure and holy lives in this present world.

In the fall of 1620 our Pilgrim forefathers landed in this country. They left England because they loved the Lord and were willing to face the perils of the new country that they might serve God according to His Word. About half of their number perished the first winter. However, the next summer the Lord blessed them with good crops; and when the harvest was in, the governor proclaimed a day of thanksgiving to the almighty God for His goodness. Great preparations were made; and I want you to know, dear ones, that this first thanksgiving was not merely a feast, for there were prayers, sermons, and songs of praise, and it lasted three days. These dear Christians really poured out their hearts to God in praise and thanksgiving. How sad it is that this noble event has become merely a feast, and God is entirely left out of the picture! How God's great heart must be grieved when we do not even give Him a thought as we enjoy the bountiful harvest He has given us and celebrate the day to satisfy the lusts of the flesh! Oh, that our nation might return to the Lord and honor Him as our Christian forefathers did on that first thanksgiving! Christ, and Christ alone, is the answer to the problems of this troubled world. With Him we have peace; without Him we have uncertainties and war.—The Way of Truth.

FACING HANDICAPS

Both Sir Walter Scott and Lord Byron were lame, but Scott was radiant, gallant and creative, whereas Byron, however creative he may have been, was embittered by his lameness. A difference in temperaments does not explain the difference in reactions to similar disabilities. Scott faced his handicap with Christian faith, grateful for the health and opportunities he had; Byron only faced his handicap.—David A. MacLennan.

THANKSGIVING

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name" (Psalm 100:4).

We have a national "Thanksgiving" in our United States, but we talk more about the turkey than about the Creator of the turkey. It is nice to have good eats, especially the turkey that is placed on a great number of tables; however, there are a few people who are not able to have a turkey set before them for the physical body. But there is not one so poor that he cannot enter into fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ. The privilege of having a God to whom we can go and have divine fellowship is the greatest blessing that man has ever known. There are people in the world who are denied the privilege of public worship. We people of the United States should be the happiest people in the world. All believers in Christ should assemble in their regular house of worship, and worship and give thanks to Almighty God.

Again it is written: "O come, let us sing unto the LORD: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation. Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms" (Psalm 95:1, 2).

EVERYDAY SHOULD BE A DAY OF PRAISE

Again the the Word of God says: "Praise ye the LORD. Praise the LORD, O my soul. While I live will I praise the LORD: I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being" (Psalm 146:1, 2).

WHO CAN PRAISE GOD?

Only those who know the Lord can really praise the Lord. Praise, in reality, comes from the heart; and our hearts must be in tune with the heart of God before they can have the heartfelt thanks to worship God in spirit and in truth. "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24).

When should we worship the Lord? The psalmist said, "I will bless the LORD at all times: his praise shall continually be in my mouth" (Psalm 34:1). We should have the spirit of thanksgiving each day, not just on the day that is set apart by our government in November of each year. Again we are told to "Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies; Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that they youth is renewed like the eagle's" (Psalm 103:2-5).

LET'S GIVE GOD THANKS

WALTER E. ISENHOUR

From day to day we breathe God's air,
Enjoy His love and tender care;
Live on the substance He provides,
Protected by His hand that guides;
Enriched by His amazing grace
Along our rugged earthly race,
With promise of eternal life
When we shall leave this world of strife;
Therefore, let's give Him thanks.

From day to day God gives us health
That we should value more than wealth;
Yes, sends the sunshine and the rain
That grows our crops and fields of grain,
From which we're amply clothed and fed

In answer to the prayers we've said,
Indeed He's mindful of our need
When we go where His footsteps lead;
Therefore, let's give Him thanks.

From day to day God's blessings flow
Upon our lives where'er we go;
For ev'ry good and perfect gift,
And all He sends for our uplift,
Is from the bounty of His store
That feeds His children evermore,
While here upon the earth we stay
Awaiting heaven's golden day;
Therefore, let's give Him thanks.

From day to day God's love comes in
To save us from the blight of sin;
To make us soldiers brave and strong
Lest we should yield ourselves to wrong;
That we should be both kind and sweet
To those with whom we live or meet;
That we may go to God's right hand
When at the judgment we shall stand;
Therefore, let's give Him thanks.

Let us not forget that when we are eating that Thanksgiving turkey that our God created that turkey and made it possible for us to feed and help to raise the turkey for Thanksgiving. We must remember that God made all things and that there would have been no turkey had it not been for an all-wise Creator, whom we should honor and adore and praise everyday, not only on a national holiday. Again we quote the psalmist: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the LORD, which made heaven and earth" (Psalm 121:1, 2).

We Free Will Baptists have so much in our denominational endeavor for which to thank God: namely, our printing press, which in reality belongs to God; our college at Mount Olive, which is being blessed beyond the expectation of many people. God is really working on this line of Christian education. Every Free Will Baptist should stand up and give thanks in a special way to the name of our Christ, who said, "Search the Scriptures." Paul admonishes us to study to show ourselves approved unto God. I have contended for a long time that if we do not know what a word means, how can we "rightly divide the Word"? But there is a spirit of Christian education moving on us as never before. Praise the Lord!

Then, there is our Children's Home that has been able to move along in the black for the past two years and longer, in spite of its enemies. So we have a lot to be thankful for; let us give thanks to our Lord for all his benefits. Not least of these is our Arizona-Mexico Missions and the increased interest in missions both here at home and elsewhere.

The way to show to the world the thanks that we owe to our Lord is not only to sing and praise the Lord with our mouths, but also to open our pocket-books and get out the best that we can, even that which is sacrificial, and keep all the institutions going in full speed.

Now I am making a plea for money for Cragmont to pay for the Floyd lease, in keeping with what Brother Reynolds has been pleading for. A good thanksgiving, we believe, in the sight of the Lord is to give and work and pray for all the things mentioned in this message. Come on people and let us give true thanksgiving to our Lord and please Him; otherwise our thanksgiving does not go high enough.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: On what day does the Sabbath come? What does the Bible require of us Christians regarding this day? Some that I have heard speak say that it is on the seventh day of the week and others say they are not sure what day it is on.—Mrs. I. Cornell, Thomasville, Georgia.

ANSWER: The Jewish Sabbath Day began at sundown on the sixth day of their week. Sundown, therefore, marked the distinguishing line between the sixth day just ended and the beginning of the seventh which began, of course, as the sixth ended. The Sabbath ended at sundown on the seventh day of the Jewish week; therefore, the Jews were at liberty to do any work they chose to do and that was legitimate the minute the sun set that day. The seventh day, as one of rest, was first observed, so far as we know, by God when He finished His creative work. "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made" (Genesis 2:2, 3).

Some Hebrew scholars have asserted that the word from which the English word rested in this passage comes may have been as well rendered ceased creating. In the Levitical or Mosaic law, Sabbath keeping, together with several other ceremonies, was endorsed by rigid rules; and severe penalties were enforced upon all violators. By this God, in a simple kindergarten method, sought to bring all wayward men back to Himself and the happiness, contentment, peace of mind, and conscience from which man departed when he first sinned as seen in Genesis 3.

Christ teaches us, as found in the New Testament, that man was not made for the Sabbath or for Sabbath keeping, but that the Sabbath was made for him. In this, of course, He meant that God made the Sabbath to serve a good purpose in behalf of man. God's purpose was that of aiding man to see and recognize his deplorable condition apart from God and God's way back to fellowship and friendship with God that man had before he sinned and now apart from Christ is destitute of the essentials his created likeness of God calls for. From the time of the events of Genesis 3, when man fell, God gave him, among other good things, the Sabbath to point toward and show him Christ. "And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath: Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath" (Mark 2:27, 28).

Under the old or Mosaic law a Jew could travel not further than a Sabbath Day's journey on that hallowed day. A Sabbath Day's journey was a little less than a mile in length. When a person was offended in one point of the law under this system, he was regarded as being guilty of violating the whole of it and therefore he was subject to or due the punishment that was due every one that kept none of its precepts. "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all" (James 2:10). Jesus taught that He had not come to this earth to destroy or make void its effectiveness, but rather to make full the law; therefore, He traveled freely on the Sabbath Day and even justified His apostles in the picking of ears of grain in a field, not their own, when they were hungry on the Sabbath Day and needed to eat. The gathering from another's field and the eating of grain when on a journey and when hungry did not violate the law, but this being done on the Sabbath was the particular thing the Pharisees and Sadducees criticized Him for. The Jews of Jesus' day, when it comes to what they did, however, enforced the traditions of the Jewish fathers instead of the Levitical laws as kept in Moses' day or as should have been kept then; for some violated it even while Moses was yet alive, and were stoned to death for departing from its precepts; and perhaps then, as now, some who broke the law got by without either making necessary atonement or being punished. Jesus taught, when He was here, that all were not Jews in the correct sense of the word that were circumcised, but only those who honored Him and His Father as they were taught to do in the Old Testament. Furthermore, He taught that any who violated the Mosaic law in favor of their traditions were wrong and that they would suffer punishment for so doing.

Under the old law no Jew could cook any food on the Sabbath Day nor gather sticks for or kindle a fire. (See Matthew 12:18). Such violations were punishable by death. "Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed" (Exodus 31:16, 17). (See Numbers 15:32-36.) Here in the law God tells Israel, "It is a sign between me and Israel." A sign of, or for, what? It was a sign of the covenant just as was circumcision or the offering of sacrifices. It was among the signs that should distinguish them, the Israelites, from all other peoples throughout their generation. It, as a symbol or type of Christ, ended when Christ the antitype came. He is now our rest. Jew and Gentile alike who believe on Him need no other Sabbath or rest. "And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief" (Hebrews 3:18, 19). "Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief" (Hebrews 4:11). Read all of Hebrews 3 and 4.)

We who are Christians are now Christ's and He is ours. He is in us and we are in Him. As the branches of a fruit-bearing vine are dependent upon the vine for its life, so are we dependent upon Christ for all it takes to be Christians and win souls to Him. He is our Mediator, so no type or substi-

THANKSGIVING FOR LINDA

Margaret Beck

LINDA first saw the little boy plodding along the country road. She reined her pony. "Hello," she said.

He looked startled. "Hi," he said, but kept pushing ahead. Linda looked both ways. Not a house in sight, only the California orange groves lining the Santa Ana road.

"He can't be more than three or four," she thought. "He shouldn't be alone out here."

"Want to ride where you're going?" she called.

The little boy studied her, his eyes wide in his thin face. He had no coat and shivered a little in the November air. He nodded. "I'm going to my mommie."

Linda got down and boosted him up on Prancer. With a toe hold in the stirrup she vaulted up behind him and wrapped the open front of her coat around him. "What's your name?" she asked.

"Charley. What's your name?"

"Linda." She put Prancer to a trot and Charley leaned against her trustingly. It gave her a warm, glad feeling.

"I'm running away from Denny." He pointed back. "Denny hits me." Linda turned and noticed a chimney rising above the orange trees.

"I wish I had a pony." Charley patted the bouncing black mane. "I'd ride him."

Linda laughed. "Guess what I'm going to ride tomorrow."

"What?" He tried to twist his neck to see her face.

"A big bus to Los Angeles. All alone, too. I'm going to Gramp's and Grammy's for Thanksgiving. They'll meet me at the depot. It's 40 miles, Charley."

"Is tomorrow Thanksgiving?"

"No, day after tomorrow is, but I'm going a day early and my daddy and mom are going to drive up Thanksgiving morning." A car was coming toward them and Linda pulled over.

The automobile was about to pass when the brakes slammed.

"Why, that's my daddy," Charley exclaimed. "Hi, Daddy!"

The man came toward them. "What are you doing here, Charley?"

"I runned away. Her's taking me home." He pointed over his shoulder at Linda. "Denny hits me," he added.

"But you can't go home until Mommie is better," his father said patiently. "Don't you remember?" The man looked at Linda, "His mother is just home from the hospital. The doctor says she must have perfect rest a few days, until Sunday maybe. Denny's mother, was taking care of Charley."

"Oh, I see," Linda said.

"My name is Mr. Miller." He smiled, "What is your name?"

"Linda James." She pointed up the road. "I live that way."

He nodded. "I've met your father."

There was the sound of feet behind them and they turned to see a woman striding toward them. Running behind her was a small boy. "I can't watch that boy every minute, Mr. Miller," she shouted. "He's set and bound to go home." Her voice was twangy and she stood now, pushing back at a string of hair. "I guess you better get somebody else to keep him. He's a worry to me."

Linda watched the father's tired, troubled face. "All right," he said, "but will you keep him until morning? I'll need a little time to find someone."

"Well," she said doubtfully, "I—guess so." Denny stood scowling.

Mr. Miller reached his arms for Charley. "Well, come on, Son."

But Charley clung to Linda. "No, Daddy," he pleaded. As he was taken from her he began to sob, putting his head down on his father's shoulder.

Mr. Miller stood patting him, his eyes worried. "Thank you very much, Linda," he said.

An ache went with Linda as she cantered home. "If I were a grown lady I'd keep care of him," she told Prancer.

She explained to her mother about it.

Her mother nodded. "Poor little tyke. The Millers are nice people. "Well," she made her voice bright, "I have your suitcase packed."

"Ooh, Mother!" Linda's excitement rushed back. "My first trip to L. A. alone. I can't wait."

"Have you finished you Thanksgiving quiz?" he mother asked.

"No. I'm going to work on it now, though. I can't seem to make up my mind about it."

She carried her quiz sheet out under her favorite avocado tree and sat on the dry leaves. An orange crate was her table. The fragrance of their surrounding orange grove came in through the leafy, swooping branches. This was her secret place for thinking about things.

She opened her quiz sheet and read:

Community Sunday School THANKSGIVING QUIZ

She knew the three questions by heart. The page had been pencil-marked and erased several times. The face of her teacher flashed before her, and eagerness of the classmates.

"I am giving a prize next week for each finished quiz," Miss Terry had said. "It doesn't matter which answer you choose as long as you are sure of it in your heart. But pray first."

Linda read aloud, through the list, 1. I am most thankful for a big Thanksgiving dinner, and a wonderful holiday.

There were many erasure marks here. The bus trip and huge turkey at Gramp's and Grammy's made it seem wonderful.

2. I am most thankful I have my home and parents.

the first day's session and reports that all deliberations were harmonious. During the session, the association voted to dissolve the home missions board, thus allowing each conference the right to carry on its own program of home missions. The Thursday evening service was called off so that the ministers and delegates could attend a local revival service. All reports showed progress.

Macedonia Church Thanksgiving Service

The Macedonia Free Will Baptist Church, Ernul, North Carolina, will have a special Thanksgiving service beginning at 11 a.m. on Thanksgiving Day. The program will consist of congregational hymns, special music, and the message by the pastor, the Rev. Al Lyczkowski. Lunch will be spread at the noon hour. All former pastors, members, friends and relatives are invited to this service.

The Free Will Baptist

Holly Springs Host to Youth for Christ Rally

The Careret County Youth for Christ Rally will meet at Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church, Newport, North Carolina, Saturday night, November 28, at 7:30. A drama, "The Challenge of the Cross," will be presented at this time. Also included in the service will be chorus singing, a Sword Drill, and a testimony period.

The president, Mr. Michael Day, and the pastor of the church, the Rev. Jerry Rowe, extend a cordial invitation to everyone to attend.

Antioch Announces Thanksgiving Service

There will be a Thanksgiving service at the Antioch Original Free Will Baptist Church near New Bern, North Carolina, at 11 a.m. on Thanksgiving Day. The Rev. James Lupton, pastor, will be in charge of the service.

At the noon hour, lunch will be spread picnic style for those who would like to participate.

At one time this service was a regular custom of the church, but it was discontinued a few years ago. It was at the request of several members that it was decided to revert to the old custom that many cherished.

Howards Honored At Piney Grove

The Rev. and Mrs. James Howard were honored at a covered-dish supper at the educational building of the Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Pitt County, North Carolina, on Saturday evening, November 14.

The fellowship was wonderful, and everyone had a most enjoyable evening.

Following the social hour, the Rev. and Mrs. Howard were presented a love gift of $235.

Approximately eighty people were present.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR DECEMBER 6

RIGHTEOUS LIVING

LESSON TEXT: Titus 1:15—2:10

MEMORY VERSE: Titus 3:14

I. INTRODUCTION

In the preceding lesson the great doctrinal beliefs of the Bible were emphasized; but in our lesson for today Christian ethics are set forth. Sound doctrine must be coupled with good Christian deeds; they naturally go together. Sober, grave, temperate, faith, charity, patience, discreet, chaste, good, uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, and sound speech are words used in our lesson text which are representative of Christian demeanor. Christians must show themselves to be good in their daily activities.

Young people need to understand the importance of righteous living and ways it can be done. What kind of world would this be if everybody set out on an evil course through life. We can recognize the need for each one to live righteously. To live righteously one must be righteous. This can be realized through a personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour. Then the intent and ambition of one's life must be to do the will of our Saviour.

The purpose of this lesson is to help young people in their efforts to righteous living.—Teen-Age Teacher (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Real values are determined solely on the merits of Christ (v. 15).

2. Our works prove our relationship to God (v. 16).

3. Every child of God should speak only those things that are becoming to his profession of faith (v. 1).

4. The aged men should be an example to the younger men (v. 2).

5. The older women should inspire the younger women to be good wives and mothers (vv. 3-5).

6. Young men should strive to be what God expects of them (v. 6).

7. Every Christian should seek to be an example to others (v. 7).

8. Our speech should be in accord with our profession of faith at all times (v. 8).

9. All servants, slaves or otherwise, should strive to please their masters (v. 9).

10. Servants should show forth the beauty of holiness in service to their masters (v. 10).—Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. A farmer's occupation is growing food products. He chooses the seed carefully. He sows one kind of corn if he wants to provide fresh corn for people to eat. He sows another kind of corn if he wants to grow food to fatten his livestock.

The farmer's wife wants to grow flowers. She plants certain kinds of seed to get the colors and sizes she wants. One kind of seed neither of them has to plant—that is, the seed of weeds. Weeds take good care of themselves. They scatter their seed and grow more weeds. The farmer and his wife must keep their soil carefully weeded so the good plants may have room to grow. The farmer who wants to grow corn would not plant seed for weeds; neither would his wife. There are enough weeds anyway. They plant the good seed, and fight the weeds that would stunt their growth.

Every Christian is like a farmer who can choose what he will plant. If we plant good seed, and carefully keep out the weeds, we will grow good and useful grain. The weeds are like the evils of the world. They are all about us. They get entangled in the good things we try to do. We do not plant them or ask for them, but there they are. Weeds can only grow more weeds.

The Christian who serves and obeys God must plant good seed. Like the farmer, he can hope to harvest only what he plants. He must plant seeds of righteousness. Practicing righteous living is not enough, however. He must also weed out the evil so that he can "adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things" (Titus 2:11). —Standard Commentary.

2. Rocks and blocks are excellent things in their place. Often they are used to make strong foundations for various constructions. But if they are placed in the road, they impede traffic. As you drive along, you often read the sign: "Beware of falling rocks." The Apostle Paul warns us not to put a stumbling block or occasion to fall in another's way (Roman 14:13).

Think of Zacchaeus. (Read the story, Luke 19:1-10.) We are told that pint-size Zacchaeus could not see Jesus due to the press. The crowd was in his way. He was not tall enough to see over them. Their bodies obstructed his view of Christ. Is it not possible that some who claim to know Christ block the view of Him from others? And this not by their bodies, but by their lives! People often cannot see Jesus because our lives are in the way.

A blind man went about with a lantern on his arm. Someone asked him why he carried the lantern since he was blind. He replied, "To keep other people from stumbling over me."

A minister who held a doctor's degree in theology had a son who was a medical doctor. They lived together and at the house was a boy who performed the chores. One day the boy answered the phone and was asked if the doctor was home. The boy replied, "Which doctor do you want, the one who preaches or the one who practices?"

Faith and works must walk the path of life hand-in-hand. Ethics and true religion go together, else what we do will drown all we say. Wesley said, "we may be as orthodox as the devil, and as wicked."

An old man, in reading a hymn with the line, "Judge not the Lord by feeble sense," mistook the word "sense" and read, "Judge not the Lord by feeble saints." That is a mistake to make us think! Let us not merely be people who preach, but people who practice! —Senior Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. "I will try this day to live a simple, sincere and serene life, repelling promptly every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity, self-seeking; cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity and the habit of holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, generosity in giving, carefulness in conversation, diligence in appointed service, fidelity in every trust, and a childlike faith in God.

"In particular I will try to be faithful in those habits of prayer, work, physical exercise, eating and sleep, which I believe the Holy Spirit has shown me to be right.

"That all my powers with all their might To God's sole glory may unite."

—George Eliot.

4. There are two kinds of righteousness: the righteousness that is imputed and the righteousness that is acquired. The righteousness that is imputed is the righteousness of Christ. This is the righteousness that is given us when we are saved. We do not merit or deserve this righteousness. It is the gift of God. Acquired righteousness comes from daily living with Christ.

Our lesson last Sunday dealt with our salvation, which is imputed righteousness; but our lesson today deals with acquired righteousness, which comes from living with Christ. We must always remember that the acquired righteousness is impossible unless we first have the imputed righteousness of Christ.

What are some things that we can do to help acquire righteousness in our daily living?

First we can keep our minds clean. Perhaps one of the greatest hindrances to growth in grace is impure thoughts. The life cannot be pure if the thoughts are impure.

Second, we can spend much time in communion with God. There are two ways to do this. One is to read the Bible. God speaks to us through His Book. The other is through prayer. This is the only way that we can talk to God.

Third, we can worship with other Christians regularly. What can be more stimulating and inspiring than fellowship with God and His people! Through worship we gain strength to overcome our weaknesses and discouragements.

Fourth, witnessing is one of the very best ways to acquire righteousness. It is to the soul what exercise is to the body. Without exercise the body cannot develop; without witnessing we cannot become the Christian that it is possible for us to become. — Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

the honorary title of "Pa," and had been in conferences at Cragmont Assembly over and over. We talked to some of them and asked for "confidential frankness" upon the basis of our relationship as a sort of "father" counselor; but not one of the students with whom we talked knew anything about the wearing of shorts on the campus, and not one knew of any endorsement of Hollywood movies. We have letters on file from the president of the college explaining the policy of the school regarding these things, and he more than once explained the policies in talks to various denominational groups. I personally know that the one who circulated most of the rumors was urged more than once to visit the college and make a personal investigation, but this he declined to do. But a lot of good people over the denomination believed the reports and lost confidence in the school. These rumors were widely circulated in areas not reached by The Free Will Baptist or other mediums carrying articles in defense of the college, so many people only received one side of the story. These fine people are not to be blamed too much. It is just regrettable that mediums of communication reaching them chose not to make themselves available to carry explanations or other defense articles in the interest of Mount Olive College.

Did jealousy enter into the confusion caused by the contentions over the educational program? We do not want to make any charges of jealousy against any particular people; but when students of each college encouraged non-support of the other college, there must have been an element of jealousy. When the Bible College was founded, there were those who predicted failure for the institution. When God blessed the school, as we have every reason to believe He did, could there have been a festering sore of jealousy waiting for an opportunity to break out? When Mount Olive College was founded, there were also prophets of failure. When God blessed Mount Olive College, as we have every reason to believe He did, could this have been the thing that not only aroused the jealousy of the prophets of failure, but maybe turned the pride that many had in the success of the Bible College into jealousy over the new college, which also was succeeding to a degree not anticipated even by its founders?

Honest disagreement over educational philosophies, misunderstanding or jealousy—whatever it may have been, the result was a breakdown in fellowship among Free Will Baptists which helped to prepare the stage for the rupture that came in 1961. Again we assert our opinion that if there had been a good fellowship over the years, things might well have been different in 1961.

(We contemplate three more articles in this series. Next week, we plan to take a look at other developments over the years which disrupted fellowship and at the events immediately preceding the withdrawal of the North Carolina State Convention in 1961. The article following this one will survey the possibilities or a restoration of the relationship between the North Carolina State Convention and its associates and the National Association. We have talked with people on both sides, and will attempt to make an honest appraisal of what each side will expect from the other in the way of conditions for reunion. The article will not be argumentative. The final article of the series will survey the prospects of Original Free Will Baptists outside the National Association.)

THANKS

I do not thank Thee, Lord,
That I have bread to eat while others starve;

Nor yet for work to do
While other bodies flatten beds of pain;
No, not for these do I give thanks.

But I am grateful Lord,
Because my meager loaf I may divide,
And that my busy hands
May move to meet another's need;
Because my doubled strength I may extend
To steady one who faints.
Yes, for all these do I give thanks.

—JAMES ALFORD in Rush.

Boys' and Girls' Stories

A mark had been put here and erased and put back. Linda studied it again. "Anybody would rather have his father and mother," she said. She let the mark stay.

3. I am most thankful when I make somebody else happy, for Jesus' sake.

There were no marks here, at all. "Of course, I like to help," Linda thought, "but that's a favor."

What about missionaries? The thought rushed to her mind, Linda pictured them. They gave up the wonderful days, and homes and families for Jesus' sake. "But I'm not a missionary!" she explained to herself. She tried to push the thought away. "Anyway, how could I help?" she mumbled. She closed her eyes and seemed to see a little boy, cold and lonesome, trudging along a country road. "You could make Charley happy," the answer came.

"I'm not big enough!" Linda said it quickly, out loud. Then she remembered Vie who brought her little sister to Sunday school and took care of her all week, alone, because her mother worked.

Linda buried her head on the box. "I wouldn't have any trip, or turkey, or anything," she groaned. "Just Charley and me, and maybe—hot dogs." Suddenly she snatched the sheet and flung it down. "It's a crazy quiz, anyway."

But she couldn't forget Charley, clinging to her as he was dragged from the pony. Her heart was sure of the right answer now.

She picked up the yellow sheet and read again, "For Jesus' sake." Slowly Linda erased her other marks and put a big check mark at "3." As she finished, the joy of helping swept into her heart.

Quickly she gathered her things and raced to the house. Supper was almost ready. Her daddy was in the kitchen, reading the paper.

"Mother," she burst out, "will you let me take care of Charley, here, until Sunday, when his mother is better?"

I'll do all the work, and I won't go to Los Angeles."

Her mother turned from the stove, a little amazed. "I guess it will be all right," she answered slowly, "if Daddy doesn't mind. But what about your bus trip? You've looked forward to it for weeks."

"I just won't go. I'll—I'll fix Charley and me something to eat. Maybe—hot dogs."

Her mother looked at her bewildered. "Whatever are you talking about?"

"Thanksgiving, Mother," she explained, "when I stay here and take care of Charley."

"Why, Linda, honey!" Her mother's voice was quick with gentleness. "Did you think we'd leave you here on Thanksgiving? Charley can go right along with us in the car. Gramps and Grammy won't mind a bit."

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

GENEVIEVE PERRINE CHANEY

Our pilgrim fathers landed here
Filled with faith and hope;
Today we scarce can understand
With what they had to cope.

On that first Thanksgiving Day,
They had reached a land
Where they prayed and strove for freedom,
A loyal Christian band.

God has honored this beginning,
We who benefit today
From the things for which they struggled
Must not let them slip away.

We now take so much for granted,
Living daily lives of ease;
Lord, arouse us from our dreaming,
Bring us humbly to our knees!

It is not enough to praise Thee
On this day thus set aside;
We must ever watch the ramparts
Of our pilgrim father's pride.

We are thankful for our freedom,
Thankful for that pilgrim few;
Help us gain more of the spirit
That once brought them safely through.

—Christian Union Witness.

Linda looked at her daddy. He nodded, watching her with a teasing grin. But his eyes were proud.

"Oh, Daddy! Oh, Mother!" Linda exclaimed, "you're wonderful." She grabbed her mother and spun her in a wild hug.

"Now, now," her mother warned, "you set the table, Linda."

Gladly Linda rushed around.

"I think I'll call Mr. Miller before we eat," her daddy said. He looked at her mother. "We might as well go after him tonight, I suppose?"

Her mother nodded. "I would. Take Linda, too. Charley will be more at ease with her. I'll phone Gramps after supper that we'll all be up Thanksgiving morning."

When Linda's father turned from the phone, he said, "Mr. Miller is truly relieved. He will come and go with us to get Charley at Denny's home in about half an hour." He drew his chair up to the table, and Linda sat down, too. He smiled at her, "Mr. Miller told me how much Charley liked you."

Linda was too excited to eat. She just beamed.

Her daddy looked at her shining, eager eyes.

"Oh, Daddy," Linda said finally, "I know this is going to be the nicest Thanksgiving I've ever had!"—Junior Trails.

tute is needed. The washing of the saints' feet, the bread and fruit of the vine, and baptism are reminders to us of Calvary and the need we have for a once-for-all cleansing and a day-by-day cleansing, and of the fact that we are crucified and dead to the carnal things and interests in this world, but alive in and unto Christ. "I am a subscriber to The Free Will Baptist. As I read of you good people, I believe you are striving to carry on God's work that you may be a glorious church when Jesus comes.

"I am a member of a Free Will Baptist church located near the state line between Kentucky and Tennessee. Our church is a member of the Eastern Division of the Stone Association of Free Will Baptists. The name of our church is 'Union Chapel.' It is located at Sunnybrook, Kentucky.

"Our church building is in great need of repairs. It is located a good distance from a new highway which has recently been built through our community. We have decided that it would be best to move our church to the highway. It is our plan to build a concrete block wall, using the lumber in the old building. We are a poor church and our membership is small. We need help from other churches; therefore, if any church or person will send us an offering in this work, I am sure that God will bless you. Mail all contributions to S. D. Burnett, 810 Ribble Avenue, Muncie, Indiana, since I am working in Muncie at the present time. I am a deacon in my church and I will answer any letter personally and will send a receipt for any contribution that is received."—S. D. Burnett.

A SPECIAL THANKSGIVING SERVICE

The Thanksgiving service at the Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, affords a blessing which each Free Will Baptist should experience at least once in a lifetime. The fact is, however, that one service will just be the beginning. There are many people who faithfully attend each year, and have been doing so for many years.

The Children's Home has a special place in everyone's heart. For this reason, the Thanksgiving service is of special significance. It is a time when churches respond with special offerings and gifts to the Home. It affords an opportunity for each person to see the seventy-five children that Free Will Baptists support. This opportunity is given in a special way when the entire group stands before the congregation to sing. In the words of the superintendent, Brother M. L. Johnson, "A finer, better looking group is not to be found anywhere."

The message for this Thanksgiving service was delivered by the Rev. L. B. Manning, pastor of Kings Cross Roads church, near Farmville. Brother Manning was afforded this opportunity in recognition of the support that both he and his church has given the Home throughout the years.

The attendance was good and the day was beautiful. The warm sunny weather gave an ideal setting for the picnic lunch which was spread on the campus. We have not yet had a report on the amount of the gifts to the Home, but it was evident that the response was good.

We feel that the coming months and years will hold many grand and glorious blessings for the Children's Home. We pray God's richest blessings and guidance upon Brother Johnson, the staff who faithfully labor there, the board of directors, and upon Free Will Baptists that there may be an even greater manifestation of love for Christ and especially this phase of His work.

WHY NOT GIVE A BIBLE?

With the beginning of the Christmas season, everyone is faced with the question of what to give that friend and loved one this Christmas. Why not give a Bible? It is certain that no gift can mean more to the one who receives it, and nothing could be more appropriate for the season. In this issue of "The Free Will Baptist" there are a couple of Bible advertisements. It would be practically impossible to advertise all the Bibles that are available. The Free Will Baptist Press has the following: Holman, Harper, World, Oxford (including the famous Scofield), and Collins. All of these Bibles are the King James Version. There is also a large selection of Testaments of various prices and sizes. Also available are pulpit and family Bibles. Any of these Bibles are available in any price range. For additional information, contact the Free Will Baptist Press. A catalog will be sent upon request.

As a suggestion to churches and church groups that are wondering what to give the pastor, may we suggest a gift certificate from the Press. These gift certificates can be obtained at whatever price is desired. All ministers appreciate receiving good books. There is always such a need, and books can enrich your pastor's ministry to your church.

ALCOHOL FACTOR IN 50% OF ACCIDENTS

According to Dr. Ross A. McFarland, professor of health and safety at the Harvard school of public health, alcohol is a factor in about 50 percent of the fatal accidents in the United States. Dr. McFarland reports that .03 to .04 percent of alcohol in the blood will deteriorate sensory, mental, perceptual, and psychomotor functions of some persons. Significant impairment in performances of all drivers results when the alcohol in the blood reaches .10 percent.

The COLLEGE RELATED CHURCH

by E. C. MORRIS

WE have heard much about the church-related college, but little about the college-related church.

In the early history of our country, it seems that our schools and churches (or churches and schools) were almost inseparable. This was true on a local level; and when foresighted men began to think in terms of institutions of higher learning, they thought in terms of church influence. Invariably, whenever one saw a school or college, he would find a church, in connection therewith.

When the state began to assume the responsibility of public education, this did not entirely eliminate the church's responsibility; however, we find that churches became more concerned with higher education, especially as it concerned the Christian life. For this reason we find what is termed church-related colleges.

Visionary Christians have always sought to have educational institutions which produce churches as well as churches producing schools. Many of the church-related schools have a church on the campus while others have them adjoining the campus. Some are composed almost, if not entirely, of college personnel; while others, on or off the campus, have mixed composition.

Bringing the matter right at our door, even in our plans, may we think of Mount Olive Junior College in connection with the Mount Olive Free Will Baptist Church. When the college was established in Mount Olive, there was no church of the same faith with it. There were a few families in the town of Mount Olive who were Free Will Baptists; but in all probability, the need of a church of their faith in the town had never occurred to them to any great extent, since there were rural churches near enough to serve them. However, those connected with the college, both faculty and students, saw the need and began to advocate the establishment of a church that would serve both the school and community. Their thinking soon produced action, and soon a church was organized. It is reasonable to suppose that had the college not been here the church would not have yet been established.

Now, we have the college-related church with open doors for any who care to seek the fellowship. There are some who hold membership who are not officially connected with the college, though they are not very active. It may be that some prefer a church that is not college-connected with membership privilege for college personnel. According to well established custom, it seems to work better to have a college-related church with membership privilege for those without. At least it appears to be the situation prevailing with Mount Olive College.

We should keep in mind that many students come to Mount Olive Junior College who are not Free Will Baptists and a few who are not even church affiliated. In this respect, the church becomes a mission reaching out for those needing spiritual influence.

One great question confronting the college-related church is: Whose responsibility is it to build and support such a church? The denomination and friends see that the college is supported financially and otherwise, but how about the church? No one can deny the fact that the school and denomination will be judged largely by the type of church organization and facilities that will be open for public inspection. This being true, the denomination should feel the responsibility of seeing that the type of church here be comparable to the college and other churches composing the denomination. It is reasonable to suppose that students and visitors coming to the college will judge the denomination spiritually by what they find here in the way of church plant and programming.

The Mount Olive church, as it now is, cannot finance the type of building needed, and it would be years prob-

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

"I and my Father are one" (John 10:30).

". . . and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen" (Romans 9:5).

This is the first of a series of messages dealing with Christ and His work. If Christ is to mean to us what God intended and still desires we must believe in and accept Him as true God.

Great diversity of opinion is held concerning the person of Christ as to His divinity. There are those who deny the distinctions of the Godhead, and declare that the whole Deity are tabernacled in Christ. Others represent Him as the highest of all created intelligences, the firstborn of every creature. Still others acknowledge Him as human only, and as exalted above other men merely in His official character. It has, however, been generally believed in the early age of the church that Christ is divine, truly the only begotten Son of God, the brightness of the divine glory, and the express image of His person, and in every sense equal with the Father.

This sentiment appears to be abundantly established in the Holy Word, and to be the obvious sense of the texts, "I and my Father are one" and "who is over all, God blessed for ever." Taking these texts as expressive of the Deity of the Saviour, let us consider some of the explicit declarations of the divine Word, as the basis on which this doctrine rests.

Isaiah spoke of the divinity of Christ when he looked down through the centuries and exclaimed, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6).

Joel the prophet said, "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call" (Joel 2:32). Peter referred to the things Joel had said as he preached on the day of Pentecost using almost the exact words of the prophet, "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be saved" (Acts 2:21).

John, the beloved apostle, begins the Gospel he wrote by divine inspiration with, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God," and "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, . . ." (John 1:1, 14). Then speaking of the work of Christ as the Son of God and the only Saviour of the world, John again wrote, ". . . This is the true God, and eternal life" (1 John 5:20).

The great Apostle Paul wrote to the young preacher Timothy and said, "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory" (1 Timothy 3:16); and to Titus he wrote, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13).

There are many other passages where He is described as "God only wise," "the only true God," and many, many more.

Christ's proper standing as Deity has been established from the works which are ascribed to Him. In the work of creation it is said, "All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made" (John 1:3). Read also Colossians 1:16 and Hebrews 1:2.

The works of providence and universal government have been turned over to Him as the divine Son of God. We read, "And he is before all things, and by him all things consist" (Colossians 1:17). "Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God" (John 13:3).

The greatest work the Bible ascribes to Christ as the only Son of God is that of salvation. He is the world's only Redeemer. He is the only one who can forgive sin. But if He were not God He could have no power to make sinful men into the born-again children of God. It is Christ only who reaches down into the very depths of sin and raises a lost man up and places him into a state of eternal life, and keeps him in the way of the eternal as long as he is obedient and willing to be led and governed by Him.

As we close this meditation, I want us to think seriously about what we have read above and about how we will treat Him in the future. The period we keep in memory of His coming to the world almost two thousand years ago is upon us. If Christ is really God, is it not fitting that we think and act as if we are remembering His greatness and His goodness, as well as His severity? "Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off" (Romans 11:22).

If Christ be God He deserves to be worshiped as God. I believe that the wrath of God will be meted out to these who change the thinking of young minds from that of the lovely Christ child, given to the world as its only Saviour and Lord, to a bunch of pagan myths, which are designed to take away all the glory and praise the world owes Him.

If Christ be God, He certainly has the right to claim the homage due Him from His people. Consider:

"Jesus is worthy to receive
Honor and power divine;
And blessings more than we can give,
Be, Lord, forever thine.

"Let all who dwell above the sky,
And in earth, and air, and seas,
Conspire to raise thy glories high,
And spread thine endless praise."

Then there is another verse that tells how terrible He will be to those who reject His overtures to accept His grace: "How will their hearts endure

The terrors of that day,
When earth and heaven before his face
Astonished shrink away!"

But to the humble and obedient He says: ". . . him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37).

Someone has said, "Thanksgiving is a joyous exercise—the pleasantest of duties." Let us be engaged therein, not only on a special day, but throughout the year, each day of our lives.

MISSIONS

Matthew
18:19, 20

REPORT OF THE LANIERS' ITINERARY

by James L. Lanier

We would like to express our sincere thanks and appreciation for your kindness and help towards us while we were in North Carolina.

We feel that you, as a group, now understand better what we are doing here in Mexico. Our work here is doing very well. When we returned home, we undertook two other mission stations in addition to our mission here in Nogales, Sonora. We are now holding services in our mission here, as well as in Cananea and Buena Vista, Sonora, Mexico. All these services are doing very well.

There is so much work here to do for the Lord, that the few we have here cannot possibly do it all. God does not expect a few people to do all of His work. But He expects each one to do his part. Remember to pray for us and all of the mission work at home or here in Mexico.

We urge you to keep on supporting missions and your missionaries, and to do all you can to further the kingdom of God. This is what He expects of you.

Please send all gifts and offerings, designated for the purpose which you have intended it, to: The North Carolina State Board of Missions, c/o the Rev. A. B. Bryan, P. O. Box 308, Ayden, North Carolina 28513.

MISSION DIRECTOR A. B. BRYAN URGES SUPPORT TO THE MISSION PROGRAM

At the 1964 sitting of the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists in Wilson, North Carolina, a total budget of $50,000 was accepted for missions; $31,704 for foreign and Mexico; $8,900 for North Carolina State Convention missions; and $9,396 for general operation, expansion, promotion, and supplies.

The recommended monthly budget is $4,166. If we operate on our recommended budget, we will only meet the minimum demand which is upon us.

We must meet the budget or reduce some of our present obligations. Please be aware that this is the minimum we needed for this year to meet the demand.

The first three months' income, including the special offering at the State Convention mission rally, has been slightly less than $10,000. This will not work if we are to profess to be mission minded in the least and not be hypocritical.

I am convinced that part of this deficiency has been due to my illness and not being able to push the program as planned; however, our expenses have continued to go on. As many of you know, I hurt my back moving furniture out of the parsonage of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Kinston, North Carolina, and have been completely disabled since September 27, spending 27 days in Lenior Memorial Hospital in Kinston and on November 4 undergoing surgery to remove a ruptured disc.

At present I am able to ride short distances and do some driving, but the doctor says it will be two weeks or a month before I can return to active church work. It will be some time before full work is resumed.

USED CLOTHING NO LONGER SHIPPED FREE

The McClean Trucking Lines has notified Mission Director A. B. Bryan that no more used clothing will be shipped to Arizona-Mexico Missions without charge because there has been too much free express. From now on all used clothing may be shipped by any trucking line to Arizona-Mexico Missions, P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona, for approximately $4 per hundred pounds; and to Texas-Mexico Missions, P. O. Box 517, Eagle Pass, Texas, for about $2 per hundred pounds.

In the light of my not being able to push the mission work these first three months of the church year, we urge each church and minister to make a special effort to keep funds in to meet our budget. If the budget is not met, we will be forced to curtail some of our obligations in mission work. We are hoping to get back to normal promotional work by the middle of December.

Please, ministers and churches, make a special effort to meet the mission budget during this critical period. We have no large surplus to depend on, and there are more than thirty workers on the field depending on us for support. Will we let them down? Will we say we cannot support them? Should we curtail part of our obligations, or should we make a unanimous effort to meet the demands? In the interest of souls we appeal to every church and minister to help us continue with the present interest in the mission cause. Unless we receive your support, we must curtail part of our committed obligations.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH MR. CRAIG?

A paper carried a news story about Mrs. Lila Craig, 81, who had not missed church attendance in 1045 Sundays—a perfect record for 20 years. We ask:

1. Doesn't Mrs. Craig ever have company on Sundays?
2. Doesn't she ever go anywhere on Saturday night so that she is too tired on Sunday morning?
3. Doesn't she ever have headaches, colds, nervous spells, tired feelings, poor breakfasts, sudden calls out of the city, business trips, Sunday picnics, family reunions?
4. Doesn't she ever sleep late on Sundays?
5. Doesn't she have any friends who invite her to go on a week-end trip?
6. Doesn't she ever read the Sunday paper?
7. Doesn't she ever get her feelings hurt by someone at church?
8. Doesn't it ever rain or snow in her town on Sunday?
9. Doesn't she ever become bored, or disgruntled, with the minister?
10. Doesn't she have a radio or TV set so that she can stay home and hear really good services?—Presbyterian Review.

News Notes

Chorus to Sing At Rain's Cross Roads

The fifty-voice Mount Olive College Chorus will give a program of Christmas music at Rain's Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Kenly, North Carolina, on Sunday afternoon, December 6, at 3:30. The Rev. N. D. Wiggs, pastor of the church, and the congregation invite all Free Will Baptist churches in the area and other interested persons to attend this program.

Special Service at Shady Grove, December 6

The Rev. D. P. McFarland will speak at Shady Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 5, Dunn, North Carolina, in the morning service, December 6, 1964. Mr. McFarland is the executive director of the Christian Action League of North Carolina. The Christian Action League is an organization that is dedicated to finding the solution to the problems created by the use of beverage alcohol. The church and the pastor, the Rev. Walter Reynolds, invite everyone to attend this special service.

OBITUARIES

MRS. IRMA WILSON O'DONNELL

Mrs. Irma Wilson O'Donnell died at her home in St. Clair County near Ashville, Alabama, on October 22, 1964. Her funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Floyd Barber and the Rev. Amon Edge at the Pleasant Grove Free Will Baptist Church, and she was laid to rest in the Mt. Zion Cemetery. Her grandsons served as pallbearers.

Mrs. O'Donnell was born on January 13, 1889, the daughter of Robert Wallace Bruce Wilson and Callie Roddam Wilson. She was married to Mr. Daniel J. O'Donnell on December 16, 1906. She was a charter member of the Pleasant Grove Free Will Baptist Church and maintained an active interest in the church until her death. Her church and her family were her chief concerns in life, and no sacrifice was too great if it contributed to their welfare.

She is survived by her husband, Daniel J. O'Donnell; one daughter, Mrs. Ruth McKee; eight sons, Clarence, Alford, Louie, Earl, Carl, Marvin, Seldon, and Roy; eighteen grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren; four brothers; and two sisters.

Although nothing can fill the void created by her death, the memory of her love, her patience, and her faith brings comfort to those who grieve because of her death. Her life was an influence for good, and that influence yet lives and will continue to live.

AT CHILDREN'S HOME CHRISTMAS ACTIVITIES SCHEDULED

By M. L. JOHNSON, Superintendent

Final plans are being made for a very full and enjoyable schedule of Christmas activities here at the Children's Home. Several parties are planned for our children by church, civic, and fraternal groups. Following are some of the events which will be of general interest:

DELTA SIGMA PHI PARTY

On Sunday afternoon, December 13, the Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity of Atlantic Christian College will give their annual Christmas party for about thirty of our youngest children. This party, which is held in the fraternity home in Wilson and which has come to be an annual affair, is enjoyed very much by our children. Those who have attended in the past are looking forward to the party this year with eager anticipation.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD PARTY

The annual Woodmen of the World party is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Monday night, December 14. This party, which is made possible by the Head Camp of North Carolina through the cooperation of the local camps of the area, is under the supervision of Mr. W. A. Dunning, district manager of Bethel, North Carolina. The Ladies Court of the Bethel Camp, under the direction of Mrs. Mozelle Allen, also assists in the arrangements for this party.

Each year the Woodmen of the World makes a gift to the Home to be used by our children in addition to individual gifts, fruits, and Christmas goodies.

Members of the Woodmen of the World and friends of the Children's Home are invited to be present for this party.

FAMILY CHRISTMAS PARTY

One of the highlights of the Christmas season each year is our "Family Christmas Party." This event will be held this year on Wednesday night, December 16. During this party the gifts which have been sent in to the children by their sponsors — auxiliaries, etc.—are given out. Many members of the sponsoring groups attend this party and enjoy visiting their "adopted" child. During this party many of the children exchange gifts. This is the nearest to a "family" experience that it is possible for us to enjoy here. It means much to our children and staff.

Members of our sponsoring groups and friends of the Home are urged to attend this event this year.

CHRISTMAS VACATIONS

Arrangements are being made again this year for all our children to spend their Christmas vacation off campus. They will leave the Home on Friday evening, December 18, or Saturday morning, December 19, and will return on Sunday afternoon, December 27. Many of them will spend their vacation with their sponsor. Others will visit relatives or friends.

In addition to the above events, there will be many visits by church, civic, and fraternal groups of the area who will bring gifts and entertainment for our children. Various groups of our children will also be taken on trips to parties and entertainment planned for them by our friends.

While it is impossible to list all the many groups and individuals who remember our children in a special way each Christmas, we do wish to express

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment Six)

IT WOULD be hard to write a caption for this installment. It is our purpose to make it a sort of catch-up-the-lost-ends of things which have disturbed the fellowship of Free Will Baptists over the years, other than the ones already discussed, and which may have an effect on the future of Original Free Will Baptists.

We will endeavor to explore a bit a few questions asked from time to time.

What about doctrinal difference between the Original Free Will Baptists and other groups of Free Will Baptists over the country? Let us say to begin with that practically all the groups included in the National Association, and the groups that have withdrawn from the Association, use the same statements of faith in their treatises. By profession, then, we are in agreement. But in practice and in interpretations, differences have appeared from time to time.

Take feet washing for example. Almost all the Original Free Will Baptists hold strictly to feet washing as an ordinance of the church to be practiced in connection with the communion service regularly in the church. Many other groups are just as persistent in this faith. However, there are quite a number of Free Will Baptist churches in the west and north who do not practice feet washing as a part of the program of the church at all. This has made it rather difficult for the denominational program and lesson writers. When a writer comes out contending that feet washing is a vital and essential Free Will Baptist doctrine, and that all ought to practice it, he is immediately favored with letters reminding him that the National Association permits freedom in this matter, and that he ought to avoid positive assertions about it. On the other hand, let a writer recognize this freedom to practice or not practice feet washing and still be a Free Will Baptist in good standing, and he is deluded with warnings against "compromising an essential Free Will Baptist doctrine." Ministers who go from areas where the ordinance is observed into areas where it is not so practiced, or vice versa, find that there is a certain amount of embarrassment and dampening of fellowship.

Another doctrine over which there has been some contention and debate is the Second Coming of Christ. All subscribe to the faith that our Lord will "come again to close the gospel dispensation, glorify His saints, and judge the world"; but there are differences among us regarding events connected with His coming. Most Original Free Will Baptists are premillennialists—contending that the Lord will come to a world full of wickedness, will overthrow the wicked nations, bind the devil, and with His saints reign in righteousness for a thousand years over the earth. But many others either interpret the Scriptures referring to the "thousand years" as having a purely spiritual meaning, and do not look for an external or visual reign of Christ for a thousand years prior to the final judgment; or they are postmillennialists—contending that the world will first be made righteous by the power of the gospel and Christian influence, after which the Lord will return and reign for a thousand years with His saints. Again this has created a problem for program and lesson writers. There are those who hold to each of these theories who are ardent contenders that their interpretation constitutes the true Free Will Baptist faith regarding these matters.

has the doctrine of eternal security disturbed our fellowship through the years? This writer would answer, not to any great extent up to 1961. Very few Free Will Baptists have accepted the Calvinistic interpretation of this doctrine. When some years ago two young ministers of the Free Will Baptists were dealt with in Tennessee for preaching the doctrine, there was a wave of deep regret over it, because they were fine young men; but there was but little contention that the Tennessee brethren did wrong in the action taken. The biggest amount of disturbance over this doctrine has been since a minister and some of his church members in Durham, North Carolina, were accused in 1961 of adhering to, and giving encouragement to the propagation of, this doctrine. Many leaders in the original conferences of North Carolina felt that National Association leaders and others in the denomination should have withheld endorsement of, and support of, this minister and his church faction until the question of their orthodoxy was settled. On the other hand, many felt that the accusations were unjust. The matter has not yet been fully cleared up. It is the opinion of this writer that this question of doctrine alone would never have brought about serious division among Free Will Baptists, had it not been associated with other issues. One of the most disturbing things to many Original Free Will Baptists was the fact that some leaders and evangelists within the National Association in their testimony in connection with a Durham church trial appeared to express the opinion that belief in the doctrine of eternal security was not sufficient cause for disciplining a minister or a church. In the opinion of many, this seemed to indicate that the traditional position of Free Will Baptists on this point of doctrine was not essential or important.

What about the churches and ministers in North Carolina who left the original conferences of Free Will Baptist tists to go into new organizations? What are the prospects for the future with regard to relationships between them and the original conferences?

Let us note first of all that most of the churches which deflected did so over issues, or misunderstanding of issues, which they did not create. The members were told that their conferences had departed from the traditional principle of the independence of the local church in matters pertaining to its internal affairs, and they believed and acted upon what they were told. A harmonious settlement of the issues which they did not create would have much to do with future fellowship between them and the original conferences. In most cases, the only thing the conferences did about these churches was to declare them out of fellowship with the conference after they had taken steps to unite with other groups. Most of the conferences left the door wide open for their return, by passing resolutions requiring only that they reaffirm their acceptance of the discipline under which they had operated for many years prior to their deflection. The action taken toward ministers was similar. This writer knows of no minister being excluded from a conference until after he had taken actions to separate himself from the conference. So far as we know, every minister who asked for a letter before his departure, and against whom there were no charges affecting his standing, was granted a letter in good standing. Better understanding has caused several people in deflected churches to tell this writer that they would never have voted for their church to leave the old conference had they had the same understanding at the time the vote was taken. The fellowship is still good between most of the people in the deflecting churches and the churches still in the old conferences.

What effect did the departure of some of the North Carolina churches and ministers from the original conferences have upon the work in general throughout the state? Of course they were at a loss in the sense that their leaving left the original conferences with somewhere between 10,000 and 12,000 less book members over the state. But the simple truth is that there has been a better fellowship among the 40,000 or more Original Free Will Baptists remaining than there had been for some time. Perhaps it is equally true that the departing members have had a better fellowship. When there is chronic Walstonburg, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church met at the church Monday night, November 23, for its regular monthly meeting. The meeting opened at 7:30 with the group's singing "Fairest Lord Jesus." The president, Mrs. Raeford Heath, gave the devotional; and Mrs. John R. Murphy offered the prayer. There were thirty-nine members and seven visitors present.

During the business session the roll was called; also the roll of the circles was called with each reporting. The AFC division within a family, it is usually best that they not try to all live under the same roof. So far as support for the North Carolina denominational program is concerned, the loss was but little. Most of the churches departing had become almost exclusive supporters of the national program before the rupture—many of them some years before. Division within an organization always causes discouragement. There was a period during which many North Carolina Free Will Baptists were rendering meager and misgiving support to both the state and national programs. Since those who were so radically opposed to the North Carolina program departed, those left behind have become more loyal and liberal in their support for the state institutions and projects. It appears also that those left have become more ardent in their support of the national program. The casualties of division in North Carolina have been mostly in the rupture of fellowship, the breaking up of friendships of many years, some bitterness that only time can heal, and some strained relationships within family circles. Original Free Will Baptists have suffered but little from loss of strength otherwise.

(Next week we shall endeavor to explore as unbiased as possible the things for and against a restoration of the relationship of Original Free Will Baptists with the National Association.)

chairman reported that this group was memorializing a pew in the church, with $87.10 of this amount coming from the recent barbecue sale they held. Mrs. Jimmie Taylor reported that there were nineteen boxes of used clothing packed and shipped to the Arizona-Mexico Missions. Mrs. John W. Harrell and Mrs. Frank Harris were appointed to purchase a Christmas gift for the auxiliary's adopted boy at the Children's Home. A number of other items of business were disposed of during the business period.

The program for November, "Blueprints for Victory," was presented in a very impressive manner by the Friendship Circle. Several small children dressed as different nationalities of the world sang two songs appropriate to the program. Mrs. Frank L. Walston brought a Thanksgiving message as a part of the program. "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow" was sung as a benediction.

Bear Grass, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of the Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church held its November meeting in the home of Mrs. Ella Faye Rogerson on Thursday, November 19. There were twelve members present. The meeting opened with the group's singing "Revive Us Again." Mrs. Annie Cratt read for the Scripture lesson Psalm 19, followed with the group's praying together the Lord's Prayer. The program, "Blueprints for Victory," was given by Mrs. Fessie Bailey. Mrs. Faye Williams prayed the closing prayer.

The hostess served delicious refreshments.

BROKEN HOMES

Several time for the past several months we have been called to homes where discord of one nature or another had broken the friendship and shipwrecked the home. There was a cause, but sometimes each party is reluctant to tell the cause that has wrecked the peace of the home. One party wants to place all the blame on the other party. In almost every case one party placed all the blame on the opposite party; but when sifted down to the truth in about ninety percent of the cases, both were in the wrong.

Some of these are very young people, people who married as teen-agers. Sometimes we find that the life and activities lived before marriage was and is the trouble. Perhaps the marriage was performed to hide illicit courtship. Sometimes the trouble is religion; sometimes high, uncontrollable temper; sometimes wild parties when liquor is plentiful; and sometimes that they were too young to get married. These are some causes, but with every cause there is an effect. There is the sowing and the reaping.

There is another cause for separation; it is a lack of love. In almost every marriage ceremony there is something like this that is asked and accepted and answered in the affirmative: "Will you (or Do you) promise to love, cherish, and keep in sickness and in health, and forsake all others until death do you part?" Both parties are asked this question, and they always say yes. In the midst of the confusion which brings trouble and separation, the question is asked, Was it love or was it lust?

To my mind, we have the solution to or, better, a prevention of the problems recorded in the Word of God as follows: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? . . ." (2 Corinthians 6:14-16).

I know it to be true that a fine young lady who was a loyal church member accepted the company of a young man who was not a Christian, and this young man would go with her to church. She could not cross the street without his giving her a helping hand. Finally they were married according to the laws of man; and after a few months this infidel said to the girl, "Church going has got to be cut out." But she refused to go back on the vows to her church, and this infidel made it so hard for the young wife that they separated. The life of this young woman was made very hard, but she stuck to her church and to her God. I have known other similar cases.

A young lady said to me some years ago, "Mr. Griffin, it looks like I am to remain an old maid. Could anything be worse?" I said, "Yes." She asked, "What?" I said, "To be married to a good for nothing, ungodly sinner." Let me repeat. Christians should not marry infidels; I mean unbelievers. I mean it from the depths of my heart. I have known Christian girls to marry drunkards, but they came to a sad end of life; and in many instances little children were brought into the world that suffered for food and clothing and knew nothing of Christian education. Though there have been exceptions, they are very few. I have known a few Christian wives to lead their unsaved husbands to a knowledge of Christ, but often it goes the other way.

NOT ONLY THE YOUNG

I find that it is not only the teen-agers who have trouble in the matrimonial relationship. We hear of the marriages of those who have lived together for years going "on the rocks." In some cases forty and fifty-year-old husbands and wives go sex crazy and separate, often after several grandchildren have appeared; and often a divorce takes place.

A SAD AFFAIR

Years ago I visited a home where filth and dirt were prevalent. Clothing was very much worn. The floor and everything around showed a filthy condition. What was the trouble? It was the reality of being unqually yoked together.

Often we find in such cases that by being unequally yoked together, the people allow sin to take over because the one who loves the pleasures of sin and ungodly living pulls the one who loved and served God down. Of course, there are instances when a real devout Christian wife leads her ungodly husband to the Lord. But it is a dangerous procedure for a Christian to start out with an infidel, such as I have seen in my day. On the other hand, sometimes a young man who is Christian gets tangled up with a girl who has been reared in an ungodly home and has had all the pleasures of sin and is filled with worldliness; and if this little butterfly cannot pull that husband down to her level, there is a separation and a final divorce.

I knew of a case of that nature. A Christian young man got involved with a real high society, sin-soaked girl. The young man was a son of poor parents. The girl was the daughter of a very rich family. The salary of the poor husband could not reach the heights of wealth; so according to evidence, the young wife began to run out on her poor husband; they separated and finally were divorced. The marriage vows were no longer sacred. They were "unequally yoked together."

Young people who are the offspring of poor parents, in general, are flirting with Satan when they marry the rich. It is a serious mistake to be unequally yoked together, financially, religiously, and often politically. Better seek your equals when seeking marriage.

LET US TALK ABOUT SOMETHING ELSE

I was over at Ayden a few days ago, and my heart was thrilled to see and hear those wonderful machines at the Press turning out needful literature, and to notice how the workers were with much ease and pleasure going about the workings of the institution.

As I watched the operation, my mind ran back to the days when we had just one press and had to operate the paper cutter by hand. My hands would get very sore from pushing that lever back and forth. There were nights about the end of each quarter when we often worked until midnight, and sometimes later, in order to get the literature off. Just before each fifth Sunday we divide our responsible workers up in assignments to visit the union meetings, not primarily to get more business, but to get money to operate business and to purchase needed presses to produce more literature.

While we worked toward that end,

QUESTIONS On what day does the Sabbath come? What does the Bible require of us Christians regarding this day? Some that I have heard speak say that it is on the seventh day of the week and others say they are not sure what day it is on.—Mrs. I. Cornell, Thomasville, Georgia.

Jesus himself often resorted to the temple or synagogue on the Sabbath Day; and when He had ascended into heaven, His disciples followed His example in going there, but their purpose, as well as His, seems without question to have been that of meeting with the Jews where they were afforded the opportunity of witnessing to them in behalf of Jesus Christ and His kingdom. I have known Christian workers of our day to go to synagogues to pass out tracts and witness on Saturday just simply because that was a time when the most Jews could be reached with the gospel. Furthermore, I have known such Christians to go to world, state, and county fairs and to movie theaters for no other purpose than that of taking advantage of the assembled crowd to bring to them the message of salvation.

In John 5:9 Jesus was criticized by the Jews for ordering the man He had healed in 5:8 to carry his bed on the Sabbath Day; and in 5:18 we read that these Jews proceeded to stone Him, a thing that Moses in the law required of them when a person entered into such activities on the Sabbath Day.

This Sabbath, don't forget, was the period of time that began at sunset in Palestine on the sixth day of the week or as the sixth day ended and the seventh began. It could not, even then, have been kept as the law required 1,000 miles from there; for it must begin exactly at sunset on the sixth day in Palestine. The sun does not set at the same time in Persia or Babylon or Assyria as in Palestine, so the Jews must remain in the land to be an obedient Jew to all the precepts of the law. Hence the Levitical Sabbath was a peculiar day to be kept in a peculiar land by a peculiar people, the Hebrews. (See Psalm 137:1-4.)

Israel could not obey the law in a strange land. She was allowed under the direction of special writing to serve the Lord in spite of the fact that she should be captive in strange lands because of her disobediences; and she was given full assurance that when she became obedient and had served the time sentence imposed upon her for that disobedience that took her into captivity, she would be restored to her own land where she could enjoy full fellowship among all her kind and with the Lord himself. This obedience away from home could not be like that in her land from which she had been sent because of disobedience. They must, of course, maintain the same high moral standards as when in Palestine; otherwise the judgments of the law would be severely exercised against them for such violations. The thing they could not do and that which was not required of them as immigrants was carrying out the ceremonial law.

They had several specific requirements that were required of them while strangers, and one was that they pray three times daily facing Jerusalem. Daniel observed this requirement and was both cast in the lions' den by the strange government and delivered by God from its harm. The Jews were forbidden to worship idols under any circumstances. When this was required by Daniel's three companions and they refused, they were thrown into a fiery furnace; but God delivered them unharmed and unhurt. The eleventh chapter of Hebrews tells us about many who, for their loyalty to the law and their witness for Christ, suffered martyrdom without receiving any acclaim from their fellow servants; but the same chapter tells us that they are to have eternal rewards.

Now we have a new covenant, the one not like the old under which the Jews served, with the Jew on one end and God on the other; but one in which Christ appears at one end and God the Father at the other. Christ is our mediator of a better covenant, our go-between, between us as sinners and God as He who has been sinned against. God is the one whose wrath is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold His truth in unrighteousness. He is the angry and offended God that must be appeased, and Christ in His death on the Cross is the only sacrifice that can appease Him. Therefore, we must come to Him in Christ or not at all. God now judges us not according to how we have kept the Old Testament law, but according to our attitude toward His only begotten Son who fulfilled (filled full) the law in our behalf. (See John 3:36; 16:31.) Jesus filled full what would otherwise have been a meaningless law, that which we could not and the Jews did not keep except by faith in Christ shown in their observance of the ceremonial laws. These pointed to and reminded them of the incarnation which of course included His incarnate works; such as, the virgin birth, death, resurrection, ascension, His now high priestly work, and His coming again. For example, we are told by Jesus that Abraham saw His day and was glad. Moses tells us that God was to raise Himself up a prophet like unto Moses and that the people will give heed to Him.

Sabbath Day observance along with the Passover, the year of jubilee, the first-fruits, etc., were reminders that He of whom Moses wrote should come fulfilling all the requirements that God's justice and righteousness demanded of worshippers.

We, under the new covenant, are required to observe certain ordinances such as baptism, the Lord's Supper, and feet washing. These are reminders. Matthew 28:18-20 teaches that more followers of Christ should be made by those who are now followers through the preaching we are commissioned to do. John 13 and 1 Timothy 5:10 teaches that we are to wash one another's feet because Jesus washed the disciples, and 1 Corinthians 11:23-39 teaches that we should observe the Lord's Supper to remind us Christ has died and that this should continue until He comes. It also suggests how to observe that supper.

THE MISSING STAMPS

Delnora M. Erickson

LAURA knew she was wrong when she took Paul's stamp album to show Janet. Paul was particular about all his things but the stamp album was his pride and joy. Their uncle sent many foreign stamps to Paul, and Laura watched during the evenings as he carefully mounted them with the little paper hinges. When Janet bragged about her brother's stamp collection the temptation was too great.

"I bet Paul's collection isn't half as good as Mike's," said Janet. "Father has a lot of friends who save stamps for him."

Laura tiptoed into Paul's room. The album was on his desk where he had been working on it the evening before. Carefully she lifted it and carried it into her own room. She laid it on her bed and turned the pages so Janet could see the stamps.

"Say, is it ever nice!" exclaimed Janet. "You know, I think he has more stamps than Mike. His big foreign stamps are super."

Laura beamed with pride. She adored her older brother, even though he thought young sisters were a nuisance. She carried the book back to the place where she got it, and soon she and Janet were talking about other things and the stamp album was forgotten.

Laura wanted to tell Janet how she came to know the Lord recently, but she hadn't found the courage. When Janet said wistfully that she wanted to go to Sunday school, but her folks were not interested in taking her, it seemed to be the right opening.

"Three weeks ago I gave my heart to Jesus," said Laura. "Miss Atkinson, my Sunday school teacher, told me how. I'll ask my father if we can go around and get you Sunday morning." The ringing of the telephone reminded Janet that she was to be home by four. Quickly she said good-by and hurried down the street.

As soon as supper was over, and she had helped with the dishes, Laura got out her books to do her homework. She was in the middle of a page of arithmetic when she heard an angry yell from her brother's room.

"Who was messing with my stamp album? My South American stamps are missing!" Laura felt all trembly inside. She couldn't remember seeing the envelope of new stamps, but she was sure she hadn't lost any. A minute later he was looking down at her sternly. Paul had never seemed so tall or so formidable.

"Were you in my room?"

Laura nodded.

"Can't you ever learn?" he raised his voice. "Mother, Laura lost some of my best stamps."

Laura didn't know what to say to defend herself. Her mother came in from the kitchen, wiping her hands on a towel as she came.

"Did you touch Paul's stamps, Laura?" There was a tone of sadness in her mother's voice that Laura couldn't bear. She burst into tears. Their mother looked from one to the other.

"Are you sure the stamps are missing, Paul?"

"I put the envelope from Uncle Dan in the book last night. Now it's gone. I've looked all around my desk. It just isn't there."

"I'm sure I didn't lose the stamps," said Laura. "I was just showing them to Janet. I know we didn't lose any."

"So Janet was in on it, too," said Paul. "Mike is always bragging about how many stamps he has. I'm sure she swiped them to give to him."

"Paul, don't say such a thing!" said his mother sternly.

"I'm going to find out," said Paul grimly.

"Paul," said his mother quietly, "you better look pretty carefully through your own things before you make snap judgments."

But he was too angry to listen. He stamped out of the house.

"I'm sorry," said Laura. "I never meant to lose his things."

"Did you carry the book to your own room?"

Laura nodded.

"Then let's look in there," said her mother.

Laura was grateful for the help, but all their looking didn't bring the package of stamps to light.

All Paul would say when he returned was, "Of course, they wouldn't admit it if they had them."

Laura asked the Lord to forgive her when she said her prayers, but the whole thing still weighed heavily on her heart. She was sure she had lost her testimony for Paul. She was concerned about him knowing the Lord ever since her teacher had prayed with her and she had found such joy in her heart.

She had tried then to explain to him about how wonderful it was to be a Christian, but he had brushed her aside with the words, "I'm busy, sis. Maybe some other time." Since then he had been unusually impatient with her. Now he had an excuse for being angry with her and she didn't know how to straighten it out.

She offered him her allowance but all he would say was, "I don't want your money. Just leave my stuff alone after this!"

The thought that Janet might have taken the stamps loomed up like a specter between them. She didn't want to believe that her friend could have done such a thing. She remembered her promise to ask her father to take Janet to Sunday school with them. Janet was waiting for them.

"I want to give my heart to Jesus the way Laura did," she told the teacher. Laura waited after class while Miss Atkinson explained what being a Christian meant and prayed with Janet.

"Now she'll tell me if she took the stamps," thought Laura, but Janet said nothing about them. They were spending the afternoon together when Paul said to Janet. "What about my stamps?"

"What stamps?" Janet looked bewildered.

"He thinks you took his South American stamps to Mike," explained Laura.

"I didn't touch the stamps," she said. "Besides, I don't steal." Her face was flushed and there was an angry look in her eyes. Laura's heart ached over the whole situation. She didn't want her friend hurt and no one seemed to have the right answer about the missing stamps.

"I'm going to take my baby-sitting money and buy him some new stamps," she told her friend.

"But you've been saving that for dress material so we could make dresses alike."

"I know," said Laura, "but it's more important that Paul comes to know the Lord. I don't want to be a stumbling block. Besides, I shouldn't have touched his book."

Laura had to wait a week before she had a chance to go downtown to the stamp store. In the meantime Paul seemed more put out with her than ever. Most of the time he ignored her completely.

Laura and Janet studied the stamps on display. She didn't know which ones were lost so she picked out the prettiest ones she could find from South America. It took all the money she had in her purse.

"What did you do that for?" asked Paul angrily, when she gave him the stamps.

"I'm sorry I touched your book," said Laura. "More than anything, Paul, I want you to give your heart to Jesus. My Sunday school teacher says Jesus may come back soon for His people. I couldn't bear not having you go with us to meet Him in the air."

Paul turned away without saying anything and Laura Spread her books on the dining room table to study. She was struggling with some hard problems when she looked up in surprise to see Paul standing by the table.

"Need some help with that?" he asked.

Laura couldn't believe her ears.

"I guess what I really wanted to say is that I'm sorry. You didn't lose my stamps in the first place, although I thought you had. Last week I found them in a drawer where I must have put them. After the way I acted I didn't want to tell you. When you used your own money and bought me stamps you made me feel terribly ashamed. I remembered how badly you wanted me to become a Christian. I will give the Lord my heart if you tell me how you did it."

Laura's eyes were shining with unshed tears as she hurried to her room for her Bible.

"My Sunday school teacher showed me these verses," she said, as she turned to the first one.

"'All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God,'" read Paul.

"That's Romans 3:23," said Laura. "The next one is Isaiah 53:6.

"'All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.'"

"They sure fit me all right," said Paul. "Now I guess you're going to show me John 3:16, aren't you? I know that one: 'For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believed in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

"That's right," said Laura, "and John 5:24: 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.'"

"It's sort of like going down a path through a gate, isn't it?" said Paul. "On one side of the gate we're all sinners. On the other side we have everlasting life."

"That's because Jesus is the gate," said Laura. "As soon as we believe in Him as Saviour we're on the other side. Do you want to give Him your heart now?"

"Right now," said Paul, after he had read the verses once more. The house seemed unusually quiet as they knelt in the living room of the house and Paul gave his heart to the Lord. Laura could feel her own heart pounding. She didn't know when she had ever been happier.

"There's one more thing," said Paul, as he got up from his knees. "I'll pay you for the stamps, sis."

Laura shook her head. "It's worth all the baby-sitting money in the world to know you gave Jesus your heart."

"I'm a lot more fortunate than I deserve," said Paul, as he started back to his room. He turned once more at the door and said, "You're a good little soul winner, sis, but I'm better at math than you are, so if you need help holler."

But Laura's thoughts were a long way away from her math book. She was quietly thanking the Lord for answering her prayers.—My Delight.

GET THE HABIT

Are you in the habit of saying "Thank you" to friends and others who do nice things for you? How rewarding are thankful words! They bring joy and encouragement to others.

A man said to a postman who brought the mail, "Thank you!" A friend, hearing him, asked, "Why did you say 'Thank you' to the postman? He is paid to bring you the mail, and sometimes he seems displeased to do it." "Why did I say, 'Thank you' to the postman? I thanked him not because of the kind of person he is, but because of the kind of person I am!"

FOR DECEMBER 13

BROTHERS IN CHRIST

LESSON TEXT: Philemon 8-21

MEMORY VERSE: Galatians 3:28

I. INTRODUCTION

We now come to the last lesson for this quarter concerning Paul's Pastoral Epistles. Lessons 12 and 13 are taken from the Book of Matthew and are concerned with the Christmas story.

The Book of Philemon ranks unique among Paul's letters and even in the New Testament. It is Paul's shortest letter; yet, it is filled with meaning and purpose. Like the letters to Timothy and Titus, it is written to one individual, but is it more personal than the former. It is written to one individual in behalf of another. The two people involved are Philemon, the master, and Onesimus, the slave.

Philemon lived in the city of Colosse. He was a person of notable wealth. He was converted under Paul's ministry. It is likely that Paul wrote the letter during his first imprisonment at Rome and sent it to Philemon along with his letters to the Ephesians and Colossians. Either directly or indirectly, there are several of the doctrines and precepts of Christianity contained in it. If nothing more, it reveals the good and practical effects of Christianity. We see how an unprofitable slave is made profitable because of his acceptance of Christ.—Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Although Paul had a right in Christ to command Philemon, he entreated him (v. 8).

2. The apostle's appeal was based on three things: his age, his being a prisoner of Christ, and Onesimus' conversion (vv. 9, 10).

3. The conversion of Onesimus changed him from an unprofitable slave to a profitable servant (v. 11).

4. Although Paul could have retained Onesimus as his servant, he sent him back to his master (vv. 12, 13).

5. Paul would not exercise any right or authority without the full consent of Philemon (v. 14).

6. The slave's escape was turned into a blessing to both him and his master (vv. 15, 16).

7. Paul asked that Philemon give Onesimus the same consideration that he would give him (v. 17).

8. The apostle, in a sense, became a type of Christ as he offered to pay the slave's account (v. 18).

9. Paul wanted Philemon to grant forgiveness for Onesimus on the basis of the principle of love, rather than from the standpoint of duty (v. 19).

10. A decision made on the basis of love would enrich Philemon and bring joy to Paul (v. 20).—Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Onesimus was a slave. He had no freedom to do his own will. He must serve his master. Just as the bars of a jail restrain a man from freedom, so slavery took away a man's freedom. Onesimus, however, ran away, and became a Christian. This did not, of course, make his running away right. According to the law, he could be put to death. But since he was a Christian, and his master Philemon was a Christian, Paul appealed to the master to accept him as a brother.

Philemon and Onesimus were brothers in Christ, for as Paul said, "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus" (Galatians 3:28).

In Paul's world, as in ours, people recognized many differences. Some times people of one city hated those of another city. Slaves were regularly bought and sold. Race, color, occupation — anything might cause dislike and ill treatment. Such treatment was no stranger to Jesus himself, or to Paul as His follower. But Paul stressed the fact that in Christ "there is neither Jew or Greek, there is neither bond nor free."

Centuries of Christianity have passed, but we need his words as much today as Philemon needed them then. When a man is brother in Christ, no matter his race, nationality, or occupation, we must accept him as such, gladly, for he has "put on Christ" just as we have.

In a sense the bars cover the lives of all who are outside of Christ. Man will never have freedom while he is imprisoned by sin. But Jesus offers to make all men free. And all become spiritual brothers who have accepted Jesus as Saviour and find freedom in Him.—Standard Commentary.

2. "For love's sake I rather beseech thee, . . ."

A sinful, degraded woman was being led from a police court. She sobbed with hopeless distress. A Christian woman moved by the compassion of Christ, spoke kindly to her and kissed her on the cheek. The Christlike act deeply impressed the sinful woman. No one, excepting her mother who had long since died, had shown her such love. The Christian woman visited her in the detention home and won her to the Saviour, who is a Friend of outcasts.

"I beseech thee for my son Onesimus, . . ."

How Christlike we are when we believe in and sponsor those who have erred and failed!

Some years ago, in a St. Louis murder trial, the young criminal said, "My father always said I was no good. Mother said I'd never amount to anything. The school teachers told me I was no account. Even my own home town never expected me to be anything but a criminal. I always wondered why, for, as far as I could see, I was just like other boys, only a bit more independent. The only creature that ever believed in me and understood me was my dog. When he died, I became a bum!" How tragic! This boy received no Christlike interest, support, and nurture.

"Not now as a servant, but, . . . a brother beloved, . . ."

When the Prince of Wales visited India there were a number of high caste people waiting to shake his hand. There was a barrier separating them from the masses. The Prince commanded, "Take that barrier down." It was removed and anyone who wished to greet him had free access to him. When the Prince visited India years later, thousands of outcasts were gathered under the banner inscribed, "The Prince of the Outcasts."

In Christ there is no caste or class.

Those who have received Him are "one in Christ Jesus" (Galatians 3:28).—Bible Expositor.

3. "When we think of Onesimus, we see him seeking after the lure of the world until he is engulfed in its meshes. Had it not been for God's grace, he had never been recovered.

"We are reminded of this story:

"A party of men were traveling in Tibet. One of them became very thirsty, but there was no water. As they went on they saw some pools surrounded by marshy ground, where the thirsty man determined to quench his thirst. Those who knew the nature of the country begged him to wait until they should reach a safe place, but he would not listen, and said he would take care. He plunged ahead towards a pool and filling his hands began to drink. He called to his friends to tell them he had got his heart's desire, and even as he spoke he began to sink in the morass. Soon he was half buried and no one could venture near to draw him out, and his companions looked helplessly on as he sank, and at length he disappeared, perishing as so many do who drink water of a sinful life. There is but one Water of everlasting life (John 4:14)." — Neighbor, Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

4. Paul's letter to Philemon is one of the most beautiful Epistles in the New Testament. It is an appeal on behalf of the runaway slave Onesimus, based on the Christian principle of love. Paul urged that when Onesimus returned he be accepted by his master as a brother in Christ. The letter introduces us to Christian brotherhood. It is based not on wealth or status, but on being a member of the household of faith.

The Church is constituted of many people of different races, tongues and color. All have been created by the same God, redeemed by the same Christ, and made to sit at the same communion table in the fellowship with their Lord.

The wrath of Jesus was vented on those who set up barriers to wholesome human contacts. He acknowledged no such barriers of race, nationality, creed, sex or age. The parable of the good Samaritan (Luke 10:30-37) glorifies a man from a hated race. He did not refuse to heed the cry of the Syrophenician woman because she was a Gentile (Mark 7:26). He gratefully received the homage of the Roman centurion (Matthew 8:5-13). Some think it was a dark-skinned man, the Cyrenian (Mark 15:21), who carried the cross of Jesus when He fainted under its heavy weight.

Compassion is a wonderful Christian virtue. An old man was passing along a street when he observed a group of children, all crying lustily. He inquired of one of the lads what the trouble was and was told, "We all have a pain in Bill's stomach." Those children were learning to share!

How different Christianity is from other religions! The Brahmans deny the unity of the human race, acknowledging no responsibility for the care of others. Hinduism is the most cruelly neglectful of all religious systems. Buddhists are kind toward insects, but cruel to their own people! Only Christ welcomes as brothers all those who come to Him in trusting faith.—Senior Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

there were those who called themselves Free Will Baptists who were "at ease in Zion" as far as the Ayden Publishing Company was concerned. Then the named was changed to the Free Will Baptist Press, "a non-profit sharing institution" with all surplus earning to be used for Christian and benevolent purposes at the discretion of the board of directors. There is a very small number of people living who know why and by whom that phrase was placed in the charter. But thank God for the Holy Spirit who led to that decision. From that day the cause began to pick up, and we are proud of our Free Will Baptist Press. Yes, we had a lot to thank God for this 1964 Thanksgiving. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

ably before it could be done. Much shame and reproach can result before it will be able to do so.

In the present development program a chapel is included. Are we going to wait until all other facilities are provided before the chapel becomes a reality? Needless to say, only eternity can reveal the loss which will be sustained should this be the case.

The membership of Mount Olive church is small and will probably grow in proportion to the growth of the college, and as such the need for immediate help is imperative.

Provisions have been made by which Free Will Baptist students coming to Mount Olive may become associate members of the church. This plan does not interfere with their church affiliation back home, but furnishes a channel of service while here and also aids in their spiritual needs. Since this plan is working, pastors and parents will do well to advise their young people coming to the college to take advantage of it.

It would be unfair to the church in Mount Olive to close this article without letting it be known that the church is a sacrificing group. The various denominational enterprises are not overlooked, but support of all our institutions are shared and probably beyond that of the average well-established church. Under the associate member plan, eleven of the present student body have already enrolled during the present semester. Others should and probably will soon.

Will you include Mount Olive church on your prayer list and visit us whenever you can?

LONG RIDGE FREE WILL BAPTIST CHURCH

Mount Olive, North Carolina

Pictured above is the Long Ridge Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Mount Olive, North Carolina. This church proves that when faith and works are combined much can be accomplished for the Lord. A remodeling program was completed in September after a period of constant effort on the part of all members. At the annual homecoming on fourth Sunday in October, the congregation witnessed a note-burning to signify that the church was debt free. The Rev. T. E. Jones, who is among the first and oldest of former pastors, delivered the homecoming message.

The Rev. Francis Garner is the present pastor. Long Ridge church was organized on October 6, 1919. During the years since, sixteen ministers have served the church.

Ten Years Ago in the 'Baptist'

The Rev. Willis Wilson of Bethel, North Carolina, passed the examination of the Ordaining Council of the Central Conference of North Carolina, December 9, and will be ordained as a Free Will Baptist minister on December 28, 1954, 7:30 p.m., at Sweet Gum Grove church near Stokes, North Carolina, with the Ordaining Council of the Central Conference in charge of the service.

The students of Mt. Allen Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, will present a Christmas program, "The Holy Night," December 17, at 7:30 p.m., in the college auditorium. This will be a full hour program of music and drama based on the biblical account of the birth of Jesus, and will be the first public presentation of the college.

Social Security Again Opened to Clergymen

Congress has once again granted an extension opening Social Security coverage for ministers. Clergymen who have been in the ministry for two years are eligible.

The new period of "grace" allows the clergyman until April 15, 1965, to sign the required waiver which makes him a participant in the Social Security program.

The clergyman now signing the waiver must pay the Social Security tax on his income for the years 1962 and 1963. Tax for the year 1964 will be due April 15, 1965.

Those who are interested in joining the Social Security should contact their District Director of the Internal Revenue Service immediately and obtain waiver forms and instructions.

TRUE MARTYRS

This twentieth century has been classified in the pages of history as an enlightened age—an age of progress and advancement in every sphere of life. In spite of such observations, however, we still have to face the fact that the human race has not advanced too far after all. Millions are still groping amid the darkness and barbaric practices of heathenism. History records that such has been the case in every era.

Christendom has faced the opposition of these forces since its beginning almost two thousand years ago. To His disciples Jesus said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you" (John 15:18). Jesus also warned His followers of persecution that would come upon them. Let us be forever conscious of the fact that His warning is still in effect. The opposing forces have changed but little. There are still those who would destroy every Bible and church and kill all Christians if such were possible.

We do have to turn back the pages of history to the days of the Roman arena, or to the days of the inquisition, to read of those who have died as martyrs for Jesus' sake. The Red Chinese take-over in China some fifteen years ago resulted in persecution and death for many missionaries. Even today many are held captive by the Communists. Persecution has also existed in parts of South America during recent years. Since the Communist take-over in Cuba, missionaries have been forced to leave for fear of their lives. Others have been cruelly shot or imprisoned. The world will long remember the death of five missionaries at the hands of the fierce Auca Indians of Equador a few years ago.

More recently the Christian world was shocked and stunned beyond measure over the martyrdom of missionaries in the Congo. Among those who were massacred on the streets of Stanleyville was Dr. Paul Carlson, a true martyr for Christ, who was machine-gunned to death on November 24. All who knew him recognized his love for Christ and his desire "to spread abroad the fragrance of the knowledge of Christ."

Miss Ann Berg, an associate of Dr. Carlson's who left Africa late in September and is now in Oakland, California, stated: "Paul willingly went with rebel forces because they needed him to treat their wounded. He was a dedicated, kindly man. We told ourselves then that if anyone could get along with the rebels it would be Paul."

True faith was also exemplified on the part of Dr. Carlson's family. A brother, Dr. Dwight Carlson, is reported to have said: "We prayed as a family for his life; but prayed also that God's will would be done. Despite the emotion and tears that welled up in our hearts, we were reminded of a statement our mother made many years ago, that God had given her each of her children and she and Dad committed them to God to use as He saw fit. We feel He has done this in this incident." Dr. Carlson was a medical missionary of the Evangelical Covenant Church.

There were also at least two other Protestant missionaries killed. They were Joseph W. Tucker of Portland, Oregon, and Miss Phyllis Rine of Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Tucker was an Assembly of God missionary. Miss Rine was affiliated with the African Christian Mission of Cincinnati. It is reported that Mr. Tucker was cruelly beaten for forty-five minutes—until he expired.

These, and the thousands of others who have given their lives for the sake of the gospel of Christ, have not died in vain. God's will and providence is not always easily discerned, but it is always there. Perhaps someday the Simbas of Africa will come to the knowledge of Christ, just as many of the Aucas of Equador have come to know Him.

"And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, . . . and they lived and reigned with Christ . . ." (Revelation 20:4).

DO YOU REALLY WANT TO LIVE IN HEAVEN?

by Joe Barrow
Snow Hill, North Carolina

“... To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God” (Revelation 2:7).

WELL BORN-AGAIN believers in Christ have the promise of spending eternity with God. We are told in the Scriptures that such an eternal life with God will be characterized by much happiness and satisfaction. In the account of Adam and Eve before their fall, we are shown how much they enjoyed their fellowship with God.

Today, Christians should be longing for that time when they too might enjoy a fellowship with their Creator. This desire should be the most important longing that we have in our hearts, minds, or consciences.

Now, if we are longing to enjoy such a fellowship with God in heaven, it is only reasonable and logical that we should love all those things pertaining to God that are here on earth. We should love His creation—the universe, the earth, the plant life, the animal life, and especially our fellow human beings. Our love for these should culminate in the love for God’s services, His ordinances, and His righteous way of life

The Rev. Joe Barrow was ordained to the gospel ministry about a year ago. At the present, he is attending East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina. He is serving as pastor of Walnut Creek church, LaGrange, and Fremont church, Fremont.

The Free Will Baptist

through His Son, Jesus Christ. Furthermore, this desire should create in us an interest in learning the mysteries of the gospel.

I ask you, Do you want to live with God in eternity? Do you want to live with God because of your love for Him, or is it because of your fear of hell? Let us use one small mirror to show just how much we really love God. Let us first consider church attendance.

How can a person say that he loves the Lord and desires to live with Him in heaven when he dislikes to go to church? (This applies to all church services.) Does one really love the Lord when all the time he is in church his desire is for the service to be over and he thinks of other things rather than of the Lord?

Do you long for the next service in God’s house? Do you long to learn about the gospel truths? Do you love to read and study your Bible? Do you love your talk with God in prayer? Do you love to be around Christian people?

It is very evident that the majority of people would have to answer “no” to most of the above questions. You can know the answer by checking the church attendance records, by checking the number of people who do not stay for the worship services after Sunday school, by checking the number of people who do not return for the evening worship service, or by checking the number of people who do not attend the prayer meeting services.

We have considered man’s ways, or methods of checking; now let us go deeper and consider God’s way. God checks by your desire to attend church, your love for the services, your thoughts while you are in His house as well as your everyday thoughts, your love for studying His Word, your love for being in the presence of fellow Christians, your love and satisfaction found in righteous living, and your love for saints as well as the souls of sinners.

My friends, when will you awaken to the truth? You say that you believe that man has an eternal existence. Well, what is going to happen to you when your body dies and you are suddenly thrust into eternity? If you go to heaven, you will have to exist with God and His holiness forever and ever.

Based upon church attendance today, the true answer to these questions would be that a majority of church members would be miserable in heaven. My friends, I do not think that God will let that happen. I believe those people who are miserable and discontented in God’s services will not be permitted to a life in heaven. Where then?

Only those who love the Lord and His ways and submit their wills to His will can live with God on high. How is your love for those things pertaining to God and His holiness? Don’t think that you can completely readjust your attitude and love after death. Preparation must be now if you are to reach that promised land.

“Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets” (Matthew 22:35-40).

Our hearts respond at Christmastime to the birth of One who was called Immanuel, which means “God with us.” On Easter morning we shall proclaim that He is risen. But on Good Friday we feel our lives undergirded with the faith that nothing that life can do to us will ever be able to separate us from God in Christ. We cry out deep within our beings, “Father, into thy hands we commit our spirits.” — Gerald Kennedy in He Speaks From the Cross (Fleming H. Revell Company).

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

THE INCARNATION

"And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1:14).

The above are the words of John, the beloved apostle. He told us a great deal about the incarnation and virgin birth of Christ. But as we consider all the beautiful truths concerning this great subject, we cannot fully understand how these things can be. The words of the angel to Mary concerning her cousin Elisabeth, "For with God all things are possible," should be cause for each of us to have explicit faith in God and to accept all His word and working for our redemption.

Realizing the mystery of the things God had done, Paul wrote to Timothy, "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory" (I Timothy 3:16). It is a great truth of the highest importance to the Christian, that the God in whom he trusts did come to visit our world, and was manifested in the flesh. This could only be accomplished by the incarnation of the Son of God.

Of the incarnation of Christ Charles Simeon says, "The person here said to be made flesh, is 'the Word': and it is manifest, that the Apostle speaks, as knowing that the persons to whom he spoke were familiar with the terms he used.

"This divine Person (the Second Person in the ever-adorable Trinity,) 'was made flesh'; that is he assumed our nature with all its sinful infirmities; and 'was made in all things like unto us, sin only accepted.' In that state of humiliation he sojourned upon earth, as once he dwelt with his people in the wilderness; his Deity being veiled by human flesh, as formerly it had been by the Shechinah, the bright cloud, which, as the symbol of his presence, dwelt in the tabernacle first, and afterwards in the temple."

It may be well for us to go a step deeper into this subject since we read that the blessed God, being a pure spirit, is invisible to man, and that, as to His essence, "no man hath seen God at any time." It follows, that if we are to see God He must adopt some medium suited to our state capacities. The prophet saw and promised this hundreds of years before God sent His Son in the flesh (Isaiah 7:14). The fulfillment of this promise is recorded in Matthew 1:23, "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us." When Philip asked to be shown the Father, Jesus assured him that "... he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?" (John 14:9). He had told them in John 10:30, "I and my Father are one."

Prior to the sending of His Son in the flesh, God had revealed Himself, vaguely, in various ways. God has manifested Himself in His works. In Psalm 19:1 the psalmist declares, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handy-work." All things show the works of His hands and His glory. Nature is not God; but nature shows the works of God, and bears the marks of His hand and the impress of His feet. We see His glory in the light of day and in the darkness of night; in the rugged mountain and in the fertile valley, in the expanse of the waters and in the outstretched canopy of heaven, and in the rolling planets in their respective spheres.

God has manifested Himself in His written Word. Here He has revealed His character, His name, His will, and His perfections. Here His works and ways are exhibited to man. Here we have a clearer and more comprehensive view of Deity than could possibly be seen in His works alone. Here are His inspired words, for He presented Himself to holy men of old; but they were merely the media through which God declared Himself to man.

To some, God manifested Himself in connection with various symbols. To Moses He manifested Himself in the burning bush, in the cloud on Mount Sinai, and in the pillar of cloud and fire in the desert. Others had similar revelations.

To the whole world "God was manifest in the flesh." This manifestation was in the Person of His Son. The Bible says, "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him" (John 1:18). In His Son dwelt all the fullness of the divine glory. This manifestation of God and of His glories was in the fullness of times, as are all His workings for His glory and for the benefit of man. The period selected and approved of by God was the fittest for developing the divine glory, and the setting in motion of the plan of redemption of the world.

Here was the most glorious of all the manifestations of God, and of God to the world by His Son. Here were not only displayed those perfections which had been exhibited in creation, such as wisdom and goodness; but also purity, justice, and grace. "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Colossians 2:9).

The incarnation of Christ was essential to the redemption of the world. It appears from revelation, that, in order that all His attributes might harmonize in the salvation of man, it behooved Christ to suffer, the just for the unjust; and if so, it was essential that He should become incarnate and thus be capable of bearing our sins in His own body on the tree.

To be sure, this was the most mysterious manifestation. It was, and still is, hard for man to believe that Deity should be wrapped in humanity; that the eternal God should become an infant of days, the Sovereign of the universe, the servant of servants, the Prince of glory, the sacrifice of rebels. Well may human wisdom be lost in the vast profound! Well may angels wonder and adore! Well may devils be overwhelmed and tremble!

Without the incarnation and the virgin birth of Christ there can be no true Christian belief. Upon these truths the whole Christian structure was founded and has stood down through the ages. Here is the very life blood of Christianity: that Christ is truly the Son of God, and that He is over all. At the close of His mission on earth we read, "And Jesus came and

Protestant 'Giving' Totaled $2.8 Billion During 1963

NEW YORK (EP) — A record $2,358,600,845 total was contributed by members of 41 Protestant Churches in this country to their respective denominations in 1963—a gain of $58,930,268 over the previous year when 42 bodies reported.

Average per-member giving for all causes among the 41 communions was $69.87 last year, also a record, exceeding the 1962 per capita of $68.76.

The financial figures were reported by the National Council of Churches' Department of Stewardship and Benevolence and appear in the 44th annual edition of Statistics of Church Finances.

Of the 1963 contributions, $530,908,204 or 18.57 percent of the total was given for benevolences, including foreign and home missions. For all local congregational items and operations $2,327,592,641 was reported.

In per capita giving, 18 denominations—most of them smaller bodies—reported an average of $100 or more for each member.

Heading the list—as it did the previous years—was the Free Methodist Church (53,601 members) with $385.17. Others were the Wesleyan Methodist Church (38,194) with $264.20, Pilgrim Holiness Church (30,453) with $237.93, Evangelical Church of America (41,687) with $233.43, and Brethren in Christ Church (9,025) with $203.05.

None of these five denominations is a member of the NCC. Among NCC constituents, largest per capital contribution was reported by the Reformed Church in America — $117.58. The Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Southern) was second, with $109.46 per member.

Other major bodies and their per capital giving included: Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, $102.26; United Presbyterian Church in the USA, $90.46; American Lutheran Church, $81.11; Protestant Episcopal Church, $76.20; and Disciples of Christ, $75.81.

Also United Church of Christ, $73.12; Lutheran Church in America, $71.45; American Baptist Convention, $68.34; The Methodist Church, $59.60; and Southern Baptist Convention, $53.49.

Sunday Law, Never Enforced, Is Ruled Unconstitutional

LANSING, Mich. (EP)—Michigan's Supreme Court unanimously declared invalid and unconstitutional the state's Sunday closing law, passed in 1962 but never enforced.

Lawsuits challenging its legality were filed immediately after the law was passed. Although it was upheld in the Wayne County Circuit Court, all eight justices of the state's highest court ruled against it on appeal.

Gambling Propositions Beaten in 3 States

NEW YORK (EP) — Voters in California, Washington and Arkansas soundly defeated gambling proposals which had been energetically opposed by religious leaders and church groups in the states.

Decisive ballot totals turned back a plan for a California lottery billed as a fund-raising scheme for public schools, a Washington proposition that would have permitted licensing of card games, bingo, punch boards, and pinball machines, and an Arkansas attempt to revive a resort city as a "Las Vegas" of the South.

Oregon Votes to Abolish Capital Punishment

PORTLAND, Ore. (EP) — A referendum to abolish capital punishment in Oregon, supported by religious groups, was approved by the state's voters by a 3 to 2 margin.

It is expected that as a result of the referendum, Oregon's next legislature will make life imprisonment mandatory for those convicted of first degree murder.

Among church groups backing the referendum was the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Oregon, which in October approved a resolution calling for abolition of the death penalty.

Analysis Shows Great Protestant Support for President Johnson

NEW YORK (EP) — A groundswell of support for President Johnson among Protestant voters was seen in analysis of the general election returns as a major factor in his overwhelming victory over Sen. Barry Goldwater.

According to the Vote Profile Analysis (VPA) — a system used to determine "Projected results" based on 2,000 precincts across the country which were considered representative from economic, ethnic, geographic and religious standpoints — President Johnson pulled 13.6 percent more of the Protestant vote than President Kennedy.

As election returns were tallied it was found that the VPA projections had a high degree of accuracy. The system was developed by Louis Harris and Associates in collaboration with the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Comparing the Protestant support for Mr. Johnson and his assassinated predecessor by area, the VPA figures showed Mr. Johnson did 21.4 percentage better in the East, 3.5 points better in the South, 16.2 points better in the Midwest and 11.7 points better in the Far West.

Former Southern Baptist President Deplores Election Of Johnson

DETROIT (EP) — Dr. K. Owen White of Houston, Texas, past president of the Southern Baptist Convention, said here he deplored the election of President Johnson and the defeat of Sen. Barry Goldwater.

"The trend toward big government and socialism will be worse now and I really do feel my job as a clergyman will be harder now since the election," he said.

Observing that he was speaking for himself and not his denomination, Dr. White said, "We could have used a good dose of conservatism for awhile" that would have followed election of the Republican.

He said that while "big government and socialism will worsen," he did not expect a "disintegration" of the country. However, he added that the Roman and other civilizations ended in times of abdication of individual responsibility and the presence of moral apathy. The

Nine-Year Old Collects $27 For Children's Home

Pictured above is Miss Robbie Gail Jacobs of Edgemont Free Will Baptist Sunday School, Durham, North Carolina. With one turkey folder Robbie collected $27 for the Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina. Only two dollars of this amount was received from her family and relatives.

At the annual Thanksgiving service at the Children's Home on November 26, Robbie was recognized for her work by the superintendent of the Home, the Rev. M. L. Johnson. She received no help in reaching her goal of $25. Robbie stated, "I would tell them what the money was for and they would give." She also stated, "If I was down there in the Children's Home, I would want someone to make up money for me."

Robbie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Jacobs of Durham. She is a member of the junior choir in her church.

Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Harris Honored on Anniversary

The Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Harris were honored on their golden wedding anniversary November 1, 1964, at their home on 601 East Ninth Street, Greenville, North Carolina. Open house was held from 2 to 5 p.m., and approximately 100 guests came by and showered the couple with many beautiful and useful gifts.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Harris were host and hostesses for the occasion. They were Mrs. Kenneth Raymond and Mr. Calvin J. Harris of Wilmington, Delaware, and Mrs. Graham Baker of Newport, North Carolina.

The house was beautifully decorated in a gold motif with arrangements of gold colored mums. The appointed table was covered with a cream-colored lace cloth that was centered with an arrangement of gold mums flanked by candelabrum holding lighted tapers. Mrs. Baker poured punch and cake was served by Mrs. Raymond.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris were married November 1, 1914, by the Rev. J. J. Walker of Greenville.

(Mr. Harris received head injuries in an accident a few days before the anniversary; hence the reason for the bandage and the bruised eye.)

LARGE MEN, SMALL TROUBLES

While in college I was talking to my college church pastor on one occasion and said to him: "Doesn't it make you nervous to know that you are preaching to a college president and faculty members who know theology backwards and forwards? Doesn't it make you feel uneasy to know that any grammatical error will be noticed?" His answer was one that should be framed and put on the door of every church in the land. He said, "It's not the big men in the church that give you trouble; it's the little men."—JACK WRIGHT, "Too Big To Be Little," Wesleyan Methodist.

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment Seven)

WE COME now to the delicate task of surveying the possibilities of a reunion between the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists and its associates and the National Association of Free Will Baptists.

Let us begin with a rather strange contrast. The thing most favorable to a possible reunion is the fact that many good people on both sides would like to see it take place. They want united effort in behalf of a worldwide program of Free Will Baptist ministry. Some think that this is more important than all the issues that separate us. Against this, however, is the fact that it is just as true that there are many on both sides who do not want a reunion. A few do not want it simply because they worked hard to divide, and they do not want their efforts to prove to have been in vain. But this is not true of the majority of those who would oppose a remerger of the groups. Just as retrospectively many honest people think that there existed too much difference between the Original Free Will Baptists and other groups in 1935 to guarantee success of the merger at that time, so do many feel today that there are too many real differences (after making allowance for all the propaganda differences which, like "the little man who wasn't there," have been only the creations of the minds of those who sought to divide for their own selfish advantages) to make sure that any union at this time would be a satisfying or lasting one.

But, supposing that we are able to bridge around, or dissolve, any real inherited differences, just what would each party expect of the other by way of concessions, agreements, or understandings with respect to developments since 1960 which are generally credited with being responsible for the present rupture of relationship?

There is no doubt but that many of the leaders of the National Association, and many of the people throughout the realms of the association with "voting power," truly believe that the North Carolina conferences of Original Free Will Baptists have departed from the principles of congregational church government. They are going to expect to be reassured in some way that the Original Free Will Baptists still believe in the independence of the local church in such things as the holding of title to their church property, calling whom they choose as pastor, and in general exercising authority in all matters pertaining to their internal affairs; and that any authority the local churches may have delegated to conference or associational organizations is for the regulation of the denominational relationship and promoting the collective interests of the churches who have by mutual consent formed these denominational units. Evidently, it is not sufficient for some of us, who are in a position to know, to call attention to the fact that during the more than four years which have passed since the rupture, not one conference has taken possession of the property of a local church, and not one time has a conference appointed a pastor for a local church. Many will go on believing that the widely circulated outline of "connectional church government," used in connection with a Durham church case, does indeed represent the forms of government endorsed by the Original Free Will Baptist conferences of North Carolina, until some way is found to convince them otherwise. National Association leaders are also going to demand assurances of the soundness of the doctrinal teachings and policies of Mount Olive College. Further, they will expect assurances of loyal support for the projects and programs of the National Association. While some modifications might possibly be agreed upon, it is the opinion of this writer that the North Carolina Original Free Will Baptists and their associates will have to accept in general, additions to and amendments of the National Treatise made since 1961, together with the interpretation put upon the "Provision and Claim" section in 1961.

Looking now at the Original Free Will Baptists' side, we are quite sure that something would have to be done about the action of the National Association in 1961 in declaring the offices of a number of North Carolinians vacant without a hearing upon any specified charges of malpractice in office or disqualifying moral conduct. There is no question involved in the denominational conflict upon which Original Free Will Baptists are more nearly in unanimous agreement than that the impeachment of these men by a hasty motion, made in the mist of heated debate, and without giving them a hearing on any specified charges, was an improper and unjust action. Everybody ought to have as much as possible the spirit to "forgive and forget," but it is the opinion of this writer that North Carolina Original Free Will Baptists could not enter into a reunion agreement in good faith which ignored this action of the National Association.

Just as National Association leaders would have to be satisfied concerning Mount Olive College, so would North Carolina Free Will Baptists have to be satisfied about the Free Will Baptist Bible College. In particular, they would expect some assurances that graduates of the college would not return to North Carolina prejudiced against the North Carolina institutions, or committed to the idea of contending for exclusive support of their churches for the Bible College as their "one and only" Christian education institution—as many believe some did during the years between 1956 and 1961. On the doctrinal side, North Carolina would want to be reassured concerning the position of some of the national leaders and evangelists with respect to the doctrine of "eternal security," and perhaps some other doctrines. North Carolina Original Free Will Baptists and their associates would be reluctant to accept the idea that belief in, and propagation of, the Calvinistic doctrine of "eternal security" does not constitute cause for disciplinary action against a minister or a church.

We have named some of the major things that would have to be rectified or better understood before there could be a harmonious restoration of the relationship between the Original Free Will Baptists and the National Association. There are other things that would have to be considered. Would the Original Free Will Baptists be willing to give up their Free Will Baptist League organization for the "completely new" training program of the National Association? Would the National Association be willing for the Original Free Will Baptists to retain the Free Will Baptist League as a substitute for the new training program? What adjustments could be made with respect to the missionary projects of the two groups? And, of course, there would still remain the literature question. Are these obstacles insurmountable? Do we have the courage, the faith, the brotherly love, and tolerance to try once again to unify all Free Will (Free and Freewill) Baptists over the nation, and throughout the world? Or will it be best for all concerned for Original Free Will Baptists to go their separate way, true to their traditional "faith and practices," and seeking from other groups only tolerant respect and Christian fellowship? We need the help of God to find the answer to this question.

(Next week we will explore, in the final article of this series, the prospects of the future if Original Free Will Baptists choose, or are forced to continue as a denominational unit outside the National Association.)

God forbid
That we should ever have to fall in line
And stand for hours, waiting for our turn To gaze upon a corpse entombed in glass,
Worshiping mortal man's remains and earn
The praise of fellow workers as we pass!
Are we afraid of people such as this,
Who hammer out their sickly lies and seek
To conquer all men with a Judas kiss

While the Red earth inherits all the meek?
Think hard of your inheritance! Think hard!
We have no glass-cased body to observe!
We have the living Jesus Christ, the Lord!
We have His living presence!

Ayden, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church met in the home of Mrs. Bettie Wade recently for its November meeting. The president called the meeting to order the group sang "Praise Him, Praise Him." Mrs. Stella Worthington read the Scripture taken from Psalm 19. This was followed with prayer by Mrs. Elizabeth Ball.

During the business period the roll was called by the secretary with thirteen members present. The secretary also read the minutes of the last meeting which were approved. The treasurer gave her report and the various committee chairmen reported. Mrs. Margaret Ard gave a report on the auxiliary convention she attended recently. A motion was made and seconded to send $20 to the Children's Home for a single bed. A motion was also made and seconded to send $25 to Cragmont Assembly to apply on the purchase of the Floyd property. The auxiliary voted to purchase a coat for Yvonne Rouse, the adopted child at the Children's Home, for Christmas. Mrs. Stella Worthington is to purchase the coat for Yvonne.

The program, "Blueprints for Victory," was ably given by Mrs. Velma McLawhorn. The closing prayer was offered by Mrs. Rosalie Murphy.

The hostess served delicious refreshments.

Ayden, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Ormondville Free Will Baptist Church held its annual Christmas banquet at King's Restaurant in Kinston on Tuesday evening, December 1, with approximately eighty-five members and guests attending. They were served a delicious turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

Following the singing of "White Christmas," Mrs. Louise May gave the invocation. The president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Nora Lee Newton, welcomed the guests which included the husbands of the auxiliary members and the Rev. and Mrs. Clifton Rice. Mr. Jesse L. Tripp responded to the welcome. Mr. Rice gave some very timely remarks pertaining to the Christmas season and offered his thanks to the auxiliary members for the good work they were doing in the church and in the community.

The group then joined together in singing several Christmas carols. The highlight of the evening was the exchanging of Christmas gifts and the revealing of the "Secret Pals."

The occasion came to a close with the group forming a circle with joined hands and singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." Mrs. Christine Stokes offered the benediction.

Christian Education

College Observes Founders' Day

On Tuesday, December 15, Mount Olive Junior College will observe Founders' Day, the thirteenth year since it was chartered. The program will be held in the college auditorium at 10 a.m., with Dr. Millard T. Burt, dean of Methodist College, Fayetteville, North Carolina making the address. Visitors are invited to attend.

College Day at Micro Church

The Micro, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church will observe Sunday, December 13, as Mount Olive College Day. Dr. W. Burkette Raper will speak at the 11 a.m. service. The Rev. M. E. Godwin is pastor.

A LITTLE RHYME AND A LITTLE REASON

It a man would be a soldier, he'd expect, of course, to fight;
And he couldn't be an author if he didn't try to write.
So it isn't common logic, doesn't have a real, true ring,
That a man to be a Christian doesn't have to do a thing.

If a man would be a hunter, he must go among the trees;
And he couldn't be a sailor, if he wouldn't sail the seas.
How strange for any member of a church to think that he Can stay away from worship and a worthy member be!

When you join associations, you must pay up all your dues;
And you pay for all your purchases,
from your head down to your shoes.
There are social clubs for women, and the same for men and boys.
But the members all expect to pay for what each one enjoys.

THEN HOW IS IT that the members of a church can sit in pews,
And expect some few to run it without others paying dues?
The cost of operation must be met in church the same
As in home or corporation or in work of any name.

Let us honestly consider why this difference we find,
Between our church relations and every other kind.
Our business obligations MUST be met,
the laws provide;
But the church is not insistent, so we let the matter slide.

May we undertake our duties for our church and for our Lord.
With such measure of devotion as accords with His own word.
If our human obligations thus are recognized, why then Surely God should have our services now and evermore.

Questions & Answers

QUESTIONS On what day does the Sabbath come? What does the Bible require of us Christians regarding this day? Some that I have heard speak say that it is on the seventh day of the week and others say they are not sure what day it is on.—Mrs. I. Cornnell, Thomasville, Georgia.

The Jewish Christians seem to have gotten observance of the ordinances of the church mixed in with Judaism or the ordinances of the Old Testament before the New Testament came into being as a written document. Therefore, the same Holy Spirit inspired apostles who gave the oral teachings of Jesus and correctly interpreted them, for the disciples wrote these truths down under the guidance of the Spirit so as to leave them, and therefore us, ample instructions. These writings served them in the Early Church that received them in those difficult days and will so serve us if we, like the obedient disciples, observe and honor them.

(Read carefully Romans 14, paying special attention to Verse 5.) In this chapter the Holy Spirit causes Paul to write so as to help Christians who lack in maturity to become established in the faith. The context seems to indicate proselyting Jews were harassing these Christians in an effort to impose the practices of the Jewish religion upon them. One of the observances they seem to have wished them in line with was the observance of a particular day, perhaps the Jewish Sabbath. The Apostle Paul is not moved to say that man should not observe one day for rest out of each seven, but is making it clear that no particular day of the week is required of Christians as that set aside for rest from manual labor and one to devote wholly to the worship of God. The idea given here seems to be that whether the day of the week they observe is the Jewish Sabbath or some other, makes little difference just so that all done is so done with an eye single to God's glory.

"Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment: . . . For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; That ye abstain from meat offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well' (Acts 15:24, 28, 29). This passage in Acts, as do several in the New Testament, seems to indicate that not only in Romans 14 were they confronted with Jewish theology running counter to New Testament teaching but that a vigilant effort was being fostered by the Jews, and those whom the Jews were able to persuade, to make void the efficacious power of the blood shed on Calvary. The Seventh Day Adventists, theological offsprings of Helen G. White, would bring us back under the law were it not for the unadulterated truth to which we have free access in the New Testament and the presence of the Holy Spirit who, as Jesus taught, shall bring us into all truth (He is the way, the truth, and the life).

I think that, if not unduly hindered, all Christians should rest from secular labor and should worship and praise God in assemblies together as nearly all day on the first day of the week, our Sunday, as they possibly can. This does not mean pleasure riding, attending theaters, school graduation exercises, and partying otherwise either. I mean to say that I think that the whole day of Sunday should be observed by all Christians who haven't a legitimate reason to observe some other day instead, as the Holy Ghost filled founding fathers of America observed it. All the founding fathers evidently were not filled by the Holy Ghost when they were among those who set the pattern for Sunday observance, but they should have been.

According to Paul's instructions in the sixteenth chapter of First Corinthians, it seems that it was commonly expected of Christians by inspired writers of the Bible that they meet on the first day of the week. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come" (1 Corinthians 16:2). The disciples seem to have spent a whole day in fellowship and worship at time as seen in Acts 20:7, "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight."

What other consideration may come before us, it is well that we remember that we as Christians are resurrection people; that whatever else may be true, our justification comes in the resurrection of Christ; and that whatever else He taught, one thing is certain and that is that He would rise from the dead. When this was done, and of it the apostles were certain, they turned from many previous doubts. With few exceptions the Christians have made it a habit to meet on the first day of the week since they have made sure that He actually was resurrected on that day; and I think we should continue their practice—that of Paul's, Peter's, John's, and many other early Christians—and not let a few poorly biblically informed Christians distort our purpose in doing what the overwhelming biblical evidence indicates we should do. However, if any should insist on meeting on Thursday, for example, we should not oppose him; or if any should have duties making rest and worship impossible on Sunday, we should fellowship with him when we can—Friday, Saturday, or any other day.

If you can't do somebody good, it is a mighty good point not to do him any harm. In fact, you may not go wrong if you continue trying to do him good, for someday you may greatly succeed.—Walter E. Isenhour.

STORIES

for our

BOYS and GIRLS

THE VIKINGS

by Dorothy Anderson

THIS IS for you, Gram," Dan beamed, as he handed her a sailboat painting he'd done by numbers.

"It's lovely! Thank you!" she said.

"Want to see the model boat I made?" he called from half-way up the stairs. "It's a three-masted schooner like Gramp used to play on when he was a boy."

"This is neat!" she answered, as he returned with it, on the bound. "Those old sailing vessels were rugged ships, and their crews were real salty sailors!"

"Yeah, I named it 'Eric the Red' after my Great-grandfather." He set his work of art on the table.

"Dan, I know why you're such a boat lover," she told him.

"Why?"

"Because your ancestors were Vikings, and they loved their ships!"

"You mean the Vikings we see in pictures, with those special kind of ships?" he inquired.

"Yes, they were really different."

"Wow-ee, they were fierce fighters, too!"

"I know it. Sit down, and I'll tell you more about them."

"You see, Dan," she began, "Great-grandfather Eric and his wife, Betty, were both born in Sweden. That's why I say your ancestors were Vikings. They were in the first settlers in the Scandinavian peninsula. The Vikings date back to the year 790. They were also called 'Norsemen or Northmen,' and they were the most adventurous, skillful, and daring seamen the world has ever known."

"They were master shipbuilders, too. During the long, cold winters they built their ships, then sailed them in the summer. We'd think they were pretty small compared to the ships of today. But they were swift and sure, with a flat bottom which was easily beached."

The prow was always high and curved, and often carved into a dragon or a snake. Their battle shields were hung on the sides of the ships, adding to their beauty. The chiefs thought so much of their ships they were often buried with them along with the treasures they'd taken in wars with other countries."

"Yes, I've seen pictures of them robbing and killing people," Dan interrupted.

"True, they were known as pirates," admitted Grandmother, "and their trembling neighbors prayed, 'God deliver us from the fury of the Northmen.'"

"Why were they like that?" he asked.

"Because they were pagans. Instead of worshipping the true God, they worshiped imaginary gods. Odin was Chief, and Thor was the God of War. To be a great warrior meant that you were pleasing the gods. And, if you were killed in battle, you became a hero and went to Valhalla, where the gods lived."

"My Great-grandfather wasn't like that, was he?"

"No. Something happened to change the ways of the Vikings. People from Normandy visited Scandinavia and told them about the Christian religion. After that, they let their neighbors live in peace. But they still sailed their ships and went exploring. It was dangerous to go very far in those days. The Vikings weren't afraid. Lief Ericson, called 'Lief the Lucky,' sailed west until he touched our continent, four hundred years before Columbus came."

"Lucky is right. Some adventure!" Dan exclaimed.

"Yes, Scandinavians are great seamen. And they have a good record in shipbuilding, too. John Ericson, a brilliant engineer, built the famous warship, the 'Monitor,' used in the Civil War. It was a dandy ship."

"What was it like?"

"It was small, with a flat deck."

"Sounds like a Viking ship to me," he teased.

"Not much," Grandmother explained.

"It was made of iron and powered with steam. It had a revolving turret in the center on which two guns were mounted. It looked like a 'cheese box on a raft.'"

"Why was it such a good ship?"

"It was easy to handle, and showed the value of a revolving turret. Best of all, it won the battle with the 'Mer-rimac'!"

"Did we have sailors in our family?" asked Dan.

"Yes, sir. Our family loved the sea, too."

"I think I'll be a sailor," Dan declared.

"You'll have a lot to live up to. The Vikings were terrific sailors! But we still have many brave seamen. Not too long ago, we heard the story of brave Captain Carlsen. I'm sure his Viking ancestors would have been proud of him."

"How come?" Dan was eager to know.

"His ship, 'The Flying Enterprise,' broke apart in the Atlantic Ocean during a terrible gale. He helped all the passengers and crew to safety on other boats. Then he stayed with his wrecked ship, though the waves seemed mountain high, until her bow pointed almost straight up in the air. He was rescued and put on a near-by towboat. He stood on the deck, wrapped in blankets, shivering from his wet clothing, and watched sadly while his ship went down into 'Davey Jones' Locker.'"

"He was a good captain," agreed Dan, because he stayed with his ship to the end."

"Yes," added Grandmother, "and he was highly-honored though he didn't do it for honor."

"Hey, Gram. What would the Vikings think of our big submarines that speed around the world?"

"They'd be some surprised! But more about that another time," she concluded.—The Free Methodist.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE CONVENTION MISSION REPORT

The Rev. A. B. Bryan, director-treasurer of the North Carolina State Convention Mission Board, makes the following report for the months of September, October, and November, 1964. Mr. Bryan urges each reader to review the report carefully and make an effort to supply the mission with funds necessary to operate for the next three months. He states that unless the financial support increase the board will be faced to curtail necessary expenses or drop part of the workers it is now supporting on the field. Please be much in prayer concerning this matter.

An Appropriate Gift

by John B. Elliston

Christmas is supposed to be a time for celebration of the birthday of our Lord Jesus Christ. At this time we would expect that everyone would be thinking of a gift for Him, which would be appropriate to His person and nature.

There are those who talk of a gift for the baby Jesus, such as the wise men brought. But with any other man of my acquaintance, no one considers giving His presents appropriate for a baby. Jesus was a baby at one time, but that was nearly 2,000 years ago. He grew into a man long since, and gave Himself to become the Saviour of mankind.

What sort of gift would be appropriate? It must be one which is acceptable to Him, and in keeping with His character. No one of you would think it appropriate to offer a bottle of whiskey as a birthday present to a prohibitionist. No more would you give a pipe or a carton of cigarettes to a nonsmoker. We all know that the gift must be in keeping with character of the recipient to be appreciated.

Then let us examine a little the character of Christ. First of all, of course, will be to examine why He had a birthday. He said, ". . . I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10).

A gift to Christ on His birthday must be one appropriate to His purpose and character. The type of gift which He appreciates is one which will help fulfill His purpose in coming and being born. He told us to ". . . Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15).

We can give ourselves to Christ in gratitude for His great gift, and in an effort to carry out His purpose in coming. This would be the most appropriate gift that we can give. We can also give of our means that others may go in obedience to His command. We know that this is in conformity to His desires; for speaking through Paul in Romans 10:15, He says, "And how shall they preach except they be sent? . . ."

So the birthday present most appropriate for us to give to the Lord this Christmas season is ourselves, to go if He wishes, or to give so that others may go if He wishes.

GOD WITH US

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 1:1, 18-25

MEMORY VERSE: Matthew 1:21

I. INTRODUCTION

The Christmas season has such a great impact upon our society that it compels us to seek out the meaning and significance for ourselves. We should ask ourselves, what is the meaning of Christmas? Very simply, Christmas means the coming of Jesus Christ into the world. Christianity is based on this truth. We could say then that Christmas means Christianity; if there were no Christmas, there would be no Christianity.

Does Christmas mean the same thing to all people regardless of where they live? Perhaps it does not. This being true, what should Christmas mean to Americans? Christian people enjoy more freedom than any other people. Christmas means to us freedom. As Americans, Christmas means prosperous America. However, not always in a monetary sense but in the things that really matter, the things that are lasting. Christmas should also mean to Americans, high morals and ideals. Our nation was founded on Christian principles. Christmas means all the privileges we enjoy as Christians and Americans. But by the grace of God you could have been born in Russia, China, or some other country.

The purpose of this lesson is to help us see the relation of the birth of Jesus to salvation of sinful men.—Teen-Age Teacher (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The Gospel of Matthew is the book of the generation of Jesus Christ, who is portrayed throughout as King (v. 1).

2. Joseph and Mary were espoused; and before the marriage was consummated, she was found with child of the Holy Spirit (v. 18).

3. The discovery of this fact was the most distressing and humiliating to Mary that can be imagined (v. 18).

4. Joseph was a just man; and although he could have had Mary stoned to death, he thought that he would handle the matter privately (v. 19).

5. While he was trying to decide just what to do, the Lord sent an angel to tell him to take Mary to wife (v. 20).

6. The angel also announced to him that the child should be called Jesus (v. 21).

7. The coming of Jesus was the accomplishment of the Old Testament prophecies (v. 22).

8. The specific prophecy that is referred to in this passage is Isaiah 7:14 (v. 23).

9. The message of the angel satisfied Joseph, and he took Mary to wife (v. 24).

10. Mary remained a virgin until after the birth of Jesus (v. 25).—Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. "The mystery of Christ's incarnation is to be adored, not curiously inquired into. Some circumstances attending the birth of Christ we find here, which are not in Luke, though it is more largely recorded there. Mary, the mother of our Lord, was espoused to Joseph; not completely married, but a purpose of marriage solemnly declared in words, and a promise of it made, if God permitted. Thus respect was put upon the married state; she was sheltered from injurious suspicions; and had one to be the guide of her youth, the companion of her solitude and travels, a partner in her cares, and a help meet for her. It was so ordered that Christ should partake of our nature, yet that he should be pure from the defilement of original sin, which has been communicated to all the posterity of Adam."—Commentary on the Holy Bible.

2. Long before the baby Jesus was born, God's message had told of Him.

"Behold," said Isaiah, "a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" (Isaiah 7:14). When the angel came to Joseph, he gave the message about Mary's son and said, "Thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matthew 1:21). So the baby in the Bethlehem manger was named Jesus.

Then the glory of the Lord shone in the heavens. An angel told the shepherds, "Unto you is born this day . . . a Saviour" (Luke 2:11). Years later, grown to manhood, Jesus himself said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10).

While this was told over and over again, it did not really mean much to people on earth. Not many could understand such a purpose. Those closest to Jesus were still bewildered when He died for their sins. But later the meaning of His salvation became clear.

What does it mean to us today? Do we live any differently because Jesus came to save His people from their sins? When we are busy with gift-giving and decorating and making merry, do we think of the baby in the manger who was to die as the Saviour of the world?

He came to save His people. And who are His people? Those who accept and obey Him, acknowledging Him as the Christ, the Son of God. He will not save us from sin if we are not His own. In the brightness that surrounds the Christmas season, let us think that our sins are borne by Christ, taken away from us here on earth so that we may come to His heavenly home.—Standard Commentary.

3. The miracle of all miracles is Jesus Christ. His life, ministry on earth, death, bodily resurrection, ascension, present intercessory work, Second Coming to earth, Millennial reign, and eternal glory are miraculous. His incarnation was by a miraculous process wrought by the Holy Spirit (Matthew 1:18). God's first promise of the Saviour (Genesis 3:15) indicated such a birth. Throughout the Bible we have the seed of different men. It is otherwise here. As literally as God placed life in Adam (2:7), He placed a special Life in Mary's womb by His miraculous power.

Mary experienced that which was told her by God through the angel Gabriel (Luke 1:26-35). Her question and God's answer evidence her virginity and Jesus' birth by God's miraculous power (vv. 34-38). Mary's faith in God's promise and submission to His will are revealed by her Magnificat or testimony (vv. 45-46).

According to Jewish law, if Mary gave birth to a child out of wedlock, she could be stoned to death. While Joseph, who loved her, was planning her protection, God revealed Jesus' miraculous virgin birth to him. Joseph, believing God, submitted to His will. Jesus' virgin birth is only understood through God's revelation. It tests faith. To this day, as with Mary and Joseph, those who believe God's Word concerning it are blessed of God (Luke 2:10; Galatians 4:4-7).

A doctor questioned the necessity of believing in the virgin birth of Jesus in order to be saved. I replied, "If there is any God, He must be a perfect Being." He agreed. I then stated that if God could be satisfied with anything short of a perfect work, He would not be perfect, thus not be God. He agreed. I then emphasized that Jesus could not do a perfect work for sin to meet the demands of a perfect God if He were not born of God without sin, of a virgin and not the fruit of illicit relation. The doctor accepted the truth and later accepted Christ as Saviour.—Bible Expositor.

Baptist leader stressed worry about Vice-President-elect Hubert H. Humphrey, "who might accelerate the whole thing."

Pastor of First Baptist Church in Houston, Dr. White was here to address the Michigan State Convention at Roseville.

Post-Election "United Front" Advocated by Billy Graham

ATLANTA, Ga. (EP) — One man or one political party "cannot be blamed for the moral situation in America," evangelist Billy Graham said here.

In his first press conference since moving his team headquarters to Atlanta, Mr. Graham called for a "united front" behind the Administration but—as he had done during the Presidential campaign—declined to voice a political preference.

He said that, although he had been urged to endorse a Presidential candidate, "it never entered my mind" and he would never express a preference unless a candidate should "threaten his right to preach Christianity."

"I'm representing the kingdom of God," he declared, "and whatever kind of government we have, I must support it."

The evangelist said he believes the church is responsible to speak out only when moral issues are involved.

Court Ruling Misinterpreted, Says Justice in Prayer Case

WAVERLY, Iowa (EP) — U. S. Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark told some 200 clergymen and public school administrators here that "no domestic problem has more national interest than religion and the public school."

But unfortunately, he added, much of this interest can be attributed to misunderstanding and misinterpretation of the Supreme Court's 1963 ban on public school devotional acts.

Justice Clerk, a prominent Presbyterian layman, spoke before "Fourth R: Religion and the Public Schools" conference sponsored by Wartburg College, an institution of the American Lutheran Church.

The Court's position on prayer, he said, rests on the proposition that any required exercise in the public school must be secular. "Yet prayer is the conversation of religion," he added, "and it would be difficult to prove that required prayer is secular in its purpose."

The First Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids "establishment" of religion, he said, was not adopted to protect the church from the state but to guarantee religious freedom.

Justice Clark said that the Supreme Court must not only "protect freedom of religion but also freedom from religion" and added: "Man is free to exercise any belief as long as it does not interfere with the same right of any other man."

This does not mean, he said, that the state must be divorced from the country's religious heritage. He cited the Supreme Court oath which invokes the "grace of God" and various government provisions for chaplaincies as examples of the state reflecting religious background.

However, he added, the state must be neutral, "discouraging none while protecting all."

Justice Clark stressed the need for the church and home, not school, to provide religious instruction of children, commenting that some would have "the school carry on the prayers and the juvenile courts take care of the discipline."

spoke unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth" (Matthew 28:18). This should fill us with confidence in power, and dignity, and goodness of our blessed Redeemer, the incarnate Son of God; for our Saviour is truly Lord of hosts, in whom is everlasting strength.

"That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;)" (1 John 1:1, 2).

Some of the happiest hours and days of one's life can be when he is praying for others, speaking kind to them, giving good advice, or lending a helping hand in time of need or trouble. Try it.—Walter E. Isenhour.

"On November 29, I attended the Second Western District Sunday School Convention of North Carolina. While speaking, our youth director mentioned a personal experience which puzzled her. She said that a young girl remarked about being bored at a Sunday school convention, and that she did not care to attend another. She, as well as myself, cannot understand this. I think that what we receive depends on what we put into something. If we attend a convention with the picture of boring business reports in mind, we should not expect to be blessed. But if we attend a convention with a prayer of being blessed in our hearts, we shall receive a blessing.

"I certainly cannot say that I was bored at our last convention, but I can say that I received a blessing. I would like to invite every willing soul to come to our next convention with a prayer of being blessed in the heart."—Deborah Morgan, Floods Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Bailey, North Carolina.

Eisenhower's Farewell Prayer

The following prayer was offered by General Dwight D. Eisenhower in his farewell address from the White House. It is especially appropriate for the Christmas season.

"We pray that people of all faiths, all races and all nations may have their great human needs satisfied; that those now denied opportunity shall come to enjoy it to the full; that all who yearn for freedom may experience its spiritual blessings; that those who have freedom will understand also its heavy responsibilities; that all who are insensitive to the needs of others will learn charity; that the scourges of poverty, disease and ignorance will be made to disappear from the earth; and that, in the goodness of time, all peoples will come to live together in a peace guaranteed by the binding force of mutual respect and love."

THE VERY SON OF GOD

Christmas reveals many truths about God and also about man. These truths reveal the very heart of Christmas. Thus, the secular, social, and pagan practices fade into insignificance as we turn to the real meaning of Christmas.

Christmas reveals that man is lost, that he cannot find a way out of this lost condition within his own strength. His lost condition alienates him from God; he is separated from the Almighty because of his sins. In each of the dispensations, from the age of innocence to the present age of grace, man has failed to live up to that which God expected of him. Each dispensational period proves that man's effort further separates him from God's ultimate purpose. In other words, man within himself only becomes more hopeless. When Christ was born, and God dwelt among men, the perfect and final act of God to restore man was instigated. If man had not been utterly lost, the penalty for his salvation would not have been so great.

Christmas reveals the love of God. It is true that God long ago pronounced the whole world guilty and condemned; however, His great love did not cease with that pronouncement. The birth of Christ proves the greatness of that love. Love did come down at Christmas, and in the form of a person, not in rituals and ceremonies as in the past.

"The Amplified New Testament" adds to the description of His love as expressed in John 3:16 "For God so greatly loved and dearly prized the world that He gave up His only begotten (unique) Son, . . ." If the observance of Christmas each year does not serve as a reminder of that love, and if it does not result in our renewed dedication to God, then we have missed the real message of Christmas. Because God so freely gives of His love, we, in turn, can love and serve Him. How thankful we are that He affords us this privilege!

Christmas reveals the miracle of redemption. This is not to say that we look to the manger that we might be redeemed. As glorious as the birthday and birthplace of Jesus is, if the story had begun and ended in the manger, there would be little to help man. Jesus came as a Babe in the manger, but He also went out into the paths of the world that led to Calvary. Such was the plan of God from the very beginning, for Jesus is "the lamb of God slain from the foundation of the world." Thus, the Christian not only rejoices at His birth, but also rejoices that the plan of God has been so wonderfully fulfilled for his redemption.

Christmas reveals the all-important truth that Christ is the very Son of God. This is the great message of Christmas—a Saviour has come who is Christ the Lord. As the very Son of God, Jesus was of necessity born of the Virgin Mary, who was "found to be pregnant through the power of the Holy Ghost." It is indeed the greatest miracle to ever transpire in the course of human history. There is no place for minimizing the virgin birth. Indeed, it must be regarded as a fundamental of the Christian faith.

"It is sometimes alleged that the doctrine of the virgin birth is of relatively little importance to the Christian church.

"On the contrary, if the biblical doctrine of the virgin birth is not historically true, there is no reason or basis for holding the other evangelical doctrines, for the Bible must then be rejected as an authority for faith and life. Furthermore, there can be honest doubt that the Bible presents the incarnation as having taken place by means of the virgin birth, and that not mythically as is so widely claimed and held today. In fact, we cannot conceive of the eternal pre-existent Son of God becoming man by means of ordinary generation without ceasing to be God. In ordinary generation a new 'person' begins to exist."—Baker's Dictionary of Theology.

WILL ORIGINAL FREE WILL BAPTISTS SURVIVE?

by Loy Everette Ballard
Greenville, North Carolina

(Installment Eight)

CAN Original Free Will Baptists face the future alone as a distinctive denominational unit, separate from all other groups of like, or unlike, faith, with hopes of becoming a greater church and winning the favor of both God and men?

Let us take a brief look, first of all, at some principles that must lie back of all efforts to go forward as a distinctive group. We must have the right motives. We must free our hearts from bitterness and our minds from all thoughts of retaliation or revenge. We must not be motivated by the desire to show those who separated from us, or from whom we separated ourselves, that we do not need them, that we are fully sufficient unto ourselves. We must bring ourselves to have no envy over the successes of other groups, but rather rejoice in all that is accomplished by all sincere Christians toward the salvation of the lost and the making of a better world for all of us to live in. We must not continue to emphasize our differences, but rather to be ever seeking better understanding and a closer fellowship with all who share our common hope in Jesus Christ. Our motive must be to glorify the Lord, and extend His kingdom on earth, through our collective efforts. If these are the principles that govern us, we can expect the blessings of God upon us: if they are lacking in us, we may well find ourselves indeed going it alone—without the favor of the Lord resting upon us.

Now, just what do we have as guarantees that we cannot only survive, but build upon the foundation of our mutual faith and unity of interests a great and glorious church.

First, we can expect to have a very good doctrinal fellowship. We know of no serious disagreements on questions of faith among Original Free Will Baptists as defined in the first article of this series. We would not, therefore, experience temptations to compromise our convictions in the interest of a wider fellowship.

Second, we have some great churches—some 400 or more known to be with and for us at the present time, with many others waiting to decide the course of their future in the matter of denominational fellowship. The past few years have witnessed a tremendous growth in both membership and pro-

(The writer wishes to express appreciation to those who have written in to express their favorable reception of these humble efforts. We have tried hard to write this series of articles in a way that no fuel would be added by them to the fires of controversy; but rather that they might help to a better understanding of the situation we are now in and the decisions that must be made. How well we have succeeded we do not know. If errors have been made, may God forgive; if there has been anything of merit, may God have the glory.)

perty value among Original Free Will Baptist churches. In most communities, our churches rank with the finest in buildings; and in many communities they are the finest. Most of the churches we now have left are loyal and dependable to the extent of their vision—which is ever widening. Apparently, we have survived the wave of “split offs” of groups going out to form new churches, antagonistic toward the old. There may be a few more such divisions, but not many.

Third, we have some great institutions left to us, promising much for the future. Mount Olive College is expanding with a rapidity which astonishes many of us. It is the only fully accredited Free Will Baptist college in existence, and is being utilized more and more by our Free Will Baptist young people who seek a liberal arts education in the safety of a Christian atmosphere. A million dollar campus will soon make this possible for a far larger number than at present. Also a very definite concern for an enlarged program of Christian instruction and training to meet the need of better prepared pastors, missionaries, and other Christian workers, is noticeable. At Ayden, North Carolina, we have the only denominationally owned and operated publishing house among Free Will Baptists. This institution has been expanded during recent years until it is now possible to produce literature and publications which can compete in quality with most any other printing establishment. In The Free Will Baptist, we have the oldest Free Will Baptist news journal, and the only weekly one. It offers good prospects of becoming a publication second to none in journalistic excellence. In Cragmont Assembly, located along with assemblies of many other denominations in beautiful western North Carolina, we have an institution with almost unlimited prospects for development and usefulness. Through its ministry to our youth, as well as to adults, it is already helping to shape the character of the church of tomorrow. We have at least one good Children's Home, with prospects for others, offering an enlarging program of child care.

Fourth, we have some fine denominational programs, already in operation. Our mission program at home and in Mexico is enjoying the blessings of God, and rendering service in places of great need. A number of fine young people

ISAIAH FORETELLS CHRIST'S BIRTH

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6).

I am giving this week excerpts from Charles Simcon's Expository Outlines on this text, which I trust will prove beneficial to you as they have to me. I only wish that I had room to give the complete exposition on this verse.

"There is no true peace or happiness in the world except that which arises from the Gospel of Christ; for God himself testifies that there is no peace to the wicked. But where the Gospel truly prevails, peace and joy immediately spring up as its proper fruits. Such a change as this the prophet describes in the preceding text; and then in the words before us, traces it to its source.

"He was a little 'child, born' in as helpless a state as others, and subject to all the sinless infirmities of our nature. He was indeed in a more special manner the gift of the Father's love; the most invaluable gift that God himself could bestow. He was the Child, and the Son, of whom all the prophets spake, the offspring of a virgin, "Emmanuel, God with us." But as the end of his coming was to redeem our fallen race, he came in such a way, as was best suited to the accomplishment of his own eternal purpose and grace.

"His being called by any name, imports that He really is what he is called. He is therefore,

"A Wonderful Counsellor—

"These are considered by many as two distinct titles; but, if we unite them, each title will have its proper attribute.

"He, in concert with the Father, formed the stupendous plan of man's redemption, a plan in which are contained all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Moreover in executing this plan, he has not only defeated all the plots and devices of Satan, but has invariably overruled them for the accomplishment of his own designs.

"The mighty God—

"Angels and magistrates are sometimes called gods in a subordinate sense; but He is "The mighty God," "God with us," even "God over all, blessed for ever." The dispensations, both of his providence and grace, manifest him to be a "God, wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working." Indeed, if he were not God, he could never bear upon his shoulder the government of the universe. He must be omnipresent, omniscient, omnipotent, or else he could never hear the supplications, and supply the wants, of all his people at the same instant. However strange therefore it may seem, He who was a little child, was at the same time the mighty God; it was "the Lord of glory that was crucified;" it was "God who purchased the Church with his own blood."

"The everlasting Father—

"This title respects not his relation to the Deity (for with respect to that, he is the Son and not the Father) but rather his relation to his spiritual seed, whom he has begotten by his word and Spirit. But perhaps the words should rather have been translated, "The Father of the everlasting age." The Jewish dispensation was intended to continue but for a limited time; but the Christian dispensation was never to be succeeded by any other: hence it is called "the last times;" and may be considered as "the everlasting age." Of this Christ is the author; it owes its existence to him as its parent; it is preserved by his guardian care; and the whole family in heaven and earth who participate its blessings, both bear his image, and inherit his glory.

"The Prince of Peace—

In all which Christ has done, whether in planning or executing the work of redemption, he has consulted the peace and welfare of his people. It was to purchase their peace that he became incarnate and died upon the cross. It was to bestow on them the blessings of peace, that he assumed the reins of government, and undertook to manage all their concerns. Peace was the legacy which he left to his Church when he was just parting from the world; and, on his ascension, he poured it down on myriads of his blood-thirsty enemies: yea, at this very hour does he dispense it according to his own sovereign will, and impart it, with royal munificence, to all subjects of his kingdom.

"This SUBJECT furnishes us with abundant reason,

"For admiration—

"If all heaven was filled with wonder at the sight of their incarnate God, and if the 'Angels yet desire to look into' that 'great mystery of godliness,' how marvellous should it appear to our eyes! Let us then adore with reverence what we cannot comprehend; and exclaim with profound wonder, "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift."

"For gratitude—

"Has the mighty God become a little child for us, and shall we regard his condescension with indifference? Is he governing and overruling every thing for our good, and shall we feel no sense of his kindness? Let us rather say, What shall I render to the Lord for all the benefits he has done unto me?

"For devotedness to God—

"If the government be upon his shoulder, we should show ourselves willing to have it there, and submit ourselves cheerfully to his authority.

"As the Creator of the universe, he must of necessity have also been the governor of it before his incarnation. But now he came to administer the government as mediator; for all judgment was committed to him, not only as the Son of man, but because he was the Son of man. The Church, in a more especial manner, is subjected to him in this view; and he is the head of it, as well for the purpose of communicating his influence to the members, as of managing its concerns. And so entirely is every thing under his control, that not so much as a hair falls from the head of any of his people without either his express command, or his righteous permission. As in the days of his flesh he exercised the most unlimited authority over diseases, devils, and the very elements, so now every thing, whether designedly, or against its will, fulfils his unerring counsels."

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men" (Luke 2:14).

Red Guards Confiscate Religious Literature

BERLIN (EP) — Roman Catholic authorities reported that East Berlin border police have confiscated religious literature found on West Germans seeking to visit relatives in the Soviet Zone.

They also said that on several occasions Communist police at the Berlin Wall have told visitors to bring their religious "trash back to West Berlin and then come back without it."

IRS Analyzes 'Itemized Deductions'

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP)—Religious organizations received the biggest share of the $7.5 billion listed as charitable contributions by federal income taxpayers who itemized deductions on their 1962 tax returns (The 1962 returns are the latest to be analyzed by the Internal Revenue Service.)

According to IRS, $4.6 billion was listed as contributions to churches and other religious organizations or agencies.

These figures, it was stressed, do not include amounts given by individuals to such organizations who did not itemize contributions in their returns. Nearly 36 million taxpayers in 1962, IRS pointed out, claimed the standard deduction rather than itemize them.

Other charitable organizations such as health associations, child welfare, and community service groups accounted for $1.1 billion in itemized contributions.

The IRS report indicated that in 1962, there were 19,978,312 returns listing contributions to religious organizations in the amount of $4,577,826,000.

This indicated that the average contribution to religious organizations was close to four times larger than each contribution earmarked for such things as alumni associations, child welfare agencies, museums, art galleries, health organizations and the like.

Judge Says Protestants Must Press Pre-marital Counseling

CANTON, Ohio (EP)—Is the Protestant church ineffective in pre-marital and marriage counseling? A Canton jurist believes it is, and his challenge to do something about it has spurred an inter-religious discussion of the problem.

Judge John R. Milligan, Jr., of Stark County Domestic Relations Court reached his conclusion after a study of county statistics on marriage and divorce.

He reviewed 500 consecutive divorce cases in 1963, 1,000 consecutive marriage licenses issued in that year, 161 consecutive divorces in 1964 and 226 consecutive divorces which affected children under 14.

The judge found that 96 per cent of all first marriages were performed by clergymen. But he also discovered that only half of the people suing for divorce were attending church at the time of divorce.

Of those petitioning for divorce, 66 percent were Protestant, 15 percent were Roman Catholic; and 19 percent reported no church affiliation. Jews were not included in the study because they account for less than 1 percent of local divorces, he said.

He found that 44 percent of all divorces involve marriages of three years or less; 61 percent of all divorces involve teen-age marriages; 45 percent of all brides are teen-agers; and 50 percent of all brides are under 21.

"We simply can't go on this way," said the 36-year-old judge, a United Presbyterian elder.

Governors' Religious Affiliation:

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP) — There will be more Methodists—13—among state governors in 1965 than members of any other religious body.

Roman Catholics are next with eight, according to Methodist Information. There are seven Baptist governors, six Episcopalians, six Presbyterians, five United Church of Christ or Congregational Christian members, two Mormons, two Lutherans and a Unitarian.

Ten of the Methodist governors are chief executives of Southern or border states.

When the winners in the November elections take office next year there will be Methodist governors in Florida, Kansas, North Carolina, Iowa, Texas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Idaho, Maryland, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Eleven are Democrats and two Republicans.

Dr. Sockman on Long Pastorates:

DALLAS (EP)—A clergyman who spent almost 45 years as pastor of a famed New York church said here he doesn't believe that the average preacher should stay so long at a post.

"I don't think that it's generally good for a congregation or a preacher," said 75-year-old Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor-emeritus of Christ Church (Methodist), New York.

He retired from the New York pastorate three years ago. Counting the time he had spent as a layman in the congregation, he was associated with the same church a full half century.

On the whole, said Dr. Sockman, he feels that a minister ought to stay longer in a city church than in a rural congregation. He said he felt it takes longer to get acquainted with people and situations of a city.

He speculated that perhaps 15 years would be an ideal tenure for a city preacher. Pastoral changes in a city church would give the congregation a variety of ideas and intellectual challenges.

And a preacher often grows, too, by moving to new pastorates, said Dr. Sockman, for Christian Herald, non denominational monthly here.

Long active in radio and television work, he now writes the "Daily Meditations" sections for Christian Herald. He is a nephew of Dr. Daniel A. Poling, the magazine's editor.

Besides directing publicity, Mr. Poling will be affiliated with charities sponsored by the magazine—the Christian Herald Children's Home, Bowery Mission and Young Men's Home

A minister since 1953, Mr. Poling has served as pastor of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Buffalo, and of First Presbyterian Church, Le Roy, both in New York.

Church Finance Association to Meet in Goldsboro

The annual meeting of the Church Finance Association, Inc., for 1965, will be held with the First Free Will Baptist Church in Goldsboro, North Carolina, on Tuesday, January 12, 1965 at 10 a.m. The church is located at 604 East Ash Street.

Notices of this meeting are being mailed to active members. Those who fail to receive their notice are hereby notified to be represented.

In holding its twenty-fifth annual meeting with the Goldsboro church, the Church Finance Association, Inc., will be returning to the place of its birth. The first official action toward establishing the Church Finance Association was taken during a meeting of the executive committee of the North Carolina State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists held at the First church in Goldsboro on April 8, 1940. The members of the newly formed association reassembled at the Goldsboro church on April 29, 1940, and adopted a Certificate of Incorporation.

The present pastor of the Goldsboro church, the Rev. James A. Evans, is credited with having made the first suggestion for the forming of an association of this nature. He was one of the charter members and an incorporator. He also served as the first president of the Church Finance Association, Inc.

Not only was the Church Finance Association organized in the First Free Will Baptist Church in Goldsboro, but it has been able to serve this church on two occasions. In 1953 the association assisted this church in the building of an educational building. In 1955, after this church had lost its sanctuary by fire, the association assisted in the purchase of property at the present location where the twenty-fifth annual meeting will be held.

This will be a very important meeting of the Church Finance Association, Inc. Several important items of business that are vital to the future of the association will be considered. Every member should be represented if possible. Those who cannot attend in person or by regular delegates are urged to send a proxy. Proxy Blanks are available by writing to M. L. Johnson, Secretary, Box 220, Middlesex, North Carolina.

Visitors are invited to attend this annual meeting.

TWIN VIRTUES

by Albert M. Ezell

OURTESY and humility are two of the priceless virtues that constitute a great Christian character. Courtesy is the criteria by which all of the truly great are measured. It has been truly called the flower of knighthood.

The sword that is made of the best metal is also the most flexible. Thus, if our ego tries to tell us we have reached a higher level of prominence, we must still heed the teachings of courtesy, and exercise humility in recognizing as our equals, in the sight of God, those consigned to a much lower social level.

Great talents and accomplishments may carry us, briefly, to the very top rung of the ladder of fame; but the things for which we will be longest remembered, and that shall most invoke the blessings of God and man, are the little deeds of thoughtful kindness we have shown. Our willingness to step down from the security of the high road, braving the mire of despondency that has all but swallowed some weak and unfortunate traveler; till we have offered him a helping hand of love and compassion, then we have done nothing that could really be defined as an act of Christian chivalry.

I care not if a man has all the learning that can be acquired in all the great universities of our land, and still lacks the most essential element of all, the virtue of courtesy, his house of knowledge will soon topple, being without a stable foundation, of which courtesy itself is the very epitome of strength and endurance.

Penn once said, "If a civil word or two will render a man happy, he must be a wretch, indeed, who will not give them to him. Such a disposition is like lighting another man's candle by one's own, which loses none of its brilliance by what the other gains."

Courtesy, to me, is the act of one stepping off the pathway into the brambly wayside to make room for him who is on an errand of mercy.

Courtesy is patience and discipline of mind to the measure that will help you to hear another through a long and tiring discourse, without continuous interruptions, though his ideas are widely divergent from your own.

Courtesy is synonymous with humility. The two are inseparable, as is warmth and sunshine; yes, they are twin virtues.

Humility is a thing that is required by God toward the penitent; humble yourselves and pray, we are told.

"Heaven's gates are not so highly arched as princes' palaces," says Webster. "They that enter them must go upon their knees."

If ever we feel unduly elated or even just a bit egocentric over a spectacular display of talent, or by the applause of an audience, let us cast down our proud spirits in deepest humility and we shall but see them rise as a rebounding ball, ever higher toward heaven.

Let us remember the words left us by Augustine: "It was pride that changed angels into devils, but it is humility that makes men as angels." The same also said, "The sufficiency of my merit is to know that my merit is not sufficient."

Friendship and Love are very like a muscle,
They must be used or they will atrophy.
So use each other's friendship, love and truth,
And, in the words of Shakespeare, if you do
Then it must follow as the night the day
Thou canst not then be false to any man!

PROGRAM TO BE EXECUTED ON "PAY AS YOU GO" BASIS

By M. L. JOHNSON, Superintendent

In formulating plans for our Golden Anniversary Development Program, the superintendent and members of our board of trustees have felt that we should seek to provide the needed additional facilities and services on a cash basis. We feel that, by following an orderly schedule of development, our people will supply the funds necessary for this program without the need to go in debt or the extra expense that would be involved in financing.

In keeping with the above position, our Golden Anniversary Development Program was amended in the meeting of our board of trustees on December 3 by the addition of an appropriate statement. The following was recommended by the superintendent and unanimously adopted by all members of the board.

III. Financial:

It is not our purpose to execute this development program through deficit spending. We pledge to our people that this program shall neither cause us to go in debt beyond our resources nor to reduce our cash reserve to a level that will jeopardize the solvency of this Home. Therefore, in order to assure our solvency we do adopt the following financial goals as a part of this program.

- A. An endowment adequate to guarantee the safety of this institution,
- B. A general fund income adequate to operate debt free.
- C. Capital Funds to provide necessary capital outlay,
- D. A Financial Philosophy that is liberal enough to be progressive and conservative enough to be safe.

Goals A, B, C, and D were a part of the original program which was submitted to and endorsed by our State Convention. The amendment was by addition of the statement preceding the goals listed above.

The purpose of this amendment is to remind our people that we do plan to add the proposed facilities and services on a cash basis and to challenge them to help provide the funds with which to make satisfactory progress on this program.

BUILDING PROGRAM EXPECTED TO BEGIN IN EARLY 1965

In the recent meeting of our board of trustees all members expressed the opinion that we should begin our building program during the first part of 1965. Our building committee will meet with the superintendent soon after the first of the year for the purpose of reviewing our financial resources and making plans for the year. The building committee and superintendent will adopt a schedule to be followed in keeping with available funds indicated.

We are very grateful for those churches who have increased their gifts to this Home during the Thanksgiving season. We urge those who have not sent their fall contributions to do so in order that we may know how to plan our building schedule.

If all our churches will raise their suggested quotas during the next five years we will be able to begin our development program in early 1965 and continue until we have reached all the goals of our Golden Anniversary Development Program.

TRIBUTE TO THE MIXONS

The Rev. M. L. Johnson, superintendent of the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, announces the resignations of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Mixon, effective on December 15, 1964. Mr. Mixon has served as farm manager for sixteen years. Mrs. Mixon has served as dietician and as a substitute worker in the various departments of the Home.

The Mixons came to the Home in the fall of 1948. They were members of the Prospect Free Will Baptist Church, near Dunn, before uniting with the Memorial Chapel church at the Home. They have served under the following superintendents: Mr. Walter Croom, Revs. James A. Evans, S. A. Smith, R. H. Jackson, J. W. Everton, and M. L. Johnson.

Mr. Mixon has served as Sunday school superintendent at the Home for ten years. He served on the community farm advisory committee for two years. Mrs. Mixon, in addition to her other duties and work at the Home, served as church secretary and treasurer.

They have two children: Charles who is with the armed forces stationed in Korea; Mrs. Carroll Potter, who teaches public school in New Bern, North Carolina.

The Mixon's new work will be with the North Carolina School for the Deaf, Wilson. Mr. Mixon will serve as maintenance director and Mrs. Mixon will serve as dietician.

Mr. Johnson, in accepting their resignation, states: "Free Will Baptists of North Carolina can be proud of the valuable work and service that has been rendered to the Home by Mr. and Mrs. Mixon during their tenure here. It is with regret that we announce their leaving."

OBITUARIES

MRS. LOTY P. BAKER

Hearts filled with love for our dear mother, Mrs. Loty Parker Baker, bowed in reverence on October 30, 1964, as God drew the curtain on her earthly life. She was picked from her bed in the Wayne Memorial Hospital, Goldsboro, North Carolina, by the death angel for a flower to bloom in the Master's bouquet. We truly believe our loss is heaven's gain.

Mother was born in Wilson County, North Carolina, August 26, 1897, making her stay on earth sixty-seven years, two months, and four days. We surely loved her very much and miss her greatly.

She was a member of Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist Church of Route 2, Pikeville, North Carolina. She was faithful to her church as long as she was able to attend. Her Christian ways have set shining examples for her children to follow. She always taught us to pray and worship God as our Lord and Saviour, and to always be submissive to His will.

She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pleasant Hill church beneath a beautiful mound of flowers beside our earthly father, Mr. J. W. Baker, who passed away on January 8 of this same year.

We know that God has taken care of Mother now, and the greatest memorial we can make to her is to keep our lives pure and free from the cares of this world.

She Is Just Away

You must not say; you cannot say
That she is dead; she is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land.
She left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since she lingers there.
So think of her facing on, as dear
In the love of there as in the love of here,
Think of her still as the same and say,
She is not dead; she is away.

The Free Will Baptist

New Bern, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Sts. Delight Free Will Baptist Church met Monday evening, November 30, in the home of Mrs. Howard Gaskins for its regular meeting. There were fifteen members present. The meeting opened with the group's singing "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," followed with prayer by Mrs. Robert Jones.

The program topic for the month was "Blueprints for Victory," and the Scripture verse was Ephesians 6:11, "Put on the whole armour of God." Miss Dianne Jones read the Scripture lesson, Psalm 19; and Mrs. Florence Williamson and Mrs. Robert Jones brought the program discussion on building for the kingdom. For blueprints, they used devotion, dedication, and determination.

Routine business was transacted and a special mission offering was taken. The members discussed the sponsoring of a child at the Children's Home. Plans were also made for the annual Christmas party.

Mrs. Milton Rowe invited the members to meet at her home for the next meeting with the "Ambassadors for Christ" conducting the program. Mrs. Florence Williamson offered the closing prayer.

The hostess served refreshments to the members present.

Newport, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church held its monthly meeting in the fellowship hall on Tuesday evening, December 1. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Agnes Garner. The group then joined together in the singing of "Joy to the World," followed with Mrs. Garner offering the prayer. Mrs. Lois Bryan read the Scripture text from Luke 2:1-19, then gave the program for the evening, "Sharing God's Greatest Gift."

After a short business session the seventeen members and four new members present enjoyed refreshments served by the hostesses, Mrs. Vernon Slaughter and Mrs. Kathleen Slaughter.

Kenly, N. C. — The Woman's Auxiliary of Mt. Zion Free Will Baptist Church held its November meeting in the home of Mrs. Mary Martin with fourteen members present. The group joined together in singing "Praise Him, Praise Him," followed with Scripture reading taken from the nineteenth Psalm and prayer by Mrs. Ruby Johnson. The program, "Blueprints for Victory," was given by Mrs. Nadine Cocker, Mrs. Gealdine Cockrell, Mrs. Crema Johnson, Mrs. Alonia Narron, Mrs. Sara Lou Crocker, Mrs. Lizzie Godwin, and Mrs. Mary Martin. The meeting came to a close with the singing of "Bringing in the Sheaves" and the praying of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Refreshments were served by the hostess. The December meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Myrtle Lewis.

Henceforth Unto Him

ARE we living for the Lord? Is it our one great business in life to live for Him? How many objects have we set before us, on account of which we desire to live on earth?

To please our God and Father, to seek to follow the Lord Jesus Christ is the only business of life. The one in a profession, or in any occupation in life should seek to live, to labor, and to bear fruit for the Lord! Ask yourself, "What am I living for?"—Selected.

A Challenge for this Christmas

CHRISTIAN, DARE TO BE DIFFERENT

by Mrs. W. F. Whorton
Merritt, North Carolina

AS the Christmas season approaches, we begin to feel exhilaration in our hearts, reminding us of pleasant memories of our childhood, family reunions, and many other happy occasions.

For the Christian, it is a time when our spiritual life culminates into joy unspeakable. Why are we then so prone to fall in line with the worldly customs desecrating this sacred holiday season? We pretend to be celebrating the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. How many of us stop to think of our actions as we hurry and scurry to get our Christmas shopping done, our goodies baked and properly stored, and new clothes to show off, come Christmas day? We forget about the unfortunates who have no money for necessary daily supplies. We do not remember the many who go to bed hungry each night—not realizing that there are many who shiver from the cold because of the lack of money to buy warm clothing. (Read Luke 3:11.)

What does this have to do with Christmas? Heaven forbid that we should get morbid ideas that would curtail our pleasures during this wonderful yule season; nevertheless, let us consider these things in the light of Christian understanding.

Christmas for the person who is not a Christian is expressed quite differently from that of the Christian. The person who is not a Christian often spends more than he can afford on presents for relatives and friends, even to the point of borrowing money for gift buying. He complains if he spends more on a gift for a certain person that the same person has apparently spent for his gift. He gives to those from whom he expects to receive a gift (Matthew 5:46). His friends are those in his own financial bracket. He consumes much time in choosing gifts for those who already have everything. He serves alcoholic beverages at the Christmas party, and feels no remorse for having a few drinks on this special occasion.

Now let us each scrutinize these thoughts and see if Christians are guilty of any or all of the same traits. "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:2).

May we look about us and seek out those who are less fortunate than ourselves and find some way to bring cheer into their homes.

We may not find in our immediate vicinity those who are in need of material things, but surely there will be those who need spiritual strength and guidance which we can administer. Have you ever seen the tears of appreciation stream down the faces of the sick and shut-in as you read the Holy Scriptures and pray with them?

In giving ourselves, we receive a greater blessing than money can buy. This can be the happiest Christmas ever!

NOTES

QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

GOD IS BLESSING

God is blessing us in a great way, for which we as God's people should sing praises unto His holy name. In all our quarterly (Union) meetings, conferences, and other meetings we have seen a great increase in interest, both spiritually and financially, for which we are praising the Lord. There has been a great and glorious fellowship in the ranks of Free Will Baptists in North Carolina and with other Free Will Baptists of our connection in 1964.

I have learned from observation and experience that you can tell in a great measure where a man's heart is by the way that he spends his money. When people give to their church with a smile, it shows cheerfulness. Paul says that God loves a cheerful giver. An expression on our face tells whether our gift is cheerful. A frown shows that it is for duty or some other cause. There was a man who was a member of a church which I served several years ago who said, "I cannot make public talks; I cannot sing; I cannot teach, but I love to pay into God's treasury." This he did. A gift of love makes the giver happy and reaches out to others.

THANKSGIVING AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Thanksgiving at the Children's Home at Middlesex was one of cheerfulness. We learned that the offerings from Tuesday through Thursday amounted to $12,500. The attendance at the Thanksgiving service was extra good. People from various sections of our connection took baskets and boxes, according to custom, which were filled with good things to eat; and they rejoiced with one another as they ate. It was good to be there; everybody seemed happy. Brother Johnson had a smile that showed the Spirit of the Lord was moving in his heart. Why? Because the people throughout our connection were sending in by mail and by opening their billfolds and placing in the offering plates their gifts with cheerfulness. The Bible says, ". . . God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Corinthians 9:7).

THE THANKSGIVING MESSAGE

The Thanksgiving message at the Home was delivered by the Rev. L. B. Manning, pastor of King's Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church, and was very appropriate and soul-stirring. (As I failed to take with me my notebook, I am not trying to quote all that Brother Manning said; but I only wish everybody could have heard it.) Yes, this old man's heart was stirred to praise God for such preachers as Brother Manning. In speaking, he said that he raised $600 for the Home this year with as much ease as $50 some years ago. He used this as a measuring rod for the growing interest in the Home, not to tell what he was doing.

It is a fact that interest in the Home is growing yearly; and according to the program as announced by Superintendent M. L. Johnson, we are looking for greater things in the near future. But, back to the message of Brother Manning in expressing thanks for what has been done and what is being done—he related the following story: A man was driving a team of horses to a wagon, and the horses got frightened and began running. The man was thrown from the wagon, but he held to the reins and was being dragged along the road. People shouted, "Turn loose"; but he held on. Finally the horses were stopped. Someone said, "Why did you not turn loose?" The man said, "Look into the wagon." When they looked, they saw the man's little boy in the wagon. The application was that when we look at what God has done for us here at the Home and in all our institutions and missions, how can we "turn loose"? We must hold on and keep going for the glory of God.

We want to know that the more we do the more we can do. God makes this possible. Paul said, "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully. . . . And God is able to make all grace abound toward you: that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work" (2 Corinthians 9:6-8).

So, not only does God bless the immediate gift, but He makes it possible to do greater things. As Brother Manning said, we must hold on; and as the Rev. W. B. Everett used to say, we must "keep on holding on." Yes God is doing great things—at Mount Olive College, our Children's Home, our press in Ayden, our Cragmont Assembly, and in our state and foreign missions. Perhaps we are not doing as much as we should and as much as God is calling for in all these enterprises, but we are growing. But let us push harder for all these things and lie down at night with a clear conscience that we have done our best, and especially on Sunday when the offering plate is passed, or when the collection for the special fund campaign comes around. Be truthful to God by digging deep into your bank accounts to carry on the work of the Lord.

Let us remember that we are now in the space of time that we make Christmas gifts. So let us cut down on Santa Claus and give more to Jesus and His benevolence. Make gifts to the Children's Home at Middlesex, Mount Olive College, and Cragmont Assembly; and subscribe to our church paper, that which is often called the "Baptist," but which in reality is The Free Will Baptist. Also, make gifts to missions—Arizona-Mexico Missions, etc. May we give to God and keep Brother Eliston and Brother Timmons and their helpers cheered up. We have so much that we can do. May we remember that God loves a cheerful giver. If we hold back on God, He will hold back on us. I have observed that this is true. If we go square with God and give our tithe to Him, He will open the windows of heaven and pour us out a blessing (read Malachi 3:8-12). Get your Bible and read 2 Corinthians 9:6-11. If we will take a careful check on our giving, perhaps we will find that we are "robbing God."

NO 'BAPTIST' DECEMBER 30

In order to maintain our schedule of not printing but 50 issues of "The Free Will Baptist" per year, there will not be an issue on December 30. However, there being 53 Wednesdays in 1964, we are printing 51 issues. The last issue you will receive this year will be that of December 23, which will be our Christmas issue.

Questions & Answers

Conducted by J. P. BARROW
3824 Richland Ave., Nashville 5, Tenn.

QUESTION: Please explain, "And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose. And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many" (Matthew 27:52, 53). Do you think that this incident depicted in these verses is a literal event of history? If so why did the other evangelists fail to record so remarkable an event?—M. J. G., Illinois.

ANSWER: That what is reported in the passage is true I have no doubt whatsoever because biblical research testifies to the fact that it may be found in all versions or translations of the Bible as well as all the manuscripts of Matthew. And I do not know that its authenticity has been questioned before your question which expresses doubt of its historicity. Why the other gospel writers do not include this incident is as much a mystery to others interested in the whys and wherefores of the mysteries of Holy Writ as to you, although it is qualified by the fact that many other marvelous things are chronicled by only one of the four. The only answer I have for this is that the Holy Spirit was pleased to have it so.

These sleeping saints so brought forth from their graves were those with whom God had been pleased as they lived here under the Old Testament light that they had. Now they were experiencing the promise that Jesus promised in John 11 and that to which saints under the Old Testament had looked forward. They were being prepared at least in part for the subsequent exit. This took place when the spirit of their risen Lord entered into them. Their appearing to many in the city which they did was undeniable evidence, not only of their own resurrection, but of His resurrection, and as Paul calls attention to the fact, His resurrection assures us of our resurrection. (See 1 Corinthians 15:12-58; compare John 11:37-45.)

These with all the saints who have died since are evidently in the presence of Christ where they are to remain until Christ comes back to the earth. "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: . . . We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord" (2 Corinthians 5:6, 8). "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" (1 Thessalonians 4:14).

Some suppose that these resurrected and allowed to go into the city where they were seen of many and also Lazarus went back to their graves from which they will emerge at the resurrection of the just when Christ comes into the air for them as He will do in the end of this age. Others suppose that these in whatever form they came forth from the grave at Christ's resurrection went to heaven with Christ in resurrected bodies when He ascended and that they will come in those bodies with Christ at His return to the earth. I incline toward the first view. I think probably Lazarus died, that his body went back to dust, and that these who came out only appeared in a temporary form. They also will be among those of the first resurrection, which is future, at the time the church is rapture.

"We thank Thee, then, O Father,
For all things bright and good,
The seed time and the harvest,
Our life, our health, our food:
No gifts have we to offer
For all Thy love imparts,
But that which Thou desirest,
Our humble, thankful hearts.
All good gifts around us
Are sent from Heaven above;
Then thank the Lord, O thank the Lord,
For all His love."

. . . what course of action should we take

When fear knock at our doors?

What can we say?

How will we find the fortitude to shake
The paralyzing bonds of fear away?

I've heard it said, when fear knocks at the door,

Send faith to answer it, and you will find

That there is no one there; and what is more

That we are all particularly blind,
For faith is always there for you and me.

It's just our own unwillingness to see!

THE GIFT THAT TAUGHT

by Rhoda Howell

HIS ball goes to Jack, this doll to Mary, this ping-ping set to Terry. I believe that is the end of my gifts," John explained to his sister.

"But what about Dick? Aren't you going to give him a gift?" Donna asked.

"I suppose I'll give him something. Anything will do for him so guess I'll give him a handkerchief."

"Why, Tom Clark," Donna was indignant. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself? Why don't you give him the ping-ping set and Terry a hanky?"

Tom stared at her in dismay.

"Are you crazy?" he asked. "Terry wouldn't accept a handkerchief. His folks are rich."

"That's what I mean," Donna replied, "Terry has everything he needs but Dick has so little. He'd really appreciate a ping-pong set."

Tom did not answer. If he gave Terry a nice gift, he'd get one in return—maybe that football game he'd been wanting. Dick couldn't afford to give a very expensive gift.

"Think it over," Donna said as she started up the stairs. "You know it is more blessed to give than to receive and one should never give expecting a return gift."

As Tom wrapped the gifts, he thought of Donna's words and they puzzled him. She had almost read his thoughts.

Tom wrapped his gifts, put stickers and names on them, and the next morning he took them to school and put them under the tree.

The children found it hard to wait for the gift exchange. Gifts were piled high around the tree and each child looked carefully, trying to find his name on a gift.

Dick stood back waiting patiently. As Tom watched him his heart hurt a little. Dick had so few things of his own and his mother worked so hard to make a living for her four children. But what was done was done, and it was too late to change now.

The air was filled with excitement when the time came to pass out the gifts. Each child sat expectantly, waiting for his name to be called.

Dick's name was the first to be called. He carried his small package back to his seat and opened it. Joy filled his eyes as he thanked Tom for the pretty hanky.

The ache in Tom's heart eased a little. Dick was happy with his gift, so why worry?

As the gifts were passed around Tom received a new book of adventure stories. He glanced at the name of the giver and his heart sank. He thought surely Terry would give him a better gift than this. He'd thank him later. There was no hurry.

The last gift to be given out was another for Dick.

"Me?" Dick asked in surprise as his name was called, "You sure it's for me?"

"It says Dick Brown." The teacher smiled. "Aren't you Dick Brown?"

All the children watched with eagerness as Dick unwrapped his package. What could it be?

Tom stared as the last wrapping came off. It was hard to believe but there it was. Dick had received the football game he had wanted so badly. And from Terry!

As Tom watched Dick he smiled. There was a new gladness in his heart just from seeing how very happy Dick had become. At the same time his heart smote him to think that another had done what he knew Christ had wanted him to do.

How right Donna had been when she said it was more blessed to give than to receive!

"Thanks for the ping-pong," Terry spoke at his side,

"And many thanks for the book," Tom answered truthfully. "And thanks also for the gift that taught me a lesson."

Terry stared but Tom just smiled as he walked away.—My Pleasure.

CHRISTMAS LIGHTS IN THE JUNGLE

Cleva R. Hanna

MISS LEILA Epps of Kingtree, S. C., for 30 years a missionary to Brazil, tells of this unique experience.

Miss Epps had made plans for a Christmas tree for the Indians at a small settlement in the Amazon jungle. From her they had learned of the Christ Child's birth but knew nothing of celebrating that event.

From the stores in Sao Paulo the missionary had brought decorations and gifts. The Indian children had gleefully helped put the decorations in place. Darkness was closing in when Miss Epps reached into her trunk for the candles. But there were no candles. After scrambling among papers and gifts she realized that the lighting had been left behind.

In disappointment and chagrin she wailed to her companion, "What shall I do? It will be no Christmas tree without lights."

At that moment two of the large, hard-shelled lightning bugs of the jungle flitted between the branches of the tree.

"God will provide!" shouted Miss Epps.

Handing two paper bags to two of the boys she asked them to catch several of the beetles for her. They scampered away to the edge of the clearing and in almost no time were back with three bugs in each bag.

Carefully the twinklers were tied to REPORT FROM JOSE GUZMAN

by JOHN B. ELLISTON

The wise men came saying, "Where is the King?" It is well to ask the same question today. Very shortly now comes the time of the year when everybody celebrates the birth of our Lord. For a great number of people this only means entertainment, or a time to give gifts to one another. The churches are full. We see programs and festivities, singing and happiness; but in all this where is the Lord?

In the majority of the Christmas festivities you cannot find the King. He was not found in all the splendor of the palace in Jerusalem. The shepherds found Him in a stable, sleeping in a manger, and wrapped in swaddling clothes. "And this shall be a sign unto you," said the angels. And the sign is still the same. The Lord is not found in the magnificence and splendor of our days, but in the humble places in this world: in that heart, which before was unclean like the filthiness of that stable, but is now sanctified by the presence of the Christ, He has found lodging.

The selfish, the proud, and the elevated do not know the King and cannot find Him. They, like Jerusalem and Herod's palace, have everything in abundance; but they do not know where to find the King. How about you? Do you know where the King is? You can find Him when you seek Him humbly and sincerely.

During the month of November we maintained the following averages:

In Sunday school, 42; in Sunday evening services at the House of God Free Will Baptist Church in Nogales, Sonora, 19; Wednesday night prayer meeting at the church, 12; Saturday night prayer services at the church, 10.

In other services we had the following averages: Monday night services in the Santa Ana Mission, 23; Tuesday night services in the Magdalena Mission, 33; Thursday night services at the mission in Bolivar Street, 10.

We distributed 1,300 tracts, two Bibles, and ten New Testaments during the month. We witnessed six professions of faith: two in Santa Ana and four in Magdalena.

We started publishing a monthly bulletin by the House of God Free Will Baptist Church in Nogales, Sonora. It is published in Spanish, and is distributed free to those who wish to receive it.

TOYS AND TREATS NEEDED

by JOHN B. ELLISTON

We would like to suggest that some of the auxiliaries or leagues would like to collect used toys, repair and paint them, and send them out in time for us to distribute them for Christmas. It is very likely that you can send them, along with good used clothing, on a truck line deadhead. If at all possible, however, send them not much later than December 1 so that they will have time to arrive before Christmas.

Probably by the time you read this, all of you will have received a copy of the Arizona-Mexico Missionary, giving a list of students in the school. An idea used by the First Free Will Baptist Church in Hobbs, New Mexico, is that instead of drawing names of each other in a Sunday school class, they wrote the students' names on slips of paper, and drew them out. Then, instead of having a gift exchange, they bought small gifts for the persons' whose names they drew. They wrapped these gifts and sent them together, each gift labeled for whom it was intended. Most of our children are in their teens, or just younger than their teens, so gifts appropriate for such will be appreciated.

Another thing we are going to need are Christmas treats in the Academy and in the missions. Any fruits, nuts, or candy will be very welcome for this purpose. However, fruits should be of a kind that will keep in transit and storage. In most cases we can do better to buy treats in Mexico than we can carry them across to the missions; however, here in the Academy, and for the work on this side, treats are very welcome.

Remember, most of the children with whom we are working will only have Christmas toys and treats as you provide them. I am sure that you will not forget them as you celebrate our Lord's birthday. ". . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matthew 25:40).

Please send all contributions of toys and treats to: Arizona-Mexico Missions, P. O. Box 550, Nogales, Arizona. Thank you.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR DECEMBER 27

WISE MEN COME TO JESUS

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 2:1-12

MEMORY VERSE: Isaiah 60:1, 3

I. INTRODUCTION

Many wonderful things happened when Jesus was born. Although Christmas Day is now past, the joy of the occasion should not be past. In fact, it should never die. So far as the joy of it is concerned, it should live 365 days of the year.

The fact is that the birth of Jesus was just the beginning. It was the beginning for Joseph and Mary, and it was the beginning for the world. It was the beginning of the first stage of the dispensation of God's grace—the revelation of God's love in Christ Jesus. Since that day the world has never been the same, for the birth of the infant Jesus changed the course of human history. Those who observed the events that took place almost two thousand years ago did not understand the full impact of what was taking place. In fact, down to this present day, we are seeking to understand more and more of its mysteries.

The title of this lesson is quite significant. Wise men do come to Jesus. There is no greater wisdom than that which brings a soul to Jesus. It is the foolish man who refuses to come. Just as the wise men came hundreds of years ago, so must all souls come to Christ. Their coming required effort and determination. In like manner, those who come to Christ for salvation must possess determination. The effort to find Him must be real and sincere; and once He is found, He must be followed by faith. This is the real test. Are you a person of wisdom, or are you a foolish person? —Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Wise men from the Eastern countries came to worship the Lord Jesus at His birth (v. 1).

2. The wise men enquired in Jerusalem where they might find Him (v. 2).

3. The news that the King of the Jews was born troubled Herod (v. 3).

4. Herod called the religious leaders together to ask them where Christ should be born (v. 4).

5. Being familiar with the Old Testament prophecies concerning the Messiah, these leaders pointed out to Herod that Jesus was to be born in Bethlehem (vv. 5, 6).

6. Herod appeared ashamed or afraid to openly discuss his jealous fears with the people (v. 7).

7. The king instructed the wise men to go to Bethlehem and enquire of Jesus and then to return to him with whatever information they could get (v. 8).

8. As the wise men went from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, the star guided them to the manger (v. 9).

9. As soon as the wise men entered the place where the Lord lay, they presented themselves and their gifts to Him (v. 11).

10. Being warned of God not to return to Herod, the wise men returned to their homes another way (v. 12).—Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Heathen people throughout the world have frequently been found to be worshipers of the sun. This is not so surprising when they have had no opportunity to learn of God, for the sun gives them more blessings than anything else they can see, and they do not realize that the sun was given by God. The heathen would offer to the sun sacrifices of plants and animals, sometimes of life itself.

For any such heathen who are left today, how important it is for us to let them know that a brighter sun has come—and it is Jesus, the Son of God. "Arise, shine; for thy light is come"

(Isaiah 60:1). He does not want us to sacrifice things to Him. But He does want us to freely give to Him.

Yet we owe Him something, and what should it be? Let us look to the Wise-men who traveled in search of the baby. What did they bring? Treasures—gold and frankincense and myrrh. Their richest possessions, their personal treasures—all given in love and devotion to a baby they did not know. But they knew who He was and what He would do.

Today we have the record of the life of Christ; we have His promise of eternal life. Do we serve Him with love and devotion? God has given us a lifetime, special talents, and money for necessities. The amount we use for Him is . . . a measure of our devotion to Christ. According to the Scriptures, all nations shall come to the glory of the Lord. Are we coming, with gifts, like the Wise-men? Are we leading others because they see our example, as others saw the Wise-men? — Standard Commentary.

2. The visit of the wise men to Jesus was one of the significant events connected with His birth. These were men of learning, devoted to philosophy, especially to astronomy and astrology, and to the contemplation and worship of God as they conceived Him. These "wise men" demonstrated their wisdom by coming from the East to do homage to the infant Jesus. It is still the mark of man's highest wisdom to come to Jesus.

Daniel was one of the wisest men of his day. Burdened with the responsibilities of ruling Babylon, he yet found time to pray three times daily. It was because He thus came to God that he was so wise, so diligent, and so successful in business. The king of Babylon found Daniel to be far wiser than all the wise men of the realm. A man must be busier than Daniel if he has no time to pray, and wiser than Daniel if he can do what Daniel did without God to aid him!

No longer do we need a distant star to guide us to Jesus. God has placed in our hands His own Word, the Bible. In it we find revealed all the truth about Himself and the kind of life He expects us to live. As Whittier wrote:

We search the earth for truth, we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful
From gravestone and written scroll,
From the flower fields of the soul;
And weary seekers for the best,
We come back laden from our quest

To find that all the sages said
Is in the Book our mothers read.

Wisdom is superior to health. He who knows God is rich beyond measure. Paul told Timothy not to trust in uncertain riches (I Timothy 6:17). Because we are earthbound we tend to refuse Paul's advice. How hard it is for us to grasp the truth that riches are ephemeral and that in them is no lasting security. Matthew Henry contrasted riches with wisdom. He said, "See how much better wisdom is than the precious onyx or sapphire, for wisdom was from eternity God's delight (Proverbs 8:30) and lay in His bosom, but the sapphires are the pavement under His feet. There let us put all the wealth of this world, and not in our hearts." Do we have true wisdom in our hearts? Have we, like the "wise men," come to Jesus?—Senior Bible Teacher (Union Gospel Press).

3. Although the Bible does not tell us, we like to think of the Bethlehem Star as having five points and each one of these points standing for a great truth.

The first point of this five-pointed star stands for wisdom because it led the wise men to Jesus. It is always a thing of great wisdom for men to come to Jesus. Coming to Christ is not a sign of weakness or eccentricity, but a sign of one who has the ability to see his great need.

The second point of this five-pointed star points toward work. Jesus was born into a family of working people. The angels announced His birth to working shepherds. When Jesus called the apostles, they were working men. Then when Jesus gave the great invitation it was to working men: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28).

The third point of this five-pointed star indicates wonder. The wise men must have been filled with wonder when they saw the star. The shepherds were amazed when the angels announced His birth to them. And the prophet, Isaiah, had said, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6). Everything about Him is wonderful — His birth, His teachings, His miracles, His death, His resurrection. He is truly the "Wonder" of the world.

The fourth point of this five-pointed star signifies worship. The wise men worshiped Jesus when they came to Him. The first impulse of a heart perceiving Jesus for the first time is to worship. No person can long remain a faithful Christian without worship. Someone has said that as a vine reaches out for something upon which to run, the soul of man reaches out in search for something to worship. Our hearts are never satisfied until they turn to worship Christ.

The fifth point of this five-pointed star points toward witnessing. The shepherds, after they had seen Jesus, went and told others. It is the duty of every Christian to share this wonderful message of Jesus with others. In fact, this is God's method for the spread of Christianity "to all the world." — Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

branches of the tree. Immediately a swarm of light shining from each head, and two larger lights twinkling on and off from each body.

The Indians were jubilant. Miss Epps declares that no civilized country could decorate such a beautiful tree.

Afterward the six bugs were gently freed whereupon all flew across the clearing to continue their flitting through the forest, not knowing what service they had rendered or what happiness they had brought. — Gospel Herald.

He comes from a family of ministers. In addition to Dr. Poling, clergymen in the family include Mr. Poling's father, brother and father-in-law.

'Under God' Remains in Pledge As High Court Rejects Appeal

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP)—The words "under God" will continue as part of the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag of the United States, the U. S. Supreme Court has ordered. However, no written decision was handed down by the justices.

In a simple statement the High Court denied petitioners' writs of certiorari. Its refusal to hear an appeal left standing the Pledge as it has been known since 1954 when Congress approved addition of the words which officially acknowledge God.

This was viewed here by some observers as probably being indicative of the tenor of feeling the Court has toward other cases pending opening prayer in the Senate and House, oaths by public officials acknowledging God, and chapels and chaplains in Congress, the armed forces, and in the service academies.

In posting its decision not to render a formal decision on the New York-oriented "Under God" case, the Supreme Court gave no explanation. But through its action, the pledge remains in tact.

The case, Lewis vs. Allen, originated from appeals in New York from parents who complained that having to repeat the phrase violated their religious precepts, in that they do not acknowledge a deity per se nor encourage their children to do so.

It originated from attempts to bar the phrase's use in New York public school rooms.

The Supreme Court, in a parenthetical explanation to earlier cases which struck down state-prescribed prayers and Bible reading in public schools, indicated the decisions had no bearing whatever on other matters where the deity is invoked by officials in public ceremonies.

How can we glorify the Father? By the fervent singing of hymns on Sunday? By teaching a Sunday school class? By making our contributions when the collection plate is passed? Yes, of course; but also, and especially, as Christians by dedicating our jobs to Christ, and by performing our work—every detail of it—honestly, faithfully, unselfishly, enthusiastically, in a manner that will please Him. It should be possible to identify a Christian merely by watching him at his daily task.—John E. Mitchell Jr., in The Christian in Business (Fleming H. Revell Company).

Will Original Free Will Baptists Survive?

are committed to, and some are in actual preparation for, entering other foreign fields as soon as conditions are favorable for entering such fields. In our Free Will Baptist League training program, we have a program which reflects the dedication and experience of some of the finest Free Will Baptists of the past half century, plus the enthusiasm of some wonderful younger leaders of today. A good superannuation program is in operation, which has been commended by leaders of other denominations. A program of Sunday school promotional work has been in operation in North Carolina successfully for the past ten years, and may well serve as a model for other like programs. Our woman's auxiliary program is the oldest woman's work program among Free Will Baptists, and is well organized and experiencing the blessings of the Lord. We have a good literature program for all departments of the work. The Free Will Baptist Press offers Sunday school helps for teachers and for pupils of all ages. A complete set of program books is offered for the Free Will Baptist League. The woman's auxiliary has its own fine yearbook of programs, along with manuals and other literature items needed. Each year, excellent literature for the daily vacation Bible school is issued. As writers and editors for publications and literature, the press employs some of the best the denomination has to offer.

Fifth, in the International Convention of Original Free Will Baptists, we have the beginning, and a good beginning, of what can well be developed into a great and useful worldwide organization for the defence of our doctrines and the propagation of the gospel throughout the earth. It would be hard for one with more wisdom and understanding than this writer to pass a fair judgment upon this organization at the present time. Those who are leading in its development are having to feel their way through the darkness of uncertainty over what is the best course to take, and to meet some opposition from those who do not want to see another general organization formed at this time. It is not easy, and those who are trying it, need far more our prayers than our criticism. If this is not the right approach to the future survival and expansion of Original Free Will Baptists, we need to have faith to believe that God in due time will show us the "true way," and give us the courage and strength to walk therein.

Finally, we have the goodwill of many fine people among other Free Will Baptist groups and in other denominations. We have reason to think that many over the country feel as one brother expressed himself recently to this writer: "The fact that I am for the National Association does not mean that I am against the North Carolina Free Will Baptists or any other group seeking to preserve and propagate the great doctrines we hold in common. The task is big enough, and the world is wide enough, for all of us. If we must disagree, let it be in a spirit of tolerance, and let us pray one for the other."

Yes, Original Free Will Baptists will survive. We believe that they will be here, in small groups or in great, worldwide organizations, when the Lord returns to receive His own and to reward the faithful.

PRAISE

by WESLEY C. SMEAL

The word "praise" is derived from the Latin which means "to prize." "To prize" means to place a high value upon. It includes sufficient understanding to enjoy or admire a thing's excellence. Just what is God worth to you? Do you enjoy His excellence? How do we evaluate God in our lives? Do we evaluate Him in terms of personal prestige? Popularity? Personal advantage? Or, do we think of God in terms of the highest fulfillment of life for all mankind—in terms of an eternal purpose of creative love for all persons? "O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!" (Psalm 8:1). The Hebrew for the word "excellent" means "worthy," "powerful," and "glorious."

Spiritual praise involves more than an appreciation for what someone or something does for us (such as giving pleasure). It involves an appreciation for the thing itself, and in its own right. God, the spiritual ground for praise, is to be thought of and thanked for what He is. The psalmist emphasizes this when he writes about the spiritual qualities of God. "Great is the Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite" (Psalm 147:5). "For the Lord is great, and greatly to be praised" (Psalm 96:4).—The Free Methodist.

Ten Commandments For Teen-Agers

1. Don't let your parents down; they brought you up.
2. Be humble enough to obey. You may give orders someday.
3. Choose companions with care. You become what they are.
4. Choose only a date who would make a good mate.
5. Guard your thoughts. As you think, you are.
6. Be master of your habits, or they will master you.
7. Don't be a show-off when you drive. Drive with safety and arrive.
8. Don't let the crowd pressure you. Stand for something, or you'll fall for anything.
9. Go to church faithfully. Make the week's first steps the church steps.
10. To Christ be always true; He gave His all for you.

The Last Number

With this issue of "The Free Will Baptist," we publish the last number for the year 1964. There have been fifty-one numbers, with more than 800 pages during the year. We hope that each page has been a blessing to our readers. It is our prayer that the name of our Saviour has been glorified and the cause of Free Will Baptists strengthened.

For us it has been a good year, but not as good as we would have liked for it to be; therefore, we shall work harder during 1965. We shall set our goals higher, and with Him as our guide and strength, we shall accomplish much. To be sure, there have been mistakes. There shall be some during 1965, but with each one we hope to benefit; we hope to try a little harder.

As we have stated many times, we need the help, support, and prayers of our readers. Your response has much to do with our accomplishments. We need your news items, your written articles, and your subscription renewal.

The next issue of "The Free Will Baptist" will be dated January 6, 1965, Volume 80, Number 1. The entire personnel of the Free Will Baptist Press covets your prayers during the coming year.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS

(Taken from The Amplified New Testament)

NOW when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, wise men (astrologers) from the East came to Jerusalem, asking,

2 Where is He Who has been born King of the Jews? For we have seen His star in the East at its rising, and have come to worship Him.

3 When Herod the king heard this, he was disturbed and troubled, and the whole of Jerusalem with him;

4 So he called together all the chief priests and learned men (scribes) of the people, and anxiously asked them where the Christ was to be born.

5 They replied to him, In Bethlehem of Judea; for so it is written by the prophet:

6 And you Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, you are not in any way least or insignificant among the chief cities of Judah; for from you shall come a Ruler (Leader) Who shall govern and shepherd My People Israel.

7 Then Herod sent for the wise men (astrologers) secretly, and accurately to the last point ascertained from them the time of the appearing of the star—that is, how long the star had made itself visible since its rising in the East.

8 Then he sent them to Bethlehem, saying, Go and search out the Child carefully and diligently, and when you have found Him bring me word, that I too may come and worship Him.

9 When they had listened to the king they went their way, and lo, the star which had been seen in the East in its rising went before them, until it came and stood over the place where the young Child was.

10 When they saw the star, they were thrilled with ecstatic joy.

11 And going into the house they saw the Child with Mary His mother, and they fell down and worshipped Him. Then opening their treasure bags, they presented to Him gifts, gold, and frankincense and myrrh.

12 And receiving an answer to their asking, they were divinely instructed and warned in a dream not to go back to Herod; so they departed to their own country by a different way.

COLLEGE CHRISTMAS VACATION

Students at Mount Olive College began their Christmas vacation Friday, December 18, and will return to classes on Monday, January 4, 1965.

President W. Burkette Raper announced that offices would remain open at the college except for December 24-27. Dormitories will reopen Sunday, January 3, at 4 p.m.

GOD WITH US!

'Twas CHRISTMAS EVE! The children in Nashville were sound asleep. Mother had just finished placing presents around a beautifully decorated Christmas tree when the phone rang. How thrilled she was to hear the voice of her husband—an Army Chaplain, who, after many months overseas had just arrived in New York; "I'll reach home sometime during the night," he joyously said. "I'll keep the news of his coming from the children and surprise them!" thought the mother. Hastily she moved the presents away from the tree.

About daybreak, the husband arrived! After joyous greetings, the wife said, "How surprised the children will be to see you! Just before they gather about the Christmas tree, I want you to lie beneath it. I will cover you with a sheet. The children will think that the presents are beneath it!"

Shortly the children ran squealing downstairs! They looked at the beautiful tree, and the billowing sheet, concealing, they thought, their presents. As they looked, the sheet began to move up and down! How great was their joy when they saw, not presents but their daddy!

How suggestive is this incident of the real meaning of Christmas! God Himself became incarnate. He came to be present with mankind in the person of His dear Son: "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel"—God with us!—Walter B. Knight.

GIFTS TO COLLEGE REACH THE $1 MILLION MARK

Gifts to Mount Olive College since it was chartered thirteen years ago have reached the $1 million mark, President W. Burkette Raper announced to a Founders Day audience Tuesday.

Leading contributor has been the Free Will Baptist denomination, sponsor of the college, which has given $652,000. Gifts totaling $348,000 have been received from local friends, the Mount Olive College Foundation, and other sources, he reported.

Of the $1 million in gifts, $910,000 has been in money and $90,000 in stock, bonds, and real estate. "These gifts do not include the thirty-five percent equity which Mount Olive College has in the Henderson Memorial Foundation," President Raper explained. The Henderson Foundation was created by the will of the late Dr. C. C. Henderson of Mount Olive and has a listed value of approximately $800,000.

Financial support to the college has increased from $800, the first year after it was chartered, to $233,000 during the 1963-64 fiscal year, President Raper revealed. "With this growth in support we expect to reach the $2 million mark in gifts within the next five years," he declared.

Principal speaker at the annual Founders Day program was Dr. Millard P. Burt, dean of Methodist College at Fayetteville. He described Mount Olive College "as the intellectual arm of the Free Will Baptist Church in the search for divinely revealed truth." The college is also a manifestation of the church's responsibility to "let its light shine before men through service without narrow sectarianism," the audience was told.

"The fair, unspotted Son of God
Has come to pass beneath the rod
For sinners, guilty, wretched lost—
He bought us at tremendous cost!"

COLLEGE RECEIVES FIRST CHECK

Mount Olive College has received $6,707 from the first distribution of earnings of the Henderson Memorial Foundation, President W. Burkette Raper has announced. The foundation was created in the will of the late Dr. C. C. Henderson of Mount Olive.

The allocation to Mount Olive College represents 35 percent of the income of the foundation for the fiscal year following the death of Dr. Henderson on October 8, 1963.

Dan H. Outlaw, trust officer of the Bank of Mount Olive who is the executor of the estate of Dr. Henderson, reported that the total distributions from the foundation this year were $19,162.

President Raper announced that Mount Olive College would place $5,000 of its income from the Henderson Foundation in the development fund for dormitories on the new campus.

From the opening of Mount Olive College in 1954 until his death in 1963, Dr. Henderson served without charge as physician to the college. During this time, he was also the leading benefactor of the college with gifts in excess of $50,000. The first academic building on the new campus will be named in his memory.

His Name Shall Be Called

Wonderful...

THE word wonderful is very meaningful. It is often used in describing persons or things when other words seem to fail to complete the description. It means marvelous; remarkable; a supernatural event; a sign; a miracle; something strange and surprising, or exciting. Isaiah prophesied that a child would be born who would be called Wonderful. After studying about this person who was to be called Wonderful, we think that the name is very fitting and complimentary.

In Isaiah 9:6 we read, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders: . . ." If we stopped reading there we might think that this child would be an earthly king or ruler who would govern the people during His lifetime. When we read on, however, and learn of the names by which He was to be called, it causes us to think and wonder. An earthly king might be called by the first name given, Wonderful; or even by the second, Counselor. But when we read the other three names—The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace—we know that such names cannot be merited by men.

Then, in the next verse a description is given of this government that shall be upon this person's shoulders: "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this" (v. 7). We know that this is not a description of the worldly governments we know about; for they often become strong and powerful, but they are sometimes lost to others through wars and commotions.

Just who was this person who was to be called Wonderful? Was the prophet Isaiah the first to mention His coming?

by MRS. C. D. CLARK
Greenville, North Carolina

The person about whom Isaiah prophesied was the Messiah, the Saviour of sinners. His coming was promised in the Garden of Eden after the serpent deceived Adam and Eve and they ate the forbidden fruit. In Genesis 3:14, 15 God said to the serpent, ". . . Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."

In Isaiah 7:14 we read, ". . . Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." Here we have another name given. Could this be the same child who was to be called Wonderful? Immanuel means "God with us," or Christ. Christ means the expected Saviour or Messiah. Surely a person named Immanuel could also be called Wonderful.

In Luke's Gospel an account is given of the angel of the Lord appearing unto Mary, the virgin of whom Isaiah had said that this child should be born. The angel told Mary that the child should be called Jesus. Since Christ means Jesus and Immanuel means Christ, we have no conflict whatsoever in the name. He could still be called Wonderful.

As we study the Bible we learn that Jesus is called by many, many names. He also gave Himself many names after He came. The same angel who appeared unto Mary also told her that He should also be called the Son of the Highest. We know that God is the Highest; therefore, we are sure that this person who was to be called Wonderful was none other than the God-promised Child—His only begotten Son.

We read about Him in John 3:16, and in that same verse we also learn why God sent Him: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Here we have a wonderful Father sending a wonderful Son for a wonderful purpose.

For generations men had been looking for the promised Messiah; nevertheless, news of His advent brought both fear and surprise. This we learn in Luke 2: 8-14, 18: "And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. . . . And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds."

As we read the accounts given of His birth we must say that His was a wonderful birth indeed—a supernatural birth. One of the great foundations of the Christian faith has, from the beginning, been the doctrine of the virgin birth of Jesus Christ.

May we get a glimpse of the wonderful life He lived while He was here on the earth among sinful men. At the age of twelve He was found in the temple sitting in the midst of the doctors both hearing them and asking them questions. And all that heard Him were astonished at His understanding and answers. He realized early that He must be about His Father's business, and His entire ministry was performed wonderfully. He gave sight to the blind, strength to the lame, health to the sick, food to the hungry; turned water into wine; brought forth the dead from the grave; restored life to the widow's son of Nain; stilled the storm of the Sea of Galilee; cleansed the lepers; cast out demons; and did many, many other things. He went about doing good, ministering to the needs of the people.

His teachings, miracles, acts of love and kindness attested to the wonderful life He lived. But the crowning wonderfulness of His life while He was here among sinful men was that He was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. His was a wonderful life of sinless perfection. His entire ministry proved that He was a wonder-working Saviour. His qualities cannot be matched.

Think of the wonderful atonement He wrought at His crucifixion! Think of the wonderful prayer He prayed there: "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." Men thought that they took the life of Christ, but Christ freely and gladly gave it. He said that He had power to lay it down and power to take it up again. He knew that this was the only way man could be brought back into a full, complete relationship with God; and He was willing to give Himself a ransom for all. As He hung on the Cross and said, "It is finished," He made the supreme sacrifice and finished the re-

THE KING OF LOVE

REV. WALTER E. ISENHOUR

The King of love is Christ our Lord,
To whom we lift our hearts in praise;
Who came to earth in Bethlehem
To save our souls and change our ways;
That we might live with Him in peace
Through fellowship that is sublime,
And serve Him well upon the earth
And wisely spend our years of time.

The King of love is always near
To cheer our hearts when sadness comes;
To give us strength when we are weak
And grace to live when test benumbs;
To keep us true when battles rage
And foes seem bent on our defeat;
To lift us up if we should fall
And bring us nearer to His feet.

The King of love—O bless His name—
He dwells among His people yet,
And so we celebrate His birth,
That day of days we don't forget;
For no one ever walked the earth
Who was so noble and so tall,
And yet so patient and so good
Till millions "crown Him Lord of all."

The King of love makes happy homes
When we, through faith, invite Him in,
And say to Him, "Take over now
And save us from all strife and sin,
And keep us by Thy grace divine
As duty calls us here and there,
And bring us back from day to day,
To family worship and to prayer."

The King of love is Prince of Peace,
The only Saviour ever known;
The Lord of lords who reigns above
Upon His holy, snow-white throne;
But sweet in spirit He is here,
Although we cannot see His face;
Yet as we walk and talk with Him,
We feel the richness of His grace.

demptive work. This was the will of the Father who sent Him, and the express purpose of His coming. Was not His death of atonement for our redemption very wonderful and glorious?

He was just as wonderful at His resurrection. The glorious resurrection of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, enhances the Christian's present and future hope; for it has given, and is still giving, encouragement to thousands of souls. His wonderful resurrection proves that there is life after death. It also establishes His Deity (Romans 1:4), witnesses to His Messiahship (Psalm 2: 7), and assures His present and future Lordship (1 Timothy 6:15).

His holy birth speaks of God's great love gift to mankind for our salvation. His sinless life shows that we, through Him, can be overcomers of the trials and temptations of life. His sacrificial death expressed His willingness to take upon Himself the punishment for the sins of the entire world, that we might be freed from the bondage of sin. His resurrection proves that death, hell, and the grave have no dominion over Him and that there is a life after death. His birth, life, and death were all very important and necessary in bringing about the Atonement; and His burial and resurrection give us assured hope of eternal fellowship with God and His people. His annunciation, birth, life, atonement, death, burial, and resurrection were all wonderful, triumphant victories!

Besides all this, His ascension, the sending of the Holy Spirit, His being our Advocate, and His final coming to receive those who are faithful and true and who look for His appearing—all speak of His great love for us, proving that He is entitled to be called Wonderful.

We cannot do many wonderful things ourselves, but each of us can lift up this Christ, who is called Wonderful, if we have His Spirit and the richness of His grace abiding in our hearts.

This wonderful Saviour completed His part in God's plan of salvation; yet He has entrusted His followers with carrying on His kingdom's work here on earth. It is left in our hands to evangelize the world. We have His Spirit and His Word to aid us in this great task. Each generation has to be evangelized. May our testimony lead others to accept this wonderful Saviour whom to know is life eternal. His name shall be called Wonderful!

Wildwood Mission Organized Into a Church

The Executive Committee of the Eastern Conference of North Carolina and the Eastern Conference Mission Board met at the Wildwood Free Will Baptist Mission near Morehead City on Monday night, November 23, at 7:30 p.m., for the purpose of organizing the mission into a church. Members of the executive committee present were the Revs. C. B. Hansley, Lemmie Taylor, and Graham Lane. Members of the mission board present were the Revs. L. L. Parker and James Lupton. The Rev. Lemmie Taylor read and explained the Church Covenant, and the Statement of Faith and Discipline for Original Free Will Baptists of North Carolina was adopted by the church. The Rev. Graham Lane gave the charge and presented the Bible to the church as the only rule of faith and practice. The Rev. James Lupton offered the prayer of consecration, and the hand of fellowship was extended to the members of the church by the executive committee.

Church officers were elected as follows: George Creech, Walter Herring, and Alton Toler, board of trustees; George Creech and Alton Toler, deacons; Amanda Long, clerk; Joyce Toler, treasurer; Dorothy Creech, Jean Long, Eloise Thorne, Beulah Corbett, and Joyce Toler, finance committee; and the Rev. Virgil H. Day, pastor.

Since the beginning on October 13, 1963, the church has experienced growth in every phase of its work, both spiritually and physically. Eighteen members have been received by baptism and eighteen have come by letter, making a total of thirty-six charter members. The church has a woman's auxiliary, YFA, and AFC which are very well attended. Recently a Free Will Baptist League was organized with an average attendance of about twenty. Worship services are held each Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

The church wishes to express its deepest appreciation to the Free Will Baptist churches of Carteret County who have helped to support it financially and prayerfully as a mission. Also to the Eastern Conference Mission Board, the State Mission Board and the Rev. A. B. Bryan, and all others who have helped in any way.

The church and its pastor request the prayers of all God's people that it may continue to grow and that the work may not only cover the immediate community, but that it may extend to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Crab Point Youth Sponsor Car Wash

The girls of the young adult and intermediate Sunday school classes of the Crab Point Free Will Baptist Church, Morehead City, North Carolina, sponsored a Car Wash on November 14, 1964, to raise money for a Thanksgiving offering for the Children's Home. A total of $28 was raised. The league also gave $25.

Miss Brenda Willis, church reporter, in sending this news for publication, stated: ". . . we would like very much to let our fellow Christians know what we are doing for the love of God."

Griffins to Be Honored On Fiftieth Anniversary

The Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Griffin, Bridgeton, North Carolina, will be honored by their children on their fiftieth wedding anniversary, Sunday, December 27, 1964, at 2 p.m., at St. Mary's Free Will Baptist Church, New Bern.

All friends are invited to attend.

Christmas Gifts Presented At Children's Home

The annual Christmas service and the presentation of gifts was held at the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, on Wednesday night, December 16. The superintendent, the Rev. M. L. Johnson, was in charge of the service in Memorial Chapel at 7:30 p.m. During this service, the children who had come to the Home during the year were recognized.

After this service, the children and personnel of the Home, along with many visitors, went to the dining hall where the gifts were presented to the children and young people. These gifts were presented to each child by their sponsors which consist of various church groups and auxiliaries. Many of the sponsors, or their representatives, were present.

Mr. Johnson and the personnel at the Home express their appreciation for those individuals and church groups who helped to bring happiness and Christmas joy to the seventy-six boys and girls at the Home.

N. J. Town Rejects 'Under God' Pennants for Use with Flag

HILLSDALE, N. J. (EP) — Hillsdale's town committee has rejected a Knights of Columbus council's offer to provide pennants carrying the inscription "one nation under God."

Committeemen voted, 3 to 2, to refuse pennants offered for use beneath the American flag in front of the community's municipal building.

The stand of the majority was announced by Mayor Monroe Ackerman.

"I believe the flag is a symbol of everything in the Pledge (of allegiance)," he said. "There are other phrases which might just as well be placed on pennants such as 'one nation indivisible,' 'with liberty and justice for all,' and 'land of the free and home of the brave.'"

Dr. King, FBI Director Have 'Amicable' Talk

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP)—Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover had a "quite amicable discussion" here, the Baptist clergyman and integration leader told reporters after the surprise session.

Dr. King—called "the most notorious liar in the country" by Mr. Hoover two weeks earlier—said he had requested the meeting because "a nonviolent leader must seek to maintain communications with all who are in a position to aid the civil rights cause."

"There must not be misunderstanding between the FBI and civil rights leaders," he said. "I sincerely hope we can forget the confusions of the past and get on with the job that Congress, the Supreme Court and the President have outlined—the job of providing freedom and justice for all citizens of this nation."

Mr. Hoover, whose verbal attack on Dr. King followed reports that the integrationist had criticized the role of the FBI in the Southern racial justice effort, had no comment following the session here.

Civil Rights Slaying Suspect Not Member of National Free Will Baptist Group

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (EP) — The Rev. Billy A. Melvin, executive secretary of the National Association of Free Will Baptists here, said that Edgar Killen, 39, a minister arrested at Philadelphia, Miss., was not listed in its records as a minister of that denomination.

Killen was among 21 men arrested in connection with the slaying of three civil rights workers. News accounts listed him as a Free Will Baptist minister.

Mr. Melvin said the two churches at which Killen preached, Salem Church, Neshoba County, and Zion Church, Kemper County, were not affiliated with the National Association of Free Will Baptists.

Scholarship for Son of Slain Missionary

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (EP)—A medical school scholarship will be available to Johnny Tucker whose father, Joseph W. Tucker, was killed by rebels in Paulis, Congo, Tuesday, November 24, officials of the Assemblies of God have revealed.

The scholarships will be given by an unnamed Arkansan physician who called the denomination's headquarters to make the offer. The doctor learned that Johnny, an 18-year-old high school junior, was interested in being a medical missionary.

Besides the scholarship for the oldest son, calls have been received from numerous sources offering to contribute to a memorial fund established for Mrs. Tucker and the other children, Carol Lynne, 13; and Melvin Paul, 11.

The Assemblies of God missionary family and two lady missionaries, Misses Gail Winters and Lillian Hogan, will remain in Leopoldville until Thursday before flying to New York. Communique from the missionaries indicate some personal items, including clothing, were saved and would be shipped from Paulis to Leopoldville prior to their departure for the U. S.

Mrs. Tucker, herself a veteran of 25 years of missionary service, is scheduled to go with the three children to North Little Rock, Ark., where the Rev. Mr. Tucker's brother, C. Melvin resides. Plans for the future will be worked out after their arrival in the U. S.

An adopted son of the Tuckers, Johnny was born in Brussels, Belgium. Reared most of his life in Congo and surrounding countries, he speaks four languages, English, French, Lingala, and Swahili. He has received much of his education in the Rethy Academy in the Congo. (Congo developments: at press time, reports from Congo regarding the fate of missionaries there were still fragmentary and incomplete. It has been definitely reported by the Canadian external Affairs Department in Ottawa that Rev. Hector MacMillan of Un-evangelized Fields Mission was slain in Stanleyville. His wife and six sons were reported safe, although two of the boys were wounded by machinegun fire. The next issue of E. P. News will attempt to summarize the situation to date.)

NO 'BAPTIST' DECEMBER 30

In order to maintain our schedule of not printing but 50 issues of "The Free Will Baptist" per year, there will not be an issue on December 30. However, there being 53 Wednesdays in 1964, we are printing 51 issues. The last issue you will receive this year will be that of December 23, which will be our Christmas issue.

STORIES

for our

BOYS and GIRLS

THE MAN WITH MANY NAMES

LOIS HADLEY DICK

THERE are children born every minute in our country and all over the world. How happy the parents are when they hold in their arms the little child God has given them.

One night, many years ago, a Baby was born in Bethlehem, the littlest town in the great section of Judea. His coming had been promised for four thousand years and many people living at that time believed He was coming.

A man named Simeon saw the Child, and said to the Lord, "Mine eyes have seen thy salvation." A woman called Anna saw the Child and spoke of Him to all the people in Jerusalem who were looking for redemption.

Who was this Child and what was His name? In Isaiah 9:6 we are given five of His names. They were given to Him more than seven hundred years before He was born.

His name shall be called Wonderful! Everything about Him is wonderful. His birth was wonderful. It was a wonderful star which led the men of the East to Palestine in search of the Child. The Bible does not say that there were only three Wise Men. There may have been many (Isaiah 60:3, 6). It is wonderful to know that the Wise Men believed in their hearts and came for the purpose of worshiping. Real worship is to obey, then give yourself, then give of your possessions, as did these men of the East.

It is wonderful to know that the shepherds believed, even before they had seen the Child. After they worshiped the child, they told everyone they met that this was the Saviour, even Christ the Lord. It is wonderful to know the shepherds witnessed to everyone. The angel said the glad tidings are for "all people" and the shepherds helped spread the good news.

It is wonderful to know that the Child had a mother to love and care for Him. Mary was a godly woman. She was chosen to be the mother of our Lord. The angel told her that she was "highly favoured" and "blessed . . . among women," and so she was, because of her faith in God. The angel said her Child would be "great" and would be called the "Son of the Highest." But Mary was a sinner just as you and I are, and she needed a Saviour too. We can picture her kneeling before the Child, worshiping and believing as did the Wise Men and shepherds. And we today, who trust in Him, are made whole and cleansed.

Yes, His name is Wonderful!

His name shall be called Counsellor. What is a counsellor? Have you ever been to camp and had a counsellor? It is a person who gives you good advice. After we have believed in Him, and have worshiped as did those around the manger, God's Word becomes an open Book to us. We understand it. It is full of instruction and advice for our Christian life. God Himself is our counsellor. "I will bless the Lord, who hath given me counsel" (Psalm 16:7).

If we want to find out what is pleasing to Him, and how He expects us to live as Christians, we can go to the Bible for advice. God also warns us in Psalm 1:1. Do not take the advice of ungodly people, those who are not saved. Through prayer and His Word, the Lord can speak to our hearts and give us good advice, if we will listen.

His name shall be called The Mighty God! God "was made flesh, and dwelt among us" (John 1:14). Yes, this little Babe lying in the straw is the Mighty God, the Strong One who can deliver. The word "mighty" is generally used in Scripture to describe a warrior or a hero, one who has power. And so we are reminded of a sword. The Lord has power to deliver us from any and all sins that have made us captive. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is safe" (Proverbs 18:10). "The word of God is [living], and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword" (Hebrews 4:12). We who are saved can also use the Word of God as a sword, for defense against the enemy of our souls.

His name shall be called The everlasting Father! Everyone of us has had a birthday, the day when we were born into this world. Before God gave us life, we did not exist. We were not anywhere. But God never had a birthday. He is the everlasting Father, without beginning and without ending. He always lived. Before Jesus came to earth as a human child, He lived in heaven. But in heaven He could not die for us, and so He came to earth.

Jesus was born to die and He came to give His life a ransom for many. Our hearts are filled with wonder to know this Child is the everlasting Father.

His name shall be called The Prince of Peace! When He was born, the angels sang, "Peace on earth, good will to men." Because this Child is a royal descendant of King David, He will someday sit on a throne and rule the whole earth. The Bible tells us of a wonderful day ahead when Christ shall be crowned King of kings and Lord of lords. He will rule the whole world in righteousness and there will be no more war. "The earth shall be full of the knowledges of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isaiah 11:9). We who believe on Him for salvation shall see that glorious day. We shall be present at the coming of the Prince of Peace, for He is coming back again.

He also gives peace to those who trust in Him, (Isaiah 26:3). "He is our peace" (Ephesians 2:14).

Read Isaiah 9:6 carefully and point to each of His names, then see if you can say them from memory. Tell someone this Christmas season of the Lord Jesus Christ and His wonderful birth!

—My Pleasure.

There is always an empty day after Christmas. It is the day the tree is taken down, the gifts put away, and the greeting cards removed. . . . But Christmas doesn't end with the tearing of a leaf from the calendar or the conclusion of a season. Christmas goes on living as men go on telling and others go on hearing and believing.—Selected.

Walstonburg, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Free Union Free Will Baptist Church met at the church on Tuesday night, December 8, for its December meeting. The opening hymn was "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing"; then the president, Mrs. Raeford Heath, gave the devotional and Mrs. J. W. Potts offered the prayer.

The roll was called with thirty-five members and five visitors present. This was followed with the six circles' giving their monthly reports. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were also given and approved. Mrs. John R. Murphy gave a report on the union meeting held at Spring Branch Free Will Baptist Church on Sunday, November 29.

The Goodwill Circle gave a Christmas program, "Sharing God's Greatest Gift." Mrs. Alton E. Shirley sang "O, Holy Night," and Mrs. J. C. Moye sang two hymns as a connecting part of the program. Mrs. Alton Harrell dismissed the group with prayer.

Columbia, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Sound Side Free Will Baptist Church met Monday night, December 7, in the home of Mrs. Nancy Sawyer with eleven members and one visitor present. The meeting opened with the group's singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; then the president, Mrs. Victoria Cooper, read the Scripture taken from Luke 2:1-19. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Betty Sawyer. The following took part in the program, "Sharing God's Greatest Gift": Mrs. Elsie Sawyer, Mrs. Nancy Sawyer, Mrs. Annie Etheridge, Mrs. Eva Brickhouse, and Mrs. Betty Sawyer. Mrs. Neva Brickhouse gave a very inspiring talk on the approaching Christmas season.

The secretary, Mrs. Madge Vanhorn, called the roll and read the minutes which were approved. The treasurer's report was also given and accepted. Officers for 1965 were elected as follows: president, Mrs. Victoria Cooper; vice-president, Mrs. Bernice Maitland, secretary, Mrs. Madge Vanhorn; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Elsie Sawyer; treasurer, Mrs. Betty Sawyer; sick committee, Mrs. Neva Brickhouse; flower committee, Mrs. Nancy Sawyer; publicity chairman, Mrs. Eva Brickhouse. The time for the next meeting was changed to Thursday after the second Sunday in January. The closing song was "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," with Mrs. Madge Vanhorn dismissing the group with prayer.

During the social hour the hostess served delicious refreshments.

'NO ROOM'

DOROTHY CONANT STROUD

As Joseph knocked upon his door
The keeper of the inn came out,
And heedless of the woman's plight,
His answer left no chance for doubt.

"No room," he said, and closed the door;
"There is no room for you to stay;
"No room," we answer when Christ knocks
On hearts uncaring, still, today.

No room for him in busy hours,
No room amid life's throng;
No room for Christ, the light, the hope,
The giver of life's song!

No room for Him! How can we go Unheeding, careless still,
When all of heaven would rejoice
To do His blessed will?

No room! May our repentant hearts
Respond this day and hour,
That Christ, the King of glory may Come in His mighty power!

"No room," again we shall repeat—
"No room for aught but Him!"
Then oh, the glory we shall know
Which cannot wane or dim!

THE GREATEST BIRTHDAY

We celebrate December 25 as the birthday of our Lord Jesus Christ. In many parts of the world we can hear what we call Christmas carols, and these carols are heard over radio and TV stations throughout our United States. Our churches of various denominations observe the event with singing carols, and there is much doing that presents in a measure the coming of Christ to the world.

THE FIRST PROMISE

The statement of Isaiah is placed in the present tense; however, it was made about 740 years before Christ was born in the city of Bethlehem. Here it is: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6). In the mind of God, who is from everlasting to everlasting, Christ was born; therefore, Isaiah said, "Unto us a child is born." In the first chapter of Revelation it is written that Christ said unto John on the Isle of Patmos: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty" (Revelation 1:8).

When we accept Christ, we accept God, the everlasting Father. Now the coming of Christ to a lost world is a mystery. We would have to know as much as God in order to understand the mysteries of God, but we accept them by faith and trust God. Thus we believe in the virgin birth of the Lord Jesus.

WE BELIEVE THE BIBLE

We read the promise as made by the Lord: "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" (Isaiah 7:14).

We, the Original Free Will Baptists, believe this message as given to us, just as we believe the whole Bible as being the inspired Word of God.

THE BIRTH OF CHRIST

"Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily. But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us. Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife: And knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son: and he called his name JESUS" (Matthew 1:18-25).

You may ask, "Why quote all the Scripture?" To this writer it is the most precious Scripture in the Bible. Second, so many people are too busy to turn to the Bible and read the Scripture. Then, I cannot say anything worth more than what has been written by inspiration. Also, I am proud to tell to the world that we believe in the virgin birth of Jesus.

HOW SHALL WE OBSERVE CHRISTMAS?

Will it be with prayer and supplication and the making of others happy? Shall we tell to those around us that we really believe the Bible account of the birth of Christ? Or, shall we observe it like sinful, godless, reveling unbelievers?

Some unbelievers and unconverted church people drink and praise the devil. It is too bad that people will claim to be keeping Christmas while they drink so much damnable intoxicating liquors that they act as crazy animals act. They run the highways on fast cars at break-neck speeds, kill themselves and others in wrecks, and land in hellfire with their last breath.

Let us put Christ in Christmas.

Don't let Santa Claus run Christ out of Christmas. He will take over if we poor, ignorant human beings will follow his invitations. How can we beat Satan? We can do it by attending worshipful meetings and by visiting and praying with the sick, aged, and afflicted. Divide your good food with those who have less. Make little children happy by giving them Christmas gifts. Oh, yes, send a gift to our missionaries, and make special mention of Arizona-Mexico Missions. Include Brother Timmons in El Paso, Texas. Or contribute to the development fund at Mount Olive Junior College, and don't forget to subscribe for your "Baptist."

SAMUEL H. COX

If Jesus had not come to earth,
If Mary had not given birth
To God, the Son, that glorious day,
If shepherds had not come that way,
Where would the angel's word be then?
Of "Peace on earth—good will to men?"
What difference to the Wise Men make
The route that guiding star would take?

If Jesus had not come to seek Disciples from the poor and meek,
If He had not persistently
Invited men: "Come . . . follow Me!"
Where then would weary footsteps stray?

Where lies the path to fadeless day?
How could blind eyes be led to see
The pathway to eternity?

If Jesus had not died to save,
Nor risen from that borrowed grave,
If death had gained the victory:
Then man could nevermore be free!
But He did come to earth to die
For men—unworthy—such as I.
And He did rise to conquer sin!
Death, hell and Satan did not win!

PRESS TO BE CLOSED

The Free Will Baptist Press will be closed in observance of Christmas beginning at 3 p.m., Christmas Eve, December 24, until Monday, 8 a.m., December 28. Please note that we will not be open the day after Christmas.

We will also be closed on January 1 in observance of New Year's Day. We will be open on January 2, from 8 a.m. until 12 noon.

Questions & Answers

QUESTION: What did God mean when He said of Pharaoh, "I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go" when apparently it would be to the advantage of God's people to go and also to God's glory?—A. L. C.

ANSWER: Pharaoh had hardened his own heart and, I think, had done a good job of it before God hardened it. We have often heard it said of the gospel truth or the Word of God, that, like the sun which shines in its splendor and beauty upon the earth, it hardens the clay and melts the wax. So as the truth of God comes to the ears of those that respond, it enlightens and enhances them with an awareness of God's presence and glory. On the other hand, it hardens the hearts and poisons the minds of unbelievers who willfully reject it. No Christian is ever again the same when he has enjoyed a heart-warming message from God's Word. No sinner ever turns from and rejects the same without being more definitely estranged from God and having his heart hardened. God sends the sunshine and the gentle rain upon the just and unjust of a community alike. The just praise Him; the unjust curse Him. God made an example of Pharaoh to show to the world what results from rebellion against Him. God made an example of this wicked king, as a warning to others against a similar rebellion or rebellious attitude. When one reads the whole account of this incident he will discover that repeatedly Pharaoh made such blasphemous statements as: "And Pharaoh said, Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go" (Exodus 5:2).

Again, as we often call attention to the fact, it is a matter of the sovereignty of an all wise, just, and all loving Creator and Sustainer of the universe who may do as He pleases or as His nature dictates that He should do. (See Romans 9:14-24.) With the contents of this passage of Scripture fresh in mind, begin again to trust Him who "doeth all things well" and let us take care of such things as our feeble minds can comprehend, leaving those beyond our grasp in the care of Him that "doeth all things well." Let us remember always, also, that He is the God of infinite love and that as such He can neither be unjust nor unrighteous, for He is the God of all truth and holiness.

CHRISTMAS

HAYWOOD B. HILL

It's Christmas, a time to celebrate the birth
Of the Christ who brought His peace to earth.

He died on the Cross for all our sins,
And of the vilest sinner made a friend.

To be happy and make life worth living,
We should share our happiness with others by giving;

To make some less fortunate hearts be glad
To get the presents they might not have had.

Now is the season to show our love,
By the spirit of that love which comes from above.

As it fills some heart with Christmas cheer,
And makes happy this yuletide time of year.

Remember 'tis more blessed to give than to receive,
And maybe some sad or lonely heart you'll relieve.

So let's celebrate Christmas with joy and goodwill;
Praying that God's peace all hearts may fill.

As we shall celebrate Christmas as a holy day,

Let's serve the Lord in every way;
And bless some soul as we go,
For that's God's will, as you all know.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
GRANTSBORO, N. C.

THE WISE MEN CAME TO JESUS

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, . . . And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; . . . And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh" (Matthew 2:1, 8, 11).

There are several very illustrious events connected with the Christmas story and the incarnation of Christ, the Son of God. Some of these things I have written about in previous messages, but it will possibly be profitable to think anew upon them, along with the visit of the wise men. One of these preceded His birth. It was the annunciation by the angel to Mary, "And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS" (Luke 1:30, 31).

Then there was the appearance of the angel and the celestial choir, over the plains of Bethlehem, when they told the astonished shepherds, ". . . Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. . . . And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men" (Luke 2:10, 11, 13, 14). When the angels were gone, the shepherds went with haste to see for themselves the things they were told about: "And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child" (Luke 2:17).

Then we come to the visit of the wise men, which some say was about thirteen days after His birth, who came from afar to yield their homage and to present their gifts to the newborn Prince of Life and Lord of Glory. It is not known who these Eastern sages were. Their names and their dwelling place are alike not revealed. We know not the country from whence they came, but only "from the east." Some have supposed that they came from Arabia; and that they were spoken of in Psalm 72:10, "The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts." But we are told that Arabia was south of Judea. Others say they came from Chaldea; but again we are told this was north. Then someone has reasoned that they came from Persia, as this is east; and especially as astronomy had long been pursued, and formed a favorite study with the Persians. But be these and all other things as they may, the important fact is that they came to find Jesus, and when they found Him they worshipped Him.

Some have suggested that the journey they made in search of Jesus must have taken twelve or fourteen days, and that they were exposed to great danger, expense, and fatigue. They pursued their way and persevered, until they arrived at the place where they found Him.

These wise men exercised great faith! How unlikely to the eye of sense, that this babe was to be the illustrious Prince of Peace! All appearances were against it. Little and not much known village, poor, humble parents—nothing great—no palace nor splendor; yet in spite of all this they received Him as God's Son, the world's Messiah, and worshiped Him as such.

Not only did the wise men exercise great faith, but they showed great humility, for they "fell down at His feet."

And they gave Him great reverence: "And they worshipped him." They gave to Him supreme honors.

And last of all they showed great generosity and self-devotion. They opened their treasures and presented to Him "gold, and frankincense, and myrrh." These were considered the very best their country yielded. In the meanings and purposes of these gifts there is also much speculation. Some say, "Gold they offered Him as a Prince; frankincense, as a Priest; and myrrh, as the Messiah, who should be cut off for the sins of the people." Others say, "Gold, as denoting their faith in Him; the frankincense of devotion; and the myrrh of self-denial." But I like the explanation given by Brother F. B. Cherry on Page 59 of his Sunday school quarterly in his Sunday school lesson notes for next Sunday. He says, "Gold is the most precious substance in the material world. Frankincense is a substance used in religious rites. Myrrh is material used in embalming. Thus symbolically we have in these three gifts the value of the Christian faith (gold), the place of Christ in worship (frankincense), and the significance of Christ's death (myrrh)."

There are many great lessons presented to us by the coming and actions of the wise men. This story presents a tacit and public reproof to the Jews. They paid no regard to His coming; received Him not. Ryle says, "They believed in Christ when they had never seen Him;—but that was not all. They believed in Him when the Scribes and Pharisees were unbelieving;—but that again was not all. They believed in Him when they saw Him a little infant on Mary's knee, and worshipped Him as a king. This was the crowning point of their faith.—They saw no miracles to convince them. They heard no teaching to persuade them. They beheld no signs of divinity and greatness to overawe them. They saw nothing but a new-born infant, helpless and weak, and needing a mother's care like any one of ourselves. And yet when they saw that infant, they believed that they saw the divine Saviour of the world. "They fell down and worshipped him."'

The true and only way to obtain salvation and wisdom is to observe the signs God places before us and obey His teaching and commands. He has placed before us stars shining more brightly than the one the wise men followed. There is the star of the revelation of God by Christ incarnate, which is as a light shining in a dark place. The star of the preached gospel; for true ministers are stars in the hand of Christ to lead the lost world to Him. Then there is the star of the Holy Spirit's operation. And the star of the inspired Word which, if followed, will lead us to God. We read in 2 Peter 1:19, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; (continued on page fifteen)

THAT NIGHT

That night when in the Judean skies
The mystic star dispensed its light,
A blind man moved in his sleep—
And dreamed that he had sight.

That night when shepherds heard the song
Of hosts angelic choiring near,
A deaf man stirred in slumber's spell—
And dreamed that he could hear!

That night when in the cattle stall
Slept Child and mother cheek by jowl,
A crippled turned his twisted limbs—
And dreamed that he was whole.

That night when o'er the newborn Babe
The tender Mary rose to lean,
A loathsome leper smiled in sleep—
And dreamed that he was clean.

That night when to the mother's breast
The little King was held secure,
A harlot slept a happy sleep—
And dreamed that she was pure!

That night when in the manger lay
The Sanctified who came to save,
A man moved in the sleep of death—
And dreamed there was no grave.

THE KINGDOM IS AT HAND

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 3:1-12

MEMORY VERSE: Matthew 3:2

I. INTRODUCTION

The childhood of Jesus, about which we know so little had past, and He is now approximately thirty years of age when John the Baptist appears on the scene. John the Baptist serves as a connecting link between the Old Testament and the New. He was a prophet, yet not a prophet. He was a disciple, yet not a disciple. He stands unique in the annals of history as the forerunner of Christ and as the connecting link between the Old Testament and the New. While all the Gospels mention John, Matthew gives us the fullest and most complete account of His ministry. Perhaps, the reason is that Matthew is writing for Jews and is trying to convince them that Jesus is the fulfillment of the Old Testament promise of a Messiah.—Advanced Quarterly (F.W.B.)

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. The wilderness represented the barren, uncultured state of the Jewish church (v. 1).

2. John's message was sharp and to the point (v. 2).

3. John was the fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy of one coming to prepare the people for the reception of the Messiah (v. 3).

4. John's clothing and food were in keeping with his office (v. 4).

5. The numbers that repented proved the effectiveness of John's preaching (vv. 5, 6).

6. John's denunciation of the hypocritical Pharisees and Sadducees was severe (vv. 7, 8).

7. Being the descendants of Abraham did not entitle the Pharisees and Sadducees to the special favor of God (v. 9).

8. The ax (Romans) was laid at the foot of the tree (Jewish nation) to cut it down (v. 10).

9. John revealed his respect and reverence for the Lord when he said that that he was not worthy to bear His shoes (v. 11).

10. God used the Romans to thoroughly purge and cleanse the land of Judea (v. 12).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.)

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. John the Baptist was born in the hill country of Judah. Juttah, near Bethlehem, the priestly city of the section, and Hebron have been the popular guesses as to the exact location. Both were not far from the wilderness of Judea that stretches along the western side of the Dead Sea in the mountainous terrain, the wildest and most desolate section of Palestine. Probably his very aged parents died when he was still a boy. Of John's youth Luke says only, "And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel" (1:80). In the thirty years before that "shewing," the young man no doubt visited the towns often enough to observe the sins of soldiers and publicans, officials and people, but he must have spent much time in solitude. The angel Gabriel had predicted to Zacharias concerning this child: "And he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb" (Luke 1:15). Guided and inspired by the Holy Spirit, John roamed the wild deserts, storing in his soul the fiery outbursts with which he would soon shock and summon the nation back to God. In this severest of patterns for his daily life he "waxed strong in spirit." John would need to be strong in spirit to face the wicked nation and its hypocritical, cruel leaders.

There is not the slightest indication that John ever attempted to exercise his prerogative as a priest in the temple at Jerusalem or that he ever received any instruction from the rabbinical teachers of the nation. As Jesus grew up in isolation at obscure Nazareth, so John grew to manhood in the desert. The Scripture is as emphatic as possible in declaring that John was the voice in the wilderness—the voice inspired by God to announce the coming of the Messiah.

John the Baptist lived a life of severest poverty, living off the meager offerings of the desert; but he did not preach that all others should live on locusts and wild honey. He spent his youth in isolation, but he did not command that all others do the same. His message was not a fantastic, exotic doctrine of a perverse sect, but the revelation from God that all men should receive their king—the Christ.

—Standard Commentary.

2. A pastor preached a searching sermon on confession of sin. "We cannot get right with God until we confess our sins to Him and to others against whom we have sinned." A troubled young man said to the pastor at the close of the service, "I build boats. My employer is an infidel. I have talked to him about his need of Christ, but he scoffs and ridicules it all. In my work, I use copper nails. I have been carrying home quantities of them to use on a boat I am building at home. The copper nails are digging into my conscience. I know I cannot have peace until I confess my theft of the nails." "That's right," said the pastor. Later the young man joyously said to the pastor, "I confessed my sin to my unbelieving employer. He looked queerly at me and said, 'I always did think you were a hypocrite. Now I feel there's something to Christianity. It makes a dishonest workman confess that he has been stealing copper nails and settle for them, it's worth having.'"

VICTORY OVER TEMPTATION

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 4:1-11

MEMORY VERSE: Matthew 4:10

I. INTRODUCTION

Though we are not of the world, the fact remains that we are in the world; and as long as we are in the world, we will be subjected to the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the devil—temptations that arise from within us and temptations that beset us from outside sources. A life in Christ does not free us from these temptations, but it does give us the ability to meet and to overcome them.

We should find wonderful consolation in the fact that every temptation which is met and overcome strengthens us for the overcoming of other temptations. Our faith is strengthened by each victory in the service of our Lord.

Temptations manifest themselves in many and various forms, and some of these are not easily recognized as temptations to sin. All sin has its origin in doubt, thus we can safely assume that anything which serves to get us to doubt our mission, to compromise our convictions, or to choose the easy way instead of the right way is a temptation to fall short of the expectations of our Lord.

—Senior Quarterly (F.W.B.).

II. HINTS THAT HELP

1. Jesus was led by the Spirit to go into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil (v. 1).

2. Jesus was very hungry after forty days and nights of fasting (v. 2).

3. The devil took advantage of Jesus' hunger to try to overthrow Him (v. 3).

4. Jesus pointed out to the devil that man is to live by the divine plan, rather than by temporal things alone (v. 4).

5. A second gimmick of the devil was to try to get Jesus to jump from the pinnacle of the temple by telling Him that the angels would bear Him up (vv. 5, 6).

6. Jesus pointed out this time that God is not to be tempted (v. 7).

7. In his third attempt, the devil offered Jesus kingdoms that he did not own if He would pay him homage (vv. 8, 9).

8. In addition to using Scripture, the Lord exercised His divine authority against Satan (v. 10).

9. The devil realized that he was no match for Jesus and left Him (v. 11).

10. The angels then came and ministered to Jesus (v. 11).

—Bible Teacher (F.W.B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. When the first Adam was created, he was subjected to the temptation of Satan; and in his fall he involved the whole human race in sin. It does not then seem improper that at the coming of the second Adam, Jesus Christ the Redeemer of the race, that He should also be subjected to temptation that after His victory over Satan He might go on to take man's place in death for man's sin and thereby be the Redeemer of the race.

From this account of the temptation of Jesus there are four things we especially learn.

(1) We learn that no one is so holy as to be free from temptation; in our lesson text the Son of God was sorely tempted.

(2) We learn that when God permits a temptation or trial to come upon us, He will, if we will look to Him, give us grace to resist and overcome it (1 Corinthians 10:13).

(3) We further learn to recognize the art and subtilty of Satan, the tempter.

(4) We also learn that the way to meet temptation is by affirming God, consecration and resistance through the application of Scripture.

—Teen-Age Teacher (F.W.B.).

2. The temptation proved Jesus Christ to be the perfect Saviour. The temptation of Christ is of vital importance to all men everywhere, for it is proof that Jesus Christ is the true Saviour. There have been many men who have been false christs, bidding for the worship and praise of men. They have deceived many, but they did not deceive Satan, for he knew that they were imposters. They were his counterfeits, used for the purpose of tricking people to follow the enemy of our souls. But when Christ Jesus was born, Satan put Him to the test to prove whether or not He was the true God and Saviour of mankind. If Jesus had been a mere man, He would have sinned under the pressure of the temptation, for no man could have withstood this onslaught of Satan. The temptation proves that Jesus is the true Saviour, and not a false Christ claiming divinity.

The temptation helped qualify Jesus to be the perfect Intercessor. "To be tempted of the devil" (Matthew 4:1). Hebrews 2:9-18 tells us that Jesus Christ took upon Himself flesh that He might be tested in all points, including death, so that He would experientially know our infirmities and feel our weaknesses; thus He would understand our human limitations. Hebrews 2:18 says, "For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted." Hebrews 4:15 concurs with this thought: "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

A woman attempted to confess her sins to me once, but I refused to listen. "Tell your sins to Christ," I urged her. "He can forgive; I cannot."

"But I would rather confess to you," she insisted, "for you will understand."

"Yes, and I am sinful, too, and your sins might tempt me. Confess them to Christ, for He will understand. He was in the flesh and shared all your temptation, yet without sin. He is the perfect Forgiver of sinners."

—Bible Expositor.

whercunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your heart."

Is it not reasonable to believe that Jesus expects homage from His people today? We must give Him the gold of our heart's love and confidence; the incense of our prayers, praise, and devotion; and the myrrh of our obedience and self-denial.

"And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me" (Luke 9:23).

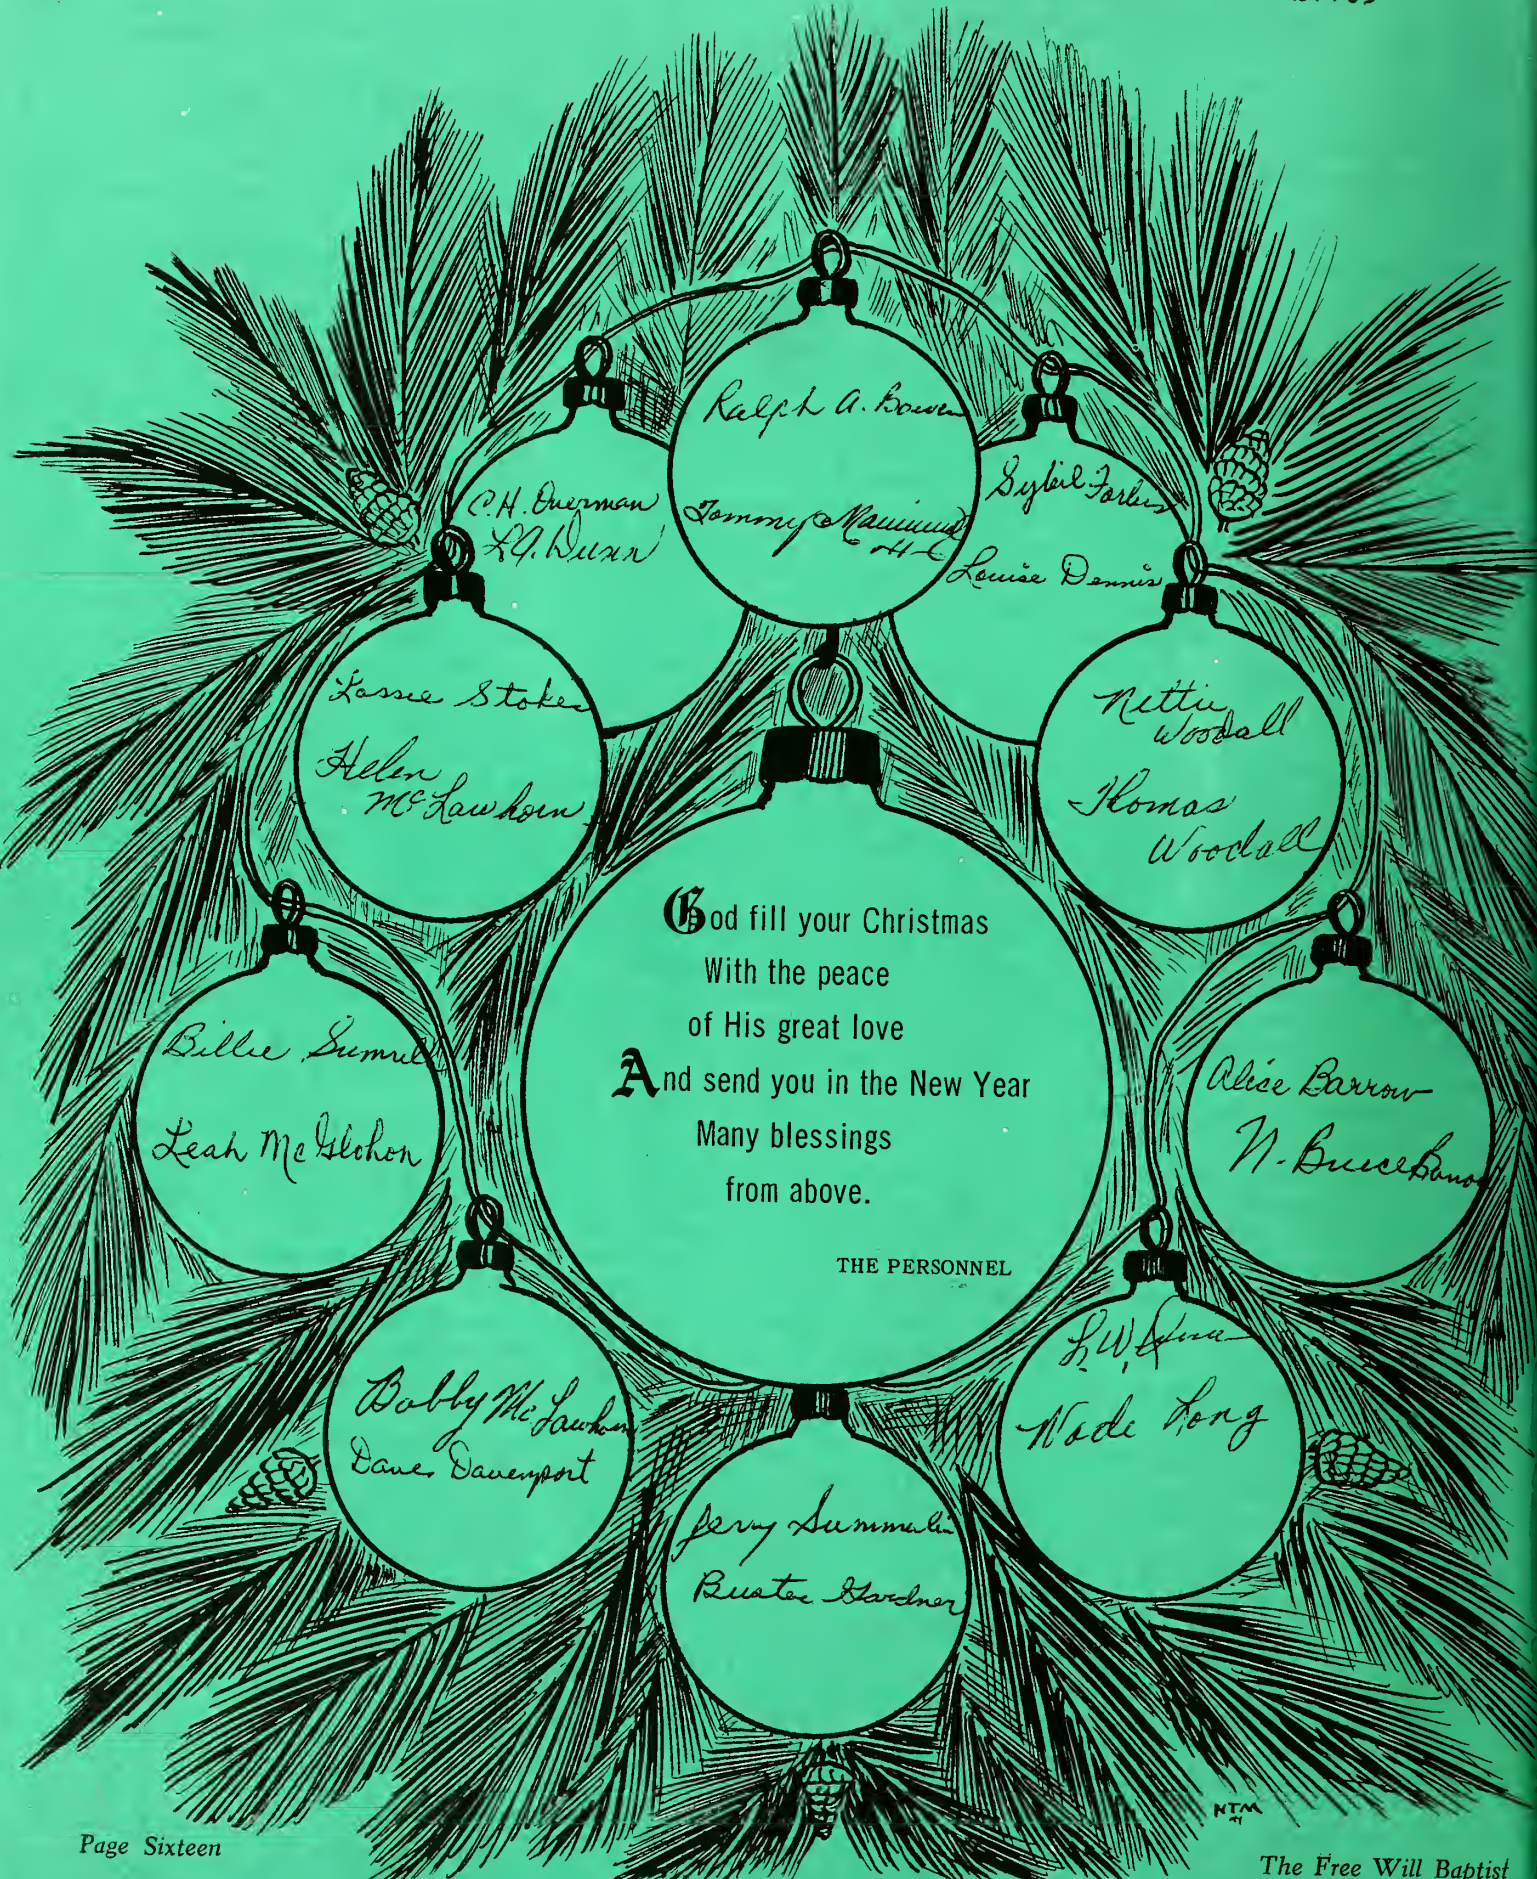

SACRIFICE

What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ" (Philippians 3:7).

The richest quality of love is sacrifice, and the noblest credential of any work is the spirit which has laid every selfish interest down at Jesus' feet, and counts all things loss for Christ; which holds its money, its friendships, its life, all subservient to the Master's claim, and, living a dying life, at last gives life itself as a willing offering to Him who gave His life for us. In this selfish and luxurious age, it is the rarest quality found, but it is the most needed as the end approaches.—A. B. Simpson.
